851. (= Io I 23) Lécythe f. n. f. bl. Paris, Cab. Méd. 302 (4790). – ABV 572, 1: P. de Pholos; CVA 2, pl. 84, 8-9; 85, 4-5. – Vers 470 av. J.-C. – Pour Beazley: «H. attacking a curious being». H., le bras g. protégé par des draperies (la main manque), en pétase et chaussures ailés, le fourreau au côté, le caducée figuré derrière lui dans le champ, apparaît dans le schéma du meurtre d'Argos, bien qu'il frappe ici de taille. C'est la représentation d'Argos (?) qui surprend (bouclier, deux crêtes sur la tête comme un bonnet de fou). On peut songer à des personnages de chœurs comiques: Green, J. R., J. P. Getty Mus. Occas. Papers 3 (1985) 113 fig. 22; oenochos du P. de Géla, ABV 473, 181 avec hommes-oiseaux à crêtes analogues. Pour un combat d'H. contre Argos sur un autre lécythe du même Gr. du P. d'Haimon (= Io I 2), New Haven, Yale Univ., coll. Stoddart 116: ABV 550, 317; Baur, P. V., Cat. of the Rebecca Darlington Stoddart Coll. (1922) 79 pl. 1.

f) Meurtre en musique

852. (= Io I 28) Coupe béotienne (?) f. r. Athènes, Mus. Nat. 4295. – Brommer, Satyrspiele 81 n° 167; Yalouris 3, 13 fig. 10a-b. – Vers 430 av. J.-C. – H. en pilos ailé («Hadeskappe» pour Brommer), le bras g. drapé, tient son épée prête à frapper Argos bifrons, agenouillé et suppliant. A l'autre bord de la scène, Satyre dansant au son d'un aulos (Argos, dans sa main g., tient-il également un aulos? ou un très petit bâton?). Echo en image d'un drame satyrique ou contamination de la version du meurtre avec celle de l'endormissement d'Argos par l'aulos d'H.? Cf. Sources litt.

g) Hermès armé parlementant avec Héra

853.* (= Hera 331*, = Io I 62) Péliké att. f. r. Naples, Mus. Naz., Spinelli 2041. De Suessula. – ARV 1122, 1: P. d'Io (vase éponyme); Kaempf-Dimitriadou, S., Die Liebe der Götter, AntK Suppl. 11 (1979) 97 n° 261 pl. 16, 3; Yalouris 3, 11-14 n° 14 fig. 8. – 460-450 av. J.-C. – A: Zeus poursuivant Io boukérôs. B: H., en bottes ailées, le pétase sur la nuque, une draperie sur la cuisse dr., le pied surélevé sur un rocher, le caducée baissé obliquement, est en conversation avec une déesse au sceptre. Il porte une épée suspendue à un baudrier, détail qui (s'ajoutant au sujet de la face A) évoque le thème du meurtre d'Argos.

h) Après la mise à mort

854. (= Io I 10) La corbeille historiée d'Europe chez Moschos de Syracuse (II^e s. av. J.-C.). – «Autour de la corbeille ronde, au-dessous de la bordure circulaire, était représenté H.; près de lui gisait de tout son long Argos, orné d'yeux rebelles au sommeil; du sang rouge d'Argos surgissait un oiseau, fier de son plumage fleuri et multicolore...» (trad. Legrand, Ph. E., Bucoliques grecs II, Les Belles-Lettres [1927] p. 146 v. 55-62.). L'ekphrasis du χρόσιος τάλαρος, merveille d'Héphaïstos, est-elle pure fantaisie poétique ou bien (hypothèse Simon, o. c. 837, 278) dérive-t-elle d'une œuvre d'art, toreutique ou picturale?

C. Hermès Promachos?

Monnaies impériales de Tanagra

855. AE, Trajan, Antonin, Marc Aurèle (98-180 ap. J.-C.). – NumCommPaus 115-116 n° 5 pl. X 14-16. – Rv. H. de trois quarts face ou profil, la tête à dr., nu, chaussé de sandales ailées, la main dr. à la hanche, la main g. sur un arbre sur lequel est perché un aigle: sans doute l'arbre du sanctuaire d'H. Promachos à Tanagra sous lequel l'enfant divin aurait grandi (Paus. 9, 22, 2).

856.* AE, Trajan (98-117). – NumCommPaus 115 n° 5 pl. X 13. Cf. ibid. 148-149 n° 12 pl. DD 22-23 (AE, Athènes). – Rv. H. de face en athlète polyclétéen, portant dans la main dr. un strigile et peut-être le caducée dans la main g. H. Promachos a conduit les jeunes gens de Tanagra, strigile au poing, à la bataille contre les gens d'Erétrie (Paus. 9, 22, 2).

Petite plastique en bronze

857.* Statuette. Athènes, Mus. Nat. 13210. Du sanct. de Zeus au mont Lycée (Arcadie). – Kourouniotis, K., ArchEph 1904, 200 fig. 20; Lamb, W., BSA 27, 1925, 145 n° 40. – 1^{re} moitié du V^e s. av. J.-C. – H. nu brandit le caducée de la main dr. en serrant dans la main g. avancée un objet perdu (une arme?). Cf. etiam 305, avec la surprenante attitude de combat du personnage.

D. Hermès et les guerriers

1. Assistant au duel hoplitique

858. Coupe att. f. n. Boulogne, Mus. Beaux-Arts. D'Attique. – Le Musée 2, 1977, XIV. – 530-520 av. J.-C. – H. entre les yeux de la coupe; guerriers combattants aux extrémités de la frise.

859.* Amphore att. f. r. Paris, Louvre G 1. De Vulci. – ARV 3, 2; 1617: P. d'Andokidès (sign. du potier); CVA 5, pl. 25, 1. 6; 26, 2. – Vers 520 av. J.-C. – A: duel d'hoplites encadré à g. par Athéna, à dr. par H. coiffé du pétase, nu sous les draperies d'une chlamyde brodée, brandissant son caducée dont le couronnement «sépare» (intention du geste?) les deux combattants. B: concert de citharède.

2. Scènes de départ

Vases attiques

860.* Amphore f. n. Washington, Nat. Mus. of Natural Hist. 136415a. D'Orvieto. – ABV 297, 18: P. de Berlin 1686; Para 129. – 540-530 av. J.-C. – A: couronnement d'un athlète victorieux. B: (la moitié du tableau conservée): départ d'un guerrier; derrière son bouclier apparaissent la tête d'H. coiffé du pilos et le couronnement du caducée. A dr. personnage drapé imberbe muni d'un bâton.

861.* Amphore fr., f. n. Nicosie, Cyprus Mus. 1934.IV.4/4. D'Idalion. – ABV 279, 48: manière du P. d'Antiménès; Gjerstad, E., Greek Geometric and Archaic Pottery Found in Cyprus (1977) 52 n° 503 pl. 58, 1-2. – Vers 520 av. J.-C. – A: départ d'un guerrier entouré de son père et de femmes. H. (long caducée, bottes ailées, pilos, manteau sur tunique courte) s'éloigne en se retournant pour observer la scène. B: hoplite bondissant à la tête d'un quadrigé.

862.* Amphore f. r. Paris, Louvre G 429. De Vulci. – ARV 1068, 18: P. de Barclay; CVA 8, pl. 39, 1-4. 6. – Vers 450 av. J.-C. – A: H. (bottes ailées, pétase sur la nuque, chlamyde) donne la main à un guerrier en présence d'une femme. La main g. tient horizontalement le caducée. Pour des scènes de δεξιότητες analogues sur les stèles funéraires, cf. 603-605. B: hommes et femmes.

XIII. Hermès et l'amour

A. Poursuites amoureuses

1. D'éphèbes

Vases attiques à f. r.

863. (= 881 [B]) Amphore. Leningrad, Ermitage B611 (2100). – ARV 530, 26: P. d'Alkimachos; Para 513; Kaempf, o. c. 853, 12-13. 80 n° 45 pl. 5, 5; Scheffold, SB II 298-299 fig. 432-433. – 480-470 av. J.-C. – A: pieds nus, coiffé du pétase ailé, la chlamyde drapée par-dessus le chitoniskos, le caducée tenu horizontalement dans la main g., H. poursuit un éphèbe nu fuyant vers la g. et retournant la tête vers le dieu qui pose la main sur son épaule. Cerceau et baguette dans les mains de l'adolescent. B: H. face à un éphèbe nu.

864. (= Ganymedes 80) Amphore. Paris, Cab. Méd. 373. – ARV 648, 33: P. d'Oinoclès; Kaempf-Dimitriadou, o. c. 853, 13. 80 n° 44. – 480-470 av. J.-C. – A: H. (chitoniskos, chlamyde, bottes ailées) saisit au bras un éphèbe qui dans sa main libre tient une lyre. Le dieu tend son caducée obliquement en avant. B: roi.

865. Coupe perdue, anc. coll. Vitet. – ARV 882, 34: P. de Penthésilée; Kaempf, o. c. 853, 13 fig. 2 (dessin); 80 n° 46. – 460-450 av. J.-C. – A: deuil d'Achille. B: scène d'armement. I: H. juvénile, pieds nus, le pétase sur la nuque, en chlamyde, a laissé choir son caducée pour saisir des deux mains un éphèbe à la lyre qui se retourne vers lui.

866.* Bobine. Athènes, Agora P 29670. De l'Agora. – Shear, T. L. Jr., Hesperia 42, 1973, 367 pl. 67a: P. de Penthésilée. – Vers 450 av. J.-C. – H. barbu (bottes ailées, chlamyde, pétase sur la nuque) saisit à l'épaule un éphèbe portant un coq; sa main dr. tient obliquement le caducée.

2. De femmes

Vases attiques à f. r.

867. Cratère en calice. Los Angeles, County Mus. A 5933.50.34. D'Agrigente. – ARV 515, 7; 1657: P. de Mykonos; Kaempf, o. c. 853, 103 n° 326; Clement, P. A., Hesperia 24, 1955, 15 n° 8 pl. 7a-b. – 480-470 av. J.-C. – A: H. (pieds nus, pilos, chlamyde, caducée tenu presque verticalement derrière lui) tend la main g. vers une femme qui fuit en se retournant. B: femme fuyant vers un roi.

868.* Cratère à colonnettes. New York, MMA 06.1021.149. – ARV 523, 2: P. des Vergers; Kaempf, o. c. 853, 103 n° 325 pl. 26, 2. – 480-460 av. J.-C. – A: H. et Poséidon chassent de concert, chacun saisissant à l'épaule la femme qu'il poursuit. Tous deux portent un bandeau dans les cheveux. H. barbu, en chlamyde par-dessus le chitoniskos, le pétase sur la nuque, tient le caducée horizontalement dans la main dr. baissée. B: éphèbe avec deux femmes.

869. Amphore. Copenhague, Mus. Nat. 4978. De Sicile. – ARV 553, 36: P. de Pan; CVA 3, pl. 131, 1a-c; Follmann, A.-B., Der Pan-Maler (1968) 110 n° 36. – 470-460 av. J.-C. – A: H. de trois quarts face, dans l'attitude du contrepoint, tourne vers la g. sa main dr. et son caducée dans l'autre main. Barbu, en pétase et bottes ailées, la chlamyde drapée par-dessus le chitoniskos, il regarde vers la femme représentée en B.

870. Coupe apode. Baltimore, Walters Art Gall. 48.94. – Para 412: rappelle le P. de Karlsruhe par la forme du vase et le type de composition; style différent (ARV 737-738). – 470-460 av. J.-C. – I: Iris ou Niké et roi. A-B: H. (sandales sans ailes, pétase sur la nuque, chlamyde) poursuit une femme vers la dr. et la g.; bras drapé comme en 875b et caducée horizontalement dans l'autre main; caducée tendu vers la fuyarde et l'autre bras baissé.

871. Pyxide. Laon, Mus. Arch. 37.1053. – ARV 930, 106: P. de Bruxelles R 330; CVA pl. 39, 7-9. 11; Kaempf, o. c. 853, 35. 104 n° 329. – 460-450 av. J.-C. – A: H. juvénile poursuit une femme qui court vers un palmier, une fleur dans la main. B: fuite d'une compagne vers une femme tenant également une fleur, assise près d'un panier. Restaurations.

872. Cratère à colonnettes. Baltimore, Walters Art Gall. 48.69. – ARV 510, 3: P. de Syracuse 23510; Hill, D. K., The Dance in Classical Times (1945) 5. – 460-450 av. J.-C. – A: encadré à g. par une compagne, à dr. par un roi, groupe de la poursuite: H. barbu, le pétase sur la nuque, en chlamyde et bottes ailées, le caducée obliquement levé dans la main dr., saisit au bras la femme qui se retourne vers lui. B: kômos. Cf. etiam ARV 518, 2; Kaempf, o. c. 853, 35. 103 n° 324 pl. 26, 1.

873.* Lécythe. Los Angeles, County Mus. CA 50.8.10. – ARV 649, 44: P. d'Oinoclès; Tillyard, Hope 107 pl. 15. – Vers 460 av. J.-C. – Sujet incertain. H. (bottes ailées, pétase sur la nuque, chlamyde) saisit à l'épaule la jeune femme qu'il poursuit, mais sa main dr. brandit une épée! Cf. Persée (kibisis) armé de l'épée et poursuivant des femmes: Langlotz, KatWurz pl. 40.

874. Pélidé. Copenhague, Mus. Nat. 1061. - ARV² 1218, 1: P. de Copenhague 1061; CVA 4, pl. 153, 3a-b; Kaempf, o.c. 853, 34. 104 n° 330 pl. 26, 3-4. - 450-440 av. J.-C. - A: H. juvénile, la main dr. tendue, le caducée sur le bras g., en chlamyde, chaussures et pilos ailés, vole à la poursuite de la femme représentée en fuite sur la face B.

875.* Deux vases attribués au P. de la Phiale (450-440 av. J.-C.) montrent H. juvénile, drapé dans une chlamyde richement ornée, le pétase sur la nuque, pieds nus, poursuivant une jeune femme qui se retourne en levant la main: a)* Léclythe. Londres, BM E 597. De Géla. - ARV² 1020, 101; Kaempf, o.c. 853, n° 336. - b)* Amphore. Aberdeen, Univ. 687. - ARV² 1015, 10; Para 440; Kaempf-Dimitriadou, o.c. 104 n° 337.

876.* Amphore. Madrid, Mus. Arch. 11109. - ARV² 1167, 7: P. de Munich 2335; CVA 2, pl. 22, 6a-b; Kaempf, o.c. 853, 104 n° 331. - 450-440 av. J.-C. - H. (pétase sur la nuque, sandales sans ailes, caducée tenu obliquement derrière lui) tend vers la jeune femme qui fuit devant lui une main drapée comme dans les scènes de combat (cf. 875b).

Vase lucanien (f. r.)

877.* Cratère en cloche. Paris, Louvre G 494. - LCS 100 n° 515 pl. 50, 1: P. de Dolon; CVA 5, pl. 33, 10-12; Schauenburg, K., «Göttergeliebte auf unteritalischen Vasen», AuA 10, 1961, 77 pl. 6, 11. - Début du IV^e s. av. J.-C. - A: H. barbu, nu, la chlamyde flottant dans le dos, nu-tête et pieds nus, le caducée verticalement sur le bras g., tend la main vers une jeune femme qui fuit devant lui.

3. Hermès pourvoyeur de Zeus?

Vases attiques à f. r.

878. (= Aphrodite 1488*, = Ganymedes 49) Cratère à colonnettes. Paris, Cab. Méd. 416. De Fasano. - ARV² 1101, 8: P. d'Ariane; Kaempf, o.c. 853, 10-11. 79 n° 38 pl. 4, 1. - Vers 440 av. J.-C. - A: Zeus qu'approche Eros pour lui servir une libation saisit au bras un éphèbe nu tenant un cerceau (cf. 863; Ganymède: Hom. Il. 20, 232-235). Scène encadrée à dr. par Aphrodite tendant une couronne, à g. par H., spectateur immobile, drapé dans un manteau, le caducée obliquement baissé vers l'avant. B: homme avec bâton et deux éphèbes.

879. Amphore. Copenhague, Mus. Nat. 3831. De Nola. - ARV² 1002, sous n° 8: manière du P. d'Achille; CVA 4, pl. 151, 3a-b; Zanker (1965) 32 n. 126. - 3^e quart du V^e s. av. J.-C. - A: face à face de Zeus et d'H. juvénile, le pétase sur la nuque, en chlamyde et bottes ailées, le caducée obliquement levé vers l'avant. B: éphèbe drapé, la main appuyée sur un long bâton.

880. (= Io 139*) Skyphos. Palerme, Fond. Mormino 178. - Kaempf, o.c. 853, 25. 56. 97. n° 262 pl. 16, 5-6: proche du P. de Pénélope. - 450-440 av. J.-C. - A: H., portant horizontalement un caducée long comme une lance, la main g. tendue vers Io boukérôs représentée en B. Chasse-t-il à la place ou pour le compte de son maître? Court-il apporter à Io la nouvelle de sa prochaine délivrance?

B. Scènes de repos et de conversation

1. Avec des éphèbes

881. (= 863 [A]) Amphore att. f. r. Leningrad, Ermitage B 611 (2100). - B: H. (pieds nus, pilos, chlamyde par-dessus le chitoniskos), le caducée légèrement incliné dans la main dr., fait face à un éphèbe nu qui a la tête ceinte d'un bandeau et s'appuie sur un sceptre. Les deux personnages baissent un peu le visage. Beazley reconnaît un abrégé du Jugement de Paris (Caskey/Beazley II 52). La poursuite amoureuse en A suggère une autre interprétation de cet entretien d'H. avec le jeune prince.

882. Coupe fr. att. f. r. Bâle, coll. H. Cahn HC 69. - ARV² 478, 313: Macron (Cahn). - Vers 480 av. J.-C. - H. (conservés le bas des jambes et les chaussures ailées) faisant face vers la dr. à un éphèbe (?) drapé, portant bâton.

2. Avec des femmes

883. Pélidé att. f. r. San Francisco, Fine Arts Mus. 1925.365 (1811). - ARV² 1187, 1: manière du P. de Cadmos; CVA pl. 20, 2; 21. 30, 5; Schefold, SBII 299 fig. 434. - Vers 400 av. J.-C. - A: dans une composition étagée avec, à g., Apollon recevant une libation, H. symétriquement à dr., pieds nus, couronné; assis sur un vallonnement du terrain, le caducée reposant verticalement contre sa cuisse g., il contemple une jeune femme (Hersé?) richement vêtue, debout devant lui et faisant un geste de la main. Eros tend une bandelette. B: Satyres et Ménades.

884. Hydrie att. f. r. San Simeon, State Hist. Mon. 529-9-712 (5529; ex-Canessa 9944). - ARV² 1137, 9: proche du P. de Pronomos. - Vers 400 av. J.-C. - En présence d'un «voyageur» (pétase, deux lances) appuyé contre le fond, face à face d'H. assis, le caducée baissé dans la main g., nu sous la chlamyde brodée, et d'une jeune femme portant diadème et faisant le geste de l'anakalypsis. Eros, à l'arrière-plan, se penche vers elle. Derrière H., femme se retournant.

C. Idylle et mariage d'Hermès?

885.* Amphore camp. f. n. Naples, Mus. Naz. 81044 (H 2703). De Marsiglia. - Heydemann, Neapel n° 2703; Parise Badoni, F., Ceramica campana a figure nere (1968) 35 n° 1; 39 pl. 13. - 1^{er} quart du V^e s. av. J.-C. - A: couple entre une grande tige fleurie et un rameau. H., en chitoniskos très court et collant, en bottes ailées, coiffé d'un bonnet ceint d'un bandeau; porte son caducée obliquement dans sa main dr. avec laquelle il tient aussi le bras dr. de la jeune femme; de l'autre il paraît enlacer son épaule. La jeune femme marche près de lui en le regardant, un bandeau dans les cheveux, un calathos sur le bras g. Image d'idylle issue du schéma de la poursuite (vraie poursuite pour Heydemann). B: hybride de coq et de lion.

886.* (= 636) Cratère à colonnettes att. f. r. Bologna, Mus. Civ. 236. - Vers 470-460 av. J.-C. - H. se retourne vers la jeune femme diadémée et voilée qu'il tient au poignet dans le geste nuptial χελρ ἐνὶ καρπῷ. Mariage d'H. et de la fille de Dryops? Cf. le cortège nuptial 103.

XIV. Hermès dans diverses scènes mythologiques

A. Midas et le Silène

Vases attiques à f. n.

887. Passoire ou vase à douche. Eleusis, Mus. 1231. D'Eleusis. - Bulle, H., AM 22, 1897, 387-404 pl. 13; Miller, M. C., AntK 31, 1988, 80 pl. 18, 2. - Vers 550 av. J.-C. - Vase incomplet dont le registre supérieur conserve un personnage drapé avec rameau de lierre. A: scène principale: devant Midas trônant, H. (chiton court collant, pilos, chaussures ailées), tenant son immense caducée verticalement comme un sceptre, introduit le Silène captif qui se retourne vers le garde (doryphore) tenant la corde qui lui entrave les poignets. Sur Midas et le Silène, cf. Dörig, J., dans Festschr. M. Gosebruch (1984) 25. B: scène de labour?

888. Léclythe. Münster, Univ. 784. - Simon, E., dans Kurtz, D./Sparkes, B. (éd.), The Eye of Greece (1981) 138 fig. 33d-f. - Vers 480 av. J.-C. - H. (manteau, pétase, caducée obliquement levé dans la main dr.) au milieu d'une file de Satyres prisonniers, microphalliques, qui semblent docilement attachés à la corde qui leur lie les mains. Il paraît tenir une baguette dans la main g. Parenté formelle avec 887, sans qu'il y ait rapport évident avec l'histoire du roi Midas. Cf. etiam Héraclès et les Satyres capturés, composition analogue: Karouzou, S., «Héraclès Satyrikos», BCH 60, 1936, 154-156 pl. 21. Hypothèse des Limiers: Halm-Tisserant, M., BICS 36, 1989, 129 n. 18.

B. Comédies et parodies

Vases attiques à f. n.

889.* Pélidé. Oxford, Ashm. Mus. 563. - ABV 396, 21: P. d'Eucharidès; CVA 2, pl. 8, 7; Hadzisteliou-Price, Th., AJA 75, 1971, 431 pl. 94, 4. - Vers 500 av. J.-C. - A: cordonnier. B: un Satyre est assis sur un grand rocher derrière lequel se dresse un de ses congénères et près duquel est couché un bouc. Prenant appui sur un long bâton, un personnage qui a l'apparence d'H.: chlamyde, bottes ailées, pétase garni des mêmes rameaux qui ornent la tête des Satyres. H. (?) écoute ou observe le personnage assis, selon qu'on interprète l'objet que celui-ci tient dans les mains: instrument de musique? écritoire? boîte?

890. Oenochoé. Sarasota, Mus. of Art 1600 G 5, coll. J. and M. Ringling. - ABV 527, 17: atelier du P. d'Athéna; Para 264; Shapiro, H. A., Greek Vases from Southern Collections (1981) n° 17. - 500-480 av. J.-C. - Précédé par un Satyre aulète, un autre Satyre est étendu sur un bouc. Brandissant un rhyton, coiffé du pétase, chaussé de bottes ailées, drapé dans un vêtement, le personnage semble parodier l'H. banquetant du stamnos contemporain du P. de Berlin au Louvre (257).

Vases attiques à f. v.

891.* Psykter. Londres, BM E 768. De Cerveteri. - ARV² 446, 62: Douris; CVA 6, pl. 105; Bieber, Theater 15 fig. 49; Vernant, o.c. 95a, 123 fig. 171. - 480-470 av. J.-C. - A-B: kômos et jeux de Satyres. A la tête de l'indiscipliné cortège, un Satyre-guide, chaussé d'endromides et noblement drapé dans un manteau thrace, porte le caducée d'H. Parodie d'une des fonctions du dieu? H. déguisé exarchos d'un chœur satyrique (Bieber)?

892. Hydrie. Leningrad, Ermitage B 201 (B 627, St 1538). - ARV² 555, 95: P. de Pan; Schmidt, M., AntK 10, 1967, 78-80 pl. 21, 2. - Vers 460 av. J.-C. - H. conduit devant Dionysos (canthare dans la main g.) deux personnages barbus (couronne de lierre, casaque brodée de palmettes, chitoniskos plissé), H., en tunique et manteau drapé sur les épaules, pétase, chaussures ailées, le caducée verticalement dirigé vers le sol, fait une vigoureuse enjambée vers la dr. en se retournant vers le premier barbu qu'il traîne par le poignet; le second barbu s'agrippe aux bras de l'autre; ils semblent effrayés (gesticulation, bouches ouvertes précédées de lettres inscrites: chant?). Scène d'interprétation incertaine dont la clef se trouve dans l'écritoire qu'H. tient avec son caducée: liste de choreutes? résultat du concours?

893. (= Aithiopes 22* [A]) Olpé. Paris, Louvre N 3408. - ARV² 1335, 34: P. de Nicias; Para 522; Add 182; Schefold/Jung, SBIV 171 fig. 207-208 (bibl.). - Vers 400 av. J.-C. - Parodie de l'attelage de l'apothéose d'Héraclès. Le héros se tient aux côtés d'une Niké aux traits caricaturaux comme les siens, dans un char tiré par quatre Centaures. Le personnage d'adophore macrophallique qui ouvre le chemin au quadrigé tient le rôle d'H. Dans ses cheveux, deux corymbes à la place des ailerons.

Vases italiotes (f. r.)

894. Cratère en calice apulien. Lecce, Mus. Prov. 629. De Lecce. - RVAp I 12, 36: Hearst P.; CVA 1, pl. 2, 1; 3, 1-2; Trendall, ESVP 47 n° B 32. - 430-420 av. J.-C. - A: une femme absorbée dans la contemplation d'elle-même et dans l'arrangement de sa coiffure se tient derrière un loutéon, un miroir à la main. Un Satyre s'approche à pas de loup, apportant un flacon et une éponge(?), mais sans se faire remarquer de la belle, non plus qu'H. qui s'éloigne, un objet dans la main dr., une étoffe pliée dans la g. Nu sous la chlamyde rejetée dans le dos, le caducée sur le bras g., le dieu est coiffé d'un pilos ailé, peut-être le bonnet d'Hadès qui rend invisible et qui conviendrait à l'épisode du vol dans un gynécée apparemment représenté ici. Drame satyrique? Pour la coiffure d'H. → 837.

895.* Cratère en cloche apulien. Coll. privée. - Schauenburg (1983) 49 fig. 1. - A: devant une table chargée d'offrandes se tient H. entre un personnage dionysiaque dansant (thyrses sur l'épaule, seau à la main) et une femme posant un pied sur la table, une phiale dans la main g., une couronne dans la dr. La représentation du dieu est caricaturale. Imberbe et la mine renfrognée, nu et ventripotent sous la petite chlamyde, le pétase vissé sur le crâne, chaussé de bottes sans ailes, il se tient immobile, les pieds joints, comme pris dans une gaine, le caducée dans la main g., dans la dr. une grenade(?), puissamment ithyphallique et le membre garni d'une couronne. Sans doute inspirée du théâtre comique, cette scène qui montre H. au supplice comblé d'honneurs est impossible à interpréter exactement. Je comprends que le dieu «fait la statue» pour les besoins du scénario.

895 bis. (= Alkmene 2*) Cratère en calice phlyaque. Vatican 17106. De Paestum. - Trendall, Phlyax Vases 46, 65; Bieber, Theater 132 fig. 484; Dumont, o. c. 181b, 143. - Alcmène à sa fenêtre, vers laquelle Zeus porte l'échelle. H. (pieds nus, pétase, chitoniskos, caducée pointé vers le sol, lampe dans la main) éclaire le chemin.

C. Hermès spectateur d'événements mythiques

Vases lucaniens (f. r.)

896. (= Harpyiai 17 avec renvois et bibl.) Cratère. Ruvo, Mus. Jatta 1095. - LCS 47, 243; P. d'Amykos; Sichtermann, SlgJatta 36 K 40 pl. 62. - Vers 410 av. J.-C. - A: Phinée pillé par les Harpyies, secouru par les Boréades et les Argonautes. Dans la partie inférieure de la composition, H. observe la scène, assis sur un valonnement du terrain. Juvénile, coiffé du pilos, pieds nus, le flanc g. et la cuisse dr. drapés, il lève la tête et la main g., son caducée appuyé contre le genou. B: Argonautes au repos.

897. Deux vases attribués au P. des Choéphores (370-360 av. J.-C.) montrent H. dans une attitude quasi identique, près du tombeau où se tient assise Electre tandis qu'approche Oreste. Nu, seulement drapé à l'épaule, coiffé du pétase, le dieu tend une couronne vers la stèle. Les jambes croisées dans la position du repos, avec une pondération praxitélienne, il est accoudé sur son caducée planté dans le sol. a) Hydrie. Naples, Mus. Naz. 2858. - LCS 60, 3. - b) (= Amazones 394) Péliké. Paris, Louvre MNB 167 (K 544). - LCS 120, 599; Trendall/Webster, Illustrations III 1, 5.

Vases apuliens (f. r.)

898.* (= Aietes 13 avec bibl., = Iason 57) Cratère en calice. Paris, Louvre K 127. - RVAp II 539, 332 pl. 203, 3: très proche du P. des Enfers; Schauenburg, K., RM 82, 1975, 212 pl. 60, 1. - 350-340 av. J.-C. - Devant un roi trônant, jeune prince présentant la toison d'or et couronné par une Niké: Phrixos devant Aétès? Jason devant Aétès ou Pélias? Du registre supérieur, H. juvénile observe la scène, son caducée à la main.

899. Cratère à volutes. Ruvo, Mus. Jatta J 1097. - RVAp I 417, 16; P. de Lycurgue; Sichtermann, SlgJatta 50 K 72 pl. 120-122. - Vers 350 av. J.-C. - A: scène dionysiaque sur le col; combat d'Arimaspes et de Grifons sur le pied; Jardin des Hespérides sur la panse. B: combat d'Héraclès contre le taureau sur le col. Sur la panse, sacrifice à Apollon devant un temple avec sa statue de culte. Parmi les divinités et personnages indéterminés qui entourent l'édifice, H. en conversation avec une femme en bonnet phrygien. Coiffé du pétase, chaussé de sandales ailées, la chlamyde drapant ses bras, il est figuré de trois quarts dos, s'appuyant sur le caducée qu'il tient derrière lui.

900.* (= Eros 931 avec renvois) Cratère à volutes. Ruvo, Mus. Jatta J 424. - RVAp II 865, 24 pl. 324, 2: P. de Baltimore; Sichtermann, SlgJatta 51 K 73 pl. 123-127. - 330-320 av. J.-C. - A: Amazonomachie sur le col, femmes et Amours sur le pied. Sur la panse, en trois registres, massacre des Niobides. En haut, parmi des divinités spectatrices, H. juvénile (boucles parotides, pétase et bottes ailées, caducée orné) aux côtés d'Héra trônant au centre, appuyé contre un louté- rion, les jambes croisées, la chlamyde découvrant l'avant du corps. Du regard et du geste il participe à la conversation entre Héra et Arès. B: thiasse sur le col. Sur la panse, cavalier à la lance dans un naïskos entouré de porteurs d'offrandes.

Vase paestan (f. r.)

901. (= Kadmos I 25* avec renvois et bibl.) Cratère en calice. Paris, Louvre N 3157. De Santa Agata dei Goti. - RVP 143, 241 pl. 90: Python. - Vers 330 av. J.-C. - Cadmos combat le Dragon entre Harmonie et Thèbes. Au-dessus quatre spectateurs (bustes émergeant du terrain), dont H. couronné, le pétase sur la nuque, un caducée orné de bandelettes sur l'épaule dr.

D. Hermès dans des scènes fragmentaires ou non identifiées 902.* Des vases archaïques à f. n. montrent H. bien caractérisé par des attributs, encadré par un homme et une femme non identifiables. Exemples: a) Lécythe att. Athènes, Mus. Nat. 605. - VI^e s. av. J.-C. - H. avec pétase et chaussures ailées. - b)* Olpé chalcidienne. Trieste, Mus. Civ. S 455. - Rumpf, Chalkelvas 33 n° 192 pl. 167. - Vers 540 av. J.-C. - H. (bottes ailées, pétase, chlaina sur les bras, caducée dans la main g.) se retourne dans l'attitude qui lui est familière (figure en contrepoint).

Choix de documents retenus pour l'intérêt ou la qualité de la représentation.

903. Cratère en calice att. fr., f. n. Paris, Louvre Cp 11292. - ABV 275, 135; P. d'Antiménès; CVA 12, pl. 197. - Vers 520 av. J.-C. - H. acéphale se retourne vers un attelage. Bottes ailées, chitoniskos; manteau dont les draperies tuyautées retombent de part et d'autre de la main qui tient le caducée à hauteur de la taille.

904.* Deux fr. de pinakes att. f. r. conservent des restes de figures d'H.: a) Athènes, Mus. Nat. Acr. 1047. De l'Acropole. - Graef/Langlotz II pl. 82 c. - Vers 500 av. J.-C. - H., la tête couronnée (traces du front) avance le bras dr. en tenant verticalement son caducée dans la main g. - b)* Athènes, Mus. Nat. Acr. 1042. De l'Acropole. - Graef/Langlotz II pl. 82 a-b; Philippaki, B., Vases du Mus. Nat. d'Athènes (s. d.) fig.

coul. p. 75. - Vers 500 av. J.-C. - Jugement de Pâris. H. retient Pâris par le bras. En pétase ailé et manteau sur tunique courte, il porte son caducée de la main g. et une épée accrochée à la taille.

905. Stamnos(?) att. fr., f. r. Chiusi, Mus. Naz. 1847. De Chiusi. - ARV 188, 64; P. de Kléophradès; Schnitzler, L., OpuscAthen 2, 1955, 55 pl. 3, 10; CVA 2 pls. 13, 3; 14, 1-2. - Vers 480 av. J.-C. - A: H. conservé au-dessus de la taille (pétase à très larges bords, chlamyde). Il se retourne vers Héraclès qui le suit, lui désignant de la main et du caducée le chemin. B: Apollon.

906.* Fr. d'oenochoé att. f. r. Athènes, Agora P 150850. - Green, R., Hesperia 31, 1962, 86 n° 10 pl. 30, 10; Zagdoun n° 19 pl. 21, 82. - Vers 410 av. J.-C. - Représentation archaïsante d'H. (pétase à très large bord, sandales dont les ailes sont stylisées en volutes); nu sous la chlamyde à plis tuyautés flottant dans son dos, il se dirige vers la dr. d'une grande enjambée.

XV. Hermès et le jeu: toupie, cerceau, dés

Vases attiques

907. Amphore f. n. Orvieto, coll. Faina 186. - ABV 368, 98; P. de Chiusi; Technau, W., RM 53, 1938, 97-98 pl. 24, 1-2. - 520-510 av. J.-C. - A: Achille et Ajax au jeu de dés. Derrière la table, Athéna et H. se tournent chacun vers l'un des héros avec de grands gestes des mains. B: Dionysos entre deux Ménades assises derrière lesquelles se tiennent d'un côté un Satyre, de l'autre H.

908. Coupe fr., f. r. Florence, Mus. Arch. 80528. De Saturnia. - ARV 377, 113; P. de Brygos; Minto, L., AttiTorino 1924, 133 fig. 1. - Vers 480 av. J.-C. - I: près d'un arbre, H. (pétase, bottes ailées, caducée horizontalement dans la main g.) brandit le fouet avec lequel il fait tourner une toupie sur une petite plate-forme.

909. Coupe f. r. University, Univ. of Mississippi, anc. coll. Robinson. - Minto, o. c. 908, 136 fig. 2; Schefold, SB III 213 fig. 293: Douris. - Vers 480 av. J.-C. - H. (pieds nus, pétase, chlamyde), de trois quarts face, se déhanche pour frapper du fouet la toupie qui tourne au sol et vers laquelle un éphèbe tend la main.

910.* Lécythe f. r. Tübingen, Univ. S/10 814. - ARV (absent d'ARV): P. de Londres E 242; CVA 5, pl. 41, 3-8. - Vers 450 av. J.-C. - Devant un éphèbe drapé spectateur, H. (pétase sur la nuque, chlamyde, caducée obliquement dans la main) fouette la toupie tournant au sol.

Sur ces représentations du jeu de la toupie, cf. le commentaire de Wolters, P., MJBK 8, 1913, 90.

Gemme

911.* Lapis-lazuli. Londres, BM. - Walters, BMGems n° 1397 pl. 19. - Nu, avec ailerons de tête et sandales ailées, un caducée ailé verticalement dans la main dr., H. se présente de trois quarts face vers la g., la main g. prolongée par une baguette(?) portée sur un grand cerceau. - 863. 878.

XVI. Types plastiques d'Hermès

Récapitulation des types recensés dans des rubriques antérieures du catalogue: pilier hermaïque, 9-91; H. criophore, 260-307 (dont le type de Trézène avec bélier 298); H. pédophore, 391-401. Les types présentés ici seront classés soit en fonction d'une attitude caractéristique du dieu (ce sont les cas les plus simples: celui p. ex. d'H. attachant sa sandale), soit, faute d'indices iconographiques, en fonction du seul critère disponible, celui du style. Outre que l'analyse proprement stylistique n'entre pas dans les objectifs du LIMC, la tentative pour H. est rendue aléatoire par la grande fréquence des copies romaines qui transforment et déforment les originaux grecs. Il va de soi que l'on n'entrera guère ici dans les discussions que suscitent ces «Umbildungen» et que l'on ne retiendra, autant que possible, que les documents les moins suspects. Par ailleurs beaucoup de statues sont plutôt des Mercurus (→ Mercurius).

A. Documents archaïques et de tradition archaïque

Si ce n'est sous les formes du pilier hermaïque et du criophore, H. est mal représenté dans la sculpture en ronde-bosse avant l'ép. sévère finissante. Les pièces sûres sont rarissimes et l'on n'inclura pas dans ce catalogue, p. ex., le beau torse de kouros drapé de l'Ilissos, parfois identifié comme un H. (ArchDelt 14, 1931-32, 41-56 pl. 5-7; BrBr 781-782).

Petite plastique en bronze et toreutique

912.* Statuette. Genève, Mus. MF 1251. - Deonna, W., Cat. des bronzes figurés ant., Musée d'Art et d'Histoire de Genève (1915-16) 51 n° 155; idem, Genava 9, 1931, 168-170. - Fin du VI^e s. av. J.-C.; peut-être étrusque. - H., jambes jointes et chaussures ailées aux pieds, porte une chlamyde attachée sur l'épaule g. et traversant obliquement la poitrine; bras brisés, le g. le long du corps, le dr. plié au coude; barbe en pointe; nappe de cheveux dans le dos.

913.* Applique d'une frise de cratère, atelier lacorien. Berlin-Ouest, Staatl. Mus. 1969.8. - Gehrig, U., AA 1971, 604-610 fig. 4-7. - Vers 550 av. J.-C. - H. se dirige vers la dr., le regard tourné vers le spectateur. En chitoniskos et manteau court, il porte la main g. à son pétase; bras dr. plié au coude et main dr. creusée pour tenir le caducée. Pieds brisés. H. s'avancant à la tête d'un cortège (cf. le Vase François).

914. Plaquette en bronze repoussé = 209.

B. Types sévères

Ronde bosse en marbre

915.* «H. Ingenui». Vatican, Gall. delle Statue 544. - Helbig 149 (Fuchs, W.); Arias, P. E., Mirone (1940) 24 pl. 14. - Œuvre éclectique d'ép. antonine combinant des traits du style sévère. - La pondération se caractérise par un plante du pied libre fixée au sol.

Tête myronienne. Ajouts du copiste: ailes de tête, caducée vertical dans la main g., lyre appuyée contre la béquille, chlamyde fixée sur l'épaule dr. par un fermoir rond à la mode romaine, mais dont le faisceau de draperies arrondies se rencontre dans l'art hellénistique délien (→ 986). L'inscr. INGENVI sur la plinthe donne probablement le nom du dédicant.

916.* Deux têtes myroniennes ont été identifiées comme appartenant à des H.: a) * Copenhague, Glypt. 1940. De Rome. – Poulsen, CatNyCarlsberg Glypt 99–100 n° 110; Poulsen, V. H., «Myron. Ein stilkritischer Versuch», ActaArch 11, 1940, 34; Helbig⁴ 149 (Fuchs, W.). – Type H. «Ingenius», avec bandeau dans les cheveux. – b) Malibu, Getty Mus. 72.AA.154. – Frel, J., GettyMusJ 1, 1974, 55–57 fig. 1–2. – II^e s. ap. J.-C.? – Tête ailée (ailes brisées) du type «Persée» de Myron au Mus. Cap. (Helbig⁴ 1771), rattachée à un H. de Calamis.

917. Statue fr. en marbre pentélique. Cyrène, Mus. 14114. Des thermes romains de Cyrène. – Paribeni, ScultCirene 127–128 n° 360 pl. 163. – II^e s. ap. J.-C.; modèle du IV^e s. (Paribeni), ou plutôt d'un éphèbe d'ép. sévère? – Pétase ailé et caducée probablement dans la main dr. le long du corps. Draperie en faisceau oblique depuis l'épaule dr. jusqu'au bras g. recouvert. Coiffure à bouclettes frontales. → 925.

918.* Trois petites statues en marbre du nord de la Grèce paraissent dériver de modèles sévères, avec combinaisons éclectiques: a) * Malibu, Getty Mus. 71.AA.283. De Thasos. – Vermeule, C./Neuerburg, N., Cat. of Anc. Art in the J. Paul Getty Mus. (1973) 22 n° 45. – I^{er}–II^e s. ap. J.-C. d'après un original grec de la fin du V^e s. av. J.-C. – H. porte le pétase ailé et une chlamyde drapée comme sur 921. Grand caducée ailé sur le bras g. (inachevé). – b) Thessalonique, Mus. Arch. 1185. – Draperie type 921. – c) Thessalonique, Mus. Arch. 6793. De Potidée. – Même draperie.

919. «H. Pitti». Florence, Pal. Pitti. – EA 213–215; Lippold, GrPl 178; Arnold 264 n° 2. – Copie romaine (II^e s. ap. J.-C.?) d'après un original grec du V^e s. av. J.-C. – Cet H. à tête ailée a également été expliqué par l'art polyclète du IV^e s. et rattaché à Naucydès (Arnold; type Lansdowne-Berlin-Pitti, infra 943). Mais Lippold avait souligné ses affinités avec l'éphèbe Odescalchi (Copenhague, Glypt. 271; Lippold, GrPl pl. 63, 1) et le faible chiasme aux hanches à peine transmis aux épaules.

920.* H. de la Villa Hadriana. – Aurigemma, S., BoillArte 40, 1955, 69–71 fig. 15; Berger, E., RM 65, 1958, 6–19 fig. 1–2. – Œuvre éclectique combinant des traits empruntés à des modèles sévères; du même sculpteur que le guerrier de la Villa Hadriana (Berger). – H. nu, acéphale; traces du caducée sur le bras dr.; ailerons noués aux pieds? Plante du pied libre adhérent au sol. Cf. fr. de torse comparable, avec couronnement de caducée près de l'épaule g. de la petite statue: Thessalonique, Mus. Arch. 1147.

Petite plastique en terre cuite

921. Moule fr. Athènes, Agora. – Shear, T. L., Hesperia 7, 1938, 352 fig. 37. – 2^e moitié du V^e s., tradition sévère. – H. coiffé du pilos, la chlamyde drapée en éventail de l'épaule dr. au bras g., tient verticalement le caducée dans la main g. Jambes brisées.

922. Série de statuettes. D'Olynthe. a) et b) Thessalonique, Mus. Arch. 01931 et 01952. – Olynthus XIV 206 pl. 64; 236 pl. 77. – 2^e moitié du V^e s. av. J.-C. – H. drapé à l'épaule g. S'inscrivent par la pondération dans la tradition sévère.

C. Phidias

Ronde bosse en marbre

923.* «H. Ludovisi», en marbre pentélique. Rome, Mus. Naz. Rom. 8624. – Karouzou 1; Helbig⁴ n° 2326 (v. Steuben, H.). – Copie du II^e s. ap. J.-C. d'après un original phidiesque en bronze (peut-être pas de la main de Phidias) daté vers 450–440 av. J.-C. Restaurations par le sculpteur Algardi, en part. au bras dr. – Le pétase ailé est retenu par un bandeau à l'arrière du crâne. Tête inclinée dans l'axe du corps. Pondération pré-classique avec des pieds rapprochés et plus fermement ancrés au sol que chez l'Apollon de Cassel. La draperie glisse de l'épaule g., s'arrêtant à la hauteur du biceps. La main g. tenait le caducée incliné vers le sol. La main dr., dont le geste commande en partie le sens de l'œuvre, se laisse mieux restituer d'après la réplique d'Antium 924a (cf. v. Steuben). L'interprétation la plus satisfaisante est celle de S. Karouzou, à la lumière de l'iconographie funéraire attique (cratère du P. de Perséphone 637, lécythes): H. Psychopompe, peut-être la statue d'un monument aux morts de la cité (aux morts de Coronée en 447? cf. Paus. 1, 29, 14 et 27, 5). Simon, Götter 312–314 fig. 298–299, insiste sur les résonances éleusiniennes d'un H. Chthonios. Sur une reconstitution en H. Logios, → 924b.

924.* Répliques de l'H. Ludovisi. a) * «H. d'Antium», marbre italien. Rome, Mus. Naz. Rom. 124479. De la mer, près d'Anzio. – Karouzou 1, 94–95 Beil. 66; Helbig⁴ n° 2291 (v. Steuben, H.). – Copie du milieu ou de la 2^e moitié du II^e s. ap. J.-C. – Le caducée, sur le bras g., freinant le glissement de la draperie, n'est pas en position correcte. D'après la partie du bras dr. conservée sous l'épaule on peut admettre une forte avancée, une flexion du coude, une main ramenée non loin de la tempe (travaillée sans soin: occultée?). – b) Un H. Ludovisi transformé en Apollon. Sidé, Mus. Fr. recueillis devant la façade du Nymphée. – Mansel, A. M., Die Ruinen von Side (1963) 69 fig. 50; Inan, J., AntK 13, 1970, 23–26; eadem (1975) n° 6 pl. 13–18. – II^e s. ap. J.-C. – A partir d'un photo-montage des fr., reconstitution d'un H. Logios (AntK 1970, pl. 21, 3) conforme au schéma du «Germanicus» du Louvre (BrBr 69; Richter, G., Three Critical Periods in Greek Sculpture [1951] fig. 130. – c) Leptis Magna, Mus. 10. Du théâtre. – Caputo, G./Traversari, G., Le scult. del teatro di Leptis Magna (1976) 21–22 n° 1 pl. 1–2. – II^e s. ap. J.-C. – Statue dérivée de l'H. Ludovisi. Pas d'attributs hermaïques.

925.* Statuette. Rome, Mus. Cap. 1435. Anc. Antiquarium du Caelius. – Arias, P. E., Policleto (1964) pl. 15; Mustilli 139 n° 3 pl. 87, 325; Helbig⁴ n° 1777 (v. Steuben, H.). – II^e s. ap. J.-C. – H. (pétase ailé, caducée sur la draperie du bras g.) réalisé à partir d'un éphèbe vainqueur (bandeau dans les cheveux) du milieu du V^e s. av. J.-C. La tête inclinée et bouclée comporte des traits phidiesques. De l'H. de Phidias qui se dressait devant l'Isménion de Thèbes, theos pronaos, à côté d'une Athéna de Scopas, rien n'est connu que sa mention par Paus. 9, 10, 2.

D. Kalon d'Élide

926.* Statue en marbre. Vatican, Sala della Biga 2374. Du Quirinal. Restauré par V. Pacetti avec une tête casquée (d'où la désignation de «Phocion» par Visconti). – Lippold, SkulptVatMus III 2, 83 n° 66. 536; Helbig⁴ n° 502 (Fuchs, W.); Dörig 3, 128–143 fig. 1. 7–8. 13–17 (la fig. 17 sans les restaurations de Pacetti). – Copie d'ép. impériale d'un original de Kalon d'Élide (420–410 av. J.-C.) dont Paus. 5, 27, 8 cite un H. à Olympie, non loin du criophore d'Onatas. Deux fr. de la base inscrite et signée ont été retrouvés dans l'Altis (Olympia V [1896] 398 n° 271; Dörig 3, 127). – H., coiffé du pétase, le caducée dans la main g., drapé à la manière de certaines terres cuites béotiennes classiques (271a–g) et d'une statuette en bronze du Cab. Méd. à Paris (Dörig 3, 135–136 fig. 10), se présentait comme sur une gemme de Dioscouridès. La datation de l'original au milieu du V^e s. (Fuchs à la suite de Lippold) rend mal compte de la légèreté post-parthénonienne du manteau, du jeu antagoniste entre le vêtement et l'anatomie.

927. Cornaline. Cambridge, Fitz. Mus. – Vollenweider, Steinschneidekunst 63 n. 83 (hist. de la pierre); Dörig 3, 136 fig. 9. – Ép. augustéenne. – Transmet l'image de l'H. de Kalon d'Élide: imberbe, coiffé du pétase, caducée presque vertical dans la main g. un peu soulevée, bras dr. le long du corps, ample manteau court et lisse.

E. Crésilas

928. Ephèbe (H.?) du type Cyrène-Périnthe-Sidé. Statues en marbre. a) Cyrène, Mus. – Paribeni, ScultCirene n° 445. – b) Sidé, Mus. – Inan, o. c. 924b, 21 pl. 14–16; eadem (1975) 28 n° 3. – Torse avec reste de caducée dans la main g. – c) Local. inconnue, anc. Dresde, Staatl. Kunstslg. 73. D'Eregli (Périnthe). – BrBr 542; Vierneisel-Schlörb, KatSkulptMünchen II 89–90 et n. 41. – Peut-être un H. Logios à partir d'un original en bronze des années 440, antérieur dans la carrière de Crésilas au Diomède de Cumes.

929.* «Mercure de Thalwil». Statuette en bronze. Zurich, Landesmus. P 3447. De Thalwil. – Schuchhardt, W.-H., API I (1962) 33–40 pl. 22–27; Dörig, J., Helvetica Arch. 14, 1983, 25–35. – I^{er} s. ap. J.-C. – C'est un Diomède transformé par l'adjonction d'ailes talonnières, d'un pétase ailé, sans doute d'un caducée dans la main g. (brisée). L'original traditionnellement attribué à Crésilas (Vierneisel-Schlörb, KatSkulptMünchen II 79–99 fig. 38–46) est rattaché par Dörig à Lykios, fils de Myron.

F. Polyclète

1. Doryphore-Discophore-Kyniskos

Petite plastique en bronze

930.* Statuette dite «éphèbe d'Annecy». Paris, Petit Palais, coll. Dutuit DUT 1. D'Annecy. – Petit, o. c. 73, n° 32 avec fig. et bibl. – Fin I^{er} s. av. – I^{er} s. ap. J.-C. – Le plus souvent considérée comme la meilleure image de l'H. de Polyclète dont l'existence, sous la forme d'au moins une statue, est attestée par Plin. nat. 34, 56: (fecit) ... item Mercurium qui fuit Lysimacheae, sans que l'on sache s'il s'agit de Lysimacheia de Thrace ou (plutôt) d'Etolie. Arnold préfère toutefois renvoyer à une statuette de Vienne, «plus vivante»: Eichler, F., Führer durch die Antikensammlung (1920) 45. Dans l'hypothèse de tels modèles, l'H. de Polyclète aurait été un frère très proche du Doryphore. Il faut toutefois noter que l'éphèbe d'Annecy ne porte pas le caducée dans la main g., mais, semble-t-il, plutôt une cornucopia, dont est conservée l'extrémité courbe qui reposait sur l'intérieur de l'avant-bras. L'argument contre une identification comme H. n'est toutefois pas dirimant, car l'analyse spectrométrique et la radiographie du métal ont révélé que l'attribut était une adjonction antique. Au caducée du messenger de Zeus a pu se substituer l'insigne d'un Génie de l'abondance. Pour la cornucopia chez H., → 969. 971. 997.

931.* Statuette. Paris, Louvre Br 183. – Rolley, C., Mon. Graeca et Romana V, Les bronzes (1967) n° 83; Lullies/Hirmer, Plastik pl. 181; Boucher (1971) 317–327 pl. 3–4; eadem (1976) 95–102 fig. 1–4. – Ép. romaine, d'un atelier grec. – Beau modelé, incrustations d'argent et de cuivre pour les yeux et les pointes des seins. L'éphèbe se présente avec une pondération en chiasme, mais les plantes des deux pieds au sol. Il incline un peu la tête vers l'épaule dr., les deux bras le long du corps, le dr. plus relevé que l'autre dont la main s'arrondit autour d'un objet perdu. Deux encoches latérales dans la chevelure fixaient des ailerons sur la tête. Le schéma est celui du discophore polyclète, même si le bronze du Louvre n'a jamais pu tenir de disque dans la main dr.: mais rien n'empêchait de modifier le détail de cette main pour la transformation d'un athlète discophore en H. (portant la bourse dans la main dr., le caducée dans la g.).

Ronde bosse en marbre

932.* Tête. Boston, MFA 98.641. – Sieveking fig. 7 et pl. 1; Arias, o. c. 925, pl. 11; Vermeule (1969) 17 fig. 17; Lauter 93. – La tête, d'un modelé exceptionnel, est brisée au cou et a perdu la calotte crânienne rapportée; elle était coiffée du pétase (Sieveking, d'après l'étude de la zone du joint). Autres têtes puristes d'ép. augustéenne citées par Lauter (Oslo; Rome, Pal. Valentini Scalone).

933. Tête. Vienne, Kunsthst. Mus. I. 828. Du Gymnase du port à Ephèse. – Funde aus Ephesos und Samothrake, Kat. der Antikensammlung (1978) 105 n° 134 pl. 84; Lauter 107 n. 481. – Copie romaine d'après l'Héracles de Polyclète (cf. la statue fr. Rome, Mus. Naz. Rom. 106164; Helbig⁴ n° 2251 (v. Steuben, H.); Vierneisel-Schlörb, KatSkulptMünchen II 95 n. 27. –

Vers 420 av. J.-C. - Adjunction par le copiste d'ailes sur la tête (l'une conservée).

934.* Tête. Berlin-DDR, Staatl. Mus. SK 1833. - Blümel, KatSkulptBerlin IV K 146 pl. 28-29; idem, «Der Diskosträger Polyklet», BerlWPr 90, 1930 3-5 pl. 1-2; Lauter 100. - Excellente copie d'ép. antonine. - Discophore transformé en H. par adjunction d'ailes sur la tête. Cf. la tête polyclétéenne de Baltimore, Walters Art Gall. 23.225. - Hill, D. K., AJA 74, 1970, 21-24 pl. 4. 6-8 (mais pas d'attributs hermaïques).

935. Statue. Bâle, Antikenmus. BS 221. - Zanker, P., AntK 12, 1969, 35 pl. 23-24. - Œuvre romaine du I^{er} s. ap. J.-C. - H. (ou Hypnos?) d'après le Discophore.

936.* Statue. Boston, MFA 95.67. De la région de Capoue. - Vermeule (1969) 17 fig. 18; Comstock/Vermeule, SculptBoston n° 145. - Ep. romaine (augustéenne?). - Calotte crânienne rapportée, perdue. Ailes de tête brisées dans les cheveux. La douceur du modelé et la mélancolie de la tête inclinée sont plutôt d'un successeur de Polyclète qui semble se souvenir également du Kyniskos (bien que le geste du couronnement ne soit pas celui de l'H. de Boston). On rapprochera aussi l'éphèbe de Wellesley College, plus proche du Discophore (Vermeule [1969] 22 fig. 14). Sur les mécanismes de ces «Umbildungen» et «Neubildungen», cf. Zanker, Klassizistische Statuen (1974).

2. Quelques Hermès de la tradition polyclétéenne

Ronde bosse en marbre

937.* «H. Barberini». Palestrina, Pal. Barberini. - Arnold 215. 228. 281 n° P1 pl. 28 a. - Copie de l'ép. de Trajan ou du début de celle d'Hadrien d'après une œuvre de Cléon de Sicyone, vers 390-380 (Arnold). - Statue acéphale brisée aux cuisses et au biceps dr. Le bras et la main g. à la hanche sont drapés comme l'H. de la colonne historiée de l'Artémision d'Ephèse (591). La main dr. le long du corps tenait vraisemblablement le caducée. La jambe g. libre est placée en retrait comme chez les éphèbes post-polyclétéens (de Dresde: Arnold 64-68. 259-262 pl. 1c. 6a. 7a. 8a). Traits fortement polyclétéens de l'anatomie.

938.* Statue colossale en marbre pentélique. Vatican, Braccio Nuovo 2211. De la Villa Hadriana (la tête, qui n'appartient pas à la statue, provient du Colisée). - Helbig⁴ 460 (Fuchs, W.). - Ep. d'Hadrien. - Copie retenant grosso modo le schéma du Doryphore, mais plaçant la main dr. à la hanche et la g. le long du corps pour tenir le caducée. Et surtout l'athlète polyclétéen est amplement drapé dans une chlamyde (cf. le pseudo-Phocion, 926).

939.* a) Leptis Magna, Mus. 16. Du théâtre. - Caputo/Traversari, o. c. 924c, 33-34 n° 12 pl. 11-12. - II^e s. ap. J.-C. - Réélaboration d'un type polyclétéen, avec adjunction d'ailerons de tête, d'un caducée et d'une bourse. - b)* Tête ailée polyclétéenne. Genève, Mus. MF 1328. D'Italie. - Deonna, W., Cat. des sculpt. ant. (1924) n° 51; Chamay, J./Maier, J. L., Art grec. Sculpt. en pierre du Mus. de Genève I (1990) n° 28 pl. 34, 1-3.

Petite plastique en bronze

940.* Statuette. Londres, BM 825. De Gaule. - Walters, BMBronzes 825; Walters, H. B., Select Bronzes (1915) pl. 48; Furtwängler, MW 426-427 fig. 63. - I^{er} s. ap. J.-C.? - Le sculpteur retient le rythme et l'anatomie du Doryphore, auquel il met un torque en or (disparu) au cou, des draperies du type H. Lansdowne-Berlin-Pitti (943) sur le côté g., le caducée en argent (disparu) dans la main g. et une bourse dans la main dr.

941.* Série de statuettes, de bonne qualité, drapées comme 940, caractérisées comme H. par un ou plusieurs attributs: ailerons de tête, bourse, caducée. Anatomies et rythmes polyclétéens. a)* Boston, MFA 1904.9. - Comstock/Vermeule, BronzesBoston n° 110. - b)* Baltimore, Walters Art Gall. 54.988. - Hill, D. K., Cat. of Class. Bronze Sculpt. in Walters Art Gall. (1949) 25 pl. 10. - c)* Saint-Germain-en-Laye, Mus. Ant. Nat. De Gaule. - Lantier, R., dans Mél. Ch. Picard II = RA 1948, 554-560.

Glyptique

942.* Deux documents présentant de trois quarts profil vers la g. un athlète de pondération polyclétéenne, transformé en H. par le port du caducée: a)* Chaton de bague en argent. New York, MMA 41.160.496. - Richter, MetrMusGems 93 pl. 16. - Début du IV^e s. av. J.-C. - H. prend appui sur une colonne ionique. - b)* Topaze ovale. New York, MMA 81.6.74. - Richter, MetrMusGems 286 pl. 41. - Début de l'ép. impériale. - Draperie sur l'avant-bras g., tronc de palmier.

G. Naucydès

1. L'Hermès de Naucydès

943.* Type Lansdowne-Berlin-Pitti. Répliques en marbre. a)* «H. Lansdowne». New York, MMA 56.234.15. - Michaelis, AntM 68 fig. 104; Vermeule, C./v. Bothmer, D., AJA 63, 1959, 330 pl. 77. 3-5. - b)* Berlin-DDR, Staatl. Mus. SK 199. - Blümel, KatSkulptBerlin IV K 16 pl. 48; Arnold 123-124. 264 E 1 pl. 10 a. - Original vers 410-400 av. J.-C., dont l'existence est attestée par Plin. nat. 34, 80. L'attribution à Naucydès du type présenté ici se fonde en particulier sur la similitude des têtes avec celle du Discobole du même sculpteur (Arnold pl. 8c; 9a). Contrairement à l'habitude polyclétéenne, c'est le côté g. qui est porteur, le bras dr. pendant le long du corps, comme également chez le Discobole de Naucydès (Arnold 262-263 pl. 11b; 12-13c). Construction héritée non pas du chiasme polyclétéen, mais d'un vieux schéma argien. En ôtant les attributs des copistes (ailes talonnières, bourse), on restitue un H. juvénile, drapé à l'épaule dr., tenant le caducée.

2. Hermès sculptés d'après des types plastiques de Naucydès 944.* a) «H. Capelli». Florence, coll. Capelli. - Arnold 136-137. 267 FIV 1 pl. 15c. - Copie de l'ép. de Trajan ou d'Hadrien, d'après un original de 400-390 av. J.-C. - La tête n'appartient pas à la statue.

Restaurations, en particulier de l'avant-bras dr. avec le caducée et de la main g. avec la bourse. Position des jambes et pondération assurées. - b)* «Ephèbe». Cyrene, Mus. - Paribeni, SculptCyrene n° 358 pl. 162; Arnold 136-137. 267 FIV 2 pl. 13 a. - Copie d'ép. antonine. - Restes de bourse dans la main dr. le long du corps.

945. Hermès-Phrixos. Statue en marbre grec. Leptis Magna, thermes. - Bartoccini, o. c. 298, 131-134 fig. 131-133. - Ep. antonine. - Le pied dr. surélevé sur une tortue, penché vers l'avant, H. porte sur sa cuisse drapée un enfant assis (jambe conservée) qu'il retient probablement de sa main dr. (bras dr. brisé). La main g. écartée du corps tient un caducée orné, à peu près perpendiculairement à la jambe porteuse. Chlaina enroulée autour des épaules et du bras g. Le visage est celui du Discobole de Naucydès (Arnold pl. 11 b; 22 a), les cheveux ceux de l'H. Lansdowne-Berlin-Pitti (943).

On est frappé par la similitude entre cette statue et une fresque pompéienne de la Maison de Spurius Maesor (Arnold 126-130 pl. 14 a-b), où l'on voit un personnage, le pied surélevé sur le degré d'un autel, regardant brûler une victime. Or Plin. (nat. 34, 80) mentionne parmi les œuvres de Naucydès un immolans arietem que rien ne désigne comme un H., et Pausanias a vu sur l'Acropole, où une base porte vraisemblablement la signature de Naucydès (IG II/III² 3, 4272), un Phrixos qui «ayant sacrifié le bélier [à la toison d'or] et ayant découpé les cuisses selon l'usage grec les regarde brûler» (Paus. I, 24, 2). L'Umbildung du Phrixos en H. pédophore consistait notamment à changer la toison d'or en draperie sous le corps de l'enfant et l'épée du sacrificateur en caducée. Cf. références supra, → 298.

H. Varia de la tradition polyclétéenne au IV^e s.

1. Hermès Richelieu

946. a)* Paris, Louvre MA 573. - Charbonneaux, SculptLouvre 47; Arnold 184-189. 201-205. 276-277 N V 15 pl. 13 c; Vienne-Schlörb, KatSkulptMünchen II 283-292 fig. 132-139 (ensemble du dossier de l'H. Richelieu); Montebault, M./Schloder, J., L'album Canini et la coll. de Richelieu (1988) n° 2. - Copie antonine d'un original des années 360 av. J.-C., œuvre d'un sculpteur de tradition polyclétéenne prenant appui sur l'H. de Naucydès (943). - Vigoureuse spatialité de la chlamyde drapant le bras g., avec un pan rejeté sur l'épaule. Attributs hermaïques parfois multipliés par les copistes sur une trentaine de répliques (Arnold 274-279) dont la tradition remonte à la fin de l'ép. hellénistique, véritables H. ou adaptations en portraits. Le succès du type correspond à la nouvelle vision post-classique d'H. dieu de la palestre et de la jeunesse. Parmi les répliques citons en particulier: b) Buste. Rome, Mus. Barracco 43. - Helbig⁴ n° 1899 (v. Steuben, H.); Arnold 184. 278 N 22 pl. 22 b; 23 b. - Excellente copie flavienne ou antonine. - c) Florina, Mus. 29. - Daux, G., BCH 84, 1960, 765-766 fig. 4; Arnold 277, 19 a. - Statue acéphale, brisée aux cuisses et au bras dr. - d)* Copenhague, Glypt. 1545. - Arnold 276, 13. - Adaptation en portrait. - e) Addendum à la liste d'Arnold: torse de Sidé. - Inan (1975) n° 22 pl. 34-35.

2. Bustes, torsos, têtes (choix restreint)

947. Statue acéphale (marbre parien?). Providence, Rhode Island School of Design 1903.008. - Ridgway, B. S., Cat. of the Class. Coll., Class. Sculpt. (1972) 45-48. 164-165 n° 16. - Type Richelieu. Brisures aux bras dr. et g., sous le genou dr. et à la jambe g.

948. a)* Buste. Copenhague, Glypt. 2570. De Rome. - Poulsen, CatNyCarlsbergGlypt 202-203 n° 272 a. - Copie du II^e s. ap. J.-C. à partir d'un original du milieu du IV^e s. av. J.-C. - Draperie sur l'épaule, façon H. Richelieu (946a). Visage incliné vers l'épaule g. (cf. Pan de Leyde: Arnold pl. 1 b). Bandeau et ailerons dans les cheveux. On rapprochera deux têtes qui évoquent également la manière du Maître de Pan: b)* Copenhague, Glypt. 2422. De Rome. - Poulsen, CatNyCarlsbergGlypt 205 n° 274 a. - Copie du II^e s. ap. J.-C. - Bandeau et ailerons de tête. - c)* Boston, MFA 1974.522. - Comstock/Vermeule, SculptBoston 102 n° 157. - Copie du II^e s. ap. J.-C. - Pétase sans ailes.

949. Deux marbres en provenance de Gortyne paraissent encore se situer dans la lignée de l'H. Richelieu, mais avec un mouvement de chlamyde en plis arrondis d'une épaule à l'autre: a) Héraklion, Mus. Arch. 411. - II^e s. ap. J.-C.? - Statue acéphale. Bourse dans la main g.; traces du caducée sur l'épaule g. brisée. - b) Héraklion, Mus. Arch. 207. - II^e s. ap. J.-C.? - Buste acéphale, brisé à la taille et aux épaules.

I. Praxitèle et dérivations praxitéliennes

950.* H. du type Andros-Farnèse - Antinoüs du Belvédère. a)* Statue en marbre de Paros. Andros, Mus. 245, anc. Athènes, Mus. Nat. 218. D'Andros (Palaiopolis). - Karouzou 2. - Œuvre d'un sculpteur cycladique de la 2^e moitié du I^{er} s. av. J.-C. d'après un original du milieu du IV^e s., de tradition praxitélienne. - b)* Réplique Farnèse. Londres, BM. 1599. - Lipold, GrPl 275 pl. 96, 4; Rizzo, o. c. 392a, 75. 117 pl. 112. - c)* Antinoüs du Belvédère. Vatican, Mus. 907. D'un jardin proche du château Saint-Ange. - Picard, Manuel IV 1, 305 fig. 123; Helbig⁴ 246 (v. Steuben, H.). - La réplique Farnèse (b), la plus complète, conserve le geste de la main dr. appuyée à la hanche. Caducée contre la face interne du bras g. abaissé le long du corps et enveloppé d'une draperie dont un pan retombe de l'épaule. La tête s'incline vers l'épaule dr. Le fort déhanchement rappelle l'H. d'Olympie (394), mais sans les complications du rythme praxitélien, en sorte que l'on peut hésiter entre une datation vers 400 (v. Steuben) ou vers 350 (Karouzou). Malgré l'élégance de la pose, l'H. d'Andros (a) a le sérieux mélancolique d'une statue funéraire, comme l'a montré S. Karouzou: à Palaiopolis, il ornait avec une statue féminine de type «Grande Herculanais» un monument funéraire. Couple héroïsé?

Au type 950 se laissent rattacher quelques autres sculptures de qualité, d'ép. impériale: d) Vienne, Kunsthist. Mus. I 869. D'Ephèse. - Funde aus Ephesos, o. c. 933, 106 n° 135. - Buste acéphale, brisé aux cuisses et à l'épaule dr. - e) Tête. Sidé, Mus. - Inan (1975) n° 35 pl. 44. - f) Harvard Univ., Dumbarton Oaks Coll. 38.84. - Richter, G. M. A., Gr. Rom. Ant. in the Dumbarton Oaks Coll. (1956) n° 6 pl. 4 c. - Buste acéphale brisé aux cuisses et aux biceps. Pondération inverse de celle du type d'Andros. - g) Tête. Boston, MFA 1974.523. - Comstock/Vermeule, SculptBoston 102 n° 156. - h) Tête. Rome, Mus. Naz. Rom. 125588. Du Tibre. - Helbig⁴ n° 2257 (v. Steuben, H.); Papadopoulos, J., dans MusNazRom I 1, 203-204 n° 126.

951.* Trois sculptures d'inspiration praxitélienne pourraient être des H., mais ne conservent pas d'attributs hermaïques: a)* Statue acéphale. Cleveland, Mus. of Art 1925.1341. - Bieber, M., Art in America, July 1943, fig. 11. - Début du IV^e s. av. J.-C. - Main dr. appuyée à la hanche; appui sur la jambe dr.; forte cambrure. - b) Torse de statuette acéphale. Prague, Univ. Charles 60.293. - Antické umění v československých sbírkách (1979) n° 134 pl. 20. - 2^e moitié du II^e s. av. J.-C. - Brisures aux épaules, à la hanche dr. et à la cuisse g. Pan de draperie rejeté sur l'épaule g. Beau modelé. - c) Statue acéphale. Almyros, Mus. Arch. 1. 38². De Méliboia. - Biesantz, o. c. 25, 31 n° 38 pl. 43. - 2^e moitié du IV^e-début du III^e s. av. J.-C. - Draperie retombant de l'épaule g. jusqu'à la hauteur du genou.

952. Florence, Uff. 147. - Mansuelli, ScultUff I 176-177 pl. 159a-b. - Copie antonine éclectique à partir d'un modèle du IV^e s. av. J.-C. - Ailerons aux pieds, pétase; le caducée dans la main g. est une restauration. Le geste du bras dr. restauré (bourse dans la main) doit être corrigé sur le modèle de celui de l'Apollon Lycien. Très admirée par Furtwängler, MW 572-573, la statue aux jambes trop longues se présente dans un repos trop instable pour être praxitélienne. Visage à traits scopasiques.

J. Œuvres éclectiques (influences de Scopas et de Lysippe)

Ronde bosse en marbre

953.* Trois têtes d'H. à ailerons ou pétase présentent des traits scopasiques dans le rendu du front, des yeux, de la bouche: a) Würzburg, Albrecht Neuhaus. D'Hermopolis. - BurlMag 112, 1972, pl. 75. - Fin de l'ép. hellénistique. - b)* Londres, BM 1462. De Cyrene, Temple A d'Aphrodite. - Smith, BM Sculpture II 1462. - 120-130 ap. J.-C. Copie d'un original du IV^e s. - H., Persée ou Hypnos? - c)* Budapest, Mus. Beaux-Arts 4729. - Hekler, A., Mus. der bild. Künste in Budapest. Slg. antiker Skulpturen (1929) n° 35. - Copie romaine d'un modèle du IV^e s. av. J.-C. - Tête coiffée du pétase.

954.* Statue assise d'H.(?) à la bourse. Copenhague, Glypt. 1590; anc. Rome, Pal. Sciarra. - Poulsen, CatNyCarlsbergGlypt 205 n° 275; Arias, P. E., Skopas (1952) 136 n° 2. - Copie romaine d'un original grec du IV^e s. av. J.-C. - Personnage juvénile assis sur la draperie de son manteau, la jambe g. ramenée vers le corps, la main sur le genou. L'autre main, appuyée sur un tronc d'arbre, semble avoir tenu une bourse. Avec moins de spatialité, la pose rappelle celle de l'Arès Ludovisi (→ Ares/Mars 23 = Ares 24*).

955.* H. du Palatin. Rome, Antiquarium du Palatin. - Helbig⁴ n° 2086 (v. Steuben, H.); Mariani, L., Ausonia 2, 1907, 224 pl. 14, 5. - Œuvre éclectique de la fin de l'ép. hellénistique ou du début de l'ép. impériale combinant avec la tradition polycléenne des traits de sculpteurs du second classicisme. - Main g. à la hanche. Epaule et flanc g. drapés par la chlamyde, pondération inverse de celle de l'H. Lansdowne (943). Furtwängler songeait à une œuvre de la jeunesse de Scopas (MW 520-523).

Petite plastique en bronze

956. Statuette. Tunis, Bardo. Du navire naufragé de Mahdia. - Fuchs, o. c. 71, 20 n° 11 pl. 20. - 2^e moitié du II^e s. av. J.-C. Atelier de Boéthos de Calcédoine? Œuvre classicisante. - H. bâti en athlète lysippéen aux hanches étroites et au torse massif, en appui sur la jambe dr. Ailerons aux pieds, chlamyde drapée sur l'épaule g. avec un pan d'étoffe retombant par-dessus la main.

957.* Boston, MFA 03.988. De Gaule (Auvergne?). - Ep. gréco-romaine. - Comstock/Vermeule, BronzesBoston n° 109. - H. nu, la tête à ailerons (brisés) ceinte d'un bandeau, la main g. le long du corps arrondie autour d'un caducée (perdu), avançant la main dr. ouverte. La silhouette évoque l'Agias de Lysippe.

K. Lysippe et la tradition lysippéenne

1. Hermès attachant sa sandale

Ronde bosse en marbre

958.* Quatre principales répliques: a)* Copenhague, Glypt. 2798. De Tivoli, Villa Hadriana. - Poulsen, CatNyCarlsbergGlypt 264 n° 273 a; Lippold, GrPl 280 pl. 100, 2; Johnson, F. P., Lysippos (1927) 170-177 pl. 30-31; Ridgway, B. S., «The Date of the So-called Lysippean Jason», AJA 68, 1964, 113-128. - b)* Paris, Louvre MA 83. De Rome. - Clarac, F., Descript. des Antiques du Mus. Royal (1820) 266 n° 710; Picard, Manuel IV 2, 604. 607; Charbonneaux, Sculpt-Louvre 47-48 fig. 83. - Bras modernes, tête antique n'appartenant pas à la statue; marbre pentélique pour le corps, parien pour la tête. - c)* «Sandalenbinder». Munich, Glypt. Gl 287. Du théâtre de la Villa Hadriana à Tivoli. - Vierneisel-Schlörb, KatSkulptMünchen 457-468 fig. 227-232. - Œuvre aujourd'hui débarrassée des fausses restaurations d'après la réplique du Louvre. Statue acéphale, brisée à la cuisse dr. et sous les épaules; main et pied dr. conservés (sans raccord). - d) Pergé, Mus. - Inan (1979) 397-413; cf. le torse de Sidé: Inan (1975) n° 32 pl. 42. - Liste des autres répliques et adaptations: Ridgway 117-120; Vierneisel-Schlörb 465-466. Pour les monnaies: Vierneisel-Schlörb 466-467 n. 15. - Personnage athlétique de taille naturelle vers la g., le pied dr. surélevé sur un rocher, la tête tournée vers l'épaule g. et un peu levée. La main dr. est portée sur le lacet de la sandale (répliques de Munich et du Mus. Naz. Rom.); le bras g., plié au coude, repose sur le genou dr. où il retient la draperie d'une chlamyde. La tête rappelle celle de l'Apoxyomenos de Lysippe. En l'absence d'attributs, l'identité de la figure a été sujette à débat (Jason monocépide devant Pélias; Cincinnatus à cause de la charrue ajoutée sur la réplique du Louvre; athlète à la palestra, interrompu dans son geste de Sandalenbinder (Ridgway). L'identification comme H. est fondée sur la présence du caducée ou d'ailerons de pieds chez des personnages analogues de types monétaires et de gemmes (959-960). Traditionnellement on rapproche aussi l'ekphrasis de Christodoros décrivant une statue de bronze au Zeuxippe de Constantinople: un H. à la baguette d'or, dont l'attitude paraît bien être celle de la statue examinée, du messager prompt à se mettre en route, attentif aux ordres qui lui viennent de Zeus (Anth. Pal. 2, 297-302. Cf., Caprino, C., BollArte 59, 1974, 106-114). Quant à l'attribution et à la datation de l'œuvre, elles partagent également les avis des spécialistes: Lysippe (Lippold), Euthykratès (Johnson; Dörig, J., MusHelv 16, 1959, 55), sculpteur de la 2^e moitié du II^e s. av. J.-C., sensible à l'héritage lysippéen (Ridgway). A cause du schéma spatial, on a rapproché le Gladiateur Borghèse signé par Agasias d'Ephèse (Lippold, GrPl 382 pl. 134, 3). Pour ce débat, cf. Vierneisel-Schlörb qui propose un original en bronze de Teisicratès: KatSkulptMünchen II 462. Pour une transposition du motif en relief, → 751.

Monnaies

959.* AR statères, Sybrita (Crète), 320-280/70 av. J.-C. - Franke/Hirmer, GrMünze 115 n° 554 pl. 168. - Av. H., le pied dr. surélevé sur un rocher, la chlamyde dans le dos, se présente de trois quarts profil à g. Il tire des deux mains, attentif à son geste, les lacets de sa sandale. Caducée devant lui, verticalement dans le champ. Rv. Dionysos chevauchant une panthère.

Glyptique

960.* a) Anneau d'or. Local. inconnue. Anc. coll. Tyszkiewicz, Guilhou et Harari. De Tarente. - Lippold, Gemmen pl. 10, 6; Boardman, J., The Ralph Harari Coll. (1977) n° 10. - H. de profil vers la dr. (chlamyde dans le dos) lace la sandale ailée de son pied g. surélevé sur un rocher. A la différence du type statuaire, le dieu est absorbé par son geste. Le grand bronze de l'original comportait-il le même attribut magique? Du même H. de Sidé dont on conserve le torse (958d) provient peut-être un fr. de sandale ailée: Vierneisel-Schlörb, KatSkulptMünchen II 458. 465-466 n. 4. - b)* Pâte de verre brun sombre. Munich, Münzslg. T 128. - AGDI 2, 106 n° 1203 pl. 128. - 1^{er} s. ap. J.-C.? - H. nu, coiffé du pétase, de profil à dr., le pied surélevé sur un rocher, lace sa sandale g. - Cf. ibid. n° 1204-1206. Sur la série des gemmes: Ridgway, o. c. 958a, 113-115 (avec les réserves de Vierneisel-Schlörb 459).

2. Hermès au repos

Statue en bronze

961.* H. d'Herculanum. Naples, Mus. Naz. De la

Villa des Pisons à Herculaneum. - BrBr 94; Johnson, o. c. 958a, 177 pl. 35; Fuchs, Skulptur 272-273 fig. 301; Panderimalis, D., AM 86, 1971, 200 n° 19. - Réplique romaine d'après un original de Lysippe. - H. est assis de trois quarts face (la meilleure vue pour le spectateur), vers la dr., sur un rocher (restauré), la jambe g. ramenée, la dr. allongée. Un peu penché vers l'avant et la main dr. appuyée, il donne le sentiment d'un repos momentané et inquiet, qui sera interrompu dans un instant. La main g., posée sur le genou, tenait le caducée. Les sandales ailées portent aux semelles de gros boutons en forme de rosettes. Loinement apparenté à l'H. de la frise des Panathénées (779), le type est à rapprocher d'autres statues assises de Lysippe, l'Héraclès de Tarente et l'Héraclès Epitapézios. Réédition classicisante de l'H. au repos de Lysippe par les bronziers de Campanie (Beschi 57).

Petite plastique en bronze

On trouvera ici les principaux exemplaires de l'H. au repos, classés selon la typologie de Beschi.

962.* Type de Vienne. a)* Vienne, Kunsthist. Mus. VI 420. - Beschi 43-44 fig. 15. - Original hellénistique (III^e s?) constituant probablement la réplique la plus proche de la création de Lysippe (diffusion par une quinzaine de statuettes). - Assis sur un siège rocheux (perdu), moins penché en avant que l'H. d'Herculanum et beaucoup plus athlétique, la jambe dr. ramenée (au lieu de la g.), l'H. de Vienne tenait vraisemblablement le caducée dans la main dr. posée sur le genou. - b) Vienne, Kunsthist. Mus. VI 332. - Eichler, o. c. 930, 46; Beschi 44; Götter, Heroen, Menschen, Sonderausstellung der Antikenslg. (Cat. Vienne 1974) 14 n° 13 pl. 3. - II^e s. ap. J.-C. - Pétase ailé et bourse. - c) Hartford (Connecticut), Wadsworth Atheneum 1917.880. - Coll. Morgan, Cat. of Bronzes n° 40. - II^e s. ap. J.-C. - Ailes de tête, bourse dans la main dr., caducée (perdu) dans la main g. près du genou. Siège rocheux. - d)* New York, MMA 1920.202. - II^e s. ap. J.-C. - Pétase ailé(?), bourse dans la main dr. Siège rocheux.

963. Type de Baltimore. Baltimore, Walters Art Gall. 54.758. - Beschi 48-49 fig. 17. - 1^{er}-II^e s. ap. J.-C. - Caractérisé par la chlamyde drapant en éventail l'épaule et le bras g. avec une retombée sur l'avant-bras. Caducée dans la main dr. (sur la cuisse) et bourse dans la main g.?

964.* Type du Louvre. Paris, Louvre Br 1055. D'Entrains (Nièvre). - De Ridder, BrLouvre I 129 n° 1055; Beschi 50 fig. 19. - D'un modelé vigoureux, la figure (ailerons de tête, bourse) se différencie par une flexion au coude du bras g., maintenu très haut et reposant peut-être sur un caducée vertical. Animaux sur le siège rocheux (→ 965). L'attitude évoque celle du Mercure de la coupe à médaillon de Berthouville: Babelon, J., Le trésor d'argenterie de Berthouville (1916) 119 pl. 21.

965.* Type de Montorio. Vienne, Kunsthist. Mus. VI 423. - Beschi 31-43 fig. 12; Götter, o. c. 962b, 60 pl. 13. - Fin du II^e s. ap. J.-C. - Coiffé d'un pétase ailé, la bourse dans la main g., l'épaule g. et la poitrine drapées, H. forme avec les personnages du socle rocheux un ensemble qui relève moins de la cohérence plastique que d'un montage optique: l'orientation des principaux personnages d'animation (Génies ailés, bouc, chèvre, tortue, coq) est déterminante.

966.* Variantes provinciales du type de l'H. au repos: a) H. de Tiriolo. Reggio Calabria, Mus. Naz. - Catanuto, N., Il Mus. Naz. di Reggio di Calabria (1939) 51 pl. 24 fig. 67. - I^{er}-II^e s. ap. J.-C. - Assis les deux jambes ramenées, H. se caractérise par un cumul d'attributs: pétase et sandales ailées, chlamyde et bourse. Phiale dans la main dr. tendue. - b) Cambridge (Mass.), Sackler Mus. (anc. Fogg) 1932.56.8. - Artisanat gréco-romain. - H. à demi couché de trois quarts face (pétase ailé, caducée dans la main g.?) Autre objet dans la main dr. Pour ces séries de statuettes gréco-romaines et romaines et les variantes du schéma assis, Reinach, RépStat II 168-170.

Monnaies

967. a) AR drachmes, Phénéos (Arcadie), vers 370-300 av. J.-C. - BMC Peloponnesus 194 n° 14 pl. 36, 8. - Av. Tête de Nymphé vers la g. Rv. H. assis vers la g. sur des rochers où il appuie sa main; caducée dans la main dr. avancée. Paysage du Mont Cyllène? - b) AR statères, Phaistos (Crète), vers 350 av. J.-C. - Svoronos, Crète 254, 2 pl. 22; Babelon, Traité 2 pl. 255, 5; Le Rider, G., Monnaies crétoises (1966) pl. 20, 25. - Av. Europe assise sur un rocher face au taureau. Rv. H. assis sur un rocher vers la g., le caducée levé dans la main dr. Cf. les monnaies de Corinthe avec l'image d'H. assis en compagnie du bélier, → 304 a-d.

Glyptique

968.* Variantes du schéma plastique lysippéen. a) Pâte de verre violette. Göttingen, Univ. G 291. - AGD III n° 173 pl. 43. - I^{er} s. ap. J.-C. - H. en athlète nu, assis de trois quarts face vers la dr. sur un siège rocheux, la main dr. appuyée. Caducée dans la main g. qui repose sur le genou plié; bourse (ou coq?) à ses pieds. - b) Chaton de bague en verre translucide. New York, MMA 17.194.43. - Richter, MetMus-Gems n° 288 pl. 41. - I^{er} s. ap. J.-C. - H. assis de trois quarts profil vers la g. Nu, sandales ailées(?), caducée dans la main dr. obliquement tourné vers le sol. - c) Bague en bronze. Munich, Münzslg. A 2560. - Boardman, GGFR 427 n° 1026.

Pour d'autres variantes du schéma, cf. AGD III 171-172. 174-176; pour les représentations d'H. sur les gemmes en général: Pannuti, CatGlittNapoli I 50-51.

L. Divers types hellénistiques et gréco-romains

1. Types alexandrins

Petite plastique en bronze

969. «H. Fouquet». Anc. coll. Fouquet. De Tell Moqdam. - Perdrizet, P., Bronzes grecs d'Égypte de la coll. Fouquet (1911) 30-31 n° AO pl. 17. - III^e s. av. J.-C. - H. se présente en athlète lysippéen (monté sur un support en fleur de lotus?), la tête tournée vers l'épaule dr. La main g. tient écarté du corps un grand pan de la chlamyde qui drape l'épaule et le bras et dans lequel était peut-être niché l'enfant Dionysos. Ailerons aux pieds et à la tête. Au-dessus du front, «plume égyptienne» ou «pétale de lotus». Sur l'usage et le sens de cet apex chez H., cf. Perdrizet 27-30; Chamoux, F., Et. d'Arch. Class. 2 (1959) 34-38. L'H. Fouquet est un dieu ploutodotès caractérisé par l'attribut de la corne d'abondance dans la main dr.; → 930, et peut-être 971. 997.

970.* Groupe de lutteurs. Istanbul, Mus. Arch. 190. D'Antioche. Bronze monté sur un support en pied de candélabre dont l'appartenance n'est pas certaine. - Devambez, P., Grands bronzes du Mus. de Stamboul (1937) 87-96 pl. 26-28; Charbonneaux, J., Mon-Piot 47, 1953, 114-118 fig. 18-19; Kyrieleis, H., APL 12 (1973) 133-147 pl. 45-48 et fig. 1-30. - 2^e moitié du III^e s. av. J.-C. - H., caractérisé par les ailerons de tête et par la «plume égyptienne», terrasse un adversaire barbare chevelu. Gestes techniques de la palestre par clefs et blocages à la nuque, à l'épaule dr., à la cuisse et au pied g. du vaincu. L'œuvre originale, vers 240 av. J.-C., montrait probablement Ptolémée III vainqueur sous les traits d'H., dieu des athlètes. Huit répliques entre le III^e s. et l'ép. impériale (cf. Kyrieleis).

971.* Hermès-Ptolémée III Evergète. Bonn, Akad. Kunstmus. C 301. - Kyrieleis, H., Antiken aus dem Akad. Kunstmus. Bonn (1969) 31-32 n° 27 pl. 18; Stemmer, K., Alexandrinische Kunst im Akad. Kunstmus. Bonn (1979) 1. - III^e s. av. J.-C. - La main dr. le long du corps tient le caducée ou la cornucopia. Le bras g. manque. Ailerons de tête (brisé à dr.) Type athlétique rappelant l'H. du groupe des lutteurs d'Antioche (970). Traits individualisés, identifiables d'après les effigies monétaires comme étant ceux de Ptolémée Evergète: Svoronos, Ptol IV 150.

972.* Bloomington, Indiana Univ. Art Mus. 74.20. D'Asie Mineure. - II^e-I^{er} s. av. J.-C. - Type athlétique, en appui sur la jambe dr., l'épaule dr. recouverte d'une draperie formant un bourrelet dans la diagonale de la poitrine. Bourse dans la main dr. avancée. Au-dessus du front, «plume égyptienne».

973.* Hermès-Apollon. Boston, MFA 08.535. - Comstock/Vermeule, Bronzes Boston 105 n° 111. - I^{er} s. ap. J.-C.? - Statuette brisée aux cuisses, en mouvement. Les mains, loin du corps, tiennent à g. le caducée, à dr. un autre objet. Tête ailée avec «plume égyptienne» au-dessus du front; couronne de laurier(?) et bandelettes retombant sur les épaules. Draperie en éventail de l'épaule dr. à l'épaule et au bras g.

2. Types gréco-romains de tradition classique

Petite plastique en bronze

974.* Choix de quatre statuettes de rythme lointainement polyclétéen, variant par les attributs, les gestes, la draperie: a) Bad Dt. Altenburg, Mus. Carnuntinum 11944. De Carnuntum(?) - Fleischer, R., Die römischen Bronzen aus Österreich (1967) 58 n° 53 pl. 32. - II^e s. ap. J.-C. - Caducée et bourse dans les mains éloignées du corps, ailes de tête, draperie façon H. d'Andros (950). - b) Columbia (Missouri), Univ. 1959.20. - II^e s. ap. J.-C. - Sandales ailées, pétase (ailerons ou «plume égyptienne»), bourse dans la main g. et caducée dans la dr.? Epaule et bras dr. drapés par des plis en cascade. - c) Seattle, Art Mus. 68 Cs 11.57. - Del Chiaro, M. A., Roman Art in West Coast Collections (1973) 34. 78 n° 41. - I^{er} s. ap. J.-C. - Ailerons de tête, bourse dans la main dr. avancée, caducée dans la main g. Pans de draperie sur l'épaule et sur l'avant-bras g. - d) Très petite statuette en or. Athènes, Mus. Nat. 282. - Amandry, P., Coll. Hélène Stathatos III (1963) 235-236 n° 171 fig. 140 pl. 36. - Fin I^{er} s. av.-début I^{er} s. ap. J.-C. - Bourse dans la main dr. près du corps, caducée verticalement contre l'épaule dr. recouverte d'une draperie en éventail à travers la poitrine.

975.* Type d'H. nu présentant la bourse. Boston, MFA 1898.676. De Rome, marché de l'art. - Comstock/Vermeule, Bronzes Boston 106 n° 112. - II^e s. ap. J.-C. - La facture sèche et anguleuse conserve néanmoins le rythme classique. Ailes de tête, main g. écartée du corps, arrondie autour du caducée (perdu), main dr. avancée présentant une volumineuse bourse.

3. Types de l'iconographie populaire

Ces statuettes généralement sans style se caractérisent par l'importance des attributs. Choix restreint.

Petite plastique en bronze

976. a) Athènes, Mus. Nat., coll. Carapanos 569. - Ep. hellénistique ou impériale. - Corps sans modelé. Jambe dr. brisée, jambe g. tordue. Pétase en forme de casque ailé, énorme caducée sur le bras g. - b) Athènes, Mus. Nat., coll. Carapanos 562. - Ep. hellénistique ou impériale. - Brisée aux cuisses et sous l'épaule dr. Corps sans modelé dont la poitrine est traversée par une draperie. Pétase en forme de casque ailé (avec «plume égyptienne» au milieu?), énorme caducée sur le côté g.

977. Athènes, Mus. Nat., coll. Carapanos 563. - Ep. hellénistique ou impériale. - Jambes brisées au-dessus du genou dr. et à la cheville g., pétase ailé, bourse(?) dans la main dr. collée au corps. Palme sur le bras g., drapé un peu à la façon de la manica d'un gladiateur.

Terres cuites

Pour la commodité du classement on distinguera pour les terres cuites, comme supra pour les bronzes, entre les statuettes plus ou moins apparentées à des types de la tradition classique et celles que produisait l'imagerie populaire, sans références à des «modèles». Choix restreint.

978. a)* Fr. Paris, Louvre E/D 2302. De Tarse. - Besques III pl. 355b. - II^e s. av. J.-C. - Athlète «lysippéen» caractérisé comme H. par le port du caducée, verticalement sur le côté g. - b) Paris, Louvre E/D 2304. De Tarse. - Ibid. pl. 355 c. - II^e s. av. J.-C. - Même caducée volumineux, porté verticalement sur un bras drapé.

979.* Statuette. Paris, Louvre D 318. De Crimée. - Mollard-Besques II pl. 68. - Ep. hellénistique ou impériale. - Corps épais, sans modelé, bras dr. près du corps (brisé au biceps), bras g. (coulée de draperie?) avec caducée vertical, tête coiffée d'un strophion en boudin dans lequel sont piqués deux ailerons.

980. Deux têtes en terre cuite, à visages inertes, coiffées de pétases ailés. a) Paros, Mus. 836. D'une nécropole de Paros. - Ep. hellénistique ou impériale. - b) Athènes, Mus. Bénaki 22583. D'Égypte. - Michaud, J.-P., BCH 98, 1974, 587. - Atelier rhodien du I^{er} s. av. J.-C.? - Ornaments de front et ailerons de pétase réalisés par pastillage.

4. Images enfantines

L'H. juvénile est quelquefois représenté avec des traits enfantins qui en font un personnage de scènes de genre.

Petite plastique en bronze

981. Statuette décorative. Héraklion, Mus. Arch. Du sanctuaire d'H. et d'Aphrodite à Katô-Symi (Crète centrale). - Aupert, P., BCH 99, 1975, 685 fig. 208. - II^e s. av. J.-C. - Semelles de fixation sous la plante des pieds. H. se présente dans un mouvement de trois quarts face, coiffé du pétase et chaussé de bottes ailées. Il porte dans le dos un long manteau par-dessus un chitoniskos qui laisse les cuisses découvertes. Bras dr. brisé au biceps, bras g. plié au coude, la main arrondie autour du caducée (perdu). Tête ronde au visage enfantin. Pour l'importance de la draperie (rare dans les œuvres plastiques), on rapprochera une petite statue en marbre, acéphale et brisée aux cuisses, avec le caducée sur le bras g.: Athènes, Mus. Nat. 338.

Terres cuites

982.* Copenhague, Mus. Nat. 9863. - Breitenstein, N., Cat. of Terracottas, Cypriote, Greek, Etrusco-Italian and Roman (1941) 76 n° 729 pl. 88. - III^e-II^e s. av. J.-C. - Corps enfantin avec draperie de manteau dans le dos, sur l'épaule et le flanc g., sur la jambe dr. Tête avec couronne et ailerons, visage encadré d'une chevelure bouclée.

983.* Grande statuette. Paris, Louvre, Myr. 676. De Myrina. - Mollard-Besques II 87 pl. 106 f. - II^e s. av. J.-C., sign. de Diphrilos. - Personnage au corps enfantin (couronne avec lemnisques retombant sur les épaules, bourse dans la main dr.) de trois quarts face vers la dr., accoudé sur un pilier que couronne un petit hermès barbu.

M. Hermès dans la sculpture de mobilier

Petits objets en métal

984.* Poids thasien en plomb, en forme de disque. Copenhague, Mus. Nat. 8022. Acquis à Athènes. - Guides to the Nat. Mus. Greece, Italy and the Roman Empire (1968) 64, 9A. - V^e s. av. J.-C. - A: tête imberbe de face, coiffée du pétase. B: Héraclès archer agenouillé; inscr. ΘΑΞΙΩΝ.

985.* Médaille en argent. Princeton Univ. Art Mus. 1951.6. - Segal, B., AA 1965, 563-566 fig. 9. - III^e s. av. J.-C. - Sur un disque entouré d'un rebord orné de postes gravés, buste d'H. de face. La tête coiffée du pétase sous lequel s'échappe une chevelure bouclée est un peu penchée vers l'épaule g. Découpe de la chlamyde autour du cou; caducée dans le champ. Cf.

les médaillons de Boston, MFA 1959.299, 1960.1152, 1960.1153 (Segal) avec des bustes de Persée, d'Athènes, d'Héraclès.

986.* Applique de coffre en bronze, en haut relief. Délos, Mus. F 133. De Délos, flot des bronzes. - Siebert, G., BCH Suppl. I (1973) 561. 563 n° 4 fig. 1-2. 8. 10; Queyrel, Fr., BCH 108, 1984, 295-300 fig. 25a-d. - Fin II^e-début I^{er} s. av. J.-C. - L'applique décorait un coffre du type de ceux découverts à Pompéi, dont l'un porte un buste d'H. issu du modèle de celui de Délos. Buste coupé en ovale sous les épaules et à mi-poitrine, couvert des plis arrondis de la chlamyde; la tête ailée est tournée vers l'épaule dr.; le visage, dont la bouche est entrouverte, a peut-être des traits personnalisés autorisant l'identification avec un souverain lagide: Queyrel reconnaît Ptolémée II dans l'H. de Délos, Ptolémée III dans l'H. de Pompéi qui porte la «plume égyptienne» entre les ailerons de la tête (ibid. 277-281 fig. 13a-c).

Objets en terre cuite

987. Moule d'antéfixe. Baltimore, Walters Art Gall. MD 1792. De Tarente? - Williams, E. R., The Arch. Coll. of the Johns Hopkins Univ. (1984) 104-105 n° 73. - IV^e s. av. J.-C. - Tête d'H. de face, coiffée du pétase, à chevelure bouclée.

988. Antéfixe. Vienne, Kunsthinst. Mus. V 2600. D'Ephèse. - Funde aus Ephesos, o. c. 933, 121 n° 182 fig. 102. - I^{er} s. av. J.-C. (?) - Composition ornementale: dans un décor de rinceaux, sous la palmette axiale brisée, tête au front garni de lierre(?); ailes de part et d'autre du cou. Identification d'H. douteuse.

989.* Plaque rectangulaire. Copenhague, Mus. Nat. 1966. Acquisée à Smyrne. - Breitenstein, o. c. 982, 53 n° 488 pl. 60. - Ep. hellénistique. - Grandes ailes de tête dans une chevelure ondulée.

990. Pied de meuble miniature. Izmir, Mus. Arch. D'Iasos. - Gréco-romain, ép. impériale. - Relief d'H. nu de face, avec une draperie passant d'une épaule à l'autre et retombant en cravate. Corps un peu déhanché, tête inclinée, bourse dans la main dr. baissée, caducée porté verticalement sur le bras g. Pied de table miniature ou de vasque?

991.* Lampes à disques figurés d'ép. impériale: a) Athènes, Agora. - Perlzweig, J., Agora VII. Lamps of the Roman Period (1961) n° 241-242 pl. 8 (et autres exemplaires à Corinthe). - Types «corinthiens», fin II^e-début III^e s. ap. J.-C. - H. au caducée, nu, de trois quarts face à dr., se retournant vers le bélier. - b) Ibid. n° 248. - Même type (idem à Corinthe): H. en chlamyde, pétase, sandales ailées, marchant vers la g., le caducée sur le bras g. Mouton à l'arrière-plan. - c) Ibid. n° 776. - Type fin III^e-IV^e s., sign. de Preimos. - H. drapé dans sa chlamyde, le caducée sur le bras g., la bourse dans la main dr., devant un autel incandescent. - d) Ibid. n° 777. - Même type, sign. d'Elpidéporos. Dans le cadre d'un sancutaire (piliers, pinax) H., en athlète polyclétéen, conduit au sacrifice un bélier qu'il tient par les cornes. - e) Ibid. n° 778. - Même type. Buste d'H. de face, la tête vers l'épaule dr.; pétase et chlamyde. Cf. l'exemplaire d'Athènes, Mus. Bénaki 8178: buste de face (pétase, caducée dans le champ).

992.* Deux vases plastiques: a)* Oenochoé à reliefs. Paris, Louvre CA 456. De Crète ou de Tunisie. - I^{er} s. ap. J.-C. (?) - Décorée de trois figures moulées: dieu à la corne d'abondance, Muse, H. représenté de face, en chlamyde, la bourse dans une main, le caducée dans l'autre. - b)* Oenochoé en forme de tête. Copenhague, Mus. Nat. 1035. De Chypre. - CVA 4, pl. 185, 1. - I^{er} s. ap. J.-C. (?) - Visage juvénile; deux ailerons implantés dans la chevelure à mèches courtes, de part et d'autre du col du vase. Sur les représentations d'H. dans les céramiques à reliefs d'ép. impériale, cf. Mandel, U., Kleinasiatische Reliefkeramik der mittleren Kaiserzeit, PergForsch 5 (1988) 165-166.

N. Hermès dans l'imagerie synchrétique

Choix restreint d'images dans lesquelles, par le jeu des contaminations ou des associations, l'H. grec change de forme ou de sens au contact des cultures voisines.

Reliefs en marbre

993. Trapézophore. Mégare, Mus. - I^{er}-II^e s. ap. J.-C. - Sur les faces de part et d'autre d'une protomé de Griffon ailé, au milieu d'une composition de rinceaux de vignes, A: Dionysos (panthère, canthare). B: H. avec pétase et caducée.

994. Autel funéraire. Thessalonique, Mus. Arch. 2262. - Courbin, P., BCH 78, 1954, 138. - II^e s. ap. J.-C. - Hermès-Héraclès avec combinaison de la léonté, de la massue dans la main dr., du caducée dans la main g., des bottes ailées. Personnage nu athlétique de face. Inscr. K. ΦΟΥΠΙΟΥ ΕΡΜΕΙΟΥ.

995. Autel funéraire. Véria, Mus. 46. De Véria. - Rusch, A., Jdl 84, 1969, 143-144 fig. 7. - II^e s. ap. J.-C. - Epitaphe de Fausta. Association à une protomé féminine d'une effigie d'H. (chlamyde amplement drapée, pétase et sandales ailées, bourse dans la main dr., caducée sur le bras g.), représenté en statue dressée sur un socle orné d'un cratère et d'un oiseau. Sur la 3^e face du monument est figuré le Cavalier thrace (→ Héros equitans): cf. l'association du pilier hermaïque et du Cavalier thrace sur des reliefs funéraires, p. ex. Larissa, Mus. 890 (IG IX 2, 890).

Autres reliefs

996. Stèle gréco-phénicienne, tuf stuqué et peint. Palerme, Mus. Reg. 1070. De Lilybée. - Parrot, A./Chéhab, M. A./Moscati, S., Les Phéniciens (1975) 206 fig. 226. - I^{er} s. ap. J.-C. - Banquet funéraire. Sur les piliers d'encadrement, association du signe de Tanit et du caducée.

997. Disque en stéatite. Athènes, Mus. Nat. 331. D'Asie Mineure(?). - Amandry, o. c. 974d, 276 n° 198 pl. 40 fig. 176. - II^e-III^e s. ap. J.-C. - Sculpté sur les deux faces. A: dans l'axe, statue d'H. dressée sur une base dont la face antérieure porte le nom du dieu. Vêtu seulement d'un maillot aux hanches, H. tient dans la main dr. tendue une Niké et sur le bras g. le caducée planté sur un support en forme de massue (Amandry), à moins que le deuxième insigne ne soit une corne d'abondance. Apex au milieu de la tête et ailerons latéraux. B: calice végétal de lotus et de palmettes disposés autour d'une rosette.

O. Statues d'Hermès dans la peinture de vases

998. (= Hades/Aita, Calu 16*) Skyphos falisque f.r. Heidelberg, Univ. E 49. - CVA 2, pl. 66, 2; Schauenburg, K., Jdl 68, 1953, 38-39 fig. 1-2. - 370-360 av. J.-C. - Devant Pluton assis (corne d'abondance), Satyre au tympanon qui fait le lien avec le Satyre et la Ménade dansants de la face B. Derrière Pluton, H. caractérisé comme statue par la base sur laquelle il se tient de profil à g.; pétase, chlamyde dans le dos, sandales ailées, le caducée verticalement dans la main g., la main dr. levée dans le geste de l'orateur. Rythme vaguement polyclétéen de la figure. → 891.

Conclusion du catalogue

999. Lécythe f.r. Anc. coll. H. Seyrig. - ARV 452. 677, 7: P. du Cartellino; Beazley, J. D., «Hymn to Hermes», AJA 52, 1948, 336-340 pl. 34; Immerwahr, H. R., dans Classical, Medieval and Renaissance Studies in Honor of B. L. Ullmann I (1964) 21 n° 5; Charnay, J., dans Dörig, o. c. 420c, n° 214. - Vers 470 av. J.-C. - Ephèse nu drapé assis de profil vers la dr. sur un klismos. Il déroule un papyrus portant en gros caractères les deux premiers mots du second Hymne homérique à H. (Hom. h. 18): Έρμην[ν] δαίδω.

COMMENTAIRE

Le portrait d'H. esquissé à partir des sources littéraires les plus anciennes ne perd pas en cohérence ce qu'il gagne en complexité dans l'imagerie millénaire qui est la sienne entre le haut archaïsme et l'Antiquité tardive. L'ubiquité iconographique de ce dieu, plus manifeste dans les arts d'Athènes, tant par une prédilection des Athéniens que pour des raisons documentaires, s'explique par la multiplicité de ses fonctions et qualités plaisamment caricaturées par Lucien (supra Sources litt.). Divinité de la richesse et de la chance, compagnon des morts et guide des voyageurs, patron des athlètes, amateur de musique et de danse, l'image du plus populaire des Olympiens s'est imposée partout, dans les campagnes et dans les villes, sous l'aspect du génie protecteur de l'hermès. Tôt définie et stable pour l'essentiel, sa figure évolue en accompagnant les grands mouvements économiques et culturels de la société grecque: le dieu κρηφόρος archaïque devient dans l'art gréco-romain le dieu κερδοφόρος à la bourse en même temps qu'à la richesse pastorale s'ajoutent ou se substituent les profits du négoce et les échanges monétaires (Mercurius, merx). Et lorsque le sport prend dans la cité grecque toute son ampleur, les sculpteurs font du nouvel H., jeune athlète succédant au kouros homérique, une figure de proue de ce grand phénomène de civilisation.

I. Ubiquité iconographique et associations préférentielles

La présence souvent passive d'H. dans les récits de l'imagerie donne quelquefois l'impression de la banalisation décorative. Comme d'autres figures, celle d'H. peut devenir une figure de composition, entraînée par les mécanismes de l'iconographie. Mais, si omniprésent soit-il, ce dieu ne se rencontre pas indifféremment en toutes compagnies. On observe des associations préférentielles dont les unes relèvent de la contrainte des mythes ou du partage des cultes, les autres d'affinités plus significatives.

Dans les sanctuaires de Katô-Symi (308-309; Introduction p. 285; infra p. 380), de Locres (757-758; infra p. 379), d'Olbia (Vinogradov, J., Xenia 1, 1981, 21), à tous les horizons du monde grec, H. est associé à Aphrodite pour d'évidentes similitudes de fonction. Mais il est remarquable que le lien primitivement tissé entre deux divinités de la nature féconde perdure aux époques où leurs personnalités se sont diversifiées à l'extrême (753-763; Zanker [1965] 84-88). Certaines associations sont probablement l'héritage d'un lointain passé, comme celles de leurs xoana dans des temples d'Argos (8b) et de Mégapolis (8c), mais la peinture de vases classique continue de réunir leurs piliers hermaïques (112). Hésiode (erg. 800) nous apprend que le 4^e jour du mois, favorable aux mariages, est consacré à H. et à Aphrodite, en sorte que sur la frise est du Parthénon, au bord de l'assemblée divine, leur voisinage n'a rien de fortuit. Leur complicité s'affirme ouvertement à la fin du V^e s., dans les Jugements de Pâris où le conducteur des déesses se fait le confident du prince troyen, le compère d'Eros favorable au triomphe d'Aphrodite (475). Une osmose se produit entre le fils de la déesse de l'amour et le messager de Zeus: le premier revêt les attitudes de l'orateur, le second la séduction d'un amant. A l'inverse H. paraît attirer Aphrodite sur le terrain de l'économie, qui lui appartient en propre, lorsqu'il partage avec elle le patronage des agoranomes et astynomes de Délos (Bruneau, Cultes 344-345).

L'imagerie traduit pareillement la très grande familiarité qui existe entre H. et Dionysos, l'un et l'autre dieux «extérieurs», amis de la vie et de la joie de vivre. Sur la frise est du Parthénon, ils se reposent dos à dos. Sur un stamnos du P. de Berlin ils échangent leurs montures en guise de klinai de banqueteurs (257) et rien ne montre mieux la nature dionysiaque d'H. que l'amphore éponyme du même peintre (656 bis) le représentant avec le canthare et le caducée dans la même main, aux côtés d'une biche et du Silène Oreimachos. Déjà dans l'hymne homérique (h. Merc. 436) H. est appelé par son frère Apollon δαίτῳς ἑταίρῳ; par la suite, il est le convive favori des festins de Dionysos (550), le compagnon des Satyres (656 ter), associé au thiasos tant sous la forme anthropomorphe que sous celle du pilier hermaïque (650-660 bis; 129-138).

Si l'on examine le cas des héros, on constate la curieuse absence d'H. dans le cycle d'Ulysse, avec lequel il a tant d'affinités (cf. Sources litt.). Hormis l'une ou l'autre banale scène d'attelage (427. 430), seule une table iliaque les associe tardivement (585 bis). Leur réunion dans l'imagerie aurait-elle eu quelque chose de pléonastique? On est frappé de même par l'inégale fréquence des associations entre H. et Héraclès d'une part (497-568), H. et Thésée d'autre part (493-496). Le succès iconographique d'Héraclès est plus ancien et tient à des raisons que l'on a bien élucidées, mais même dans la peinture à f.r. Thésée bénéficie rarement de l'assistance d'H. pour des travaux qui ne sont pas moins dangereux que ceux du fils d'Alcmène. Dans l'imaginaire des Grecs, l'alliance d'H. et d'Héraclès, c'est celle de l'intelligence et de la force, vertus que Thésée réunit en sa seule personne: le parfait athlète, le fin politique, l'orateur éprouvé n'avait que faire du secours d'H.

Ubiquité d'H. dans l'imagerie, quels que soient les sujets et les compositions des scènes. Dans l'univers cohérent de la mythologie littéraire et figurée, dont les cycles s'enchaînent et s'interpénètrent, H. est l'œil comme la voix de Zeus, maître de toutes choses, après le Destin. Personnage-clef, H. est aussi, visuellement, un personnage-signé qui par son insistante omniprésence révèle un trait profond de la légende grecque: explication imagée du monde, elle décrit les mille conflits inhérents à la nature physique et humaine, mais elle en interdit les blocages. Dieu de la communication, H. est en dernier ressort porteur de ce message et de cette sagesse.

On ne saurait ici commenter un à un les groupes d'images réunies thématiquement dans les seize chapitres du catalogue. Il suffira de revenir sur quelques problèmes majeurs et de présenter plus synthétiquement certaines séries de documents.

II. Problèmes du pilier hermaïque

Le classement chronologique et typologique des piliers sculptés (9-91) met en évidence la variété d'un type plastique dont le succès, après une éclipse au IV^e s. (Hermary 143-144), ne s'est pas démenti jusqu'à l'ép. impériale. Monument de plein air, l'hermès est en marbre quand il n'est pas miniaturisé en bronze ou en terre cuite. Pourtant l'hermès métallique de Boéthos de Calcédoine (71), qui mesure 1 m, ne devait pas être exceptionnel puisque dans la Maison des Sceaux à Délos un grand hermès en bronze se dressait au bord de la cour (empreinte du pilier sur la base en marbre: Siebert, G., BCH 100, 1976, 808 fig. 14). Du reste, à partir de l'ép. hellénistique, des bustes hermaïques en bronze étaient combinés avec des fûts en pierre (Wrede 3. 60-61) et l'on constate l'usage de phalloi rapportés en métal (81; Bruneau, Ph., REG 97, 1984, 63 n. 5).

Sur des points litigieux de l'iconographie du pilier hermaïque le débat est loin d'être clos. En ce qui concerne l'hermès d'Alcmène, j'ai opté avec D. Wilers pour le type d'Ephèse (42, mais → 58). Il ne me paraît pas établi que le Propylaïos cité par Pausanias à l'entrée de l'acropole d'Athènes (345) soit le chef-d'œuvre d'Alcmène vanté par l'inscr. de Pergame (47; cf. Chamoux, Fr., RBPhil 48, 1970, 1451-1452).

L'influence prédominante de l'hermès alcaménien ne fait toutefois aucun doute et se manifeste, en particulier à partir de la fin de l'ép. hellénistique, à travers ses principales variations archaïsantes (47-59). Dans l'intervalle la forme du monument ne s'était jamais figée, ni stylistiquement, ni iconographiquement. Beaucoup d'exemplaires du III^e et du II^e s. portent la marque des courants de la sculpture attique, alexandrine, délienne (60-73).

Des modifications plus radicales affectèrent l'effigie hermaïque. La combinaison du pilier géométrique et de la tête anthropomorphe recelait une contradiction qui s'est quelquefois libérée dans des formes intermédiaires que l'allemand désigne commodément par les termes de Körperhermen et de Mantelhermen (Lullies 1, 78-79). Dès la fin du V^e s. des monnaies à l'aigle de Crotone montrent le symbole d'un hermès drapé et muni de bras dont l'un tient le caducée et l'autre une phiale (Lullies 1, 72 n° 8 pl. 7, 3-4). De même c'est un hermès de Dionysos, tenant thyrsos et canthare, qui préside à des ébats amoureux sur un médaillon de Calène (Boston, MFA Res. 1908.33 j). Dans la sculpture en marbre, le compromis entre la forme corporelle et la forme architecturale se réalise de façon moins violente. Un manteau retombe soit sur un pilier ordinaire, soit sur un fût dont la partie haute se développe en buste, avec quelquefois des bras collés au corps, eux aussi enveloppés par la draperie. Pausanias (8, 39, 6) observe cette particularité sur l'hermès du gymnase de Phigalie, dont les monnaies locales en bronze conservent l'image (NumCommPaus 106 n° 2 pl. V 11-12). Ce sont effectivement les monuments dédiés à H. Enagônios (Pind. O. 6, 79) par les gymnasiarques et par les athlètes victorieux qui constituent les principales séries de Mantelhermen (Wrede 34-36). Le manteau est celui du pédotribe: H. n'est-il pas le pédotribe par excellence qui se vante dans l'inscr. du pilier Albani d'avoir enseigné aux hommes les arts de la parole et de la palestra (Helbig⁴ n° 3220: sermonem docui mortales atque palaestram)? Sur les piliers consacrés à l'Héraclès du stade la léonté forme une draperie analogue.

À l'époque plus ancienne l'H. des odes pindariques est bien attesté par la peinture de vases dans le cadre des gymnases et des palestres (98. 143-144), mais jamais sous la forme de Mantelherme. La mode ne s'en propage qu'à partir du IV^e et surtout du III^e s., lorsque les successeurs de Polyclète eurent imposé leur nouvelle effigie du dieu de la jeunesse sportive (943-946). Les piliers drapés, strictement géométriques ou semi-anthropomorphes, servaient alors à la représentation d'autres personnages que l'H. ou l'Héraclès des athlètes: à celle p.ex. de Pan, de Priape, d'Harpocrate, de l'Hermaphrodite (→ Hermaphroditos) (Marcadé, MusDél 207-209. 435-464 pl. 15-21). Sur l'ensemble des divinités sculptées à partir du IV^e s. sous la forme de piliers on se reportera au répertoire alphabétique et aux commentaires de Wrede 17-31. 52-55. Sur la question des hermès doubles ou multiples (différents des hermès polycéphales de notre type 140) cf. Marcadé (1952).

La question des hermès drapés est inséparable de

celle des hermès juvéniles (81-91). Il arrive que les deux catégories se confondent (84), mais on s'interroge alors sur l'identité des personnages représentés sous l'aspect du pilier phallique et/ou vêtu, couronné d'une tête au visage jeune, aux courts cheveux d'athlète quelquefois ceints d'un bandeau (82-86). La métamorphose est complète par rapport aux hermès archaïques et par rapport à celui qu'Alcmène et ses imitateurs avaient doté d'une parure de tête sophistiquée. Des «hermès-portraits»? À l'ép. hellénistique l'expression ne saurait désigner qu'une identification entre l'image du dieu et celle de l'éphèbe dont il a patronné l'éducation au gymnase. Les traits idéalisés ne comportent rien d'individuel, tout au plus certaines particularités physiologiques comme Lysippe en confère également à ses athlètes (Marcadé [1953] 525). La catégorie est bien illustrée par les vainqueurs aux lampaédromies de Rhamnonte (Pouilloux, J., La forteresse de Rhamnonte [1954] 111-112 pl. 45) ou encore par les hermès du Gymnase de Délos (82), dans lequel 41 exemplaires ont été recensés en 156/55 (inventaire de Kallistratos: ID 1417 face A col. I 147; Tréheux, J., BCH 1952, 591). D'authentiques hermès-portraits se rencontrent, en revanche, dans les consécration des cosmètes athéniens, dont la plus ancienne, celle d'Héliodore (IG II/III² 2021) remonte à l'ép. de Trajan. On citera encore les monuments qu'Hérode Atticus a élevés à la mémoire de ses trophimoi ou pour sa propre glorification (Wilhelm, A., Oefh 28, 1933, 172-182).

Dans tous ces cas le formulaire épigraphique montre que le lien n'est pas rompu entre le dieu H. et le personnage portraituré sous la forme du monument hermaïque. De même, lorsqu'en 67 Cicéron évoque les hermès γυμνασιώδεις que lui propose Atticus (sur ces textes, cf. Wrede 59-60) pour son académie de Tusculanum, il continue de se situer dans une tradition culturelle grecque. Mais il est clair que les hermès-portraits de contemporains ou de virii illustres, exposés tant dans les lieux publics que dans les galeries privées, appartiennent, après le milieu du I^{er} s. av. J.-C., à une catégorie de sculpture caractéristique de l'art romain. A Herculaneum la Villa des Pisons en est la meilleure preuve (Pandermalis, o.c. 961, 173-209). Sur l'histoire et l'évolution des hermès-portraits jusqu'à la fin de l'Antiquité, sur leur emploi et leur présentation, cf. Wrede, 58-62. 71-84.

Restent les hermès juvéniles des stèles funéraires, dans lesquels on a voulu reconnaître les portraits des morts (89-90. 617). L'hypothèse n'est guère recevable, non plus que celle du pilier-monument tombal figuré au second degré (Marcadé [1953] 519; Couilloud 278; eadem, BCH 99, 1975, 317). Des piliers hermaïques funéraires ne sont attestés qu'à l'ép. impériale et sous la forme d'hermès-portraits très différents des hermès juvéniles qui se rencontrent sur les reliefs grecs (Wrede 42-43). Les stèles thessaliennes à partir de la fin du IV^e s. (plus tard, aussi, des stèles macédoniennes) sont du reste les seuls monuments qui entrent ici en ligne de compte, avec leurs bases portant l'inscription Ἐρμῆς χθονίου, dialectalement Ἐρμάου χθονίου: ces dédicaces signifient que les tombes sont placées sous la protection du dieu psychopompe dont on représente l'image, par une habitude régionale propre à la Grèce du nord, sous la forme du pilier. Le monument funéraire, stricto sensu, est la stèle elle-même et non pas un élément de son décor. Quant à l'exégèse portraitiste, on voit mal comment elle pourrait s'appliquer à un relief comme celui de la stèle d'Hédeia à Véria (617), où le Psychopompe apparaît à côté de son propre pilier juvénile et phallique. Le grand nombre d'hermès dans l'iconographie funéraire hellénistique et romaine, sur des reliefs d'hommes, de femmes, d'enfants, s'explique par la charge affective et symbolique du jeune dieu des palestres et des gymnases, maître d'athlétisme et de rhétorique, dont la présence constitue une forme d'héroïsation pour tous ceux qui partagent la paideia. Il n'est pas rare que des strigiles ou des diptyques ou des rouleaux de papyrus, dans le champ ou dans les mains des défunts représentés à côté d'un hermès, soulignent ces références culturelles (91; Wrede 44-48). L'intention est la même que celle qui s'exprime sur des chatons de bagues à piliers hermaïques associés à des personnages lisant ou déclamant (184b; cf. etiam AGD I 391. 395-396. 955-956. 1488-1493).

L'origine du pilier hermaïque, naguère objet du principal débat (Curtius [1903, 1932]; Lullies 1 [1931], 2 [1950]; Goldman [1942]; Nilsson, *GrRel*² [1955]) offre moins matière à controverses depuis que l'on a pu à la fois mieux dater l'apparition du monument dans la sculpture et dans la peinture de vases et suivre son développement dans des séries bien documentées. Divinité de l'Âge du Bronze attestée épigraphiquement (cf. Introduction), au type iconographique fixé dès l'ép. de la peinture orientalisante (230-240), H. n'a pas pris à la fin du VI^e s. la forme d'un pilier issu d'un bloc de pierre et finalement doté d'un phallus, de tenons et d'une tête. Peu d'indices existent d'un H. aniconique (1-4) et rien n'autorise à restituer le passage de l'ἔρμα à l'ἀγάλμα τετραγώνον. L'hypothèse d'une anthropomorphisation progressive compliquée d'une restylisation a fait son temps et l'on ne tiendra plus compte des hybrides de criophores (280-281), sans art et sans âge, qui n'ont aucune valeur démonstrative. J. D. Beazley (Caskey/Beazley II [1954]) et P. Devambez (1968) furent parmi les premiers à mettre sur la voie des solutions.

Des textes concordants, de nature et d'époques différentes, présentent le pilier hermaïque comme une création attique ou, selon Hdt. 2, 51, comme un emprunt par les Athéniens aux Cabires ithyphalliques des Pélasges de Samothrace (→ Megaloi Theoi). On ne sait comment les contemporains ont reçu cette explication d'ethnographie comparée, puisque l'origine du bon génie de la cité était encore bien connue de Pausanias (4, 33, 3): l'hermès tétragone avait été diffusé depuis Athènes dans le reste de la Grèce. C'est un passage du Ps. Platon (Hipparque ou l'homme cupide 228c-229d), un texte du IV^e s., qui fournit à ce sujet les explications les plus précises. C'est bien au fils de Pisistrate, qu'acclame Epictète sur sa coupe de l'hermoglyphe (170), que revient le mérite de ces nouveaux monuments qui jalonnaient le réseau routier de l'Attique, se désignant comme des μνήματα ἱπάρχου, indiquant les distances aux voyageurs et les édifiant par des maximes. C'est pour Hipparque qu'un grand sculpteur inventa, peu avant 515, et réalisa d'emblée dans sa perfection la forme de l'hermès en marbre.

L'absence de tâtonnements ne signifie pas création ex nihilo. S'il s'agissait de concevoir l'image d'une divinité apotropaïque, guide et porte-bonheur des voyageurs, les modèles ne manquaient pas que nous connaissions par des textes comme par des documents figurés. Le Louvre possède une curieuse tête d'H. en terre cuite que l'on devait présenter sur un pieu (garni d'oripeaux?), à en juger par l'encastrement ménagé dans la nuque (Mollard-Besques I B 191, 33 pl. 24). Provenant d'Imbros, l'objet se rapporte-t-il à H. Imbramos (7)? C'est dans une idole rustique comme celle qui, sur le cratère de Boston (165), assiste à la poursuite d'un berger par le dieu Pan que J. D. Beazley propose de reconnaître l'ancêtre des piliers hermaïques. Beaucoup de divinités champêtres possédaient de telles effigies, taillées dans le bois ou modelées dans la glaise, sans compter les mannequins dionysiaques et les «grosses têtes», en matériaux plus périssables encore, qui ne duraient peut-être que le temps d'une fête (Bé-rard, Anodoi 63-73 pl. 4-7; Halm-Tisserant, M., «Autour du mannequin dionysiaque», Héphaistos 10, 1990, sous presse). H. avait les siennes: rappelons son xoanon en bois de thuya sur le mont Cyllène (8g) dont Pausanias omet de décrire l'aspect. Peut-être faut-il l'imaginer à la semblance de l'idole du skyphos de Tü-bingen (167) qui réunit les trois composantes du pilier: tête, sexe dressé, tenons latéraux. L'innovation du sculpteur hipparchéen fut d'inventer une formule plastique qui transformait un fétiche de la religion populaire en œuvre d'art, en ce περικαλλές ἄγαλμα que proclame être l'hermès alcaménien de Pergame (47). Y avait-il, antérieurement aux piliers attiques, des hermès en pierre moins éloignés que les xoana du type canonique? Il ne semble pas, malgré l'intéressante tentative de J. Bousquet (o. c. 47) pour rattacher les hermès d'Athènes à ceux qui auraient flanqué l'entrée du temple de Delphes. D'autres précédents comme les «Brett-idole» de diverses divinités (Simon, Götter 58. 61. 167) ou comme l'indatable hermès à tête de bélier de Passava en Laconie (AM 29, 1904, 21-22 fig. 1) n'appartiennent pas à la préhistoire du véritable hermès attique.

Son étrangeté demeure, bien que les circonstances de sa naissance soient devenues moins obscures. Au plus ingambe des dieux, à l'artisan habile de ses mains, à l'orateur dont les gestes soulignent les propos persuasifs, on a coupé bras et jambes. On l'a privé de ses ailes, même s'il les conserve occasionnellement à son pétase (107. 123; pilier du théâtre de l'agora de Cyrène: Jdl 74, 1959, 267 fig. 19). En revanche l'exhibition du sexe érigé est conforme, elle, aux vertus fécondantes du patron des troupeaux et relève plus généralement d'une magie sexuelle, à la fois apotropaïque et porteuse de chance, qu'a toujours exercée l'H. δῶτωρ ἐάων (cf. Sources litt.). Il n'y a, à ce sujet, rien à ajouter aux analyses de P. Devambez qui conclut même à une sorte de «préséance» du phallus (immuable) sur la tête (changeante avec l'identité des divers dieux-piliers).

Les spéculations en sens inverse de Macrobe (Sat. 1, 19, 14-15), pour qui la tête de l'hermès est une référence au Soleil, tête du monde et créateur de toutes choses, ne traduisent plus au V^e s. ap. J.-C. la pensée grecque. Cette combinaison du visage et du sexe, pareillement mis en valeur par leur présentation plastique et contrastant avec l'abstraction du fût, n'a pas d'équivalent dans l'imagerie. Il y a certes une réduction analogue dans les énigmatiques statuettes céphalopodes de Priène, en général identifiées avec le Baubo, dans lesquelles le visage prend la place du sexe (Wiegand, Th./Schrader, H., Priene [1904] 155-163; Olender, M., RHR 1985, 3-55). Mais là où, pour le corps masculin, la sculpture grecque montre depuis les origines la nudité intégrale, elle pratique pour le corps féminin le tabou du sexe qu'elle a transmis à l'iconographie occidentale selon la règle formulée par A. Roger: «aut vultus, aut vulva» (Communications 46, 1987, 181-198). Qu'une complète identification d'H. au phallus pouvait s'opérer aux yeux des Grecs (à la manière des effigies phalliques du Dionysos délien), le monument qu'il possédait à Cyllène d'Elide (8f) en apporte la démonstration. Le monument de Lysandra de Daskyleion en forme de phallus-naïskos où s'inscrit un pilier hermaïque ne s'explique guère autrement (Pfuhl/Möbius n° 893 pl. 133; mais cf. les réserves exprimées par Kurtz/Boardman, o. c. 633, 297-299).

La sélection de la tête et du phallus, leur association sur le «corps» du pilier hermaïque avaient pour effet et probablement pour intention de provoquer tout ensemble la reconnaissance et la surprise. Comme le souligne Fr. Frontisi-Ducroux, il y avait dans l'iconographie religieuse grecque de nécessaires limites à l'anthropomorphisme des dieux et, dans le cas du pilier hermaïque comme dans celui du mannequin dionysiaque, une remise à distance de divinités trop humaines.

Monument de la politique édilitaire et culturelle des Pisistratides, le pilier hermaïque s'est introduit massivement dans la cité démocratique, débarrassé de son discours de l'ordre moral, mais conservant toutes ses fonctions et en acquérant d'autres dans le cadre des nouvelles institutions (Kron, Phylenheroen 233-236). Rien mieux que l'affaire des Hermocopides (Thuk. 6, 27-28) ne montre le respect et l'affection qu'il inspirait aux Athéniens, rien si ce n'est la place qu'il occupait, par la peinture de vases, dans la cité des images. L'articulation de notre chapitre II i cherche à refléter son omniprésence dans la ville, sur les places et dans les rues, dans les sanctuaires et dans les gymnases, dans la vie publique et dans la vie privée. Des documents comme l'olpe de Paestum, le skyphos de Thasos, la péliké du Louvre (139-141) situent les hermès dans le paysage urbain où ils constituent des points de repère connus de tous. Le tétracéphale du Céramique (140), près de la voie des Panathénées, était une station pour les processions avec danses armées. Tout le secteur nord-ouest de l'Agora tenait son nom des piliers qui s'y dressaient, probablement dès l'époque des tyrans. L'H. Agoraïos en bronze que Pausanias (1, 15, 1) signale près du Poecile était une statue anthropomorphe, mais on peut admettre que les piliers hermaïques de la place ne s'en trouvaient pas éloignés. Toujours est-il que de nombreux fragments, dont une tête archaïque, ont été découverts par les fouilles américaines devant la façade ouest de ce portique et que les restes de quelque 25 autres piliers proviennent de l'intérieur et des environs de la Stoa Royale. L'existence d'une «Stoa des hermès» est attestée littérairement et épigraphiquement, mais son emplacement exact, quelque part à l'ouest du Poecile, reste à découvrir (Harrison 108-109; pour le détail des références bibliographiques plus récentes concernant ces questions de topographie, cf. Wrede 8-12. 36-37). Les trois hermès du monument d'Eion (21), dont s'inspire vraisemblablement la péliké du P. de Pan (141), y étaient exposés et le même portique abritait, au moins depuis le III^e s., des stèles de décrets honorifiques pour des hipparques et des phylarques (REG 100, 1987, 139). A la périphérie de l'Agora le quartier des hermès n'était pas par hasard un centre de la vie sportive et festive, sur laquelle les témoignages des textes sont nombreux: manœuvres de cavalerie et évolutions d'apobates, courses de chevaux et d'athlètes étaient de la compétence du dieu éducateur de la jeunesse athénienne. Le passage de Xénophon (hipp. 3, 2) sur les cavalcades des Panathénées qui commencent et finissent près des hermès s'inscrit mieux sur le terrain depuis la découverte d'une ligne de départ à l'est du péribole des Douze Dieux (Hesperia 44, 1975, 362-365 pl. 82 d).

D'autres rubriques de l'imagerie vasculaire ont l'intérêt de mettre le pilier hermaïque en scène. Même lorsque des inscriptions ou le contexte archéologique nous éclairent sur le milieu historique du monument, quantité d'informations sont perdues puisque le marbre ne garde trace des cérémonies, des visites, des prières dont il avait été l'objet de la part des hommes de l'Antiquité. Les images des peintres les ont au contraire fixées, sous la forme d'instantanés ou de savantes constructions. Hormis peut-être les stèles et les édifices funéraires aucun monument grec, ni édifice, ni statue, n'a été autant représenté que l'hermès. L'illustration de cette partie du catalogue donnera au lecteur une idée suffisante des thèmes iconographiques majeurs. On constate l'évidence de relations privilégiées entre les hermès et la jeunesse éphébique, au gymnase comme en ville (144. 146. 149. 155): conversations animées ou face à face méditatifs, salutations ou supplications, parfois attouchements (ARV 97, 10; Vorberg, G., Ars erotica pl. 19). Les préoccupations de la virilité et de la fécondité féminine paraissent s'exprimer conjointement chez les deux suppliants du cratère de Bologne (153). D'autres implorations ou embrassements du pilier hermaïque par des jeunes gens ou des jeunes filles (154-155) évoquent des soucis d'amoureux. On ne peut que constater la forte charge affective de cette imagerie. Cf. etiam G. Siebert, «Une image dans l'image: le pilier hermaïque dans la peinture de vases grecques», dans Réception de l'image, Actes du coll. de Strasbourg, janv. 1988 (1991).

Dieu populaire, ami des petites gens qu'il sert sans défaillance dans La Paix d'Aristophane, H. se trouve sur les lieux de leur travail et de leurs divertissements. Son pilier est dressé dans l'atelier du potier (Zanker [1965] 96); il garantit la chance du pêcheur (163) comme du chasseur (95a. 166), jamais bredouilles. Le portefaix (162), des pèlerins du Cabirion sont d'autres familiers de l'hermès auxquels se joignent les animaux: son pilier offre un perchoir commode aux oiseaux (94) et invite les chèvres à la danse (183). L'humour et l'animation qui caractérisent ces scènes ont quelquefois raison de la rigidité minérale de l'idole. Ne dirait-on pas qu'elle se penche pour mieux écouter des confidences (143)? Sur une œnochoé du P. d'Athènes (105) elle tourne franchement la tête vers une jeune visiteuse. Au Mus. d'Orsay, à Paris, un groupe d'H. chuchotant à l'oreille d'un pilier de Pan, sculpté par Hippolyte Moulin, restitue cette atmosphère d'aimable complicité.

Figurés de profil dans la plupart des compositions les piliers hermaïques peuvent se présenter de face pour établir par le regard un lien émotionnel avec le spectateur: jeu de masques bien connu dans l'imagerie. Le P. de Pan choisit quelquefois la facialité (142) ou la facialité combinée avec le profil (141) pour suggérer la disposition du monument dont il s'inspire, en l'espèce celui des trois hermès de Cimon. Ailleurs c'est l'action culturelle représentée qui justifie la présence plus intense de la face du dieu: sacrifices (119. 124-125), initiations dionysiaques (131), cortège nuptial (103). Il est notable que sur les stèles funéraires les piliers hermaïques comme les H. anthropomorphes sont souvent sculptés de face (128. 617-618. 621).

Le lieu du pilier n'est pas toujours facile à repérer. Comme pour les xoana (165-166), le cadre paysagiste (164) ou des associations caractéristiques (chasseur, gibier: 95a) indiquent la campagne. Un loutéon (98) marque la palestre ou le gymnase, un autel le sanctuaire (92-94. 118-123. 162). Mais quel sanctuaire et de quel dieu? L'adjonction d'un palmier (97a) évoque plutôt Chypre et Aphrodite. Rien n'autorise à identifier un sanctuaire d'H. lui-même chaque fois que son monument jouxte un autel ou se trouve associé à une cérémonie sacrée. Les bucranes et les pinakes au mur, ex-voto de n'importe quel hiéron, ne fournissent en général aucun indice: sur les petits tableaux les piliers hermaïques côtoient les Silènes (95a-c. 111), sans que l'on sache si H. est honoré chez Dionysos ou Dionysos chez H. Quelques autres cas sont plus sûrs: c'est dans son propre sanctuaire qu'H. reçoit le sacrifice du bélier (817); le pilier peint dans le champ entre des pinakes siléniques ne fait que renforcer la signalisation. L'hermès lui-même est assez fréquemment surdéterminé par un caducée peint sur le fût ou associé au fût (57a. 81. 96. 97b. 100. 113. 123. 151), fonctionnant à la manière d'une légende: «c'est bien un hermès d'H. que tu vois, et non pas d'un autre dieu».

Certaines images d'hermès se caractérisent par le port de vêtements qui ne ressemblent en rien à ceux des Mantelhermen de la sculpture. Il s'agit de casques légers, de résilles, de châles frangés que l'on jette sur le fût. Dans le cas d'hermès d'Aphrodite (112), ces parures vestimentaires posent moins de questions que dans le cas d'hermès d'H. tout à fait canoniques (95a-c). On observe que les piliers vêtus appartiennent souvent à des sanctuaires de campagne et sont associés à des ex-voto dionysiaques (pinakes à Silènes). Une contamination avec le mannequin garni d'oripeaux est d'autant moins à exclure que les affinités entre Dionysos et H. sont illustrées par toute la peinture de vases, notamment dans les associations du pilier hermaïque et du thiasé (129-138). L'idole du P. de Pantoxéna (132) forme comme un maillon entre deux chaînes iconographiques. D'autres divinités recevaient, en offrande ou pour une cérémonie, parures et costumes. A Délos, p. ex., c'est le cas pour Lété (Bruneau, Cultes 209) ou pour Artémis dont le chiton passe à Dionysos quand le peuple athénien lui offre une tunique neuve (ibid. 310-311. 325). On imagine volontiers qu'une idole aussi populaire que l'hermès ait été coiffée et habillée en certaines circonstances par des fidèles du dieu, selon une coutume que connaissent encore des sanctuaires de pèlerinage en Italie du sud ou au Brésil: on prête à la divinité ses propres vêtements afin qu'elle les charge de son fluide.

Des documents modestes, qui n'avaient guère leur place dans un catalogue iconographique, témoignent de la vogue des images d'H. jusqu'à la fin de l'Antiquité. Dans une ville cosmopolite comme Délos H. figure dans le répertoire de la glyptique, notamment sous la forme de bustes quelquefois associés à ceux d'Aphrodite ou de Tyche (Boussac, M.-Fr., Recherches sur les sceaux de Délos, thèse inédite, Univ. Paris I [1981] chap. «Hermès»; cf. etiam Deonna, o. c. 290, 307 pl. 90: amulettes, pacotille). Des graffites d'hermès se rencontrent au Gymnase de Délos (Audiart, J., EADélos XXVIII, Le Gymnase [1970] 125-126), parfois jusque sur les piliers du dieu (hermès dit du Théâtre: BCH 13, 1889, pl. 12; 105, 1981, 166-169 fig. 12-13); des reliefs très grossiers, tel celui de l'Agora d'Athènes (Agora XI pl. 61), sont sculptés comme par l'homme de la rue, avec plus de maladresse mais aussi avec davantage de sincérité que n'en comporte l'hommage rhétorique d'un Léonidas à l'«hermès quadrangulaire, fils de Maïa, sauveur des troupeaux» (Anth. Pal. 6, 334). Le pendant des épigrammes bucoliques est constitué par les «paysages sacrés» dans la tradition du relief pittoresque alexandrin, dans lesquels des hermès sont fréquemment intégrés (Peters, W. J. T., Landscape in Romano-Campanian Mural Painting [1963] passim). A partir du milieu du I^{er} s. av. J.-C. et plus particulièrement dans les décorations miniaturistes du III^e Style, des Körperhermen plutôt que des piliers tétraonaux, sans véritable identité théologique, deviennent des figures de composition empruntées aux topoi d'une imagerie dionysiaque banalisée. Les séries d'hermès archaisants que produisaient alors les ateliers de copistes alimentaient le marché du mobilier décoratif.

III. L'évolution plastique de la figure d'Hermès

L'évolution de la figure plastique du dieu traduit le déplacement de ses fonctions dans la cité. Ce «Wandel der Hermesgestalt» que P. Zanker a suivi dans la peinture de vases attique apparaît plus radical quand on le saisit à travers la sculpture et sur une plus longue durée. Les créations anciennes survivent: il existe des crio-phores hellénistiques (290); les ateliers néo-attiques (286-287) continuent de traiter à l'ép. impériale un sujet qui a ses origines dans l'iconographie des porteurs d'offrandes de l'Orient et de l'Égypte du II^e millénaire et qui fournira à l'art paléochrétien le modèle du Bon Pasteur (Veyries; Parrot, A., «Le Bon Pasteur: à propos d'une statuette de Mari», dans Mél. syriens offerts à M. R. Dussaud I [1939] 171-182). Certaines fonctions anciennes et permanentes, p. ex. celle du messager, ne trouvent que tardivement leur expression dans la sculpture en ronde bosse, sous la forme de l'H. attachant sa sandale (958-960) ou sous celle de l'H. au repos (961-968). D'autres ne la trouvent jamais, parce qu'elles appelaient une manière narrative que seuls le relief et la peinture pouvaient développer. Peu de statues incontestées du dieu chthonien et psychopompe des peintres (923). Du guide, seul le pédophore, plus précisément le dionysophore, a connu une véritable fortune (391-401). Le foisonnement thématique de la figure d'H. dans les arts graphiques ne peut, pour d'évidentes raisons d'exécution, avoir son équivalent dans la plastique: la constatation vaut pour l'ensemble de l'imagerie divine en Grèce. Toute enquête comparée dans les différentes catégories de documentation doit à l'inverse se garder d'une illusion d'optique: si l'H. des athlètes, image sculptée majeure à partir du IV^e s., est relativement peu représenté dans la peinture de vases, c'est parce que la nouvelle vision du dieu s'impose à une époque où la céramique décorée attique avait trop perdu de sa vitalité pour faire pleinement écho aux phénomènes de société et pour inventer, en l'espèce, un répertoire sportif comparable à celui de la figure rouge sévère. Ce sont désormais les poètes, plutôt que les imagiers, qui répètent à l'envie que les arts de la palestra sont la chose d'H.: Héraclès lui-même a reçu à Argos son éducation sportive (lutte et boxe) de la part d'un maître qui est fils d'H. (Théokr. 24, 115-116; éd. Legrand p. 174). Lorsque la Grèce perd son indépendance et que le gymnase fonctionne pour une part comme un succédané de la cité, l'H. des athlètes devient un dieu «politique». Ce n'est probablement pas la moindre raison de sa diffusion par la sculpture et de sa prééminence. J'ajouterais volontiers que la plupart des autres fonctions du dieu continuent d'être captées et visualisées par l'effigie de l'hermès, l'universelle idole porte-bonheur.

Le phénomène d'art romain qui à l'ép. impériale se manifeste dans les copies et les Umbildungen nous renseigne moins sur les formes et les styles de son image sculptée grecque que, plus généralement, sur la place d'H. dans la civilisation gréco-romaine. Il serait instructif de mesurer par traitement informatique la proportion des H. et des Mercurus fabriqués, par adjonctions d'attributs, à partir de modèles d'athlètes, de héros ou d'autres divinités. Elle serait probablement élevée, à l'instar de la fréquence des thèmes hermaïques dans les arts décoratifs gréco-romains (984-992).

Formulons au moins, à défaut d'y apporter une réponse, l'une des questions les plus débattues: celle de la restitution de l'H. de Polyclète à partir des copies ou adaptations en marbre et en bronze. L'embarras vient de la multitude des H. «polyclétéens», dans la grande et la petite plastique gréco-romaine, sans qu'à travers leurs variantes on puisse distinguer ni l'aspect de l'original évoqué par Plin (nat. 34, 55), ni même une parenté plus certaine avec telle création de Polyclète qu'avec telle autre. Les séries en question (en particulier les documents les plus importants, supra 930-942) soulèvent deux hypothèses méthodologiquement contraires:

a) Ces œuvres reflètent de façon très générale la vision que l'on avait d'H. après l'époque classique: celle du jeune dieu, patron de la jeunesse et du gymnase. Le modèle de l'athlète polyclétéen lui convenait particulièrement. Dans la succession de Polyclète, les novateurs en donnent de nouvelles rédactions (943-949); les simples copistes se contentent de greffer des attributs sur le type athlétique. Leurs sculptures ne nous apprendraient alors rien d'autre de l'H. de Polyclète sinon qu'il était polyclétéen.

b) L'étude critique des séries permet d'identifier l'œuvre précise du maître dont l'H. perdu se rapprochait le plus. On ne se contentera plus alors d'une effigie de type athlétique. On suivra des pistes partant de bonnes, voire d'excellentes répliques ou adaptations hellénistiques et gréco-romaines en direction soit du Doryphore (H. Boboli 396; éphèbe d'Annecy 930; tête de Boston 932; H. au torque du Br. Mus. 940), soit du Discophore (bronze du Louvre 183 931; tête de Berlin 934), soit du Diadumène ou du Kyniskos (H. de Boston 936). Mais les préférences d'A. Furtwängler, J. Sieveking ou C. Blümel comme celles des meilleurs spécialistes actuels n'ont, en l'espèce, jamais valeur de démonstration. Cela se comprend d'autant plus aisément qu'il ne faut pas, en bonne logique, écarter une variante de l'hypothèse b), qui ne simplifie pas l'analyse: copistes et toreutes procédaient volontiers par sélection et contamination, en sorte que leurs marbres et leurs bronzes peuvent conserver séparément tel ou tel trait du modèle.

IV. Images régionales d'Hermès

La peinture de vases impose à notre mémoire une image trop attique du dieu. Aux centaines de représentations d'H. par les peintres d'Athènes ne répondent que de petites séries non attiques. Le guide des trois déesses figurait dans le Jugement de Paris de l'olpé Chigi (seul son caducée est conservé), mais cette représentation, peut-être la plus ancienne de l'iconographie vasculaire, ne connaît guère de suite dans le décor de la céramique proto-corinthienne et corinthienne (Amyx, CVP 622-623; 511. 546; cf. etiam 235-236 et FDelphes V fig. 653). Même pénurie sur les vases laconiens (518. 717-718).

Dans une certaine mesure la documentation des petits bronzes corrige l'athénocentrisme de la figuration. D'importantes séries régionales, péloponnésiennes et plus précisément arcadiennes, illustrent l'image du dieu des bergers (260-278). Il en va de même pour les terres cuites de Béotie (271a-g).

L'imagerie italiote, représentée dans la plupart de nos rubriques, tient son particularisme autant de l'évolution des styles que de l'influence d'un milieu social et culturel dont les composantes sont difficiles à saisir. En ce qui concerne, par ex., l'H. chthonien, H. Lohmann constate que le Psychopompe attique n'a pas d'équivalent en Italie du sud. Le dieu, son voyage accompli (?), est intégré dans des compositions mythologiques chargées des symboles de l'éschatologie italiote. A l'intérieur du complexe de la Grande-Grèce, les traits régionaux spécifiques restent à cerner. L'omniprésence de la Dame aux rinceaux, dont la fonction de protectrice dans l'outre-tombe paraît établie (Siebert, G., Kléma 10, 1985, 19-26), n'a pu qu'entraîner une réduction du rôle d'H. comme dieu des morts. Cela vaut surtout, semble-t-il, pour l'Apulie. L'influence sur l'imagerie des cultes pratiqués dans les sanctuaires locaux est très inégalement perceptible. De l'H. infernal du sanctuaire de Morgantina on ne peut restituer l'aspect à travers les seules tablettes et statuettes de défexion (Robert, L., Coll. Froehner I, Inscr. grecques, [1936] 17 n° 13 pl. 8; Stillwell, R., AJA 67, 1963, 165 pl. 35, 9; Guarducci, M., Epigraphia graeca IV [1978] 250 fig. 70). De la même façon on aimerait pouvoir illustrer le dieu (H.?) qui fait procéder aux nécromancies dans le fragment d'une fabula incerta d'Euripide (TGF fig. 912).

En revanche, l'H. de Locres nous est accessible par des séries de pinakes du V^e s. Des variantes du crio-phore montrent un H. le plus souvent juvénile, le béliet sur les épaules, dans les bras ou conduit par les cornes; dans la main il tient quelquefois une guirlande ou un coq offerts à Perséphone et Hadès (Prückner, o. c. 757, pl. 23-24). Un type particulièrement étonnant est celui de l'H. coiffé d'une couronne «à plumes d'Indien» (Ausonia 3, 1908, 136 fig. 8.35-36; BollArte 3, 1909, 406. 463 fig. 10). Le jeune H. de Locres était étroitement associé à Aphrodite (sur leur association, cf. supra p. 373). Les ex-voto représentant les deux divinités face à face (avec Eros pouvant tenir la lyre d'H.) ou en theoi paredroi partageant la même base dans leur temple commun ou réunis sur un char sur lequel H. rejoint la déesse (757-758; Prückner 15-27 fig. 1-2 pl. 1-2). Certains pinakes à cortège d'hydrophorie se laissent peut-être interpréter à la lumière d'un fr. de cratère (?) apulien conservé par un ancien dessin (Prückner 20-21 et n. 137).

En Grande-Grèce les associations entre divinités, entre divinités et héros ne sont pas les mêmes qu'en Attique où H. se trouve rarement seul à seule avec Artémis, p. ex., comme sur des plats apuliens (JdI 103, 1988, 77-78 fig. 14; cf. etiam 693). La signification des objets mobiliers est également différente. Le loutérion ne renvoie pas à la palestra mais souvent au bain nuptial, à celui en particulier des anymphoi dans l'imagerie des Danaïdes, et à divers cultes funéraires (Sichtermann, Slg Jatta 50 pl. 119-120). Sur un cratère apulien de Bari (615 ter) H. se tient accoudé à un loutérion en contrebass du naïskos d'un jeune guerrier qu'entourent d'autres personnages mythologiques, dont Orphée. Pour un corpus plus complet et une synthèse sur ces questions, on se reportera à la monogra-phie sur H. dans la peinture de vases italiote annoncée par K. Schauenburg (1983) 49.

Les mentions trop isolées dans les textes comme la rareté ou la difficulté de la documentation figurée empêchent de saisir l'image probablement typée du dieu dans certains régions du monde grec ou de sa périphérie. Par Hdt. 5, 7 nous apprenons qu'en Thracie les rois – et eux seuls – vénèrent spécialement H., dont ils déclarent descendre, ne jurant que par lui. Mais comment comprendre le texte? Peut-être à la lumière de certaines variantes du Cavalier thrace. P. Perdrizet évoque à ce sujet les monnaies royales du pays pangéen, avec un H. au caducée emmenant une paire de bœufs (250-251) et avec un personnage coiffé du pétase ou de la causia, un javelot à la main, accomplissant, semble-t-il, un vol de bestiaux (BCH 35, 1911, 116-119 pl. 1, 1-8).

L'H. crétois était probablement vénéré dès l'Âge du Bronze dans des cavernes où l'on a parfois reconnu des «idoles naturelles» qui, autant que des sources, avaient pu focaliser des pèlerinages de bergers en l'honneur du fils de Maïa, né dans la grotte du mont Cyllène (Faure, P., Fonctions des cavernes crétoises [1964] 131-139 pl. 15, 3; 17, 1). Les dédicaces Ἐρμῆι ἐὺχάων à Mélidoni et Ἐρμῆι Κραναίων près de Patso ne datent que de la fin de l'ép. hellénistique et de l'ép. romaine, lorsque Sybrita, capitale régionale, avait depuis longtemps choisi H. pour ses effigies monétaires (959). Le dieu de la source de Patso avait alors acquis un plus large cercle de fidèles que celui qu'attestent les ex-voto s'échelonnant, avec des éclipses, entre le MRI et l'ép. impériale (Hood, S./Warren, P., BSA 61, 1966, 185-189; Warren, ibid. 195-196).

Mais c'est par les trouvailles de Katô Symi que nous connaissons le mieux l'H. crétois. Notre catalogue n'en a retenu que les documents parfaitement identifiés qui illustrent à l'ép. du haut-archaïsme la conception homérique de l'H.-kourios et celle du jeune dieu de la végétation, parèdre d'Aphrodite dont on trouve de lointains échos à Alexandrie (308-309. 969; cf. Introduction). Dans la peinture de vases attique (ARV² 83, 3; 1156, 10) H. tient assez souvent une fleur que Zanker (31 pl. 5 a) considère simplement comme un insigne du dieu de la séduction oratoire. Singulière mais incontestable à Katô Symi est aussi l'image de l'H. chasseur, peu attestée dans l'ensemble de la tradition littéraire et figurée (Lembési 111-113. 228 pl. 32-34) en comparaison de l'importante iconographie du dieu des bergers. Mais le processus d'adaptation de l'image du dieu à celle de ses protégés est le même pour le costume, l'équipement, les attitudes: la manipulation de l'arc, les gestes, les gibiers ne permettent pas de distinguer le chasseur divin des simples mortels. Seul l'attribut des ailes talonnières, comme dans le cas des criophores, est déterminant. A. Lembési propose en outre d'identifier dans le sanctuaire un H. chthonien «émergeant d'un cairn» (pinax A 1 p. 22. 235 pl. 1). Le personnage est muni d'un bâton que l'on voit aussi dans la main d'un jeune «prince» (pinax A 2 pl. 2) ou d'une figure à ailes talonnières sur un bouclier de l'Ida (Lembési pl. 55). La rhabdos caractérisait H. longtemps avant le caducée (cf. Sources litt.).

V. Hermès maître des animaux

Dans la peinture de vases orientalisante on voit H. régner sur les Sphinx, les Sirènes, les fauves (230-240). Le chasseur crétois de Katô Symi, le berger et le bouvier panhelléniques traduisent incomplètement le rapport complexe qu'H. entretient avec les animaux, dont il était le maître dans l'Hymne homérique (h. Merc. 565-570). Sa spécialisation ultérieure en dieu des troupeaux a rétréci son empire primitif, dont le souvenir ressurgit de-ci, de-là dans l'imagerie. Sur une hydrie archaïque du Petit Palais (243), le lion est son emblème autant que le bélier et le bouc. Certaines associations animales ne paraissent significatives que tardivement: ainsi celle du coq, symbole fréquent du Mercure de la glyptique gréco-romaine, mais rarement attesté en compagnie de l'H. grec (Richter, Met-MusGems n° 33 pl. 6). En revanche, les chiens et les chevaux, expressément soumis à H. par le poète (h. Merc. 568. 570), entretiennent avec le dieu des liens privilégiés.

Dans certains contextes la présence du chien ne s'explique nullement en fonction d'H.: ainsi dans les Jugements de Pâris ou dans les scènes de la délivrance d'Io. Il n'empêche qu'un rapport de complicité se manifeste sur «l'amphore Northampton» de Munich (837) entre le chien d'Argos et H. déjouant la vigilance du monstrueux gardien. Sur l'hydrie de Karlsruhe (476), le chien de Pâris est couché aux pieds d'H., obéissant au geste du caducée pointé vers sa tête. Dans l'épisode de la capture de Cerbère, l'influence apaisante qu'H. exerce sur le chien infernal s'ajoute quelquefois à la force d'Héraclès (517). C'est encore H. qui retrouve pour Zeus le chien de → Pandareos, légende peut-être illustrée par une coupe du P. de Heidelberg (MonPiot 63, 1980, 48 fig. 11-12). Le conducteur du cortège de l'apothéose d'Héraclès se trouve, sur des amphores du P. d'Amasis (554a-b), étrangement flanqué d'un chien qui l'accompagne aussi (plutôt qu'une «panthère»: NotSc 1935, 269 fig. 8) dans sa course aérienne sur un cratère en cloche italiote. Sur un fr. d'amphore orientalisante de Thasos (BCH 90, 1966, 952 fig. 15) deux chiens bondissants lui font fête.

Le pouvoir d'H. sur les chevaux se manifeste par une variété de gestes et d'actions dans les représentations de l'attelage dont il est le guide attiré. Le premier fait qui se dégage de la documentation que nous avons retenue après un tri sévère (402-452) est celui de la fréquence et de la permanence du thème aux époques archaïque et classique, aussi bien dans la sculpture monumentale (441. 451) que dans la grande peinture (440) et dans la peinture de vases.

H. fait assez rarement office d'aurige. Il ouvre plutôt la route au char qu'il escorte lentement (421), parfois en retournant la tête (433), ou qu'il précède en bondissant et en brandissant son caducée (436. 443). Particulièrement intéressante est la série d'images de la figure rouge qui montrent H. à la tête de l'attelage arrêté, faisant face aux chevaux et s'affairant dans un rôle de palefrenier divin. Ses interventions sont d'ordre technique, lorsqu'il saisit une rêne (434), calme d'une caresse ou de la voix les fringants étalons (424. 427.

431a). Mais il faut prendre garde aussi à une portée plus mystérieuse de ses gestes, en particulier à la manipulation du caducée accompagnant un jeu de mains expressif et efficace: H. pointe son insigne vers les genoux ou les poitrails (425a. 430. 431). Aux yeux du public sa présence dans ce genre de scènes apparaît si nécessaire que parfois les peintres se contentent de placer le dieu à l'arrière-plan où il se trouve à demi masqué par l'attelage. Les mécanismes de l'iconographie produisent également l'insolite figure d'un H. assis à la tête des chevaux (415a-c. 416; cf. Siebert, o. c. 255, 350 fig. 2).

VI. Le langage des mains et du caducée

L'analyse des gestes d'H., esquissée pour les scènes d'attelage, devrait s'élargir à l'ensemble de l'iconographie hermaïque. On n'en donnera ici qu'un aperçu, à l'aide de quelques statistiques et de deux tableaux synoptiques de dessins. Nos chiffres comportent une part d'arbitraire dans la mesure où ils sont fondés sur la seule peinture de vases et sur une sélection de documents: ceux retenus dans notre catalogue et, autre facteur de hasard, à l'exclusion des fr. où le détail pertinent était perdu. Les données numériques, aussi exactes que possible, seront présentées globalement sans être à chaque fois justifiées par des renvois aux numéros du catalogue. Le lecteur pourra aisément faire de lui-même les contrôles et éventuellement les corrections qui, sur tel point, lui paraîtront nécessaires. Pour éviter une complication excessive du classement, on n'a pris en considération que les 9 positions principales du caducée, dessinées chacune d'après une image type (n° de catalogue du document cité à la suite du n° d'identification du geste). D'autres variantes seront faciles à repérer, en particulier des schémas intermédiaires pour les gestes n° 2 et 3, selon que le caducée levé ou abaissé se trouve dans une position plus ou moins oblique. La question est de savoir si ce langage gestuel, à la fois constant et divers, a un sens accessible au spectateur moderne. Les paramètres choisis pour dresser les statistiques et pour tenter de les interpréter sont d'une part les grandes catégories stylistiques (vases attiques à figures noires, à figures rouges, à fond blanc, vases italiotes, abrégés respectivement f. n., f. r., f. bl., f. r. it.), d'autre part les contextes iconographiques sommairement définis d'après nos rubriques de catalogue. On pourrait beaucoup affiner l'analyse en distinguant, entre autres, les formules de composition dans lesquelles s'insèrent les gestes ainsi que les variations qui résultent des périodes, des ateliers, des peintres.

POSITIONS DU CADUCÉE

1. Caducée tenu à la verticale

- Occurrences: 63 (f. n. 19; f. r. 39; f. bl. 3; f. r. it. 2).

- Contextes préférentiels: c'est l'H. chthonien qui porte fréquemment le caducée en position verticale: 8 images contre de petites séries de 5 ou de 6 repérées dans divers contextes (H. associé aux Sphinx, H. dieu de l'attelage, H. guide des héros, H. en compagnie de Zeus).

N° 1 (487a)

2. Caducée levé obliquement

- Occurrences: 13 (f. n. 2; f. r. 10; f. r. it. 1).

- Contextes préférentiels: aucun.

N° 2 (836)

3. Caducée pointé vers le sol

- Occurrences: 38 (f. n. 10; f. r. 24; f. bl. 2; f. r. it. 2).

- Contextes préférentiels: H. chthonien (8), scènes de libation (4), scènes d'attelage (3).

N° 3 (813)

4. Caducée porté à l'horizontale

- Occurrences: 54 (f. n. 23; f. r. 28; f. bl. 3).

- Contextes préférentiels: H. assistant aux travaux d'Héraclès (13); petites séries de 5: scènes d'attelage, H. et les Léoïdes.

N° 4 (698)

5. Caducée sur l'épaule (vue de profil)

- Occurrences: 32 (f. n. 26; f. r. 4; f. r. it. 2).

- Contextes préférentiels: aucun. La position du caducée sur l'épaule, ici dans des figurations de profil, se retrouve dans la série 8 dans des figurations de profil trois quarts ou de trois quarts face.

N° 5 (545a)

6. Caducée tenu de biais dans les deux mains repliées sur la poitrine

- Occurrences: 39 (f. n. 34; f. r. 5).
- Contextes préférentiels: travaux d'Héraclès (8), H. dans la compagnie des dieux ou dans les assemblées divines (11). Cette position du caducée est liée au port de l'himation recouvrant les bras et les mains.

A (711a)

B (598)

C (545a)

7. Caducée dans la saignée du coude

- Occurrences: 6 (f. n. 1; f. r. it. 5).
- Contextes préférentiels: aucun.

N° 6 (294)

N° 7 (585)

8. Caducée sur l'épaule (figurations de profil trois quarts et de trois quarts face)

- Occurrences: 142 (f. n. 106; f. r. 33; f. r. it. 3).
- Contextes préférentiels: aucun.

9. Caducée en appui sur le sol

- Occurrences: 18 (f. n. 1; f. r. 11; f. r. it. 6).
- Contextes préférentiels (?): Jugement de Pâris (3), scènes de libation (3).

N° 8 (711a)

N° 9 (692)

GESTES DE LA MAIN

A. Main levée

- Occurrences: 120 (f. n. 91; f. r. 28; f. r. it. 1).
- Contextes préférentiels: H. dans la compagnie des dieux et dans les assemblées divines (49), travaux d'Héraclès (34), rançon d'Hector (5 ex. sur les 8 représentations cataloguées).

B. Main tendue à l'horizontale

- Occurrences: 42 (f. n. 15; f. r. 22; f. bl. 5).
- Contextes préférentiels: H. assistant aux travaux d'un héros (17 ex. dont 11 pour Héraclès), assemblées divines.

C. Main abaissée

- Occurrences: 34 (f. n. 16; f. r. 16; f. bl. 2).
- Contextes préférentiels (?): scènes d'attelage (6), H. en compagnie des dieux (5), H. chthonien (4).

CONCLUSIONS

Ces relevés, il faut le redire, constituent un échantillon non dépourvu de simplifications et d'approximations. A priori on ne peut pas non plus s'attendre à ce que les mains et le caducée d'H., en tant que signes figuratifs, fonctionnent selon un système rigoureux dans une imagerie aussi diverse et sur une aussi longue période. Mais il n'est pas douteux qu'à l'intérieur de certaines séries thématiques ou de certains groupes stylistiques se manifeste un véritable langage gestuel. Deux catégories de gestes sont à distinguer en fonction de la position et de l'orientation du caducée:

- des gestes actifs dans lesquels l'attribut magique du dieu exerce son efficacité (principalement les n° 1, 2, 3);
- des gestes qui correspondent à des attitudes plus passives d'H., comme celles du témoin de l'action, du spectateur lointain.

L'H. chthonien, p. ex., ou le maître de l'attelage pointent souvent leur caducée vers le sol (position 3) en accompagnant ce signal du geste impérieux de la main baissée (geste C). En revanche, les gestes A et B, l'un vif, l'autre mesuré, sont adaptés à toutes sortes de situations dans lesquelles H. discourt, informe, participe, communique: ils ne sont nullement réservés au plus démonstratif et au plus gesticulant des dieux grecs (cf. Neumann, G., Gesten und Gebärden bei den Griechen [1965]). De même le caducée appuyé sur l'épaule (5 et 8) ou porté à l'horizontale (4) n'a en général d'autre fonction que de souligner le confort d'une attitude de marche ou de repos ou encore le rythme formel d'une frise de personnages. Les exceptions sont toutefois nombreuses aux règles très souples que l'on peut dégager: dans des scènes d'attelage comme 427 ou 431a la position du caducée pointé horizontalement vers les chevaux n'est pas de pure forme. Pour le caducée levé, notre schéma 2 ne rend pas compte de variantes auxquelles le contexte de la composition confère des significations inattendues: combattant de la Gigantomachie, H. dirige obliquement son insigne vers la cible, comme Zeus fait de son foudre (836); à la tête du char triomphal d'Héraclès, comme pour enflammer le galop de l'attelage (436b), H. gesticule (geste A de la main libre) et lève très haut son caducée à l'horizontale à la façon d'un Indien qui danse et qui brandit son tomahawk.

Il ressort par ailleurs de nos statistiques que certains gestes sont typiques d'une époque ou d'un style. Le caducée sur l'épaule prédomine largement dans la figure noire, de même que l'attitude des mains croisées sur la poitrine sous le drapé des longs manteaux qu'affectaient les peintres archaïques. De façon significative on ne rencontre plus guère dans la figure rouge italienne le port horizontal du caducée qui accompagne volontiers le mouvement, non plus que les gestes animés de la main libre (aucun cas recensé pour B et C). Le caducée placé dans la saignée du coude (7) ou en appui sur le sol comme une canne (9) exprime la nouvelle nonchalance de l'H. spectateur, conforme à la vision des dieux (et de leur messager en particulier) qui se développe dans la peinture attique du IV^e s. et dans les ateliers d'Apulie.

VII. Vêtements, chaussures, coiffures, attributs

Les vêtements d'H., ses chaussures, ses coiffures n'ont pas l'uniformité qu'on leur supposerait avant de leur avoir prêté attention. Comme pour les positions du caducée et les gestes de la main, les choix ou les automatismes des peintres varient avec les époques et les écoles et avec les sujets des représentations, mais sans rien de strict dans les règles.

Le costume ordinaire d'H. se compose du chitoniskos et de l'himation court ajusté au corps, soit unis, soit ornés de broderies, ou de la chlamyde amplement drapée. Diverses alternances et combinaisons, dont nous n'avons pas tenté de mesurer la fréquence, se rencontrent entre les pièces de vêtement. Il apparaît que la tunique et le manteau brodés habillent H. dans la peinture à figures noires, la chlamyde de préférence sur les vases à figures rouges. On observe en particulier les formules suivantes: chitoniskos seul; himation court brodé sur chitoniskos brodé; chlamyde sur chitoniskos; chlamyde couvrante; chlamyde ouverte sur le corps nu ou encore pans d'une chlaina décorant la nudité du dieu, mode qui sera caractéristique des cortèges divins sur les reliefs archaïques (787-794).

Pour deux types de vêtements, les relevés statistiques sont instructifs:

Semi-nudité sous la chlamyde ou la chlaina

- Occurrences: 49 (f. n. 3; f. r. 23; f. bl. 1; f. r. it. 22).
- Contextes préférentiels: compagnie des dieux (12), apothéose d'Héraclès (6); Jugement de Pâris (5).

Pardalide

- Occurrences: 41 (f. n. 39; f. r. 2).
- Contextes préférentiels: assemblées de dieux ou compagnie des dieux (18), fuite de Persée (3).

La semi-nudité sous la chlamyde ou la chlaina est rare à l'ép. archaïque: 4 occurrences sur la cinquantaine de cas recensés qui se partagent presque également entre les peintres attiques et italiotes de la f. r. L'absence complète de vêtements, peu attestée en Grèce propre (495. 685. 770), ne l'est pas davantage en Grande Grèce (768). La traditionnelle valeur héroïque de la nudité même partielle ressort de contextes dans lesquels H. participe à l'apothéose d'Héraclès (6 occurrences) ou rivalise lui-même de beauté avec les personnages du Jugement de Pâris (5 occurrences). Les chiffres, indicatifs comme les précédents, veulent attirer l'attention sur des variantes vestimentaires parfois méconnues. Il existe dans l'iconographie archaïque un H. en long manteau ou en longue tunique. Dans une Naissance d'Athéna, c'est peut-être la solennité de la circonstance qui nous vaut un H. fastueusement drapé et proclamant avec fierté son origine cyllénienne (681). Mais dans une Gigantomachie ou dans l'épisode du meurtre d'Argos (837), ni la situation, ni l'action ne justifient le costume.

Beaucoup plus conforme à la nature d'H. est le port de la pardalide, noire ou blanche unie, tigrée ou mouchetée. Cette gaine en fourrure est le vêtement de la course rapide, qui distingue les personnages du monde sauvage, en particulier ceux du thias. Dans la peinture de vases archaïque, H. partage la pardalide avec Iris, avec les Gorgones, avec Persée, avec les chasseurs de Calydon, avec Apollon tueur des Niobides ou du Géant Tityos, avec Icare, avec Héraclès, p. ex. dans la Gigantomachie du Trésor de Siphnos. Assez souvent la pardalide est associée aux chaussures ailées. H. peut la revêtir sous son manteau, comme un chitoniskos. C'est par excellence un modèle d'époque et, au moins pour la figure d'H., un modèle d'atelier: sur 41 occurrences, 2 seulement appartiennent à la f. r. attique, 39 à la f. n., dont 18 au Peintre Affecté (scènes d'assemblées divines).

Les περόβεντα πέδιλα servent dès l'origine à la caractérisation iconographique du dieu (Sources litt. p. 288). N. Yalouris en a dressé la typologie, avec les deux principales variantes attique (198. 202) et ionienne (203-204). Les chaussures ailées, qu'il s'agisse de bottes ou de sandales, font partie de l'équipement normal d'H. et l'on peut se demander pourquoi, plus souvent qu'on ne pense, il y renonce pour des chaussures aptères ou pour aller pieds nus. Dans les séries italiotes les pieds nus vont de pair avec la nudité du corps. Ailleurs il ne semble pas que des modes d'atelier ou d'époque permettent d'expliquer les choix des peintres. Certains sujets et contextes sont ici plus déterminants.

Sujets

1. Assemblées divines, compagnie des dieux
2. Hermès psychopompe et chthonien
3. Hermès combattant
4. Hermès et l'amour
5. Jugement de Pâris
6. Scènes cultuelles
7. Hermès seul (ou avec figures animales affrontées)
8. Hermès et les troupeaux
9. Hermès et la musique

Hermès en chaussures aptères

- 12 (1 f. n., 5 f. r., 6 f. r. it.)
- 6 (2 f. r., 1 f. bl., 3 f. r. it.)
- 3 (1 f. n., 2 f. r.)
- 2 (f. r.)
- 5 (2 f. r., 3 f. r. it.)
- 5 (2 f. r., 3 f. r. it.)
- 0
- 0
- 0

Hermès pieds nus

- 22 (1 f. n., 7 f. r., 1 f. bl., 13 f. r. it.)
- 11 (6 f. r., 2 f. bl., 3 f. r. it.)
- 10 (2 f. n., 8 f. r.)
- 10 (9 f. r., 1 f. r. it.)
- 6 (1 f. n., 3 f. r., 2 f. r. it.)
- 5 (1 f. r., 4 f. r. it.)
- 5 (3 f. n., 2 f. r.)
- 4 (3 f. n., 1 f. r.)
- 3 (1 f. r., 2 f. r. it.)

La formule «moyenne» des chaussures aptères, absente dans plusieurs contextes, est dans l'ensemble rarement employée. Si l'on oppose globalement, dans les mêmes séries thématiques, les cas où H. est muni de ses chaussures ailées et les cas où il en est dépourvu (chaussures aptères ou absence de chaussures), on constate tantôt des occurrences semblables, tantôt de sensibles écarts:

Sujets	Hermès en chaussures ailées	Hermès sans chaussures ailées
1. Assemblées divines, compagnie des dieux	87	34
2. Hermès psychopompe et chthonien	13	17
3. Hermès combattant	15	13
4. Hermès et l'amour	9	19
5. Jugement de Pâris	23	11
6. Scènes cultuelles	7	10
7. Hermès seul (ou avec figures animales affrontées)	15	5
8. Hermès et les troupeaux	9	4
9. Hermès et la musique	21	3

La figuration des πτερόεντα πόδια, quel que soit le contexte, n'appelle pas d'observations puisque cet attribut fait partie de l'image canonique d'H. C'est leur absence, dont la fréquence relative ressort des occurrences comparées, qui est remarquable dans certaines situations. Des images plus intimes (série 4), des scènes cultuelles (série 6) exigent moins impérieusement le rappel des qualités de vitesse du dieu que celles qui le montrent sur les chemins dans ses fonctions de guide et de messager. Le cas de la série 3, pour laquelle l'échantillon de notre corpus fournit un rapport de quasi-parité (15 et 13), est intéressant. L'absence de chaussures ailées est concomitante avec le port de l'épée. L'H. qui pourfend Argos ou un adversaire de la Gigantomachie ne triomphe pas avec des armes magiques, mais avec celles de l'hoplite ou du tyrannoctone. C'est par assimilation à cette imagerie héroïque que les peintres ont représenté le dieu pieds nus ou chaussé comme un mortel.

Signalons enfin que les ailes talonnières fixées directement sur le pied nu se rencontrent quelquefois dans la peinture de vases italiote après le milieu du IV^e s. (437). Les ῥαυματὰ ἔργα de la tradition archaïque (H. Merc. 79-80) sont devenus les surnaturelles excroissances que l'on voit aux jambes d'H. et de Persée sur les fresques romaines.

H. passe pour être le dieu au pétase. Mais pour peu que l'on s'intéresse à son couvre-chef, on s'aperçoit que la forme n'en est pas toujours celle du chapeau à larges bords des voyageurs (365). Le pilos est son autre coiffure, bonnet tantôt arrondi sur le crâne (366), tantôt rétréci en pointe et garni (comme le pétase) d'un rebord (322). Pétase ou pilos, ailés ou aptères, font normalement partie de l'équipement du dieu. Compte tenu des cas où le chapeau se trouve rejeté dans la nuque (205. 207), nous n'avons recensé à partir de notre corpus que 14 représentations d'H. nu-tête: 7 f.n., 2 f.bl., 4 f.r., 1 f.r.it. Dans quatre occurrences (403. 469. 529. 546) l'absence de chapeau est combinée avec l'absence de chaussures. La nudité de tête ne s'explique par aucun contexte particulier.

Les statistiques qui suivent mesurent la fréquence et la distribution chronologique du pilos et du pétase ailés.

- Pilos ailé sans rebord: 19 occurrences (1 f.n., 15 f.r., 2 f.bl., 1 f.r.it.).

- Pilos ailé à rebord: 5 occurrences (1 f.n., 4 f.r.). Le plus ancien exemple recensé se rencontre chez le P. de Rycroft (578), vers 520, pour la f.n.; chez le P. de Pan (338), vers 470-460, pour la f.r.

- Pétase ailé: 7 occurrences (2 f.n., 4 f.r., 1 f.r.it.). Le plus ancien exemple recensé se rencontre pour la f.n. dans le Gr. de Léagros (809), vers 520-510; pour la f.r. chez Euphronios (593), vers 510.

Coiffures d'Hermès

Les deux variétés de coiffures ailées apparaissent en même temps et assez tardivement dans l'imagerie hermaïque, au moins quatre générations après l'invention du dieu au caducée et aux sandales ailées. Quant aux ailes de tête, homologues de celles greffées sur les talons, nous les avons notées pour la première fois à la fin du V^e s., dans l'atelier du P. de Talos (564). Lydos avait, semble-t-il, représenté un H. guerrier à ailes de casque (824), innovation qui demeurera sans suite dans l'imagerie.

Chaussures et coiffures ailées sont des attributs synonymes, d'inégale ancienneté et d'inégale fréquence, qui se trouvent tantôt dans un rapport d'exclusion (coiffure ailée + pieds nus: 481. 599; coiffure ailée + bottes aptères: 702-703. 612. 656 bis), tantôt dans un rapport de cumul (578. 484. 579. 593-594. 631. 656 bis. 743). On constate que trois des occurrences se rapportent à H. Psychopompe dont les missions requièrent toutes les ressources des attributs magiques (593-594. 631).

Pour la question de l'origine des attributs d'H., on se contentera de renvoyer à la bibliographie, sans revenir sur un débat sans issue. A l'âge où les dieux grecs prennent forme imagée et connaissent pour nous leur véritable naissance, est-ce l'Hermahes des tablettes crète-mycénienues qui, survivant aux siècles obscurs, revêt le costume et les insignes que nous venons de décrire?

Les seuls faits établis sont ceux que nous avons relevés en introduction: chez Homère, H. possède la rhados, mais ni le caducée (que rien n'autorise à reconnaître dans la mystérieuse baguette «à triple feuille» des v. 529-530 de l'h. Merc.), ni les chaussures, ni la coiffure ailées. L'état trop lacunaire du Jugement de Pâris sur l'olpé Chigi ne permet pas de vérifier si le porteur du caducée était également chaussé, dès les années 640, des πτερόεντα πόδια. Il est aléatoire de restituer les mécanismes mentaux et techniques par lesquels les peintres orientalisants ont construit l'image canonique d'H. Nous avons avancé l'hypothèse de la transposition graphique de récits plus anciens qui déjà avaient donné au dieu vie et figure. Une autre méthode explicative, nullement incompatible avec la précédente, prendrait en compte les modèles de l'iconographie orientale. Ch. Clermont-Ganneau a montré quelles nouvelles existences pouvaient connaître des images étrangères captées et réinterprétées par une culture voisine (L'imagerie phénicienne et la mythologie iconologique chez les Grecs, Et. d'Arch. Or. I [1880]). Le processus se vérifie pour des figures comme celle de Géryon, dont la filiation est possible avec l'image du roi oriental assommant trois adversaires agglutinés en un seul corps. Il a sans doute fonctionné dans l'emprunt d'attitudes comme celle des Gorgones «naïves» de l'amphore proto-attique d'Eleusis, avec leurs étranges jupes fendues dévoilant haut la cuisse g., si semblables par ce détail aux divinités en «posture ascensionnelle» sur les cylindres syriens. Le répertoire de la glyptique orientale ne manque pas d'attributs sacrés, sceptres, masses d'armes, «crosses» et plus particulièrement le «lion club» dont la schématisation évoque, déjà sur les documents d'origine, la forme du caducée. Le disque solaire ailé, assez souvent utilisé comme coiffure (encore chez le personnage en char du bol de Hasanlu: Orthmann, W., AltO 1975, 390-391, fig. 112) ferait même un ancêtre assez ressemblant pour le pétase d'H. Mais qui se risquerait à suivre le cheminement de toutes ces images du Proche-Orient à Corinthe et à Athènes à travers un désert de deux siècles et davantage? Pour ce qui est notamment du pétase ailé, son introduction tardive relève probablement du phénomène de duplication des attributs magiques que l'on observe à la même époque chez Persée: aux πτερόεντα πόδια s'ajoute l'ἄλδος κυνη. Entre H. et Persée, l'un et l'autre secourables aux mortels et un peu sorciers, grands voyageurs, les affinités fonctionnelles ne pouvaient que favoriser les ressemblances iconographiques. Sur une olpé londonienne du P. d'Amasis leurs images se confondent (483).

VIII. Images sans légendes, légendes sans images

Plusieurs de ses fonctions prédisposaient H. à être un personnage de théâtre et une figure de l'imagerie théâtrale. Le messager, le serviteur, le guide, le dieu chthonien ne trouvaient-ils pas sur les vases attiques et italiotes nombre d'occasions d'entrer en scène?

L'origine théâtrale d'une image, on le sait, est moins facile à repérer dans le cas d'une tragédie, notamment quand la matière est d'origine épique, que dans ceux d'une comédie ou d'un drame satyrique. Les parodies burlesques des vases à phylakes (895 bis) ou celles des vases du Cabirion (Wolters, P./Bruns, G., Das Kabirenheiligtum bei Theben I [1940] K 25, 101-102 pl. 33, 2; M 4, 106-107 fig. 5; M 18, 109-110 pl. 37, 2) se reconnaissent aussitôt aux conventions du genre, mais l'argument des pièces ni le rôle d'H. ne sont pas toujours intelligibles (cf. EVP 60-61 pl. 14, 2). L'iconographie de la comédie classique et du drame satyrique laisse quelquefois au spectateur la même insatisfaction: des images qui, à l'évidence, conservent ou transposent un moment de l'action, un souvenir de mise en scène forment pour lui un théâtre muet. Quelles péripéties font qu'H. entraîne vers Dionysos un chœur de vieillards terrorisés (892) ou qu'il danse à pas de loup, en compagnie d'un Satyre, autour d'une belle au miroir (894)? L'H. conduisant des Satyres prisonniers (888) est-il le héros d'un récit folklorique, dans l'esprit des paverga d'Héraclès, conformément à la veine populaire des peintres de lécythes à f.n.? On aimerait ici risquer l'hypothèse d'un drame satyrique puisant dans la matière dont Sophocle tirera plus tard ses Limiers. Pour restituer la fin de la pièce, il est plus plaisant et plus conforme au genre littéraire d'imaginer les chasseurs devenus gibier que la platitude d'un happy end reproduisant le canevas de l'hymne homérique.

Quand on s'interroge légitimement sur des absences d'images, il ne faut pas perdre de vue les simples données de la chronologie. L'œuvre d'Aristophane, dont la Paix montrait H. dans un grand rôle comique et multipliait les situations les plus picturales, n'a pas trouvé son peintre, probablement parce qu'elle vient trop tard dans l'histoire de la céramique décorée d'Athènes. Ce n'est pas faute d'intérêt du public pour le plus populaire des dieux qu'un jeu de scène comme celui de la consultation de la statue est demeuré iconographiquement lettre morte. Ce n'est pas non plus faute de savoir-faire de la part des artistes, puisque mainte séquence du répertoire (p. ex. 143, dans l'imagerie du pilier hermaïque) pouvait servir de schéma à la représentation. La mise en images de tels jeux de scène eût été d'autant moins inattendue qu'ils n'étaient pas exceptionnels au théâtre et pouvaient s'organiser autour de l'effigie d'H. lui-même. A la fin des Nuées (Aristoph. Nubes 1478-1485) Strepsiade fait amende honorable de ses folies devant l'hermès dressé à sa porte. Des hermès ont été mis en scène par Platon le comique (CAF I frg. 188) et par Phrynichos le comique (CAF I frg. 58), malheureusement dans des contextes qui pour l'essentiel nous échappent (cf. Kassel, R., «Dialoge mit Statuen», ZPE 51, 1983).

1-12). Des tableaux de phylakes à piliers hermaïques (181a-b) y trouvent peut-être leur clef.

Des rôles que joue le dieu dans la tragédie ou de sa présence invisible au cœur de l'action tragique presque rien n'a été recueilli par les imagiers d'Athènes, très peu par ceux de Grande-Grèce. Le cas de l'Orestie est frappant. Au début des Choéphores c'est d'H. le Noc-turne que les justiciers réclament l'alliance. C'est lui qui les introduit dans le palais, ayant embrumé les esprits et endormi la vigilance de la cour avant de «diriger la joute des épées» (Aischyl. Choeph. 728-729). Chez Sophocle (El. 111), il est longuement invoqué comme le garant du droit des morts. Quelques vases italiotes (897) transmettent l'écho affaibli de cette puissante poésie infernale: on voit H. couronnant la stèle d'Agamemnon, mêlé aux visiteurs du tombeau. Jamais il n'est figuré aux côtés de l'Oreste des Euménides sur la route vers Athènes, bien qu'Apollon ait expressément confié à la garde du Pompaïos le parricide traqué par les Furies (Kossatz, Dramen 111 K 39 pl. 19). Les fonctions que retient le plus souvent l'iconographie théâtrale étaient finalement impropres à mettre le personnage d'H. en valeur. C'est le «valet de Zeus» dénoncé par Prométhée qui conduit Ixion au supplice (732), sans que l'on sache du reste si l'épisode représenté par le P. d'Amphitrite avait appartenu à la pièce d'Eschyle. En revanche, la scène d'un cratère italiote de Berlin, dont la composition transpose et reconstruit en une seule image les temps forts de l'Antiope d'Euripide, donne la vedette à H.: tandis que Dirce subit son châtiment (→ Dirke), il apparaît au-dessus de la grotte, en θεός ἐκ μηχανῆς, pour empêcher le meurtre inutile du roi Lykos (Trendall, PP 7 n° 2 pl. 2 a; RM 84, 1977, 214 pl. 111, 2). Le plus souvent toutefois, quelle que soit l'action, H. est représenté dans des rôles qui sont ordinairement les siens dans l'ensemble de l'iconographie mythologique: celui du personnage discourant qui, p. ex., persuade Achille d'accepter la rançon d'Hector (Les Phrygiens: Kossatz, Dramen K4-K5 pl. 2); celui du spectateur passif et lointain observant ou commentant tour à tour le supplice d'Ixion (LCS 338 n° 787), le deuil de Niobé (Kossatz, Dramen K 24 pl. 9), la délivrance d'Andromède (Séchan, Études 257 fig. 76) ou la folie meurtrière de Lycurgue (Séchan, Études 72 fig. 21; Cook, R. M., Greek Painted Pottery [1972] 197 fig. 53). A la force des textes poétiques répond, chez les peintres, la banalité de schémas convenus. Il n'y a pas une «illustration» des rôles d'H. (ni des autres personnages de théâtre), si ce n'est au sens où l'entendait L. Séchan. L'iconographie théâtrale d'H. a les faiblesses de toute iconographie d'illustrateur, qui «ne doit voir qu'avec les yeux d'un autre», selon le mot de Théophile Gautier. Puisant non pas à la source des mythes, mais dans un genre artistique dont le langage diffère du sien, elle invente moins qu'elle ne soustrait. On ne s'étonnera pas qu'aux meilleures époques de la peinture de vases les meilleurs peintres se soient abstenus de cet exercice. C'est de poète à poète que passe l'héritage: du flamboyant H. d'Aristophane à l'héroïque factotum de Lucien (cf. Sources litt.), dont la profession de foi, à la révolte près, s'accorde si curieusement avec celle du Leporello de Don Juan, au dé-but de l'acte I du «dramma giocoso» de Lorenzo da Ponte.

L'ubiquité iconographique d'H., sur laquelle on a insisté au début de ce Commentaire, connaît des limites que l'imagerie théâtrale vient de révéler. Il y a d'autres légendes sans images, en particulier celles relatives à l'H. magicien et guérisseur connu surtout par la poésie archaïque. Pas plus que l'H. de la végétation, il n'a acquis droit de cité dans l'art de la Grèce classique. Les impossibilités de la figuration expliquent bien des lacunes dans une iconographie qui innove en gérant un répertoire de formes où l'insolite trouve difficilement sa place. Comment représenter avec les moyens des arts graphiques grecs l'histoire d'H. retrouvant et remettant à Zeus les tendons coupés par → Typhon et dissimulés dans une peau d'ours (Apolod. bibl. 1 [42] 6, 3; Opp. hal. 3, 9-28)? Même un épisode célèbre comme la délivrance d'Arès captif dans la jarre des Aloades (Hom. Il. 5, 385-391) n'est pas attesté avec certitude dans l'imagerie. Un scarabée étrusque montre H. penché sur une urne dont émerge une tête barbue: A. Furtwängler aussi bien que H. B. Walters interprètent la scène comme la conjuration d'un esprit (AG 199 n° 32 pl. 20; BMGems 93 n° 765 pl. 13), bien qu'elle diffère sensiblement des évocations d'eidōla que nous avons cru rencontrer dans la glyptique (644-645).

IX. Hermès à la croisée d'autres chemins

De tels documents conduisent à des frontières qu'H. passe, mais au-delà desquelles l'historien de l'art grec n'est plus dans son domaine. Des légendes dont la lettre est inconnue irriguent l'ancien tissu de l'imagerie. La peinture de vases étrusque accueillie dans ses compositions l'H. grec à l'image duquel elle forme aussi un Charun hellénisé (de Ruyt, F., Charun, démon étrusque de la mort [1934]). Un stamnos de Vulci, conservé au Mus. Greg. Etr. du Vatican, peut ici servir de référence (de Ruyt 81 n° 87 fig. 36-37). Sur l'une des faces, H. précède le char du rapt de Perséphone par Hadès (de Phersipnai par Eita), tandis qu'émerge du sol Charun coiffé du pétase et muni du caducée; sur l'autre, le Psychopompe conduit un guerrier devant le même Charun en position d'anodos. Des urnes de Volterra, avec représentations du voyage d'outre-tombe, montrent Charun nu et chaussé de bottes ailées, sur le modèle de l'H. guide et maître de l'attelage. Ces contaminations, qui relèvent d'un phénomène répandu, produisent quelquefois de véritables redoublements iconographiques, en Etrurie et hors d'Etrurie (exemples apuliens et campaniens avec deux et même trois H. dans la même scène: Schauenburg, K., dans Festschr. U. Hausmann [1982] 234 n. 51; cf. etiam Moret, Ilioupersis 73 n. 4). H. a passé d'autres frontières, engendrant d'autres iconographies syncrétiques qui ne sont pas de notre ressort. Le catalogue en donne un très bref aperçu (993-997). Signalons seulement l'usage qui est fait d'H. dans l'imagerie gréco-phénicienne, amplement représentée au Mus. de Palerme et illustrée par les principales expositions consa-crées à l'art phénicien (De Carthage à Kairouan, Cat. exp. Paris [1983]; Les Phéniciens, Cat. exp. Venise [1988]). Sur les objets de la vie quotidienne, sur les bijoux, sur les stèles funéraires le caducée joute le signe de Tanit.

Notre enquête s'achèverait sur une illusion d'optique si elle laissait entendre qu'H. n'a poursuivi sa carrière qu'en puisant ses forces dans d'autres cultes et d'autres mythes que ceux qui avaient présidé à sa naissance et à sa maturité. Les modalités selon lesquelles son image rencontre, côtoie, influence celle du Mercure romain constituent un faisceau de problèmes qui sont abordés ailleurs. Il faut seulement insister ici sur la vitalité de son imagerie traditionnelle qui se manifeste sous des formes très diverses, religieuses et décoratives, populaires et savantes, entre l'ép. hellénistique et l'ép. impériale. Les effigies produites à grande échelle dans les ateliers néo-attiques sont fabrication de copistes (supra p. 378), mais c'est précisément la demande et la diffusion d'anciens modèles qui est significative en tant que phénomène culturel. Jusqu'à la fin de l'Antiquité l'image d'H. ne connaît aucune sclérose. Quand un nouveau genre céramique, celui des bols à reliefs, constitue à la fin du III^e s. av. J.-C. son répertoire figuré, H. en fait partie. Sur un vase d'Athènes, on le voit guider l'attelage d'Hadès comme sur la fresque de Vergina 440 (Rotroff, S., Agora XXII 67 n° 193 pl. 36-37. 80). Dans l'art funéraire, conservatoire de formes et de croyances, le signum fidei du pilier hermaïque est gravé sur des stèles thessaliennes du II^e s. ap. J.-C. (Gesichter. Griech. und röm. Bildnisse aus Schweizer Besitz, Cat. exp. Berne [1982-83] 232-233 n° 99). Dans des compositions inspirées d'Homère, mais désormais chargées d'allusions eschatologiques, la figure du dieu se renouvelle subtilement. Un sarcophage de Tyr décoré de l'épisode de la rançon d'Hector (Chéhab, M., BullMusBeyrouth 21, 1968, 10-44 pl. 12), montre derrière le groupe de la supplication d'Achille par Priam H. s'entretenant avec une femme voilée, Briséis ou Thétis. La nudité du dieu sous la draperie, la gravité du maintien évoquent le Psychopompe des lécythes attiques en face des jeunes mortes. Mais la perplexité du geste exprime des interrogations auxquelles la légende grecque cesse peut-être de répondre. Suivre H. plus avant serait s'engager sur des chemins qui conduisent aux mystères sans figures du Trismégiste.

GÉRARD SIEBERT

HERMES/MERCURIUS → Mercurius

HERMES/MERCURIUS (IN PERIPHERIA OCCIDENTALI) → Mercurius (in peripheria occidentali)

HERMIAS

(Epulag) Mythologische Jünglingsgestalt von Iasos, der dort zusammen mit einem Delphin auf tragische Weise umkam.

LITERARISCHE QUELLEN: Ail. nat. 6, 15; Plut. de soll. an. 984e-f; Hegesidemos, FHG IV 422; Pollux 9, 84; Duris, FGH 76 F 7. Ailianos, Plutarch, Hegesidemos berichten von einem Jüngling, der bei Iasos zusammen mit einem Delphin schwamm und dabei verunglückte. Bei dessen Tod verendete dann auch das Tier, indem es mit dem Leichnam auf Land setzte. Hegesidemos benennt dabei diesen Jüngling Hermias, und Ailianos wie auch Plutarch ergänzen, daß zur Erinnerung an diese Begebenheiten Münzen geschlagen würden, auf denen H. auf einem Delphin reitend zu sehen ist.

Duris erzählt eine ähnliche Geschichte, die sich in Iasos ereignete, spricht aber von einem gewissen Dionysios, der mit einem Delphin schwamm und nicht dasselbe schreckliche Ende erlitt, und bringt ihn in Verbindung mit Alexander d. Gr. Hegesidemos erklärt näher, daß dieser Jüngling durch den makedonischen König als Priester des Poseidon in Babylon eingesetzt wurde, weil der König Dionysios' Freundschaft zu dem Delphin als ein göttliches Zeichen betrachtete. Hegesidemos scheidet diesen Bericht jedoch klar von der Legende des Hermias, und die Darstellungen des Jünglings auf den Münzen von Iasos werden von allen oben genannten antiken Schriftstellern auch nur auf Hermias, niemals auf Dionysios, bezogen.

BIBLIOGRAPHIE: Hicks, E. L., JHS 8, 1887, 93-95.

KATALOG

1. Stele. Einst auf dem Grabhügel von Hermias und dem Delphin in Iasos. - Ail. nat. 6, 15; Pottier, E./Reinach, S., BCH 7, 1883, 445-446; Hicks 93-94. - Nach Ailianos H. auf dem Delphin reitend.

2.* AR Drachme oder Hemidrachme, Iasos, um 450 v. Chr. - Babelon, Traité I 1 (1907) 413-415 Nr. 689-690 Taf. 18, 1-2; MuM Liste 516, 1988, Nr. 58 Abb. - Vs.: H. auf einem Delphin nach l. reitend, in der Rechten bisweilen ein Objekt haltend. Rs.: Quadratum incusum.

3.* (= Artemis 1088 [Rs.], = Iasos 1 [Rs.]) AR Drachme oder Hemidrachme, AE, Iasos, um 250-190 v. Chr. und kaiserzeitlich*. - BMC Caria 124-126, 1-11. 13. 15 Taf. 21, 1-7; Imhoof-Blumer, MGr 311 Nr. 65; KIMI 135-136 Nr. 1-3 Taf. 5, 11; Grose, McClean II 189 Nr. 8501-8502 Taf. 297, 10-11; Forrer, Weber III 1, 373-374 Nr. 6522-6523. 6525 Taf. 230;

HERMES (IN PERIPHERIA ORIENTALI) → LIMC Suppl.

HERMES/MERCURIUS HELIOPOLITANUS → Heliopolitani Dei

HERMES/KOUTBA → LIMC Suppl.

HERMES/TURMS → Turms

SNG Copenhagen 409-417; SNG v. Aulock 2556. 8095-8096. - Rs.: H. mit Delphin nach r. schwimmend und diesen mit dem l. Arm umfassend, bisweilen Köcher oder Köcher und Bogen darunter, auf den kaiserzeitlichen Münzen manchmal ΕΡΜΙΑΣ. Vs.: Kopf des Apollon oder Herakles, oder Köpfe des Apollon und der Artemis, oder Lyra oder Iasos.

DEUTUNG AUF HERMIAS AUSZUSCHIEDEN

4. (= Eros 182) Getriebene Bronzeatlasche einer Hydria. Paris, Louvre Br. 4367 (Myr 597). Aus Myrina. - Pottier, E./Reinach, S., BCH 7, 1883, 443-447 Taf. 5; idem, La nécropole de Myrina I (1887) 495-499. 581 Nr. 488 Taf. 50, 2; Diehl, E., Die Hydria (1964) 40. 42. 221 Nr. B 184. - Ende 4. Jh. v. Chr. - Geflügelter Eros mit Delphin nach l. schwimmend und diesen mit l. Arm umfassend.

KOMMENTAR

Neben einer nur literarisch überlieferten Darstellung des Iasos mit dem Delphin auf deren angeblichem Grabhügel (1) kennen wir bisher nur zwei Szenen auf Münzen von Iasos (2-3), auf denen H. entweder auf dem Delphin reitet oder mit ihm schwimmt und ihn mit dem linken Arm umfaßt. Ob diese Wiedergabe die bekannte Stele auf dem Grabhügel oder ein anderes in Iasos aufgestelltes Monument reflektiert, muß jedoch offen bleiben. Eine von Pottier und Reinach ebenfalls auf H. gedeutete Gruppe auf einer Bronzeatlasche einer Hydria (4) zeigt keinen einzigen Anhaltspunkt, der für eine derartige Interpretation sprechen könnte. Die Flügel des Jünglings weisen hingegen klar auf Eros, und eine Deutung auf H. ist daher zurückzuweisen. RAINER VOLLKOMMER

HERMIONE

(Ἑρμιόνη, étr. Ermania) Fille de → Menelaos et d'→ Helene et, selon la version de l'Odyssée, seul enfant du couple. Elle fut abandonnée par sa mère dès l'âge de neuf ans lorsque celle-ci s'enfuit avec → Alexandros. Promise par Ménélas à → Neoptolemos, fils d'→ Achilleus, le mariage fut célébré à Sparte (après la guerre de Troie), d'où H. devait rejoindre son époux. Selon une seconde version, H. aurait été fiancée à → Orestes par → Tyndareos, son grand-père, dès avant la guerre de Troie. Mais Neoptolème la ravit à Oreste dont le mariage était resté sans enfant et il meurt à Delphes de la main d'Oreste seul ou de ses compagnons. H. aurait ensuite épousé → Diomedes.

SOURCES LITTÉRAIRES: Les sources littéraires concernant H. sont peu nombreuses et assez contradictoires, mais nous donnent cependant quelques détails précieux. Ainsi Hom. Od. 4, 12-14 indique sa parenté et souligne sa beauté: «car d'Hélène les dieux lui (à Ménélas) avaient refusé toute autre descendance, après qu'elle avait eu d'abord cette H. aussi belle et charmante que l'Aphrodite d'or». Cependant dans Hes. frg. 175 Merkelbach/West et Apollod. bibl. 3, 11, 1, → Nikostratos est considéré comme son frère, lui aussi un enfant du couple. La beauté d'H. sera aussi célébrée plus tard, en particulier chez Prop. 1, 4, 6. Eur. Or. 63-65. 1184 mentionne qu'H. fut abandonnée par sa mère lorsque celle-ci s'enfuit avec Pâris, et confiée alors à Clytemnestre; Apollod. epit. 3, 3 précise qu'H. avait neuf ans lors de son abandon par Hélène.

Plusieurs versions existent au sujet de son mariage. Selon la plus ancienne, celle d'Hom. Od. 4, 3-9, Ménélas l'aurait promise en mariage à Néoptolème, fils d'Achille, lors du siège de Troie et le mariage aurait ensuite été célébré à Sparte (au moment même de l'arrivée de Télémaque); cf. aussi Apollod. epit. 6, 14. Mais une autre version voulait qu'H. ait été promise à Oreste dès avant la guerre de Troie, cette fois-ci par Tyndare son grand-père (ou encore par Ménélas lui-même). Cette version se retrouve chez les Tragiques dans l'Hermioné de Sophocle (TrGF IV p. 192-193), mais aussi dans Eur. Andr. 966-970.

L'Andromaque d'Euripide traite de la jalousie d'H., alors épouse de Néoptolème, mais sans enfant, à l'égard d'Andromaque, esclave de Néoptolème et qui lui a donné un fils (ou plusieurs); ce fils est appelé Molossos (Paus. 1, 11, 1). H. projette de l'assassiner avec la complicité de son père Ménélas (Eur. Andr. 155-180. 366-382. 486-493). Oreste arrive et veut reprendre H. et assassiner ou faire assassiner Néoptolème parti à Delphes (Eur. Andr. 993-1008), meurtre que rapporte le messager (Eur. Andr. 1085-1160; cf. aussi Hyg. fab. 122-123). Dans Eur. Or., c'est Oreste lui-même qui veut assassiner H. (1573-1624) en la menaçant de son épée. Mais il finira par l'épouser sur l'ordre d'Apollon et Néoptolème ne l'épousera jamais (Eur. Or. 1653-1655). D'Oreste, H. aurait eu un fils, Tisaménos (Apollod. epit. 6, 28 et Paus. 2, 18, 6).

D'autres titres de tragédies portant le nom d'Oreste nous sont parvenus, mais il est impossible de reconstituer leur trame.

La légende d'H. figure aussi chez Verg. Aen. 3, 325-329 où Andromaque se plaint de l'abandon de Néoptolème en faveur d'H. et chez Ov. her. 8, 17-18. 121-122. Ici, H. raconte ses malheurs dans une lettre qu'elle adresse à Oreste, où elle lui demande de la sauver de Néoptolème qui l'a ravie et menace de se suicider.

BIBLIOGRAPHIE: Comotti, A., EAA III (1960) 424 s.v. «Ermania»; Dörig, J., «Kalamis-Studien», Jdl 80, 1965, 166-177; v. Geisau, H., KIPauly II (1967) 1078 s.v. «Hermione»; Krappe, A. H., «Hermione», RhM 84, 1935, 276-286; Robert, Heldensage 3, 1326-1328. 1461-1469; Weizsäcker, F., ML I 2 (1886-90) 2433-2434 s.v. «Hermione 2»; Zwicker, J., RE VIII 1 (1912) 841-843 s.v. «Hermione 4».

CATALOGUE

A. Hermione seule

1. Statue, autrefois à Delphes, mentionnée par Paus. 10, 16, 4 et attribuée par lui à Calamis. Aucun autre détail ne nous étant parvenu, il paraît impossible d'essayer d'y reconnaître une œuvre précise. L'étude de J. Dörig signale les différentes interprétations tentées par ses prédécesseurs et suggère que le prototype devait être celui de l'une des suppliantes Barberini, hypothèse malheureusement impossible à démontrer.

B. Oreste menace Hermione

REPRÉSENTATIONS PROBABLES

2. (= Alkmaion 13* avec bibl.) Coupe attique à f.r. Londres, BME 120. De Nola. - *ARV*² 1280, 61: P. de Marlay (Alkmaion et Eriphyle?); *Add*² 358; Dörig 168-171 fig. 13 (Oreste et H.); Brommer, *Vasenlisten*³ 452, 1 (Oreste et H.); Schefold/Jung, SB V 87. 370-371 fig. 330 (plutôt Oreste et H. qu'Alkmaion et Eriphyle). - Vers 440/430 av. J.-C. - Int.: une jeune femme assise vers la dr. sur un autel tend les deux bras, implorant un homme barbu, vêtu d'une chlamyde et coiffé d'un pétase, qui la menace de son épée dégainée (on n'aperçoit que le fourreau dans la main g.).

3. (= Alkmaion 14 avec bibl., = Apollon 981*) Oenochoe attique à f.r. Cassel, Staatl. Kunstslg. T 43. - *ARV*² 1206, 1: P. de Schuwalow (Ion et Créuse?); *Add*² 344; Lezzi-Hafter, A., Der Schuwalow-Maler (1976) 105, S 33 pl. 100; Schefold, SB IV fig. 86 et SB V 371. - 430-420 av. J.-C. - Un jeune homme imberbe vêtu d'une chlamyde et coiffé d'un pilos se précipite, l'épée dégainée dans la main dr., le fourreau dans la main g., vers une jeune femme aux longs cheveux dénoués flottant sur les épaules, vêtue d'un chiton. Assise sur un autel, elle lève les deux bras en un geste de terreur. Entre les deux personnages, Apollon debout, la main g. tenant son laurier, la dr. appuyée contre sa hanche, drapé dans un himation, s'interpose en regardant vers le jeune homme. Diverses interprétations ont été données: outre celle de Beazley, citons en particulier le meurtre d'Eriphyle par Alcméon; mais la jeunesse de la femme assise rend l'interprétation d'H. beaucoup plus probable, et Schefold insiste sur la signification de la présence d'Apollon.

C. Hermione menace Andromaque

REPRÉSENTATION POSSIBLE

4.* Amphore panathénaique lucanienne. Bari, Mus. Arch. 6254. - LCS 103, 536 pl. 53, 2: P. de Dolon; LCS Suppl. 3, 58 D 17; Trendall/Webster, Illustrations I 16 n° III 6, 4; Schmidt, M., Gnomon 52, 1980, 755-756; Schefold, SB V 371 n. 791a. - 400-380 av. J.-C. - Un jeune homme debout, coiffé d'un pilos, vêtu d'une chlamyde, la main dr. sur la hanche, la main g. appuyée à une lance. Une femme drapée est assise sur un autel; un jeune garçon nu, debout sur une marche de l'autel, se blottit contre elle. Tous deux regardent à dr. vers une jeune femme vêtue d'un chiton, debout, vue de trois quarts. De la main dr., elle a saisi l'épaule du garçon et de la g. elle tient une hache perpendiculaire au sol. Selon M. Schmidt, suivie par K. Schefold, il pourrait s'agir d'H. menaçant Andromaque et son fils en présence de Ménélas. La scène pourrait se passer dans le sanctuaire de Thétis (cf. Eur. Andr. 40-46).

D. Oreste menace Andromaque en présence d'Hermione

INTERPRÉTATION À REJETER

5. (= Andromache I 57 avec bibl.) Kalpis attique à f.r. Nauplie, Mus. 11609 (180). - *ARV*² 1061, 154: groupe de Polygnotos; *Add*² 323; Kahil, L., BCH 75, 1951, 316-322; Dörig 172 n. 150. - La femme qui presse son sein, assise sur l'autel et menacée par Oreste, est certainement Clytemnestre, et la jeune femme qui fuit vers la dr. doit alors être Electre ou une suivante (Kahil).

E. Scène de gynécée

6.* (= Helene 382*) Hydrie attique à f.r. Athènes, Céramique 2712. D'Athènes. - *ARV*² 1313, 6; 1690. 1708: P. de Meidias; *Add*² 362; AM 89, 1974 pl. 67, 1; AM 90, 1975 pl. 48, 1; 49, 4; 50, 3; Burn, L., The Meidias Painter (1987) 69-70 M6 pl. 44-45. - 410 av. J.-C. - Sur l'épaule, Hélène, un Eros sur ses genoux, entourée par Phylonoé, Phoibé et Clytemnestre à g., H. (inscr.), Hilaïra et deux autres femmes à dr.; H. est représentée adulte.

F. Hermione enfant dans les bras d'Hélène

Miroirs étrusques

7. (= Aphrodite/Turan 22, = Helene/Elina 4* avec bibl.) Paris, Cab. Méd. 1284. - 2^e quart du V^e s. av. J.-C. - Hélène, couchée sur une kliné, étreint de son bras g. la petite H. et regarde Aphrodite debout devant elle. La tête et le cou de l'enfant surgissent du vêtement dans lequel est drapée sa mère. Elle a les cheveux bouclés, mi-longs.

8. (= Alexandros 53* avec bibl., = Helene/Elina 5*) Rome, Villa Giulia 16691. De Préneste. - 2^e quart du V^e s. av. J.-C. - Représentation quasi identique mais seule la tête de l'enfant, qui a les cheveux courts et sans boucles, apparaît, avec l'inscription Ermania, et, devant le lit d'Hélène, Pâris est assis sur un escabeau.

COMMENTAIRE

Les sources littéraires concernant le personnage d'H. sont, on l'a vu, relativement pauvres; elles ne contribuent que peu à éclairer l'iconographie d'ailleurs maigre du personnage. Seuls les Tragiques, peut-être Sophocle, mais en particulier Euripide lui accordent une place importante et utilisent au moins deux versions concernant son mariage. L'iconographie, elle, est souvent incertaine. Cependant au moins deux épisodes pourraient être représentés dans l'art grec atti-que: H. menacée par Oreste (peut-être une invention d'Euripide dans son Oreste: cf. Sources littéraires) en 2-3 où elle apparaît, soit réfugiée sur un autel, soit encore en fuite, menacée par Oreste; l'autel ici n'est qu'un motif iconographique lié à un personnage menacé et implorant (cf. Moret, Ilioupersis 232-233). D'autre part, l'amphore panathénaique lucanienne 4 nous donnerait une version de l'Andromaque d'Euripide avec une H. menaçant Molossos et Andromaque. Ce sont donc les Tragiques qui auraient inspiré les rares représentations d'H. dont le rôle, en tant que seule fille d'Hélène, à la beauté éclatante chantée par Homère, lui aurait permis de prétendre à une illustration plus riche. Sur l'hydrie 6, où elle se trouve associée à Hélène, elle est mêlée à quelques jeunes femmes parfaitement indéterminées: seule l'inscription nous permet de la reconnaître. Aucun document d'époque romaine ne semble la représenter avec certitude. Les deux miroirs étrusques 7 et 8 illustrent d'une manière réaliste et naïve le pouvoir d'Aphrodite engageant Hélène à fuir avec Paris-Alexandros en dépit de la présence de sa fille ici figurée en petit enfant.

LILLY KAHIL

HERMIPPOS → Theseus

HERMOS

(Ἑρμος) Einer der vier Ströme, die das westliche Kleinasien von Osten her durchfließen. Der H. entspringt am Dindymosgebirge (Murat Dagh) im westlichen Phrygien, fließt durch Lydien und mündet zwischen Phokaia und Smyrna in den hermeischen Meerbusen (Ἑρμειος κόλπος). Heutiger Name Gediz. Im Mythos ist H., wie die meisten Ströme der griechischen Welt, Sohn des Okeanos und der Tethys (Hes. theog. 343). Er ist auf zahlreichen Münzen der Kaiserzeit dargestellt; die Prägestätten liegen entlang dem Flußlauf in Phrygien, Lydien, Ionien und der Aeolis.

LITERARISCHE QUELLEN bei Büchner und Drexler.

BIBLIOGRAPHIE: Büchner, L., RE VIII 1 (1912) 903-904 s.v. «Hermos 2»; Drexler, H., ML I 2 (1886-90) 2436-2438 s.v. «Hermos 1»; Imhoof-Blumer, Flussg. passim; Klose, D. O. A., Die Münzprägung von Smyrna in der römischen Kaiserzeit (1987) 37; Magie, D., Roman Rule in Asia Minor (1950) 36.

KATALOG

a) Gelagerter Flußgott

Einheitstypus, der in der Folge nicht im Einzelnen beschrieben wird: H., halbnackt, liegt nach l., auf Quellgefäß gestützt; er hält Füllhorn und Schilfrohr oder Blütenzweig oder zwei Ähren. Meist ist H. mit Inschrift ΕΡΜΟΣ bezeichnet.

1.* AE, Bageis (Lydien), 2.-frühes 3. Jh. n. Chr. - BMC Lydia 32, 9 Taf. 4, 6; Imhoof-Blumer, Flußg. 296, 303 Taf. 10, 9; SNG v. Aulock 2914. - H. mit Ähren. Vs.: Kopf der Boule.

2.* AE, Bageis, frühes 3. Jh. n. Chr. - BMC Lydia 32, 7, 8; Imhoof-Blumer, Flußg. 296, 304 Taf. 10, 10. - H. mit Schilfrohr. Vs.: Kopf des Demos.

3.* AE, Kadoi (Phrygien), Gordianus III. (228-244). - BMC Phrygia 123, 35. 36 Taf. 15, 4; Imhoof-Blumer, Flußg. 322, 371 Taf. 12, 9; SNG Copenhagen Taf. 7, 254. - Archon Kleopator. H., bärtig, mit Füllhorn und Schilfrohr. - Ebenso, um 240 v. Chr.: BMC 117, 9 Taf. 14, 11 (Vs. Kopf des Demos); Imhoof-Blumer, Flußg. 321, 370 Taf. 12, 8 (Vs. behelmter bärtiger Kopf).

4.* AE, Kyme (Aeolis), Hadrian (117-138 n. Chr.). - BMC Troas usw., 118, 132. - H. mit Schilfrohr. - Ebenso, um 180 n. Chr.: BMC 116, 112 Taf. 22, 12; Imhoof-Blumer, Flußg. 277, 257; SNG v. Aulock 7700 (Vs. Kopf des Synkletos). - Ebenso, im Feld Baum: BMC 115, 108 (Vs. Kopf des Synkletos).

5.* AE, Magnesia am Sipylus (Lydien), Domitia (Gattin des Domitian, 81-96 n. Chr.). - BMC Lydia 146, 56; SNG v. Aulock 3003. - H. mit Zweig und Füllhorn. - Ebenso, H. mit Füllhorn: BMC 140, 19 Taf. 16, 3; Imhoof-Blumer, Flußg. 302, 318 (Vs. Herakleskopf). - Weitere Varianten des 2. bis 3. Jh. n. Chr. (nur mit Zweig oder Schilfrohr): BMC 142, 33; 143, 38; 148, 67. 68; Imhoof-Blumer, Flußg. 302, 319.

6. AE, Mostene (Lydien), 2. Jh. n. Chr. - Cox, D. H., A Tarsus Coin Collection in the Adana Museum, NNM 92 (1941) 10, 54 Taf. 2, 54. - H. mit Schilfrohr. Vs.: Tychekopf.

7.* AE, Saïtta (Lydien), Otacilia (Gattin des Philippus I., 244-249 n. Chr.). - BMC Lydia 225, 66; SNG v. Aulock 3106. - H. mit Zweig. - Ebenso: Julia Mamaea, Mutter des Severus Alexander († 235 n. Chr.), Paris, Cab. Méd.; Tranquillina, Gattin des Gordianus III. (238-244 n. Chr.), Paris, Cab. Méd. - Ebenso, H. mit Füllhorn und Schilfrohr: BMC 216, 23. 25-27 Taf. 23, 5; Imhoof-Blumer, Flußg. 302, 320 Taf. 10, 21; SNG v. Aulock 3088. 3089 (Vs. Kopf des Aziotenos oder des Synkletos).

8.* AE, Sardes (Lydien), Sabina (Gattin des Hadrian, † 138 v. Chr.). - BMC Lydia 257, 136 Taf. 26, 9. - H. mit Schilfrohr und Füllhorn. - Ebenso, 3. Jh. n. Chr., Imhoof-Blumer, Flußg. 304, 324; SNG Copenhagen Taf. 15, 511 (Vs. Büste des Men Askenos). - Ebenso mit Büste der Lydia: InvWadd 5221.

9.* AE, Silandos (Lydien), 2. Jh. n. Chr. - Imhoof-Blumer, Flußg. 305, 329 Taf. 10, 28. (Vs. Athenabüste). - Ebenso mit Herakleskopf: BMC Lydia 278, 2 Taf. 28, 1; Imhoof-Blumer, Flußg. 305, 330.

10.* AE, Smyrna (Ionien), Titus und Domitian (79-81 n. Chr.). - Imhoof-Blumer, Flußg. 286, 277. 278 Taf. 9, 16. 17; Klose 235-237 (vollständige Liste) Taf. 27. 28. - H. mit Füllhorn und zwei oder drei Ähren.

11.* AE, Tabala (Lydien), Julia Mamaea, Mutter des Severus Alexander († 235 n. Chr.). - InvWadd 3505; SNG v. Aulock 3197. - H. mit Schilfrohr und Füllhorn. - Ebenso, Gordianus III. und Tranquillina

(228-244 n. Chr.): Paris, Cab. Méd. - H. mit Zweig. - Ebenso, Vs. Kopf des Synkletos: BMC Lydia 288, 1 Taf. 11, 4; Imhoof-Blumer, Flußg. 307, 333; SNG v. Aulock 3190. 8270. - H. mit Schilfrohr und Füllhorn.

12.* AE, Temnos (Aeolis), Philippus II. (244-249 n. Chr.). - BMC Troas usw., 148, 38; Imhoof-Blumer, Flußg. 277, 260; SNG v. Aulock 1680. - H. mit Zweig. - Ebenso, Otacilia, Gattin des Philippus I. (244-249 n. Chr.): BMC 148, 36 Taf. 29, 10. - Ebenso, H. mit Füllhorn und Zweig, 2. Jh. n. Chr.: Imhoof-Blumer, Flußg. 277, 258. 259 Taf. 8, 24. 25 (Rs. Stehende Aphrodite).

b) Gelagerter Flußgott mit Kranz

13.* AE, Sardes (Lydien), Julia Mamaea, Mutter des Severus Alexander († 235 n. Chr.). - Imhoof-Blumer, Flußg. 304, 326 Taf. 10, 26. - H. wie a, jedoch trägt er in der erhobenen Rechten einen Kranz.

c) Gelagerte Flußgötter: Hermos und Hyllos

14. → Hyllos II 4-5.

d) Gelagerter Flußgott und das Kind → Paktolos

15.* AE, Sardes (Lydien), Gordianus III. (238-244 v. Chr.). - BMC Lydia 270, 188 Taf. 27, 13; Imhoof-Blumer, Flußg. 305, 227; 328 Taf. 10, 27; 11, 1; SNG v. Aulock 3163. - H. nach r. gelagert, in der Rechten Kranz, auf dem Knie der kleine Paktolos.

e) Gelagerter Flußgott, das Kind Paktolos und Leukothea (→ Ino)

16.* AE, Sardes (Lydien), Septimius Severus (193-211 n. Chr.). - Imhoof-Blumer, Flußg. 304, 325 Taf. 10, 25. - H. nach l. gelagert mit Schilfrohr, vor ihm kniet Leukothea, die dem H. den kleinen Paktolos hinreicht.

f) Gelagerter Flußgott und «Nymphe»

17.* AE, Silandos (Lydien), Commodus (180-192 n. Chr.). - BMC Lydia 283, 23 Taf. 28, 7; Imhoof-Blumer, Flußg. 306, 331 Taf. 11, 2; idem, Nomisma 6, 1911, 2-4. - H. nach l. gelagert mit langem Schilfrohr, vor ihm steht eine weibliche Gestalt (Nymphe?), einen Baum umfassend. Beamtenname ETP TATIANOY.

g) Unsichere Deutung: Kopf des Hermos?

18. (= Acheloos 93* mit Lit.) El, Phokaia (Ionien), spätes 6. und frühes 5. Jh. v. Chr., 1/4-Statere (Hekten). - Bodenstedt, F., Die Elektronmünzen von Phokaia und Mytilene (1981) 121 Em. 16 Taf. 2, 4. 43, datiert 625-622 v. Chr.; 132-133 Em. 35 Taf. 4, 2. 45, datiert 521-478; Franke/Hirmer, GrMünze 2 Taf. 179, 597. - Kopf eines als androkephaler Stier dargestellten Flußgottes nach l., daneben kleine Robbe, das Stadtwappen von Phokaia. Rs.: Vertieftes Quadrat.

h) Unsichere und irrtümliche Zuweisungen an Hermos

Kaiserzeitliche Prägungen

19. Alia (Phrygien). Die Deutung lehnt schon Imhoof-Blumer, Flußg. 312 ab.

20. Attaleia (Lydien). Der dargestellte Flußgott muss der → Lykos sein. Noch SNG Cambridge 4846 deutet ihn als H.

KOMMENTAR

Ein Vorschlag ist hier die Deutung des spätarchaischen Flußgötterkopfes der El.-Münzen von Phokaia (18) auf H. Die Forschung nannte ihn bisher stets → Acheloos, dessen Kult aber in Phokaia nicht bezeugt ist. Als Okeanide, den schon Hesiod nennt, hätte der verkörperte H., der unweit von Phokaia ins Meer mündet, in dem Repertoire früher Götterköpfe hier sehr wohl Platz.

Kein anderer Flußgott Kleinasiens ist auf kaiserzeitlichen Münzen so oft dargestellt worden wie der H. Entlang seinem Lauf, von Kadoi bis Kyme und Smyrna nehmen zahlreiche Poleis sein Bild auf. Dabei liegen diese keineswegs alle an seinem Ufer, sondern im weiteren Stadtbereich, so besonders in Saïtta (7. 14. 15), Sardes (8. 15. 16) und Kyme (4), was von besonderem topographischen Interesse ist. In Sardes kommt der → Paktolos als Söhnchen (15. 16), auf den Knien des H. reitend, hinzu, dazu tritt Leukothea (→ Ino), nach einer Überlieferung die Mutter des Paktolos (Ps. Plut. fluv. 7, 2). Die Bildtypen folgen dem in der Kaiserzeit üblichen Flußgötterschema (→ Fluvii), wobei in Smyrna die Ähren wohl die Fruchtbarkeit der H.-Ebene andeuten (10), in Sardes der Kranz wohl auf die hier abgehaltenen Spiele des Koinon Asias (s. BMC Lydia cviii) hinweist.

HERBERT A. CAHN

HERO → Leandros

HERODOROS → Achilleus 656

HERON

(Ἡρων, Ἡρώς chez Kall. epigr. 24) Dieu secondaire de l'Egypte hellénistique et romaine, d'origine étrangère, selon toute probabilité thrace, dont le culte a été implanté et diffusé au départ (milieu du III^e s. av. J.-C. au plus tard) par des mercenaires au service des Ptolémées, mais s'est perpétué, toujours de façon locale, en liaison avec des éléments militaires et en association avec des divinités égyptiennes, au cours de la période impériale en des endroits divers (Fayoum, Alexandrie, nome diospolite).

SOURCES LITTÉRAIRES: H. est un dieu cavalier et représenté comme tel sur sa monture ordinairement au pas bien que plusieurs fois il apparaisse à pied à côté de son cheval, ce qui a excité la verve du grand Callimaque (epigr. 24). C'est aussi un dieu militaire, représenté cuirassé et armé avec des détails variables selon les monuments et les époques, particulièrement nets sur les peintures. Cette militarisation est évidemment due à la qualité de ses premiers et permanents adorateurs. A Magdola, en 118 av. J.-C., un «hipparque à la tête des cavaliers colons» dédie un propylon au dieu et, en 95-94, le sanctuaire reçoit le droit d'asylie à la demande de deux membres de la garde royale. A Théadelphie, anciennement aussi, les auteurs des dédicaces sont des Egyptiens, mais l'aspect militaire du dieu est toujours très accusé sur les peintures d'époque impériale du même endroit. De même, au II^e s. de notre ère, les monnaies du nome diospolite à l'image du dieu cavalier doivent sans nul doute leur origine à la présence sur les lieux d'ailes de cavaliers thraces. Comme sur un certain nombre de reliefs héroïques grecs, le dieu offre une coupe à boire à un grand serpent se dressant sur le bord du tableau, en s'enroulant à l'occasion autour d'un arbre; mais, à l'inverse du modèle grec le plus courant, le serpent se dresse dans le dos du cavalier l'obligeant à se retourner vers lui de façon à se présenter de face au spectateur. C'est cette attitude qui fait l'unité et l'originalité de la série égyptienne (Will 66. 82; Parlasca 24-25).

Bien que sur deux documents seulement (I. 8) figure une dédicace directe à H., les autres données connues, à Théadelphie et Magdola notamment, ne permettent pas de doute sur l'identification du dieu sur l'ensemble des documents du catalogue.

BIBLIOGRAPHIE: Sites et monuments. Théadelphie: Bernard, E., Recueil des inscr. grecques du Fayoum II (1981) 1-9. 19; inscriptions n° 105. 106. 115. 126-128; Breccia, E., Mon. de l'Égypte gréco-romaine I 2 (1926) 85-131; Lefebvre, G., «Le dieu "HPON d'Égypte"» ASAE 20, 1920, 237-250. — Magdola: Bernard, E., o. c. III (1981) 29-36; inscriptions n° 151-154; Bottigelli, P., «Repertorio topografico dei templi e dei sacerdoti dell'Egitto tolemaico II», Aegyptus 22, 1942, 233-235; Jouguet, P., CRAI 1902, 346-359; Rübsam, W. J. R., Götter und Kulte im Faiyum während der griechisch-römisch-byzantinischen Zeit (1974) 121.

Reliefs d'ensemble et monuments divers: Bonnet, H., Reallexikon der ägypt. Religionsgeschichte (1952) 295-296 s. v. «Heron»; Launey, M., Recherches sur les armées hellénistiques (1949-1950) 959-974; Parlasca, K., «Pseudokoptische Reiterheilige», dans Studien zur spätantiken und frühchristlichen Kunst und Kultur des Orients (1982) 19-30.

Origine et interprétation: outre les études mentionnées ou citées dans le catalogue, cf. notamment Capovilla, G., «Il dio Heron in Tracia e in Egitto», RivFil 51, 1923, 424-467; Cumont, F., «Un dieu supposé syrien, associé à Hérôn en Égypte», dans Mélanges syriens offerts à R. Dussaud I (1939) 1-9; Perdrizet, P., Negotium perambulans in tenebris. Études de démonologie gréco-orientale (1922) 8-11; Rostovtzeff, M., «Kleinasiatische und syrische Götter im Römischen Ägypten», Aegyptus 13, 1933, 493-513; Will, E., Le relief cultuel gréco-romain (1955) 56-66. 103. 259; Kiss, Z., «Hérôn, un dieu grec d'Égypte», dans XIII. Int. Kongr. für klass. Arch. Resümées Berlin 1988 (1988) 214.

CATALOGUE

Peintures

1.* Alexandrie, Mus. Gréco-Rom. 20223. De Théadelphie (Baṭn Harit), sanctuaire du dieu Pnéphéros: peinture «sur le montant de droite de la porte centrale menant de la 3^e cour du temple au vestibule qui conduit à la chapelle principale». Etat actuel inconnu. —

Breccia pl. 57. 58; Bernard II n° 126. 127 pls. 31. 32; Launey, Théad. 5. — Deux dédicaces à Héron Soubatos. Pas antérieur au II^e s. ap. J.-C. — Peinture dont la moitié dr. était en partie effacée, en partie détruite. Un homme barbu à la tête radiée, debout de face, en costume militaire et armé d'une lance, verse le contenu d'une coupe sur un petit autel à ses pieds à g., auprès duquel se tient un petit esclave avec cassette et offrandes; à l'arrière-plan, un trépied autour duquel s'enroule un serpent supporte un grand cratère. A dr. en haut, une couronne tenue par une Nikè disparue.

2.* Alexandrie, Mus. Gréco-Rom. 20225. De Théadelphie, sanctuaire de Pnéphéros: peinture sur le montant g. de la porte centrale. Etat actuel inconnu. — Breccia pl. 59; Cumont, pl. 3 fig. 1. 2; Bernard n° 128 pl. 33; Launey, Théad. 6. — Dedicace au Seigneur Souchos; même date que le précédent. Cavalier à la tête radiée et avec couronne de tours, en costume militaire, au pas vers la dr., tendant une coupe à un serpent dans un arbre à g. Dans l'angle supérieur dr., petit personnage debout en tunique à manches et pantalons tenant de la g. une lance et une branche avec serpent et élevant une double hache de la dr.

3. Loc. inc. (coll. privée). Du Fayoum. — Cumont, pls. 1. 2; Launey, Théad. 7. — D'après le style, II^e-III^e s. ap. J.-C. — Panneau de bois entouré de son cadre. Deux personnages debout côte à côte, celui de dr. très semblable à celui de I, celui de g. au petit personnage à la double hache de 2, avec lance et serpent; petite pyrée entre les deux; en bas à dr., un petit esclave noir; à g., personnage drapé (l'auteur de l'ex-voto?).

4. Loc. inc. (coll. privée). Découvert avec 3. — Cumont 5; Launey, Théad. 8. — Peinture sur panneau de bois. Personnage debout semblable à celui de I, offrant une libation sur un brûle-parfum et flanqué d'un petit esclave noir; palmier au serpent à g.

5. Magdola (Medinet an-Nahas). Propylon du temple du dieu H. Etat actuel inconnu (ni dessin ni photographie conservés). — Jouguet 353-354; Collignon, CRAI 1903, 446-449; Lefebvre 242; Launey 961 (Magdola 4); Bernard III n° 153. — II^e/III^e s. ap. J.-C. d'après le style des peintures, voisin de celui de Théadelphie. — Peintures sur les piliers du propylon avec deux fois en façade et deux fois sur les faces intérieures l'image d'un personnage debout semblable à celui de I, avec cheval et arbre au serpent mais aussi avec carquois, chien, biche et crabe. Dedicace à «Sarpis et aux dieux synnaoi».

6. Magdola, second pronaos du temple du dieu H. Etat actuel inconnu (ni dessin ni photographie conservés). — Jouguet 358; Launey 961; v. Bissing, W., Aegyptus 33, 1953, 356; Bernard III n° 154. — II^e/III^e s. ap. J.-C. — De chaque côté de la porte qui ouvre sur l'intérieur du temple, deux fois un personnage apparemment semblable à celui de I avec arc, canthare, serpent et crabe. Dedicace aux «grands dieux invincibles, les héros».

Reliefs

7.* Le Caire, Mus. Egypt. JE 46790. De Théadelphie. — Lefebvre pl. 1; Perdrizet fig. 2; Launey, Théad. 3; Benoit, F., L'héroïsation équestre (1954) pl. 7. 1;

Grimm, G., Kunst der Ptolemäer- und Römerzeit im Ägypt. Mus. Kairo (1975) pl. 72; Bernard II n° 115 pl. 26. — Dedicace d'un propylon à H. deux fois grand, du 27 septembre 67 av. J.-C. Sous un disque solaire ailé à uraeus retombants disposé en arcade, le dieu en costume militaire s'avance au pas vers la dr. en offrant à boire à un grand serpent dressé à g.

8. Le Caire, Mus. Copte 229. Provenance inconnue. Deneuve, G., L'Arte copta, dans Il Mondo delle forme. Antologia universale dell'arte 12, Oriente e Occidente (1970) pl. 4; Parlasca 22 pl. 12. — Date probable: fin de l'ép. hellénistique. — Moitié supérieure d'une stèle à sommet arrondi abritant un disque ailé à uraeus retombants. Dans un cadre rectangulaire approfondi, un cavalier à tête radiée vers la dr. couronné par Nikè volant de la droite et offrant à boire à un serpent enroulé autour d'un arbre à grandes feuilles, à g.

9.* Le Caire, Mus. Egypt. JE 46792. Du Fayoum. — Lefebvre pl. 2; Launey, Arsinoé 1; Bernard II pl. 35. — Date incertaine, sans doute déjà d'ép. romaine. Stèle rectangulaire; le visage du personnage a été arraché. Cavalier cuirassé avec lance sur son cheval au pas vers la dr. et offrant à boire à un serpent entortillé dans l'angle supérieur g.

10.* Le Caire, Mus. Egypt. JE 48824. Provenance inconnue. — Lefebvre, ASAE 24, 1924, 89 fig.; M. Launey, Caire 1, 971. — Date incertaine: «de très basse époque» (G. Lefebvre, o. c.). — Petite dalle de calcaire. Cavalier sans armes sur un cheval cabré vers la g. et offrant à boire à un serpent dressé à dr.

11. Alexandrie, Mus. Gréco-Rom. De Hadra? — Perdrizet 10 fig. 3; Breccia pl. 73, 2; M. Launey, Alexandrie 1, 967. Petite plaque de plomb carrée. — Date incertaine. — Cavalier au pas vers la dr. abreuvant un serpent.

12.* Berkeley, Lowie Mus. 6-20309 (anciennement 6-19897). Provenance inconnue. — Lutz, H. F., Egyptian Tomb Steles and Offering Stones (1927) 22 n° 85 pl. 43; Parlasca 24 pl. 14. — Date incertaine, probablement romaine. — Relief très érodé; dédicace en grec non déchiffrée. Un personnage vêtu d'une tunique (?) et coiffé du nemes se dirige vers la dr. sur un cheval cabré, en présentant une coupe à un serpent dressé le long du bord g.

Monnaies

13.* AE, nome diospolite, Trajan (98-117 ap. J.-C.), Hadrien, 126/127 ap. J.-C., Antonin le Pieux (138-161 ap. J.-C.). — Rougé, J., RNum 2^e série, 15, 1874-77, 12, 2-3; BMC Alexandria 363, 98 (Hélios); Dattari 6239 pl. 35 (Hélios); Daressy, G., «Le dieu Hérôn sur les monnaies du nome diospolite», ASAE 21, 1921, 7-16; Milne, J. G., Cat. of Alexandrian Coins (1933) p. 131 n° *1220; Geissen, AlexKaisermünzen IV 3388 (Hélios). — Rv.: cavalier radié vers la g. (sauf sur les monnaies de l'ép. de Trajan).

DOCUMENT À ÉCARTER

14. Hartford (Conn.), Wadsworth Athenaeum 1934.6. Provenance inconnue, presque sûrement du Fayoum. — Pagan and Christian Egypt (Expos. Brooklyn 1941) 16 n° 7 pl. 7; Ross, M. C., Early Christian and By- zantine Art (Expos. Baltimore 1947) 132 n° 672 pl. 88; Lazarov, M./Frel, J., Listy filologické 86, 1963, 70-71; Lewis, S., «The Iconography of the Coptic Horseman in Byzantine Egypt», Journal of the American Research Center in Egypt 10, 1973, 36 fig. 20; Thompson, D. L., Chronique d'Égypte 50, 1975, 321-325 fig. 1; idem, The Artists of the Mummy Portraits (1976) 16 figs. 53-54; idem, Bull. of the Wadsworth Athenaeum 8, 2, 1975, 50-59; idem, Mummy Portraits in the J. Paul Getty Mus. (1982) 25 fig. 44; Parlasca 25 pl. 15. — D'après le style, II^e/III^e s. ap. J.-C. — Panneau de bois. Cavalier au pas vers la dr. brandissant une double hache, analogue au personnage figurant sur 2 et 3. Identifié à tort avec Caracalla (Lazarov/Frel, Thompson) ou avec H. lui-même (Parlasca): il s'agit très évidemment de son acolyte anonyme.

COMMENTAIRE

Un débat ancien concerne l'origine du dieu, la majorité des auteurs penchant en définitive pour une origine non-égyptienne, thrace de préférence (Jouguet, Collignon, Lefebvre, Daressy, Capovilla, Launey, Will), anatolienne ou syrienne à la rigueur (Cumont, Rostovtzeff). On a cependant noté depuis longtemps que l'Égypte ne connaissait guère de dieu cavalier ni de dieu militaire (Will 107. 121. 260) et, en dépit de l'autorité de Perdrizet et d'une vague homonymie plus apparente dans la transcription française qu'en grec (Ἡρῶν et Ἡρῶν), il est arbitraire de reconnaître dans H. une forme hellénisée d'Horus (contra Parlasca 25). Les documents qui nous ont conservé l'image de ce dernier en cavalier (Parlasca pl. 10. 11, 1; 13, 1) nous montrent toujours le dieu à tête de faucon. De même, le relief de Berkeley (12) confère à un dieu sans armes (au contraire d'Horus) la coiffure égyptienne du nemes, sans qu'on puisse en préciser la signification exacte dans le cas particulier ou en tirer un argument en faveur d'une identification avec Horus.

Un cas douteux est celui de la ville de Pi-thom (cf. récemment Myśliwiec, K., «Zur Ikonographie des Gottes "HPON", Studia Aegyptiaca 3, 1977, 89-97; Redford, D. B., LÄ IV [1982] 1054-1058 s. v. «Pi-thom»), fondation de Ramsès II, connue sous le nom grec de Ἡρώων πόλις ou Ἡρώ, latin de Eropolis ou Erocastra, aujourd'hui er-Retabeh, au départ du canal du Delta à la Mer Rouge aboutissant au Ἡρώων κόλπος. P. Perdrizet voulait identifier là un lieu voué au culte du dieu H. (REA 6, 1904, 159), en invoquant Amm. 17, 4, 18 où l'on trouve pour le pharaon cité l'équivalence Si-thom = fils de H. (faudrait-il rapprocher le relief de Berkeley 12?). On attendrait cependant Heronopolis et non Herdonopolis, et on ne voit quel rapport pouvait exister entre le dieu cavalier du Fayoum et Atoum, le démiurge primordial. De même, les rapprochements faits avec le dieu sémitique Hauron (Albright, W. F., American Journal of Semitic Languages and Literatures 53, 1936, 1) sont encore plus aléatoires.

Par ailleurs, H. n'a pas pu rester à l'écart des réalités religieuses égyptiennes. A Théadelphie, il a trouvé accueil dans le sanctuaire de Pnéphéros et à Magdola, du moins à partir d'une certaine date, il est lié à Sarapis. Dans deux cas (7 et 8), l'image du dieu est surmontée du disque ailé à uraeus et, dans deux autres (1 et 2), H. a la tête radiée ou même nimbée et radiée, ce qui est un signe de la place prépondérante du culte solaire en Egypte. Pour le reste, la particularité de la série égyptienne réside dans la place donnée au serpent remarquable par sa taille, un grand reptile mal défini, caractérisé comme cobra à l'occasion (7 et 3). Il n'est pas impossible que le culte d'H. en Egypte ait comporté des offrandes à des serpents considérés comme sacrés et comme la forme visible du dieu (cf. Hdt. 2, 74 pour Thèbes). Mais la place du serpent dans les cultes héroïques grecs et dans celle du Héros thrace est non moins bien attestée.

Outre par l'absence d'une tradition égyptienne bien établie, l'origine étrangère, plus exactement thrace d'H. peut s'appuyer sur les arguments suivants:

1. Le héros cavalier thrace (Kazarow, G., Die Denkmäler des thrakischen Reitergottes in Bulgarien (1938); Will 55-88), abstraction faite des surnoms indigènes, est désigné en grec à quelques exceptions près comme ἥρως, ce qui peut n'être que l'hellénisation d'un mot thrace. On trouve cependant parfois aussi Ἡρών et, plus fréquemment, dans les dédicaces latines Heron.

2. L'arbre au serpent est fréquent dans la série thrace bien que le schéma iconographique adopté soit différent.

3. Le héros thrace n'est pas un militaire, à l'inverse de ce qui est le cas en Egypte; dans son pays d'origine, il est vénéré dans les villes comme dans les campagnes à titre privé aussi bien que public; sa militarisation en Egypte est due à la profession de ses premiers adorateurs. Sur certains documents, le héros thrace est représenté comme chasseur; il n'est pas impossible que les peintures de Magdola (5 et 6) aient illustré cet aspect du dieu.

4. En conséquence aussi, dans la série thrace, le dieu porte le costume national avec tunique à manches et pantalon. Dans la série égyptienne, où le costume militaire est la règle, on note qu'à Théadelphie (2) le dieu porte une tunique à manches, peut-être des pantalons et des bottines dans un cas.

5. Le cavalier thrace est invoqué parfois dans son pays d'origine comme propylaios, fonction qui lui a été assignée aussi à Magdola comme à Théadelphie où il occupe un propylon. La couronne tourelée qu'il porte dans un cas (2) peut faire partie de cette même fonction de dieu protecteur.

6. H. est invoqué comme μέγας (deux ou trois fois μέγας) et même comme μέγιστος. A Samothrace, on vénérât des theoi megaloi et un des dieux principaux d'Odessos est un Θεὸς μέγας, qui peut être représenté sous les traits du cavalier thrace (Hemberg, B., Die Kabiren [1950], 221-231).

7. Par trois fois (2, 3, 14) H. est accompagné par un personnage, anonyme jusqu'à ce jour, qui apparaît deux fois à pied et une fois à cheval. Il ne se présente pas comme un militaire mais porte un costume qu'on peut qualifier d'oriental sinon de thrace, comportant une tunique à manches, des pantalons et des bottines; la tunique se présente comme une sorte de fourreau large et raide bien que tenu par une ceinture; le costume ne comporte jamais de coiffure. Ce personnage élève chaque fois une bipenne, ce qui lui a valu des rapprochements avec des dieux anatoliens (contra Robert, L., RPh 65, 1939, 184, n° 1). Une autre comparaison est possible, qui nous ramène du côté de la Thrace. A la série du Héros cavalier thrace fait pendant une série parallèle, propre à un culte à mystères né sans doute dans les milieux militaires de la Dacie, la série des Cavaliers danubiens (Tudor, D., «I Cavalieri Danubiani», Ephemeris dacoromana 7, 1937, 189-356; Will 89-102) toujours anonymes. Sur les documents les plus anciens ne figure qu'un seul cavalier en costume thrace et portant un bonnet; il est dédoublé par la suite et les deux cavaliers accompagnent une déesse. On est manifestement en présence d'une évolution très particulière. Sur plusieurs documents, la double hache apparaît comme arme du Cavalier seul (Tudor n° 1, 112) ou dans la série des deux cavaliers (Tudor n° 8, 56, 57, 126, 129). La provenance thrace ou «danubienne» du personnage anonyme à la double hache peut ainsi être soutenue.

ERNEST WILL

HEROPHILE → Sibyllae

HEROS CUBANS → Addenda vol. sq.

HEROS EQUITANS → Addenda vol. sq.

HERSE → Aglauros, Herse, Pandrosos

HESIONE → LIMC Suppl.

HESPERIDES

(Ἑσπερίδες, Hesperides) Daughters of → Nyx, of Nyx and Erebus, of → Atlas, of Atlas and Hesperis, of Hesperos (→ Astra), of → Okeanos, of → Keto and → Phorkys, or even of → Zeus and → Themis. They dwell in a paradisiacal garden, usually placed on an island in the west beyond Okeanos, but also situated somewhere in N. Africa (usually Libya), or even in the north in the land of the → Hyperboreioi. They were the guardians, along with the serpent → Ladon, of a fabulous tree (or trees) bearing golden fruit, which was given by → Ge to → Hera at the latter's marriage with Zeus. The H. were usually thought of as three, four or seven in number, and were renowned for their beautiful voices and songs. As one of his last labours → Herakles was required to fetch the golden apples. He seized the apples himself after slaying the serpent or was given the apples either by the H. themselves or by Atlas who had obtained them from the H. According to one account, the garden of the H. was also visited by the Argonauts.

LITERARY SOURCES: The H. do not appear in Homer (who does refer to Atlas, Od. 1, 52-54) or in the Linear B tablets, though attempts have been made (Nilsson, MMR 2 627-628; Karageorghis, V., AJA 62, 1958, 386) to discover a Bronze Age origin for the myth of Herakles and the H. The H. are first mentioned in the Theogony: Hesiod (theog. 213, 215-216) knows them as the fatherless daughters of Nyx who look after «the golden apples and the trees that bear fair fruit», with the aid of a serpent (theog. 333-335). They are sweet-voiced (theog. 275, 518). Their dwelling is located (theog. 215, 274-275) in the magical realm beyond Okeanos where also live the Gorgons (→ Gorgo, Gorgones) and Geryon (→ Geryoneus) who guards the cattle of → Helios (→ Herakles, section IV L). Hesiod does not give the names of the H. or mention their connection with Herakles in any extant passage, but Serv. Aen. 4, 484 seems to have called them Aegle (Ἀἴγλη), Erythea (Ἐρυθραία) and Hesperethusa (Ἑσπερέθουσα) on the authority of Hesiod (frg. 360 Merkelbach/West; cf. p. 228 West, Hes. theog.; note that Serv. auctus has Eglem, Aretusam et Hesperusam), perhaps on the basis of lines in the Eoiai or even in the Theogony (there may be a lacuna at l. 216: cf. West ad loc.), or of the Titanomachy (Davies EGFF 10).

The lyric poet Stesichoros, in a fragment of his Geryoneis (Page SLG S 8, cf. Page, D., JHS 93, 1973, 138, 147-148), mentions that the H. inhabit the «most beautiful island of the gods» and dwell in «golden halls». Stesichoros may have identified the H. Erytheia with the eponymous nymph of Geryon's island, and made her the mother of the herdsman → Eurytion (II) (cf. Page SLG S 7; Robertson, M., ClQ 19, 1969, 215-216). Mimnermos (West IEG frg. 12) mentions the dwelling place of the H. to indicate the far West.

We do not know whether Stesichoros mentioned Herakles' exploit in the garden of the H., but this may have been narrated in other, lost epic or lyric poems composed in the 7th or 6th cent., such as the Herakleia of Peisandros of Rhodes (cf. Huxley, G. L., Greek Epic Poetry [1969] 100-105).

During the first half of the 5th cent., Panyassis of Halikarnassos, in his Herakleia, certainly told the tale: Herakles killed the serpent and took the apples; the poet seems to have located the garden of the H. in the west (Matthews, V. J., Panyassis of Halikarnassos [1974] 66-71 F 10K; Davies EGFF 10^E; Bernabé PEGF 11).

A more influential account of Herakles and the apples of the H. was given by Panyassis' younger (?) contemporary the Athenian genealogist Pherekydes (FGrH 3 F 16-17). In this version Ge gave a tree bearing golden fruit to Hera at her wedding (cf. Asklepiades of Mendes, FGrH 617 F 1; Pediasimos 11); Serv. Aen. 4, 484; Myth. Vat. I 38, 106; II 161). Hera planted it in the garden of the gods near Atlas, and because the H. took the fruit, she set a serpent to act as guardian. Herakles asked Atlas to fetch three apples (cf. Antiphanes, CAF II 33 frg. 55) while he supported the heavens. Although some ancient sources situate Atlas and the H. in the land of the Hyperboreans (Apollod. bibl. 2 [113] 5, 11; Pediasimos l.c.; Tzetz. chil. 2, 357.

377-378), it is not certain that this tradition goes back to Pherekydes (cf. Brize, P., Die Geryoneis des Stesichoros [1980] 78-80). The poet does seem to have described the H. as daughters of Atlas (cf. Serv. Aen. 4, 484; Myth. Vat. I 38; II 161).

The sacred garden and the H. are alluded to by the Attic tragedians: Soph. Trach. 1099-1100; Eur. Herc. 394-402 (cf. pp. 165-166 of Bond's commentary) and Hipp. 742-751. Euripides places the garden in the west (cf. Aischyl. Prom. 347-350) and follows Hesiod in calling the H. singers (their fame in this respect lasts: Apoll. Rhod. 4, 1399; Nonn. Dion. 13, 351). In Hipp. 744-751 (produced in 428 B. C.), the garden of the H. has become a paradise sacred to the gods, a realm of happiness and immortality where the earth is life-giving, and the streams, ambrosial. Representations on red-figured vases from the late 5th cent. reflect this conception.

In his Argonautica (4, 1396-1450), written in the mid 3rd. cent., Apollonios Rhodios places the H. in Libya (Cyrenaica), a localisation that probably goes back at least to the 6th cent. (cf. the coin of Cyrene [24], and the name Euesperides). The H. are three in number; their names are Hespere (Ἑσπέρη), Erytheis (Ἐρυθρίς) and Aigle (Ἀἴγλη). A late source, Schol. Clem. Al. protr. 14, 13 St., attributes the names Erythea and Hesperethusa to Apollonios: the note may be confused but the names may be drawn from another work of the poet. Apollonios seems to make the H. the daughters of Okeanos. Jason and his fellow Argonauts arrive the day after Herakles has taken the apples; the H., who are bewailing their loss, turn themselves into a poplar, an elm and a willow; Aigle indicates to the thirsty Argonauts a spring.

Many brief references will be found in later literature to the H., usually in connection with Herakles. Their parentage varies: Nyx and Erebus (Cic. nat. 3, 44; Hyg. fab. praef. 1), Atlas (Serv. Aen. 4, 484; Myth. Vat. I 106, 381; II 161; III 13, 5) or Atlas and Hesperis (Diod. 4, 27, 1-2), Hesperus (Serv. Aen. 4, 484), Phorkys and Keto (Schol. Apoll. Rhod. 4, 1399d) or even Zeus and Themis (Pherekyd., FGrH 3 F 16d, cf. Schol. Eur. Hipp. 742; probably by confusion with Pherekydes' nymphs).

Their number also varies, from probably three (Serv. Aen. 4, 484) to four (Myth. Vat. III 13, 5; perhaps Apollod. bibl. 2 [114] 5, 11) and even seven (Diod. 4, 27, 2).

There is considerable confusion over their names. On Serv. Aen. and Apoll. Rhod. see above. The manuscripts of Apollod. bibl. 2 [114] 5, 11 give Ἀἴγλη, Ἐρυθραία, Ἑσπέρη and Ἐσπερέθουσα (the last two could resolve into Ἑσπερία and Ἀρπύρεια, or into Ἑσπερέθουσα). Schol. Stat. Theb. 2, 280 and Myth. Vat. II 161 have Aegle, Erethusa, Hesperethusa; Fulg. myth. (ed. Helm/Préaux p. 97) has Egle, Esper, Medusa and Aretusa; and Myth. Vat. III 13, 5, Eglo, Hesper, Medusa and Ferusa. A slightly different tradition may be represented by Hyg. fab. praef. 1 where we find Aegle, Hesperie, aerica. Steph. Byz. s. v. Κρήνη even records a H. called Krete (cf. Plin. nat. 4, 58).

In later writers the garden of the H. is usually situated in Libya (Diod. 4, 26, 2; Varro rust. 2, 1, 6; Lucanus 9, 357-367; Plin. nat. 5, 3-4, 31; Apollod. bibl. 2 [115] 5, 11; Ps.-Skylax peripl. 108 (GGM I 82-83); Solinus 24, 4-6; cf. Stucchi, S., QuadLibia 8, 1976, 19-73), but sometimes more loosely in the remotest parts of Africa (Serv. Aen. 4, 484) or in the land of the Aithiopians (Verg. Aen. 4, 480-482; Schol. Stat. Theb. 2, 280).

Like Herakles and Jason, →Perseus also reached the realm of Atlas and the H. Fleeing from the Gorgons, he sought refuge with Atlas who refused his request and was therefore turned to stone. The story is narrated by Ov. met. 4, 627-662, but seems to go back at least to the late 5th/early 4th cent. poet Polyidos (Page PMG frg. 837).

Rationalistic versions of Herakles' encounter with the H. began at least as early as the Hellenistic historian Agrotas (FGH 762 F 3), and the fullest account is preserved in Diod. 4, 26, 2-4; 27, 1-5: the seven H., daughters of Atlas and Hesperis, are famous for their beauty and prudence; while playing in a garden, they are seized by pirates but rescued by Herakles (cf. Serv. Aen. 4, 484; Solinus 24, 4-6; Myth. Vat. I 38; II 161).

BIBLIOGRAPHY: Amelung, W., «Herakles bei den Hesperiden», 80. BerlWPr 1923; Bayet, J., Hervé (1926) 125-138; Beckel, G., Götterbestand (1961) 57-58; Bonfante, L./Carter, C., «An Absent Herakles and a Hesperid: A Late Antique Marble Group in New York», AJA 91, 1987, 247-257; Bräuer, R., «Die Heraklestaten auf antiken Münzen», ZfN 28, 1910, 35-112, esp. 84-96; Brazda, M. K., Zur Bedeutung des Apfels in der antiken Kultur (1977) 89ff.; Brommer, F., «Herakles und die Hesperiden auf Vasenbildern», JdI 57, 1942, 105-123; idem, Denkmälerlisten I 59-66; idem, Vasenlisten 71-74; idem, EAA III (1960) 443-444; idem, H. (1986) 49-54; Furtwängler, A., in FR I 42-44, 288-289; Gerhard, E., Ges. Akad. Abh. (1866) 16-29, 50-92; Götze, H., «Die attischen Dreifigurenreliefs», RM 53, 1938, 189-280; idem, «Die Deutung des Hesperidenreliefs», JdI 63/64, 1948/49, 91-99; Greifenhagen, A., Philolog. Wochenschrift 53, 1933, 110-111; Harrison, E., «Hesperides and Heroes: A Note on the Three-Figure Reliefs», Hesperia 33, 1964, 76-82; Hausmann, U., 10. OlympBer (1981) 223-224; Lévêque, P., BCH 74, 1950, 224-232; Metzger, Représentations 202-210; Moreno, P., MEFRA 96, 1984, 171-173; Robert, Heldensage 488-498; idem, SarkRel III 1, 119-120; Schauenburg, K., AA 1981, 476-483; Scheffold, SB II 123-124; idem/Jung, SB IV 163-166; Seeliger, K./Drexler, W., ML I 2 (1886-90) 2594-2603 s.v. «Hesperiden»; Sittig, E., RE VIII 1 (1912) 1243-1248 s.v. «Hesperiden»; Steuben 32-33; Steuding, H., ML I 2 (1886-90) 2594 s.v. «Hesperethusa»; Voegtli, Heldenepen 42-44; Vollkommer, Herakles 16-19; Woodford, S., Exemplum Virtutis: A Study of Herakles in Athens in the 2nd Half of the 5th cent. B. C. (Columbia Univ. Ph. D. 1966).

CATALOGUE

A. Hesperids alone

Attic vase

1.* Pyxis, rf. London, BM 73.1-11.6 (E 772). From Athens. - *ARV*² 806, 90: follower of Douris; *Add*² 291; FR I 288 pl. 57, 2; Smith, BMVases 364-365. - About 470 B. C. - Four H. and a serpent-entwined tree. H. 1, Hippolyte (chiton, headband), walks forward to take up her hydria which she has been filling at a fountain. H. 2 (peplos, sakkos) waits with her hydria. H. 3, Mapsaura (which supports the MSS reading at Hes. theog. 872) (peplos, headband), moves to r., looking back, arms raised in alarm. On the r. of the tree, H. 4, Thetis (chiton, headband), holds three apples in her r. and picks another. The identification of the scene as the garden of the H. goes back to the earliest report of the vase in AZ 1874, 112-113; cf. Furtwängler in FR I 288, who regards Thetis as a H.

South Italian vases

2.* Volute-krater, Apulian rf. Ruvo, Mus. Jatta 1097. - RVAp I 417, 16; Lycurgus P.; Sichtermann, SlgJatta 50 no. 72 pls. 119, 121; Keuls, E., The Water Carriers in Hades (1974) 101 pl. 16. - About 350 B. C. - Garden of the H., with central tree and serpent, a spring with water flowing from two spouts, various plants, eleven women on different levels, and Eros. Woman 1 (chiton, himation, sphendone) sits to r. on or beside a hydria, holding out an end of her chiton; Eros stands beside her; woman 2 (peplos, himation, sphendone) stands to r., carrying a jug; 3 (chiton, himation, stephane) is seated to l. but looks back at the serpent which drinks from her phiale; 4 (chiton, himation, stephane) is seated to r. beside a hydria, but looks back at the serpent; 5 (chiton, himation, sphendone) stands to l., leaning back against a stele, looking at herself in a mirror; 6 (peplos, sphendone) bends forward to r. with a hydria on her l. knee; 7 (chiton, himation, stephane) is seated to l., holding a fan; 8 (peplos, himation, sphendone) stands to r., one foot raised on a hydria, perhaps talking to the serpent; 9 (chiton, himation) moves to r., carrying a hydria; 10 (chiton, himation, sakkos) stands to r., taking a sash from a box that she holds; 11 (peplos, himation, stephane) is seated to l., holding a platter. All the women wear necklaces, bracelets and earrings, and all, except perhaps 6 and 9, have slippers. All eleven women are probably H., but the woman seated beside Eros is sometimes identified as Aphrodite and the other four women with hydriai have been thought Hyades (sisters of the H., cf. Gargallo-Grimaldi in Jatta, G., Cat. del Mus. Jatta [1869] 546-548), or Atlantides (Jatta, o. c. 549-551), or Danaids (Keuls, o. c. 101).

3.* Calyx-krater, Apulian rf. Naples, Mus. Naz. 81865 (H 2885). - RVAp I 126, 234; Lecce P.; AA 1981, 474 fig. 20. - About 380-360 B. C. - Two H., one on either side of the tree. EAYH (peplos with black stripe, himation, sphendone, earring) stands to r., holding a sash and a platter (white objects) from which the serpent feeds. APETYOEA (peplos with black stripe, himation, stephane) stands to l., picking an apple.

4.* Pelike, Apulian rf. Catania, Mus. Civ. MB 4402 (L 768). - RVAp I 195, 20; Iliupersis P.; Libertini, G., Il Mus. Biscari (1930) 183 no. 768 pl. 90; AA 1981, 477 fig. 22. - About 380-360 B. C. - Garden of the H., with central, serpent-entwined tree, other plants, five H., and Eros. H. 1 (peplos with black-stripe border, stephane, bracelets) stands to r., holding two apples in her l. hand and picking another. H. 2 (peplos, himation, sphendone, bracelets) is seated to r., holding a phiale from which the serpent drinks. H. 3 (peplos, bracelets) bends forward to r. towards a large basket. H. 4 (peplos, himation covering the back of her head, sphendone) is seated to l., holding on her knees an open box the contents of which she examines. H. 5 (chiton, himation, sphendone, bracelets) stands to l., picking an apple. Eros carries a goose (?) towards a large, open box. All the H. seem to wear slippers. The scene on the reverse (four women at a laver, with Eros) is usually taken to be unrelated.

5.* Hydria, Campanian rf. Zürich, Roß Coll. - LCS 381, 139 pl. 147, 1; Whiteface P.; LCS Suppl 2, 214; LCS Suppl 3, 183; Das Tier in der Antike (1974) no. 264 pl. 44. - About 350-340 B. C. - Three H., tree with serpent, flowers. H. 1 (chiton, himation, kekryphalos) stands to r., holding a jug and a phiale from which the serpent drinks. H. 2 (peplos, sakkos) and H. 3 (peplos, himation, sakkos) stand to r. of the tree, shaking hands. All H. wear slippers, necklaces, bracelets and earrings.

5a) Squat-lekythos, Paestan rf. New York, private. - About 350-330 B. C.: Astes (Trendall). - Four H. and a papposilen. H. 1 (himation about legs, necklace, earrings, bracelets, anklet) is seated to l., looking into a mirror and preening her long hair. H. 2 (sleeveless chiton, red mantle, sphendone, bracelets, slippers) stands to r., offering a phiale to the serpent twined about the tree, and holding a wreath in her l. hand. H. 3 (chiton, red headband, earrings, necklace, bracelets, slippers) stands to l., holding fruit in her l. hand while picking another golden apple. H. 4 (sleeveless chiton, string of beads in hair, necklace, bracelets, slippers) leans to r. against a white laver, teasing a small duck (?) with a wreath. Above, half hidden, a papposilen, with animal-skin and thyrsos. In the field, two wreaths and four red fillets. To l. of the tree, a bird; to r., a duck.

B.1. Hesperids with Herakles: the Hesperids alarmed, fleeing or cowering

GREEK

Attic vases

The drawing on the alabastron in Nauplia (Brommer, H. 49, 66, 82 pl. 49; H. [1986] pl. 44) was regarded by Beazley (see Brommer, Vasenlisten 72, 2; v. Bothmer, D., AJA 61, 1957, 106) as modern.

6. (= Herakles 2204/2700* with bibl.) Neck-amphora, bf. Boulogne, Mus. Beaux-Arts 421. - Meuli, K., Schweizerisches Archiv f. Volkskunde 56, 1960, pl. 14 (= Gesammelte Schriften II [1975] 811 pl. 38); Archeologia 175, 1983, 26. - About 520-510 B. C. - Two H. stand to r. of the tree and look towards Herakles, gesturing frantically. Both wear a himation over a chiton. The absence of the serpent and the presence of the deer have led to much discussion.

7.* (= Herakles 2701 with bibl.) Hydria, rf. Champaign (Ill.), Krannert Art Mus. 70-8-4. - AntK 15, 1972, fig. p. VI; Robertson, HGA 685 n. 35; CVA 1 pl. 22. - Syracuse P. (H. Cahn), about 470-460 B. C. - Herakles moves away, threatening with his club a H. (chiton, himation, sakkos) who runs after the hero and seems to be appealing to him to stop. A second H. (chiton, himation, sphendone) half turns towards Herakles, her hands raised in consternation. A third H. (chiton, himation, sakkos) moves towards the tree, her arms outstretched in dismay (not holding a branch of the tree). All wear earrings.

8. Hydria, rf. Paris, Cab. Méd. 4820 (R 445). - Beazley, J. D., Attische Vasenmaler (1925) 320, 17: Amymone (later Amphitrite) P., but the vase was omitted from *ARV*²; de Ridder, BiblNatVases 339-341 figs. 75-76 pl. 18, 445. - About 450-440 B. C. - At least six H., tree with serpent, Herakles. H. 1 (chiton, himation over back of head, cord binding hair) moves r., looking back, l. hand extended. H. 2 (chiton, himation, sakkos) moves r., r. arm extended. H. 3 (chiton, himation, cord binding hair) moves r., looking back, both hands extended. H. 4 (chiton, himation, diadem) stands r., holding an apple. H. 5 (not Nike - peplos, himation) stands r., looking back, arms out in alarm. H. 6 (chiton, himation, cord binding hair) stands frontally, head to l., r. hand to chin, l. hand holding apple.

Relief sculpture

9. (= Herakles 1712*/2708 with bibl.) Panel of marble frieze from the theatre, Delphi. Delphi, Mus. 5432 + 1798. - 2nd cent. B. C. (Perdrizet, BCH 21, 1897, 600-603), c. 110-90 B. C. (Sturgeon, AJA 82, 1978, 226-235), 1st cent. B. C. or 1st cent. A. D. (other scholars). - A H. (peplos) flees to r., her arms raised in fear or consternation; she probably looked back at Herakles.

Intaglio

10. (= Herakles 2713* with bibl.) Gold ring with oval garnet intaglio. Naples, Mus. Naz. 25132. From Pompeii, Casa del Fauno. - 2nd/1st cent. B. C. (Breglia), 1st cent. B. C. (Siviero). - Three small H. flee to l., apparently looking back towards Herakles. The H. in the foreground stretches out her r. arm.

ROMAN

Mosaic

11. (= Herakles 1741*/2772 with bibl.) Madrid, Arch. Mus. From Liria (near Valencia). - 3rd cent. A. D. - The three H., only about two thirds the size of Herakles, appear behind and to the r. of the tree, rushing away to r. Their dress is unclear.

Sarcophagi

12. (= Herakles 1752*/2778 with bibl.) London, BM 2300. From Rome (Genzano). - A. D. 150-180. - Three H., tree, Herakles. H. 1 (chiton), in the foreground, flees to l., looking back, her r. hand raised; on either side of her appear the heads of H. 2 and H. 3, one looking to l., the other, to r.

13. (= Herakles 1720*/2779 with bibl.) Rome, Pal. Corsini. - 2nd cent. A. D. («not later than Antonine period» - de Luca). - A small H., wearing chiton and holding a cloak, moves away to l. but looks back at Herakles. Cf. SarkRel III 1 nos. 101-105 which probably included a H. originally.

14. (= Herakles 1734* with bibl.) Vatican (?)

(lid) and Florence, Uff. 110. From Rome. - Vermeule, C., The Dal-Pozzo-Albani Drawings (1966) 49-50 no. 8720. - A.D. 150-180. - Lid: H. 1 stands in three-quarter view to l., looking back, her r. arm raised in astonishment. H. 2 stands to r., her l. hand outstretched as though pleading with Herakles. H. 3 runs to r., looking back. The section with the H. is now lost. Robert, Sarkel III 1, 135-137 no. 113 incorrectly identifies a fragment once in the Vatican (Amelung, Skulpt-VatMus 847-848 no. 98 pl. 100) with the drawing. The fragment comes from a lid with a similar scene: a H. flees to l.; between this figure and the tree is the head of a second H.; there may originally have been a third H.

15. (= Herakles 1723*/2777 with bibl.) Rome, Mus. Torlonia 422. - A.D. 150-180. - Box: Herakles, two H., tree; the heads of the H. appear to l. of the tree. Robert, following Visconti in Sarkel III 1, 137-139, suggests that the two women at the r. end of the lid are H.

16. (= Herakles 1725*/2780 with bibl.) Asiatic. Konya, Mus. 1002. - Akurgal, E., Griechische und römische Kunst in der Türkei (1987) pl. 249. - Mid 3rd cent. A.D. - A small H., garment about her legs, sits on the ground, her head turned back and resting on her shoulder in an attitude of grief perhaps rather than sleep.

Altar

17. (= Herakles 1735*/2776 with bibl.) Marble altar, «Ara Giustiniani», dedicated by P. Decimius Lucio. Vatican, Mus. Greg. Prof. (once Lateran) 9811. - Mandowsky, E., RendPontAcc 27, 1955, 353; Hermann, W., Römische Götteraltäre (1961) 99-100 no. 34. - 1st cent. B.C./A.D. - A H., partly wrapped in a mantle, lies on the ground in front of the tree, sleeping or perhaps cowering.

Coins

18. (= Herakles 2785* with bibl.) AE medallion, Perinthos, Sept. Severus (A.D. 193-211). - A small H., in a long, sleeveless garment, stands to r. of the tree, looking at Herakles.

19.* (= Herakles, under 2785) AE, Temenothyrai (Flaviopolis), Valerian, A.D. 253-260. - BMC Phrygia 415, 33 pl. 48, 5; Bräuer pl. 4, 15; Voegtli pl. 7j; Vermeule, C., Roman Imperial Art in Greece and Asia Minor (1968) 161 fig. 95; AJA 91, 1987, 251 figs. 5-6. - Herakles, tree, three small H. The foremost H., who wears a long, sleeveless (?) garment, seems to start back, her arms flung out.

20. (= Herakles 1761*/2786 with bibl.) AU, Cologne (?), Postumus (A.D. 259-268). - A H. runs to l., looking back at Herakles.

Vase

21. (= Herakles 2783 with bibl.) Bowl, Arretine, by Gn. Ateius (?). Rome, Antiquarium Forense. From Arezzo. - 1st cent. A.D. - Three small H. to r. of tree, one seated to l., draped, covering her face with her hands, a second H. behind, supporting her head in a dejected manner, a third seated, below, to

r. Herakles; Hermes; a woman and Pan; and another woman.

Sculptural groups

22.* Marble group, fr. New York Univ., Dept. of Classics. - Lehmann, K., AJA 49, 1945, 430-433; Bonfante, L./Carter, C., AJA 91, 1987, 247-257. - 2nd cent. A.D. (Antonine: Vermeule - cf. AJA 91, 255 n. 20) or c. 400 A.D. (Bonfante/Carter). - A H. is seated cross-legged on the ground beside the snake-entwined tree, «her right hand held up to her cheek, the right elbow cradled in her left hand» (AJA 91, 247). She wears a mantle, and twists her head to look up to the r., where Herakles must have stood. Bonfante/Carter, following Lehmann, suggest a Hellenistic original.

23. (= Herakles 2715 with bibl.) Marble group. Schloß Wörlitz. - Reduced copy of a Pergamene original (Amelung). - Three small H., one to the l., two to the r. of Herakles. H. 1 is down on one knee («nur das Unterteil etwa 2 cm oberhalb der Basis antik, ferner Zehen und Sohle des r. Fußes und das l. Unterbein vom Knie ab samt Fuß» EA). H. 2 and H. 3 move away to r., the first with r. arm raised and garment falling away from her body. Both H. are much restored. The following may be variants: a) Lambèse (?). A H. kneels to r., probably looking back, her r. arm raised, dressed in a high-girt peplos and a himation. - b) Vatican. A H. moves to r., gazing back and up at Herakles, her r. raised in fear, a himation about her legs.

B.2. Hesperids with Herakles: the Hesperids standing or seated calmly

GREEK Coin

24. (= Herakles 2714* with bibl.) AR tetradrachm, Cyrene, c. 500 B.C. - Studniczka, F., Kyrene (1890) 20 fig. 15; Babelon, Traité II 1 pl. 64, 15; Bräuer pl. 4, 12. - A H., dressed in a chiton, stands to l. of the tree, facing r. and holding out both hands. The woman is surely a H., though Studniczka and Babelon preferred Cyrene and others speak simply of a nymph.

Relief

25. (= Hedone 1 with bibl., = Herakles 2707* with bibl.) Marble relief, one of four «three-figure» reliefs, Roman copies of originals of c. 420 B.C. a) Rome, Villa Albani 1008. - b) Leningrad, Hermitage 641, fr. - Saverkina, I., Grecheskaya Skulptura 5v. do n. e. v sodranii Ermitazha (1986) 156-157 no. 70. - c) New York, MMA 22. 139.21, fr. - Thompson, H., Hesperia 21, 1952, 60-82; Zuntz, G., ClMed 14, 1953, 71-85; Harrison 76-82; Lee, M., Hesperia 33, 1964, 404; Boardman GSCP fig. 239. - Two H. flank a seated Herakles. H. 1 (peplos, cloak over head) stands frontally, looking down at the hero and holding apples in the overfall of her garment. H. 2 (chiton, himation, sakkos) stands to l., looking down pensively (hand to chin), a branch with three apples in her l. hand. The serpent-entwined tree is sometimes thought a copyist's addition. Wolters, quoted in Reisch, E., Griechische Weihgeschenke (1890) 130 n. 1, suggested that the reliefs were part of a votive monument for a choregic victory. Thompson argues that the panels decorated the enclosure wall of the Altar of the Twelve Gods in the Agora.

Attic vases

26. (= Chrysis II 1*, = Herakles 2717* with further refs., = Hygieia 1) Hydria, rf. London, BM E 224. - ARV² 1313, 5; Meidias P.; Kron Phylenheroen 166-167 pl. 25, 2-3. - About 410 B.C. - Three H. Chrysothemis (peplos, sphendone) stands to l. of the tree, extending her r. hand to pluck an apple. Asterope (girdled chiton, cord binding hair) leans against Chrysothemis. Lipara (peplos, veil, stephane) stands to r. of the tree, with an apple in her l. hand, looking down shyly at seated Herakles. Some scholars (e.g. Furtwängler, in FR 1, 42-44; Kron, o.c. 167 n. 802) consider Hygieia and Chrysis to be H., but this is unlikely.

27. (= Herakles 2718) Lekanis lid, rf. Athens, NM 14507. From Athens. - ARV² 1690: manner of Meidias P. - About 410-400 B.C. - Four H., with Herakles, Athena, Iolaos. H. 1 (peplos) stands r., a branch in her l. hand. H. 2 and H. 3 (peploi) stand to l. and r. of the tree, picking fruit which they place in the overfalls of their garments. H. 4 (peplos) stands l., holding a box and sash. All H. wear jewellery.

28.* (= Herakles 2702) Cup rf., fr. Jena, Univ. 0487 (392). From Athens. - ARV² 1512, 20; Jena P. - About 400-390 B.C. - Part of the chiton and l. hand of a standing H.; tree with serpent; part of seated Herakles.

29.* (= Fluvii 23 with bibl., = Herakles 2720 with bibl.) Pelike, rf. New York, MMA 08.258.20. - ARV² 1472, 1; Pasithea P. - About 380-360 B.C. - Two H., with Herakles and Okeanos. H. 1 (chiton with girdle and shoulder-cord, himation veiling the back of her head), who is named Pasithea, sits l. beside the tree, looking round and listening to Herakles. She supports herself with her l. hand on the ground (not on the coils of the serpent). H. 2 (peplos with girdle, headband, earring) stands in front of Pasithea, looking down at her and holding up the overfall of her peplos as if it were full of apples.

30.* (= Herakles 2721 with bibl.) Pelike, rf. New Haven, Yale Univ. 1913.138. From Dernah (Cyrenaica). - About 370-360 B.C. - Three H., with Herakles, two Erotes, young satyr. H. 1 (himation draped loosely, headband) stands r., apparently picking apples. H. 2 (himation around her legs and over her l. arm, leaving her body naked, cross-strap) sits on a rock to r., looking round at Herakles. H. 3 (himation which veils her head) stands frontally, looking back at the hero. Götz (1938) identifies H. 3 as Hera.

31. (= Herakles 2703* with bibl.) Pelike, rf. Amsterdam, Allard Pierson 3505. - Allard Pierson Mus. Algemeene Gids (1965) pl. 72. - About 370-360 B.C. - Three H., with Herakles and Eros. H. 1 (himation which covers the back of her head) walks r. towards Herakles as though drawn by Eros. H. 2 (peplos) stands to r. of the tree, apparently picking fruit. H. 3

(himation about her legs and over the back of her head) sits r., looking back towards the hero.

32. (= Herakles 2722* with bibl.) Hydria, rf. London, BM E 227. From Cyrenaica. - About 370-360 B.C. - Four H., with Herakles, Eros and two youths (sons of Atlas, or Attic heroes?). H. 1 (peplos, sakkos) sits above the l. handle to l., looking back. H. 2 (peplos, sphendone) stands r. before Herakles, hands extended as if offering something. H. 3 (himation about limbs, upper body naked, sphendone) sits to l., r. arm extended perhaps picking an apple. H. 4 (peplos, sakkos) leans back on her l. elbow, her r. arm on H. 3's shoulder. All H. wear earrings, bracelets and necklaces. Metzger (Représentations 203), following Smith (BMVases III 179-180), suggests that H. 3 may be Aphrodite.

33.* (= Herakles 2723 with bibl., = Iolaos 39*) Hydria, rf. New York, MMA 24.97.5. - About 350-340 B.C. - Three H., with Herakles, Nike, Pan, satyr, and a youth (Iolaos?). H. 1 (decorated himation, beaded fillet) sits to l., looking back. H. 2 (peplos, decorated himation, beaded fillet) is seated to r. beside the tree, looking back at Herakles. She leans against a tympanon. H. 3 (himation, beaded fillet) stands frontally, looking back at Herakles, apparently leaning against a rock. All H. wear bracelets, necklaces and earrings; the flesh of H. 1 and H. 2 is painted white. Amelung, o.c. 111 thinks the presence of Dionysiac elements may show the influence of a satyr play.

34. (= Atlas 26, = Eros 118, = Herakles 2725* with bibl.) Calyx-krater, rf. Paris, Petit Palais 327. From Tanagra. - ARV² 1457, 8; L. C. Group; HDHG (Rouen) 240-242. - About 330-320 B.C. - Three H., with Herakles, Eros, Pan and a young satyr. H. 1 (peplos) stands to r., looking down at Herakles. H. 2 (chiton, himation), all in white, stands to l., picking apples with the aid of Eros. She holds some in her l. hand. H. 3 (peplos, sphendone) sits to l. upon a bunched himation. All H. wear jewellery. The female figure with two torches is unusual: goddess or statue?

35. (= Herakles 2724 with bibl.) Calyx-krater, rf. Leipzig T 3459. - Para 493, 8bis; L. C. Group. - About 330-320 B.C. - Three H., with Herakles, two Erotes and Pan. H. 1 (belted peplos) sits to l., looking round and picking apples with the aid of an Eros. A tympanon lies beside her. H. 2 (chiton?, himation about her legs) sits to r., looking back at Herakles. H. 3 (peplos?, himation) stands to l. H. 1 and H. 2 wear jewellery; their flesh is painted white.

South Italian vases

36.* (= Herakles 2729) Squat-lekkythos, Paestan rf. Naples, Mus. Naz. 81847 (H 2873). From Paestum. - RVP 86, 135; 99-100 pl. 57; Astéas; EAAI 744 fig. 938; Stella 55; Gogos, Oefh 55, 1984, 35 fig. 6; Trenchard, RFSIS fig. 351; Vollkommer 68 fig. 87. - About 350 B.C. - Five H. (I-ΞΞΠΠΙΔΕ), with Herakles, Pan, Hera (?), Hermes and a woman (Donakis). H. 1 (Aio-pis), in decorated peplos with studded belt, white wreath, slippers, jewellery, stands to r., leaning on the shoulder of H. 2 (Antheia) who wears decorated peplos, himation, slippers, white wreath and jewellery, and stands to r., holding a flower and a fillet. H. 3 (Kalypso), in decorated chiton with studded belt, himation, slippers, sphendone, white wreath and jewellery, sits to r. on a white tendril, holding a white oinochoe and phiale from which the serpent drinks. A bird perches on her r. foot. H. 4 (Mimesa – perhaps a confusion with the name of Hermes above: Trendall), in decorated chiton with studded belt, veil, slippers, jewellery, plucks an apple to add to the two in her hand. H. 5 (Nelisa), in decorated peplos, slippers, beaded fillet, jewellery, stands behind Herakles, holding an apple and a mirror. Donakis is more likely to be a personification than a H. Vollkommer (71) believes that the scene is inspired by a satyr-play on the basis of the figure half-visible at the upper left whom V. identifies as a satyr whose «head is clearly covered by a mask». The figure is not a satyr, but Pan; and the «mask» is a mirage: just the god's normal goatish features. The evidence for a play should be made of sterner stuff.

37. (= Herakles 2704 with bibl.) Pelike, Lucanian rf. Once Naples, Morchini Coll., later Turin, lost. – LCS 172, 986: Primato P. – About 350–320 B.C. – A H. (peplos, kekryphalos, slippers) sits to l., offering a phiale to the serpent and holding out a branch towards Herakles.

38.* (= Herakles 2727 with bibl.) Volute-krater, Apulian rf. London Market (Sotheby). – RVAp II 458, 72: Gioia del Colle P. – About 340 B.C. – Pan, Herakles, tree, two H. H. 1 (peplos, himation, kekryphalos, stephane) stands to l., offering a phiale to the serpent, a jug in her other hand. H. 2 (peplos, kekryphalos, stephane) sits on a rock, a mirror in her r. hand.

38a) Pelike, Apulian rf. Basel Market (Palladion). – Pre-Lykurgan (RVAp Chapt. 15). – About 360–350 B.C. – Six H. with Herakles and Eros around the serpent-entwined tree. H. 1 holds up a bowl to the serpent; H. 2, behind H. 1, moves away looking back; H. 3, above H. 1 and H. 2, is seated attended by Eros; H. 4, to r. above, holds up a mirror for H. 5 who is seated; H. 6, to r. below, sits upon a louterion talking with Herakles.

39. (= Herakles 2726*) Squat-lekythos, Apulian rf. Naples, Mus. Naz. H 2893 (81856). From Ruvo. – Gerhard pl. 20, 1; Brommer (1942) 117 fig. 12; Schauenburg 479 figs. 25–26. – About 350–320 B.C. – Two H., with Herakles and Iolaos (?). H. 1 (chiton, himation covering the back of her head, slippers, stephane) sits to l., looking round as she offers a bowl to the serpent. On the ground, an open box. H. 2 (peplos, himation, sphendone, slippers) sits on the other side of the tree, offering Herakles a branch with apples.

40. (= Herakles 2728 with bibl.) Situla, Apulian rf. London Market. – RVAp Suppl. 1, 126, 874a pl. 23, 6: Ascoli Satriano P.; Sotheby Dec. 11, 1989, no. 156. – About 340–320 B.C. – Two H., with Herakles and Pan. H. 1 (chiton, himation, beaded fillet) stands on the r. of a pillar, talking with the hero and holding out her himation. H. 2 (chiton, beaded fillet) sits to l., holding a beaded fillet.

41.* Patera, Apulian rf. New York Market. – Sotheby (N. Y.) Nov. 29, 1989, no. 123: a late product of the workshop of the White Sakkos P.: Trendall. –

About 320–300 B.C. – In the centre, the tree with serpent; to r. stands a small, white Herakles (lion-skin), holding a bow, arrow and club; to l. of the tree, a large H. (chiton, himation, white shoes, kekryphalos, stephane) sits to r. on or beside a white hydria, picking an apple; to r. of the tree, a second H. (peplos with long overfall, white shoes, cord binding hair, stephane) faces l. but leans back against a white hydria, holding an apple. Both H. wear necklaces, bracelets and earrings.

Relief vases

42. (= Herakles 2711 with bibl.) Neck-amphora, black-glazed with relief appliqué, Tarantine or Alexandrian? Athens, NM 2143. – Late 4th/1st half of 3rd cent. B.C. – Four separate appliqué: Herakles, and three H., each holding out her dress at the shoulder and carrying a wreath.

43. (= Herakles 2709* with bibl.) Clay cup with relief medallion, Elean (?) Olympia, Mus. T 199. From Olympia. – Later 3rd/early 2nd cent. B.C. – A H. (chiton, himation) stands frontally, apparently leaning against the tree and looking back at Herakles. Hausmann believes that the medallion is derived from a metal pyxis-lid of the 3rd cent. B.C.

44. (= Herakles 2710 with bibl., → Herakles under 1711) Clay relief bowl, Boeotian. Athens, NM 12618. – Late 3rd/early 2nd cent. B.C. – A H. (peplos) stands to r., looking towards Herakles. She holds up a branch with apples in her l. hand, and with her r. seems to touch (hold back?) the snake.

Bronze mirror-covers

45.* (= Herakles 2712 with bibl.) Berlin (DDR), Staatl. Mus. Misc. 8637. – About 300 B.C. (Züchner). – Herakles, tree and serpent, two H. H. 1 (peplos, himation over legs) sits to l., her r. hand placed upon the head of the serpent. H. 2 (peplos, himation) stands behind her sister, her torso frontal, her head turned to l. She looks up at the branches of the tree as she reaches out and picks an apple.

46. Baltimore, Walters Art Gall. 54.742. – Hill, D. K., Hesperia 12, 1943, 106–108 fig. 10; Reeder, E. D. (ed.), Hellenistic Art in the Walters Art Gall. (1988) 128–129. – 3rd cent. B.C. («Hellenistic» – Hill). – Herakles, who leans on his club, gazes to r. at a H. (peplos, shoes, necklace, bracelet) who stands in three-quarter view to l., looking down at a small Eros. The H. may have held out the apples in her r. hand.

ROMAN

Wall-paintings

47. (= Herakles 2770* with bibl.) Pompeii I 7, 7 (Casa del Sacerdos Amandus). – Maiuri, A., Le pitture delle case di M. Fabius Amandus, del Sacerdos Amandus e di P. Cornelius Tegetes (1938) pl. A; idem, NotSc 52, 1927, 22–23 pl. 2. – C. 35–45 A.D. (Bastet/De Vos, Proposta 81–82) or c. 50 A.D. (Schefold). – Three H. are grouped behind and to r. of a snake-entwined altar. All wear Doric chitons and diadems. The two lefthand H. seem to be expostulating with Herakles, the other is distressed and hides her face in her garment. Some scholars suspect a Hellenistic original.

48. (= Herakles 2771* with bibl.) Pompeii V 2, 10. Destroyed. – Mau, A., RM 5, 1890, 268–269. – Third Style, c. 10 B.C.–20 A.D. – The garden is delimited by walls. Three H. stand in front of and to r. of the tree around a snake-entwined altar. All wear peploi. Two look towards Herakles, the other, away.

Stone reliefs

49.* (= Herakles 2781 with bibl.) Stone relief. Budapest, Nat. Mus. 97.1913. From Intercisa (Dunapentile). – 3rd/4th cent. A.D. – A H. (long dress, heavy cloak wrapped about body and over back of head, diadem?) stands frontally, handing an apple to Herakles.

50. (= Herakles 1745*/2773 with bibl.) Stone relief vase, «Tazza Albani». Rome, Mus. Torlonia 383. – Augustan. – Herakles, tree with serpent, a H. who picks up apples.

Stucco reliefs

51. (= Herakles 2774 with bibl.) Stucco relief. Rome, Underground Basilica near the Porta Maggiore. – Carcopino, J., La basilique pythagoricienne de la Porte Majeure (1927); Bastet, F., De Datum van het grote Hypogaeum bij de Porta Maggiore te Rome (1958); Strong, E./Jolliffe, N., JHS 44, 1924, 65–111. – Tiberius or Claudius. – A H. stands to r., in tunic and cloak which covers the back of her head, carrying in her l. hand the apples (the object in her r. hand is unclear) for Herakles who is seated.

52. (= Herakles 2775 with bibl.) Stucco relief. Ostia, Isola Sacra T. 95. – Trajanic. – Herakles, tree, two H., one of whom is seated, the other standing.

Intaglio

53. (= Herakles 2782 with bibl.) Rectangular sard intaglio. London, BM Gems 1870. – On one side, Herakles; on the other, a H. standing to l. and holding out a bowl to the serpent.

B.3. Hesperids with Atlas and Herakles

South Italian vases

54. (= Atlas 13* with bibl., = Herakles 2685 with bibl.) Neck-amphora, Campanian rf. London, BM F 148. – LCS 667, 1: Owl-pillar Group. – About 450–430 B.C. – A H. (chiton, sakkos) stands frontally, looking to r. She holds her l. hand below one of the serpent's heads. Atlas moves towards the tree.

55. Calyx-krater, Campanian rf. Syracuse, Mus. Reg. 36209. From Syracuse. – LCS 198, 6: Chequer P.; CVA 1, pl. 7 (849), 4. – About 410–390 B.C. – Tree with serpent; bearded man, in himation, his r. arm extended towards the tree; a woman (peplos, bracelet), leaning forward towards the tree. There may have been one or two figures, perhaps female, to l. of the tree. The woman may be a H., the man, Atlas.

56.* (= Astra 74, = Atlas 12*, = Herakles 2686 with bibl.) Volute-krater, Apulian rf. Naples, Mus.

Naz. 81934 (H 3255). From Ruvo. – RVAp II 496, 42: Darius P. – About 340–320 B.C. – Seven H., with Herakles before Atlas, Athena, Nike, Phosphoros and Helios. H. 1 (peplos, sphendone) dances by herself at the l., holding her garment and playing with a ball (?). H. 2 (peplos, kekryphalos) leans against a pillar, holding fan and alabastron. H. 3 (chiton, kekryphalos) sits on a large chest, with a mirror (?) in her l. hand. H. 4 (chiton, himation, kekryphalos) stands to r., dangling a fillet from her l. hand. H. 5 (peplos, himation, kekryphalos) sits in front of H. 4, an open box in her r. hand. H. 6 (chiton, himation, kekryphalos) is seated holding a large flower. H. 7 (chiton, stephane) stands in front of H. 6, holding a wreath. All H. wear shoes and jewellery.

57.* (= Astra 56, = Atlas 19 with bibl., = Herakles 2688 with bibl.) Amphora (Panathenaic shape) fr., Apulian rf. Once Berlin, Staatl. Mus. F 3245. From Ruvo. – RVAp II 499, 56: «by, or very close to, the Darius P.» – About 340–320 B.C. – Above, Herakles before Atlas, with Selene, Hermes and Maia (?); below, garden of the H. H. 1 (chiton, himation, shoes, stephane) stands to l., holding a bowl for the serpent. H. 2 (peplos, himation, sphendone) sits to r. on a stool, a lyre in her l. hand, her r. raised towards Eros. Both H. wear jewellery. The picture will have included other H. originally.

Hesperides 57

58.* (= Herakles 2688a with bibl.) Volute-krater, Apulian rf. New York Market. From Apulia. – About 340–320 B.C., Underworld P. (Trendall). – Above, Aphrodite and Peitho (?), Selene in a quadriga, Pan, Athena; below, Hermes, Herakles before Atlas enthroned, Ge and a H. The H. (chiton, himation, shoes, sphendone, jewellery) sits to r. on a camp-stool beside the serpent-entwined tree, her feet on a foot-stool. She looks round, holding an alabastron.

C. Hesperids with other heroes or deities

Attic vases

59. Squat lekythos, rf. France, private coll. (ex Lausanne). From Greece. - *ARV*² 1317; Schefold/Jung, SBIV 165-166 figs. 200a-c. - About 420-410 B.C. - At least four H., with a centaur and, above, Artemis in a chariot drawn by two fawns. H. 1 stands to l. of the tree, in profile to r., picking apples. H. 2 leans forward to l., r. leg raised, her head turned back; before her, a hydria. H. 3, behind H. 2, stands in three-quarter view to r., picking an apple with her r. hand and holding in her l. a pad for cushioning a hydria. H. 4 stands to l., holding a hydria on her raised r. knee. All H. wear sleeveless chitons, radiate stropharia and jewellery.

60. Hydria, rf. Thebes, Mus. - About 410-390 B.C. - Five H. around a tree (no snake), with Eros and two youths. H. 1 (decorated peplos, sphendone, bracelets, necklace, earring) is seated to l., looking round. Eros leans against her shoulder. H. 2 (decorated peplos) stands to r., perhaps picking fruit from the tree. H. 3 (chiton with shoulder strap, necklace, earring) bends forward to l., as though to pick up apples. A basket stands behind her. H. 4 (decorated peplos, cord binding hair, jewellery) sits to r., looking back (the object above her l. hand may be a flower or perhaps the finial of a sceptre). H. 5 (peplos) leans forward to l. The two youths, each in travelling garments and carrying a pair of javelins, may be Argonauts.

South Italian vases

61. (= Herakles 2705 with bibl.) Hydria, Campanian rf. Naples, Mus. Naz. 82294 (H 2852). From Avella. - LCS 429, 487; Danaid, P. - About 330-320 B.C. - Hero, tree, H. The H. (peplos, himation, headband) stands to l., offering a phiale to the serpent and holding a long palm(?) branch. Brommer, Perseus (1960) 88, takes the youth to be Herakles; Beazley, JHS 63, 1943, 76, is not so sure.

62.* (= Atlas 28, = Herakles 2739 with bibl.) Hydria, Paestan rf. Lisbon, Duke of Palmella. - RVP 258, 1022; Boston Orestes P.; PAdd 14, 204 bis pl. 1d; Rocha Pereira, M., Humanitas 11, 1959, 5-13 figs. 4-8; eadem, Greek Vases in Portugal (1962) 103-115 pls. 54-58. - About 340-330 B.C. - H. 1 (peplos, wreath) stands in three-quarter view to r., holding a flat basket with apples. H. 2 (decorated peplos, sphendone, fillet over l. wrist) stands to r., picking an apple with her r. hand and holding in the other a phiale from which the serpent drinks. Between her and the tree, a basket full of apples. To r. of the tree is a youth (Perseus?), and a third H. (peplos, sakkos) who stands to l., holding up an apple.

63.* Volute-krater, Italiote rf. Genoa, Mus. Civ. From Genoa. - Paribeni, R., Ausonia 5, 1911, 24 fig. 4; Schauenburg 475 fig. 21. - About 350 B.C. - In the centre, tree with serpent; to l., four H.; to r., a youth and two H. H. 1 (top left) leans forward to r., l. leg raised. H. 2 is seated to l. but turns round to pick an apple. H. 3 (bottom left) sits to r. H. 4 stands in three-quarter view to r., her l. hand raised towards the snake. H. 5 (top right) sits to r. but turns round to pick fruit.

H. 6 stands to l. All six H. wear girdled peploi, and the three seated seem to have himatia over their legs. The hair of H. 6 is bound with a sphendone.

D. Form of Hesperids or composition of scene uncertain

GREEK

Sculptural group

64. (= Atlas 6 with bibl., = Herakles 2689 with bibl.) Sculptural group, cedar-wood, originally placed in the treasury of the Epidamnians at Olympia, but the Eleians removed the statues of the H. which Paus. saw in the Heraion. Lost. By the Lacedaimonian Theokles, son of Hegylos. An inscription on the «polos» said that Theokles «had made it with his son». - About 550 B.C. (cf. Steuben 97 n. 89). - Paus. mentions five H., but their height, form, and relation to Atlas, Herakles and the tree are all unclear. Purgold (Berl. Philol. Wochenschrift 7, 1887, 130-132) conjectured that the group originally occupied one pediment of the Heraion.

Painting

65. (= Atlas 10 with bibl., = Herakles 2684) Painted screens between the columns in the cella of the temple of Zeus at Olympia. By Panainos. - Volcker-Janssen, W., «Klassische Paradeigmata. Die Gemälde des Panainos im Zeustempel zu Olympia», Boreas 10, 1987, 11-31. - About 430 B.C. - One panel showed two H. carrying apples, doubtless connected with the panel representing Atlas and Herakles.

Attic vase

66. Lekythos fr., Attic rf. Agrigento, Mus. Reg. From Agrigento. - *ARV*² 229, 48; Eucharides P. - About 480-470 B.C. - A H. stands to r., wearing a chiton and himation; to r., the base of a tree with coiled serpent. The complete scene may have included Herakles or another H. to r. of the tree.

ROMAN

Painting

67. Herculeum. Lost. - Bonucci, C., Bollett 1829, 68; Ruggiero, M., Scavi di Ercolano 560; Helbig, Wandgemälde no. 1127. - «Ercolo e le tre Esperidi e l'albero custodito del dragone, innanzi di cui (sic) sorge un picciolo altare ricolmo di offerte» (Bonucci in Ruggiero).

Lamp

68. (= Herakles 2784) Lamp. Alexandria, Graeco-Rom. Mus. 6663. - Three H. appear under the tree, with Herakles at the l.

E. Uncertain representations

Shield-band

69. Bronze shield-band relief. From Perachora. - Payne, H., Perachora I 147 pl. 49, 2-3. - 1st half of 6th cent. B.C. - Male moving to r. Tree. Woman (peplos) standing to r. but looking back, perhaps holding something (fruit) in her r. hand. Payne suggests «Peleus lying in wait for Thetis». Bol (forthcoming) tentatively suggests Atlas and a H. A fragmentary duplicate: Olympia B 8062.

Attic vases

70. (= Herakles 2734 with bibl.) Cup (Siana), bf. Taranto, Mus. Naz. I.G. 4342. - ABV 66, 55; Heidelberg P. - About 560-550 B.C. - Fountainhouse; woman (peplos, cloak, headband) standing to l. but looking round; palm; woman in similar dress and attitude to the first; tree; bearded man running to l. C. Drago (CVA 3, 5) speaks of Herakles in the garden of the H. but Beazley does not identify the scene; Miller, H. F., The Iconography of the Palm in Greek Art (1979) 20-21. 138-139, denies this interpretation. If the women are H., the scene is uncanonical, but the other two pictures on the cup are Heraklean (= Herakles 1766/1785).

71. (= Herakles 2735/2823* with bibl.) Hydria, bf. Boulogne, Mus. Beaux-Arts 406. - ABV 332, 21; Priam P. - About 520-510 B.C. - Chariot and Athena; Herakles attacks serpent at fountain-house; woman (chiton, sakkos) holds up a hydria to draw water. Schefold (SB II 124) and Moon (AGAI 104, 116 n. 21), following a suggestion of Beazley (CVA Oxford 2, 100), think that the woman may be a H.

72. (= Atlas 22* with bibl.) Neck-amphora, bf. Munich, Antikenslg. 1540. - About 500 B.C. - Two naked women, their hair bound up in kroboloi, support by the arms a bearded giant also naked. Kunze-Götte (CVA 8, 87-89) and Schefold (SB II 53) take the women to be daughters of Okeanos supporting Prometheus. The alternative is that the women are H., and the giant, Atlas.

72a) (= Herakles 2681) Pointed amphora, rf. Germany, private. - Cahn, H. A., in AGRP (3rd Sympos. Copenhagen 1987) 107-116 figs 1-7; Copenhagen P. [Isler-Kerenyi, Cahn]. - About 480-470 B.C. - Okeanos and Atlas (?) seated beside the tree of the H., with Strymon, Nilos, two other men, a youth, and four women all standing, with a tendril in one hand and a reed (?) in the other, and all wearing a himation over a chiton or peplos and a taenia around the head; Athena bringing three apples to Herakles. Given that the men appear to be sons of Okeanos, the women should also be Okeanids rather than H., unless the two are identical here, as in Apoll. Rhod. 4, 1414.

73. Skyphos fr., rf. Athens, NM Acr. 512. From Athens. - ABV 806, 2: «may probably be reckoned as belonging to the following of Douris»; Graef/Langlotz pl. 40. - About 470 B.C. - «On one fr. a veiled woman; on the other, two women, one of them holding fruit - Hesperides?» (Beazley).

74. (= Atlas 24 with bibl., = Herakles 2875 [A], = Iris I 150*) Stamnos, rf. Leningrad, Hermitage B 1559 (B 640, St 1641) and Paris, Louvre. - *ARV*² 639, 56; Providence P. - About 470 B.C. - Herakles entering Olympos. The tree of the H. appears below the r. handle. Petersen (AdI 1859, 297-298), following Gerhard (63), took the figures on the reverse to be Atlas, a H. and Iris; Peredolskaja 111-112 agrees but thinks the bearded male, Dionysos; Brommer (JdI 57, 1942, 112) speaks of Iris and other deities.

75. Cup (merrythought), wg. London, BM D 6. From Athens. - *ARV*² 763, 1; Sotades P.; *Add*² 286; Smith, BMVases 391-392; Robertson, C. M., Greek Painting (1959) 131, 133; Beazley, J. D., Gnomon 13, 1937, 292; Wehgartner, I., Attisch weißgrundige Keramik (1983) 95 pl. 32, 1; Mertens, J., Attic White-ground (1977) 172; Simon, E., in Greek Art: Archaic into Classical (1985) 77. - About 470-460 B.C. - A young woman, in a diaphanous chiton, her hair bound with a sphendone, stands on tip-toe, holding her garment and reaching up for a fruit from the top of a tree. Originally there was a second woman to l. of the tree, either seated or perhaps rather bending over to gather fallen fruit. This figure is named Melisi or Melisa (→Melissa); the name of the other woman ended in ...gro. Beazley calls the women H.; Wehgartner thinks the scene not mythological.

76. Oinochoe, rf. Naples, Mus. Naz. (ex Spinelli 692). From Suessula. - *ARV*² 1403, 2; Spinelli P.: «I ought to say that I have sometimes suspected the two Spinelli vases of being Campanian.» - About 420-400 B.C. - «Herakles with a woman and an old man. The woman offers a sprig: a Hesperid?» (Beazley).

77. (= Atlas 25 with bibl., = Herakles 1565/3411* with bibl.) Pelike, rf. Paris, Louvre MN 734. From Benghazi. - *ARV*² 1472, 3; Pasithea P. - About 380-360 B.C. - Two women watch Herakles who is seated as he drinks from a kantharos and converses with a bearded man leaning on a staff. One woman leans against her companion who holds an oinochoe from which she has poured wine for the hero. Both women wear peploi and earrings. The women may be H. and the bearded man Atlas.

78. (= Herakles 2719* with bibl.) Bell-krater, rf. Amsterdam, Allard Pierson 8229. - Vazen uit de Schenking Six 18-19, 45; attributed, correctly, to the Pourtalès P. - About 360-350 B.C. - A seated woman (himation, beaded fillet, an open box beside her) offers Herakles a branch with golden apples, watched by a second woman (peplos, beaded fillet?) who sits to l., looking back. An Eros with a wreath, Hermes and a seated man (Atlas?) complete the scene. The garden setting is indicated by a tree, various plants, and a bird. The scene probably shows a H. handing over an apple-branch to Herakles, rather than Herakles giving it to Hebe or Hera.

79. (= Atlas 27 with bibl.) Pelike, rf. Leningrad, Hermitage 3и. 2 (St 1788). - About 360 B.C. - In the centre, a tree with golden fruit which a small Eros picks. A woman (himation around lower body and l. arm) reaches up for an apple. A second woman (peplos, sakkos), to l. of the tree, reaches for a fruit while looking down. A third woman (peplos, sphendone), at r., leans forward watching the scene. All three women wear gilded earrings, necklaces and bracelets. The picture is completed by a bearded satyr, a young satyr-pan seated playing the flute, and Dionysos seated. Stephani (Die Vasen-Sammlung der kaiserlichen Ermitage [1869] no. 1788) calls the women maenads, but given the location (garden of the H.) and their number, they are probably H., as Schefold and Metzger assume.

80. (= Herakles 2737) Calyx-krater, rf. London, BM 1907.7-15.2. - Walters, H. B., JHS 41, 1921, 137-138 pl. 7, v.3. - About 350-330 B.C. - Woman standing to r. Youth seated to l. Two women, one standing, the other seated, on either side of a fruit-tree, flanked by small Erotes. Below, an Eros (action unclear) and a naked boy. A fourth woman, above the r. handle, may be part of the scene on the reverse. Walters speaks of a «scene in the garden of the Hesperides» but does not identify the figures. Brommer, *Vasenlisten*³ 118, lists the vase with some hesitation, noting that Herakles is absent.

South Italian vases

81. (= Herakles 2738) Lebes gamikos, Lucanian rf. Berlin (DDR), Staatl. Mus. F 3196. - LCS 72, 366 pl. 33, 9: Intermediate Gr., connected with Minniti Gr.; Gerhard pl. 21, 4-5. - About 410-380 B.C. - Two women, one on either side of the tree against which they lean. Both wear peploi, fillets, bracelets and necklaces, and the righthand holds a thyrsos. If the women are H., the bearded man with phiale and branch may be Atlas rather than Herakles (Gerhard).

82. Bottle, Paestan rf. Paestum, Mus. Naz. 5180. From Paestum (Tempa del Prete). - RVP 286-287, 166 pl. 181: P. of Naples 1778; ArchRepts 1955, 57 fig. 10; AA 1956, 409 fig. 133. - About 320-300 B.C. - Youth standing to r., l. leg raised on a rock, a phiale in his outstretched r. hand. Two women, identically dressed (black peplos, himation, sphendone, shoes, jewellery), one standing, the other seated on rocks, gather in their himatia golden fruit shaken from a tree by a small Eros. Two other Erotes complete the picture. If the scene is mythological, the women will be H.

Stone reliefs

83. (= Herakles 1706/2706 with bibl.) Marble metope on the east facade of the Hephaisteion at Athens. - Sauer, B., Das sogenannte Theseion und sein plastischer Schmuck (1899) 178-179 pl. 6; Thompson, H., Hesperia 18, 1949, 245 pl. 64; idem, AJA 66, 1962, 340-341. 347. - About 450-440 B.C. - Herakles with apples, and a woman (peplos) who stands in three-quarter view to r., her r. hand clasping her garment, her l. arm bent and raised. Furtwängler (ML 12, 2227) identified the woman as a H. holding a branch with apples; Robert (*Heldensage*⁴ 2, 493 n. 1) proposed Hera or Hebe; Schneider (Zwölf Kämpfe des Herakles [1888] 65), Athena with a wreath. More recent scholarship favours a H. (Sauer, Koch, Thompson) or Athena (Morgan, Woodford 225. 335 n. 11, Boardman). The object in the woman's missing hand is variously restored: a wreath, apple or spear for a H., a spear perhaps for Athena.

84. Sarcophagus fr., Asiatic. Ostia, Porto, S. Lucia. From Ostia (?). - Wiegartz, KISäulenSark 77 n. 20; 166 pl. 40c. - About 165 A.D. - Meleager and, at l., a woman, in dress and cloak, who holds fruit in a fold of her mantle. Wiegartz thinks the woman may be a H. appropriate to the realm beyond Okeanos where the souls of heroes dwell. But this is most uncertain.

See also → Herakles 3415.

F. Incorrect identifications

85. (= Herakles 2733* with bibl.) Skyphos (?) fr., Attic bf. Athens, Agora AP 840. From Athens. - About 560 B.C. - Lower part of a woman to r., legs of a male to r., legs of a second male to l., part of an altar (?). De Coursey Fales identifies the first male as Herakles: this is possible, but nothing in the picture suggests the garden of the H.

86. Glass paste intaglio. Berlin, Staatl. Mus. FG 3096. - Furtwängler, Beschreibung 138 no. 3096 pl. 26. - «Frau, halbnackt, eine Schlange fütternd, die sich um einen Baum ringelt (Hesperide)». Furtwängler makes a similar identification for his nos. 3661-3664, but the female figure is doubtless Hygieia, as on the Berry gem in Bloomington, Indiana Univ. (A Selection of Ancient Gems from the Coll. of Burton Y. Berry [1965] 40-41 no. 59).

COMMENTARY

Representations of the H. begin towards the middle of the 6th cent. B.C. with a lost work, a cedar-wood group at Olympia (64), said by Pausanias to have included five H. Unless, however, the Attic bf. cup in Taranto (70) really does depict the H., the earliest preserved representations appear on an Attic bf. neck amphora (6) of c. 520-510 B.C. and a tetradrachm (24) of Cyrene to be dated c. 500 B.C. The H. are most frequent in Greek art of the 5th (1. 7. 8. 25-27. 54. 59. 65. 66) and 4th (2-5a. 28-41. 45. 55-58. 60-63) centuries B.C., especially vases produced in Athens (1. 7. 8. 26-35. 59. 60. 66) and the Greek colonies of S. Italy (2-5a. 36-41. 54. 55-58. 61. 62. 63?). Relatively few examples - the relief vases 42-44, the mirror 46, perhaps the theatre relief 9 and the ring 10 - can be placed in the Hellenistic period. Despite the popularity of Herakles in Etruscan art, there are no representations of the H. The H. again occur with some frequency in Roman art (11. 16-23. 47-53. 67. 68), especially down to c. 200 A.D. (12-15. 17. 18. 21. 23?. 47-48. 50-52. 53), but even later (11. 16. 19. 20. 22. 49), in a wide variety of media: in paintings (47. 48. 67), sarcophagi (12-16), coins (18-20), sculpture both relief and freestanding (17. 22. 23. 49. 50), stucco reliefs (51. 52), mosaic (11), on a vase (21), a lamp (68), and a gem (53).

The H. are rarely seen alone, only on one Attic (1) and five S. Italian (2-5a) vases. Most commonly, they are associated with Herakles who has journeyed to the fabulous garden to fetch the golden apples. Two main iconographic traditions are discernible. In the first, the hero seizes the apples by force; the H. recoil in fear or consternation, sometimes gesturing wildly, fleeing or cowering. This conception first occurs on three Attic vases (6-8) of the period 520-440 B.C. On 7 one H. runs after Herakles, apparently remonstrating or pleading for the return of the apples. After a long hiatus the motif reappears in two works of the 2nd or 1st cent. B.C., a relief panel (9) from the theatre at Delphi and a gem from Pompeii (10). On the latter three small H. flee from the hero and this, with variations, is the more common Roman form (11-23). In these Roman scenes, one (13. 16-18. 20. 21) or three (11. 12. 14. 19. 23) H. are present, usually smaller, sometimes much smaller, than Herakles. They normally run away to right or left, but on the Konya sarcophagus (16) and the Vatican altar (17), a H. sits or lies on the ground, head turned away, in an attitude of dejection (some have thought the H. on 17 to be asleep).

Leaving aside the early coin of Cyrene (24), the second iconographic tradition seems to begin, in Athens, about 420 B.C., with the original of the three-figure relief (25) showing Herakles seated calmly between two standing H., one of whom holds apples in the overfall of her peplos, the other, a small branch with apples. This famous relief is followed by a considerable series (26-41) of Attic and S. Italian vase-paintings of the late 5th and 4th centuries. On the Attic vases (26-35), while Herakles waits quietly, sometimes standing (27. 29. 33. 35), sometimes seated (26. 28. 30-32. 34), one or more of the H. collect apples for the hero (26. 27. 30-32. 34. 35). Emphasis is placed on the idyllic setting and the peaceful nature of the encounter, as well as on the beauty of the H., one of whom, standing (26. 31. 34) or seated (29. 30. 33. 35), seems especially attracted to Herakles. Many scholars since the 19th cent. (e.g. Götze, JdI 63/64, 1948/49, 95-96; Schefold, K., Gymnasium 61, 1954, 292; earlier references in Thompson, H., Hesperia 18, 1949, 250) have postulated an Athenian story involving a love-affair between Herakles and a H., but this may be a misinterpretation. In five (30-32. 34. 35) of the scenes Erotes are present, either helping to pick apples (30. 32. 34. 35) or linking the hero and one of the H. (compare also the mirror 46). The pictures often include other figures: Athena (27), Iolaos (27. 33), Okeanos (29), youths (32 - tribal heroes as on 26?), Nike (33), satyrs (30. 33. 34) or Pan (33-35). On all these vases, as in Euripides, Hipp. 742-751, the garden of the H. has become a holy realm of bliss (sometimes specifically Dionysiac) and of immortality which both Herakles and the H. enjoy. In this regard, some scholars (e.g. Robert, *Heldensage*⁴ 2, 490-498; Metzger, Représentations 207; Schauenburg 480; Kron, Phylenheroen 167; Harrison 79-80; Woodford 191-194) suppose that, at least in popular belief, the garden of the H. was identified with the Isles of the Blessed (Elysian Fields).

This second tradition, the peaceful encounter, is the one followed by the S. Italian vase-painters in the 4th cent. (36-41). There are, however, new elements. On 36-39 a H., seated except on 38, offers a bowl of liquid to the serpent. The same motif occurs on 2-5a, 57, 61 and 62, all of which are 4th cent. vases from S. Italy, and on one later work, the gem 53. Many scholars (e.g. Robert, *Heldensage*⁴ 2, 492-493; Brommer 1942, 120; Schauenburg 480) have thought that the H., out of love for Herakles, is drugging the snake, and there is some late literary support for this idea (Verg. Aen. 4, 481-486; Sen. Herc. f. 530-532; perhaps Tabula Albana, FGrH 40, though σπάροντα λαβόντι, even if correct, is ambiguous), but the H. may simply be feeding the serpent (see Woodford 327 n. 84). The apple-picking motif is also found on some (3. 4. 5a. 36. 41) of these vases.

In two cases, 37 and 39, a H. presents a branch to Herakles, and the same motif occurs on the later relief-bowl 44 (compare also the righthand H. on 25); this may also be the correct interpretation of the action on 78. The picture on the late Apulian patera 41 is curious in two respects: the two H. are large, the hero small; and the H. sit upon or lean against hydriai. The connection of the H. with fresh water is preserved in Apoll. Rhod. 4, 1411-1449. In art, in addition to the patera, the H. appear as water-carriers on the Attic pyxis 1, of c. 470, where a fountain-house forms part of the scene, on the Meidian squat-lekythos 59, and on the Apulian volute-crater 2 where a spring wells up at the base of the tree with water pouring from trumpet-spouts. This may suggest that the bf. hydria 71 does in fact show a H. at a fountain-house, with Herakles attacking Ladon. On the extraordinary new Paestan squat-lekythos 5a a H. leans against a laver (there are also women about a laver on the reverse of 4: are they H.?).

This second tradition also appears on bronze mirrors (45. 46) and relief vases (42. 43) of the Early Hellenistic period, and in the Roman period occasionally in paintings (47. 48), stone (49. 50) and stucco (51. 52) reliefs and gems (53). In the two paintings, which may derive from a Hellenistic original, the three H. stand around a snake-entwined altar within a walled temenos (compare also 67).

A third tradition, found especially in S. Italian vases, shows one or more H. in the garden while Herakles makes his request to King Atlas (56-58), or shows a H. with Atlas beside the snake-entwined tree (54. 55). Compare also 64 and 65.

The Attic pointed amphora, 72a, to be dated about 480-470, provides a most unusual variant: within an idyllic garden Athena brings Herakles the apples of the H. Okeanos, Strymon and Nilos are certainly present, as well as four unidentified women; if they are H., the representation would be unique, for nowhere else does a H. carry tendril and reed, although we may note that the H. do sometimes have a connection with water.

On a few vases (59-63) of the late 5th and 4th centuries the H. appear with other figures: Artemis in her chariot and a centaur on 59, two youths (Argonauts?) on 60, a youth on 61 and 62 (Perseus?). The connection of the Argonauts with the H. is also to be found on the Meidian Hydria 26 (see Furtwängler, FR I 43-44).

The H. vary considerably in number in Greek art: though one (24. 37. 43. 44. 46. 54. 58. 61), two (3. 6. 25. 29. 38-41. 45. 65) and three (5. 7. 10. 26. 30. 31. 33-35. 42. 62) are preferred, four (1. 5a. 27. 32.

59), five (4. 36. 60. 64), six (8. 38a. 63), seven (56) and even eleven (2) are also found. The number seems largely to depend upon the area to be covered by the artist. In Roman art, however, one (13. 16-18. 20. 49-51. 53) or three (11. 12. 14. 19. 21. 23. 47. 48. 67. 68) H. are normal, though two (15. 52) are sometimes to be seen.

The H. are not dressed in any particular way by which they might be recognised; their clothing changes according to the date of the work of art, and the tradition and whim of the artist, who is often concerned, especially on the vases, with variety within his picture. They may wear chiton, peplos or combine chiton or peplos with a himation. Their garments may be enriched with patterns, especially on the Paestan vases (5a. 36. 62). They may go barefoot or wear shoes. They may wear their hair long (e.g. 5a), have it bound with a simple cord or fillet, or arranged more elaborately with sphendone, kekryphalos or sakkos, and sometimes a radiate diadem. They often wear elaborate jewellery: necklace, earrings, bracelets, even an anklet (5a). Their youth and beauty is suggested by the richness of their apparel and jewellery. On Attic vases of the 4th cent. one or more H. may appear half-naked, the himation revealing the torso (30-32. 35) or slipping away from one shoulder (33). This voluptuousness is rare elsewhere (see the left hand H. on 5a, as well as 23 and perhaps 14). The S. Italian artists like to show, especially on larger vases, the H. engaged in homely pursuits: looking into a mirror (2. 5a. 38), holding a box (3. 56) or taking out a fillet from a box (2), teasing a bird with a wreath (5a), carrying a fan (2. 56), a scent-bottle (56. 58), a fillet (3. 36. 56. 62), a flower (56), a wreath (5a. 56) or even a palm (?) branch (61).

Despite their reputation as singers in literature, the H. are only twice depicted with musical instruments, both on 4th cent. vases, a tympanon on 33 and a lyre on 57.

The H. are named on five Greek vases, three Attic (1. 26. 29) and two S. Italian (3. 36), of the 5th and 4th cent. B.C. They are not named on any Roman work. On the earliest vase, the London pyxis (1) of c. 470, the names are Hippolyte, Mapsaura and Thetis. The Meidias hydria (26) has Chrysothemis, Asterope and Lipara «all bright names, suggesting the glow of youth and happiness», as Harrison, 78, remarks. On the New York pelike (29) one of the two H. is called Pasithea, which is the name of a Nereid in Hes. theog. 246, and of a Grace in Hom. Il. 14, 276. The Apulian calyx-crater (3) has Elye and Aretyosa. Five names are given on the Paestan squat lekythos 36: Aiopis, Antheia, Kalypso, Mirmesa (?) and Nelisa. Of all these names, only Aretyosa (Arethousa) has literary authority. Kalypso is also understandable, for the nymph of that name dwelt in the far West near the H. and, at least in one story, was a daughter of Atlas. If the two figures on the Sotadean cup (75) in London are H. rather than mortal women, we would have two further appellations: a name ending in -gro, and perhaps Melissa (see Beazley, Gnomon 1937, 292).

IAN MCPHEE

HESPERIE

(Ἑσπερία) Nymphen der Troas, in die Aisakos, ein auf dem Lande lebender Sohn des Priamos, verliebt war. Auf der Flucht vor ihm wurde sie von einer Schlange gebissen und starb, während Aisakos sich vor Kummer darüber ins Meer stürzte und in einen Tauchervogel (mergus) verwandelt wurde.

LITERARISCHE QUELLEN: Die Sage findet sich im Zusammenhang bei Ov. met. 11, 767-795; Serv. Aen. 4, 254 hat sie ohne den Namen H. Daß Aisakos zum Vogel wurde, steht auch bei Apollod. bibl. 3, 147, doch heißt dort die Nymphe Asterope und Aisakos ist mit ihr vermählt. Seine Mutter war nach der einen Version eine Nymphe, er hatte die Schergabe geerbt. So prophezeite er den Untergang Trojas durch seinen Bruder → Alexandros (Apollod. bibl. 3, 149). Er fehlt in LIMC I, da keine Darstellung bekannt war.

BIBLIOGRAPHIE: Collinge, A., AntK 31, 1988, 9-19; Knaack, G., RE 11 (1893) 1046-47 s.v. «Aisakos I»; Roscher, W.H., ML 11 (1884-86) 196-197 s.v. «Aisakos I» (anstelle von Thetis lies Tethys; vgl. Ov. met. 11, 784); Simon, E., Greek Art, Archaic into Classical, Kongreß Cincinnati 1982, ed. Boulter, C.G. (1985) 78.

KATALOG

Sichere Darstellungen der Sage sind nicht bekannt. Möglich ist:

1.* (= Archemoros 11, = Eurydike 17, = Kadmos I 13, jeweils mit Lit.) Schale, fr., att. wgr. London BM D 7. Wie die Gegenstücke D 5 und D 6 vom selben Fundplatz, einem attischen Grab. - ARV² 763, 3: Töpfer Sotades und Sotadesmaler; Add² 286. - 460-50 v. Chr. - Aus Schilf erhebt sich r. oben eine riesige, giftige Dämpfe hauchende Schlange. L. unten am Bildrand bricht eine Frau in die Knie (nur ihre von einem feinen Chiton bedeckten Beine sind erhalten). Darüber flieht ein ländlich bekleideter Mann (Fellkappe, Fellumhang, banausischer Bartwuchs) mit weitem Schritt, sich mit einem Stein in der Rechten zu der Schlange umwendend. Mit der Linken schultert er eine dünne Keule. Das kleine Bild hat in letzter Zeit vier verschiedene Deutungen erfahren: Aristaios und Eurydike (Burn, L., AntK 28, 1985, 95-100); Aisakos und H. (Simon); Orion und Artemis (Griffiths, A., JHS 106, 1986, 61-70); Kadmos und thebanische Ortspersonifikation (Collinge). Davon ist die Oriondeutung von vornherein aufzugeben (vgl. die Widerlegung durch Collinge 18-19), denn Artemis als große Olympierin würde kaum in einer so verzweifelten Lage gezeigt. Die Deutung auf → Kadmos hat das Bildschema zum Teil auf ihrer Seite (vgl. Collinge Taf. 3), aber Kadmos pflegt ein Wassergefäß zu halten und keine Keule: Selbst dem persiflierten Kadmos auf einem Kabirennapf (→ Kadmos I 20; Collinge Taf. 3, 5) ist eine Situla zugeordnet. Ferner sinken weder → Harmonia noch Ortspersonifikationen wie → Thebe vor der Schlange in die Knie, sie sind den thebanischen Drachen ja gewohnt. Außerdem ist der Bart des Mannes im Zusammenhang mit der Kappe nicht als «skythisch» und so zum «Orientalen» Kadmos passend (Collinge 13-14) zu interpretieren, sondern als banausisch. Den nächsten Vergleich bietet auf Lekythen jener Zeit der Fährmann Charon (vgl. etwa → Charon I 5*. 9*-11*). Kadmos dagegen pflegt - vom Kabirennapf abgesehen - unbärtig und mit edlem Profil abgebildet zu werden. Auch der Sotadesmaler hätte sich bei aller Originalität daran gehalten, denn seine drei wgr. Schalen bringen keine Persiflagen wie der Napf. - Die Deutungen von Burn und Simon beziehen sich auf verwandte Mythen: Liebesverfolgung, bei der die Verfolgte (Eurydike oder H.) von einer Schlange gebissen wird. Beide Mythen sind spät überliefert, die Sage von Aisakos und H. allerdings besser. Auch gehören Vogelverwandlungen zum alten Sagengut; die «Ornithogonia der Boio» war schon bei Philochoros (FGH 214) zitiert. Zu Aisakos paßt das banausische Auftreten besser als zu → Aristaios, dessen Darstellungen sehr anders sind. Aisakos mied den Palast seines Vaters und lebte unter den einfachen Leuten auf dem Land (Ov. met. 11, 764-766). Das Schilf gehört zwar zum Drachen, paßt aber auch zu dem Tauchervogel, in den Aisakos in seinem Liebeskummer verwandelt wurde, als er sich ins Wasser stürzte. Unter diesen Vögeln gibt es Hauben- und Kappentaucher; vgl. Brehms Tierleben ed. Strassen VI (1922) 90-91. Die Mütze des Mannes auf der Schale würde sich zu dieser Metamorphose eignen.

KOMMENTAR

Von den verschiedenen neuen Interpretationen der Londoner Schalen D 5 - D 7 sind die vorzuziehen, die diese seit der Antike zusammengehörenden Werke auf einen gemeinsamen Nenner bringen. Burn faßt alle drei als «honeypots» auf: Das Kind Glaukos auf D 5 (= Glaukos II 1) war in einen Pithos voll Honig gefallen und ertrunken; die eine Nymphe auf D 6 hat einen von der Biene hergeleiteten Namen (→ Melissa); der hypothetische Aristaios lehrte die Menschen die Gewinnung des Honigs. Nach Simon liegt der gemeinsame Nenner auf einem verwandten Gebiet. Die drei Schalen dienten wohl für νηφάλια, weinlose Spenden aus Wasser, Milch und Honig im chthonischen Kult, zu dem Spenden für Tote wie für Nymphen gehörten. H. auf D 7 und Melissa auf D 6 sind Nymphen, Aisakos war ein Nymphensohn. Die Nymphenverehrung ging vor allem vom Landvolk aus, von Hirten, Jägern, Bauern und Fischern; vgl. Herter, H., RE XVII 2 (1937) 1555 s.v. «Nymphai»; Aisakos ist einer von ihnen, er gleicht in seiner Tracht dem von Pan verfolgten Daphnis (→ Daphnis I*). Er war aber auch ein berühmter Seher, der den Untergang Trojas voraussagte. Darin schließt er sich mit → Polyidos auf D 5 und überhaupt mit allen drei «Nymphenschalen» zusammen, denn Nymphen waren mit der Mantik eng verbunden (Herter a.O. 1552). Der Nymphenkult war in Attika, woher die drei Schalen stammen, besonders verwurzelt.

ERIK SIMON

HESPEROS → Astra 74-84

HESPERUS → Stellae

HESTIA

(Ἑστία, dor. Ἰστία, ion. Ἰστῆ, Ἑστῆ) H. est en même temps la divinité du foyer - foyer domestique ou foyer commun des édifices publics - et le nom commun désignant cet autel-foyer.

SOURCES LITTÉRAIRES: Chez Homère, Ἰστῆ signifie seulement le foyer, invoqué avec → Zeus en un important serment, dans quatre passages: Od. 14, 159; 17, 156; 19, 304; 20, 231. Chez Hésiode, theog. 453-454, ce mot désigne une déesse, fille aînée de → Kronos et de → Rhea, donc sœur de → Demeter, → Hera, Zeus, → Poseidon et → Hades. Rien dans ces vers ne la caractérise du point de vue iconographique, mais nous apprenons qu'H. occupe une place de choix dans la lignée des dieux olympiens, puisqu'elle est la première-née de cette génération.

Dans les deux Hymnes homériques à H. d'importants passages méritent d'être signalés: dans Hom. h. 29 elle est mentionnée comme la divinité du foyer fixe, associée à → Hermes; cette association est également attestée dans une inscr. de Thasos, du milieu du III^e s. av. J.-C. (BCH 50, 1926, 244 n° 23 fig. 4), où H. et Hermès sont invoqués en même temps qu'→ Aphrodite; il faut citer aussi un passage de Pausanias (1, 34, 3) mentionnant un culte rendu à H. et à Hermès dans le sanctuaire d'→ Amphiaraios, l'Amphiarion d'Oropos. L'Hymne homérique 24 à H. fait de cette déesse l'intendante d'→ Apollon à Delphes. Cette relation à Apollon apparaît également dans l'Hymne à H. d'Aristonoos de Corinthe, daté de l'ép. hellénistique et conservé dans une longue inscr. remployée dans le Trésor des Athéniens à Delphes (Powell, J. U., Collectanea Alexandrina [1925] 164-165). L'Hymne homérique 24 à H. évoque aussi une statue de la déesse: «l'huile fluide s'écoulant toujours de ses cheveux tressés» (Hom. h. 24, 3) fait allusion à la pratique bien connue de l'onction des statues avec de l'huile parfumée.

Enfin le premier Hymne homérique à Aphrodite met H. en rapport avec Poséidon et encore une fois avec Apollon: la déesse, ayant refusé de les épouser, reçoit de Zeus le privilège de siéger au centre de la maison (μέσση οἴκῳ, 30), de recevoir les offrandes dues aux dieux et d'être considérée par les mortels comme la déesse la plus ancienne et la plus respectable (Hom. h. Ven. 22-32).

Parmi les cultes d'H. il faut signaler celui qui était célébré au Prytanée, l'édifice civique où les magistrats prenaient leur repas en commun auprès du foyer sacré de la Cité. Pindare, dans la XI^e Néméenne dédiée au Prytane Aristagoras de Ténédos, fait mention du lieu de culte d'H., son θάλαμος (v. 3) dans l'enceinte sacrée du Prytanée; il signale également «le sceptre splendide» de la déesse (v. 4), faisant allusion sans aucun doute à la statue d'H. qui tenait un sceptre comme attribut. De telles statues étaient certainement fréquentes dans les lieux de culte consacrés à cette divinité: à Hermione, dans l'est du Péloponnèse, Paus. (2, 35, 1) a vu un sanctuaire consacré à H. mais, ajoute-t-il, ἀγαλμα μὲν ἔστιν οὐδέν: il constate qu'il n'existe pas de statue d'H., remarque importante suggérant que la présence de ces images dans les sanctuaires d'H. était attendue. Il existait d'autres lieux consacrés à H.: par exemple l'endroit proche du foyer dans les lieux d'habitation comportait des images peintes d'H. (Schol. Aristoph. Plutus 395).

Citons enfin un autre témoignage tardif, mais tout aussi important, celui de Porphyre chez Eusèbe, p. e. 3, 11, 7, qui mentionne l'aspect de la déesse: (...) σημαίνουσιν αὐτὴν γυναικὸς εἶδει προμάστου, une H. aux seins proéminents qu'on ne retrouve pas dans le répertoire figuré.

BIBLIOGRAPHIE: Berger-Doer, G., LIMC III (1986) 646-658 s.v. «Dodekathēoi»; Burkert, W., Greek Religion (1985) 487, Index s.v. «Hestia»; Deroy, L., «Le culte du foyer dans la Grèce mycénienne», RHR 137, 1950, 26-43; Farnell, Cults V (1909) 345-373; Fauth, W., KlPauly II (1975) 1118-1120 s.v. «Hestia»; Fuchs, W., EAA IV (1961) 18-22 s.v. «Hestia»; Gernet, L., «Sur le symbolisme politique en Grèce ancienne: le Foyer commun», Anthropologie de la Grèce antique (1976) 382-402; Giangiulio, M., «Edifici pubblici e culti nelle nuove iscrizioni da Entella. I. ἱερὸν τῶς ἱστίας», AnnPisa 12/3, 1982, 945-963; Greifenhagen, A., «Das Vestarelief aus Wilton House», BerWPr 121-122, 1967; Hansen, O., «Hestia Boulaia at Erythrai», AntCl 54, 1985, 274-276; Hild, J. A., DA V (1919) 742-760 s.v. «Vesta»; Jouan, F., «Thétis, Hestia et Athénā», REG 69, 1956, 290-302; Merkelbach, R., «Der Kult der Hestia im Prytaneion der griech. Städte», ZPE 37, 1980, 77-92; Nilsson, GrRel I (1967) 337-338; Picard, Ch., «Le relief inscrit de Lowther Castle et les cultes de prytanées en Grèce», RHR 129, 1945, 31-46; Preuner, A., ML I 2 (1884-90) 2605-2653 s.v. «Hestia»; Schauenburg, K., LAW (1965) 1289 s.v. «Hestia»; Schuhl, P.-M., «Le joug du Bien, les liens de la Nécessité et la fonction d'Hestia», dans Mél. d'arch. et d'hist. offerts à Ch. Picard II (1949) 958-967; idem, L'Imagination et le Merveilleux. La Pensée et l'Action (1969) 155-161; Süß, W., RE VIII 1 (1912) 1257-1304 s.v. «Hestia»; Vernant, J.-P., «Hestia - Hermès. Sur l'expression religieuse de l'espace et du mouvement chez les Grecs», Mythe et pensée chez les Grecs (1988) 155-201.

CATALOGUE

I. Hestia dans la sphère de l'Olympe

A. Œuvres connues par des témoignages littéraires

Ronde bosse

1. Groupe de trois statues votives en bronze, offerte de Mikythos au sanct. de Zeus à Olympie, œuvre du sculpteur argien Glaucos. - Paus. 5, 26, 2 (= Overbeck, SQ 401); Picard, Manuel II 1, 153; Jones, S. H., Select Passages from Ancient Writers Illustrative of the History of Greek Sculpture (1966) 36. 47. - Vers 465 av. J.-C. - H. avec → Amphitrite et Poséidon.

Relief

2. (= Aphrodite 1172/1280, = Apollon 862, = Artemis 1278/1353, = Astra 33, = Hermes 753 - avec bibl.) Olympie, trône de Zeus. - Paus. 5, 11, 8 (= Overbeck, SQ 696). - Vers 437-432 av. J.-C. - Sur la base richement décorée en or et en ivoire, naissance d'Aphrodite en présence des dieux; parmi eux figuraient H. et Hermès.

B. Peinture de vases attiques

Vases attiques à f. n.

3. (= Chariklo I 1*, = Demeter 473, = Hera 420, = Iris I 125 - avec bibl. et renvois) Dinos fr. Athènes, Mus. Nat. Acr. 587. De l'Acropole. - ABV 39, 15; 681: Sophilos (sign.); Add 10. - Vers 580 av. J.-C. - H. (inscr.) portant un péplos brodé d'une frise d'animaux, debout à côté de Chariklo.

4.* (= Demeter 474*, = Dionysos 495, = Iris I 124* - avec bibl. et renvois) Dinos. Londres, BM 1971. 11-1.1. - Para 19, 16 bis: Sophilos (sign.); Add 10-11. - 580-570 av. J.-C. - Mariage de → Thetis et Pélée (→ Peleus). H. (inscr.) debout est représentée à côté de Déméter.

5.* (= Chariklo I 3, = Demeter 475, = Dionysos 496, = Iris I 126 - avec bibl. et renvois) Cratère à volutes dit «Vase François». Florence, Mus. Arch. 4209. De Chiusi. - ABV 76, 1: Clitias (sign.); Para 29-30; Add 21; Minto, A., Il Vaso François, (1960) pl. 1-2. 11-12. 27. - 570-565 av. J.-C. - Mariage de Thétis et Pélée; dans le cortège, H. (inscr.) est figurée debout (péplos brodé et himation), en compagnie de Déméter et suivie par Chariklo.

6. (= Artemis 1173* avec bibl.) Hydrie. Londres, BM B 345. De Vulci. - ABV 332, 20: P. de Priam; Add 90; CVA 6, pl. 94, 4. - Vers 530-520 av. J.-C. - Sur la panse, deux groupes de divinités: H. (debout, chiton long et himation) et Hermès devant Athénā et → Herakles; Apollon citharède et → Artemis en face de → Dionysos et Ariane (→ Ariadne).

Vases attiques à f. r.

7.* (= Aphrodite 1298, = Ares 112, = Athena 449, = Ganymedes 60*, = Hebe I 33, = Hermes 777 - avec bibl.) Coupe. Tarquinia, Mus. Naz. RC 6848. De Tarquinia. - ARV 2 60, 66: Oltos (sign.); Para 327; Add 165; CVA 1, pl. 2. - Vers 520 av. J.-C. - Assemblée de dieux dans l'Olympe: H. (inscr.) assise à dr. en face de Zeus servi par Ganymède; vêtue d'un chiton long et d'un himation, une couronne sur la tête, elle tient dans la main dr. un rameau et dans la g. une fleur.

8.* (= Herakles 2859/3305 avec bibl. et renvois, = Hermes 297*) Coupe, Berlin-Ouest, Staatl. Mus. F 2278. De Vulci. - ARV 2 21, 1; 1620: P. de Sosias; Para 323; Add 154; CVA 2, pl. 49-50. - Vers 500 av. J.-C. - Introduction d'Héraclès dans l'Olympe: H. (inscr.) assise (voilée, chiton long, himation) tient dans sa main dr. avancée un vase à libation; à côté d'elle une déesse; derrière H., Hermès conduit le cortège.

C. Sculpture monumentale

9. (= Dione 8, = Gigantes 2*, = Hephaistos 211 - avec bibl.) Relief de la frise nord du Trésor des Siphniens, marbre de Paros. Delphes, Mus. De Delphes. - La Coste-Messelière 314 pl. 23; Simon, E., ZPE 57, 1984, 1-22 pl. 1a (dessin); 2a; Götter 218 fig. 202. - Peu avant 525 av. J.-C. - À l'extrémité g., H. est figurée debout vers la dr. (chiton long ceinturé, himation, longs cheveux tressés), formant un groupe avec Héphaïstos et Aphrodite. Un fr. d'inscr. rétr. Alt- permet la restitution du nom [Εσ]τία.

10. (= Athena 372, = Dione 9, = Dodekathēoi 4b* - avec bibl.) Statue en marbre. Londres, BM. D'Athènes, fronton est du Parthénon. - Berger, E., Parthenon Ostgiebel (1959) 35-48 pl. 1-2 a-b; idem, Die Geburt der Athena im Ostgiebel des Parthenon (1974) fig. 11c - 12; Harrison, E. B., AJA 71, 1967, 46 fig. 13. - Vers 438 av. J.-C. - Naissance d'Athénā en présence des dieux: H. était peut-être figurée assise à dr. de Zeus, Athénā et → Nike, entre Poséidon et Hermès (Berger [1959]); elle est généralement identifiée comme la femme assise à côté d'Aphrodite et de «Dioné»: Boardman, J., The Parthenon and its Sculptures pl. 13 fig. p. 230.

D. Dodekathēoi

Reliefs

11.* (= Apollon 867 avec bibl., = Artemis 1191, = Athena 466, = Dodekathēoi 5* avec renvois et bibl.) Autel rond fr. de marbre. Athènes, Mus. Nat. 1731. D'Athènes, région nord de l'Agora, près de St. Philippe. - Svoronos 158-163 n° 14 fig. 110 pl. 26; Karousou, S., Mus. Arch. Nat., Coll. des sculptures (1968) 156. - 1^{re} moitié du IV^e s. av. J.-C. - H. debout tournée à dr. (voilée, chiton long, himation) devant Poséidon assis sur un autel rustique.

12. (= Artemis 883 avec bibl., = Aphrodite 1074 avec bibl., = Dodekathēoi 14* avec bibl.) Deux blocs d'autel en marbre. Volos, Mus. E 1270. De l'Acropole de Phères. - Miller, A. G., «The Altar of the Six Goddesses in Thessalian Phera», CSCA 1974, 231-256; Long, Ch. R., The Twelve Gods of Greece and Rome (1987) 30, 1 fig. 75. - Milieu du IV^e s. av. J.-C. - L'un des deux blocs comporte six stèles gravées sur lesquelles apparaissent les noms des divinités, dont celui d'H. (l. 3). Selon Miller, il pouvait supporter les têtes des déesses.

13. (= Dodekathēoi 18* avec bibl.) Base fr. de marbre. Alexandrie, Mus. Gréco-Rom. 27004. D'Azerita. - Adriani, A., Lezioni sull'arte alessandrina (1972) 127 pl. 17, 1. - Début du II^e s. av. J.-C. - H. est assise sur un autel rond à côté d'Hermès.

14. (= Dodekathēoi 30* = Hephaistos 183, = Hera 353, = Hermes 788 - avec renvois et bibl.) Base de trépied en marbre dite «Autel Borghèse». Paris, Louvre MA 672. De Gabies. - Long, o. c. 12, 37-38 n° 8 fig. 98. - Ép. hellénistique. - Au registre sup. de la face C, Arès et Aphrodite, Hermès et H.: debout, tournée à g., diadémée et partiellement voilée, elle porte un chiton long et un himation et tient un sceptre dans la main g.

15. (= Dodekathēoi 20*, = Hephaistos 182, = Hera 359, = Hermes 787 - avec renvois et bibl.) Baltimore, Walters Art Gall. 23.40. De Tarente. - Long, o. c. 12, 44 fig. 124; Zagdoun, M.-A., La sculpt. archaïsante dans l'art hellén. et dans l'art romain du Haut-Empire (1989) 100-101 n° 80 pl. 28 fig. 105. - Archaïsant, 1^{er} s. av.-1^{er} s. ap. J.-C. - Cortège des dieux: H. debout vers la dr. entre Poséidon et Hermès, voilée, en chiton long et himation; elle tient un sceptre et une phiale.

16.* (= Demeter 426, = Dodekathēoi 24*, = Hera 362 - avec renvois et bibl.) Autel rond en marbre. Ostie, Mus. Ostiense 120. Du sanct. d'Attis. - Beccati, G., ASAtene 17-18, 1939-40, 112-117 fig. 22. 27. 29 pl. 3-4; Long, o. c. 12, 28-29 n° 1 fig. 70-71. - 1^{er} s. ap. J.-C. - H. est assise vers la dr. sur un autel rond, à côté d'Hermès et d'Héphaïstos. Elle est vêtue d'un chiton à manches, la tête drapée dans son himation dont elle tient un pan de la main g.; la dr. est posée sur son genou.

17. (= Dodekathēoi 25*, = Hera 365, = Hermes 792 - avec renvois et bibl.) Base ronde en marbre dite «Putéal Albani». Rome, Mus. Cap. 1019. De Tivoli, Villa d'Hadrien. - Cook, Zeus III 2, 1057 fig. 853; Stuart Jones, SculptMusCap 106 pl. 29; ANRW II 17/2 (1981) 1127 fig. 36f; Long, o. c. 12, 41-42 n° 1 pl. 109; Zagdoun, o. c. 15, 103-104 n° 399 pl. 14-16. - Archaïsant, 1^{er} s. ap. J.-C. - Cortège de dieux introduisant Héphaïstos dans l'Olympe: H., debout vers la g., suit Hermès et Poséidon. Vêtue d'un chiton long et d'un himation, elle soulève de la main g. un pan de sa robe et tient un sceptre de la main dr.

II. Hestia dans la sphère civique et politique

A. Hestia avec des héros divinisés

18. (= Amphiaraos 64* avec bibl., = Asklepios 259, = Hygieia 6) Fr. d'un relief votif. Oropos. Mus. A 72. De l'Amphiaraeion. - Reisch, E. dans Festschr. O. Benndorf (1898) 139 avec fig. 147 (Hygieia); Hausmann, U., Kunst und Heilum (1948) 171 n° 77 pl. 15 (Hygieia); Bielefeld, E., Wiss. Zeitschr. d. Univ. Greifswald, Gesch.-u. Sprachwiss. Reihe 1, 1951-52, n° 2-3, 3 n° 8 (H.); Herrmann, H. V., Omphalos (1959) 104 (Hygieia); Fuchs 20 fig. 27; Petrakos, B., Ὁ ἱερὸν τοῦ Ἀμφιαράου (1968) 124 n° 127 pl. 44 (Hygieia). - 1^{re} moitié du IV^e s. av. J.-C. - H. assise à g. sur l'omphalos en face d'Amphiaraos debout. La déesse, en chiton long et himation, pose le bras g. sur ses genoux, la main dr. levée vers son épaule dr.

19.* Relief votif en marbre. Volos, Mus. 391. De Pharsale. - Miller, S. G., «Hestia and Symmachos», OpuscRom 9, 1973, 167-172 fig. 1-2. - IV^e s. av. J.-C. - H. (la tête manque), portant chiton long et himation, assise sur un trône; devant elle, le héros Symmachos à côté des fidèles. La déesse tenait probablement un sceptre dans la main g. comme l'indiquent son geste et un trou visible du côté g. du trône. Inscr. [Εσ]τία. Σύμμαχος... ὁ πασδαίος ἀνέστηκε.

B. Statues d'Hestia au Prytanée

Œuvres connues par des sources écrites

20. Statue de culte au Prytanée d'Athènes. – Paus. I, 18, 3. – Auteur et date indéterminés.

21. Statue, œuvre de Scopas à Paros? – Cass. Dio 55, 9, 6; Plin. nat. 36, 25; Farnell, Cults V 361. 371 n. 45; Jones, o. c. I, 206. – IV^e s. av. J.-C. – H. assise, ayant duos(que) campteras (piliers?) ou lampteras (torches ou candélabres?) circa eam (Plin., o. c.).

22. Statue de bronze du Prytanée de Délos. – ID 1416 A I 83-84. 93-94; Roussel, P., «Hestia à l'omphalos» RA 1911, 86-91; Bruneau, Cultes 441. – Avant 158/7 av. J.-C. – H. assise sur un petit autel.

23. Statue du Prytanée de Délos. – ID 1417 B I 89-90. 100; Roussel, o. c. 22, 86-91; Bruneau, Cultes 441. – Avant 157/6 av. J.-C. – H. assise sur un omphalos.

C. Monnaies de Nicopolis d'Épire

24.* AE, Volusien (251-253), Valérien (253-260). – Oikonomides, M., ArchEph 1967, 110-111 n° 24 (Athènes, Mus. Num., d'un trésor de Nicopolis); eadem (Caramessini-Oekonomides), «HESTIA BOYΛHΣ et Nicopolis d'Épire», dans Actes du 8^e Congr. int. de Num. (1976) 39-41 n° 1-2 pl. 2. – Rv. H. laurée, assise de face sur un trône, appuyant sa tête (tournée à dr.) sur la main dr. et portant la main g. à sa taille. Lég. HESTIA BOYΛHΣ.

III. Hestia dans la sphère domestique

Peinture de vases attiques

25. (= Aithra I 69, = Apollon 887, = Helene 250) Cratère à volutes f. r. Bologne, Mus. Civ. 17190 (269). De Bologne. – ARV² 599, 8; P. des Niobides; Para 395; Add² 266; CVA 5, pl. 101, 6; Recueil Ch. Dugas (1961) 56 pl. 40. – Vers 460-455 av. J.-C. – Sur le col, femme et homme devant un autel auprès duquel se tient, debout, H. diadémée portant le sceptre, vêtue d'un chiton long et d'un himation.

26.* Pyxide f. bl. Londres, BM D 11. D'Érétrie. – ARV² 899, 146; Splanchnopt P.; Add² 303; Murray, A. S./Smith, A. H., White Athenian Vases in the British Museum (1896) pl. 20; Brückner, A., AM 32, 1907, 80 fig. 1; Rumpf, A., Die Religion der Griechen (1928) fig. 176; Wehgartner, L., Attisch weißgrundige Keramik (1983) 141 n° 14 pl. 50, 1-3. – Fin du V^e s. av. J.-C. – Scène de mariage: un cortège accompagne les fiancés vers leur maison; H. est debout en face du foyer domestique, un sceptre dans la main g. et un fruit dans la dr.; diadémée, elle porte un chiton long et un himation.

27.* Pyxide f. r. Mayence, Univ. 116. – ARV² 1224, 2; Oppenheimer Gr.; Hampe, R./Simon, E., Griechisches Leben im Spiegel der Kunst (1959) pl. 28; Bérard, Cl., Anodoi (1974) 57 n. 1; Schwenk-Raab, I., dans Festschr. F. Brommer (1977) 277-280 pl. 73, 1-4; Roberts, S. R., The Attic Pyxis (1978) pl. 43, 3. –

440-420 av. J.-C. – Scène de mariage à l'intérieur d'un édifice indiqué par deux colonnes: H. est assise sur un autel, une torche à la main; elle porte un chiton long, un himation et un diadème sur la tête. Quatre femmes s'approchent de la déesse; une femme assise tient un exaleiptron; devant elle, une femme debout.

IV. Document de l'Antiquité tardive

28.* Tissu copte. Washington, Dumbarton Oaks. D'Égypte. – Friedländer, P., Documents of Dying Paganism (1945) 1-26 pl. 1 frontispice; Manganaro, G., ArchClass 12, 1960, 189-207 pl. 61, 1; Fuchs 21 fig. 28; Greifenhagen fig. 15. – IV^e s. ap. J.-C. – H. assise de face (inscr. ΕΣΤΙΑ ΠΟΛΥΟΛΒΟΣ), la tête entourée d'un nimbe doré, parée d'une guirlande de grenades et de boucles d'oreilles. De chaque côté, trois enfants (putti) tiennent un bouclier inscrit ΠΛΟΥΤΟΣ, [ΕΥΦΡΟΣΥΝ]Η, ΕΥΛΟΓΙΑ, ΕΥΟΧ[Ι]Α, ΑΡΕΤΗ, ΠΡΟΚΟΠΗ. A dr. et à g. deux autres figures nimbées: celle de g. tient une tablette portant l'inscr. ΦΩΣ.

V. Représentation incertaine

29. (= Aphrodite 139, = Hera 99* – avec bibl.) Statue en marbre dite «H. Giustiniani». Rome, Villa Albani, anc. Mus. Torlonia. De la coll. Giustiniani. – Mustilli 121-122 n° 9 pl. 77, 293 (liste des répliques); Fuchs 19 fig. 25 (copie de Rome, Pal. Cons); Ridgway, B. S., The Severe Style in Greek Sculpture (1979) 64-65 fig. 103 (même copie). – Copie romaine d'un original de bronze, daté vers 470-460 av. J.-C. – Successivement interprétée comme H., Aphrodite, Héra, Déméter. La déesse, vêtue d'un péplos avec kolpos et apopygma, voilée, est figurée debout, la main dr. appuyée sur la hanche. Il s'agit plus probablement d'une Héra.

COMMENTAIRE

Le répertoire iconographique d'H. n'est pas abondant, mais l'identification de chaque image pose plus d'un problème d'interprétation. H. n'a pas eu d'expression plastique et graphique privilégiée parmi les Grecs; les attributs ou autres indices caractéristiques manquent, sauf dans les cas exceptionnels où la représentation est accompagnée d'une inscription. D'où la nécessité d'une enquête attentive consistant à rapprocher les images inscrites et les autres, d'où aussi l'importance des textes littéraires et épigraphiques pour identifier H. dans le contexte de l'imagerie grecque.

La plus ancienne représentation d'H. dont nous disposons se situe autour de 580 av. J.-C. sur une œuvre de Sophilos (3): les dieux olympiens ont pris place dans le cortège nuptial en l'honneur de Thétis et de Pélée; H. y est figurée à côté de Déméter et d'Hermès; richement vêtue d'un péplos brodé, d'aspect juvénile, elle ne se distingue en rien des autres déesses, sinon par l'inscription. Sur un dinos du Br. Mus. (4) le même peintre a représenté un cortège nuptial presque identique, dont les personnages sont aussi désignés par des inscriptions: H. est figurée près de Déméter comme sur 3. Nous retrouvons le même schéma iconographique sur le Vase François (5), où H., également identifiée par une inscription, fait couple avec Chariklo. Sur ces trois documents (3-5), la déesse est figurée debout, portant des vêtements semblables à ceux des autres divinités, sans attribut particulier.

La coupe du P. de Sosias (8) illustre l'introduction d'Héraclès dans l'Olympe: H., toujours identifiée par une inscription, est assise à côté d'Amphitrite, association qui rappelle la dédicace de Mikythos à Olympie (1) où H. était figurée près d'Amphitrite et de Poséidon. Voilée cette fois, elle tient dans la main dr. la coupe à libation et, derrière elle, Hermès conduit le cortège où l'on voit Apollon avec sa lyre, Héraclès et Hebe (1). H. est également assise, mais en face de Zeus servi par Ganymède, sur la coupe d'Oltos (7): en chiton et himation, portant sur la tête une couronne, elle tient dans la main dr. une branche et dans la g. une fleur. Derrière elle se trouve Aphrodite, rapprochement qui ne semble pas unique dans l'imagerie d'H. Ces deux scènes (7-8) situent H., assise sur un trône, dans le même contexte olympien: c'est que la déesse consacre et protège également la demeure des dieux, dans une transposition divine de sa fonction dans les habitations des hommes. Ainsi s'exprime le poète de l'Hymne homérique 29 à H., «... toi qui, partout dans les hautes demeures des dieux immortels et des hommes mortels qui marchent sur la terre, as reçu en partage l'honneur et le privilège d'y siéger à jamais» (Hom. h. 29, 1-3, trad. J. Humbert).

Toujours dans la sphère des dieux olympiens, l'image d'H. dans le décor sculpté du Trésor de Siphnos à Delphes (9) mérite une place de choix. À l'extrémité g. de la frise nord figurant la Gigantomachie sont groupées trois figures: Héphestos aisément reconnaissable à son soufflet, une déesse identifiée par une inscription comme étant H., et une troisième divinité plus difficile à nommer – mais il n'est pas improbable, comme l'a montré E. Simon, o. c. 9, qu'il s'agisse d'Aphrodite puisque son association avec H. est assurée sur la coupe d'Oltos (7) et que ses rapports avec Héphestos sont bien connus.

Il est possible de reconnaître H. en compagnie des dieux olympiens dans une autre série de documents, cette fois sans inscription, à proximité de Zeus – ce qui ne doit pas surprendre – et aux côtés de Poséidon, d'Héphestos et d'Hermès. Il s'agit d'abord du fronton est du Parthénon (10): la scène principale représente la naissance miraculeuse d'Athéna en présence des dieux. Il est probable, selon la restitution d'E. Berger en 1959 (o. c. 10), qu'H. était figurée à dr. de Zeus trônant, à côté d'Athéna et de Niké, de Poséidon et d'Hermès. Phidias l'aurait représentée assise et il se peut qu'un fragment de la statue originale soit conservé.

L'autel des douze Dieux d'Ostie (16), œuvre de la 2^e moitié du I^{er} s. ap. J.-C., montre H. assise sur un autel circulaire; la proximité d'Hermès correspond à une tradition bien attestée par les sources dont nous disposons, et la déesse est voilée comme sur la coupe du P. de Sosias (8); d'autre part ses liens avec Héphestos, représenté à g. d'Hermès, nous ramènent au Trésor de Siphnos (9). Mentionnons également l'autel archaïsant du I^{er} s. ap. J.-C. (17), avec H. debout, tenant le sceptre, en compagnie d'Hermès et de Poséidon dans le cortège divin qui escorte Héphestos introduit dans l'Olympe.

Dans la sphère civique, celle de la vie publique et politique, les représentations d'H. ne manquent pas non plus. Sur le relief provenant de Pharsale (19), nous la retrouvons assise sur un trône, avec en face d'elle le héros Symmachos à côté des fidèles; l'inscription permet d'identifier les figures principales, et H. tenait probablement un sceptre dans la main g. Symmachos est certainement un héros divinisé originaire de la cité de Pharsale. Que signifie cette association entre H. et un héros local divinisé? On connaît sa relation avec le Prytanée qui abrite souvent, comme le signalent plusieurs textes, les tombes et les hérôa, sanctuaires des héros de la cité: c'est le cas des Prytanées d'Athènes (Paus. I, 18, 3), Mégare (Paus. I, 34, 2), Delphes (SEG 23 n° 319, 7-9), Sicyone (Hdt. 5, 67) et Olympie (Paus. 5, 15, 12); ainsi sur le relief votif de Pharsale H., en tant que divinité du Prytanée, préside-t-elle à l'hommage des fidèles qui accompagnent Symmachos. De même sur le relief de l'Amphiareion d'Oropos (18) où H. est figurée assise sur un omphalos, en face du héros divinisé Amphiaraus.

Des statues d'H. dans les Prytanées sont connues par les textes littéraires et épigraphiques: à Athènes (20), à Paros où selon toute vraisemblance se dressait la statue sculptée par Scopas (21) et dans le Prytanée de Délos où les inscriptions mentionnent une H. assise sur un petit autel (22) et sur un omphalos (23).

H. est πρυτανίς, protectrice du Prytanée, mais également βουλαία, protectrice du Bouleutérion, comme il ressort de nombreuses inscriptions des cités grecques. Il n'est pas surprenant qu'elle soit représentée sur des monnaies. Ainsi deux émissions impériales grecques de bronze de la cité de Nicopolis en Épire, datées des règnes de Volusien et de Valérien (24), montrent-elles au revers une H. assise de face sur un autel avec la tête couronnée de laurier et légèrement tournée vers la dr.: l'inscription ΕΣΤΙΑ ΒΟΥΛΗΣ ne laisse subsister aucun doute sur l'identification, et cette image d'H. pourrait même correspondre à la statue érigée dans le Bouleutérion, comme c'est souvent le cas pour les effigies monétaires de divinités qui reproduisent les statues de culte.

Dans la sphère domestique, celle des simples mortels, H. est figurée à côté d'un autel-foyer, debout en majesté, un sceptre dans la main g. et un fruit dans la dr. (25), ou diadémée, avec un sceptre (26). Ces deux documents illustrent une scène de mariage: H. y exerce sa fonction de divinité tutélaire des noces, dont témoigne une inscription de Phalère datée de 400 av. J.-C. (Sokolowski, F., Lois sacrées des cités grecques [1962] 44). Le contexte du mariage est également celui de la pyxide de Mayence (27), où une déesse diadémée est figurée assise sur un autel, une torche à la main: cette représentation qui fait de la torche un attribut d'H. est à mettre en rapport avec la statue de Paros sculptée par Scopas (21), dont le type pourrait être caractérisé par deux torches (lampteras).

Dans l'ensemble du répertoire iconographique d'H., comment définir les caractéristiques de cette déesse? 1) C'est d'abord une figure debout, richement vêtue (chiton, himation mais également péplos), d'aspect juvénile, semblable aux autres divinités de l'Olympe: l'élément déterminant pour l'identifier est l'inscription qui donne son nom. 2) H. est aussi représentée assise sur son trône, sur un autel (normalement rond) ou sur l'omphalos. 3) Elle est voilée, ou a la tête ceinte d'un diadème ou d'une couronne de lauriers, et porte dans ses mains des fleurs ou des fruits, ainsi que la coupe à libation. 4) Sur certains documents, assise ou debout, elle tient un attribut lui aussi déterminant, le sceptre, comme dans la XI^e Néméenne de Pindare (Pind. N. 11, 4). 5) L'autel-foyer et les torches peuvent aussi caractériser l'image d'H.

Enfin nous disposons d'un document tardif (28), un tissu figurant H. πολύλοφος, «pleine de grâces», d'un type unique mais correspondant à la pensée gnostique de la fin du paganisme, influencée par les spéculations philosophiques de la période classique, surtout par Platon (Schuhl, o. c.). Du point de vue iconographique, cette image annonce directement les compositions religieuses du Moyen Age (cf. Friedländer, o. c. 28).

HAIGANUCH SARIAN

VESTA

Vesta is the Roman goddess of the hearth, protector of the hearth fire (cf. Serv. Aen. 1, 292). From an originally private cult, practised in the single family or larger family-group (gens), the cult of V. develops in importance and becomes a state cult and V. the hearth goddess of the Roman people - Vesta populi Romani (cf. Cic. nat. 2, 67). The character of the original private cult and its development into a state cult is, however, not very clear. V. retains her primitive conception even in the elaborated state cult; there seems to be no obvious anthropomorphic cult image, but rather a cult dependent on her aniconic, animistic, origin (cf. Ov. fast. 6, 291: nec tu aliud Vestam quam vivam intellege flammam).

The embryo of the development of the cult of V. into one of the most prominent of the Roman state was formed already in the 7th cent. B. C. The sanctuary on the Forum Romanum has its origin in this period, and the earliest political and religious institutions find their place in the Forum. Traditionally the cult of V. has its origin in the time of Romulus and Numa, with roots either in Alba Longa (Liv. 1, 20, 3; Dion. Hal. ant. 2, 64, 5-65, 4) or in the Sabine country (Varro l. l. 5, 74). The more private aspects of her cult are seen in her attachment to household divinities like the Penates. V. has early roots in Rome and Latium, and the parallel or juxtaposition between V. and → Hestia which is often suggested (e.g. Cic. leg. 2, 29; nat. 2, 67) is not valid in all aspects, although one point should be noted - namely that Hestia also did not achieve a full anthropomorphic conception. The hearth of V. in the round building (aedes Vestae) in the Forum Romanum near the Regia and the house of the Vestals (domus publica) was tended by the Vestals (virgines vestales) who also prepared the sacred meal (mola salsa) in connection with the Vestalia on the 9th of June (Varro l. l. 6, 17). The Vestals were chosen by the Pontifex Maximus. In the inner sanctuary (penus) were kept among the holy relics (sacra) also the palladium (Cic. Scaur. 48), brought by → Aineias (?) to Latium from Troy (Ov. trist. 3, 1, 29; fast. 6, 433-438).

The cult of V. is known mainly from Rome, Latium (especially where there were federal sanctuaries, cf. Alföldi, A., Early Rome and the Latins [1965] 241, 247, 257-259. For Lavinium, Castagnoli, Lavinium I [1972] 102, 106, 109; Alföldi, o. c. 258-259 for Lavinian origin of the Roman V.; for the Vestai pocola from Lanuvium and Carsoli see Cederna, A., NSc 1951, 214 with ref.; Roma medio repubblicana [1973] 57 nos. 27, 32 pl. 8) and Pompeii (see infra), but is sparsely represented in the rest of the Roman world.

LITERARY SOURCES: According to Ov. fast. 6, 295-300 V. had no image in the Forum building: esse diu stultus Vestae simulacra putavi, mox didici curvo nulla subesse tholo... effigiem nullam Vesta nec ignis habet - cf. Ov. fast. 3, 45-46 Vestae simulacra feruntur virgineas oculis opposuisse manus. In connection with the murder of Quintus M. Scaevola in 82 B. C. an image of V. is mentioned, Cic. nat. 3, 80 and de or. 3, 10 (pontificis maximi sanguine simulacrum Vestae respersum esse vidit); cf. Liv. per. 86.

Enn. ann. 62 (Skutsch 240) enumerates V. among the 12 Dei Consentes, who were erected by the Forum in the form of gilded statues, Varro rust. 1, 1, 4. Liv. 22, 10, 9 mentions a lectisternium for the year 217 B. C. where V. and → Vulcanus constitute the fifth pair. According to Verg. Aen. 2, 296-297 Hector (in a dream of Aeneas) saves a Trojan cult image of V. (cf. Aen. 5, 744; 9, 259).

Ov. fast. 4, 949-954 and met. 15, 864-865 concern the cult of V. on the Palatine, but not specifically a cult image nor a temple. A cult statue of V. on the Palatine put up by Augustus is mentioned in the Fasti Caeretani (28th April): Fer[iae], q[uod] e[o] d[ie] sig[na]m vest[ae] in domo P[alatina] (Degrassi; Mommsen P[ontificis] dedicat[um] CIL I² 1, p. 213). Cf. Fasti Praenestini (28th April): Feriae ex S(enatus) C(onsulto), quod eo d[ie] signu[m] et [ara] Vestae in domu Imp. Caesaris Aug[ust]i, pontificis max[imi], dedicat[um] Quirino et Valgio co(n)s(ulibus) (CIL I² 1, p. 236).

In Mart. Cap. 1, 72 V. has a role as nurse of Jupiter, a conception which has survived in the early Medieval treatise, Alberich (Albricus), De deorum imaginibus libellus, XVII. Here it is moreover alleged that on the pinnacle of the V. temple was placed an image of V. nursing Jupiter as a child - Supra pinaculum autem templi depicta erat ipsa Vesta in forma virginis infantem, id est ipsum Iovem, in suo sinu fovens (Liebeschütz, H., Fulgentius Metaforalis [1926] 122-123 pl. 24; Seznec, J., The Survival of the Pagan Gods [1972] 236).

BIBLIOGRAPHY: General: Brelich, A., Vesta (1949) 60-63, 86-87; Carettoni, G., EAA VII (1966) 1148-1149 s. v. «Vesta»; Dumézil, G., La religion romaine archaïque (1966) 307-321; Hild, J.-A., DA V (1919) 742-752 s. v. «Vesta»; Koch, C., RE VIII A 2 (1958) 1725, 1728-1729, 1758-1759 s. v. «Vesta»; Latte RR 108-109, 294-296, 305-306, 366; Radke, G., Die Götter Altitaliens (1965) 327-328 (= Radke 1); Radke, G., KIPauli V (1975) 1227-1229 s. v. «Vesta» (= Radke 2); Rykwert, J., The Idea of a Town (1976) 99-106; Wissowa, Religion 158-159 (= Wissowa 1); idem, ML VI (1924-37) 252, 258, 269-272 s. v. «Vesta», «Vestabilder» (= Wissowa 2); Wagenvoort, H., «Auguste et Vesta», in Mél. J. Carcopino (1966) 965-978; Warde Fowler, W., The Religious Experience of the Roman People (1922) 72-77, 136-137, 147-148.

Cult and sanctuaries in Rome: Ampolo, C., «Analogie e rapporti tra Atene e Roma arcaica», PP 26, 1971, 443-460; Cody, J. M., «New Evidence for the Republican Aedes Vestae», AJA 77, 1973, 43-50; Degrassi, A., «Esistette sul Palatino un Tempio di Vesta?», RM 62, 1935, 144-154; Degrassi, N., «La dimora di Augusto sul Palatino», RendPontAcc 39, 1966/67, 97-116; Fauth, E., «Römische Religion im Spiegel der «Fasti» des Ovid», ANRW II 16, 1 (1978) 117-118; Guarducci, M., «Vesta sul Palatino», RM 71, 1964, 158-169; Jordan, H., Der Tempel der Vesta und das Haus der Vestalinnen (1886) (= Jordan 1); Kolbe, H.-G., «Noch einmal Vesta auf dem Palatin», RM 73/74, 1966/67, 102-104; Radke, G., «Die dei penates und Vesta in Rom» ANRW II 17, 1 (1981) 363-365 (= Radke 3); Rizzo, G. E., «La base di Augusto», BullCom 60, 1932, 7-109.

Pompeian frescoes: Boyce, G. K., «Corpus of the Lararia of Pompeii», MAAR 14, 1937; Jordan, H., «Vesta und die Laren auf einem pompeianischen Wandgemälde», BerlWPr 25, 1865 (= Jordan 2).

Coins: Brauer, G. C., «Vestal Types on Roman Coins», Journal of the Soc. of Ancient Numismatics 7, 2, 1975/76, 24-27; Forrer, L., «The Goddess Vesta and the Temple of Vesta as Represented on Roman Coins», NumCirc 16, 1908, 1061-66, 10724-27; Gatti, C., «Il Palladio sulle monete di Galba», AttiCeRDAC 11, 1980/81, 109-116.

Other iconographic studies: Greifenhagen, A., «Bona Dea», RM 52, 1937, 234-235 (= Greifenhagen 1); idem, «Das Vestarelief aus Wilton House», BerlWPr 121/122, 1967 (= Greifenhagen 2); Hommel, P., Studien zu den römischen Figurenreliefs der Kaiserzeit (1954) 18-20; Turcan, R. (ed.), Iconography of Religions XVII 1. Religion romaine, I. Les dieux (1988); Weinreich, O., ML VI (1924-37) 802, 808 s. v. «Zwölfgötter».

CATALOGUE

(For the coins, the catalogue is not a complete list, but it contains the main iconographic types.)

A. Standing

Wall paintings

1. (= Dodekathoei/Dei Consentes 2*) Pompeii VIII 3, 9-10 (Casa delle Grazie, outer wall, Vicolo dei dodici iddii). - Gerhard, O., AdI 1850 pl. K; Helbig, Wandgemälde no. 7; Weinreich 808; Spinazzola, Pompeii 181, 625; Scheffold, WP 220; Long, Ch. R., The Twelve Gods of Greece and Rome (1987) 31-32 fig. 81, 265. - C. A. D. 70-79. - Standing V. represented among 12 deities wearing a crown, with a sceptre in l. and patera in r. hand, behind to the r. forepart of an ass.

2. Pompeii VII 12, 7, lararium in pistrinum. Destroyed. - Boyce no. 313; Scheffold, WP 201. - C. A. D. 70-79? - V. standing, in l. a sceptre, in r. hand a sheaf of grain, behind an ass with bell around neck. To the r. Mercury. Central group of Lares and Genii around blazing tripod.

Standing or riding:

3. Pompeii IX 5, 2 (r)?, peristyle. Destroyed. - Boyce no. 420; Scheffold, WP 253. - C. A. D. 70-79? - V. riding or accompanied by ass, holding patera in l., reins in r. hand. Flanked by Lares?

Relief

4. Limestone, Jupiter column. Mainz, Mittelrhein. Landesmus. S 137, S 157. - Reinach, S., RA 21, 1913, 29; Körber, K., Die große Jupitersäule im Altertums-museum der Stadt Mainz (1915) 22 (g. III) pl. VIII; Quilling, F., Die Jupitersäule des Samus und Severus (1918) 103-109; Germania Romana IV 10 pl. 3, 1; Schoppa, H., Römische Götterdenkmäler in Köln (1959) 39 n. 10; Bauchhenß, G., Die Große Iuppitersäule aus Mainz (1984) (CSIR Deutschland II 2) 7, 17 pl. 18, 34, 4. - A. D. 59-61/66. - V. (Quilling: Epona), as one of the Roman Dodekathoeon, standing en face in chiton with high belt, cloak drawn over back of head, ornamented diadem. Patera (?) in lowered l., sceptre, with oblique grooved ornamented knob, in raised r. hand. Behind r. leg head of ass (Quilling: mule).

Coins

V., usually veiled, is normally standing to l. (partly head l., but standing to front), holding an attribute in extended r. hand, another attribute in l.

5.* AR denarius, Rome, Vespasian, A. D. 72-73. - BMC Emp II 13, 71 pl. 2, 6. - Rev.: V., standing l., simpulum in extended r. hand, vertical sceptre in l. Leg. VESTA.

Similar type with leg. VESTA for Gallienus (RIC V 1, 86, 241).

For attributes simpulum and sceptre see also 36.

6.* AU aureus, Rome, Antoninus Pius (Diva Faustina), c. A. D. 141. - BMC Emp IV 51, 338 pl. 8, 13. - Rev.: V., standing l., lighted torch in extended r. hand, vertical sceptre off ground in l. No identifying legend.

7. AE dupondius or as, Rome, Antoninus Pius (Diva Faustina), c. A. D. 141. - BMC Emp IV 252, 1581 pl. 37, 19. - Rev.: V., standing l., holding palladium on extended r. hand, long vertical torch in l. Leg. AVGVSTA.

Variant 1: V. standing l., holding long vertical torch in r., palladium at l. shoulder, leg. AVGVSTA: Antoninus Pius (BMC Emp IV 243, 1521 pl. 36, 8: 252, 1580 pl. 37, 18).

8.* AR denarius, Rome, Antoninus Pius (Diva Faustina), c. A. D. 141. - BMC Emp IV 67, 485-486 pl. 10, 17. - Rev.: V., standing l., holding palladium in extended r. hand and vertical sceptre in l. Leg. VESTA.

Similar type with legend VESTA for Julia Domna (BMC Emp V 435, 29 pl. 68, 7); Julia Paula (RIC IV 2, 47, 224); Julia Mamaea (BMC Emp VI 151, 380 pl. 13).

Similar type, but legend AVGVSTA for Antoninus Pius (BMC Emp IV 62, 439*; 243, 1519-1520 pl. 36, 7; 253, 1582 pl. 37, 4).

For attributes palladium and sceptre see also 32.

9.* AR denarius, Rome, Antoninus Pius (Diva Faustina), c. A.D. 147. - BMC IV 62, 435-439 pl. 9, 19. - Rev.: V., standing frontally head l., holding simpulum in extended r. hand and palladium on outstretched l. hand. Leg. AVGVSTA.

Variant 1: V. as above, but palladium at l. shoulder, no identifying legend: Antoninus Pius (BMC Emp IV 89 no. 619 pl. 13, 7; 110, 762 pl. 15, 19; 114, 784 pl. 16, 15); with leg. VESTA: Faustina II (BMC IV 544, 1004).

Variant 2: V. as above, but to l. altar. Leg. VESTA (BMC Emp IV 538, 965*). For V. at altar see also B.

For attributes simpulum and palladium see also 23.

10.* AR denarius, Rome, Marcus Aurelius, reign of Antoninus Pius, A.D. 153-154. - BMC Emp IV 117, 806 pl. 17, 3. - Rev.: V., standing l., holding patera in extended r. hand, palladium at shoulder in l. No identifying legend.

For attributes patera and palladium see also 22, 34.

11.* AR Denarius, Julia Domna, Eastern Mints (Laodicea ad mare?) and Rome, A.D. 196-202 or later. - BMC Emp V 280, 622-624 pl. 43, 8; 169-170, 98-101 pl. 29, 8; RIC IV 1 171, 587. - Rev.: V. standing frontally, head l., holding patera in extended r. hand, vertical sceptre in l. Leg. VESTAE SANCTAE.

Similar type, but leg. VESTA: Julia Mamaea (BMC Emp VI 156, 440-448 pl. 15) and Cornelia Supera (RIC IV 3, 198, 30 pl. 15, 14).

For attributes patera and sceptre see also 20, 31, 43.

12. AR denarius, Rome, Aquilia Severa, A.D. 220. - BMC Emp V 559, 188*. - Rev.: V., standing l., holding branch in r., sceptre in l. Leg. VESTA.

13. AR antoninianus, Asia, Salonina, A.D. 258-259. - RIC V 1, 115, 71. - Rev.: V., standing l., holding victory in r., sceptre in l. Leg. VESTA AETERNA.

For attributes victory and sceptre see also 39.

Statue

14. Statue of V. among the Dei Consentes (= Dodekathēoi 33 with bibl., = Dodekathēoi/Dei consentes 3 with bibl.) in the Forum Romanum from Republican times, lost. The statue was gilded and so probably of bronze. Erected in the Porticus Deorum Consentium (Nash, *TopRom*² II 241).

B. Standing at altar

Wall paintings

15. Pompeii VI 11, 10 (16) (Casa del Labirinto), lararium in pistrinum. - MonInst 3, 1839-43 pl. VI A; Helbig, Wandgemälde no. 65; Boyce no. 185 pl. 21, 1; Schefold, WP 126. - C. A.D. 70-79. - V. standing wearing wreath and veil, sceptre in l. and patera in r. hand over altar. Behind V. and altar an ass with bell around neck. Flanked by Lares, Venus Pompeiana and Cupido.

16. Pompeii VII 47 (12) (Casa di Sirico), lararium in pistrinum. - Boyce no. 236; Schefold, WP 165. - C. A.D. 70-79. - V. standing to the r. of lighted altar, patera in l., r. hand (lost) extended over altar. To the l. Vulcan. On r. side wall an ass, the whole flanked by Lares.

17. Pompeii VII 1, 36/37, lararium in pistrinum. Destroyed. - Boyce no. 240; Schefold, WP 166. - C. A.D. 70-79? - V. standing with sceptre in l., pouring libation with r. hand over altar, nearby an ass. On other side of altar Bacchus. Whole flanked by Lares.

18. Pompeii VII 21, 13, lararium in pistrinum. Destroyed. - Boyce no. 318; Schefold, WP 201. - V. standing near altar flanked by snakes, crowned with wreath of flowers, holding sceptre in l. hand. At her side an ass, its head appearing above altar. Niche flanked by Lares.

19. Pompeii IX 5, 2 (22t), lararium in pistrinum. Boyce no. 419; Schefold, WP 253. - C. A.D. 70-79? - V. standing holding torch in l. and pouring libation over altar. Between V. and altar forepart of ass wearing wreath of leaves, V. holding red halter attached to its muzzle.

Coins

V., usually veiled, standing l., with diverse sacrificial instruments in extended r. hand, another attribute in l., to l. altar (lighted and/or garlanded).

20. AE medallion, Rome, Faustina I, A.D. 141. - Gneecchi, Medaglioni II 24, 6 pl. 57, 2. - Rev.: V., standing l., holding patera in extended r., sceptre in l.; to l. altar, behind column with palladium, r. a building. Leg. VESTA.

For attributes patera and sceptre see also 11, 31, 43.

21.* AE sestertius, dupondius or as, Rome, Antoninus Pius (Diva Faustina), A.D. 141. - BMC Emp IV 244-245, 1529-1530 pl. 36, 13; 254, 1590-1595 pl. 38, 6; garlanded altar (1591-1595). - Rev.: V., standing l., libating out of patera in extended r. hand over lighted altar l., holding long torch, nearly vertical, in l. Leg. CONSECRATIO.

For attributes patera and torch see also 33.

22.* AR denarius, AE sestertius, dupondius or as, Rome, Antoninus Pius (Diva Faustina), c. A.D. 141. - BMC Emp IV 62, 440-442 pl. 9, 20; 244, 1522 pl. 36, 9; IV 253, 1583-1584 pl. 37, 20. - Rev.: V., standing l., libating out of patera in extended r. hand over lighted altar l., holding palladium at l. shoulder in l. Leg. AVGVSTA.

Similar type, but no identifying legend for Antoninus Pius (BMC Emp IV 121, 829-831 pl. 17, 13).

For attributes patera and palladium see also 10, 34.

23.* AR denarius, AE sestertius, Rome, Lucilla, c. A.D. 164 or later. - BMC Emp IV 429, 325-326 pl. 58, 18; 573, 1178-1181 pl. 77, 3. - Rev.: V., standing front, head l., libating out of simpulum in extended r. hand over garlanded altar, holding palladium at l. shoulder in l. Leg. VESTA.

For attributes simpulum and palladium see also 9.

Statue

24.* Limestone. Xanten, Regionalmus. 3136. From tileworks, Xanten (Castra Vetera). - Steiner, J., BonnJbb 101, 1903, 76 pl. 5, 9; Steiner, P., Kataloge west- und süddeutscher Altertumsammlungen I (1911) 46 no. 3136 fig. 3; Espérandieu, Recueil IX (1925) no. 6585; Germania Romana IV (Koepp, F., Die Weihe-denkmäler) (1928) 39 pl. 15, 7; Hahl, L., Zur Stilentwicklung der provinzialrömischen Plastik in Germanien und Gallien (1937) 39. - A.D. 170-180. - V. standing in heavy cloak offering libation with patera on pillar-like altar. L. arm, damaged, carried cornucopia or torch. Head missing. Inscription on base: DEAE VESTE (sic) (CIL XIII 8642).

C. Seated

Reliefs

25. (= Athena/Minerva 227) Marble relief base. Sorrento, Mus. Correale 3657. From Palazzo Arcivescovato, Sorrento. - Rizzo (with previous lit.) pl. 2; Degrassi, A., 151-154; Scott Ryberg, I., MAAR 22, 1955, 49-53 fig. 26; Stucchi, S., I monumenti della parte meridionale del Foro Romano (1958) 15-18 fig. 5; Guarducci, Paribeni, E., BollArte 49, 1964, 198 fig. 13; Degrassi, N., Kolbe; Greifenhagen 2, 11-13 fig. 5; Nash, *TopRom*² II fig. 1332; Tran Tam Tinh, V., Le culte des divinités orientales en Campanie (1972) 122-124 fig. 59-60; Vermeule, C., in Anapxi. Studi in on. P. E. Arias (1982) 636; Turcan pl. 37. - Augustan (after 12 B.C.). - V. in her sanctuary on the Palatine, in the background the Forum Temple. Seated on elaborate throne l., faced by Vestals and flanked by a Vestal and Livia (?). V. represented larger than the other figures, wearing Greek dress, chiton, and himation which covers the back of her head, offering libation with patera in r. and sceptre in l. hand.

26. Marble relief, fr. Rome, Villa Albani 1010. - Zoega, G., Li bassirilievi antichi di Roma I (1808) 119-120 pl. 22; Samter o.c. 42, 127-128; Rizzo 43-44 fig. 5; Degrassi, N., 103 fig. 9; Koeppel, G. M., BonnJbb 183, 1983, 78. 118-119 no. 25 fig. 30; Bol, P. C. (ed.), Forschungen zur Villa Albani, Kat. der ant. Bildwerke I (1989) 421-425 no. 132 pls. 234-235. - Late 1st-early 2nd cent. A.D. - V. seated facing l. offering libation (modern - r. lower arm, top of head and part of face). In background the round building of the Forum (?) almost completely restored.

27.* Marble relief, fr. Rome, Mus. Naz. 310251. From Rome. Hartwig, P., RM 19, 1904, 23-37 pls. 3-4; Helbig³ II (1913) no. 1418; Strong, E., La scultura romana I (1923) 7 fig. 48; Paribeni, R., *Le Terme di Diocleziano e il Mus. Naz. Rom.*² (1932) no. 732; Santangelo, M., «Il Quirinale nell'antichità classica», Mem-PontAcc 5, 1941, 132 fig. 25; Hommel 18-20 fig. 1; Palmer, R. E. A., AJA 80, 1976, 54-55 pl. 11, 13; Koeppel, BMusArtArchMich 3, 1980, 15, 26 fig. 10; Turcan pl. 46. - Flavian. - Fr. of historical relief with offering scene in front of Augustan temple of Quirinus consecrated in 16 B.C. (Mon. Anc. I, CIL III 2 p. 780; Ov. fast. 6, 796) (Hartwig) (by error Temple of Iuppiter Optimus Maximus, Arias, P. E., EAA III

[1960] fig. 919 s. v. «Frontone»), in the gable of which is represented the augurium augustum of Romulus and Remus. V. (Pales, Hartwig and Helbig³; Fortuna, Petersen, RM 19, 1904, 158; «divinità locale», Strong; Pales or Hersilia, Santangelo) is seated on a throne in l. corner of gable in chiton and cloak drawn up over back of head with a cornucopia at her r. side. She is seated near Romulus in the company of Remus, Victoria, Mercury, Mars, Jupiter, Hercules and Rhea Silvia (Hommel).

28.* Marble altar. Naples, Mus. Naz. 147827. Greifenhagen 1, 288 no. 12 pl. 52, 1; Scott Ryberg, o.c. 25, 62 fig. 33a («non-Roman workmanship»); v. Hesberg, H., ANRW II 17, 2 (1981) 1087 no. 18 c. - Early 1st cent. A.D. - V. represented on one of the main sides of a rectangular altar (on other sides - Bona Dea [-> Bona Dea 1], Mercury and Genius). V. seated on throne facing l. holding patera in r. hand, behind forepart of an ass.

29. Marble relief. Rome, Mus. Torlonia (?). - Visconti, C. L., Les monuments de sculpture antique du Mus. Torlonia (1884) 375-376 (ad no. 490, base of «Hestia Giustiniani»); Wissowa, G., Adl 1883, 163 pl. L; Wissowa 2, 246 fig. 1; Gasparri, C., «Materiali per servire allo studio del Mus. Torlonia di scultura antica», Mem-Linc 24, 1980, 213 no. 490 bis. - Late 1st cent. A.D. - V. en face in aedicula seated on throne, wearing tunica, palla and stephane. In r. patera, in l. hand a loaf of bread. To her r. an ass and below a grainmill (pistrinum), to her l. a small sacrificial pig.

30.* Marble relief, possibly architectural. Berlin (West), Staatl. Mus. 1964.21. Found «in Hortis Mattheis sub Caelio», Rome, in the vicinity of Porta Capena (?) according to Fabretti, R., De columna Traiana (1683) 339. - Cat. Christie, London 28th April 1964, no. 87; Greifenhagen 2; Kaeser, B., Römisches im Antikenmuseum (Hrg. K. Vierneisel) (1978) 81-83. - Mid 2nd cent. A.D. - V. seated facing l. on throne wearing chiton and himation covering back of head, and a stephane. In r. hand patera with an egg sucked by a snake raising itself from under the throne; in l. arm rests a scepter which originally reached the footrest. Under the throne a measure (modius) with ears of wheat hanging over the edge, above a round loaf of bread. Below on the basis the inscription: VESTAE SACRVM / C. PVIPIVS FIRMINVS ET / MVDASENA TROPHIME (CIL VI 1, 787); cf. -> Asklepios 252.

Coins

V., usually veiled, is seated on throne or low chair, normally to l., holding an attribute in extended r. hand (sometimes extending hand without attribute), another attribute in l.

31.* AE sestertius and as, Rome, Caligula, A.D. 37-38. - RIC I 117, 30-31; BMC Emp I 154, 45-48 pl. 29, 2. - Rev.: V. seated on elaborate throne, holding patera in extended r. hand, long transversal sceptre in l. Leg. VESTA.

Similar type, but no identifying legend, for Otho (BMC Emp I 365, 11 pl. 60, 7).

Similar type with legend VESTA also for Domitian (RIC II 139, 173), Salonina (RIC V, 1 194, 32).

Similar type, but legend AVGVSTA for Diva Faustina (BMC Emp IV 62, 443 pl. 10, 1).

Similar type, but legend VESTA FELIX for Salomina (Gnecchi, Medaglioni III 60, 17; RIC V 197, 56).

Variant 1: V. seated to r. (!), holding patera in extended r., sceptre sloped in l., no identifying legend: Vitellius (BMC Emp I 373, 33 pl. 61, 9; 373, 34 pl. 61, 10).

Variant 2: V. holding sceptre in l. as above, but r. hand resting on arm of chair, no identifying legend: Plotina (BMC III 107, 528 pl. 18, 14); V. seated to r. or l., leg. VESTA: Diva Faustina (BMC Emp IV 67, 486; RIC III 75, 401).

Variant 3: V. holding sceptre in l. as above, but raising veil with r. hand, leg. VESTA: Salonina (RIC V 1, 197, 55).

For attributes patera and sceptre see also II. 20. 43.

44.

32.* AE as, Rome and Gaul, Galba, A. D. 68-69. - BMC Emp I 335, 159; RIC I 206, 72 pl. 15, 265; Gatti. - Rev.: V. seated on low chair, holding palladium in extended r. hand and transverse sceptre in l. Leg. VESTA.

Similar type with legend PRINCEPS IVVEN- TVTIS also for Domitian, reign of Vespasian (BMC Emp II 46, 260-261, pl. 8, 3; 237, 83 pl. 46, 5; V. hooded).

Similar type with legend VESTA also for Titus (BMC Emp II 264, 200-202 pl. 50, 7; 295, 313 pl. 58, 1; 267, 216 f: sceptre or torch?); Julia Titi (BMC Emp II 353, 258 pl. 68, 6; 279, 256-258 pl. 53, 8); Trajan (BMC Emp III 88, 413-414 pl. 16, 4; 86, 405 pl. 15, 20; 98, 482-483 pl. 17, 12); Sabina (BMC Emp III 360, 950-954 pl. 66, 1-2; 356, 915-918 pl. 65, 3; 538, 1885 pl. 99, 3); Faustina I (BMC Emp IV 10, 47-48 pl. 2, 6-7); Faustina II (BMC Emp IV 408, 175-176 pl. 56, 15); Julia Domna (BMC Emp V 28, 56-57 pl. 6, 17; 123, 491 pl. 21, 3; 168, 91. 93 pl. 29, 3-4).

Similar type, but no identifying legend, for Plotina (BMC Emp III 106, 525 pl. 18, 12; III 107, 526 pl. 18, 13; 245 pl. 47, 12); Sabina (III 356, 914 pl. 65, 2; 540, 1902 pl. 99, 10; 537, 1882 pl. 99, 2; 357, 922-927 pl. 65, 6-9); Marcus Aurelius, reign of Antoninus Pius (BMC Emp IV 335, 1994 pl. 48, 6).

Similar type, but legend AVGVSTA for Diva Faustina (BMC Emp IV 253, 1585 pl. 38, 1).

Similar type, but with legend VESTA MATER for Julia Domna (BMC V 168, 95 pl. 29, 5).

Variant 1: V. as above, but Vestal at feet of V., with pitcher of water on her head, leg. VESTA: Faustina I. (Gnecchi, Medaglioni II 25, 15 pl. 57, 9).

Variant 2: V. holding palladium in extended r. hand as above, but l. hand on throne, leg. VESTA: Julia Domna (BMC Emp V 168, 93-94 pl. 29, 4).

For attributes palladium and sceptre see also 8.

33.* AR denarius, Upper Germany, «Military Class», A. D. 68-69. - BMC Emp I 307, 72 pl. 51, 23. - Obv.: Bust of Jupiter. Rev.: V. seated on throne, holding patera in extended r. hand and torch in l. Leg. [VESTA] PR QVIRITIVM.

Similar type with leg. VESTA [PR] QVIRITIVM for Vitellius (BMC Emp I 392, 120 [description not correct] pl. 62, 8).

Similar type, but no identifying legend for Nerva (BMC Emp III 11, 75 pl. 3, 6); Trajan (BMC Emp III 131, 671 pl. 21, 20; 31, 2 pl. 9, 2; V. wearing stephane and veil).

Variant: V. holding torch in l. as above, but extending r. hand without attribute. Leg. VESTA [PR] QVIRITIVM: Vitellius (BMC Emp I 387, 90 pl. 61, 21).

For attributes patera and torch see also 21.

34.* AE as, Rome and Gaul, Galba, A. D. 68-69. - BMC Emp I 335, 157; Robertson, Hunter I 162 nos. 53 and C 3803 pl. 27; Gatti. - Rev.: V. seated l. on low chair, holding patera in extended r. hand and palladium in l. Leg. VESTA.

For attributes patera and palladium see also 10. 22.

45.

35. AE dupondius, Rome, Vitellius, A. D. 69. - BMC Emp I cxxvii 383. - Rev.: V., seated, holding trophy in extended r. hand and sceptre in l. Leg. VESTA.

36.* AR denarius, Rome, Vespasian, A. D. 69-70. - BMC Emp II 10, 55 pl. 1, 19. - Rev.: V. seated, hooded, holding simpulum in extended r. hand, no legend (BMC Emp II 13, 70 pl. 2, 5; V. veiled).

Variant 1: V. holding simpulum in extended r. hand as above, but transverse sceptre in l. Leg. VESTA: Julia Domna (BMC Emp V 470, 217 pl. 73, 16; 435, 31-33 pl. 68, 8).

For attributes simpulum and sceptre see also 5.

37. AE as, Rome, Gallienus, c. A. D. 253. - RIC V 1, 89, 278. - Rev.: V., seated, holding wreath in extended r. hand and sceptre in l. Leg. VESTA.

38. AR antoninianus, Gaul (Lugdunum), Salonina, A. D. 257-258. - RIC V 1, 109, 9. - Rev.: V., seated, holding victory in extended r. hand and palm in l. Leg. VESTA.

39. AR antoninianus, Asia, Salonina (joint reign), A. D. 258-259. - RIC V 1, 115, 70. - Rev.: V., seated, holding victory in extended r. and sceptre in l. Leg. VESTA.

For attributes victory and sceptre see also 13.

D. Seated at altar or cult table

Wall paintings

40.* Pompeii VII 12, 11 (4), lararium in pistrinum. - Jordan 2; Boyce no. 316 pl. 24, 1; Schefold, WP 201; Greifenhagen 2, 14, fig. 7. - C. A. D. 70-79. - V., crowned, wearing veil, chiton and mantle, sits on cloth-covered throne, feet resting on footstool. In l. cornucopia, in r. hand patera over cult-table (mensa sacra?) on which lies grain and fillets. Behind and to the r. forepart of an ass. She is flanked by Lares.

41. Pompeii VII 2, 3, lararium in pistrinum. - Boyce no. 247; Schefold, WP 168. - C. A. D. 70-79. - V. seated, sceptre in l., pouring libation with r. hand over altar. Genius to the l. of altar. Whole flanked by Lares.

Relief

42.* Marble relief. Palermo, Mus. Reg. 1539. Find place uncertain (Mistretta, near ancient Kalakte?; Rizzo 41 n. 22). Samter, E., «Vestaliinnenopfer», RM 9, 1894, 125-133 pl. 6; Rizzo 41-43 pl. C; Scott Ryberg, o.c. 25, 51-52 fig. 27; Stucchi, o.c. 25, 13 n. 9 fig. 11; Brilliant, R., Gesture and Rank in Roman Art (1963) 62 fig. 2, 31 (priestess not divinity); Vermeule, o.c. 25, 635-636 pl. 180, 1. Late 1st cent. A. D. - V. seated on throne facing r., probably offering libation (patera, r. arm and hand lost) wearing chiton, and himation covering back of head. In front altar, votives and Pontifex Maximus (upper part missing), in background Vestals and architectural elements.

E. Statue of Vesta in her round temple (standing or seated)

Coins

43.* AU aureus and AR denarius, Rome, Nero, c. A. D. 64-68. - BMC Emp I 213-214, 101-106 pl. 40, 10-13; Kent/Hirmer, RömMünze no. 196 pl. 51. - Rev.: Front view of V.'s round temple, in the centre statue of V., seated to front, head l., holding patera in r. hand and long sceptre in l. Leg. VESTA.

For V. seated, holding patera and sceptre see also 31.

44.* AE dupondius, Domitian, reign of Vespasian, Rome, A. D. 72. - BMC Emp II 144, 648 pl. 25, 11. - Rev.: Front view of V.'s temple, in the centre figure of V., standing l. on a low base, holding patera in r.; sceptre in l. Leg. VESTA.

Variant 1: Temple of V. and statue of V. as above, but l. and r. of temple statues of goddesses on low bases: goddess on l. holding purse; goddess on r. extending r. hand and holding long sceptre in l.; leg. VESTA: Vespasian (BMC Emp II 76, 372 pl. 12, 16; V. holding vertical sceptre in l.; BMC Emp II 17, 90 pl. 2, 17: no attributes for V.).

Variant 2: Temple of V. and statue of V. as above, but on roof pinnacle a statue l., leg. VESTA: Vespasian (BMC Emp II 151, 664 pl. 26, 9); Titus, reign of Vespasian (BMC II 155, 674 pl. 27, 7); Domitian, reign of Vespasian (BMC II 159, 691 pl. 28, 3).

For V. standing, holding patera and sceptre see also 11.

45. AE medallion, Rome, Lucilla, A. D. 164-169. - Gnecchi, Medaglioni II 51, 13 pl. 76, 9-10; Dressel, H./Regling, K., Die römischen Medaillone des Münzkabinetts der Staatlichen Museen zu Berlin (1972) 113, 57 pl. 9, 4. - Rev.: Front view of V.'s round temple, in the centre statue of V., seated frontally, attributes (probably patera in r. hand offering libation), in front of temple six Vestals, sacrificing over altar, no identifying legend.

Similar type, no identifying legend also for Crispina (Gnecchi, Medaglioni II 72, 5 pl. 92, 5; Kent/Hirmer, RömMünze no. 361 R pl. 90).

Similar type, but with legend VESTA MATER for Julia Domna (BMC V 169, 96 pl. 6).

Variant 1: Temple of V., statue of V. inside, but no Vestals, and standing statue on roof (V.?), in front Julia (?), veiled, draped, standing front, head l., sacrificing out of patera in r. hand over lighted and garlanded altar and holding box in l.; leg. VESTA MATER: Julia Domna (BMC Emp V 169, 97 pl. 29, 7).

Variant 2: Temple of V. as above, but Caracalla in military dress sacrificing out of patera over lighted and garlanded altar in front of temple, eight other figures in front: Caracalla (BMC Emp V 450, 101-102 pl. 70, 5-6).

Variant 3: Temple of V. and Vestals as above, but in the centre statue of V., seated frontally, holding patera in r. and palladium in l., on roof pinnacle standing V. with sceptre or palladium; leg. VESTA MATER: Julia Domna (Gnecchi, Medaglioni I 45, 2 pl. 22, 4; Kraus, PKG pl. 389a; Dressel/Regling, o.c. 172, 98 pl. 13, 7; Kent/Hirmer, RömMünze, no. 402 R pl. 19).

For V. seated, holding patera and palladium see also 34. For V. standing, holding sceptre and palladium see also 8.

F. Statue of Vesta standing on roof pinnacle of her temple

Coins

See 44, variant 2; 45, variants 1 and 3; 49, rev.

46.* AE dupondius, Tiberius (obv. Divus Augustus), c. A. D. 22-23. - Rizzo 29 tav. agg. A, 1; Sutherland, C. H. V., NC 1941, 106-110. 115-116 n. 25 pl. 2, 1. 2. 10-12. 14-16; Guarducci 160. 168 pl. 39, 4; BMC Emp cxxxix. 140, 142 pl. 25, 10; RIC I^a 99, 74-76 pl. 12, 74. - Rev.: Round temple of V. with statue of V. (?) on roof pinnacle, holding patera and sceptre. On l. and r., calf and lamb (or ram?) on high bases.

G. Heads and busts

Relief

47. (= Dodekathoei 48* with bibl.) Marble altar, sundial (?). Paris, Louvre MA 666. From Gabii. - Stern, H., «Les calendriers romains illustrés», ANRW II 12, 2 (1981) 434-435 pl. 1, 2; Long, o.c. I, 14-16. 295; Turcan pl. 140. - 2nd cent. A. D. - Head of V. in high relief, identified with the help of an attribute - a lamp with the head of an ass. However, according to Fröhner, W., Notice de la sculpture antique du Mus. Imp. du Louvre (1868) 11-12, the lamp of V. is nearly entirely modern.

Coins

(Head or bust to r.)

48.* AR denarius, Rome, P. Sulpicius Galba, 69 B. C. - Crawford, RRC no. 406/1 pl. 50, 14. - Obv.: Head of V., veiled. Rev.: Sacrificial knife, simpulum and axe. Same type (but bust of V. instead of head, veiled, draped), restored by Trajan (BMC Emp III 134, 682 pl. 22, 17).

49. AR denarius, Rome, Q. Cassius Longinus, 55 B. C. - Crawford, RRC no. 428/1 pl. 52, 3; Fuchs, G., Architekturdarstellungen auf römischen Münzen der Republik und der frühen Kaiserzeit (1969) nos. 31–32 pl. 3. – Obv.: Head of V. Leg. VEST or VESTA. Rev.: V.'s round temple with female statue (V.?) on roof pinnacle, holding patera (or palladium: Cody 44).

Same type (but bust of V., veiled, draped), restored by Trajan (BMC Emp III 135, 685 pl. 22, 22).

50. * AU aureus, Rome, C. Julius Caesar (moneyer A. Hirtius), 46 B.C. – Crawford, RRC no. 466 pl. 55, 13. – Obv.: Head of V. (?), veiled. Rev.: Lituus, jug and axe.

Same type, but obv.: head of V. (?) and cucullus. Rev.: Trophy: C. Julius Caesar, 48–46 B.C. (Crawford, RRC nos. 452/3).

51. * AR denarius, Civil Wars, Upper Germany, A.D. 68–69. – BMC Emp I 306, 64 pl. 51, 20; Martin, P. H., Die anonymen Münzen des Jahres 68 n. Chr. (1974) 70–77, 8. 12. 13; 76, 58. – Obv.: Bust of V., draped, hooded, wearing stephane; in front lighted torch. Leg. VESTA PR QVIRITIVM. Rev.: Clasp hands (BMC Emp I 307, 70 pl. 51, 22; rev.: Jupiter seated).

Sculpture

52. Image of V. in lectisternium held in Rome after defeat at the Trasimenean Lake, 217 B.C. (→ Dodekathēoi 31), lost. According to Wissowa, G., REXII 1 (1925) 1113 s.v. «Lectisternium», the images of the gods at a lectisternium held in 179 B.C. were in the form of busts, cf. Liv. 40, 59, 7 – deorum capita, quae in lectis erant, averterunt se.

H. Uncertain representations

53. Fresco «Le nozze Aldobrandine». Rome, Vatican Library, Sala delle Nozze Aldobrandine. – Andreea, B., «IGNI ET AQUA ACCIPI», Röm. Quartalschr. f. christl. Altertumskunde und Kirchengesch. 57, 1962, 12–13; Helbig⁴ I, no. 466. – Augustan. – Andreea considers the woman to the r. to be V. standing at a focus, in the manner of Hestia, who plays a recognized role at wedding ceremonies. However, most scholars consider the object a thymiaterion and not a focus, and the woman depicted plays a modest part in the ceremony. – cf. Marwitz, H., AuA 12, 1966, 97–98. 104; Blanckenhagen, P. H./Green, B., RM 82, 1975, 91. 98.

54. (= Epona 221 with bibl.) Wall painting. Pompeii IX 2, 24. – Boyce no. 403 pl. 24, 2. – C. A.D. 70–79. – Goddess riding an ass with infant in l. arm. V. characterized as «déesse-mère» by Chapouthier, F., Les Dioscures au service d'une déesse (1935) 317 fig. 63. Interpretation accepted by Hommel n. 144, who incorrectly takes infant to be rendering of a palladium. V. (?) Magnen, R./Thevenot, É., Epona (1953) 62 no. 245. Epona, Boyce, Schleiermacher, W., 23. BerRGK (1933) 132 pl. 13, 1–2. Interpretation as Epona convincing on basis of iconography and there is other evidence of south Germanic influence in Pompeii in this period.

55. V. represented in pedimental sculpture of Iupiter Optimus Maximus temple, Rome, according to Jordan, H., Topographie I 2 (1885) 101, followed by Colini, A. M., BollCom 53, 1926, 190; Cagiano de Azevedo, M., MemPontAcc 5, 1940, 8. Interpretation based upon representation of temple on relief in Conservatori Palace, Rome (Helbig⁴ II no. 1444 C). The personification/divinity concerned is most likely → Salus, cf. Scott Ryberg, I., Panel reliefs of Marcus Aurelius (1967) 26 n. 26.

56. Entablature of the Forum of Nerva, Rome. – v. Blanckenhagen, P. H., Flavische Architektur und ihre Dekoration untersucht am Nervaforum (1940) 121–123 pl. 40 fig. 107, 8. – A.D. 81–98. – The thesis of Blanckenhagen is not convincing. No attributes and no context point to the likelihood that V. is represented.

57. Marble relief from Lateran, Rome, now lost (in part recovered, though without female figures, Santa Maria Scrinari, V., RendPontAcc 41, 1968/69; 184–189), known from Renaissance drawings. – De Geymüller, H., «Trois albums de dessins de Fra Giocondo», MEFRA 11, 1891, 136 pl. 1; Hülsen, Chr., Das Skizzenbuch des Giovannantonio Dosio (1933) 3 no. 10 pl. V; Stucchi o.c. 25, 89–92 fig. 37–38. – 2nd cent. A.D. (?). – V. (?) (Demeter and Kore, Hülsen, Chr., RM 8, 1893, 286) seated to l. of Forum temple in posture similar to V. on Sorrento relief 25, on drawing by Anonymous Destailleur accompanied by woman with torch – Vestal (?). Interpretation is open to doubt until finds of other fragments can confirm an original connection of figures and temple.

58. (= Dodekathēoi 45 with bibl.) Altar. Savigny near Beaune (Côte-d'Or), castle. From Mavilly, Roman Gaul. – Espérandieu, Recueil III no. 2067, 8. – 2nd cent. A.D. – According to Reinach, S., Cultes, mythes et religions III (1908) 214–215, the relief shows V. among the Dei Consentes, rendered in a hypothetical archaic «pre-Roman» scheme, with her hands in front of eyes, reflecting Ov. fast. 3, 45 Vestae simulacra feruntur Virgineis oculis opposuisse manus. Followed by Espérandieu, l.c. The idea of an archaic «pre-Roman» rendering of V. is wholly unlikely, and has been rejected by Wissowa 2, 271, but is uncritically accepted in → Dodekathēoi 45.

COMMENTARY

Public images of Vesta

The evidence for a cult image in the aedes Vestae is ambiguous, but the earliest architectural representation shows no image (49). The Forum building was never a temple in the technical sense, and the absence of a statue may reflect the abstract animistic conception of the goddess. The acroterial sculpture, possibly a representation of V., is rendered schematically (49–46), but a dependence on Greek Classical sculpture is discernible (cf. Fuchs, o.c. 49, 23, 51. 94). The figure is placed in a leaf-calyx and thereby characterized as a vegetation and earth-goddess (cf. Jucker, H., Das Bildnis im Blätterkelch [1961] 206 with ref. to Ov. fast. 6, 267 Vesta eadem est et terra; Koch 1738 with further ref.).

Although there was no cult image in the aedes it cannot be excluded that a sculpture was erected in the vicinity in Republican times (cf. Lugli, G., Roma antica. Il centro monumentale [1946] 20), so vindicating the tradition of the location of Scaevola's murder ante simulacrum Vestae in 82 B.C.

The Republican coins with V. (or Vestal?) portraits (48), issued by moneyers with ancestral pontifical connections, are typologically anonymous and bear relationship to personifications like Concordia (→ Homonoia/Concordia) and → Libertas.

The early iconography of V. is not easily definable, although the erection of a statue of V. among the Dei Consentes by the 1st cent. B.C. (14) implies a Greek Hellenistic model. This is not identifiable in the existing material, but a general idea is offered by the fragmentary Dodekathēoi monument (→ Dodekathēoi 27; Fuchs, W., Die Vorbilder der neuattischen Reliefs [1959] 145 n. 158; Long, o.c. 1, 34–35 Rome 4; 244 fig. 89, with further representations of goddesses known from drawings of parts of the relief no longer extant, figs. 87–88) of early Neo-attic style with 4th cent. B.C. models. The early renderings of V. cannot in the existing material be distinguished from that of → Hestia. The interpretation of Long 44 fig. 124: – V. in a 5th cent. B.C. «archaizing» style on a South Italian (?) relief (= Dodekathēoi 20) – is wholly untenable, though the figure (→ Hestia 15), holding patera and sceptre, is relatable to the later V. iconography.

Primitive images, symbols?, of V. may have existed as early as the 3rd cent. B.C. or even earlier, as implied by the introduction of the goddess in the lectisternium (52), possibly in the form of masks or busts (cf. Long 238, and 47). The basic, recognised, portrayal and image of V. is the sitting enthroned figure with sceptre and offering libation, similar to renderings of Ceres (→ Demeter/Ceres, LIMCIV, Addenda), Fortuna (→ Tyche/Fortuna), → Kybele and others. The identification of V. is thus often dependant on inscription, as on coins, or on context (25). The image of V. on the Augustan Sorrento base (25) is Greek in origin. The enthroned female figure leaning back has as its model 5th–4th cent. B.C. Attic grave reliefs, – a model used also to portray Olympian divinities, among whom Hestia (Miller, S. G., OpuscRom 9, 1973, 167–172 [→ Hestia 19]; cf. also Lindner, R., Jdl 97, 1982, 363 fig. 41). There are close parallels in 4th–3rd cent. B.C. sculpture, e.g., the cult (?) statue of Cybele in Boston (Caskey, L. D., Cat. of Greek and Roman Sculpture [1925] no. 50 and the Cybele from Pergamon (Pergamon VII [1901] pl. 9). The rendering is one of the more salient examples of Neo-classicism or «augusteisch-neuattisch» art (Fuchs, W., Vorbilder 145). As the other statues pictured on the relief are relatable to known sculpture and artists (Lippold, GrPl 221. 253; → Apollon/Apollo 404. 147b; → Ares/Mars 24c) the statue of V. could also have a known cult-statue as model. However, the statue of Hestia (→ Hestia 21), which, as tradition has it, was brought to Rome, cannot directly be related to the Augustan image, since it was transferred to Rome first under Tiberius (Plin. nat. 36, 25; Cass. Dio 55, 9, 6). The Hestia of the altar in Ostia (→ Dodekathēoi 24 = Hestia 16), related to Scopas by Greifenhagen (Greifenhagen 2, 21) and to Praxiteles by Picard (Picard, Manuel III 1, 667–670. 864), is not iconographically relatable to the Sorrento V.

The scheme is used for later renderings of the seated V. – cf. 31 which bears a clear imprint of a statuary type, and 43, statue in the Forum building from the time of Nero (possibly symbolic, though it cannot be ruled out that an image was set up after the Neronian conflagrations). The relief 25 shows the dedication of the Palatine V. signum, 28th April, 12 B.C., in the vicinity of the house of Augustus with the Forum sanctuary and the palladium (→ Athena/Minerva 235) in the background, in the presence of Vestals, the Pontifex Maximus (Augustus who had assumed office March 6th, 12 B.C. [not extant but cf. 42]) and Livia (?) (V. is flanked by only one Vestal, cf. Pollini, J., Studies in Augustan «Historical» Reliefs [1978] 319 n. 228). The creation of this V. iconography under Augustus is well in keeping with the goddess' close ties with the Imperial household, a family of Trojan origins, from where, apart from the palladium, a V. image was also saved (Verg. Aen. 2, 296–297). The scene reflects the political and religious programme of Augustus, underlining the close ties between Livia and V. (cf. Ov. fast. 4, 949–951; Pont. 4, 13, 29), ties which, as a symbol of Rome's early history and Vestal virtues, become a model for future renderings of V. and Imperial cult (45 and variants). (A sculptural variant where V. carries a heavier, Roman, dress [26. 28. 30] carries the stamp of other versions of official Julio-Claudian sculpture [Kraus, PKG fig. 291; Gross, W. H., Julia-Augusta. Untersuchungen zur Grundlegung einer Livia-Ikonographie [1962] 114–116 pls. 1, 4; 23, 2].) The coins constitute the greater part of the iconographic evidence. In the confusion of the Civil Wars denarii were struck with V. holding patera and torch (33) reflecting the parties' claims to the patronage of the old State worship. The palladium as an attribute of V. is seen for the first time on the coinage of Galba (32), stressing the claim of serving the interest of the city of Rome in time of conflict. The type of V. with the palladium is taken up by later emperors rather as a generic type, not necessarily reflecting a personal Imperial court cult (as suggested by Mattingly, BMC Emp III lxx. lxxix). V. on coins basically emphasizes the office of the emperor as Pontifex Maximus (31, etc.) and the role of the empress as guardian of Vestal virtues, commencing with Julia Titi (32), but above all common under the Antonines, echoing Livia's ties to V. Under Valerianus and Gallienus V. had her final importance as a coin type (13. 37–39), holding new attributes, Victory, palm-leaf and wreath, and not the palladium, perhaps evidence that the Imperial- and city-aspect of the V. cult was now less important.

V. in the gable of the temple of Quirinus (27) is Augustan, though basically different from the Palatine image. V. present at the augurium of Romulus (Ov. fast. 4, 828) in the presence of Jupiter and Mars (cf. Vell. 2, 131) (Hommel), with cornucopia belongs to the context of → Lares, → Penates, and the divinities → Bona Dea and Ceres (→ Demeter/Ceres, LIMC IV, Addenda). The interpretation is based also on other renderings of V. with this attribute, these attested in a private context (24. 40). The altar in Naples (28) has a rendering of Bona Dea (→ Bona Dea I) with cornucopia and serpent (cf. 30) testimony to related iconography and bonds between the two divinities; Bona Dea was honoured by Vestals (cf. Greifenhagen I, 244 with ref.).

The provincial Roman pantheon with divinities rendered in a local style on the Jupiter column (4), raised by the canabarii of the Mainz legion, confirms loyalty to Nero and the Imperial cult. The presence of V., Lares publici and Genius Augusti is evidence of Augustan influence. The figure of V. (the objection of Quilling to this interpretation has not won acceptance) is evidence of Campanian influence, as the ass above all qualifies the divinity here (cf. below).

Private images of Vesta

V. was a symbol of the private hearth, center of household cult and worship (Cato agr. 132, 2) and associated with Genii and Dei Penates. In Campania particularly the patron deity of bakers, bread-baking being originally one of the functions of the private hearth. V. is commonly depicted in the lararia in kitchens and mills, alone, among the Lares or in company with other deities, as Vulcan (16, cf. 52). The depictions of V. in the Pompeian frescoes reflect the Romanisation of the town and the economic and social background to her cult (cf. Orr, D. G., «Roman Domestic Religion: The Evidence of the Household Shrines», ANRW II 16, 2 [1978] 1560; Scheffold, K., La peinture pompéienne [1972] 58). V. is accompanied by an ass (I-3. 15-19. 40. 41). Asses were used to work the mills in the bakeries and as such become a symbol of her cult (Prop. 4, 1, 21; Copa [Appendix Virgiliana] 26 Vestae delictum est asinus). At the Vestalia an ass was crowned, Wissowa 2, 255 fig. 2, and the ass makes it possible to identify V. on private altars (28-30. 47). This iconographical aspect is possibly reflected in the state cult monuments, cf. the fragment of an architectural element showing part of an ass' head from the Forum building (Jordan I, VIII, 18-19, pl. XIII i). The ass may have served V. in primitive times by carrying the salt for mola salsa from the Ostia salt pans to Rome (Adams, L., Janus and the Bridge [1961] 319 n. 20).

The statue from Xanten (24) is votive and evidence of V. as patroness of tileworks, cf. dedicatory inscription on altar from tileworks at Nijmegen: Vestae sacrum... mag(ister) fig(ulorum) pro se (CIL XIII 8729). (A votive inscription of a publican from Mainz is dedicated to Fortuna, V., Lares and Penates, CIL XIII 6709.) V. is pictured as patroness of a bakers guild of which Pupius Firminus was quaestor (A. D. 144) (30). The iconography is official: - throne, sceptre, and the stephane which has parallels in Imperial portraiture. The snake is a symbol of → Salus and → Hygieia (cf. the Firminus relief in the Louvre, Greifenhagen 2, fig. 10) stressing V.'s role as important to private and public welfare and the common good. The relief thus combines most of the aspects delineated above.

TOBIAS FISCHER-HANSEN

HEURESIS

(Εὐρησις) Personnification de la Découverte, de l'Invention.

I.* (= Epinoia I avec bibl.) Enluminure. Vienne, Bibl. Nat., cod. med. gr. I, «Dioscoride de Vienne», fol. 4^v. - v. Premerstein, A./Wessely, K./Mantuani, G., Dioscurides. Codex Aniciae Julianae picturis illustratus (1906) pl. 4^v; Grabar, A., L'âge d'or de Justinien (1966) 197 fig. 215; Gerstinger, H., Dioscurides. Codex Vindobonensis med. gr. I (1970) pl. 4^v; Weitzmann, K., Studies in Classical and Byzantine Manuscript Illumination (1971) 135-136 fig. 110. - Vers 512 ap. J.-C. - Debout, de trois-quarts, devant Dioscoride (ou Crateuas?, v. Premerstein o. c. 60), vêtue d'une longue tunique jaune au fin plissé et d'un manteau rouge, parée de boucles d'oreilles, H. (inscr. ΕΥΡΕΙΣ) tend au médecin une racine de mandragore et lui montre, de la dr., un chien qui se tord de convulsions à ses pieds.

Première étape de la démarche du savant, H. précède → Epinoia, au folio suivant (5^v) du manuscrit, qui désigne à son tour l'observation scientifique, la compréhension des choses découvertes. Il semble bien que la figure soit unique à ce jour. JEAN CH. BALTY

HIACHOS

(Ἰαχος) Satyrname (→ Silenos, Silenoi) in einer Vaseninschrift. Vgl. → Iakchos als Beiname des Dionysos.

I. (= Dionysos 362 mit Lit., = Eumelpe I* mit Lit. und Beschreibung) Amphora, att. bilingue. München, Antikenslg. 2302. Aus Vulci. - ARV 6, 1: Psiak; Para 128; Add 150; RE Suppl. IX (1962) 80 s. v. «Hiachos» (Brommer). - Rechts tanzt H. (HIAXOΣ, nackt, bekränzt) zur l. Seite hin, wendet sich aber zu → Eumelpe und → Dionysos zurück.

ANNELIESE KOSSATZ-DEISSMANN

HIACO → Iason 83

HIASUNU → Iason 23

HIBERUS

(Ἰβηρ, Ἰβηρος, Hiberus, Iberus) Représentation anthropomorphe de l'Ebre, fleuve du nord-est de la péninsule Ibérique (→ Fluvii). La divinité fluviale n'est connue que par une inscription de Tarragone et peut-être par une monnaie.

SOURCES LITTÉRAIRES ET ÉPIGRAPHIQUES: Aucun auteur ancien ne mentionne le culte d'un dieu-fleuve H.: il faut donc reconsidérer l'hypothèse de Beltrán selon laquelle Claudien (IV^e s. ap. J.-C.) parlant du divus Hiberus, faisait peut-être allusion au fleuve H. divinisé. Par ailleurs les mentions dans les textes du fleuve H. sont très nombreuses (cf. Hübner, «Nomina geographica»). On ne doit pas confondre ce fleuve H. avec un autre H., situé au sud-ouest de la péninsule et signalé entre autres par Strabon (3, 4, 19 p. 166; 3, 5, 9 p. 175): Schulten, Tovar, etc. l'identifient au río Tinto (prov. d'Huelva), García y Bellido à l'Udiel.

La discussion sur l'origine du nom des Ibères provient en grande partie du problème que pose ce double toponyme. S'appuyant sur les auteurs anciens, Schulten, Beltrán, etc. estiment que le fleuve H. d'Andalousie aurait donné son nom d'abord aux habitants des environs, puis à tous ceux de l'«Iberia». Pour Tovar, le mot Ibar/Iber avait le sens général de «grand fleuve» ou de «bassin», d'où la répétition du toponyme en des lieux éloignés.

BIBLIOGRAPHIE: Beltrán, A., «El río Ebro en la Antigüedad clásica», Caesaraugusta 17-18, 1961, 69; Blanco, A., «El mosaico de Mérida con la alegoría del saeculum aureum», Anales de la Univ. Hispalense 8, 1971, 153-178; Blázquez, J. M., Diccionario de las religiones prerromanas de Hispania (1975) 109 s. v. «Iberò»; Drexler, W./Steuding, H., ML I 2 (1886-90) 2654-2655 s. v. «Hiberus»; García y Bellido, A., La Península Ibérica en los comienzos de su historia (1953) 91; Hübner, E., Monumenta Linguae Ibericae (1893); Mackie, N., Local Administration in Roman Spain (1981) 164-167; Quet, M.-H., La mosaïque cosmologique de Mérida (1981) 38; Schulten, A., RE IX 1 (1914) 807 s. v. «Iberus I, 2» (les fleuves); idem, Fontes Hispaniae Antiquae I (1922) 65, 72, 99, 191, 503; idem, Geografía y etnografía antiguas de la Península Ibérica (1963) 63-65, 25-29; Scichilone, G., EAA IV (1961) 23-24 s. v. «Hiberus».

CATALOGUE

I.* Fr. de statue en marbre. Tarragone, Mus. Nat. Arch. MNAT 442. De Tarragone. - Hernández, B./Del Arco, A., Catálogo del Mus. Arq. de Tarragona (1894) 48 n° 442; Albertini, E., «Sculptures antiques du Conventus Tarraconensis», AIEC (Anuari, Institut d'Estudis Catalans) 4, 1911-12, 323, 381 fig. 124 n° 109; García y Bellido, A., Esculturas romanas de España y Portugal (1949) 280-283 n° 277 pl. 232. Alföldy, G., Die röm. Inschriften von Tarraco (1975) 13 n° 22 pl. 11, 4; Koppel, E., Die röm. Skulpturen von Tarraco (1985) 101-102 n° 145 pl. 64, 1-2. Inscr.: CIL II 4075. - II^e s. ap. J.-C. - Fr. d'un socle de statue portant l'inscr. FLVMEN HIBERVS. Au-dessus, l'eau coulant d'un vase (Alföldy) ou d'un masque (Koppel), perdu. Il reste l'avant d'un pied dr. nu, appartenant à une figure, peut-être debout, de grandeur naturelle.

2.* Monnaie (semis) AE, Carthagène-Carthago-nova, 7 av. J.-C. - Heiss, A., Descr. gén. des monnaies ant. de l'Espagne (1870) 270, 275 n° 16-18 pl. 36; Vives y Escudero, A., La moneda hispánica IV (1924) 31, 35 n° 16 pl. 130; Beltrán, A., Curso de Numismática I (1950) 349, 367 fig. 471, 486; idem, «Sobre las antiguas monedas latinas de Hispania», Numisma 2, 1952, 30 fig. 27. - Av. Tête masculine et juvénile, de profil à dr., les cheveux en désordre, crachant de l'eau (?) par la bouche; lég. HIBERVS-II-V-QVINQ. Rv. Champ lisse (variante: simpulum); lég. CLVCI-P-F-II-V-QVIN(Q).

COMMENTAIRE

La statue de Tarragone I est très éloignée du type habituel des divinités fluviales de cette époque, qui sont en général allongées ou nonchalamment assises (Quet 38): la figure est représentée debout - ou peut-être assise sur un siège élevé - à la manière de ces nombreuses statues masculines non identifiées qui ornaient les fontaines et les nymphées romaines (Mustilli n° 68; Stuart Jones, SculptMusCap n° 60). Plus intéressante encore est l'épigraphie, au nominatif: elle fait supposer que la statue appartenait à un groupe dont chaque figure pouvait être identifiée grâce à son inscription, comme sur la mosaïque de Mérida (cf. Quet; Blanco). On ignore malheureusement tout du lieu et des circonstances de la découverte.

Divers auteurs ont vu dans la monnaie de Carthagène 2 une allégorie, et même une sorte de jeu de mots fait sur le nom du magistrat Hiberus et celui du fleuve H. (Heiss 275). Mais, pour Beltrán (1950) 349, ce type de droit rappelle la construction de l'aqueduc de la Fuente de Cubas. Il pourrait aussi s'agir d'une allusion de portée générale à la responsabilité qu'exerçait le duovir sur les eaux publiques (Mackie 169).

MÓNICA RUIZ BREMÓN

HIERA

(Ἥερα) Gemahlin des → Telephos von amazonenhaftem Wesen, Königin der Mysier, fällt in der Schlacht am Kaikos (bei Pergamon). Nach späten Quellen sind die etruskischen Gründerhéroen Tyrse-nos und Tarchon ihre und des Telephos Söhne.

LITERARISCHE QUELLEN: Die frühe epische Überlieferung über die Schlacht zwischen Mysiern und Achäern (in den Kyprien) scheint H. nicht gekannt zu haben. Für → Eurypylos (I), den Sohn des Telephos, der Hom. Od. 11, 519-520 und in der Kleinen Ilias (Davies EGF fig. 7) auf Seiten der Trojaner kämpft, ist Astyoche als Mutter überliefert (Akusilaos von Argos, FGH 2 F 40). Priamos hatte sie mit einem goldenen Weinstock bestochen, daß sie ihren Sohn in den Krieg sandte, obwohl Telephos mit den Achäern ausgemacht hatte, daß weder er noch seine Nachkommen gegen sie kämpfen würden (Schol. Iuv. 6, 655). Weder die aus Troja stammende Astyoche noch Argiope, die Tochter des Myserkönigs → Teuthras, die ebenfalls als Gemahlin des Telephos überliefert ist (Diod. 4, 33), kann mit H. identisch sein. Ihr Name, wohl «die übermenschlich Starke», klingt mehr nach einem Beinamen, ihr Verhalten in der Schlacht ist das einer Amazone. Unter den aus archaischer und klassischer Zeit überlieferten Amazonennamen (→ Amazones S. 653) findet sich H. allerdings nicht. Sie ist nicht früher als bei Philostr. her. 2, 14–18 genannt. H. führt die mysischen Frauen in der Schlacht am Kaikos an; nach der Verwundung des Telephos, der über einen Weinstock strauchelte, kämpft sie um so heftiger und fällt durch die Hand des → Nireus. Achäer und Mysier schließen daraufhin einen Waffenstillstand, damit H. bestattet werden kann. Als Mutter des Tyrzenos und des Tarchon ist sie in Schol. Lykophron 1245, 1248–1249 genannt; vgl. auch Tzetz. anteh. 279; posth. 558.

BIBLIOGRAPHIE: Bauchhenß-Thüriedl, Ch., Der Mythos von Telephos in der antiken Bildkunst (1971) 56–57, 71; Delivourias, A., «Téléphe et la bataille du Caïque au fronton Ouest du temple d'Aléa à Tégée», BCH 97, 1973, 114–115; Höfer, O., ML III 1 (1897–1902) 423–424 s. v. «Nireus 1»; Malten, L., RE VIII 2 (1913) 1395–1396 s. v. «Hiera 1»; Radke, G., RE VII A 2 (1948) 1938–1939 s. v. «Tyrhenos 1»; Robert, C., «Beiträge zur Erklärung des pergamenischen Telephosfrieses», JdI 2, 1887, 253–256; Schwenn, F., RE V A 1 (1934) 365–366 s. v. «Telephos 1»; Stoll, H. W., ML I 2 (1886–1890) 2655–2656 s. v. «Hiera».

KATALOG

1.* Telephosfries, Platten 23 und 24. Berlin (DDR), Staatl. Mus. Aus Pergamon. – Winnefeld, H., Pergamon III 2, Die Friesen des Großen Altares (1910) Taf. 35, 1; Bauchhenß-Thüriedl 56 Faltplan 2 (oben links). – 160–150 v. Chr. – Es ist das Verdienst von C. Robert, in der Reiterin mit entblößter Brust auf steigendem Pferd, die ein Kriegsbeil gegen einen Feind in ihrem Rücken schwingt, H. erkannt zu haben. Der dem Pferd der H. in die Zügel greifende, vom Rücken gesehene Heros auf der anschließenden Platte ist wohl Nireus, der sie töten wird. Auf beiden Seiten schließen sich weitere Szenen aus der Schlacht am Kaikos an, dazwischen, nach dem Vorschlag von Bauchhenß-Thüriedl:

2.* Prothesis der Hiera. Es handelt sich um die Platte 51 des Telephosfrieses, die früher als Prothesis des Telephos galt und deshalb an das Ende versetzt worden war (Winnefeld a. O. Taf. 34, 2). Bauchhenß-Thüriedl beobachtet richtig, daß die Gestalt auf der Bahre, von der nur der Hinterkopf erhalten ist, weibliches Haar und speziell eine klassische Amazonenfrisur hat. Da um des Todes der H. willen die Schlacht unterbrochen worden war, sind Anordnung und Deutung überzeugend. Der Tod des Telephos würde ohnehin nicht an das Ende des Frieses passen, sondern eher eine Szene mit Telephos als Kultheros. Andererseits bringt die Prothesis zwischen den Kampfszenen variatio in diesen Teil des Frieses und entspricht so dessen Stilprinzip.

DEUTUNG UNSICHER

3. Westgiebel des Tempels der Athena Alea in Tegea. Fragmente in Athen, Nat. Mus., und Tegea, Mus. Werkstatt des Skopas. – 3. Viertel 4. Jh. v. Chr. – Das Thema war nach Paus. 8, 45, 7 der Kampf zwischen Achilleus und Telephos in der Ebene des Kaikos. Die Anordnung der Fragmente und ihre Deutung wurde durch Delivourias (111 die frühere Lit.) gefördert. Die Gestalt in der l. Giebelecke war sicher weiblich. Frühere Interpreten dachten an eine Mysierin, Delivourias fragend an eine Lokalpersonifikation (Teuthrania). Vielleicht ist sie doch eine Verwundete aus dem bei Philostrat geschilderten Heer der Mysierinnen. Weiter nach r. hin könnte H. zu Pferd gekämpft haben. Der von E. La Rocca rekonstruierte Giebel mit der Amazonenschlacht zeigt an eben dieser Stelle eine reitende Amazone: Amazonomachia. Le sculpture frontonali del tempio di Apollo Sosiano, Ausstellungskat. Rom (1985) 127. H. müßte also in der Lücke angenommen werden. Vielleicht finden sich unter den Fragmenten von Tegea Reste ihres Pferdes oder von ihr selbst.

KOMMENTAR

Für das Auftreten der H. im pergamenischen Telephosfries besteht die Schwierigkeit, daß die schriftlichen Quellen, die sie nennen, sehr viel später als dieser sind. Wie jedoch bereits Robert sah, hat Philostrat H. nicht erfunden. Daß Schriftquellen und Bildquellen zeitlich auseinanderklaffen, ist ein bekanntes Phänomen in der Archäologie; vgl. etwa → Achilleus S. 53, Kommentar zu 21. Pausanias, der wie Philostrat ein Autor der «zweiten Sophistik» war, erwähnt Hymnen für Telephos in Pergamon (3, 26, 10). In ihnen dürfte auch H. vorgekommen sein. Ihr frühestes Auftreten in der griechischen Kunst war vielleicht am Westgiebel des Tempels von Tegea (3). In der linken Giebelhälfte ist für eine Reiterin Platz. Da außerdem in Metopen des Tempels, wie Inschriften am Architrav zeigen, Szenen des Telephosmythos dargestellt waren (→ Auge 3), könnte H. auch in ihnen aufgetreten sein. Die Künstler des Telephosfrieses und die Dichter der pergamenischen Hymnen auf Telephos haben zweifellos aus dieser arkadisch-tegeatischen Überlieferung geschöpft.

Da die Reiterin H. auf Platte 23 des Frieses (1) nur schlecht erhalten ist, kommt ihre von Philostrat gerühmte Schönheit weniger zur Geltung als ihre Tapferkeit. Diese beiden Eigenschaften führten zum Waffenstillstand nach ihrem Tod und zu ihrer Prothesis (2), auf die Platte 51 des Telephosfrieses zu Recht bezogen wurde. Auch hier war sicher die Schönheit der toten H. hervorgehoben; leider haben wir nur einen Teil des Kopfes. Von links treten zwei Krieger an die Bahre heran, der eine mit Totengaben. Diese stille Szene muß zwischen den Kampfbildern von besonderer Wirkung gewesen sein. H. und ihr Schicksal waren dadurch hervorgehoben. Bei Philostrat fällt H. nach der Verwundung des Telephos; im Fries ist das Straucheln des Heros, wenn die Rekonstruktion stimmt, weiter rechts, also «später» angeordnet. Aber vielleicht sollte man hier nicht von links nach rechts lesen, sondern die Szenen des Kampfes um die Prothesis der H. in der Mitte gruppiert sehen. Sie ist die Hauptgestalt in diesem Teil des Frieses.

ERIKA SIMON

HIERAPOLIS I → LIMC Suppl.

HIERAPOLIS II → LIMC Suppl.

HIEROKAISAREIA

(Ἱεροκαίσαρεια, Hierocaesarea, Hierocaesaria) Personifikation von Hierokaisareia in Lydien, das an der wichtigen Verbindungsstraße von Pergamon über Thyateira nach Sardeis lag.

LITERARISCHE QUELLEN: Siehe Büchner und Robert.

BIBLIOGRAPHIE: Baumeister, A., Denkmäler des Klassischen Altertums II (1889) 1295–1297 s. v. «Personifikationen in der alten Kunst»; Büchner, L., RE VIII 2 (1913) 1401–1402 s. v. «Hiera Kome, Hierokaisareia»; idem, RE VIII 2 (1913) 1475 s. v. «Hierokaisareia»; Drexler, W., ML I 2 (1886–1890) 2657–2658 s. v. «Hierokaisareia»; Mansel, A. M., KIPauli II (1967) 1129 s. v. «Hiera Kome»; Robert, L./Robert, J., Hellenica VI (1948) 27–55; Scichilone, G., EAA IV (1961) 30 s. v. «Hierokaisareia»; Steuding, H., ML II 2 (1894–1897) 2094–2096 s. v. «Lokalpersonifikationen».

KATALOG

A. Hierokaisareia als Amazone (→ Amazonas)

Relief

1. (= Amazonas 798* mit Lit., = Apollonis 1 mit Lit., = Artemis Ephesia 4, = Ephesos 11 mit Lit., = Hyrkanis 3 mit Lit., = Kaystros 110) Marmorbasis einer Statue des Tiberius, sog. Puteolanische Basis. Neapel, Mus. Naz. 6780. Angeblich aus Pozzuoli. – CIL X 1624; Jahn, O., SbLeipzig 3, 1851, 119–151 Taf. 1–4; Guida Ruesch 22–24 Nr. 82; Sieveking, J., in BrBr 575; Scichilone 30 Abb. 41; Mingazzini, P., RM 83, 1976, 425–429 Taf. 148–149. – 30 n. Chr. (Jahn) oder 81–91 n. Chr. (Mingazzini). – Auf der l. Nebenseite der viereckigen Basis steht neben → Mostene und → Aigai H. mit Mauerkrone als Amazone in einem kurzen Chiton mit übergeworfenem Mantel und Stiefeln.

B. Hierokaisareia als → Tyche

Münzen

2.* AE, Hierokaisareia, 2.–3. Jh. n. Chr. – BMC Lydia 105, 19. 21 Taf. 11, 6; Imhoof-Blumer, F.,

RSNum 5, 1895, 322–323 Nr. 37–39 Taf. 1, 24; SNG Copenhagen Lydia 181; SNG v. Aulock 2958. – Vs.: Büste der H. mit Mauerkrone nach r. IEPOKAISAPEIA. Rs.: Tyche oder Perseus oder Artemis oder Göttin.

KOMMENTAR

Die Puteolanische Basis (1) ist die verkleinerte Nachbildung eines Denkmals für Tiberius, das zum Dank für seine Unterstützung von zwölf in den Jahren 17, 23 und 29 n. Chr. durch Erdbeben betroffenen kleinasiatischen Städten auf deren Veranlassung hin errichtet worden ist (s. Tac. ann. 2, 47, 4, 13 und CIL X 1624). Die einzelnen Städte ließen dabei ihre Personifikationen auf den vier Seiten der Basis mit Beischrift anbringen, wobei zwei als Jünglinge (→ Tmolos und → Temnos), sieben als Tychen (→ Magnesia am Sipylus, → Sardis, → Philadelpheia, → Kyme, → Myrina, → Mostene und → Aigai) und fünf als Amazonas (→ Kibyra, → Ephesos, → Apollonis, → Hyrkanis und H.) gekennzeichnet sind. Die Charakterisierung einiger Städte als Amazonas zeigt sich ebenfalls auf anderen kleinasiatischen Werken und scheint öfters, wie im Falle von → Ephesos, auf Gründungsmythen anzuspielen, in denen durch den mythologischen Bezug auf eine Amazone der Ursprung der jeweiligen Stadt bis in die legendäre Frühzeit zurückverfolgt und damit ihr Daseinsrecht und ihre Bedeutung gefestigt werden sollen (s. dafür auch → Amazonas S. 649–650). Im Gegensatz zur puteolanischen Basis (1) zeigen die danach im 2. und 3. Jh. n. Chr. geprägten Münzen Hierokaisareias (2) die Stadtpersonifikation im weitverbreiteten Typus als weibliche Büste im Profil mit Mauerkrone. RAINER VOLKKOMMER

HILAEIRA → Dioskouroi 189–214, → Dioskouroi/Tinas clinar 79–82, → Dioskouroi/Castores 148–158

HILARITAS → LIMC Suppl.

HIMACA

Name einer Mänade (→ Mainades) auf:

1.* Bronzegriffspiegel, etrusk. Berlin (West), Staatl. Mus. Misc. 10555. – Neugebauer, Führer Berlin 187 Taf. 56; Pandolfini, M., StEtr 39, 1971, 371–372 Nr. 71 Taf. 80. – 2. Viertel 4. Jh. v. Chr. – In der Bildmitte steht die Mänade H. in langem Gewand mit Nebris, einen Thyrsos in der Linken haltend (Namensbeischrift vor ihrem Kopf). Sie blickt auf den glatzköpfigen Satyr Achsun, der gebeugt, mit überein-andergeschlagenen Beinen auf einem mit einem Pantherfell bedeckten Felsen sitzt. Mit der Rechten faßt er sich an den Kopf, in der auf dem Oberschenkel ruhenden l. Hand hält er ein kurzes stabförmiges Gebilde (Flötenrohr?). Ein Hund springt an ihm hoch. Von l. naht in einem plötzlich heftig gebremsten Schritt (zurückprallend? oder tanzend?) ein jüngerer Satyr, dessen Name nicht mehr lesbar ist. Er hält in der Linken waagrecht einen Thyrsos; den r. Arm hat er erhoben in einer Geste des Staunens (oder des Grußes?). Auf dem Gewand der Mänade eine weitere Inschrift: cnmalna (malna, malena = Spiegel?, vgl. Pandolfini a. O.).

Sowohl der Name der Mänade wie der des Satyrs sind bisher nur auf diesem Spiegel belegt und lassen sich von keinem bekannten griechischen Satyr- und Mänadennamen herleiten. Es handelt sich anscheinend um rein etruskische Namensformen (vgl. → Chelphun), die sich nicht näher erklären lassen, da bis jetzt keine anderen, von denselben Wortstämmen abgeleiteten etruskischen Wörter bekannt sind.

INGRID KRAUSKOPF

HIMERA

(Ἥμερα, Himera) Ninfa dell'omonima città sulla costa settentrionale della Sicilia; da non confondere con la personificazione della → Tyche cittadina, presente sulle monete di Thermae Himerenses di età romano-repubblicana, e la cui statua è ricordata da Cic. Verr. 2, 2, 87. 89.

BIBLIOGRAFIA: Gàbrici, E., Topografia e numismatica dell'antica Imera (1894); Gutmann, F./Schwabacher, W., MittBayr-NumGes 47, 1929, 101-144; Imhoof-Blumer, F., JLArchNum 11, 1908, 31-33, 68-72; Lacroix, L., Monnaies et colonisation dans l'Occident grec (1965) 124-127; Mirone, S., RNum 23, 1920, 32.

CATALOGO

Sono state prese in considerazione soltanto le icografie sicuramente identificabili con H.

Monete di Himera

1.* AR, tetradracmi, Gruppo I 472-450 a.C., Gruppo II 450-420 a.C., Gruppo III 413-409 a.C. - Gutmann/Schwabacher tavv. 8-10, 1-10, 14-20; Rizzo, MGS tav. 21, 7, 10-12, 17, 22-23; Franke/Hirmer, *GrMünze*² tavv. 21-22, 68, 70-71. - D.: Quadriga al passo, o al galoppo (G. III). R.: H. stante frontalmente, sacrifica sopra un altare a s.; a d. un sileno si bagna ad una fonte con protome leonina. Etnico al D. o al R.

2.* AR didrammi, Gruppi I e II. - Gutmann/Schwabacher tavv. 9-10, 1-4; Rizzo, MGS tav. 21, 9; Franke/Hirmer, *GrMünze*² tav. 20, 66. - D.: Cavaliere nudo che smonta da cavallo. R.: H. come 1, a d. caduceo e EOHP.

3.* AR, tetr., didr., dr., 460-450 a.C. - Gutmann/Schwabacher tav. 9, 11-13; Rizzo, MGS tav. 21, 15-16; Franke/Hirmer, *GrMünze*² tav. 21, 67 (450-430 a.C.). - D.: Pelope (→ Pelops) che guida una biga, ΠΕΛΟΨ. R.: H. stante frontalmente, con leggero chitone e ampio himation, allargato sul braccio d. disteso, IMEPA.

4. AE, hemilitra, 420-409 a.C. - Gàbrici, Bronzo tav. 2, 12-14; Kraay, C. M., suppl. AnnIstiNum 25, 1979, 45, tav. 6, 11. - D.: Testa di H. di profilo con capelli entro sphendone, ovvero testa frontale con ampyx sulla fronte. R.: Sei globetti, entro corona di alloro o con gambero.

Monete di Thermae Himerenses

5. AE, dopo il 241 a.C. - Gàbrici tav. 7, 9-10; idem, Bronzo tav. 9, 40; Grose, McClean tav. 75, 13-14; SNG München 374-375. - D.: Testa di Eracle. R.: H. Tyche stante, con nella s. cornucopia e nella d. patera. ΘΕΡΜΑ ΙΜΕΡΑΙΑ o ΘΕΡΜΙΤΑΝ.

6. AE, Gàbrici tav. 7, 12-13; idem, Bronzo tav. 9, 39. - D.: Testa di H. Tyche a d., dietro cornucopia. R.: Figura virile a d. Etnico.

Statua

7. Già a Thermae Himerenses, non conservata. - Cic. Verr. 2, 2, 87. 89: splendida statua di bronzo personificante la città di Himera. Databile, in base ai tipi monetali che la riproducono, già nel III sec. a.C. (v. 5. 6).

COMMENTO

→ Himeros, la «bramosia amorosa», costituisce in età arcaica insieme ad → Eros (Hes. theog. 201), il principale attributo di Aphrodite. Himera potrebbe essere pertanto una ipostasi della grande dea che, infondendo il desiderio amoroso negli esseri viventi, assicura la fecondità e la continuità della vita. L'iconografia che ella presenta nella serie con Pelope (3) potrebbe sostenere tale interpretazione, con la quale non contrasta neanche la scena del sacrificio. Esso è compiuto con valore emblematico dalla divinità presso il proprio altare, ed è destinato a propiziare le forze fecondanti e vegetative della natura. Il culto è localizzato all'aperto presso una sorgente frequentata dai Satiri, per cui H. è indubbiamente dea di fecondità con chiare connotazioni ctonie. A tale carattere rimandano, oltre alle acque sorgive e al Sileno, il caduceo frequentemente rappresentato sulle stele funerarie puniche in relazione con la dea Tanit. L'appellativo EOHP dei didrammi 2 è attestato dai tragici in relazione alla Tyche (Liddell/Scott s. v. σωτήρ), e trova riscontro nella Tyche Soteira invocata da Pind. O. 12, 2 in favore della città di Himera; esso corrisponde al concetto originariamente fenicio che ha determinato la concezione religiosa della Tyche, la dea che presiede all'origine e allo sviluppo della città. Dietro la figura di H. si profila dunque la silhouette di una delle grandi Potnie orientali, signora della fertilità e della fecondità, protettrici e salvatrici della città, forse Astarte, la Grande Dea, identificata dai Greci con Aphrodite.

MARIA CACCAMO CALTABIANO

HIMEROPA → Seirenes

HIMEROS, HIMEROI

(Ἥμερος, Ἥμεροι, Desiderium, Cupido) Une des formes d'→ Eros, symbolisant la passion et le désir amoureux.

SOURCES LITTÉRAIRES: Le nom commun Ἥμερος désigne chez Homère le désir, l'envie de quelque chose, et Platon le définit de façon plus significative comme un courant ou un torrent irrésistible (Plat. Krat. 420a; Phaidros 251c). Hésiode en fait un véritable personnage qui, associé à Eros, escorte → Aphrodite après sa naissance (Hes. theog. 201; cf. Q. Smyrn 5, 70-71, qui décrit sur le bouclier d'Achille H. assistant à la naissance de Cypris): il est «beau» (καλός) et séjourne sur l'Olympe près des → Charites et des Muses (→ Mousai) (Hes. theog. 64). Les auteurs postérieurs n'ajoutent rien à sa personnalité, fondue dans celle des différentes figures d'Eros.

BIBLIOGRAPHIE: Greifenhagen, A., Griechische Erosen (1957); Guerrini, L., EAA IV (1961) 35 s. v. «Himeros»; Otto, W., RE VIII 2 (1913) 1635-1638 s. v. «Himeros»; Stoll, H. W., ML I 2 (1886-1890) 2661-2662 s. v. «Himeros». Cf. etiam Hermary, A., LIMC III (1986) 852 s. v. «Eros», Bibliographie.

CATALOGUE

I. Himéros seul ou avec d'autres Eroses

Vases attiques

1.* Stamnos f. r. Londres, BM E 440. De Vulci. - *ARV*² 289, 1: P. des Sirènes; Para 355; Greifenhagen 32 fig. 25; Boardman, ARFH fig. 184, 2; Vermeule, E., Aspects of Death in Early Greek Art and Poetry (1979) 203 fig. 26. - 480-470 av. J.-C. - B. H. (inscr.), en vol au-dessus de la mer, un long bandeau à franges dans les mains, se retourne vers les deux Eroses qui le suivent (l'un tient une tige végétale, l'autre un lièvre); A. Ulysse (→ Odysseus) et les Sirènes (→ Seirenes), dont l'une est nommée Himeropa.

II. Himéros directement associé à Aphrodite

A. Dans un contexte mythologique précis

Vases attiques

2. (= Alexandros 45* avec bibl., = Aphrodite 1260/1449, = Heimarmene 1* avec bibl., = Helene 140*) Amphorisque f. r. Berlin-Ouest, Staatl. Mus. 30036. - *ARV*² 1173, 1: P. d'Heimarméné; *Add*² 339. - 430-420 av. J.-C. - Aphrodite persuade Hélène, H. (inscr. fr.) tient Pâris par l'épaule et le bras dr.; → Nemesis, → Peitho, Heimarmene et deux autres femmes assistent à la scène. Sur l'épaule deux Eroses.

3.* (= Aphrodite 1429 avec bibl. et renvois) Hydrie f. r. Autrefois Berlin, Staatl. Mus. F 2633. De Vulci. - *ARV*² 1187, 32: P. de Cadmos; Para 167; *Add*² 341. - Fin du V^e s. av. J.-C. - Jugement de Pâris (→ Paridis iudicium): H., assis, la tête tournée, et → Pothos (inscr.) sont près d'Aphrodite pendant qu'un Eros persuade Pâris; → Hera, → Athena, → Hermes et autres personnages.

4. (= Aphrodite 1193* avec bibl.) Hydrie f. r. Florence, Mus. Arch. 81947. De Populonia. - *ARV*² 1312, 2: P. de Meidias; Para 477; *Add*² 361; CVA 2, pl. 64, 1-2; Simon/Hirmer pl. 217. - Vers 410 av. J.-C. - Sur l'épaule H. et Pothos (inscr.) tirent le char d'Aphrodite: H. tient un thymiatéron, Pothos une couronne et une phiale. Sur la panse H. (inscr.) couronne → Phaon qui joue de la lyre.

5.* (= Adonis 10* avec bibl., = Aphrodite 1266) Hydrie f. r. Florence, Mus. Arch. 81948. De Populonia. - *ARV*² 1312, 1: P. de Meidias; *Add*² 361; CVA 2, pl. 62, 1. - Vers 410 av. J.-C. - H. (inscr. aujourd'hui effacée) fait tourner l'inx devant Adonis qu'Aphrodite tient par les épaules; nombreux autres personnages, dont un Eros.

Vases italiotes

6. (= Aphrodite 1515, = Hera 475, = Herakles 3340*) Amphore (restaurée en cratère à volutes) apul. f. r. Berlin-DDR, Staatl. Mus. F 3257. De Ceglie. - RVAp I 169, 32: associé au P. de la péliké de Moscou. - Vers 350 av. J.-C. - Préparatifs des noces d'Héraclès et → Hebe I: H. (inscr.) debout sur les genoux d'Aphrodite, un Eros vole entre les fiancés.

7. (= Aphrodite 1554* avec bibl.) Cratère à volutes apul. f. r. Naples, Mus. Naz. Stg. 687 (8100 f). De Ruvo. - RVAp II 866, 30 pl. 326, 3: P. de Baltimore. - Vers 320 av. J.-C. - Partage d'Adonis entre Aphrodite et Perséphone: H. (inscr.), qui tient une oenochoé, une phiale et la roue inx, est debout près d'Aphrodite; → Zeus, Hermès, Adonis, → Persephone.

B. Sans contexte défini

Vases attiques

8. (= Aphrodite 1255* avec bibl., = Eros 1007) Pinax f. n. fr. Athènes, Mus. Nat. 15131. De l'Acropole. - Greifenhagen 39 fig. 29; Lacroix, L., Etudes d'archéologie numismatique (1974) 31 pl. 2, 1; Vermeule, o. c. I, 152 fig. 5. - 560-550 av. J.-C. - Aphrodite tient dans ses bras les petits H. (inscr.) et Eros (inscr. fr.), tous deux aptères. N. Breitenstein a pensé retrouver le même thème sur des fragments d'acrotyères en terre cuite d'Agrigente (ActaArch 16, 1945, 117-120 fig. 4-5, avec étude des monuments comparables).

9. (= Aphrodite 1269* avec bibl., = Eutychia 3*) Lécythe aryballisque f. r. Reading, Univ. 52.3.2. -

ARV² 1330, 7: P. de Makaria; Para 479. - Vers 400 av. J.-C. - H. (inscr.; corps blanc) tend une couronne à Aphrodite; Eros, → Makaria, Eutychia.

Ronde bosse

10. (= Eros 89) Statues perdues d'Eros, H. et Pothos dans le temple d'Aphrodite à Mégare, sculptées par Scopas. - Paus. 1, 43, 6. - Vers le milieu du IV^e s. av. J.-C. - Les trois personnages étaient représentés, semble-t-il, sous un aspect différent.

III. Himéros associé à d'autres personnages féminins

Vases attiques

11.* Hydrie f.r. Londres, BM E 222. - ARV² 1033, 66: Polygnotos; CVA 6, pl. 90, 5. - 440-430 av. J.-C. - H. (inscr.) assis tient une torche (?) devant Peithô (inscr.).

12.* Hydrie f.r. Brunswick, Mus. AT 219. - ARV² 1037, 2: groupe de Polygnotos; CVA pl. 23, 4-5. - Vers 430 av. J.-C. - Scène de musique au gynécée: H. (inscr. fr.) attache la sandale d'une femme assise (Aphrodite?); autres personnages féminins, Eros en vol.

13. (= Alkestis 3 avec bibl., = Aphrodite 1114/1262/1517*, = Harmonia 12, = Hebe 130) Epinétion f.r. Athènes, Mus. Nat. 1629 (CC 1528). D'Erétrie. - ARV² 1250, 34: P. d'Erétrie; Para 469; *Add*² 354; Simon/Hirmer pl. 216. - Vers 425 av. J.-C. - H. (inscr.) assis, le bras g. appuyé sur un coffret, se retourne vers Hébé (inscr.) en lui tendant une petite amphore; Aphrodite, Eros, Peithô, Koré.

14. (= Aphrodite 1196*/1272 avec bibl., = Eudaimonia 15*, = Eunomia 7*, = Harmonia 15) Pyxis f.r. Londres, BM E 775. D'Erétrie. - ARV² 1328, 92: manière du P. de Meidias; *Add*² 364. - Vers 400 av. J.-C. - Aphrodite s'apprête à monter sur son char que tirent Pothos et Hédyllogos, à g. H. (couronne radiée) tend un collier, Eunomia, → Paidia, Harmonia, Kalé, → Hygieia sont figurées dans la scène; tous les personnages sont désignés par des inscr.

15.* Lécythe aryballisque f.r. Munich, Antikenslg. 2520. - Metzger, Représentations 54 n° 35 pl. 5, 1; Lezzi-Hafter, A., Der Schuwalow-Maler (1976) 49 n. 193 pl. 172a. c-d. - Début du IV^e s. av. J.-C. - H. (inscr.; corps blanc) poussé sur une balançoire par Paidia (inscr.).

IV. Himéros dans le cercle dionysiaque

Vases attiques

16. (= Dionysos 823 avec bibl., = Ariadne 111* avec bibl.) Fr. de cratère en calice f.r. Tübingen, Univ. 3439. - ARV² 1057, 97: groupe de Polygnotos; *Add*² 322; CVA 4, pl. 18 (lecture de l'inscr.). - 440-430 av. J.-C. - Rencontre de Dionysos et Ariane en présence d'un Silène: H. (inscr.) fait une libation sur la tête de la jeune femme.

17. (= Dionysos 372* avec bibl.) Cratère à vo-lutes att. f.r. Ruvo, Mus. Jatta 1093. De Ruvo. - ARV² 1184, 1: P. de Cadmos; *Add*² 340. - 420-410 av. J.-C. - H. (inscr.) devant Dionysos couché; nombreux autres personnages, dont Eros et Pothos.

18.* (= Dionysos 835* avec bibl., = Eros 703) Cratère à volutes att. f.r. Naples, Mus. Naz. H 3240. - ARV² 1336, 1; 1690. 1704: P. de Pronomos; Para 480; *Add*² 365-366. - Vers 400 av. J.-C. - A: groupe d'acteurs autour de Dionysos et Ariane; H. (inscr.) est accroupi près d'Aphrodite (?) assise sur la kliné de Dionysos, B: Eros avec Dionysos et Ariane.

COMMENTAIRE

H. est si peu différent d'Eros dans l'iconographie grecque que seule la présence d'une inscription permet de l'identifier avec certitude: il est significatif qu'Antipater de Sidon (Anth. Pal. 16, 167, 3) désigne comme H. la statue de Thespies généralement connue sous le nom d'Eros. On ignore si Scopas, dans le groupe de Mégare (10), avait cherché à définir le dieu du désir par une attitude ou un trait particulier, comme il l'avait fait pour Pothos.

Cette similitude entre H. et Eros est déjà clairement exprimée sur le pinax de l'Acropole (8) qui indique qu'avant le milieu du VI^e s. une version opposée à celle d'Hésiode considérait les deux personnages comme les enfants d'Aphrodite. Il est difficile de dire pourquoi les peintres attiques ou, plus rarement, italiotes ont choisi d'inscrire le nom d'H. à côté de tel ou tel «Eros»: on remarquera seulement que cette désignation se justifie bien dans la scène de séduction de Pâris (2), sur les images qui exaltent les amants d'Aphrodite, Phaon (4) et Adonis (5, 7), ou encore dans la rencontre entre Dionysos et Ariane (16). La scène la plus originale est celle du lécythe aryballisque de Munich (15) qui montre H. poussé sur une balançoire par Paidia, l'Enfance: dans l'ensemble de l'iconographie d'Eros un seul vase est vraiment comparable (Eros 764), mais c'est la femme qui est poussée par le jeune dieu sur la balançoire.

Les variations sur les différentes formes de l'amour (H., Pothos, Hédyllogos à côté d'Eros), qui ont inspiré les peintres attiques du V^e s., ne sont sans doute pas tombées en complète désuétude après l'époque classique, mais l'absence d'inscription ne permet plus d'identifier alors une seule image d'H.

ANTOINE HERMARY

HIPIALTES → Ephialtes II 3 = Gigantes 170

HIPPAICHMOS

(Ἱππαίχμος, Ἱπαιχμος) Guerrier grec représenté sur certains documents figurés.

BIBLIOGRAPHIE: Leonard, F., RE VIII 2 (1913) 1651 s. v. «Hippaichmos»; Roscher, W. H., ML I 2 (1884-86) 2662 s. v. «Hippaichmos»; Scichilone, G., EAA IV (1961) 36-37 s. v. «Hippaichmos».

1.* (= Briakchos 2 [face B], = Erophyllos 1 [face B]) Amphore attique f.r. Londres, BM E 253. De Vulci. - ARV² 35, 2; 1625: proche du P. d'Euergetes; CVA 3 pl. 2 (167), 1a; Hoppin, J. C., Euthymides and his Fellows (1917) 142-143 pl. 37. - 520-500 av. J.-C. - A: au centre, le guerrier H. (inscr.) marche vers la g. (casque, chiton court, lance, bouclier avec lion en épissime, cnémides) en tenant de la main dr. la longe d'un cheval. Sur la g., lui faisant face, une figure en costume scythe, un arc à la main: l'Amazone (?) → Seragye (inscr.).

2.* Frs. de coupe attique f.r. (avec certaines figures en relief) Athènes, Mus. Nat. Acr 102. D'Athènes, Acropole. - ARV² 1625: probablement du P. d'Euergetes; Graef/Langlotz II 9 n° 102 pl. 5; Kopcke, G., AA 1969, 545-546 fig. 1; Boardman, ARV I 60 fig. 100. - 515-500 av. J.-C. - Ext.: frs. de trois chevaux en relief conduits par H. (inscr.), une lance sur l'épaule. La figure est brisée.

La scène figurée sur les deux vases 1. 2 fait peut-être référence à un épisode perdu de la légende, bien que le nom du guerrier «qui combat à cheval» nous oriente plutôt vers une invention d'un peintre proche du P. d'Euergetes, ou de lui-même, fondée sur l'étymologie.

JEAN-ROBERT GISLER

HIPPAIOS

(Ἱππαιος) Satyrname (→ Silenos, Silenoi) in einer Vasenschrift, der auch als Männername bezeugt ist. Er weist auf die Pferdeattribute der Satyrn.

1.* (= Anties 1, = Chora 1 mit Lit. und Beschreibung, = Dason 1, = Dorkis 1) Amphora, chalkidisch. Leiden, Rijksmus. 1626. Aus Vulci. - Fränkel, Namen 7. 82 Nr. A. - Paarweiser Tanz von sechs Satyrn und sechs Mänaden. H. (ἹΠΠΑΙΟΣ) tanzt mit → Klyto.

ANNELIESE KOSSATZ-DEISSMANN

HIPPALEKTRYON

(Ἱππαλεκτρυών) A fabulous beast, with the fore part of a horse and the rear part of a cock. It plays no recorded role in mythology.

LITERARY SOURCES: The earliest mention of the H. is in Aischyl. Myrmidones (TrGF III F 134), where it is called xouthos and was painted on a ship set on fire by the Trojans. There then follow a series of references in the comedies of Aristophanes (Pax 1177; Aves 800; Ranae 932, 937), who ridicules the creature for its long name and its ungainly gait. In the passage in the Ranae the H. is classed by Euripides with other mixed monsters, such as the goat-stag, which appears on Persian hangings. Few of the scholiasts or lexicographers add much of value, except the scholiast on the Ranae where the H. is called a marine monster that was painted on ships and shields.

BIBLIOGRAPHY: Alföldi, A., Jb. Schweiz. Ges. f. Ur- u. Frühgesch. 40, 1949/50, 17-34 (esp. 25-29); v. Bothmer, D., BullMMA 11, 1953, 132-136; Camporeale, G., ArchClass 19, 1967, 248-268; Coldstream, J. N., «The Knossian Protohippalektryon», in Festschr. N. Himmelmann (1989) 23-26; Dörig, J., MusHelv 40, 1983, 140-153; Gamurrini, G. F., Adl 46, 1874, 236-243; Hampe, R./Simon, E., Griechisches Leben im Spiegel der Kunst (1959) 13; Jucker, I., Aus der Antikensammlung des Bernischen Historischen Museums (1970) 86; Lamer, H., RE VIII 2 (1913) 1651-1656 s. v. «Hippalektryon»; Perdrizet, P., REA 6, 1904, 7-30; Rohde, E., AA 1955, 112-119; Schauenburg, K., MededRome 41 (1979) 26 n. 35; idem, AA 1981, 338; Scichilone, G., EAA IV (1961) 37-38 s. v. «Hippalektryon».

CATALOGUE

A. Hippalektryon alone

a) Horse-cock

GREEK

Vases

1.* Neck-amphora, Attic bf. Bonn, Akad. Kunstmus. 37. From Aigina. - ABV 99, 58; 684: Tyrhenian Group; Para 38: Kyllenios P. (Bothmer); *Add*² 26; Perdrizet pl. 1, 5 (detail) and p. 26 fig. 6; Bothmer 135 middle (detail); Camporeale pl. 57, 1. - About 570-550 B. C. - Two Hs. on either side of a palmette complex.

2. Kantharos, Boeotian superposed colour. Mainz, Univ. 60. - Hampe/Simon, 13; CVA I pl. 33, 2. - About 550 B. C. - H. on one side only.

3. Bowl, Boeotian bf. Zürich market. - Schauenburg 340 fig. 16. - About 550 B. C. - Two Hs. on either side of a palmette complex.

4. Amphora, Attic bf. Once Ciaia coll. From near Chiusi. - Gamurrini 243 (description only). - Late 6th cent. B. C. (?) - H. as shield-device.

5.* Column-krater fr., Attic rf. Centre Island (N.Y.), private coll. - Tyszkiewicz P. (Bothmer). - About 480 B. C. - H. as shield-device of Athena, who holds an oinochoe: on l., Herakles with phiale; on r., Hermes.

Glyptic

6. Chalcedony scarab, Greek. Nicosia, Cyprus Mus. D. 58. - Boardman, AGGems 154 no. 583, pl. 37 (cf. also no. 584). - About 500 B. C. - H. in flight, with one wing lowered.

Relief: metal

7. Bronze relief strip, Corintho-Boeotian (?). London, BM 1902.12-17.5 (part). From Eleutherae. -

Payne, NC 229 fig. 104c; Perdrizet pl. 1, 1; Alföldi pl. 5, 5; Dörig 153 fig. 9. - About 500-480 B.C. - Two pairs of Hs. flanking floral complexes.

8. Lead token, Greek. Athens, Num. Mus. - Mon-Inst 8, 1868, pl. 52 no. 458. - 3rd-2nd cent. B.C. - H. in relief; dolphin, rider or letter above (?). Cf. also ibid no. 446 which may be Pegasus or H. For dating see Agora X, 76-85.

9.* Silver (?) ring, Greek? (photo in Brit. School Athens). - Boardman, AGGems 76 n. 31. - About 500 B.C. (?) - H. intaglio to l., no cock's legs.

10.* Bronze ring, Greek. Delphi, Mus. 8920. From Mavrolithari. - ArchDelt 27, 1972, pl. 317a. - About 500 B.C. (?) - H. intaglio to l.

In the round: metal

11.* Pair of gold earrings, Greek. Athens, NM Stathatos 282-283. From Spata (Attica). - Amandry, P., Coll. Hélène Stathatos: Les bijoux antiques (1953) pl. 52; Miller, S. G., Two Groups of Thessalian Gold (1979) pl. 3c; Higgins, R. A., *Greek and Roman Jewellery*² (1980) 125. - About 500 B.C. - H. above leech-shaped element on both earrings.

ETRUSCAN

Glyptic

11a) Carnelian gem. Leningrad, Hermitage J. 712. - Neverov, O. J., StEtr 49, 1981, 17 pl. 6, 4; Welt der Etrusker (Berlin 1988) 374 no. 62. - About 500 B.C. - H. in intaglio to l.

Coins

11b) AR. Volterra Mus. inv. 111021-5 and 83099/20-31. From Volterra. - Cristofani Martelli, M., in Contributi introduttivi allo studio della Monetazione etrusca (1976) 87-104 pls. 9-10, nos. 14-28; Melis, F., in Cristofani, M. (ed.), Civiltà degli etruschi (1985) 239-40 no. 8.13.9. - 500-450 B.C. - H. to l.

11c) AR. Volterra Mus. inv. 111019-20 and 83099/19. From Volterra. - Cristofani Martelli, o.c. 11b, 87-104 pl. 10, nos. 31-33; Melis, o.c. 11b, 239-240 no. 8.13.10. - 500-450 B.C. - H. to r.

In the round: metal

12.* Bronze chariot attachment (?). Florence, Mus. Arch. 82847. From Etruria. - Camporeale pl. 69, 5. - About 500-480 B.C. - No cock's legs, as a result perhaps of the construction of the piece.

13.* Bronze stamnos or hydria handle. Paris, Cab. Méd. BB 1458. - Camporeale pl. 69, 3; Adam, A.-M., Bronzes étrusques et italiques (1984) 12 no. 14. - About 500-450 B.C. - H. at either end.

14.* Bronze stamnos or hydria handles (pair). Copenhagen, Nat. Mus. 3244. - Camporeale pl. 69, 1. - About 500-450 B.C. - H. at either end.

15.* Bronze stamnos or hydria handles (pair). Bern, Hist. Mus. 12092/93. - Jucker pl. 54 no. 145 and pl. 1 (detail). - About 450 B.C. - H. at either end.

16.* Bronze situla handle. New York, MMA 55.11.2. - About 500-450 B.C. - H. at either end.

17. Bronze situla handle. Aléria, Carcopino Mus. 67/367. From Aléria, Tomb 90. - Jehasse, J./L., La nécropole préromaine d'Aléria (1973) pl. 153 no. 1803. - H. at either end.

18. Bronze situla handle. Bologna, Mus. Civ. From near Bazzano. - Guarducci, M., StEtr 10, 1936, 27 pl. 8, 6. - About 500-450 B.C. - H. at either end.

19. Bronze situla handle. London Market. - Christie's, Fine Antiquities 13 July 1983, no. 186. - About 500-450 B.C. - H. at either end.

20. (= Kaineus 65* with bibl.) Bronze helmet appliqué. Copenhagen, Glypt. H. 229. From Orvieto. - Camporeale pl. 69, 2; Laufer, E., Kaineus (1985) pl. 14 fig. 44. - About 450 B.C. - Two Hs. below a group of Kaineus and two centaurs.

21. Bronze helmet appliqué. Rome, Villa Giulia. From Todi. - MonAnt 24, 1918, 848 fig. 2; Guarducci, o.c. 18, pl. 8, 9. - About 450 B.C. - H. with one head and two bodies (splayed).

ROMAN

Glyptic

22. Carnelian gem. Berlin, Staatl. Mus. FG 2151. - Furtwängler, Beschreibung no. 2151. - 1st cent. A.D. - H. without horse's legs.

23. White glass paste. Berlin, Staatl. Mus. FG 2152. - Furtwängler, Beschreibung no. 2152. - 1st cent. A.D. - As 22.

24.* Dark brown glass paste. Munich, Münzslg. - AGDI 2 no. 1907 pl. 171. - 1st cent. A.D. - As 22, but with a victory palm.

b) Pegasus-cock

GREEK

Vases

25.* Cup, Attic bf. Taranto, Mus. Naz. 110338. From Taranto. - Para 25, 99 ter: C P.; Brijder, Siana I pl. 46b, no. 233; Malibu P. - About 560 B.C.

26. Cup, Attic bf. Geneva market (Christie's). Said to be from Taranto. - Brijder, Siana I pl. 41e, no. 227; Malibu P. - About 560 B.C.

Glyptic

27. Rock crystal scarab, Greek. Boston, MFA 01.7584. - Boardman, AGGems pl. 11 no. 152. - About 520-500 B.C.

28. Cornelian scarab, Greek. Rome, Villa Giulia 44. - Zazoff, AG pl. 25, 10. - About 500 B.C.

Relief: metal

29. Gold ring, Western Greek (?). London, BM 1926.6-17.2. - Marshall, BM Finger Rings no. 33; Perdrizet pl. 1, 3-4; Boardman, J., AntK 10, 1967, pl. 6 no. H.1. - About 500-450 B.C.

30. AR stater, Lycian (?) or Carian. - Visitor Reports (Oxford, Ashm. Mus.) 1965, pl. 12, 4. - About 500-480 B.C. - Rev.: P.-c.; obv.: Herakles (?).

In the round

31.* Faience aryballos in the form of a P.-c., Rhodian, Paris, Louvre E 11736. - Webb, V., Archaic Greek Faience (1978) pl. 21 no. 884. - About 550-525 B.C.

ETRUSCAN

Glyptic

32. Cornelian scarab. London, BM 1772.3-15.414. - Walters, BMGems no. 716; Perdrizet pl. 1, 2; Zazoff, EtrSk no. 732. - About 350 B.C.

c) Pegasus-bird

GREEK

Vases

33.* Aryballos, Corinthian bf. Bonn, Akad. Kunstmus. 335. - Payne, NC no. 855; AA 1936, 356-357 fig. 11; Dörig pl. 3. - About 580-570 B.C. - P.-b. and horseman.

34.* Aryballos, Corinthian bf. Heidelberg, Univ. 92. - CVA 1, pl. 13, 5-6. - About 580-570 B.C. - P.-b. and man.

Relief: stone

35. Relief above a marble decree honouring a man from Lampsacus. Epidauros Mus. From Epidauros. - Cavvadias, P., Fouilles d'Epidaure I (1891) 111 no. 274 (text only); Dörig 152 fig. 8. - 4th cent. B.C.

In the round

36. Faience aryballos in the form of a P.-c., Rhodian. Istanbul, Arch. Mus. I 562. From Lindos. - Lindos pl. 58 no. 1329. - About 550-525 B.C.

ETRUSCAN

37.* Bronze ring. Vatican. - Camporeale pl. 69, 4. - About 500 B.C. (?)

d) Horse-bird

GREEK

Vases

38. Alabastron, Corinthian bf. Warsaw, Nat. Mus. 199236. - CVA 2, III C pl. 27. - About 610-600 B.C. - Two H.-bs.

39. Alabastron, Boeotian bf. London, BM 1894.10-31.1 [stolen]. - Payne NC 202 no. 4; ABV 23 top: Horse-bird Group; Dörig pl. 2. - About 580-570 B.C. - H.-b. and Potnia Theron with swans.

40.* Alabastron, Boeotian bf. Paris, Louvre L. 25. - CVA 17 pl. 20 (1143), 3-5: Horse-bird Group. - About 580-570 B.C. - Two H.-bs.

In the round

41. Askos in the form of H.-b., Cretan. Heraklion Mus., Teke tomb Q 115. - Coldstream pl. 4, 3-6. - About 850-800 B.C. - Horse's head, relief sickle-shaped wing on bird-like body, miniature rider in front of handle, oinochoe on end of tail.

42.* Faience aryballos in the form of a H.-b. Private coll. - MuM Auktion 26, 1963, no. 71; Classical Art (Emmerich Gallery 1977) no. 27. - About 550-500 B.C.

ETRUSCAN

43. Neck-amphora, bf. Turin, Mus. Ant. 4652. - CVA 2 pl. 1 (1817), 1-2; Dörig pl. 5, 2; Spivey, N. J., The Micali Painter and his Followers (1987) 39 no. 7: Orbetello Group. - About 500 B.C. - Four H.-bs in body zone (lioness on neck).

B. Hippalektryon with rider

a) Poseidon (?)

GREEK

Attic bf. vases

44.* Kyathos. Lugano, private. - MuM Auktion 18, 1958, no. 101; Dörig pl. 4. - About 500-490 B.C. - Between eyes, draped bearded man with trident riding H. to r., branches in the background; either side of handle, dancing satyr.

45.* Lekythos. Berlin (DDR), Staatl. Mus. V.I. 4774. From Kara (Attica). - Neugebauer, Führer Berlin II 49. - About 500-480 B.C. - Man with trident and dolphin riding H., two dolphins below; on either side, a woman and an «old man of the sea».

46.* Lekythos. Leyden, Rijksmus. 1960/7,1. - Dörig pl. 5, 1; CVA 2 pl. 90 (184), 1-3: Class of Athens 581, near the Marathon P. - About 500-480 B.C. - Draped, bearded man riding H. to r., branches in the background, two dolphins below; on l. and r., a woman.

47.* Lekythos. Paris, Louvre CA 1928 (on deposit in Bordeaux, Mus. d'Aquitaine). - ABV 553, 391: manner of the Haimon P.; Bothmer 134 bottom; Camporeale pl. 67, 1. - About 500-480 B.C. - Draped, bearded man riding H. to r., branches in the background; on l. and r., a woman.

48. Lekythos, Attic bf. German private coll. - Hornbostel, W., Aus der Glanzzeit Athens (1986) no. 28. - About 500-480 B.C. - Draped, bearded male riding H. to l., branches in the background; on the l. and r. a woman.

b) Warrior

GREEK

Attic bf. vases

49.* Lip-cup. Paris, Louvre C. 10277. - Schauenburg 339 fig. 12. - About 550-530 B.C. - Tondo, young warrior wearing crested helmet and with spear riding H. to r.

50.* Neck-amphora (Nikosthenic). Paris, Louvre F 100. From Cerveteri (?). - ABV 216, 2: P. N; Para 104; Camporeale pl. 58, 1; Boardman, ABFH fig. 150. - About 540-530 B.C. - Neck, young warrior wearing crested helmet, chiton and cloak riding H. to r. (other side of 61).

51. Cup (bilingual eye). Tampa Mus. (Florida). - Murray, S. P., Collecting the Past. Antiquities from the Joseph Veach Noble collection (Tampa, Florida 1985) no. 52. - About 530-520 B.C. - Tondo (bf.), warrior in helmet, short chiton, greaves with spear and shield, standing on H. to r., turning back l.

Terracotta statuette

52.* Boeotian. Paris, Louvre CA 1792. From Thebes. - Bothmer 135 bottom; Mollard-Besques I no. B 108; Higgins, R. A., Greek Terracottas (1967) pl. 33a; Camporeale pls. 67, 2; 68, 3. - About 500-470 B.C. - Naked youth wearing crested helmet riding H.

c) Unidentified rider

GREEK

Attic bf. vases

53.* Cup (Siana). Cambridge (Mass.), Sackler Mus. (formerly Fogg) 1954.142 (3.1909). - ABV 75, 5: related to the Griffin-Bird P.; CVA pl. 9, 4; Camporeale pl. 60, 2; Bakir, G., in Tainia, Festschr. R. Hampe (1980) pl. 19, 4; P. of Erlangen J 230. - About 560-550 B.C. - Tondo, naked youth riding H. to l.

54. Skyphos. Athens, Agora P. 1000. From the Agora. - Camporeale pl. 65, 3; Agora XXIII pl. 100 no. 1476. - About 550-540 B.C. - Both sides, youth in short chiton riding H. to r. with a draped youth on either side.

55. Lip-cup. Mississippi, Univ. 1977.3.241. From Chiusi. - ABV 184, 2; Xenokles P.; CVA Robinson coll. 1 pl. 21 (154), 2; Bothmer 134 top; Camporeale pl. 65, 2. - About 550-530 B.C. - Tondo, youth in short chiton with spear riding H. to r.

56.* Lip-cup. New York, MMA 51.11.11. - Bothmer 132, 133; Camporeale pl. 61, 1. - About 550-530 B.C. - Tondo, naked youth riding H. to r.

57.* Lip-cup. Berlin (West), Staatl. Mus. F 1770. From Cerveteri. - ABV 184, 3; Xenokles P.; *Add*² 51; Camporeale pl. 61, 2. - About 550-530 B.C. - Tondo, naked youth riding H. to r. (he looks back to l.).

58.* Lip-cup. New York, private. - MuM Auktion 18, 1958, pl. 23 no. 88; near the Ready P. (Beazley). - About 550-530 B.C. - Tondo, youth in white chiton riding H. to r.

59.* Lip-cup. Altenburg 223. - Rohde 117-118 fig. 16; CVA 1, pl. 37, 2. - About 550-530 B.C. - Tondo, youth in chiton riding H. to r.

60. Lip-cup fr. Boston, MFA L.168.1970. - About 550-530 B.C. - Naked male riding H. to r.

61.* Neck-amphora (Nikosthenic). Paris, Louvre F 100. From Cerveteri (?). - ABV 216, 2; P. N.; *Add*² 57; Camporeale pl. 59, 1. - About 540-530 B.C. - Neck, youth in petasos and cloak riding h. to r. (other side of 50).

62.* Neck-amphora (Nikosthenic). Paris, Louvre F 104. - ABV 222, 58; P. N.; CVA 4 pl. 34 (200), 2, 6; Camporeale pl. 59, 2. - About 530 B.C. - Shoulder zone, youth riding H. to r., between sirens (both sides).

63.* Eye-cup. Paris, Louvre F 141. From Vulci. - CVA 10 pls. 103 (738), 9; 104 (739), 1. 4. - About 520-510 B.C. - Between eyes on both sides, naked youth riding H. to r.

64.* Eye-cup. London, BM 1836.2-24.65. From Vulci. - Walters, BMVases B 433; CVA 2 pl. 22 (80), 1; Camporeale pl. 63. - About 520-500 B.C. - Between eyes on both sides, bearded man in white chiton and cloak with spear riding H. to r.

65. Eye-cup. Paris, Petit Palais 314. From Vulci. - CVA pl. 10 (650), 7-9; Camporeale pl. 62. - About 520-500 B.C. - Between eyes on both sides, youth in 'Thracian' cloak with spear riding H. to r.

66.* Eye-cup. Jacksonville, Cummer Art Gall. AP.66.28. - SouthernColls no. 64. - About 520-500

B.C. - Between eyes on one side, naked youth riding H. to r.

67.* Stand. Gotha ZV 3294. - Rohde 115 fig. 14; CVA 1 pl. 29, 5. - About 520-500 B.C. - Naked (?) youth riding H. to l.

68.* Stand. Brauron Mus. 577 (A 15). From Brauron, small temple. - Kahil, L., AntK Beih. 1 (1963) pl. 3, 3. - About 520-500 B.C. - Youth in short chiton riding H. to l.

69. Skyphos. Germany, private coll. - Rohde 113-114 figs. 12-13. - About 520-500 B.C. - Both sides, bearded man in white chiton and cloak riding H. to r.

70. Hydria (kalpis) fr. Florence, Mus. Arch. 4212. From Etruria. - Bothmer 135 top; Camporeale pl. 58, 2. - About 520-500 B.C. - Youth in 'Thracian' cloak riding H. to l.

71. Lekanis lid fr. Athens, Kerameikos Mus. From the Kerameikos. - Schauenburg 339 fig. 15. - About 520-500 B.C. - Figure in cloak riding H. to r. (no spear).

72.* Lekanis lid fr. Centre Island (N.Y.), private coll. - About 520-500 B.C. - Youth in a short chiton riding H. to l. (part of a frieze of animals including a sphinx).

73. Neck-amphora. Munich, Antikenslg. 1619. From Vulci. - ABV 483, 1; Dot-Band Class, recalls the Michigan P.; *Add*² 122; CVA 9 pl. 32, 1. - About 510 B.C. - On one side, youth in white chiton with spear riding H. to r.

74. Amphora. Nauplion Mus., Glymenopoulos 90. - Kahil, o.c. 68, 10 (mention only). - Late 6th cent. B.C. (?).

75.* Kyathos. Compiègne, Mus. Vivenel 1073. From Vulci. - ABV 295, 2; near Psiak; *Add*² 77; CVA pls. 7 (105), 6-7; 9 (109), 1. - About 510-500 B.C. - On either side of handle, youth in a white chiton riding H. (between the eyes, a woman running).

76. Lekythos. Athens, NM 494. From Phaleron. - ABV 468, 46; Cock Group; Camporeale pls. 65, 64, 1; Dörig pl. 6. - About 500-490 B.C. - Naked bearded man with two spears riding H. to l., on either side a youth with a spear.

77. Neck-amphora. Thebes Mus. R.18.69. From Rhitsona. - ABV 591, 2; BSA 14, 1907-08, pl. 13d; Camporeale pl. 68, 1. - About 500-480 B.C. - On both sides, youth in 'Thracian' cloak riding H. to r.

78. Lekythos. Mytilene. - Beazley, J. D., Manuscript Paralipomena 529: manner of the Haimon P. - About 500-480 B.C. - Youth riding H., on either side a woman.

In the round: stone

79.* Marble sculpture, Attic. Athens, Acropolis Mus. 597. From the Acropolis. - Payne, H./Mackworth Young, G., Archaic Marble Sculpture from the Acropolis (1936) 74 pl. 136, 2-3; Schuchhardt, W.-H., in Schrader, H. (ed.), Die archaischen Marmorbildwerke der Akropolis (1939) 239-240 pl. 146 no. 319; Brouskari, CatAcr 82 pls. 158-159; Camporeale pl. 66; Dörig pl. 7. - About 510-500 B.C. - Naked youth (?)

riding H. with wings outspread; small support at front in the form of a flat, painted Ionic capital.

ETRUSCAN

80. Gold bulla. Tarquinia, Mus. Naz. From Tarquinia. - MA 36, 1937, 356 fig. 92. - About 520-500 B.C. - Naked, long-haired youth riding an H. to l. (no horse's legs).

81.* Gold ring, Etruscan or West Greek. New York, MMA 95.15.313 (stolen). - Bothmer 136; Richter, MetMusGems no. 30; Boardman, J., AntK 10, 1967, 25 no. M 6. - About 520-500 B.C. - Naked youth (?) riding H. to l.

d) Amor

ROMAN

82. (= Eros/Amor, Cupido 359*) Glass paste (dark violet). Vienna, Kunsthst. Mus. XI.B.326. - AGOe II no. 602 pl. 7. - 1st cent. B.C./1st cent. A.D. - Amor riding H. to l. (no horse's legs).

C. Cock with rider

GREEK

Attic rf. vases

83. Plate. New York 1981.11.10. From Vulci. - *ARV*² 77, 92; Epiktetos; *Add*² 169; CVA Castle Asby pl. 41, 3. - About 520-510 B.C. - Boy riding a cock to l.

84. Oinochoe (chous). Istanbul, Arch. Mus. 2493. - van Hoorn, G., Choes and Anthesteria (1951) 133 no. 560 fig. 348. - Early 4th cent. B.C. - Boy riding a cock to r., towards a seated girl holding a bunch of grapes.

COMMENTARY

The earliest type of H. was perhaps the Horse-bird, the first example of which in Greek art is the remarkable 9th-cent. askos from Knossos (41). The next occurrence of the H.-b. is painted on the Early Corinthian alabastron in Warsaw (38). It is related to the horse protomes also seen on Early Corinthian vases (cf. e.g. London, BM 1936.12-30.3), but here tail feathers have been clearly indicated. It was imitated by the Boeotian painter of the Horse-bird Group (39, 40), although the horse's front legs are now omitted as well as the bird's (for the Corinthian connection of the Horse-bird Group see most recently Kilinski II, K., in Corinthia. Studies in Honor of D. A. Amyx (1986) 127-133).

The first proper H., that is one with the fore part of a horse, including its front legs, and the rear part of a cock, including its legs and distinctive high-curving pair of feathers above the tail, appears on the amphora in Bonn of the Tyrrhenian Group (1). This group of Attic vases of the 560s and 550s B.C. also includes representations of other varieties of cock-monsters, such as girl-cocks (see Blatter, R., AntK 24, 1981, 68-69), panther-cocks and boar-cocks (e.g. ABV 96, 19; 101, 81; 102, 101): iconographic inventiveness making up perhaps for lack of artistic ability. The H., however, became particularly popular from the middle of the 6th cent. and appears on a wide variety of materials and in several different Greek artistic milieux. It also gained considerable favour among Etruscan bronze-smiths in the first half of the 5th cent. (12-21) and appeared on a group of small silver coins from Volterra (11b-c).

It was from the middle of the 6th cent. too that the H. was tamed and ridden. At first the rider has no attributes and is simply a youth, but soon he acquires some of the trappings of the Athenian hippeis, sometimes carrying spears, sometimes wearing a 'Thracian' cloak or a petasos. On three Athenian vases and one Boeotian terracotta the rider is equipped as a warrior (49-52). The climax of this series is the sculpture from the Acropolis (79). Here the H.'s wings are spread horizontally and it should perhaps be thought of as being about to take off, the cock's legs still on the ground, the horse's legs pawing the air over a small support in the form of an Ionic capital. The rider appears to be a youth, but has no attributes to aid precise identification. The find-spot of the larger fragment, the south-east corner of the Acropolis, gives no clue to any possible connection with a particular cult, since this area seems to have been used as a dump for a variety of debris after the Persian sack.

At the very end of the 6th cent. and the first decades of the 5th we first find a hint of the marine association mentioned in the literary sources, for on a lekythos in Leyden dolphins are in attendance (46). This association is made explicit on two other vases which depict the rider as → Poseidon with his trident (44, 45 - Dörig has suggested that he might rather be → Okeanos). On two closely related lekythoi (47, 48) the rider seems to be the same, although there is no longer any marine indication (Hornbostel, o.c. 48, calls the rider Dionysos, but the branches on these black-figured scenes are ubiquitous).

Around the middle of the 6th cent. a slightly different type of cock-horse also made its appearance, this is the horse-cock with raised wings as well as a cock's tail plumage. This seems really to be a combination of Pegasos with a cock, rather than H. with its wings raised, although the Acropolis sculpture (79, cf. also 6) may have linked the two apparent types, both of which may well, in any case, have been called H. by the Greeks. These Pegasos-cocks appear on a wide variety of materials. The origin of the pieces listed above seem, by and large, to be on the fringes of the Greek world - Etruria, East Greece, Lycia and Magna Graecia - the Attic cups perhaps being examples of some sort of special commission. We have no preserved examples of a Pegasos-cock being ridden, although some appear to have harness or reins (e.g. 25 - reins; 26 - harness). The latest example of the type is the Etruscan scarab in London which is of the 4th cent. B.C. (32).

The appearance of a boy riding a cock (83, 84) might be related to the idea of the ridden H., but it is perhaps more likely that the scene reflects the cock as a love-gift (cf. Robertson, M., CVA Castle Asby 26), especially since the second example dates to the early 4th cent. B. C.

The proper H., whether alone or ridden, seems to have virtually disappeared from the artistic repertoire after about 480 B. C. in mainland Greece, the probable date of the destruction and burial of the Acropolis sculpture, and not long after in Etruria. Furthermore, it is conspicuously absent from the arts of 4th cent. southern Italy. The existence, however, of the 4th cent. Etruscan Pegasos-cock (32) and the proper H. on a lead token of Hellenistic date (8) suggest that the image of the H. was not entirely forgotten in the Classical period, unless the Etruscan gem represents an isolated imitation of an heirloom and the lead token the influence of Hellenistic scholarship on the minor arts.

The reappearance of the H., but without horse's legs, in the Roman world, represented by both ridden (82) and solitary examples (22-24), is probably quite independent of the Greek and Etruscan visual tradition, for these Roman Hs. are really just horse-headed cocks. The form might have been derived from Greek literary sources, but it is also perhaps linked with the so-called gryllos.

The literary sources mention Hs. painted on ships. Such semeia, none of which are preserved, were probably painted in the encaustic technique on the hull or sterns of ships (cf. Morrison, J. S./Williams, R. T., Greek Oared Ships [1968] 197-198). As for the reference to shield-devices in the form of Hs., this is confirmed by the appearance of two examples on vases, one probably of the 6th cent. (4) and one of the early 5th (5).

A Persian origin for the H. is suggested by the literary sources, which note that the H. appeared on Persian textiles. This origin has been rejected by many scholars, some positing a purely Greek home (e.g. Payne, o.c. 79, Bothmer, Scichilone, Camporeale), others an Ionic one (e.g. Perdrizet), and only accepted by a few (Alföldi, Jucker, Dörig). One of the problems with Alföldi's thesis was that he could point to no Iranian example earlier than the Greek versions, but there is now a Luristan bronze axe-head with the head of a horse and the tail of a bird (Los Angeles County Mus.: Jucker 113 n. 146; Dörig pl. 1 with p. 147). The similarly recent appearance of an askos in the form of a H.-b. at Knossos (41), dating to the 9th cent. B. C., confirms early borrowings of such eastern motifs.

The domestic fowl itself is not seen in Greek art, however, until the late 8th cent. B. C. (Athens, Kerameikos 1308-9: Kerameikos V, 1, 245 pl. 144), while the earliest representation of a cock-hybrid is of a goat-cock on a Late Protocorinthian alabastron (Paris, Louvre A 439: Payne, NC no. 23; CVA Louvre 6 pl. 15 (484), 6 with p. 15), dating from the middle of the 7th cent. The simultaneous appearance, shortly before the middle of the 6th cent., of a number of different cock-hybrids in Greek art, including the proper H., strongly points to borrowing from some external source, and textiles are as likely a source as any. Whether such textiles were Persian or not cannot be determined, for the fact that the cock was itself referred to as ὁ περσικός ὄρνις or simply ὁ περσικός may have influenced Aristophanes' location of the origins of the textiles. We should be careful, in any case, not to dismiss a rare literary reference to lost textiles of whatever date or origin.

It is the almost immediate taming of the H. by a rider that marks it out from other cock-hybrids and suggests that the Greeks, in particular the Athenians, wished to make it their own. Although it may have been the combination in one creature of a horse, the status symbol of the Athenian upper classes, and a cock, a favourite love-gift exchanged among their members for use in the sport of cock-fighting, that first caught Athenian imaginations, the sculpture from the Acropolis (79), the only marble sculpture of the fanciful beast to survive, suggests that even in the simple form of a naked youth riding the H. there was some religious significance. From about 550 B. C. to 500 B. C. the Athenians do not, however, seem to have developed any specific mythology for the H. and did not attribute its taming to any particular hero, in contrast to the story of Bellerophon which became attached to the winged horse → Pegasos. Thereafter, a brief association was made with Poseidon (44. 45; cf. also 46-48), but this was perhaps not the only one, for the fragment in a Centre Island collection (5) gives → Athena a shield with a device in the form of an H. This association with Athena may have been the result of her role as the tamer of the horse and the apparent link between herself and the cock, as exemplified by the appearance of cocks on the tops of the columns flanking Athena on Panathenaic amphorae. Nevertheless, one might wonder if, when the Athenians finally did come to adopt the H. into their iconography, it was shared by Athena and Poseidon, the horse part perhaps being Poseidon's and the cock part Athena's. Might the Athenians have come to think that Athena gave them the cock, as Poseidon gave them the horse?

DYFRI WILLIAMS

HIPPALKMOS → Peliou athla

HIPPARIS

(Ἱππάρης) Divinità dell'omonimo fiume, prossimo al sito dell'antica Camarina, sulla costa meridionale della Sicilia. Si identifica con l'attuale Ippari o Fiume di Camarina. È ricordato da Pind. O. 5, 12.

BIBLIOGRAFIA: Imhoof-Blumer, Flußg. 201-202, 69-71; Scichilone, G., EAA IV (1961) 38 s. v. «Hipparis»; Westermarck, U./Jenkins, K., The Coinage of Kamarina (1980) 58 ss., 65 ss.

Sulla Topografia: Manni, E., Geografia fisica e politica della Sicilia antica (1981) 110-111.

CATALOGO

Monete di Camarina

1.* AR, didrammi, 415-405 a. C. - Westermarck/Jenkins 197-200, 158-161 tav. 21, 158-161. - D.: Testa di H. di profilo a s. con diadema e piccolo corno sulla fronte; sotto il collo talora YA o EEAKE. Etnico. R.: Ninfa → Kamarina su cigno. Etnico.

2.* AR, didrammi. - Westermarck/Jenkins 200-202, 162-163 tavv. 21-22, 162-163. - D.: Busto frontale di H. lievemente di tre quarti, con corno sulla fronte e capelli lunghi; due pesci ai lati del volto. Sul collo EYAI. Cornice di onde stilizzate o di perline. - R.: Come 1, due pesci nel campo, KAMAPINA.

3. AR, didrammi. - Westermarck/Jenkins 202-204, 164-166 tav. 22, 164-166. - D.: Ninfa Kamarina come 1. Etnico o KAMAPINA. R.: Testa di H. a s. con corti capelli e corno sulla fronte, intorno due o tre pesci. ΙΠΠΑΡΙΣ.

Mosaico

4. Comiso, Ninfeo del Fonte Diana, età tardo-romana. - Pace, B., Arte e civiltà della Sicilia antica (1945) 497 n. 2; 538. - H. quale efebo appoggiato ad una roccia, con canne e vaso da cui versa l'acqua.

COMMENTO

Il netto predominio dell'acqua sugli altri elementi, tipico di tutti i culti dell'antichissima Sicilia pregreca, spiega perché molte divinità locali siano apparse come dei fluviali. Il fiume che sgorga dalla terra, irrigando la campagna, viene assunto come compagno ideale per una dea della natura feconda. Tale deve essere stato il ruolo di H. nei confronti di → Kamarina. Il suo nome, che corrisponde a un diminutivo di ἵππος, il cavallo, sottolinea la stretta connessione di H. con le acque delle sorgenti e dei fiumi, con una possibile filiazione dal dio che - come Poseidon - trovava nel cavallo la sua più frequente epifania teriomorfa.

H., la cui identità è resa certa dal nome presente sulle monete 3, viene rappresentato da una testa maschile di profilo a s. (1. 3), adorna di piccole corna, secondo uno schema comune a Naxos per l' → Assinos, a Katane per l' → Amenanos, a Gela per il → Gelas, a Crotona per l' → Aisaros. La sua natura acquatica è esaltata dall'iconografia 2, in cui viene rappresentato con un busto frontale all'interno di una cornice a volute, con due pesci ai lati del volto. Lo schema frontale si ritrova in numerose serie siciliane del penultimo decennio del V sec. a. C., periodo noto come l'epoca dei maestri firmanti. Con due di tali incisori possono identificarsi i nomi di Euai(netos) e di Exake(stidas) che figurano su alcuni dei conii di H.

MARIA CACCAMO CALTABIANO

HIPPASOS I → Peliou Athla

HIPPASOS II → Minyades

HIPPICHOS

(Ἱππῖχος) Cavalier troyen figuré sur un vase corinthien dans une scène représentant le meurtre de Troïlos par Achille (→ Achilleus).

1.* (= Achilleus 365* avec bibl., = Aineias 26 avec bibl., → Hektor p. 489) Cratère à colonnettes corinthien fr. Paris, Louvre 638bis. De Cerveteri. - Lorber, Inchriften 50-51 pl. 15. - 580-570 av. J.-C. - A: au centre, Achille tue Troïlos sur l'autel d'Apollon. De la dr. accourt un groupe de Troyens accompagné de pecially since the second example dates to the early 4th cent. B. C.

Hippichos I

The proper H., whether alone or ridden, seems to have virtually disappeared from the artistic repertoire after about 480 B. C. In mainland Greece, the probable date of the destruction and burial of the Acropolis sculpture, and not long after in Etruria. Furthermore, it is conspicuously absent from the arts of 4th cent. southern Italy. The existence, however, of the 4th cent. Etruscan Pegasos-cock (32) and the proper H. on a lead token of Hellenistic date (8) suggest that the image of the H. was not entirely forgotten in the Classical period, unless the Etruscan gem represents an isolated imitation of an heirloom and the lead token the influence of Hellenistic scholarship on the minor arts.

The reappearance of the H., but without horse's legs, in the Roman world, represented by both ridden (82) and solitary examples (22-24), is probably quite independent of the Greek and Etruscan visual tradition, for these Roman Hs. are really just horse-headed cocks. The form might have been derived from Greek literary sources, but it is also perhaps linked with the so-called gryllos.

The literary sources mention Hs. painted on ships. Such semeia, none of which are preserved, were probably painted in the encaustic technique on the hull or sterns of ships (cf. Morrison, J. S./Williams, R. T., Greek Oared Ships [1968] 197-198). As for the reference to shield-devices in the form of Hs., this is confirmed by the appearance of two examples on vases, one probably of the 6th cent. (4) and one of the early 5th (5).

A Persian origin for the H. is suggested by the literary sources, which note that the H. appeared on Persian textiles. This origin has been rejected by many scholars, some positing a purely Greek home (e.g. Payne, o.c. 79, Bothmer, Scichilone, Camporeale), others an Ionic one (e.g. Perdrizet), and only accepted by a few (Alföldi, Jucker, Dörig). One of the problems with Alföldi's thesis was that he could point to no Iranian example earlier than the Greek versions, but there is now a Luristan bronze axe-head with the head of a horse and the tail of a bird (Los Angeles County Mus.: Jucker 113 n. 146; Dörig pl. 1 with p. 147). The similarly recent appearance of an askos in the form of a H.-b. at Knossos (41), dating to the 9th cent. B. C., confirms early borrowings of such eastern motifs.

The domestic fowl itself is not seen in Greek art, however, until the late 8th cent. B. C. (Athens, Kerameikos 1308-9: Kerameikos V, 1, 245 pl. 144), while the earliest representation of a cock-hybrid is of a goat-cock on a Late Protocorinthian alabastron (Paris, Louvre A 439: Payne, NC no. 23; CVA Louvre 6 pl. 15 (484), 6 with p. 15), dating from the middle of the 7th cent. The simultaneous appearance, shortly before the middle of the 6th cent., of a number of different cock-hybrids in Greek art, including the proper H., strongly points to borrowing from some external source, and textiles are as likely a source as any. Whether such textiles were Persian or not cannot be determined, for the fact that the cock was itself referred to as ὁ περισκός ὄρνις or simply ὁ περισκός may have influenced Aristophanes' location of the origins of the textiles. We should be careful, in any case, not to dismiss a rare literary reference to lost textiles of whatever date or origin.

It is the almost immediate taming of the H. by a rider that marks it out from other cock-hybrids and suggests that the Greeks, in particular the Athenians, wished to make it their own. Although it may have been the combination in one creature of a horse, the status symbol of the Athenian upper classes, and a cock, a favourite love-gift exchanged among their members for use in the sport of cock-fighting, that first caught Athenian imaginations, the sculpture from the Acropolis (79), the only marble sculpture of the fanciful beast to survive, suggests that even in the simple form of a naked youth riding the H. there was some religious significance. From about 550 B. C. to 500 B. C. the Athenians do not, however, seem to have developed any specific mythology for the H. and did not attribute its taming to any particular hero, in contrast to the story of Bellerophon which became attached to the winged horse → Pegasos. Thereafter, a brief association was made with Poseidon (44. 45; cf. also 46-48), but this was perhaps not the only one, for the fragment in a Centre Island collection (5) gives → Athena a shield with a device in the form of an H. This association with Athena may have been the result of her role as the tamer of the horse and the apparent link between herself and the cock, as exemplified by the appearance of cocks on the tops of the columns flanking Athena on Panathenaic amphorae. Nevertheless, one might wonder if, when the Athenians finally did come to adopt the H. into their iconography, it was shared by Athena and Poseidon, the horse part perhaps being Poseidon's and the cock part Athena's. Might the Athenians have come to think that Athena gave them the cock, as Poseidon gave them the horse?

DYFRI WILLIAMS

HIPPALKMOS → Peliou athla

HIPPARIS

(Ἱππάρης) Divinità dell'omonimo fiume, prossimo al sito dell'antica Camarina, sulla costa meridionale della Sicilia. Si identifica con l'attuale Ippari o Fiume di Camarina. È ricordato da Pind. O. 5, 12.

BIBLIOGRAFIA: Imhoof-Blumer, Flußg. 201-202, 69-71; Scichilone, G., EAA IV (1961) 38 s. v. «Hipparis»; Westermark, U./Jenkins, K., The Coinage of Kamarina (1980) 58 ss., 65 ss.

Sulla Topografia: Manni, E., Geografia fisica e politica della Sicilia antica (1981) 110-111.

CATALOGO

Monete di Camarina

1. * AR, didrammi, 415-405 a. C. - Westermark/Jenkins 197-200, 158-161 tav. 21, 158-161. - D.: Testa di H. di profilo a s. con diadema e piccolo corno sulla fronte; sotto il collo talora YA o EEAKE. Etnico. R.: Ninfa → Kamarina su cigno. Etnico.

2. * AR, didrammi. - Westermark/Jenkins 200-202, 162-163 tavv. 21-22, 162-163. - D.: Busto frontale di H. lievemente di tre quarti, con corno sulla fronte e capelli lunghi; due pesci ai lati del volto. Sul collo EYAI. Cornice di onde stilizzate o di perline. - R.: Come 1, due pesci nel campo, KAMAPINA.

3. AR, didrammi. - Westermark/Jenkins 202-204, 164-166 tav. 22, 164-166. - D.: Ninfa Kamarina come 1. Etnico o KAMAPINA. R.: Testa di H. a s. con corti capelli e corno sulla fronte, intorno due o tre pesci. ΙΠΠΑΡΙΕ.

Mosaico

4. Comiso, Ninfeo del Fonte Diana, età tardo-romana. - Pace, B., Arte e civiltà della Sicilia antica (1945) 497 n. 2; 538. - H. quale efebo appoggiato ad una roccia, con canne e vaso da cui versa l'acqua.

COMMENTO

Il netto predominio dell'acqua sugli altri elementi, tipico di tutti i culti dell'antichissima Sicilia pregreca, spiega perché molte divinità locali siano apparse come dei fluviali. Il fiume che sgorga dalla terra, irrigando la campagna, viene assunto come compagno ideale per una dea della natura feconda. Tale deve essere stato il ruolo di H. nei confronti di → Kamarina. Il suo nome, che corrisponde a un diminutivo di ἵππος, il cavallo, sottolinea la stretta connessione di H. con le acque delle sorgenti e dei fiumi, con una possibile filiazione dal dio che - come Poseidon - trovava nel cavallo la sua più frequente epifania teriomorfa.

H., la cui identità è resa certa dal nome presente sulle monete 3, viene rappresentato da una testa maschile di profilo a s. (1. 3), adorna di piccole corna, secondo uno schema comune a Naxos per l' → Assinos, a Katane per l' → Amenanos, a Gela per il → Gelas, a Crotona per l' → Aisaros. La sua natura acquatica è esaltata dall'iconografia 2, in cui viene rappresentato con un busto frontale all'interno di una cornice a volute, con due pesci ai lati del volto. Lo schema frontale si ritrova in numerose serie siciliane del penultimo decennio del V sec. a. C., periodo noto come l'epoca dei maestri firmanti. Con due di tali incisori possono identificarsi i nomi di Euai(netos) e di Exake(stidas) che figurano su alcuni dei conii di H.

MARIA CACCAMO CALTABIANO

HIPPASOS I → Peliou Athla

HIPPASOS II → Minyades

HIPPICHOS

(Ἱππῖχος) Cavalier troyen figuré sur un vase corinthien dans une scène représentant le meurtre de Troïlos par Achille (→ Achilleus).

1. * (= Achilleus 365* avec bibl., = Aineias 26 avec bibl., → Hektor p. 489) Cratère à colonnettes corinthien fr. Paris, Louvre 638bis. De Cerveteri. - Lorber, Inchriften 50-51 pl. 15. - 580-570 av. J.-C. - A: au centre, Achille tue Troïlos sur l'autel d'Apollon. De la dr. accourt un groupe de Troyens accompagné de quatre chevaux. Figuré au second plan, H. arrive le premier. Il est le seul à chevaucher sa monture. Partiellement masqué par → Pyraichmas et les chevaux, il lève le bras dr., tenant les rênes d'une deuxième monture. Ses pieds apparaissent entre les jambes des chevaux. Ses compagnons Pyraichmas, Enée et Hector (tous inscr.) brandissent déjà leur lance en direction d'Achille.

Hippichos I

Par son nom, H. symbolise peut-être, pour le peintre de vase, la cavalerie troyenne. Mais comme tous les autres noms inscrits se rapportent au catalogue des Troyens (Hom. Il. 2, 816-848), où Hector est cité en tant que chef des Troyens, Enée en tant que chef des Dardiens et Pyraichmas en tant que chef des Péoniens, on peut être tenté de rapprocher le nom d'H. de celui d'Hippothoos, le chef des «Pélasges habitants de la plantureuse Larisse» mentionné dans le même passage (Il. 2, 840).

JEAN-ROBERT GISLER

HIPPOBATAS, HIPPOSTROPHOS

(ἵπποβάτης, ἵπποστρόφος) Die Wörter bedeuten «Reiter» und «Pferdewender», das zweite im Sinn von «Pferdeführer».

LITERARISCHE QUELLEN: Außer in der Vaseninschrift auf I ist das Wort ἵπποβάτης noch einmal im Sinn von «Reiter» überliefert (Aischyl. Pers. 26) und kommt außerdem in der Zusammensetzung ἵππο-ἵππο-βάται im Sinn von «Lenker eines Viergespannes» vor (Hdt. 4, 170, 3-4). Im Gegensatz dazu ist das Wort ἵπποστρόφος nur auf I belegt.

BIBLIOGRAPHIE: Zur Bedeutung der Reiterei in der Antike: Alföldi, A., in Festschr. K. Scheffold, AntK 4. Beih. (1967) 13 ff.; Helbig, W., Les hippeis athéniens (1902); Lammert, E., Neue Jbb 10 (19), 1907, 610 ff.; idem, RE VIII 2 (1913) 1689-1700 s. v. «ἵππεες»; Martin, M. A., Les cavaliers athéniens (1886); Meyer, E., Geschichte des Altertums I (1893) 25 ff.; Petersen, E., OeJh 8, 1905, 25 ff. Zur Bedeutung der mit hippo- zusammengesetzten Namen: Curtius, E., Antike 3, 1927, 162 ff.; Letronne, M., RA 3, 1846, 380-381. Zu weiteren Informationen über die verschiedenen Theorien vgl. Alföldi a. O. 15 Anm. 30. 31. 32.

KATALOG

1.* Aryballos, frühkorinthisch sf. Athen, Nat. Mus. 341 (CC 618). Aus Karystos? - Collignon-Couve Nr. 618 Taf. 25; Payne, NC 99. 287 Nr. 482 Taf. 3, 1; Alföldi 14 Abb. 1; Lorber, Inscriften Nr. 18 Taf. 3; Amyx, CVP 556. 558, 7. - 4. Viertel 7. Jh. v. Chr. - Ein bärtiger, nackter Krieger nach r., mit Mäntelchen auf den Schultern und Beinschienen, bewaffnet mit korinthischem Helm, Rundschild und Lanze, folgt einem nackten Jüngling, der auf einem Pferd reitet und ein anderes am Zügel führt. Zwischen den Männern, auf eine Art boustrophedon geschrieben, steht ἵπποστρόφος, während eine linksläufige

Inschrift hinter dem ersten Krieger diesen klar als ἵπποβάτης bezeichnet. Beides sind Funktionsbezeichnungen und daher generell als Eigenschaften gemeint. Vor den Pferden stürzt ein Adler auf einen Hasen herab.

KOMMENTAR

Die attische und korinthische Vasenmalerei ist reich an Reiterdarstellungen in verschiedenen Motiven: schwer- oder leichtbewaffnete, berittene oder einherlaufende Krieger mit einem, zwei oder vielen Pferden. Das Besondere an I ist die Bestimmung der militärischen Eigenschaften der zwei Figuren durch Beischriften, und zwar die Charakterisierung des nicht berittenen Kriegers als Reiter. Die zweite, unbewaffnete Figur kann auch als Mitkämpfer und nicht nur als passiver Diener gelten, und zwar als der Nachfolger des Lenkers des heroischen Kampfwagens, der etwa von der Zeit um 1000 v. Chr. an allmählich abgeschafft wurde. Die ganze Szene erinnert an den Apobatenagon, der wiederum an die Streitwagentaktik erinnert, wo der Kämpfer vom Wagen abstieg, während der Lenker weiterlenkte. Zu beachten ist, daß der hippostrophos ein zweites Pferd am Zügel hält, das nur als Pferd des schon abgestiegenen Kriegers verstanden werden kann.

CHRISTINA TRAYTORAKI

HIPPODAME → Hippodameia I

HIPPODAMEIA I

(Ἰπποδάμεια, Ἰπποδάμη, Hippodamia, Hippodame[a]) Daughter of → Oinomaos and → Sterope (or Eurythoe or Euarete). Her father wishing to prevent her marrying, either because an oracle had predicted that he would be killed by his son-in-law or because he was in love with her himself, had agreed to give her only to the man who would defeat him in a chariot-race from Pisa to the Isthmus of Corinth. The suitors would leave first with H., and Oinomaos who possessed invincible horses, a present from his father → Ares, always overtook and killed them with his spear. Many had died thus until the arrival of → Pelops. With his magic horses, a present from → Poseidon, or by bribing → Myrtilos, Oinomaos' charioteer (→ Oinomaos), to remove the lynch-pins from his master's chariot-wheels or to replace them with wax pins, Pelops defeated Oinomaos who was killed, murdered Myrtilos and married H. They had several children including → Atreus, → Thyestes, → Alkathoos and, according to one tradition, → Chrysippos (I). Another tradition makes Chrysippos the son of Pelops and the nymph Axioche. Jealous of Pelops' preference for Chrysippos, H. persuaded Atreus and Thyestes to kill him. When Pelops discovered her deed she fled to Midea in the Argolid or killed herself.

There was a hero-cult of H. at Olympia; women sacrificed annually in her honour at the Hippodameion, an open enclosure. She was believed to have founded the festival of the Heraia in memory of her marriage to Pelops.

LITERARY SOURCES: The story was probably told in the lost Ehoiai, ascribed to Hesiod, which had a list of the dead suitors (frg. 259a Merkelbach/West: thirteen suitors according to Schol. Pind. O. 1, 127b, sixteen according to Paus. 6, 21, 10-11, probably not referring to the same source). Epimenides (FGrH 457 F 14) also listed thirteen suitors. The earliest preserved literary source is Pind. O. 1, 67-96, who attributes Pelops' victory to the gold chariot and winged horses that he received from Poseidon. He gives no detail of the race and does not mention Myrtilos' sabotage which is otherwise a constant theme of the story already found in the 5th-cent. historian Pherekydes (FGrH 3 F 37a). Both Soph. (TrGFIV F 471-477) and Eur. (TGF² frg. 571-577) wrote an Oinomaos of which little remains and may be responsible for the popularity of the story with 4th-cent. vase-painters. An Hippodameia ascribed to Sophokles has sometimes been assimilated to his Oinomaos or regarded as a different play (Robert, C., Oidipus I [1915] 407; Pearson, A. C., The Fragments of Sophocles II [1917] 121; TrGFIV p. 380-381). Among comic poets Antiphanes (CAF II frg. 172) and Euboulos (PCG V F 73) wrote an Oinomaos or Pelops (cf. Athen. 4, 130e; 15, 678f). The story was also treated by the Roman dramatist Accius in his Oenomaus (TRF³ p. 232-234). The most detailed accounts of the story are all late: Apollod. epitome 2, 3-9; Diod. 4, 73; Hyg. fab. 84; Tzetz. Lykophr. 156-165; Schol. Apoll. Rhod. 1, 752-758. Cf. also Nikolaos Damaskenos, FGrH 90 F 10; Lukianos Charid. 19; Nonn. Dion. 20, 154-165; Eust. 183, 13-184, 20 ad Hom. Il. 2, 104. Apollod. epitome 2, 7 and Paus. 8, 14, 11 relate that Myrtilos betrayed Oinomaos because he was in love with H. Paus. l.c. has Pelops promise Myrtilos a night with H. (in Serv. georg. 3, 7 it is H. herself who makes the promise). Elsewhere Myrtilos is promised half Oinomaos' kingdom (Hyg. fab. 84). For a more detailed account of the literary sources see → Oinomaos and → Pelops. For details on Myrtilos' sabotage and his death see → Oinomaos.

H.'s mother is called Sterope in Apollod. bibl. 3 (110) 10, 1 and Paus. 5, 10, 6, Eurythoe in Tzetz. Lykophr. 157, and Euarete in Hyg. fab. 84.

The names and number of the children of Pelops and H. vary. According to Pind. O. 1, 89, they had six sons, in Schol. Eur. Or. 4 thirteen sons and two daughters. The schol. on Pindar's passage give three different lists of names. One includes Chrysippos who was probably H.'s son in the Chrysippos of Eur. (TGF² frg. 839-844; cf. Robert, C., Oidipus I [1915] 408-410). In another of the three lists and in Schol. Eur. Or. 4 he is the son of Pelops by the nymph Axioche. Hellan. (FGrH 4 F 157) knew of H.'s part in the killing of Chrysippos by Atreus and Thyestes. Paus. 6, 20, 7 has her flee to Midea in the Argolid when Pelops discovered her deed. In Hyg. fab. 85 and 243, 3 she kills herself.

For the Hippodameion at Olympia and the women's annual festival in honour of H. see Paus. 5, 22, 2 and 6, 20, 7. For H.'s role in the foundation of the Heraia see Paus. 5, 16, 4.

BIBLIOGRAPHY: Brommer, Vasenlisten³ 539-540; idem, Denkmälerlisten III 370-375; Cressedi, G., EAA IV (1961) 182-183 s. v. «Ippodamia»; Cultrera, G., Ausonia 7, 1912, 116-150; Höfer, O., ML 12 (1886-90) 2667-2671 s. v. «Hippodameia I»; Lacroix, L., BCH 100, 1976, 327-341, esp. 337-341; Robert, Heldensage⁴ 1, 206-221; Säflund, M.-L., The East Pediment of the Temple of Zeus at Olympia, Studies in Mediterranean Archaeology 27 (1970) 131-142; Scheffold/Jung, SB IV 17-26; Séchan, Etudes 447-466; Zwicker, H., RE VIII 2 (1913) 1725-1728 s. v. «Hippodameia I».

CATALOGUE

A. Hippodameia in non-narrative scenes

1.* Neck-amphora, Attic rf. Boston, MFA 03.821. From Suessula. - ARV² 1186, 29; Kadmos P.; Para 460; Speier, H., RM 47, 1932, pl. 15, 1; Caskey/Beazley III 81-83 no. 170 pl. 102, suppl. pl. 27. - About 400 B. C. - ἸΠΠΟΔΑΜΗ (inscribed) seated in a garden (wearing a crown, chiton and himation) with other women (Asteria, Iaso, Eurythoe, Eros and Pothos). All figures are named. Hippodameia is very probably Hippodameia, Oinomaos' daughter, a famous bride in antiquity.

2. Painting decorating one of the panels of the throne of Zeus in Olympia. Lost work of the painter Panaios. - Paus. 5, 11, 6; Giglioli, G. Q., MemLinc ser. 5, 16, 1921, 372; Völcker-Janssen, W., Boreas 10, 1987, 21-22. - 3rd quarter of 5th cent. B. C. - H. with her mother Sterope.

3. Bronze statue of H. at the Hippodrome of Olympia. - Lost. - Paus. 6, 20, 19; Bötticher, C., «Das Bild der Hippodameia im Hippodrom zu Olympia», AZ 11, 1853, 7-13. - H. holding a ribbon for the victorious Pelops.

B. Hippodameia at the chariot-race between Pelops and Oinomaos

For fuller lists of all episodes of the race and a complete iconographical study of the story see → Pelops (cf. also → Oinomaos). The works listed here are those in which H. is present.

a) Hippodameia at Pelops' arrival in Pisa

4.* (= Aphrodite 1277*/1520 with bibl.) Situla, Apulian rf. Rome, Villa Giulia 18003. - RVAp I 212, 149; P. of Athens 1714; Cultrera 117 fig. 1 pls. 2-3; Säflund 132 fig. 86. - About 360 B. C. - Pelops standing before Oinomaos, seated in his palace, in the presence of Myrtilos holding a chariot-wheel and H. leaning on an Ionic column and lifting a corner of her hi-

mation. Above l., Aphrodite reclining and Pothos; above r., horses in a stable. Inscriptions.

5. Amphora, Apulian rf. Bari, De Blasi Cirillo Coll. 15. - RVAp II 868, 40 pl. 327: Baltimore P. - Last quarter of 4th cent. B.C. - Pelops standing before H. (seated on throne, crowned), Eros, women, Phrygian youth. Heads of slain suitors suspended between chariot-wheels. Below, Myrtilos in chariot, Oinomaos, Pelops, seated Erinyes.

Similar by the same painter: Loutrophoros, Ruvo, Jatta Mus. 37. - RVAp Suppl. 1, 154, 43c pl. 29, 1. - Among women, a woman on throne and a youth in oriental dress (Pelops and H.). The scene below probably represents Pelops and Myrtilos before the race.

b) Hippodameia at the bribing of Myrtilos

6.* (= Aphrodite 1521 with bibl. and further refs.) Calyx-crater, Apulian rf. London, BM F 271. From Ruvo. - RVAp I 415, 5 pl. 147, 2: Lycurgus P.; Séchan, Etudes 452 fig. 128; Säflund 134 fig. 89. - About 350 B.C. - In a sanctuary (basin, column surmounted by a tripod) Pelops seated, two women approaching from the l., and Myrtilos holding a chariot-wheel on the r. Above, Pan, seated Aphrodite, Eros and a seated woman (nymph?). The two women are probably H. (crowned, in chiton, himation and sandals) following her nymphetria (Säflund) rather than Sterope walking behind H. (Séchan).

7. Amphora, rf. Lost (?). From Ruvo. - MonInst IV pl. 30; Séchan, Etudes 452 fig. 127; Säflund 132 fig. 87. - About 340 B.C. - In a sanctuary (basin, altar and column surmounted by a crater) Pelops talks to Myrtilos who is holding a stick and a chariot-wheel. On the r., woman with mantle over her head, probably Sterope or the nymphetria (Säflund) rather than H. (Cultretra 128; Séchan; Floriani Squarciapino, M., ASAtene 30-32, 1952-54, 136; Becatti, G., StudMisc 18, 1970-71, 72), talking to another woman who is wearing a crown and lifts a corner of her veil, probably H. Above l., two Phrygians; above r., Hermes seated.

8. Bell-crater, Campanian rf. Naples, Mus. Naz. 81444 (H 3227). - LCS 402, 281 pl. 157, 3: Group of Naples 3227; Séchan, Etudes 453, D; Schauenburg, K., RM 65, 1958, 61 n. 139 pl. 39, 1 (with caption of pl. 39, 2). - About 340 B.C. - Pelops seated talks to Myrtilos who is holding a chariot-wheel and carrying another. On the l., H. carrying a wreath and a tray with fruit, Eros.

9.* (= Aiakos 1, = Amazonas 379, = Ananke 2 with bibl., = Danaides 9 with bibl., = Hades 127, = Herakleidai 10) Volute-crater, Apulian rf. Naples, Mus. Naz. 81666 (H 3222). From Altamura. - RVAp I 431, 82 pl. 160, 2; Séchan, Etudes 453, E; Säflund 134 fig. 88. - About 330 B.C. - Side A: Among other scenes from the Underworld, Myrtilos seated holding a chariot-wheel (another wheel in the background) talks to Pelops in the presence of H. who puts an arm on Myrtilos' shoulder. Inscriptions (poorly preserved).

c) Hippodameia at the preparation for the race

10.* (= Artemis 1441 with further refs., = Ganymedes 72) Bell-crater, Attic rf. Naples, Mus. Naz. H 2200. From Santa Agata dei Goti. - *ARV*² 1440, 1: Oinomaos P.; Para 492; *Add*² 377; Paribeni, E., EAA V (1963) 628 s.v. «Oinomaos, Pittore di» (colour plate). - 380-370 B.C. - Pelops and H. setting off in a chariot looking back at Oinomaos who is sacrificing at an altar before a column supporting a statue of Artemis. At the l., a youth leading a ram for sacrifice and a seated youth with spears and shield (Ares?). Above, Myrtilos in Oinomaos' chariot, Poseidon, Athena, Zeus, Ganymede, Aphrodite or Hera. Inscriptions.

11.* Bell-crater, Lucanian rf. Paris, Louvre K 17. - LCS 101, 523; Dolon P.; ML III 1, 776-778 no. 3 fig. 3; Séchan, Etudes 454 n. 3; Becatti, o.c. 7, pl. 67, 2. - Early 4th cent. B.C. - At an altar H. holding out a phiale for Oinomaos. On the r., Pelops (?).

12.* (= Aphrodite 1519 with bibl.) Amphora, Apulian rf. London, BM F 331. From Ruvo. - RVAp I 338, 5 pl. 109, 2: Varrese P.; Séchan, Etudes 453 fig. 129; Säflund 135 figs. 90-91. - About 360 B.C. - Oinomaos and Pelops libating at an altar and an inscribed pillar of Zeus. On the l., H. (wearing a crown and a veil) led by a woman with fan. On the r., Myrtilos carrying a stick and a wreath, Eros and seated Aphrodite. In the background severed heads of suitors hanging. Inscriptions.

13. (= Aphrodite 1522* with bibl., = Erinyes 106) Volute-crater, Apulian rf. Leningrad, Hermitage 4323. From Ruvo. - RVAp II 487, 18 pl. 173, 2: Darius P.; Séchan, Etudes 454 fig. 130. - About 340 B.C. - Pelops and H. (crowned, in chiton, himation and veil) joining hands over an altar in the presence of Oinomaos. On the l., Eros and Aphrodite holding a fan. On the r., Myrtilos carrying a ram (chariot-wheel at his feet) and a winged Erinyes leaning on a spear.

14.* (= Chrysippos 4a, = Erinyes 106a) Volute-crater, Apulian rf. Naples, Private Coll. 370. - RVAp II 866, 27 pl. 325, 2: Baltimore P. - Last quarter of 4th cent. B.C. - Pelops and H. (crowned, in chiton and himation) joining hands at an altar in the presence of Oinomaos. At the l., a youth bringing a ram for sacrifice and a winged Erinyes leaning on a spear. At the r., Nike. Severed head and chariot-wheel in the background. Below, chariot, charioteer, men in oriental dress, woman.

15. Imaginary (?) painting described by Philostratus. im. 9. - Pelops setting out in his chariot in the presence of H., while Oinomaos sacrifices to Ares, and Eros is cutting the axle of Oinomaos' chariot.

16.* East pediment of the temple of Zeus at Olympia, figure F or K. Marble. Olympia, Mus. - Paus. 5, 10, 6-7; Floriani Squarciapino, o.c. 7, 131-140; Ashmole, B./Yalouris, N., Olympia. The Sculptures of the Temple of Zeus (1967); Simon, E., AM 83, 1968, 147-166; Säflund; Becatti, o.c. 7, 67-79; Grunauer, P., OlympBer 10 (1981) 281-301. - 2nd quarter of 5th cent. B.C. - According to Pausanias' description, Zeus stood in the middle of the pediment between Oinomaos and Sterope, Pelops and Hippodameia. The identification of the two female figures F and K, as well as their locations to the r. or l. of Zeus, are disputed. Floriani Squarciapino, Ashmole, Simon, Säflund, Kardara (ArchEph 1965, 168 ff.), Hermann (Olympia [1972] 136-137), among others, identify K, who is lifting a corner of her veil, with Hippodameia (Säflund places her next to Pelops on the spectator's right of Zeus, the other scholars on the left). Yalouris, Becatti, Dörig (BDFH 133), Grunauer, Fuchs (*Skulptur*³ 390-391 fig. 432), Schefold (SB IV 18-19) and many others identify the pensive F with Hippodameia, which seems more likely, and place her to the spectator's right of Zeus.

H. before the chariot-race appears also, among other scenes of the story, on the sarcophagi 27 (seated, surrounded by women), 36 (seated in a loggia talking to Oinomaos) and Tipasa: SarkRel III 3, 393-394 no. 324 pl. 104; Koch/Sichtermann, RömSark 174 fig. 200 (watching Pelops mount). - Pelops.

d) The chariot-race

(i) Pelops and Hippodameia followed by Oinomaos

17. Chest of Kypselos, cedar-wood, gold and ivory. Olympia. Lost. - Paus. 5, 17, 7; v. Massow, W., AM 41, 1916, 27-29. - Perhaps mid 6th cent. B.C. - Oinomaos pursuing Pelops and H. Both chariots are bigae; Pelops' has winged horses.

18.* Volute-crater, Apulian rf. Taranto, Mus. Naz. 127081. From Taranto. - RVAp I 169, 29; Forti, L., BollArte 52, 1967, 61-66 figs. 1, 12; Moret, Ilioupersis pl. 36, 1. - Early 4th cent. B.C. - On the neck, Oinomaos (in Phrygian dress) and Myrtilos in chariot moving l. pursue Pelops and H. (her head and part of her torso are missing).

19.* (= Archemoros 10 [body], = Herakles 2686 [other side]) Volute-crater, Apulian rf. Naples, Mus. Naz. 81394 (H 3255). From Ruvo. - RVAp II 496, 42: Darius P.; Séchan, Etudes 457 fig. 132; Säflund 138 fig. 94. - About 330 B.C. - On the neck, Oinomaos and Myrtilos (who is about to jump off the chariot) pursue Pelops and H. who is crowned and holds a spear. Both chariots are bigae and are moving r. An Eros flies over Pelops' chariot.

20. (= Erinyes 107*) Volute-crater, Apulian rf. Naples, Mus. Naz. 81667 (H 3256). From Ruvo. - RVAp II 495, 40: Darius P.; ML III 1, 778 no. 9; 783 fig. 7; Séchan, Etudes 456, J; Moret, Ilioupersis pl. 81, 2. - About 330 B.C. - On the neck, Oinomaos and Myrtilos in chariot moving r. chase Pelops and H. (wearing a crown and retaining her veil). Over Oinomaos' chariot is a bird carrying a snake, over Pelops' an Eros flying. An Erinyes with torch frightens Oinomaos' horses. Fish below.

21. (= Erinyes 108*) Amphora, Apulian rf. Naples, Mus. Naz. Stg. 697. - RVAp II 525, 236: Related to the Perrone and Phrixos Groups; Séchan, Etudes 457, K; Floriani Squarciapino, o.c. 7, 138 fig. 6. - About 330 B.C. - Oinomaos in chariot moving l. led by Myrtilos (who is ready to jump off) pursues Pelops and H. (veil on shoulders). A winged Erinyes frightens Oinomaos' horses.

22.* Volute-crater, Apulian rf. Swiss Market, Ga-lerie Nefer. - RVAp Suppl. 1, 151, 21a: Baltimore P. - Last quarter of 4th cent. B.C. - On the neck, Oinomaos and Myrtilos pursuing Pelops and H. (non vidi).

(ii) Pelops and Hippodameia in chariot (Oinomaos not shown)

GREEK

23.* Neck-amphora, Attic rf. Arezzo, Mus. Civ. 1460. From Casalta. - *ARV*² 1157, 25; 1685: Manner of Dinos P.; Para 458; *Add*² 337; Séchan, Etudes 458 fig. 133; Arias/Shefton/Hirmer pls. 212-213; Simon/Hirmer, Vasen pls. 224-225. - Around 410 B.C. - Pelops and H. in chariot moving r. (Pelops looks back; H. has a veil over her head and raises her r. hand). Pair of doves in a tree. Dolphin under the horses. Inscriptions.

24. Hydria, Lucanian rf. Taranto, Mus. Naz. From Policoro. - LCS 57, 284 pls. 26, 1; 27, 1: Policoro P.; Degraasi, N., BollArte 50, 1965, 7-8 figs. 2, 9, 10; idem, in Archäologische Forschungen in Lukanien II (ed. B. Neutsch), RM Erg.-H. 11 (1967) 202-204 no. 2 pls. 52, 2; 58, 1. - About 400 B.C. - Pelops and H. (both almost completely missing) in chariot moving l. over which Eros flies. On the l., a woman carrying an oinochoe and a tray with offerings (Aphrodite?).

25.* Hydria, Apulian rf. Taranto, Mus. Naz. 4604. From the Arsenal. - RVAp I 164, 2: Sarpedon P.; Trendall, ESIVP 53, B 160; Degraasi, N., BollArte 50, 1965, 8 fig. 52. - Around 390 B.C. - Pelops and H. in chariot moving l.

26.* Loutrophoros, Apulian rf. London Market, Sotheby. - Auction Dec. 1984, no. 366, fig.: White Saccos P. - Around 320 B.C. - Pelops and H. (lifting her veil) in chariot moving r. They both look back.

27. Attic sarcophagus. Athens, Nat. Mus. 1176. From Athens. - SarkRel III 3, 390-392 no. 322 pl. 103; Koch/Sichtermann, RömSark 404-405 fig. 438; Koch, G., AA 1978, 126 fig. 13. - Middle of 3rd cent. A.D. - On one narrow side a lovesick H. is seated surrounded by her mother or nurse, women and Erotes. One long side shows Pelops before Oinomaos, the other Oinomaos' death with the king lying under his horses (only part of his head is preserved) and Pelops on foot at the r. (H. is not present: Koch/Sichtermann 405 n. 6). On the other narrow side Pelops carries H. in his r. arm and drives his chariot over the sea; a servant leads the chariot.

ROMAN

28.* Architectural clay reliefs («Campana reliefs»). a) New York, MMA 1926.60.32; b)* Rome, Mus. Naz. Rom. 62752; c) Vatican, Mus. Greg. Etr. 14575; d) London, BM D 606; e) Munich, Antikenslg. 381; f) Rome, Pal. Cons.; g) Paris, Louvre S 753 (non vidi). - Borbein, Campanareliefs 137-140 pls. 23, 1 (a); 24, 3 (b); 26, 2 (c); 26, 1 (d); 24, 1 (e); 27, 2 (f). - 1st cent. B.C./A.D. - Pelops (shown like an apobates) and H. (mantle over her head) in a chariot moving r. Another type of relief, with a warrior and a charioteer in a chariot moving l., is probably a pendant and shows Oinomaos and Myrtilos.

Uncertain

29. Glass intaglio. Hannover, Kestner Mus. K 874. – AGD IV no. 400 pl. 58; Brommer, Denkmälerlisten III 375. – 2nd half of 1st cent. B.C. – Galloping chariot moving l. led by a man; behind him a woman (?) with raised arm. Pelops and H. (?).

ETRUSCAN

Reliefs (selection)

30. Alabaster urn. Volterra, Mus. Guarnacci 187. From Volterra. – Brunn/Körte, Rilievi II 124–125 pl. 49, 1. – Pelops and H. (naked) in chariot between winged figures. Under the horses a fallen youth.

31.* Alabaster urn. Florence, Mus. Arch. 78495. From Volterra. – Brunn/Körte, Rilievi II 125 pl. 49, 2; CUEI 98 no. 138 fig. – 2nd cent. B.C. – Pelops and H. in chariot. Myrtilos on foot at l. embraces H. She stands to the l. in the chariot looking back at Pelops who grasps her with his r. arm. Under the horses fallen youth in Phrygian cap. Winged Erinyes next to the horses, and winged daemon (head missing) on the r.

32. Alabaster urn. Perugia, Mus. – Brunn/Körte, Rilievi II 121–122 pl. 52 below. – At the l., Pelops (?) attacking Oinomaos with a chariot-wheel. At the r., Pelops carrying off H. in his chariot.

Some other urns have the same scheme for Myrtilos, Pelops and H. as 31, but show also Oinomaos lying on the ground sword in hand (Brunn/Körte, Rilievi II 126–129 pls. 50–52).

e) Hippodameia at the death of Oinomaos

The subject is most common on Etruscan relief urns where Oinomaos is attacked by Pelops with a wheel or with some other weapon. H. is present on some urns, either watching the action or taking part in the murder brandishing a double-axe or a wheel-spoke (Brunn/Körte, Rilievi II 109–121 pls. 41–48). She is also present on some Roman sarcophagi showing, among other scenes, Oinomaos' death (33–35; Vatican 2341: SarkRel III 3, 392–393 no. 323 pl. 104; Koch/Sichtermann, RömSark 174 fig. 199). On a painting described by Philostr. im. 1, 17 Pelops and H. stand victorious in their chariot, while Oinomaos' chariot lies shattered (cf. Jason's mantle: Apoll. Rhod. 1, 752–758). For full accounts see → Oinomaos.

f) Hippodameia at the death of Myrtilos

On a South Italian vase Myrtilos is shown being thrown into the sea, while Pelops and H. are riding their chariot. On Etruscan urns Pelops attacks Myrtilos with a sword at an altar and is always helped by H. who pulls at the wheel with which Myrtilos defends himself. For these scenes see → Oinomaos.

g) Pelops and Hippodameia after the race

ROMAN

33.* Sarcophagus. Paris, Louvre MA 974. – SarkRel III 3, 397–398 no. 327 pl. 106; Friederichs, K., AZ 1855, 83–84 pl. 79, 2; Baratte/Metzger, SarkLouvre 104–106 no. 42. – 2nd quarter of 3rd cent. A.D. – From l. to r.: Pelops before Oinomaos (behind the latter armed servant); the chariot-race shown as if in a Roman circus, with Oinomaos lying under his chariot led by Myrtilos, a spectator, Pelops as a winner in his chariot, a figure holding a wreath next to him, a goddess (?) reclining under his horses, a rider, and two figures (H. and her mother or nurse?) watching from a window; Pelops and H. as a wedded couple after the race, standing with joined hands and accompanied by a woman (nurse?); Eros kneeling at Pelops' feet and a bearded man behind Pelops.

34. Sarcophagus fr. Rome, Pal. Massimi. – SarkRel III 3, 396–397 no. 326 pl. 105. – 2nd quarter of 3rd cent. A.D. – From l. to r.: Pelops before Oinomaos (only the latter, seated on a throne, and a servant are preserved); the chariot-race similar to 33, but without Myrtilos and with a rider next to Oinomaos' chariot; of the wedding scene only the nurse is preserved.

35.* Sarcophagus. Rome, Villa Albani. – SarkRel III 3, 395–396 no. 325 pl. 105; Sichtermann/Koch, MythSark 55–56 no. 57 pl. 144, 2; Koch/Sichtermann, RömSark 174 fig. 201. – 2nd quarter of 3rd cent. A.D. – From l. to r.: Pelops before Oinomaos seated on throne, servants, all looking at head of suitor hanging over the palace gate; the chariot-race similar to 33 but without Myrtilos and with a spectator and two riders next to Oinomaos' chariot, Phrygians and a youth holding a wreath near Pelops; Pelops and H. as a wedded couple, accompanied by a nurse (?) (cf. 33). On the narrow sides, men with spears.

36. Sarcophagus. Brussels, Mus. Roy. A 9167. From near Mons (?). – SarkRel III 3, 399–400 no. 329 pl. 106; Friederichs, o.c. 33, 86–87 pl. 80. – About A.D. 250. – From l. to r.: Pelops and follower standing at the gate of Oinomaos' palace, Eros on the r., H. seated in a loggia talking to Oinomaos, nurse (?) behind her; the chariot-race with Oinomaos lying under his horses, a figure (goddess?) reclining next to him, Pelops standing victorious in his chariot, a wreathed figure (identified with Honos by Robert) and a figure with a palm branch; Pelops helping H., who is holding a wreath (?), down from the loggia after the race; nurse behind H.

37.* Sarcophagus (Campanian). Naples, Mus. Naz. 6711. From near Cumae. – SarkRel III 3, 398 no. 328 pl. 106; Sichtermann/Koch, MythSark 56 no. 58 pls. 144, 1; 145; 146. – Late 3rd cent. A.D. – From l. to r.: Pelops and warrior looking at heads of suitors hanging over the palace gate; Pelops talking to Oinomaos seated on throne flanked by servants; the chariot-race with Oinomaos lying under his chariot led by Myrtilos, spectators, Pelops in his chariot, deity (?) reclining underneath, a youth with a wreath and a palm branch and another youth blowing a horn; Pelops and H. embracing after the race.

38.* AE coin, Smyrna, Antoninus Pius (A.D. 138–161). – BMC Ionia 278, 342 pl. 29, 6; Klose, D. O. A., Die Münzprägung von Smyrna in der röm. Kaiserzeit (1987) 256 pls. 38–39. – Rev.: Pelops and H. (mantle over her head) in chariot (biga) to the r. Pelops faces H. and grasps her r. hand. Inscription: ΠΕΛΟΨ. Nos. 30–31 may also belong here and show the couple after the race.

C. Pelops and Hippodameia visiting the mourning Niobe

UNCERTAIN

39.* Loutrophoros, Apulian rf. Malibu, Getty Mus. 82.AE.16. – RVAp Suppl. 1, 100, 278a pl. 19, 1; P. of Louvre MNB 1148; Trendall, A. D., in Getty-Vases II (1985) 129–144 figs. 1. 8. – About 330 B.C. – Niobe mourning at her children's tomb, women with offerings; below, Pelops and H. (crowned and lifting a corner of her himation) in chariot moving l. The two scenes are not divided by an ornamental band, so Trendall sees a connection between them: Pelops and H. are coming to persuade Niobe to cease from her mourning (?).

40. Hydria, Apulian rf. Zurich Market, Galerie Nefer. – RVAp Suppl. 1, 70, 11a pl. 9, 1; Trendall, o.c. 39, 136–138 fig. 10; Ganymede P. – About 330 B.C. – Niobe mourning at her children's tomb accompanied by a girl holding an alabastron. On the r., Tantalos, an old woman and a woman with offerings. On the l., a youth in Phrygian cap carrying spears (Pelops?), a woman holding an oinochoe (H.?) and a woman with a mirror and box. Above r., Artemis and Apollo; above l., a seated youth and a seated woman with distaffs.

D. Hippodameia at Chrysippos' abduction

UNCERTAIN

41. (= Chrysippos 6*) Volute-crater, Faliscan rf. Melbourne, Nat. Gall. D 87/1969. – Séchan, Etudes 315 fig. 90; Trendall/Webster, Illustrations 83–84 fig. III 3, 18; Trendall, A. D., JbBerlMus 12, 1970, 160 fig. 5. – About 380 B.C. – Laios carrying away Chrysippos in a chariot moving l. Above, the bust of a woman who gesticulates, perhaps H. who was Chrysippos' mother in one tradition (Robert, C., JdI 29, 1914, 172 n. 1 and Oidipus I [1915] 409).

COMMENTARY

The story of Pelops and H. first appears in art in the 6th cent. on the Chest of Kypselos (17) which showed the chariot-race. The earliest literary source, the Ehoiai, though probably based on some Hesiodic material, likewise may not be earlier than the 6th cent. (West, M. L., The Hesiodic Catalogue of Women [1985] 125 ff.). The Chest is the only archaic depiction of the myth. 5th-cent. representations are equally rare until the last decade of the century. The Olympia pediment (16) shows the preparation for the race with H. not easily recognizable. Some identify her with figure K who lifts a corner of her veil in what is usually regarded as a bride-like gesture; others with figure F who is of a slighter build and pensive mood. The latter seems more probable. H., already in love with the newly arrived Pelops, had good reasons to be apprehensive about the race in which so many had already died. Figure K is more matron-like compared to F and, moreover, the lifting of the veil is not a gesture confinied to brides. A little later than 16 is the painting of the throne of Zeus (2) of which we know absolutely nothing.

The tragedies of Sophokles and Euripides probably inspired the vase-painters' interest in the story from the end of the 5th cent. and throughout the 4th. Attic scenes are, however, rare: 10 has the preparation for the race in a way which is reminiscent of Diodorus' description (Pelops setting out while Oinomaos sacrifices; cf. Philostratus' description of 15), while 23 shows the couple probably at the end of the race. Another Attic vase, 1, is contemporary with 23 and shows H. in a garden with friends. She was a famous bride, and as such could well be shown also independently of the chariot-race story (cf. 2).

All moments of the story are popular with South Italian vase-painters. In Pelops' arrival at Pisa, H. is standing behind her father looking at the newcomer (4) or is seated on a throne and greets him herself (5). On the vases showing the plot with Myrtilos (6–9) H. is always present but, apart perhaps from 9 where she puts an arm on Myrtilos' shoulder (cf. Apollod. epitome 2, 6, where she mediates between Pelops and Myrtilos), her role is secondary. Sometimes there are two women present (6, 7), presumably H. with her nymphetria rather than with her mother, and in these cases it is not easy to tell who H. is. The one wearing a crown is more likely to represent her. On those vases showing the preparation for the race H. holds out a phiale for her father (11) or joins hands with Pelops over the altar (13, 14) or is simply approaching led by an elderly woman (12). The chariot-race, with Oinomaos pursuing the couple, is a popular scene on South Italian vases, shown particularly on the neck of volute-craters (18, 19, 20, 22). When it is just Pelops and H. who are depicted (24–26 and cf. the Attic 23) it is not easy to tell whether they are meant to be shown during the race, with Oinomaos imagined as following or collapsing, or as a wedded couple after it. Pelops' turn of the head on 23, 24 (?) and 26 (where H. looks back too) and the fact that the horses are shown running at full speed would seem to suggest the former. But the two scenes, that of the victorious Pelops in his chariot and that of the wedded couple, are very close anyway (cf. Lacroix 340). On vases H. commonly wears a crown and has a veil over her head or on her shoulders. The erotic element of the story is regularly indicated, regardless of the episode shown: Aphrodite and Eros appear on 6, 12, 13, Aphrodite and Pothos on 4, Eros alone on 5, 8, 19, 20, 24, a pair of doves on 23. As for the Erinyes on 13 and 14, she alludes to Oinomaos' imminent death, while on 20 and 21 she has an active role standing before Oinomaos' chariot and frightening his horses.

Clearly shown after the race is the couple on 39 where Pelops looks at H. It is not certain, however, whether this image of Pelops and H. in the chariot should be connected with the scene above, the mourning of Niobe, and the couple regarded as coming to console Pelops' sister. The Phrygian youth standing by the tomb on 40 could well be Pelops, particularly since an old man, identifiable with Tantalos is also shown. The woman carrying an oinochoe on the same vase is less certainly H.

In Roman art, apart from some clay architectural reliefs (28) and a type of coin (38), Pelops and H. appear on a few sarcophagi dating from the 2nd quarter to the end of the 3rd cent. A. D. (33-37). Each sarcophagus shows several scenes from the story, but the standard image of Pelops and H. in the chariot, so popular in the earlier period, does not appear here. Unlike the iconographic and literary tradition, the chariot-race is shown as a contest in a circus, so Pelops is alone in his chariot. The couple in the chariot appears, however, on a contemporary Attic sarcophagus (27), the only Attic sarcophagus decorated with the story. The chariot is shown here over the sea, and this scene, together with 23 where the marine element is also present, was taken by C. Robert (Bild und Lied [1881] 187 n. 35; Heldensage I 208-209) as a reflection of an earlier version of the story, according to which Oinomaos was king of Lesbos and Pelops, who was king of Argos, abducted H. and crossed the sea to the Peloponnese. It is very difficult to accept this early version which is attested only in Schol. Eur. Or. 990. The marine element on 23 and 27, as well as on a third work, 20, must be taken as indicating the final stage of the race somewhere near the Isthmus of Corinth, or (on 27) the journey back, during which Myrtilos was thrown into the sea, wherever this occurred according to ancient belief. On another side of 27 we see a lovesick H. in a scene copying the representations of Phaidra (cf. Robert in Sarkel III 3, 391). Only in Roman art are explicit representations of Pelops and H. as a wedded couple seen. On 33 and 35 (and presumably also on 34) they are depicted on foot after the race, with H. modestly inclining her head and clasping hands with Pelops in the conventional formula of the dextrarum iunctio. The composition is borrowed from the wedding scenes frequently shown on Roman sarcophagi. On 36 Pelops is helping H. down from a loggia and on 37 the couple is embracing in a group which copies that of Eros and Psyche. The image on the coin 38, where Pelops is facing H. and is holding her hand, has also a nuptial character.

Etruscan renderings of the story are very original. On some alabaster urns of the 2nd and 1st cent. B. C. showing the couple in the chariot, H. clings to Myrtilos who is on foot and looks back at Pelops who grasps her (31), a composition regarded as deriving from a painting by Nicomachus representing the rape of Persephone (Mansuelli, G. A., Ricerche sulla pittura ellenistica [1950] 31). The exact meaning of the scene (Pelops abducting H. by force, or Myrtilos embracing her after the race as a prize for his help in Oinomaos' defeat) is not clear. Another relief urn (30) has a more conventional rendering of the couple in the chariot. H.'s total nakedness here (elsewhere, e.g. on 31, her dress leaves one breast bare) presumably emphasizes the erotic motif of the story. H. helping in the murder of her father and of Myrtilos on some other Etruscan urns of the 2nd cent. B. C. is without parallel in art.

MARIA PIPILI

HIPPODAMEIA II

(Ἰπποδάμεια, Hippodame, Hippodamia) Tochter des → Boutes in der vorherrschenden attischen Version, also eine Angehörige des Adelsgeschlechts der Butaden. Seltener und spät heißt sie auch Tochter des Lapithen (→ Lapithai) Atrax oder, vielleicht durch Verwechslung mit diesem, des → Adrastos. Die Sage von ihrer Hochzeit mit Perithous (→ Peirithoos), zu der auch die Kentauren geladen waren, und die sich anschließende Kentauiromachie (→ Kentauroi) gehörte zu den ältesten griechischen Mythen. Der Kampf begann im Festsaal und endete nach einem Jahr als Feldschlacht. Damals gebar H. dem Perithous den → Polypoites. Dieser führte ein thessalisches Schiffskontingent nach Troja.

LITERARISCHE QUELLEN: Die Frau des Perithous ist in der ältesten Quelle (Hom. Il. 2, 742) und meist auch später H. genannt, wie auch die Frau des Pelops hieß (→ Hippodameia I). Bei Plut. Theseus 30, 3 heißt sie Deidameia, in Schol. Hom. Il. 1, 263 (in der einen Überlieferung) Hippoboteia. Ob auch Ischomache bei Prop. 2, 2, 9 ein Name für H. war, bleibe dahingestellt. Der Dichter könnte in kallimacheischer Weise auf eine wenig bekannte Sagenfigur aus dem Umkreis der Kentauiromachie anspielen: Wie die Bildkunst zeigt (3-5. 8-13), raubten die Kentauren an der Hochzeit der H. auch andere weibliche Gäste. Auf einem apulischen Vasenbild steht anstelle von H. Laodamia beigeschrieben (13), vielleicht eine Verwechslung des Malers mit der Frau im Halsbild. Boutes als Vater der H.: Diod. 4, 70, 3; Schol. Hom. Il. 1, 263, vgl. Dindorf zu Schol. Hom. Od. 21, 295. Perithous hat in dieser Version seine Braut aus der Stadt seines Freundes Theseus. Dessen Mitwirkung an der thessalischen Kentauiromachie ist bereits in der Ilias bekannt (1, 265). Atrax als Vater der H.: Ov. her. 17, 248; Adrastus: Hyg. fab. 33, 3; Schol. Hom. Od. 21, 295. An dieser Odysseestelle ist von Freveltaten des Kentauren Eurytion (→ Kentauroi) im Haus des Perithous die Rede, aus denen die Kentauiromachie entstanden sei. Diese ist im Zusammenhang bei Ov. met. 12, 210-535 geschildert. Der Kentaure heißt dort Eurytos, die Braut Hippodame.

BIBLIOGRAPHIE: Arias, P. E., RivIstArch 4, 1955, 95-100, 116-137; Beazley, J. D., in Caskey/Beazley III 86-87; v. Geisau, H., KlPauly II (1967) 1161 s. v. «Hippodameia 2»; Höfer, O., MLI 2 (1886-90) 2671 s. v. «Hippodameia 2»; Scheffold/Jung SBIV 264-271; Simon, E., «Versuch einer Deutung der Südmetopen des Parthenon», Jdl 90, 1975, 100-120; Zwicker, J., RE VIII 2 (1913) 1728-29 s. v. «Hippodameia 2».

KATALOG

A. Hippodameia unter den Athenerkindern

1.* (= Antiochos I., = Ariadne 48, = Eriboia I) Volutenkrater, att. sf., sog. François-Vase. Florenz. Mus. Arch. 4209. Aus Chiusi. ABV 76, 1: Klitias; Para 29-30; Add 21; Simon/Hirmer, Vasen 73-74 mit Lit. Taf. 52, 54; neue, überzeugende Deutung des Frieses: Shapiro, H. A., Art and Cult under the Tyrants in Athens (1989) 146-147. - 570/65 v. Chr. - Seite B, Mündungsfries. Unter den 14 Jungen und Mädchen, die alle namentlich benannt sind, ist H. die Vorletzte. Ihr folgt Phaidimos, der soeben das Schiff verläßt, um sich dem von Theseus angeführten Zug anzuschließen. Vor ihr schreitet Daidochos (Daduchos), sie fassen einander an der Hand. H. trägt einen mit gefüllten Quadranten gemusterten Peplos. Ihr Haar, mit einer Binde, fällt teils auf den Rücken, teils ist es nach oben geschlagen. Hinter den Namen steht eine erstaunlich reiche Überlieferung der alten Geschlechter, Phylon und Deme von Attika. H. dürfte aus der Geschlechtertradition der Butaden stammen, die durch sie mit den Lapithen Thessaliens verschwägert waren. Umgekehrt war Lysidike, die ebenfalls in diesem Zug auftritt, eine Lapithin und wurde in Athen zur Stammutter der Philaiden. Die beiden anderen sf. Vasen mit inschriftlich genannten Athenerkindern, eine Schale in München (ABV 163, 2) und eine Leidener Hydria (ABV 104, 126) haben den Namen H. nicht. Auch sonst wirken jene Namen im Vergleich mit dem Klitiaskrater «beliebig»; vgl. Herter, H., RE Suppl. XIII (1973) 1101 s. v. «Theseus».

B. Hippodameia in genealogischen Gemälden (?)

2. (= Boutes 2) Unter den bei Paus. 1, 26, 5 genannten Wandbildern des Butadengeschlechtes im Erechtheion und auf dem Pinax des Ismenias ebendort (Overbeck, SQ Nr. 1974), die genealogischen Inhalts waren, hat H. wohl nicht gefehlt. - Zu den Butaden vgl. Davies, J. K., Athenian Propertied Families (1971) 351-353.

C. Hippodameia an der Hochzeit mit Peirithoos (meist Kentauiromachie, Ausnahme: 7)

Plastik

3.* Westgiebel des Zeustempels von Olympia, Gruppe H/I. - Olympia, Mus. - Ashmole, B./Yalouris, N., Olympia (1967) 18 Taf. 110-117; Ashmole, B., Architect and Sculptor in Classical Greece (1972) 48 Abb. 55-57 (mit Rückansicht: Zeichnung aus der Olympia-Publikation); Robertson, HGA 283: «Greek tragedy, acted in masks, must have been much like this»; Herrmann, H.-V. (Hrsg.), Die Olympia-Skulpturen (1987) Taf. 4. 8. 9 (neue Aufstellung, während in den früheren hier zitierten Publikationen die beiden Gruppen zuseiten des Apollon vertauscht sind). - Der Tempel war 456 v. Chr. vollendet. - H. mit Eurytion (vgl. Paus. 5, 10, 8) gehört unter die ausgestreckte Rechte des Apollon (also vom Betrachter aus l. von ihm). Perithous kommt unter seinem Schutz der H. zu Hilfe, indem er ein Schwert schwingt. Die Waffe seines nach der anderen Seite hin kämpfenden Freundes Theseus war eine mit beiden Händen ergriffene Axt. Er wendet sich gegen den Kentauren, der die Brautführerin rauben will. Deren Kopf ist nicht erhalten, während das Haupt der H. zu den besterhaltenen der beiden Giebel gehört. Sie trägt eine kunstvoll geschlungene Haube, aus der nur vorn das volle, in der Mitte gescheitelte Haar tritt. Der Kopf ist etwas geneigt, in der vorgeschobenen Unterlippe drücken sich Schmerz und Anstrengung aus. Eurytion hatte sie von hinten angesprungen und faßt sie mit der Rechten um die r. Hüfte. Ihr Peplos hat sich dabei von der l. Schulter gelöst; er greift nach ihrer nackten Brust. H. sucht seinen Kopf mit dem Ellbogen wegzuschieben und mit der anderen Hand den Griff seiner Rechten zu lockern. Trotz ihrer prekären Lage bewahrt sie Ruhe und Würde, ähnlich wie die junge Frau in der l. anschließenden Dreiergruppe. Dagegen agieren die Frauen in der r. Giebelhälfte mit stärkerer Erregung.

4.* Südmetope 12 des Parthenon. Athen, Akropolis-Mus. - Brommer, F., Die Metopen des Parthenon (1967) 95-96 Taf. 200. 201 mit Lit. - «Ähnlich ist die Brautgruppe im Giebel von Olympia» (Brommer). Anstelle der l. ist hier die r. Brust entblößt, und der l. Ellbogen der Frau fährt nicht dem Kentauren ins Gesicht (sein Kopf ist in der Carrey-Zeichnung erhalten). Dennoch ist die Gruppe der olympischen (3) so ähnlich, daß ihre Entstehung nicht ohne jene denkbar ist. Simon 103-105 zieht daraus den Schluß, daß die Gruppe auch inhaltlich als H. und Eurytion zu interpretieren sei, zumal der Lapith in der l. anschließenden Metope 11 (Brommer a. O. Taf. 199 und Carrey-Zeichnung Simon 104) sehr wahrscheinlich Perithous benannt werden kann.

5.* Fries von Bassai-Phigalia. London, BM, Platte Nr. 524. - Kenner, H., Der Fries des Tempels von Bassai-Phigalia (1946) 42 Taf. 5; Hofkes-Brukker, Ch./Mallwitz, A., Der Bassai-Fries (1975) 55 H 4; Robertson, HGA 357-358; Fuchs, Skulptur 446-447: «Um 410»; Ridgway, B. S., Fifth Century Styles in Greek Sculpture (1981) 94-96: «Probably dates after 400 B. C.». - Unter den 11 Platten der Kentauiromachie wurde die mit dem Idol und den beiden Frauen auf H. und die Nymphetria bezogen. Das Idol, mit Fackeln, ist wohl das der → Enodia, das den thessalischen Schauplatz festlegt. Links davon greift die oft mit ihr verschmolzene Artemis mit Apollon in den Kampf ein (BM Nr. 523; Kenner a. O. Taf. 4; → Apollon 915* = Artemis 1345), falls die Rekonstruktion der Abfolge so angenommen werden kann. Das Eingreifen des Apollon ist gut mit dem Giebel von Olympia (3) zu vergleichen; das Auftreten der Artemis in der Nähe ihres Idols ist gerade für die Kunst des Reichen Stils typisch (Scheffold, K., Jdl 52, 1937, 45; Kenner a. O. 42). Für Artemis ist ferner charakteristisch, daß sie einer bedrängten jungen Frau zu Hilfe kommt. Obwohl das Bildschema der Frau am Idol von der Cassandra-Szene in der Iliupersis abhängt (vgl. etwa → Aias II 44*), wird in diesem Fall die Göttin eingreifen, Eurytion wird nicht wie Aias zum Ziel kommen. H. trägt Ohrringe. Ihr Körper ist, ähnlich wie oft bei Cassandra, weitgehend entblößt, um die Absicht des Eurytion anzudeuten. Die Nymphetria fleht mit weit ausgebreiteten Armen Hilfe herbei.

Wandmalerei

6. Verlorenes Wandbild des Mikon im Theseion auf der Agora von Athen. - Paus. 1, 17, 2; Lippold, G., RE XV 2 (1932) 1560 s. v. «Mikon 2». - 2. Viertel

is also shown. The woman carrying an oinochoe on the same vase is less certainly H.

In Roman art, apart from some clay architectural reliefs (28) and a type of coin (38), Pelops and H. appear on a few sarcophagi dating from the 2nd quarter to the end of the 3rd cent. A. D. (33-37). Each sarcophagus shows several scenes from the story, but the standard image of Pelops and H. in the chariot, so popular in the earlier period, does not appear here. Unlike the iconographic and literary tradition, the chariot-race is shown as a contest in a circus, so Pelops is alone in his chariot. The couple in the chariot appears, however, on a contemporary Attic sarcophagus (27), the only Attic sarcophagus decorated with the story. The chariot is shown here over the sea, and this scene, together with 23 where the marine element is also present, was taken by C. Robert (Bild und Lied [1881] 187 n. 35; Heldensage I 208-209) as a reflection of an earlier version of the story, according to which Oinomaos was king of Lesbos and Pelops, who was king of Argos, abducted H. and crossed the sea to the Peloponnese. It is very difficult to accept this early version which is attested only in Schol. Eur. Or. 990. The marine element on 23 and 27, as well as on a third work, 20, must be taken as indicating the final stage of the race somewhere near the Isthmus of Corinth, or on 27 the journey back, during which Myrtilos was thrown into the sea, wherever this occurred according to ancient belief. On another side of 27 we see a lovesick H. in a scene copying the representations of Phaidra (cf. Robert in Sarkel III 3, 391). Only in Roman art are explicit representations of Pelops and H. as a wedded couple seen. On 33 and 35 (and presumably also on 34) they are depicted on foot after the race, with H. modestly inclining her head and clasping hands with Pelops in the conventional formula of the dextrarum iunctio. The composition is borrowed from the wedding scenes frequently shown on Roman sarcophagi. On 36 Pelops is helping H. down from a loggia and on 37 the couple is embracing in a group which copies that of Eros and Psyche. The image on the coin 38, where Pelops is facing H. and is holding her hand, has also a nuptial character.

Etruscan renderings of the story are very original. On some alabaster urns of the 2nd and 1st cent. B. C. showing the couple in the chariot, H. clings to Myrtilos who is on foot and looks back at Pelops who grasps her (31), a composition regarded as deriving from a painting by Nicomachus representing the rape of Persephone (Mansuelli, G. A., Ricerche sulla pittura ellenistica [1950] 31). The exact meaning of the scene (Pelops abducting H. by force, or Myrtilos embracing her after the race as a prize for his help in Oinomaos' defeat) is not clear. Another relief urn (30) has a more conventional rendering of the couple in the chariot. H.'s total nakedness here (elsewhere, e.g. on 31, her dress leaves one breast bare) presumably emphasizes the erotic motif of the story. H. helping in the murder of her father and of Myrtilos on some other Etruscan urns of the 2nd cent. B. C. is without parallel in art.

MARIA PIPILI

HIPPODAMEIA II

(Ἰπποδάμεια, Hippodame, Hippodamia) Tochter des → Boutes in der vorherrschenden attischen Version, also eine Angehörige des Adelsgeschlechts der Butaden. Seltener und spät heißt sie auch Tochter des Lapithen (→ Lapithai) Atrax oder, vielleicht durch Verwechslung mit diesem, des → Adrastos. Die Sage von ihrer Hochzeit mit Perithous (→ Peirithoos), zu der auch die Kentauren geladen waren, und die sich anschließende Kentauromachie (→ Kentauroi) gehörte zu den ältesten griechischen Mythen. Der Kampf begann im Festsaal und endete nach einem Jahr als Feldschlacht. Damals gebar H. dem Perithous den → Polypoites. Dieser führte ein thessalisches Schiffskontingent nach Troja.

LITERARISCHE QUELLEN: Die Frau des Perithous ist in der ältesten Quelle (Hom. Il. 2, 742) und meist auch später H. genannt, wie auch die Frau des Pelops hieß (→ Hippodameia I). Bei Plut. Theseus 30, 3 heißt sie Deidameia, in Schol. Hom. Il. 1, 263 (in der einen Überlieferung) Hippoboteia. Ob auch Ischomache bei Prop. 2, 2, 9 ein Name für H. war, bleibe dahingestellt. Der Dichter könnte in kallimacheischer Weise auf eine wenig bekannte Sagenform aus dem Umkreis der Kentauromachie anspielen: Wie die Bildkunst zeigt (3-5. 8-13), raubten die Kentauren an der Hochzeit der H. auch andere weibliche Gäste. — Auf einem apulischen Vasenbild steht anstelle von H. Laodamia beigeschrieben (13), vielleicht eine Verwechslung des Malers mit der Frau im Halsbild. — Boutes als Vater der H.: Diod. 4, 70, 3; Schol. Hom. Il. 1, 263, vgl. Dindorf zu Schol. Hom. Od. 21, 295. Perithous hat in dieser Version seine Braut aus der Stadt seines Freundes Theseus. Dessen Mitwirkung an der thessalischen Kentauromachie ist bereits in der Ilias bekannt (1, 265). — Atrax als Vater der H.: Ov. her. 17, 248; Adrastus: Hyg. fab. 33, 3; Schol. Hom. Od. 21, 295. An dieser Odysseestelle ist von Freveltaten des Kentauren Eurytion (→ Kentauroi) im Haus des Perithous die Rede, aus denen die Kentauromachie entstanden sei. Diese ist im Zusammenhang bei Ov. met. 12, 210-235 geschildert. Der Kentaure heißt dort Eurytos, die Braut Hippodame.

BIBLIOGRAPHIE: Arias, P. E., RivistArch 4, 1955, 95-100. 116-137; Beazley, J. D., in Caskey/Beazley III 86-87; v. Geisau, H., KIPauly II (1967) 1161 s. v. «Hippodameia 2»; Höfer, O., MLI 2 (1886-90) 2671 s. v. «Hippodameia 2»; Schefold/Jung SB IV 264-271; Simon, E., «Versuch einer Deutung der Südmetopen des Parthenon», JdI 90, 1975, 100-120; Zwicker, J., RE VIII 2 (1913) 1728-29 s. v. «Hippodameia 2».

KATALOG

A. Hippodameia unter den Athenerkindern

1.* (= Antiochos I., = Ariadne 48, = Eriboia I) Volutenkrater, att. sf., sog. François-Vase. Florenz, Mus. Arch. 4209. Aus Chiusi. ABV 76, 1: Klitias; Para 29-30; Add 21; Simon/Hirmer, Vasen 73-74 mit Lit. Taf. 52. 54; neue, überzeugende Deutung des Frieses: Shapiro, H. A., Art and Cult under the Tyrants in Athens (1989) 146-147. — 570/65 v. Chr. — Seite B, Mündungsfries. Unter den 14 Jungen und Mädchen, die alle namentlich benannt sind, ist H. die Vorletzte. Ihr folgt Phaidimos, der soeben das Schiff verläßt, um sich dem von Theseus angeführten Zug anzuschließen. Vor ihr schreitet Daidochos (Daduchos), sie fassen einander an der Hand. H. trägt einen mit gefüllten Quadraten gemusterten Peplos. Ihr Haar, mit einer Binde, fällt teils auf den Rücken, teils ist es nach oben geschlagen. Hinter den Namen steht eine erstaunlich reiche Überlieferung der alten Geschlechter, Phylen und Demen von Attika. H. dürfte aus der Geschlechtertradition der Butaden stammen, die durch sie mit den Lapithen Thessaliens verschwägert waren. Umgekehrt war Lysidike, die ebenfalls in diesem Zug auftritt, eine Lapithin und wurde in Athen zur Stammutter der Philaiden. — Die beiden anderen sf. Vasen mit inschriftlich genannten Athenerkindern, eine Schale in München (ABV 163, 2) und eine Leidener Hydria (ABV 104, 126) haben den Namen H. nicht. Auch sonst wirken jene Namen im Vergleich mit dem Klitiaskrater «beliebig»; vgl. Herter, H., RE Suppl. XIII (1973) 1101 s. v. «Theseus».

B. Hippodameia in genealogischen Gemälden (?)

2. (= Boutes 2) Unter den bei Paus. 1, 26, 5 genannten Wandbildern des Butadengeschlechtes im Erechtheion und auf dem Pinax des Ismenias ebendort (Overbeck, SQ Nr. 1974), die genealogischen Inhalts waren, hat H. wohl nicht gefehlt. — Zu den Butaden vgl. Davies, J. K., Athenian Propertied Families (1971) 351-353.

C. Hippodameia an der Hochzeit mit Peirithoos (meist Kentauromachie, Ausnahme: 7)

Plastik

3.* Westgiebel des Zeustempels von Olympia, Gruppe H/I. — Olympia, Mus. — Ashmole, B./Yalouris, N., Olympia (1967) 18 Taf. 110-117; Ashmole, B., Architect and Sculptor in Classical Greece (1972) 48 Abb. 55-57 (mit Rückansicht: Zeichnung aus der Olympia-Publikation); Robertson, HGA 283: «Greek tragedy, acted in masks, must have been much like this»; Herrmann, H.-V. (Hrsg.), Die Olympia-Skulpturen (1987) Taf. 4. 8. 9 (neue Aufstellung, während in den früheren hier zitierten Publikationen die beiden Gruppen zuseiten des Apollon vertauscht sind). — Der Tempel war 456 v. Chr. vollendet. — H. mit Eurytion (vgl. Paus. 5, 10, 8) gehört unter die ausgestreckte Rechte des Apollon (also vom Betrachter aus l. von ihm). Perithous kommt unter seinem Schutz der H. zu Hilfe, indem er ein Schwert schwingt. Die Waffe seines nach der anderen Seite hin kämpfenden Freundes Theseus war eine mit beiden Händen ergriffene Axt. Er wendet sich gegen den Kentauren, der die Brautführerin rauben will. Deren Kopf ist nicht erhalten, während das Haupt der H. zu den besterhaltenen der beiden Giebel gehört. Sie trägt eine kunstvoll geschlungene Haube, aus der nur vorn das volle,

in der Mitte gescheitelte Haar tritt. Der Kopf ist etwas geneigt, in der vorgeschobenen Unterlippe drücken sich Schmerz und Anstrengung aus. Eurytion hatte sie von hinten angesprungen und faßt sie mit der Rechten um die r. Hüfte. Ihr Peplos hat sich dabei von der l. Schulter gelöst; er greift nach ihrer nackten Brust. H. sucht seinen Kopf mit dem Ellbogen wegzuschieben und mit der anderen Hand den Griff seiner Rechten zu lockern. Trotz ihrer prekären Lage bewahrt sie Ruhe und Würde, ähnlich wie die junge Frau in der l. anschließenden Dreiergruppe. Dagegen agieren die Frauen in der r. Giebelhälfte mit stärkerer Erregung.

4.* Südmetope 12 des Parthenon. Athen, Akropolis-Mus. — Brommer, F., Die Metopen des Parthenon (1967) 95-96 Taf. 200. 201 mit Lit. — «Ähnlich ist die Brautgruppe im Giebel von Olympia» (Brommer). Anstelle der l. ist hier die r. Brust entblößt, und der l. Ellbogen der Frau fährt nicht dem Kentauren ins Gesicht (sein Kopf ist in der Carrey-Zeichnung erhalten). Dennoch ist die Gruppe der olympischen (3) so ähnlich, daß ihre Entstehung nicht ohne jene denkbar ist. Simon 103-105 zieht daraus den Schluß, daß die Gruppe auch inhaltlich als H. und Eurytion zu interpretieren sei, zumal der Lapith in der l. anschließenden Metope 11 (Brommer a. O. Taf. 199 und Carrey-Zeichnung Simon 104) sehr wahrscheinlich Perithous benannt werden kann.

5.* Fries von Bassai-Phigalia. London, BM, Platte Nr. 524. — Kenner, H., Der Fries des Tempels von Bassai-Phigalia (1946) 42 Taf. 5; Hofkes-Brukker, Ch./Mallwitz, A., Der Bassai-Fries (1975) 55 H 4; Robertson, HGA 357-358; Fuchs, Skulptur 446-447: «Um 410»; Ridgway, B. S., Fifth Century Styles in Greek Sculpture (1981) 94-96: «Probably dates after 400 B. C.». — Unter den 11 Platten der Kentauromachie wurde die mit dem Idol und den beiden Frauen auf H. und die Nymphetria bezogen. Das Idol, mit Fackeln, ist wohl das der → Enodia, das den thessalischen Schauplatz festlegt. Links davon greift die oft mit ihr verschmolzene Artemis mit Apollon in den Kampf ein (BM Nr. 523; Kenner a. O. Taf. 4; → Apollon 915* = Artemis 1345), falls die Rekonstruktion der Abfolge so angenommen werden kann. Das Eingreifen des Apollon ist gut mit dem Giebel von Olympia (3) zu vergleichen; das Auftreten der Artemis in der Nähe ihres Idols ist gerade für die Kunst des Reichen Stils typisch (Schefold, K., JdI 52, 1937, 45; Kenner a. O. 42). Für Artemis ist ferner charakteristisch, daß sie einer bedrängten jungen Frau zu Hilfe kommt. Obwohl das Bildschema der Frau am Idol von der Cassandra-Szene in der Iliupersis abhängt (vgl. etwa → Aias II 44*), wird in diesem Fall die Göttin eingreifen, Eurytion wird nicht wie Aias zum Ziel kommen. H. trägt Ohringe. Ihr Körper ist, ähnlich wie oft bei Cassandra, weitgehend entblößt, um die Absicht des Eurytion anzudeuten. Die Nymphetria fleht mit weit ausgebreiteten Armen Hilfe herbei.

Wandmalerei

6. Verlorenes Wandbild des Mikon im Theseion auf der Agora von Athen. — Paus. 1, 17, 2; Lippold, G., RE XV 2 (1932) 1560 s. v. «Mikon 2». — 2. Viertel

5. Jh. v. Chr., gleichzeitig mit den Skulpturen vom Zeustempel in Olympia (3). – Paus. erwähnt nur Theseus, der schon einen Kentauren erlegt hatte; sonst sei der Kampf noch unentschieden gewesen. Die olympischen Skulpturen und Reflexe in der attischen Vasenmalerei (8–11) legen nahe, daß auch Frauen, besonders die Braut H., dargestellt waren. Neben einer Amazonomachie war das dritte Thema des Mikon im Theseion, das Paus. nicht ganz verstand (vgl. 1, 17, 3), der Sprung des Theseus ins Meer, wohl in Anwesenheit der Athenerkinder. Dann könnte H. ein zweites Mal dargestellt gewesen sein (vgl. 1).

7.* Neapel, Mus. Naz. 9044. Aus Pompeji, Haus des Gavius Rufus. – HBr Taf. 144; Lippold, Gemäldeskopien 127 Taf. 18, 98; Schefold, WP 170. – Um 70 n. Chr. – Als Gegenbild zu dem in den Vesuvstädten mehrmals dargestellten Theseus als Sieger über den Minotaurus (HBr Taf. 143; Lippold a. O. Taf. 18, 95) erscheint ein singuläres Thema: Der jungvermählte Perithous empfängt zusammen mit seiner Braut H. im Vestibül oder Atrium seines Palastes die zum Hochzeitsfest herbeikommenden Kentauren. Sie werden von ihrem König Eurytion angeführt, der wie Perithous ein Zepter trägt, sind bekränzt und bringen Geschenke. So steht zwischen Perithous und Eurytion, der ihm devot die Hand küßt, ein Fruchtkorb. Die im Rücken des Bräutigams stehende H. mit Stephane und Schleier und einem weißen Mantel über dem Chiton, eine kleine Dienerin an der Seite, scheint über die merkwürdigen Hochzeitsgäste nicht erfreut zu sein. Sie wendet sich ins Innere des Hauses.

Attisch rotfigurige Vasenmalerei

Sämtliche Bilder beziehen sich wie 3–6 auf die Kentaumachie am Hochzeitsfest, die sich durch die improvisierten Waffen und den z. T. inschriftlich genannten Perithous von anderen Kentaumachien (→ Kentauroi) unterscheidet. Beazley 87 stellt elf attische Vasen oder Fragmente zusammen, von denen vier in der Kentaumachie Frauen zeigen (Nr. 1, 5, 9, 11). Auf den großartigen Fragmenten Nr. 2 (Berlin, Niobidenmaler) und Nr. 10 (New York, Maler der New Yorker Kentaumachie) fehlen sie sicher nur wegen des Erhaltungszustandes. Auf den Schalen Beazley Nr. 6–8, die gut überliefert sind, fehlen sie aus Gründen der Komposition. Die Innenbilder der beiden Bostoner Schalen (Nr. 7, 8) zeigen zwar einen Kentauren beim Frauenraub, die Inschriften lauten jedoch Nessos und → Deianeira, der Herakles zu Hilfe kommt. Von den beiden Volutenkratern des Malers der wolligen Satyrn (Nr. 3, 4; ARV 613, 1, 2) in New York und Paris ist der letztere noch unpubliziert. Während in New York die Kentaumachie im Halsbild erscheint (Richter/Hall Taf. 98 oben), zieht sie sich beim Krater im Louvre über den Körper. Das anpassende Tübinger Fragment (Watzinger, KatTübingen Taf. 28) legt das Auftreten von Frauen nahe. Doch bleibt die Publikation abzuwarten. Der New Yorker Halsfries, der zu Recht immer wieder mit dem olympischen Westgiebel verglichen wird (3), zeigt wohl nur wegen der begrenzten Fläche keine Frauen. Nach alledem bleiben:

8. Kolonettenkrater. Florenz, Mus. Arch. 81268 (3997). – Beazley 87 Nr. 1; ARV 541, 1: Florenz-Maler; Add 256; FR Taf. 166, 2; Pfuhl, MuZ Abb. 489. – 470/60 v. Chr. – Hinter Theseus, der als Faustkämpfer auftritt, liegt eine Frau am Boden; ein Kentaure flieht im Hintergrund nach r., ein anderer greift mit einem Dinos als Waffe Theseus an, der ihm zuvorkommt. Die Liegende, mit entblößter l. Brust, streckt beide Arme weit aus. Die Entscheidung zwischen H. und einer beliebigen Teilnehmerin am Hochzeitsfest kann nicht gefällt werden.

9. Kelchkrater mit doppelten Friesen. Wien, Kunsth. Mus. IV 1026. – ARV 1087, 2: Nekyamaler; Add 327; Beazley 87 Nr. 5; CVA 3 Taf. 102, 1; 103, 2; Schauenburg, K., RM 79, 1972, 6 Taf. 7; Oakley, J., in AGRP (Amsterdam) 126 Nr. 39. – 460/50 v. Chr. – Seite B, oberer Fries. Der bärtige Mann l. oben auf A, der mit gezücktem Schwert zum Kampf eilt, ist inschriftlich als Perithous bezeichnet. Auf der anderen Seite der halb geöffneten Tür hinter dem Heros steht ein blutbespritzter Altar, der im Freien zu denken ist. Er gehört zum Fries auf B, der im Gegensatz zu A keinen mit einem Textilmuster versehenen Boden (Tepich? Klingenpolster?) zeigt. Die beiden Frauen l. von der Tür haben also den Festsaal verlassen und suchen am Altar Schutz. Sie können, obwohl Inschriften fehlen, als H. und Nymphetria gedeutet werden («Braut» auch im Text des CVA). Der weitausschreitenden Peplophoros H. folgt der Kentaure Eurytion, den sie mit der Rechten wegzudrängen sucht.

10. Volutenkrater. Ferrara, Mus. Naz. 5081. Aus Spina (T. 136A VP). – Das gesamte Grab ist von Arias 95–178 veröffentlicht, s. Abb. 26 für diese Szene. Beazley 87 Nr. 9; CVA 1 Taf. 13; Alfieri, Spina Abb. 144. – Um 400 v. Chr. – Seite A des ringsum sorgfältig bemalten Kraters zeigt die Iliupersis. B: Zentrum der Kentaumachie ist Eurytion mit struppigem Haupt- und Barthaar, der H. mit beiden Händen hochgehoben hat und mit ihr entfliehen will. Sie trägt einen dünnen Chiton und wendet sich mit ausgestrecktem r. Arm zu Perithous zurück, der dem Kentauren in die Flanke sticht. R. davon schwingt Theseus eine Doppelaxt gegen einen mit einer Spitzamphora ansprengenden Kentauren. Hinter diesem flieht eine Frau nach r., am l. Bildrand entspricht ihr eine nach l. Fliehende. – Die Gruppe Eurytion/H. ist nicht für diesen Mythos erfunden, sondern für den Raub der Deianeira durch → Nessos, vgl. Arias 124 Abb. 35 (die oben erwähnte Schale des Aristophanes in Boston).

11. Pelike, fr. Barcelona, Mus. Arch. o. Nr. – Beazley 87 Nr. 11; Buschor, E., FR III 54 Abb. 25 (Zeichnung); Trias de Arribas, G., Cerámicas Griegas de la Península Iberica (1968) 184–185 Taf. 101. – Um 400 v. Chr. – In der über das ganze Bildfeld verteilten Kentaumachie sind vier Frauen fragmentiert erhalten. Welche von ihnen als H. gedacht war, läßt sich nicht sagen. Sie tragen gemusterte Gewänder des Reichen Stiles.

Außerattisch rotfigurige Vasenmalerei

12. Fragmente eines faliskisch-apulisierten Gefäßes, wohl einer «Amphora». Tübingen, Univ. F

16. – Beazley 87 Nr. 12; EVP 102. – «Full 4th cent.» (Beazley). Wegen der fragmentarischen Erhaltung ist H. nicht auszumachen; Frauen waren dargestellt.

13. Kelchkrater, apul. London, BM F 272. – RVAp II 480–481, 14 Taf. 171, 1. 2: Laodameiamaler (nammengebendes Stück); Beazley 87 Nr. 13; Smith, H. R. W., Funerary Symbolism in Apulian Vase-Painting (1976) 187–188; Trendall, RFSIS 87 Abb. 195. – Zur Vase und zum Thema Kentauren in Unteritalien allgemein: Schauenburg, K., ÖJh 51, 1976/77, 34 Anm. 78 und passim. – Mittleres 4. Jh. v. Chr. – Seite A, Hauptbild. Peirithoos (so die Beischrift) und Theseus (Beischrift) kommen mit Schwert und Keule der Laodameia (Beischrift) zu Hilfe, die von einem bekränzten, einen Olivenzweig schulternden Kentauren von ihrem Brautthron entführt werden soll. Eine Situla unter dem Kentauren deutet seine Trunkenheit an. Nach beiden Seiten flieht je eine Frau. «New typology, unconnected with the old» (Beazley 87). Die Umwandlung der Typologie resultiert aus dem von vielen apulischen Vasen bekannten Brauch, die Braut auf einem Thron darzustellen. Der Name Laodameia anstelle von H. ist nach Smith eine Verwechslung mit der jungen Frau im oberen Fries, die vor ihrem Brautbett steht. Trendall und andere nennen jene jedoch Phaidra. Beide sind mit einem dünnen Chiton bekleidet, die untere trägt die Brautkrone in der Form eines kleinen Polos.

KOMMENTAR

Allen Darstellungen der Braut des Perithous ist die Gruppe vom Westgiebel des Zeustempels in Olympia künstlerisch überlegen (3). Sie hat noch auf die Metopen des Parthenon eingewirkt, in denen sie fast wörtlich wiederholt ist (4). Als Anregung für die Gruppe H./Eurytion auf 3 und 4 wird meist das Wandbild des Mikon im Theseion angesehen (6), zumal sie nicht rundplastisch, sondern reliefmäßig angelegt ist. Leider kommt die Vasenmalerei der Frühklassik (8, 9) dieser alten Hypothese nicht zu Hilfe, da sie andere Gruppen zeigt und da die Hauptwerke nur fragmentiert erhalten sind (Einleitung zu 8–11). Allgemein wurden für die Kentaumachie an der Hochzeit des Perithous mit H. große, anspruchsvolle Kratere bevorzugt, nicht nur in der Frühklassik, sondern auch später (10). Im Reichen Stil findet sich allerdings die Gruppe des olympischen Westgiebels (3) nicht mehr. Auf H. wurden nun andere Bildtypen übertragen, das der Cassandra am Palladion (5) und das der von Nessos gepackten Deianeira (10).

Die Wahl von Kratern für die Darstellung der Kentaumachie hat wohl mehrere Ursachen. Einmal brauchten die Kompositionen des Mikon (6), die hier nachwirkten, große Flächen. Andererseits hatte Trunkenheit zur Hybris der Kentauren und zu deren Bekämpfung geführt. So paßt das Thema als Warnung auf ein Gefäß, das im Zentrum des Symposion stand. Schließlich verkündeten die meist exportierten attischen Kratere den Ruhm des Theseus, der neben Perithous der Vorkämpfer in der thessalischen Kentaumachie war, und damit den Ruhm Athens. Theseus, der «götterähnliche Aigeussohn», war sicher auch für die Athener zuerst in der Ilias (1, 265) genannt, und zwar als Kämpfer gegen die Kentauren. Neben Theseus war die Athenerin H. eine Gestalt aus der Kentaumachie, ja sie war deren Anlaß. Daß ihre Abstammung aus Athen alte Überlieferung war, zeigt das Auftreten der H. unter den Athenerkindern auf dem Klitiaskrater (1). Auch dort ist sie gemeinsam mit Theseus dargestellt, wenn auch bei einem anderen Anlaß. Es ist möglich, daß H. zweimal im Theseion auftrat, denn die Fahrt des Theseus nach Kreta war auch Thema eines der dortigen mikonischen Wandbilder (zu 6). Auch in den genealogischen Gemälden des Butadengeschlechtes, dem H. angehörte, ist sie zu erwarten (2). Eine singuläre Darstellung, die wohl auf einem hellenistischen Gemälde beruht, ist in einem pompejanischen Wandbild (7) erhalten. Zwar ist die Ankunft von Hochzeitsgästen ein altes Thema, etwa auf dem Hauptfries des Klitiaskraters (1), dort zur Hochzeit des Peleus und der Thetis. Hier aber liegt kommendes Unheil in der Luft. H. mißtraut dem unterwürfigen Gebaren des Kentaurenkönigs und ist im Begriff, sich in das Innere des Hauses zurückzuziehen.

ERIKA SIMON

HIPPODAMEIA III

(Ἰπποδάμεια) Name einer Dienerin der Penelope (Hom. Od. 18, 182–183; Eust. 1843, 29 ad Hom. Od. 18, 182). Nach der Hypothese Dörigs eine der beiden Figuren im l. Teil von 1.

1. (= Eurykleia 2*. 3. 4 mit Lit., = Eurynome II 3) Campanarelief. Liste der erhaltenen Abdrücke bei v. Rohden/Winnefeld 110, Korrekturen bei Hiller, H., AA 87, 1972, 49 Anm. 9. – Dörig, J., Art antique, Coll. privées de Suisse romande (1975) Nr. 2A. – Matrizie frühkaiserzeitlich. – Im l. Teil des Reliefs zwei eng beieinander stehende, einander zugewandte Frauen in langem Chiton und Mantel. Der Chiton der l. Frau ist von ihrer r. Schulter gegliedert. S. dazu auch → Eurynome II, Kommentar. THOMAS GANSCHOW

HIPPODROMOS

(Ἰπποδρόμος) Son of Herakles (Apollod. bibl. 2 [162] 7, 8). See → Herakles 1696*.

JOHN BOARDMAN

HIPPOKAMPOS → LIMC Suppl.

Hippokles I

HIPPOKLES

(Ἱπποκλῆς) Cavalier troyen figuré sur un vase corinthien.

I. * (= Aias I 22* avec bibl., = Aias II 6 avec bibl., = Aineias 30 avec bibl., = Dolon I avec bibl.) Coupe corinthienne. Bruxelles, Bibl. Roy. De Grèce. - Lorber, Inchriften n° 34 pl. 7; Cook, R. M., BullAntBesch 58, 1983, 3 n° 3. - Cor. moyen: 590-580 av. J.-C. - A: au centre, duel à la lance entre Ajax, fils de Télamon (→ Aias I), et Enée, escorté chacun d'un cavalier tourné vers le centre et qui tient une deuxième monture. A g. le cavalier grec est Ajax, fils d'Oïlée (→ Aias II). A dr. le Troyen est H. (ἹΠΟΚΛΕΣ, courte tunique, bandeau dans les cheveux). Il tient les rênes de ses deux mains, ainsi qu'un fouet dans la main dr. Derrière lui, sous l'anse, Dolon s'enfuit vers la dr. en course agenouillée, le regard tourné vers la scène.

Absent des sources littéraires connues, le nom d'H. s'explique soit par une invention du peintre de vases, soit par une référence à une punition littéraire aujourd'hui disparue. JEAN-ROBERT GISLER (Ἱπποκρήνη, Ἱππου κρήνη) Nome di una fonte che sgorga poco al di sotto della vetta dell'Elicon, presso cui Esiodo ebbe la sua iniziazione alla poesia (Hes. theog. 5-34), e della sua ninfa (→ Athena/Minerva 439*); → Chariklo II). La tradizione che la fa sprizzare da un colpo di zoccolo di Pegaso (Hesych. s.v. Ἱππουκρήνη; Paus. 9, 31, 3; Prop. 3, 3, 2; → Pegasos) è probabilmente tarda, posteriore all'identificazione del favoloso cavallo con la costellazione dell'Hippos (→ Astra, sez. I). Secondo Euripide (Eur. El. 474-475)

HIPPOKRENE

Pegaso aveva invece fatto sgorgare la fonte Peirene a Corinto.

Nelle sue acque si bagna Athena in compagnia della ninfa Chariklo, quando viene scorta involontariamente dal figlio di questa, Tiresia (→ Teiresias), che per punizione viene accecato, ricevendo però doti profetiche (Kall. h. 5).

BIBLIOGRAFIA: Meyer, E., KIPanly II (1967) 1172 s.v. «Hippokrene»; Sittig, E., RE VIII 2 (1913) 1853-1856 s.v. «Hippokrene»; Weizsäcker, P., ML I 2 (1886-90) 2679 s.v. «Hippokrene».

I. (= Athena/Minerva 439*, = Chariklo II I) Piatto d'argento. Venezia, Mus. Arch. Br 281. Da Castelvint di Mel (Val Mor, in provincia di Belluno). - Fine IV-inizio VI sec. d. C. - Al centro Minerva; mentre si bagna in compagnia di due ninfe viene scorta da Tiresia, il cui busto appare sullo sfondo. Nella ninfa di d., seminuda, che si appoggia con la mano s. ad un'anfora e tende la d. in gesto di sorpresa e deprecazione, va certamente identificata la ninfa della fonte.

Si tratta dell'unica rappresentazione figurata del mito giunta a noi; si presenta come una puntuale illustrazione dell'inno di Callimaco. FULVIO CANCELANI

HIPPOLOCHOS

(Ἱππολόχος, Hippolochus) Trojan, son of Antimachos, killed by → Agamemnon (Hom. Il. II, 122-147).

I. (= Diomedes I 19*, = Glaukos V 6 with further refs.) Amphora, Chalcidian bf. Melbourne, Mus. 1643/4. - Inscriptions P.; Schefold, SB II 209 fig. 287-540-530 B.C. - H. defends Charops who has been struck down by Diomedes. Other duels between Glaukos and Menestheus, Odysseus and Me... Names inscribed.

HIPPOLYTE V

(Ἱππολύτη) Weibliche Figur in einer Rüstungsszene auf I.

I. (= Demodokos III 1*, = Glaukos VI 3 mit Lit.) Amphora, chalkidisch sf. Paris, Cab. Méd. 203. Aus Vulci. - Um 530 v. Chr. - H. (ἹΠΠΟΛΥΤΗ) stehend im Profil nach l., bekleidet mit einem gegürteten roten Chiton, in der Rechten Speer, mit der Linken einen auf dem Boden stehenden Schild haltend; in den Haaren ein Band erteilt. Ihr gegenüber → Demodokos (III) beim Anlegen der Beinschienen. Eine Zuweisung der hier dargestellten Figuren zu einem bestimmten Mythos ist nicht möglich.

THOMAS GANSCHOW

HIPPOLYTE I → Amazonas 67. 233. 240. 242. 244. 767

HIPPOLYTE II → Hesperides I

HIPPOLYTE III → Antinoe 2, → Peliades, → Peliou athla

HIPPOLYTE IV

(Ἱππολύτη) Beigeschriebener Name einer möglicherweise mythologischen Figur auf I.

I.* Kolonnettenkrater, fr., mittelkor. Palermo, Banco di Sicilia, Fondazione Mormino 755. - Amyx, CVP 319, C-1; 567, 42: related to the Detroit P.; Tusa, V., in Odeon e altri «monumenti» archeologici (1971) 26 Nr. 10 Taf. 6c; Benson, J. L., AJA 73, 1969, 119 Taf. 42, 37. - 590-570 v. Chr. - Erhalten sind l. mehrere Pferdefüße (von acht Vorderbeinen?) nach r., r. Unterteile und Füße von fünf stehenden, nach l. den Pferden zugewandten menschlichen Figuren in Chiton (die zweithinterste mit Mantel darüber). Namensbeischriften: JE vor der vordersten Person (könnte auch zu einem Pferd gehören, vgl. Lorber, Inchriften Nr. 126 Taf. 24); HΙΠΠΟΛΥΤΑ, zur vordersten der vier anschließenden Figuren gehörig. Als dargestellte Szene ist ein Hochzeitszug oder die Ausfahrt eines Kriegers mit Viergespann zu denken, doch könnten die Hufe auch zu gerittenen Pferden gehören.

Zur Identifizierung der H. benannten Frau mit einer der bekannten H.s bestehen keine Anhaltspunkte: ganz unwahrscheinlich sind die Amazone (H. I) und die Hesperide (H. II); die Frau des Akastos (H. III) wäre bei den Leichenspielen für Pelias denkbar (→ Peliou athla; Simon/Hirmer, Vasen Taf. 39), doch ist keine Beziehung der Szene auf I zu deren Ikonographie greifbar. Zu willkürlich gewählten Namen heroischen Klangs auf korinthischen Vasen → Dion, Kommentar, und Amyx, CVP 553-554. PIERRE MÜLLER

HIPPOLYTOS I

(Ἱππόλυτος, Hippolytus) Fils de Thésée (→ Theseus) et de l'Amazone → Antiope (II) ou → Hippolyte (I). Passionné de chasse, il honore → Artemis et méprise → Aphrodite qui, pour se venger, suscite dans le cœur de Phèdre (→ Phaidra), sa marâtre, un violent amour pour H. Mais celui-ci repousse ses avances, et Phèdre, désespérée, se tue après avoir accusé H. auprès de Thésée. A la prière de ce dernier, → Poseidon provoque la mort d'H., qui est ensuite ressuscité par → Asklepios, puis transporté par Artémis à Aricie où on l'identifie à Virbius.

SOURCES LITTÉRAIRES: Peu répandue avant le V^e s., la légende d'H. semble n'être, jusqu'à cette époque, qu'une fable locale, liée au sanctuaire de Trézène, mais pour laquelle nous n'avons aucune source directe. Le seul indice littéraire permettant de supposer une connaissance ancienne de la légende ailleurs qu'à Trézène est donné par Apollod. bibl. 3 (121) 10, 3 selon lequel on parlait déjà, dans les Ναυπάκτια (Davies EGF 10^e), de la résurrection d'H. par Asklepios. Il faut attendre la tragédie attique du V^e s. pour avoir une version complète de l'histoire d'H.: Euripide lui consacre deux pièces, que l'on distinguera plus tard, la première, dont il ne subsiste qu'environ 50 vers, sous le nom d'Ἱππόλυτος καλυπτόμενος (*TGF*² fig. 428-447), la seconde, créée en 428 av. J.-C. et entièrement conservée, sous le nom d'Ἱππόλυτος στεφανίτης ou Στεφανηφόρος; à peu près à la même époque, Sophocle écrit une Φαίδρα dont ne subsistent qu'environ 25 vers (TGF IV F 677-693). Le sujet est traité ensuite par Kall. fig. 190 Pf., Asklep. Trag., FGH 12 F 28, Diod. 4, 62; enfin par Ovide puis Sénèque qui, en dehors de quelques allusions faites ailleurs dans la littérature latine, restent nos sources majeures pour l'époque romaine.

H. est invariablement donné comme le fils de Thésée; en revanche les traditions varient quant au nom de sa mère, une Amazone, anonyme chez Eur. Hipp. 10. 307-310. 351-352. 581-582 et Ov. her. 4, 117-118, mais nommée, le plus souvent, Antiopé (Hyg. fab. 250; Sen. Phaëdra 227. 927-929; Plut. Theseus 28, 2) ou, plus rarement, Hippolyté (Stesich., Page PMG frg. 193, 25-26; argum. Eur. Hipp.; Tzetz. Lykoph. 1329).

Les sources s'accordent à présenter H. comme un amoureux de la chasse et de la nature (Eur. Hipp. 18. 51-52. 1397; Ov. her. 4, 38-43. 81-83. 103-104. 170-172; Sen. Phaëdra 1-84, 483-520), un dresseur de chevaux (Eur. Hipp. 110-112. 1131-1133; Sen. Phaëdra 464), chaste (Eur. Hipp. 1003-1006; Sen. Phaëdra 231-232. 237. 704-705. 923. 1195), voire misogyne (Eur. Hipp. 616-617. 664-668; Sen. Phaëdra 230. 243. 559-579. 687). Étroitement lié à Artémis (Eur. Hipp. 54-56. 58-60. 84-85. 1092. 1394. 1397. 1441; Sen. Phaëdra 424-425), il aime chasser en compagnie de la déesse (Eur. Hipp. 17-18. 1093. 1397) et fleurir ses autels (Eur. Hipp. 73-83. 1137-1139). Cet attachement à Artémis le conduit à mépriser le culte d'Aphrodite (Eur. Hipp. 10-14. 21-22. 99-113) qui, pour assouvir sa vengeance, provoque dans le cœur de Phèdre une violente passion pour H. (Eur. Hipp. 21-28. 1400-1406). Les sources divergent sur la façon dont cet amour est révélé à H. Dans le second Hippolyte d'Euripide, Phèdre tente de lutter contre sa passion et c'est contre son gré que sa nourrice fait l'aveu à H. qui la repousse, horrifié (Eur. Hipp. 581-606); Phèdre se pend, après avoir écrit une lettre qui accuse H. auprès de Thésée (Eur. Hipp. 856-880. 1057-1058). Chez Sénèque, Phèdre déclare elle-même son amour à H., qui tire son épée pour la frapper, puis s'éloigne en jetant son arme (Sen. Phaëdra 706-718); Phèdre dénonce ensuite H. auprès de Thésée et ne se suicide qu'après la mort d'H. Ovide (her. 4) adopte lui aussi la version d'une confession directe de Phèdre, sous la forme d'une lettre qu'elle adresse à H. Il est probable que déjà dans le premier Hippolyte d'Euripide Phèdre déclarait elle-même son amour à H. (sur cette pièce, voir Barrett, W. S., Euripides Hippolytos [1964] 11-12. 15-45; Webster, T. B. L., The Tragedies of Euripides [1967] 64-71; Zwierlein, O., Senecas Phaëdra und ihre Vorbilder [1982]).

Apprenant, soit de la bouche de Phèdre, soit par la lettre qu'elle lui laisse avant de se tuer, qu'H. a tenté de lui faire violence, Thésée frappe son fils d'exil (Eur. Hipp. 973-975) et demande à Poséidon, qui lui avait accordé trois vœux, de châtier H. (Eur. Hipp. 887-890; Sen. Phaëdra 942-958; Ov. met. 15, 504-505). Sur les circonstances mêmes de sa mort, toutes les versions concordent: tandis qu'H. conduit son char au bord de la mer, un taureau surgit des flots, effraie les chevaux et H., traîné par son attelage, est mortellement blessé (Eur. Hipp. 1201-1248; Verg. Aen. 7, 765-767; Ov. fast. 6, 740-745; met. 15, 506-529; Hyg. fab. 47; Sen. Phaëdra 1007-1104).

La légende selon laquelle H. aurait été ressuscité par Asclépios semble ancienne (voir plus haut). Les sources plus récentes qui la mentionnent précisent généralement qu'Artémis avait intercédé auprès d'Asclépios et qu'elle aurait ensuite transporté H. en Italie, à Aricie, où il aurait pris le nom de Virbius (Kall. frg. 190 Pf.; Hyg. fab. 49. 251; Verg. Aen. 7, 767-777; Ov. met. 15, 533-546; Paus. 2, 27, 4).

H. était honoré comme un dieu à Trézène (Eur. Hipp. 1423-1425) où il avait un temple et recevait un culte régulier (Paus. 2, 32, 1). A Athènes, Paus. 1, 22, 1 mentionne la présence d'un μνημα d'H. sur la pente sud de l'Acropole, près de l'Asclépieion et d'un temple de Thémis, et diverses sources, littéraires (Eur. Hipp. 30-33; Schol. Eur. Hipp. 30; Diod. 4, 62, 2) ou épigraphiques, attestent l'existence, dans le même secteur, d'un temple d'Aphrodite ἐφ' Ἰππολύτῳ (IG I² 310, 280) ou ἐν Ἰππολυτείῳ (IG I² 324, 69). Cf. etiam IG I² 190 = LSCG 11A, 5.

BIBLIOGRAPHIE: Barrett, W. S., Euripides Hippolytos (1964); Burkert, W., Structure and History (1979) 111-122; Croisille, J.-M., Poésie et art figuré de Neron aux Flaviens (1982) 78-100 pl. 26-46; Fauth, W., Hippolytos und Phaëdra (1969); Herter, H., RESuppl. XIII (1973) 1183-1197; idem, Kl. Schriften 119-156; Kalkmann, A., «Über Darstellungen der Hippolytos-Sage», AA 41, 1883, 37-80. 105-154 pl. 6-9; Linant de Bellefonds, P., Sarcophages attiques de la nécropole de Tyr. Une étude iconographique (1985) 127-164 pl. 45-62; Schefold/Jung, SB IV 286-290; Séchan, L., «La légende d'Hippolyte dans l'Antiquité», REG 24, 1911, 105-151; Séchan, Etudes 323-340; Stoll, H. W., ML 1 2 (1886-90) 2681-2688 s.v. «Hippolytos 5»; Tschiedel, H. J., Phaëdra und Hippolytos (1969).

CATALOGUE

I. Hippolyte seul

Sont exclues du catalogue les images de chasseurs (en particulier celles des gemmes) qu'en l'absence de contexte précis on ne peut rapporter avec une quasi-certitude à H.

Ronde bosse

1. Statue attribuée à Timothéos. Trézène. Connue par Paus. 2, 32, 4. - Overbeck, SQ n° 1329. - IV^e s. av. J.-C. - Pausanias mentionne à Trézène une statue d'Asclépios, œuvre de Timothéos, dont les Trézéniens disaient qu'il ne s'agissait pas d'Asclépios mais d'une image d'H.

Sarcophages

2. (= 58 avec bibl., = 16) Petit côté dr. Vatican, Mus. Greg. Prof. 10400. - Vers 210 ap. J.-C. - H. (?) nu, le manteau flottant au vent, à cheval vers la g., brandit une arme de la main dr. levée en arrière.

3. (= 70 avec bibl.) Petit côté dr. Split, Mus. Arch. D 29. De Salona. - Vers 300 ap. J.-C. - H. nu, debout à côté de son cheval qu'il tient par la bride, s'appuie de la main g. sur sa lance.

Monnaies impériales de Trézène (Argolide)

4. AE, Commode (180-192), Septime Sévère (193-211). - Imhoof-Blumer/Gardner, NumCommPaus (repr. 1964) 162 n° 7. - Rv. H. debout, le manteau sur les épaules, s'appuie sur une lance de la main g.

5. AE, Commode. - Imhoof-Blumer/Gardner, NumCommPaus 48 n° 7 pl. M VIII - Rv. H. nu debout de face, accoudé à g. sur un tronc d'arbre, s'appuie de la main dr. sur une lance; un chien à ses pieds.

6. AE, Commode. - Imhoof-Blumer/Gardner, NumCommPaus 48 n° 7. - Rv. H., accompagné d'un chien, conduit un cheval.

II. Hippolyte enfant

7. (= Amazones 782* avec bibl., = Apollon 941, = Artemis 1391, = Herakles 2807* avec bibl.) Cratère en calice apulien f. r. Bâle, Antikenmus. S 34. - RVAP II 501 n° 64: p. de Darius; Schefold, SB IV 218-219 fig. 269. - 340-330 av. J.-C. - Registre sup.: → Pan, → Apollon, Artémis, Aphrodite et → Eros. Registre inf.: devant le roi → Skythes comparait → Rhodope; à ses côtés, → Herakles, à qui elle tend une tablette, puis Antiopé qui pose la main sur l'épaule du petit H. L'enfant est drapé dans un manteau, sa chevelure bouclée est ceinte d'un bandeau. Tous les personnages sont accompagnés d'inscr.

III. Hippolyte à la chasse

Sont exclues du catalogue les scènes de chasse (en particulier sur les sarcophages) dans lesquelles, en l'absence de contexte mythologique particulier ou d'indice précis, il est impossible d'identifier H. avec une quasi-certitude.

Mosaïque

8.* (= Adonis 32, = Aktaion 125) Mosaïque. Antakya, Mus. Hatay 1016. D'Antioche (Yakto). - Levi, Antioch 338 fig. 136 pl. 78c. - Milieu du V^e s. ap. J.-C. - Autour d'un médaillon avec → Megalopsychia, scènes de chasse mettant six héros (inscr.) aux prises avec divers animaux: → Meleagros, Adonis, → Narkissos, Tirésias (→ Teiresias), Aktéon, et H. (tunique à manches, manteau et bottes) attaquant à la lance un animal disparu.

Sarcophages de marbre romains

9.* (= 55 avec bibl.) a) * Petit côté g. b) * Petit côté dr. Pise, Camposanto. - 180-190 ap. J.-C. - a) H. nu, le manteau rejeté dans le dos, debout à côté de son cheval qu'il tient par la bride de la main g., s'appuie de la main dr. sur une lance. A g. s'avance un serviteur, un filet sur l'épaule. b) H. nu, le manteau dans le dos, appuyé de la main dr. sur une lance, regarde un chasseur qui s'éloigne vers la g., tenant un chien en laisse. Voir aussi 17. 55-63. 65-67.

Sarcophages de marbre attiques

10.* (= 87 avec bibl., = 119) Côté postérieur. Agrigente, Duomo. - 2^e quart du III^e s. ap. J.-C. - Cinq chasseurs menacent de leurs armes (lances, épée, massue, pierre) un sanglier attaqué par des chiens. Un seul chasseur est à cheval et pourrait, pour cette raison, être identifié comme H.

11.* (= 86 avec bibl., = 118) Côté postérieur. Tyr 330. - 2^e quart du III^e s. ap. J.-C. - Trois cavaliers, parmi lesquels il est difficile d'identifier plus particulièrement H., pointent leurs lances contre un sanglier qui surgit de la dr. Trois autres chasseurs, à pied, armés d'une massue, d'une hache ou d'une pierre, et accompagnés de chiens, se précipitent sur l'animal.

12. (= 88 avec bibl., = 117) Côté postérieur. Leningrad, Ermitage A 432. - 2^e quart du III^e s. ap. J.-C. -

Scène de chasse au sanglier comme sur 11, avec quatre cavaliers, parmi lesquels sans doute H., et deux chasseurs à pied. Un autre chasseur, renversé par le sanglier, se protège derrière un bouclier.

13.* (= 52 avec bibl., = 81, = 98) Côté postérieur. Marsa Susa-Apollonia (Libye), Mus. D'Apollonia. - Fin du 2^e quart du III^e s. ap. J.-C. - Un sanglier surgit de la dr., attaqué à la lance par un cavalier nu, le manteau flottant au vent, probablement H. Un autre cavalier, en exomis, s'éloigne vers la dr. Trois chasseurs à pied et plusieurs chiens complètent la scène.

14. (= 53 avec bibl., = 99) a) Côté postérieur. b) Petit côté dr. Arles, Mus. Lap. Art Païen P. 541. De Trinquetaille. - Vers 250-260 ap. J.-C. - a) Un sanglier surgit de la dr., attaqué par trois chiens et par deux chasseurs, l'un à pied, l'autre à cheval, sans doute H., qui brandit une lance. Deux autres chasseurs à pied suivent à g. b) Deux chasseurs, l'un à pied, l'autre à cheval, sans doute H., qui brandit une lance, poursuivent deux cerfs vers la dr.

IV. Hippolyte et Artémis

A. Hippolyte devant l'autel ou la statue d'Artémis

DOCUMENTS GRECS

Gemme

15. (= Artemis 1450* avec bibl.) Cornaline. Munich, Münzslg. A 1520. - III^e s. av. J.-C. - H. nu, la chlamyde rejetée dans le dos, est debout, jambes croisées, une main sur sa lance, l'autre sur la hanche, devant un rocher surmonté d'un petit édifice abritant une statue d'Artémis. Aux pieds d'H., deux chiens.

DOCUMENTS D'ÉPOQUE IMPÉRIALE

Sarcophages de marbre attiques

Voir 25-26. 28. 30.

Sarcophages de marbre romains

16. (= 2, = 58 avec bibl., = Artemis/Diana 65* avec bibl.) Petit côté g. Vatican, Mus. Greg. Prof. 10400. De Rome, Via Latina. - Vers 210 ap. J.-C. - H. nu vers la dr., le manteau dans le dos, s'appuie de la main g. sur une lance et fait, de la dr., une offrande sur un autel placé devant un pilastre surmonté de la statue d'Artémis. Un autre chasseur s'éloigne vers la g.

17. Face antérieure. Los Angeles, marché (en 1982). - Koch, G., dans Andreae, B., Symposium über die antiken Sarkophage Pisa 1982 = MarbWPr 1984, 30-31 fig. 3. - 220-230 ap. J.-C. - A g., H. de face, nu, le manteau sur l'épaule, une lance dans la main g., fait de la dr. une offrande sur un autel placé devant une statuette d'Artémis dressée sur un rocher. A g. de l'autel, un autre chasseur. Au centre du relief, scène de chasse au sanglier avec H. à cheval comme sur 55, mais Virtus est remplacée par un chasseur courant. A l'extrémité dr., deux autres chasseurs.

18.* (= 61 avec bibl., = Artemis/Diana 65a) Petit côté g. Florence, Uff. 98. - 230-240 ap. J.-C. - H. de face, nu, le manteau sur les épaules, une lance dans la main g., fait une offrande sur un autel où brûle une flamme. Ag., sur un rocher, la statue d'Artémis.

Gemmes

19.* (= Artemis/Diana 50 avec bibl.) Calcédoine. Vienne, Kunsth. Mus. IX 1919. - I^{er} s. ap. J.-C. - H. nu, le manteau jeté sur l'épaule, une main sur la hanche, l'autre tenant deux lances, devant une statue d'Artémis dressée sur un rocher devant lequel ont été placées des offrandes: guirlande, hure, tête de cerf. Deux chiens aux pieds d'H.

20.* Grenat. New York, MMA 21.88.47. - Richter, MetMusGems n° 419 pl. 52. - H. comme sur 19 mais avec une seule lance, devant une statuette d'Artémis dressée sur un rocher.

21. (= Artemis/Diana 51* avec bibl.) Pâte de verre. Hanovre, Kestner-Mus. K 1001. - Époque augustéenne. - H. de trois quarts dos, nu, le manteau jeté sur l'épaule, deux lances en main, devant une statuette d'Artémis. A ses pieds, un chien.

22. Prase. Hanovre, Kestner-Mus. K. 1002. - AGD IV n° 984 pl. 131. - I^{er} s. ap. J.-C. - H. nu, le manteau sur l'épaule et l'avant-bras, devant un édifice dressé sur un rocher orné d'une hure, contre lequel sont appuyées deux lances. A ses pieds, un chien.

23. Nicolo. Brunswick, Mus. - AGD III n° 126 pl. 16. - I^{er}-II^e s. ap. J.-C. - H. nu, le manteau rejeté dans le dos, deux lances en main, devant un édifice dressé sur un rocher. A ses pieds, un chien.

B. Artémis intervient à la mort d'Hippolyte

Voir 123.

C. Artémis et Hippolyte héroïsés

Voir 126.

D. Interprétation incertaine

24. (= Artemis/Diana 343 avec bibl.) Peinture murale. Pompéi VI 9, 2, Casa di Meleagro. - Époque de Vespasien. - Artémis debout en compagnie d'un chasseur assis, H. ou Méléagre, près duquel surgit la tête d'un sanglier.

V. Hippolyte et Phèdre

A. Allusion au «mal d'amour» de Phèdre

Sarcophages de marbre attiques

25.* Face antérieure. Beyrouth, Mus. Nat. 447. De Tyr. - Chéhab, M., BullMusBeyrouth 21, 1968, 45-49 pl. 27-30; Koch/Sichtermann, RömSark 393-394 fig. 425; Linant de Bellefonds 17-18. 127-133. 159. 161 pl. 45. - 3^e quart du II^e s. ap. J.-C. - La représentation est divisée en deux groupes: à g., Eros agenouillé sur un cippe bande son arc dans la direction que lui indi-que Aphrodite, debout derrière lui. Sa flèche vise Phèdre, assise vers la g., le visage incliné, drapée dans un manteau rabattu sur ses cheveux; elle abandonne son bras à la nourrice qui se détourne, la main dr. levée. Cette scène est séparée de la suivante par un petit édifice sur lequel un garçon est en train de clouer des bois de cerf. H., assis vers la dr., une main posée sur sa lance, se retourne pour surveiller cette opération; il n'est vêtu que d'un manteau jeté sur ses jambes. Près de lui, un chien; plus loin à dr., un serviteur décharge un sanglier d'une mule.

26. (= Ariadne 70 [petit côté dr.] avec bibl.) Face antérieure. Istanbul, Mus. Arch. 125. De Thessalonique. - Linant de Bellefonds 128-129. 159. 161 pl. 46, 1. - Dernier quart du II^e s. ap. J.-C. - Même représentation que sur 25, avec l'adjonction de deux personnages: dans le groupe de g. une servante à côté de Phèdre, dans la partie dr. un compagnon d'H.

Des fr. de quatre autres sarcophages peuvent être rattachés au même type iconographique:

27.* Fr. de face antérieure. Istanbul, Mus. Arch. 1415. - Mendel, Sculpt I n° 22; Koch/Sichtermann, RömSark 393-394; Linant de Bellefonds 129 pl. 47, 2. - 2^e moitié du II^e s. ap. J.-C. - H., assis vers la dr. sur un tabouret, les cuisses couvertes d'une draperie qui tombe de l'épaule g., et le petit serviteur occupé à clouer les bois de cerf.

28.* Fr. de côté postérieur. Disparu. Des environs de Sparte. - SarkRel III 2 n° 147c pl. 45; Koch/Sichtermann, RömSark 393; Linant de Bellefonds 130-131. 160-161 pl. 46, 2. - 220-230 ap. J.-C. - Le dessin de Vietty (SarkRel pl. 45) montre le tiers inférieur d'une représentation identique à 25.

29. Fr. de face antérieure. Antalya, Mus. A 702. - Wiegartz, H., Gnomon 37, 1965, 616 n° 21; Giuliano, A./Palma, B., La maniera ateniese di età romana. I maestri dei sarcofagi attici (1978) 21 n° 3 pl. 13, 31; Koch/Sichtermann, RömSark 393-394; Linant de Bellefonds 129. 160 pl. 47, 3. - 170-180 ap. J.-C. - Ne subsistent qu'Aphrodite et Eros agenouillé sur une haute base, et un pied de Phèdre.

30. Fr. de face antérieure. Athènes, Mus. Nat. 2087. - SarkRel III 2 n° 145 pl. 45; Koch/Sichtermann, RömSark 393-394; Linant de Bellefonds 130. - Sont conservés la tête de la nourrice et le haut du petit édifice avec la main du garçon qui cloue le trophée de chasse.

31. Fr. de face antérieure. Athènes, Mus. Acropole 3305. - SarkRel III 2 n° 148; Walter, RelAkr n° 374; Koch/Sichtermann, RömSark 393-394. - Ne subsistent que la tête et le haut du corps de la nourrice avec son bras dr. levé.

32.* (= 91, = 97) Face antérieure. Tyr 4230. - Koch/Sichtermann, RömSark 395; Linant de Bellefonds 25-26. 151-152. 160 pl. 59, 1; Chéhab, M., BullMusBeyrouth 35, 1985, 527-528 pl. 97b-98-99. - Fin du 2^e quart du III^e s. ap. J.-C. - Phèdre est assise dans la partie dr., entourée de ses compagnes. Assise vers la dr., elle se retourne pour regarder la tablette que lui présente une servante. Un petit Eros lève une torche enflammée contre sa poitrine. A dr., la nourrice soulève un pan de l'himation rabattu sur les cheveux

Hippolytos I 28

de Phèdre, et deux femmes conversent. Le reste du relief, vers la g., est occupé par H. et quatre chasseurs, accompagnés de chiens et de chevaux. H. est vraisemblablement le jeune homme le plus proche du groupe de Phèdre: nu, la chlamyde rejetée dans le dos, chaussé de bottes, il tient son cheval par la bride.

33. Deux fr. de face antérieure. Woburn Abbey. - SarkRel III 2 n° 156 pl. 49; Koch/Sichtermann, RömSark 395. - 2^e quart du III^e s. ap. J.-C. - Sur l'un des fr.: Phèdre assise, soutenue par la nourrice à g. et une servante à dr., qui lui soulève son voile; le groupe est entouré par deux chasseurs: celui de g., qui détourne son visage, est peut-être H. Sur le second fr. sont conservés quatre autres chasseurs.

34. Face antérieure fr. Rome, Villa Medici. - SarkRel III 2 n° 155 pl. 49; Cagiano de Azevedo, M., Le Antichità di Villa Medici (1951) n° 53 pl. 27, 40; Koch/Sichtermann, RömSark 395. - A dr., Phèdre assise avec trois compagnes; à côté de son siège, un petit Eros. Au centre, H. debout à côté de son cheval au milieu de ses compagnons de chasse. Très restauré.

B. Hippolyte et Phèdre: allusion à la déclaration d'amour, sans intervention directe de la nourrice

Mosaïques

35.* Nea Paphos, Maison de Dionysos. - Nicolaou, K., RDAC 1963, 68; Heliades, G. S., The House of Dionysos (1980) 30-31; Balty, J., dans ANRW II 12/2 (1981) 420 pl. 16, 3; Michaelides, D., Cypriot Mosaics (1987) 17 n° 12 pl. 21. - 2^e moitié du III^e s. ap. J.-C. - Ag. H. de face, nu (bottes, manteau sur l'épaule et le bras g.), la lance dans la main g., écarte sa main dr. qui tient un diptyque. A ses pieds, un chien. A dr. Phèdre, drapée et voilée, est assise sur un trône, le visage incliné, le bras dr. accoudé sur le dossier du siège. Un Eros, qui s'éloigne à dr., tend vers elle une torche enflammée.

36. Détruite. De Pitney (Somerset). - Smith, D. J., «The Mosaic Pavements», dans Rivet, A. L. F. (éd.), The Roman Villa in Britain (1969) pl. 3, 3 avec bibl. p. 124; idem, «Mythological Figures and Scenes in Romano-British Mosaics», dans Munby, J./Henig, M. (éd.), Roman Life and Art in Britain I = British Archaeological Reports 41/1 (1977) 151 n° 143-144 pl. 6, 27. -

IV^e s. ap. J.-C. - Autour d'un médaillon avec → Dionysos/Bacchus sont disposés huit trapèzes portant chacun un personnage. Dans l'un d'eux, Phèdre est assise vers la dr., la main g. levée vers le visage, vêtue d'une draperie qui descend des épaules et ne lui couvre que le bas du corps; à ses pieds, un diptyque jeté sur le sol. Dans le trapèze contigu, à dr., H. nu, un manteau flottant dans le dos, s'élance vers la dr., tête retournée, une lance à la main g.: il fait de la main dr. un geste de refus. Dans les autres trapèzes: → Mercurius(?), Ménades (→ Mainades), Tirésias(?). Aux quatre angles, bustes des Vents (→ Venti).

Reliefs divers

37.* Urne romaine de marbre. Londres, BM 2382. - Robert, SarkRel III 2, 194; Smith, BMSculpture III n° 2382; Koch/Sichtermann, RömSark 53 fig. 54; Sinn, F., Stadtrömische Marmorurnen (1987) 245-246 n° 636 pl. 93e. - 150-180 ap. J.-C. - Ag., H. à demi nu est assis vers la dr. sur un rocher mais détourne le visage en levant la main dr.; il tient une tablette dans sa main g. A ses pieds, un chien; devant lui, deux compagnons de chasse. Symétriquement, dans la partie dr., Phèdre est assise, défaillante, sur une chaise à haut dossier, entourée par la nourrice, qui lui désigne H., et par une servante qui lui saisit le bras. Un Eros est accoudé sur ses genoux.

38. Plat d'argent. Washington, D. C., Dumbarton Oaks Coll. 49.6. De Constantinople? - Weitzmann, K., Dumbarton Oaks Papers 14, 1960, 53-55 fig. 14; Weitzmann, Spirituality 241-242 n° 217; Hanfmann, G. M. A., dans Weitzmann, K., Age of Spirituality: A Symposium (1978) 84 fig. 18. - 500-550 ap. J.-C. - Ag., Phèdre de face, drapée et voilée, accoudée sur une petite colonne, tire un pan du manteau d'H. Le jeune homme, qui lui tourne le dos, est en train de lire un diptyque.

39.* Diptyque en ivoire. Brescia, Mus. Cristiano. D'Italie du nord. - Simon, E., Meleager und Atalante (1970) 39-41 fig. 1; Volbach, W. F., Elfenbeinarbeiten der Spätantike und des frühen Mittelalters (1976) 57 n° 66 pl. 38. - Vers 400 (Simon), V^e s. ap. J.-C. (Volbach). - Sur chaque volet est figuré un couple sous une arcade. H. à g., nu (bottes et baudrier), une lance à la main dr., lit une tablette qu'il tient ouverte devant son épaule g.; à ses pieds, un chien. A dr., Phèdre, drapée et voilée, accoudée contre une colonne, le regarde. Au-dessus, un petit Eros tend une torche enflammée vers Phèdre.

Sur l'autre volet: Didon et Enée (Simon), ou Diane et Virbius (Volbach).

C. La déclaration d'amour par l'intermédiaire de la nourrice

Peintures murales

40. • Détruite (Rome, dessin nég. DAI 53.587). De Pompéi V 2, 9-12. — RM 5, 1890, 260; Reinach, RépPeint 210, 3; Schefold, WP 71; Croisille 81 n. 36a pl. 27, 2. — III^e style. — A g., près d'un arbre, Phèdre, assise sur un fauteuil, soulève de la main g. un pan du voile qui lui couvre les cheveux. La nourrice, qui la regarde, s'éloigne en tendant une tablette à H. Le jeune homme nu, le manteau sur les épaules, lève la main dr. dans un geste de surprise. De la g. il tient par la bride son cheval qu'accompagne, à dr., un de ses compagnons.

Hippolytos I 40

41. • Détruite (Rome, dessin nég. DAI 53.574). De Pompéi IX 1, 22. — Schefold, WP 239; idem, VergP pl. 59, 4; Croisille 82 n. 36 pl. 26, 2. — III^e style. — Phèdre, drapée et voilée, est assise à g. sur un trône, la tête inclinée reposant sur la main g. Devant elle, la nourrice, un éventail à la main g., tend la dr. vers H. qui, vêtu d'un manteau, fait de la main dr. un geste de refus. A ses pieds, un chien.

42. • Rome, Domus Aurea. — Weege, F., JdI 28, 1913, 169-170 pl. 7; Reinach, RépPeint 209, 4 (dessin inversé); Croisille 81-82 n. 36e pl. 29, 1. — Epoque néronienne, après 64 ap. J.-C. — A g., Phèdre est assise sur un fauteuil, le menton reposant sur la main g., entourée de trois servantes qui attirent son attention vers la scène du centre, comme le fait aussi un petit Eros qui lui désigne H. Celui-ci, nu, le manteau sur les épaules, une lance dans la main dr., s'apprête à partir pour la chasse mais se retourne vers la nourrice qui l'aborde, une main tendue vers lui. A dr., deux compagnons d'H. avec un cheval et un jeune serviteur avec des chiens.

Hippolytos I 41

Hippolytos I 42

43. • Rome, Domus Aurea. — Reinach, RépPeint 209, 3; Croisille 81-82 n. 36f pl. 29, 2. — Epoque néronienne, après 64 ap. J.-C. — La scène se passe devant un édifice, représenté à l'arrière-plan par un mur et une porte. A dr. Phèdre (diadème, tunique et manteau) est assise sur un fauteuil, sur le dossier duquel elle s'accoude. Derrière elle, une servante. A g., H. de face, nu, le manteau sur l'épaule dr., une lance dans la main dr., est abordé par la nourrice qui lui saisit le bras. H. se détourne, faisant de la main g. un geste de refus; une tablette est tombée à ses pieds.

Hippolytos I 43

44. Londres, BM. De Pompéi VI 5, 2. — Helbig, Wandgemälde n° 1246; Hinks, BMPaintings 19-20 n° 35 pl. 16; Schefold, WP 97 (donnée comme perdue); Croisille 81 n. 36b pl. 27, 1. — Epoque de Vespasien. — A dr. Phèdre (tunique, manteau, voile), assise vers la g. sur un trône, le visage incliné, désigne H. de l'index g. Devant elle, la nourrice, qui tient un stylet, tend une tablette à H. qui détourne son visage en faisant un geste de refus de la main dr. Nu, le manteau sur les épaules, il tient trois lances de la main g.; à ses pieds, deux chiens.

45. * Naples, Mus. Naz. 9041. D'Herculanum. — Guida Ruesch n° 1367; Reinach, RépPeint 210, 1; Croisille 81-82 n. 36d pl. 26, 1. — Epoque de Vespasien. — A g. Phèdre assise vers la dr. sur un trône soulève de la main g. un pan de son voile; elle détourne le visage de la scène centrale où l'on voit la nourrice tendre les deux mains vers H. qui s'apprête à partir pour la chasse, nu, le manteau dans le dos, une lance dans la main g. A dr., devant l'embrasure d'une porte, un jeune serviteur conduit par la bride le cheval d'H.

Hippolytos I 46

46. • Détruite. Pompéi VI 9, 6 (45), Casa dei Dioscuri. — Helbig, Wandgemälde n° 1242; Schefold, WP 119; Croisille 81-82 n. 36g pl. 28, 2. — Epoque de Vespasien. — La scène se passe devant un édifice représenté par un mur et une porte. A g. Phèdre (tunique, manteau) est assise vers la dr. sur un trône, la main g. ramenée sur la poitrine, le visage incliné. Devant elle, la nourrice saisit le coude d'H. qui, le visage tourné vers Phèdre, fait un geste de surprise. Son himation est replié sur le bras g., qui tient une lance, l'épée pend au côté g.

47. • Détruite. Pompéi VIII 4, 34 (5). — Helbig, Wandgemälde n° 1245; Schefold, WP 225; Croisille 82 n. 37 pl. 28, 1. — Epoque de Vespasien. — A dr., H. (bottes, manteau dans le dos), accompagné d'un chien, est assis sur un rocher contre lequel sont posées deux lances; la main dr. levée dans un geste de surprise, il se penche en arrière vers la nourrice qui, une main posée sur son épaule, de l'autre lui désigne Phèdre. Celle-ci, debout, le visage incliné, regarde H. en écartant de la main g. un pan de son voile.

Hippolytos I 47

Mosaïques

48. * Antakya, Mus. Hatay 1018. D'Antioche, Maison du Pavement rouge. — Levi, Antioch 71-75 pl. 11b. — Milieu du II^e s. ap. J.-C. — A dr., H. (bottes, tunique courte et manteau), une lance dans la main g., vient de jeter à terre le diptyque. A g., près d'un piédestal surmonté d'une statuette d'Aphrodite, Phèdre, qui se drapait dans son manteau dont un pan est rabattu sur ses cheveux, regarde H. avec tristesse. Au centre, la nourrice lève la main vers elle.

49.* (= Eros [in periphéria or.] 99. III avec bibl.) Ismaïlia, Mus. 2401. De Cheikh Zouéide. - IV^e s. ap. J.-C. - A g., Phèdre (ΦΕΔΡΑ) est assise dans son palais, représenté par un édifice à fronton; songeuse, le menton appuyé sur la main dr., elle regarde vers le centre de la scène où la nourrice (ΤΡΟΦΟΣ) est en train de remettre à H. (ΙΠΠΟΛΥΤΟΣ) une tablette qui porte l'inscr. ΦΕΔΡΑ. H., en costume de chasseur, une lance dans la main g., est accompagné de son chien. Au-dessus de la nourrice, un Eros désigne H. Deux compagnons d'H. (ΚΥΝΑΓΟΙ) s'éloignent vers la dr. avec son cheval.

50. (= Aphrodite/Al-Uzza 8 avec bibl. [reg. sup.], = Eros [in periphéria or.] 87 [reg. sup.]) Pavement endommagé, registre inférieur. De Madaba. - Piccirillo, M., dans I mosaici di Giordania (1986) 51-54 pl. 4; Buschhausen, H., ibidem 120-127 fig. 94-95. - Milieu du VI^e s. ap. J.-C. - A g., Phèdre (ΦΑΙΔΡΑ), accompagnée de deux servantes (ΘΕΡΑΠΕΝΑΙ) dont l'une lui soutient le bras tout en lui désignant H. Le héros, dont ne subsiste plus que le nom (ΙΠΠΟΛΥΤΟΣ) et le fer de la lance, était représenté dans la partie dr., avec un jeune serviteur (ΔΟΥΛΟΣ), qui tenait un chien en laisse ou un cheval par la bride, et des compagnons (ΠΡΟΠΟΛΟΙ); celui qui est figuré à côté du groupe de Phèdre porte sur le bras g. un faucon. L'inscr. ΓΕΡΕ, à g. de la lacune, désigne vraisemblablement la nourrice, dont ne subsiste plus qu'un bras.

Verre gravé

51.* Deux fr. de verre gravé. Corning Mus. of Glass 474 a (H.) et 474 b. (nourrice). D'Égypte? - Fremersdorf, F., Figürlich geschliffene Gläser, eine Kölner Werkstatt des 3. Jh. = Röm.-Germ. Forsch. 19 (1951) 12-13 n° 18-19 fig. 5 a-b; Glass from the Ancient World, The Ray Winfield Smith Collection (1957) 179-181 n° 361.363; Harden, D. B., Glass of the Caesars (1987) 182. - III^e s. ap. J.-C. - Fr. a: tête et épaules d'un personnage de profil, qui semble féminin, et restes d'une inscr. rétr.: ΙΠΠΟΛΥΤΟΣ. Fr. b: bas du corps (drapé) d'un personnage agenouillé, la main dr. tendue, accompagné de l'inscr. rétr. ΤΡΟΦΟΣ. Si les deux fr. proviennent bien du même objet, il pourrait s'agir de la nourrice (fr. b) qui supplie H. (disparu mais inscrit), en présence de Phèdre (fr. a).

Hippolytos I 51

Reliefs

Sarcophages de marbre attiques (et copie locale)

52.* (= 13, = 81, = 98) Face antérieure. Marsa Susa-Apollonia, Mus. D'Apollonia. - Goodchild, R. G., Libya Antiqua 2, 1965, 138 pl. 67; Giuliano/Palma 33-34 n° 2 pl. 31, 74-75; Koch/Sichtermann, RömSark 395. 398; Linant de Bellefonds 147. 153. 156-157. 160 pl. 56, 3; 59, 2; 60. 62. - Fin du 2^e quart du III^e s. ap. J.-C. - A l'extrémité g. Phèdre (tunique, voile, manteau) assise vers la dr., se retourne vers une servante qui lui pose une main sur l'épaule; une autre servante lui soulève son voile. Devant le siège, un petit Eros. H., dont ne subsistent que les jambes, était au centre du relief, avec à sa dr. la nourrice courbée. Plusieurs compagnons d'H., avec chiens et chevaux, complètent la scène.

53. (= 14a-b, = 99, = Eros/Amor, Cupido 3 avec bibl.) Face antérieure. Arles, Mus. Lap. Art Païen P 541. De Trinquette. - Ward Perkins, J. B., JRS 46, 1956, 10-16 pl. 1-3; Giuliano/Palma 33-34 n° 2 pl. 31, 74-75; Linant de Bellefonds 146-147. 153-156. 160 pl. 56, 3; 58, 1; 59, 3; 60, 2; 61. - Vers 250-260 ap. J.-C. - A l'extrémité g., Phèdre (diadème, voile, chiton, manteau) est assise vers la dr., pressant sa main g. sur sa poitrine contre laquelle un Eros lève une torche enflammée. Devant elle, H. nu, le manteau sur le bras g., fait de la main dr. un geste de refus: la nourrice, agitant la main dr. devant son épaule, cherche à le persuader. Le reste du relief, vers la dr., est occupé par une rangée de chasseurs, parmi lesquels on pourrait reconnaître H. une seconde fois, au centre du relief.

Copie locale

54.* Face antérieure. Istanbul, Mus. Arch. 508. De Tripoli (Liban). - Robert, SarkRel III 2 n° 151 pl. 46; Mendel, Sculpt I n° 26; Koch/Sichtermann, RömSark 396. - A g., Phèdre (diadème, voile, tunique, manteau) assise vers la dr. se retourne vers une servante qui lui parle à l'oreille; elle abandonne sa main g. à un petit Eros appuyé contre son genou. H. est au centre du relief, nu, le manteau sur le bras g. qui porte un javelot; de la main dr. il tient les tablettes que vient de lui remettre, à sa dr., la nourrice, suivie d'une autre servante. Deux compagnons d'H. s'éloignent vers la dr. avec son cheval.

Sarcophages de marbre romains (et copies locales)

TYPE A

Les reliefs suivants présentent tous la même composition bipartite: à g., Phèdre, Hippolyte et la nourrice, à dr. la chasse au sanglier, les deux scènes étant séparées par une arcade.

Ateliers romains

55.* (= 9a-b) Face antérieure. Pise, Camposanto. - Robert, SarkRel III 2 n° 164 pl. 52; Arias, P. E./Cristiani, E./Gabbia, E., Camposanto monumentale di Pisa. Le Antichità I (1977) 135-138 pl. 76-77; Sichtermann/Koch, MythSark 33-34 n° 26 pl. 55, 2; 56-57; Koch/Sichtermann, RömSark 150 fig. 170. - 180-190 ap. J.-C. - Partie g.: à l'extrémité g. Phèdre, (diadème, tu-nique, manteau, voile), assise vers la dr., entourée par deux servantes, regarde H. Un Eros s'accoude sur ses genoux, un autre est à côté du trône. A l'arrière-plan, un édifice à fronton. La nourrice agite une main devant H. qui, de face, nu, le manteau rejeté dans le dos, fait de la main dr. un geste de refus. A ses pieds, un chien. Un compagnon d'H. s'éloigne vers la dr., conduisant son cheval. Sur le fond, un parapetasma. Partie dr.: H. nu, le manteau flottant au vent, une lance (disparue) à la main dr., galope vers la dr. Virtus court à ses côtés. Le héros est accompagné d'un autre cavalier, et d'un troisième chasseur qui apparaît à dr. derrière l'autre d'où surgit le sanglier, attaqué par les chiens.

56. Face antérieure fr. Rome, Villa Albani 135. - Robert, SarkRel III 2 n° 168 pl. 54; Helbig⁴ IV 3294; Koch/Sichtermann, RömSark 150. - 180-190 ap. J.-C. - Partie dr.: comme sur 55 mais Phèdre se retourne vers la servante de g. et H., qui porte une lance de la main g., lève la main dr. comme pour repousser la nourrice. L'édifice à fronton est situé derrière H. A dr., deux compagnons d'H. Partie dr. (fr.): comme sur 55.

57.* Face antérieure. Louvre, Ma 1029. - Robert, SarkRel III 2 n° 170 pl. 55; Koch/Sichtermann, RömSark 150-151. 262; Baratte/Metzger, SarkLouvre 78-81 n° 27. - 190-200 ap. J.-C. - Partie g.: comme sur 56. L'édifice figuré derrière le groupe d'H. et de la nourrice abrite une statuette d'Artémis. A dr., un valet de chiens et trois autres chasseurs. Partie dr.: comme sur 55 mais à la place de Virtus est représenté un valet de chiens; à l'arrière-plan, deux autres chasseurs. A dr., au-dessus de l'arbre derrière lequel surgit le sanglier, une divinité locale barbue sur un rocher.

58.* (= 2, = 16) Face antérieure. Vatican, Mus. Greg. Prof. 10400. De Rome, Via Latina. - Robert, SarkRel III 2 n° 167 pl. 54; Helbig⁴ I 1121; Sichtermann/Koch, MythSark 34-35 n° 27 pl. 58. 59, 2; 60-61; Koch/Sichtermann, RömSark 151 fig. 171. - Vers 210 ap. J.-C. - Partie g.: comme sur 56 mais le groupe d'Eros et Psyché remplace l'Eros de g., celui de dr. s'appuie sur une torche renversée. Partie dr.: comme sur 55 mais une divinité locale remplace le chasseur de dr.

59. Face antérieure. Rome, église San Clemente. - Lawrence, M., «The Phaedra Sarcophagus in San Clemente», dans In Memoriam O. J. Brendel (1976) 173-178 pl. 42; Koch/Sichtermann, RömSark 151. - 210-220 ap. J.-C. - Partie g.: comme sur 55, avec un seul Eros, appuyé sur les genoux de Phèdre, et H., qui s'appuie de la main g. sur un épieu, lève la dr. vers Phèdre. L'édifice à fronton n'est pas représenté. Partie dr.: comme sur 55 mais Virtus n'a pas encore rejoint H.

60.* Face antérieure, aujourd'hui en grande partie détruite. Rome, Villa Doria Pamphilj. - Robert, SarkRel III 2 n° 166 pl. 53; Sichtermann/Koch, MythSark 35 n° 28 pl. 55, 1; Calza, R., Antichità di Villa Doria Pamphilj (1977) 154-155 n° 182 pl. 114; Koch/Sichtermann, RömSark 151. - 220-230 ap. J.-C. - Partie g.: comme sur 58 mais l'édifice à fronton n'est pas représenté, entre H. et la nourrice apparaît le visage d'un chasseur, et Virtus est figurée, s'éloignant vers la dr., la tête retournée vers H. dont elle entraîne le cheval par la bride; elle est précédée par le valet de chiens et un

chasseur. Partie dr.: Virtus fait une enjambée vers la g., tête retournée vers H. au galop vers la dr., précédé par un autre cavalier; au premier plan, un chasseur tombé avec son cheval. A dr., le sanglier, menacé par un chasseur, surgit de derrière un arbre, piétinant un cerf.

61.* (= 18, = Eros/Amor, Cupido I avec bibl.) Face antérieure. Florence, Uff. 98. - Robert, SarkRel III 2 n° 171 pl. 55. - 230-240 ap. J.-C. - Partie g.: Phèdre est assise vers la dr., entourée de trois servantes; un Eros, arc dans la main g., brandit une torche vers elle. Pas d'édifice à fronton, mais une colonne surmontée d'un vase. La nourrice se penche vers H., qui lui tourne le dos, la lance dans la main g., la main dr. levée vers son visage incliné. Partie dr.: comme sur 60 sans le chasseur tombé; à dr., un garçonnet retient un chien.

62. Fr. de face antérieure. Milan, Mus. Arch. A 1129. - Arslan, E. A., Le civiche raccolte archeologiche di Milano (1979) n° 185; Koch/Sichtermann, RömSark 151. - 230-240 ap. J.-C. - Ne sont conservés qu'H. et son compagnon, à cheval vers la dr., et, partiellement, Virtus qui semble plutôt se diriger vers la g. comme sur 60 et 61.

63. Fr. de face antérieure. Berlin, Schloss zu Klein-Glienicke Gl. 132. - Goethert, F. W., Kat. der Antikenslg. ... im Schloss zu Klein-Glienicke bei Potsdam (1972) 23-24 n° 112 pl. 38. 43-44; Koch/Sichtermann, RömSark 151. - 230-240 ap. J.-C. - De la partie g. ne subsiste qu'un chasseur tenant un cheval par la bride. Partie dr.: ne subsistent que Virtus courant, H. à cheval comme sur 59 et le compagnon d'H. à cheval.

64. Petit fr. de face antérieure. Leningrad, Ermitage A 813. - Saverkina, I. I., Römische Sarkophage I. Römische Sarkophage in der Ermitage (1979) 46-47 n° 20 pl. 48; Koch/Sichtermann, RömSark 150 n. 1. - 2^e quart du III^e s. ap. J.-C. - Ne subsiste qu'un fr. de la partie g. avec H., qui détourne le visage vers la dr., et un de ses compagnons (d'après Saverkina, même type que 66).

Ateliers locaux

65. Face antérieure. Bénévent, Mus. del Sannio 513. - Robert, SarkRel III 2 n° 169 pl. 55; Koch/Sichtermann, RömSark 151. - Partie g.: comme sur 58, avec une seule servante et un seul Eros dans le groupe de Phèdre. Partie dr.: H. à cheval vers la dr., suivi par Virtus et précédé par un autre cavalier; le sanglier surgit de la dr. L'extrémité du relief a disparu.

66. (= Eros/Amor, Cupido 2* avec bibl.) Face antérieure. Capoue, Duomo. - Robert, SarkRel III 2 n° 165 pl. 53; Koch/Sichtermann, RömSark 151. - 230-240 ap. J.-C. - Partie g.: Phèdre est assise vers la dr., la main g. appuyée sur un sceptre. Derrière elle, une servante; un Eros tient une torche enflammée contre sa jambe, un autre, devant le siège, court vers un oiseau. Derrière ce groupe, un parapetasma. H., une lance dans la main g., lève la dr., détournant son visage de la nourrice qui s'adresse à lui; derrière elle, un édifice à fronton. A côté d'H., à l'arrière-plan, un de ses compagnons. A dr., un chasseur emmène le cheval d'H. Partie dr.: Virtus court derrière H. à cheval vers la dr. et brandissant une lance. A dr., le sanglier surgit de

49.* (= Eros [in periphéria or.] 99. III avec bibl.) Ismaïlia, Mus. 2401. De Cheikh Zouéide. - IV^e s. ap. J.-C. - A g., Phèdre (ΦΕΔΡΑ) est assise dans son palais, représenté par un édifice à fronton; songeuse, le menton appuyé sur la main dr., elle regarde vers le centre de la scène où la nourrice (ΤΡΟΦΟΣ) est en train de remettre à H. (ΗΠΠΟΛΥΤΟΣ) une tablette qui porte l'inscr. ΦΕΔΡΑ. H., en costume de chasseur, une lance dans la main g., est accompagné de son chien. Au-dessus de la nourrice, un Eros désigne H. Deux compagnons d'H. (ΚΥΝΑΓΟΙ) s'éloignent vers la dr. avec son cheval.

50. (= Aphrodite/Al-Uzza 8 avec bibl. [reg. sup.], = Eros [in periphéria or.] 87 [reg. sup.]) Pavement endommagé, registre inférieur. De Madaba. - Piccirillo, M., dans I mosaici di Giordania (1986) 51-54 pl. 4; Buschhausen, H., ibidem 120-127 fig. 94-95. - Milieu du VI^e s. ap. J.-C. - A g., Phèdre (ΦΑΙΔΡΑ), accompagnée de deux servantes (ΘΕΡΑΠΕΝΑΙ) dont l'une lui soutient le bras tout en lui désignant H. Le héros, dont ne subsiste plus que le nom (ΗΠΠΟΛΥΤΟΣ) et le fer de la lance, était représenté dans la partie dr., avec un jeune serviteur (ΔΟΥΛΟΣ), qui tenait un chien en laisse ou un cheval par la bride, et des compagnons (ΠΡΟΠΟΛΟΙ); celui qui est figuré à côté du groupe de Phèdre porte sur le bras g. un faucon. L'inscr. ΓΕΡΕ, à g. de la lacune, désigne vraisemblablement la nourrice, dont ne subsiste plus qu'un bras.

Verre gravé

51.* Deux fr. de verre gravé. Corning Mus. of Glass 474 a (H.) et 474 b. (nourrice). D'Égypte? - Fremersdorf, F., Figürlich beschnittene Gläser, eine Kölner Werkstatt des 3. Jh. = Röm.-Germ. Forsch. 19 (1951) 12-13 n° 18-19 fig. 5 a-b; Glass from the Ancient World, The Ray Winfield Smith Collection (1957) 179-181 n° 361.363; Harden, D. B., Glass of the Caesars (1987) 182. - III^e s. ap. J.-C. - Fr. a: tête et épaules d'un personnage de profil, qui semble féminin, et restes d'une inscr. rétr.: ΗΠΠΟΛΥΤΟΣ. Fr. b: bas du corps (drapé) d'un personnage agenouillé, la main dr. tendue, accompagné de l'inscr. rétr. ΤΡΟΦΟΣ. Si les deux fr. proviennent bien du même objet, il pourrait s'agir de la nourrice (fr. b) qui supplie H. (disparu mais inscrit), en présence de Phèdre (fr. a).

Hippolytos I 51

Reliefs

Sarcophages de marbre attiques (et copie locale) Ateliers attiques

52.* (= 13, = 81, = 98) Face antérieure. Marsa Susa-Apollonia, Mus. D'Apollonia. - Goodchild, R. G., Libya Antiqua 2, 1965, 138 pl. 67; Giuliano/Palma 33-34 n° 2 pl. 31, 74-75; Koch/Sichtermann, RömSark 395. 398; Linant de Bellefonds 147. 153. 156-157. 160 pl. 56, 3; 59, 2; 60. 62. - Fin du 2^e quart du III^e s. ap. J.-C. - A l'extrémité g. Phèdre (tunique, voile, manteau) assise vers la dr., se retourne vers une servante qui lui pose une main sur l'épaule; une autre servante lui soulève son voile. Devant le siège, un petit Eros. H., dont ne subsistent que les jambes, était au centre du relief, avec à sa dr. la nourrice courbée. Plusieurs compagnons d'H., avec chiens et chevaux, complètent la scène.

53. (= 14a-b, = 99, = Eros/Amor, Cupido 3 avec bibl.) Face antérieure. Arles, Mus. Lap. Art Païen P 541. De Trinquetaille. - Ward Perkins, J. B., JRS 46, 1956, 10-16 pl. 1-3; Giuliano/Palma 33-34 n° 2 pl. 31, 74-75; Linant de Bellefonds 146-147. 153-156. 160 pl. 56, 3; 58, 1; 59, 3; 60, 2; 61. - Vers 250-260 ap. J.-C. - A l'extrémité g., Phèdre (diadème, voile, chiton, manteau) est assise vers la dr., pressant sa main g. sur sa poitrine contre laquelle un Eros lève une torche enflammée. Devant elle, H. nu, le manteau sur le bras g., fait de la main dr. un geste de refus: la nourrice, agitant la main dr. devant son épaule, cherche à le persuader. Le reste du relief, vers la dr., est occupé par une rangée de chasseurs, parmi lesquels on pourrait reconnaître H. une seconde fois, au centre du relief.

Copie locale

54.* Face antérieure. Istanbul, Mus. Arch. 508. De Tripoli (Liban). - Robert, SarkRel III 2 n° 151 pl. 46; Mendel, Sculpt I n° 26; Koch/Sichtermann, RömSark 396. - A g., Phèdre (diadème, voile, tunique, manteau) assise vers la dr. se retourne vers une servante qui lui parle à l'oreille; elle abandonne sa main g. à un petit Eros appuyé contre son genou. H. est au centre du relief, nu, le manteau sur le bras g. qui porte un javelot; de la main dr. il tient les tablettes que vient de lui remettre, à sa dr., la nourrice, suivie d'une autre servante. Deux compagnons d'H. s'éloignent vers la dr. avec son cheval.

Sarcophages de marbre romains (et copies locales)

TYPE A

Les reliefs suivants présentent tous la même composition bipartite: à g., Phèdre, Hippolyte et la nourrice, à dr. la chasse au sanglier, les deux scènes étant séparées par une arcade.

Ateliers romains

55.* (= 9a-b) Face antérieure. Pise, Camposanto. - Robert, SarkRel III 2 n° 164 pl. 52; Arias, P. E./Cristiani, E./Gabba, E., Camposanto monumentale di Pisa. Le Antichità I (1977) 135-138 pl. 76-77; Sichtermann/Koch, MythSark 33-34 n° 26 pl. 55, 2; 56-57; Koch/Sichtermann, RömSark 150 fig. 170. - 180-190 ap. J.-C. - Partie g.: à l'extrémité g. Phèdre, (diadème, tu-nique, manteau, voile), assise vers la dr., entourée par deux servantes, regarde H. Un Eros s'accoude sur ses genoux, un autre est à côté du trône. A l'arrière-plan, un édifice à fronton. La nourrice agite une main devant H. qui, de face, nu, le manteau rejeté dans le dos, fait de la main dr. un geste de refus. A ses pieds, un chien. Un compagnon d'H. s'éloigne vers la dr., conduisant son cheval. Sur le fond, un parapetasma. Partie dr.: H. nu, le manteau flottant au vent, une lance (disparue) à la main dr., galope vers la dr. Virtus court à ses côtés. Le héros est accompagné d'un autre cavalier, et d'un troisième chasseur qui apparaît à dr. derrière l'autre d'où surgit le sanglier, attaqué par les chiens.

56. Face antérieure fr. Rome, Villa Albani 135. - Robert, SarkRel III 2 n° 168 pl. 54; Helbig⁴ IV 3294; Koch/Sichtermann, RömSark 150. - 180-190 ap. J.-C. - Partie dr.: comme sur 55 mais Phèdre se retourne vers la servante de g. et H., qui porte une lance de la main g., lève la main dr. comme pour repousser la nourrice. L'édifice à fronton est situé derrière H. A dr., deux compagnons d'H. Partie dr. (fr.): comme sur 55.

57.* Face antérieure. Louvre, Ma 1029. - Robert, SarkRel III 2 n° 170 pl. 55; Koch/Sichtermann, RömSark 150-151. 262; Baratte/Metzger, SarkLouvre 78-81 n° 27. - 190-200 ap. J.-C. - Partie g.: comme sur 56. L'édifice figuré derrière le groupe d'H. et de la nourrice abrite une statuette d'Artémis. A dr., un valet de chiens et trois autres chasseurs. Partie dr.: comme sur 55 mais à la place de Virtus est représenté un valet de chiens; à l'arrière-plan, deux autres chasseurs. A dr., au-dessus de l'arbre derrière lequel surgit le sanglier, un divinité locale barbu sur un rocher.

58.* (= 2, = 16) Face antérieure. Vatican, Mus. Greg. Prof. 10400. De Rome, Via Latina. - Robert, SarkRel III 2 n° 167 pl. 54; Helbig⁴ I 1121; Sichtermann/Koch, MythSark 34-35 n° 27 pl. 58. 59, 2; 60-61; Koch/Sichtermann, RömSark 151 fig. 171. - Vers 210 ap. J.-C. - Partie g.: comme sur 56 mais le groupe d'Eros et Psyché remplace l'Eros de g., celui de dr. s'appuie sur une torche renversée. Partie dr.: comme sur 55 mais une divinité locale remplace le chasseur de dr.

59. Face antérieure. Rome, église San Clemente. - Lawrence, M., «The Phaedra Sarcophagus in San Clemente», dans In Memoriam O. J. Brendel (1976) 173-178 pl. 42; Koch/Sichtermann, RömSark 151. - 210-220 ap. J.-C. - Partie g.: comme sur 55, avec un seul Eros, appuyé sur les genoux de Phèdre, et H., qui s'appuie de la main g. sur un épieu, lève la dr. vers Phèdre. L'édifice à fronton n'est pas représenté. Partie dr.: comme sur 55 mais Virtus n'a pas encore rejoint H.

60.* Face antérieure, aujourd'hui en grande partie détruite. Rome, Villa Doria Pamphili. - Robert, SarkRel III 2 n° 166 pl. 53; Sichtermann/Koch, MythSark 35 n° 28 pl. 55, 1; Calza, R., Antichità di Villa Doria Pamphili (1977) 154-155 n° 182 pl. 114; Koch/Sichtermann, RömSark 151. - 220-230 ap. J.-C. - Partie g.: comme sur 58 mais l'édifice à fronton n'est pas représenté, entre H. et la nourrice apparaît le visage d'un chasseur, et Virtus est figurée, s'éloignant vers la dr., la tête retournée vers H. dont elle entraîne le cheval par la bride; elle est précédée par le valet de chiens et un

chasseur. Partie dr.: Virtus fait une enjambée vers la g., tête retournée vers H. au galop vers la dr., précédé par un autre cavalier; au premier plan, un chasseur tombé avec son cheval. A dr., le sanglier, menacé par un chasseur, surgit de derrière un arbre, piétinant un cerf.

61.* (= 18, = Eros/Amor, Cupido 1 avec bibl.) Face antérieure. Florence, Uff. 98. - Robert, SarkRel III 2 n° 171 pl. 55. - 230-240 ap. J.-C. - Partie g.: Phèdre est assise vers la dr., entourée de trois servantes; un Eros, arc dans la main g., brandit une torche vers elle. Pas d'édifice à fronton, mais une colonne surmontée d'un vase. La nourrice se penche vers H., qui lui tourne le dos, la lance dans la main g., la main dr. levée vers son visage incliné. Partie dr.: comme sur 60 sans le chasseur tombé; à dr., un garçonnet retient un chien.

62. Fr. de face antérieure. Milan, Mus. Arch. A 1129. - Arslan, E. A., Le civiche raccolte archeologiche di Milano (1979) n° 185; Koch/Sichtermann, RömSark 151. - 230-240 ap. J.-C. - Ne sont conservés qu'H. et son compagnon, à cheval vers la dr., et, partiellement, Virtus qui semble plutôt se diriger vers la g. comme sur 60 et 61.

63. Fr. de face antérieure. Berlin, Schloss zu Klein-Glienicke Gl. 132. - Goethert, F. W., Kat. der Antikenslg. ... im Schloss zu Klein-Glienicke bei Potsdam (1972) 23-24 n° 112 pl. 38. 43-44; Koch/Sichtermann, RömSark 151. - 230-240 ap. J.-C. - De la partie g. ne subsiste qu'un chasseur tenant un cheval par la bride. Partie dr.: ne subsistent que Virtus courant, H. à cheval comme sur 59 et le compagnon d'H. à cheval.

64. Petit fr. de face antérieure. Leningrad, Ermitage A 813. - Saverkina, I. I., Römische Sarkophage I. Römische Sarkophage in der Ermitage (1979) 46-47 n° 20 pl. 48; Koch/Sichtermann, RömSark 150 n. 1. - 2^e quart du III^e s. ap. J.-C. - Ne subsiste qu'un fr. de la partie g. avec H., qui détourne le visage vers la dr., et un de ses compagnons (d'après Saverkina, même type que 66).

Ateliers locaux

65. Face antérieure. Bénévent, Mus. del Sannio 513. - Robert, SarkRel III 2 n° 169 pl. 55; Koch/Sichtermann, RömSark 151. - Partie g.: comme sur 58, avec une seule servante et un seul Eros dans le groupe de Phèdre. Partie dr.: H. à cheval vers la dr., suivi par Virtus et précédé par un autre cavalier; le sanglier surgit de la dr. L'extrémité du relief a disparu.

66. (= Eros/Amor, Cupido 2* avec bibl.) Face antérieure. Capoue, Duomo. - Robert, SarkRel III 2 n° 165 pl. 53; Koch/Sichtermann, RömSark 151. - 230-240 ap. J.-C. - Partie g.: Phèdre est assise vers la dr., la main g. appuyée sur un sceptre. Derrière elle, une servante; un Eros tient une torche enflammée contre sa jambe, un autre, devant le siège, court vers un oiseau. Derrière ce groupe, un parapetasma. H., une lance dans la main g., lève la dr., détournant son visage de la nourrice qui s'adresse à lui; derrière elle, un édifice à fronton. A côté d'H., à l'arrière-plan, un de ses compagnons. A dr., un chasseur emmène le cheval d'H. Partie dr.: Virtus court derrière H. à cheval vers la dr. et brandissant une lance. A dr., le sanglier surgit de son antre, attaqué par des chiens et par un chasseur qui brandit une pierre.

67.* Face antérieure. Naples, Mus. Naz. – Robert, SarkRel III, 2 n° 173 pl. 56; Guida Ruesch n° 655; Koch/Sichtermann, RömSark 151. – Le relief est très érodé et tous les visages manquent. Partie g.: comme sur 56, avec un seule servante et un seul Eros dans le groupe de Phèdre. Partie dr.: H. à cheval, suivi par Virtus, s'élance vers un sanglier qui surgit de son antre; un autre sanglier gît à terre. A dr., deux chasseurs s'éloignent.

TYPE B

Les reliefs suivants présentent, en un ensemble unique, la scène de la déclaration d'amour par l'intermédiaire de la nourrice et l'annonce à Thésée de la mort d'H.

Ateliers romains

68.* Face antérieure. Louvre, Ma 2294. – Robert, SarkRel III 2 198–200 n° 161 pl. 51; Koch/Sichtermann, RömSark 152; Baratte/Metzger, SarkLouvre 81–84 n° 28. – 290–300 ap. J.-C. – A g. Phèdre (diadème, voile, chiton, manteau) est assise vers la dr., se retournant vers une servante qui lui presse le bras. Appuyé contre ses genoux, un Eros la regarde. A côté d'elle, une autre servante. A l'arrière-plan, un parapetasma. La nourrice, la main g. tendue, se penche vers H. Nu, le manteau posé sur l'épaule, il s'appuie de la main g. sur une lance; sa main dr. devait tenir des tablettes (cf. 69). A ses pieds, un chien, derrière lui, son cheval que tient un des ses compagnons qui s'éloigne vers la dr., tête retournée. A l'extrémité dr. du relief, Thésée est assis vers la g. sur un tabouret; la main dr. au menton, il écoute le récit que lui fait un compagnon d'H. debout devant lui. Ce dernier est suivi par une servante qui porte un bébé et se retourne vers un vieillard qui lui adresse la parole.

69.* Face antérieure. Rome, Mus. Naz. Rom. 112 444. De Rome, Via Praenestina. – Helbig⁴ III 2119; Sichtermann/Koch, MythSark 36 n° 30 pl. 65–67; Koch/Sichtermann, RömSark 152. – 290–300 ap. J.-C. – Même représentation que sur 68 mais H. tient un diptyque ouvert contre sa poitrine et le messenger qui s'adresse à Thésée est barbu.

70.* (= 3) Face antérieure. Split, Mus. Arch. D 29. De Salona. – Robert, SarkRel III 2 n° 163 pl. 51; Cambi, N., AA 1977, 453–455 n° 9 fig. 135–137; Koch/Sichtermann, RömSark 152. – Vers 300 ap. J.-C. – Comme sur 69 mais avec une servante supplémentaire dans le groupe de Phèdre, et la nourrice saisit le bras d'H.

71. Fr. de face antérieure. Tyr. – Koch/Sichtermann, RömSark 152; Chéhab, M., BullMusBeyrouth 35, 1985, 552 pl. 112a–c. – 280–290 ap. J.-C. – Ne subsistent que Phèdre, Eros, une servante, l'épaule de la nourrice et l'arrière-train du cheval d'H., comme sur 68. Sur un autre fr. sont conservés les sabots antérieurs du cheval et la jambe d'un chasseur (H.).

AUTRE TYPE

72.* Sarcophage de marbre romain, face principale. Rome, Villa Albani 534. – Robert, SarkRel III 2 n° 159 pl. 49; Helbig⁴ IV 3360; Koch/Sichtermann, RömSark 153. – Vers 300 ap. J.-C. – Dans la partie dr., devant une porte obturée par une tenture, Phèdre (diadème, tunique, manteau) est assise vers la g., accoudée contre un instrument de musique que soutient un petit Eros. Un autre Eros, contre son genou, tient une torche enflammée. La nourrice soutient le bras dr. de Phèdre, qu'entourent deux autres servantes. H. nu, le manteau dans le dos, s'éloigne du groupe, la main dr. levée devant la poitrine, une lance dans la g., un chien entre ses jambes. Il est représenté une deuxième fois au centre du relief, assis vers la g. mais se retournant vers un de ses compagnons qui lève une tablette(?). La nourrice, courbée devant H., lui remet une autre tablette. Dans la partie g., trois chasseurs avec deux chevaux et des chiens.

Reliefs provinciaux

73. Deux fr. de relief en calcaire (sarcophage?). Komarno (Tchécoslovaquie), Podunajské Muz. (fr. avec Phèdre) et Tata (Hongrie), Kuny Domokos Muz. (fr. avec H.) De Szöny (Brigetio). – Schober, A., WSt 47, 1929, 161–164 fig. 2; Erdélyi, G., Acta Antiqua Acade-

Hippolytos I 72

miae Scientiarum Hungaricae 14, 1966, 211–223; idem, A romai köfaragás és kőszobrászat Magyarországon (1974) fig. 196 b (H.); Toynbee, J. M. C., Latomus 36/2, 1977, 386 fig. 20; Kolník, T., Skvosty antiky na Slovensku (1979) pl. 16 (Phèdre); idem, Römische und Germanische Kunst in der Slowakei (1984) 193 n° 91 fig. 91 (Phèdre). – 2^e moitié du II^e s. ap. J.-C. – A g. Phèdre à demi nue, les jambes, croisées, et l'avant-bras g. seuls recouverts d'une draperie, est debout, de face, accoudée du bras dr. sur un pilier. Un Eros porteur de torche lui a saisi le bras g. et tente de l'entraîner vers la dr. où la nourrice, agenouillée, est en train de supplier H. Celui-ci, debout de face, nu (bottes, manteau dans le dos et sur le bras g.), vient de laisser échapper de sa main dr. les tablettes et se détourne de la nourrice.

74. Relief de marbre fr. Schloss Seggau (Leibnitz). De Flavia Solva. – Schober, o. c. 73, 161–164 fig. 1; Erdélyi, o. c. 73, (1966) 214. 218 fig. 5; Toynbee, o. c. 73, 387. – A dr., H., vêtu d'une chlamyde, une lance à la main g., lève la main dr. vers la nourrice qui, agenouillée à ses pieds, lui tend les deux mains; contre la jambe d'H. un chien, à l'arrière-plan un cheval. Au-dessus de la nourrice, un Eros volette vers la dr., se retournant vers la partie g. du relief où était figurée Phèdre. Ne subsistent que quelques plis de son vêtement, qui ne semble couvrir que le bas du corps, et une tablette sur laquelle repose sa main que tient un stylet.

D. Document à séquence narrative

75. (= Hypnos/Somnus 145) Peinture de Gaza. Connue par la description (imaginaire?) de Procope de Gaza (Prok. ecphr.), autrefois attribuée à Choricus de Gaza. – Friedländer, P., Spätantiker Gemäldezyklus in Gaza (1939). – V^e–VI^e s. ap. J.-C. – La première scène se passe à l'intérieur d'un palais: Thésée, étendu sur un lit, dort, vaincu par → Hypnos; près de lui, ses serviteurs. Phèdre assise en compagnie de ses servantes lève son regard dans la direction que lui indique un Eros en vol, porteur de torche: sur le panneau supérieur, à côté des aventures de Thésée, est figurée une chasse au lion dont le héros est H. Un autre Eros tend à Phèdre l'encre et le stylet qui doivent servir à écrire la lettre d'amour que la nourrice, présente, l'incite à adresser à H. La scène suivante se déroule à l'extérieur: le texte, lacunaire, fait allusion à la lettre que la nourrice a dû remettre à H. et que celui-ci, horrifié, a jetée à terre. La nourrice est punie par un serviteur d'H. qui s'apprête à lui asséner un coup de massue; rempli de compassion, un fauconnier cherche à dévier le coup. H. n'assiste pas à la scène: il part à la chasse, à cheval, en compagnie de → Daphné.

E. Hippolyte hésite à tuer Phèdre: interprétation incertaine

76. (= Achilleus 112 avec bibl., = Alkmaion 15*) Peinture murale. Naples, Mus. Naz. 8994. De Pompéi VII 1, 25, Casa di Cirico. – Kalkmann 131–132 pl. 9 (H. et Phèdre); Robert, C., AZ 41, 1883, 259–260 pl. 9, 1 (Oreste et Clytemnestre); Schefold, WP 166 (Achille et Déidamie?); Croisille 82 n. 38; 86. 90–92 pl. 30, 1 (H. et Phèdre). – Époque de Vespasien. – Un jeune homme presque nu, qui semble sur le point de fuir vers la g., brandit de la main dr. une épée dont il tient le fourreau de la g. A dr. une femme, genou à terre, tend la main dr. vers l'épée du jeune homme, tout en pressant son sein g., découvre, de l'autre main. Par les ouvertures pratiquées dans le mur du fond, deux personnages lèvent les bras. Kalkmann rattache cette scène aux vers de Sénèque Phaedra 704–714 où H., comprenant que Phèdre souhaite la mort de ses mains, renonce à la tuer. Autres interprétations: Achille à Skyros. Alcméon tuant → Eriphyle (I), ou encore → Oreste sur le point de tuer Clytemnestre (→ Klytaimestra).

F. Hippolyte et Phèdre: contexte indéterminé et interprétation incertaine

DOCUMENTS GRECS

Vases italiotes

77. (= Helene 129) Cratère en calice apulien f. r. Genève, coll. M^e P. Sciclounoff. – RVAp Suppl. 1 78, 64b: p. de Darius; Aellen, C./Cambitoglou, A./Chamay, J., Le peintre de Darius et son milieu (1986) 161–165; Schmidt, M., JHS 106, 1986, 256; Schefold, SB IV 287. – 335–330 av. J.-C. – Registre sup.: Aphrodite avec Eros, Athéna, Hermès. Registre inf.: à g., une vieille femme s'adresse à une autre femme, debout de face, drapée dans un manteau rabattu sur ses cheveux. A dr., un jeune homme nu, la chlamyde dans le dos, un pétase sur la nuque, s'avance en tenant un labobolon (ou une trompette?). La scène a été diversement interprétée: arrivée de Pâris à Sparte (Trendall), Iphigénie (→ Iphigeneia), sa nourrice et le héraut qui doit l'emmener (Aellen et al.), ou encore Phèdre, la nourrice et H. (Schmidt).

78. (= Erinys 98* avec bibl.) Amphore à col campanienne f. r. New York, MMA 06.1021.239. – LCS 339, 795 pl. 131, 8: p. d'Ixion. – 325–300 av. J.-C. – A g., H. (?) nu, les mains levées vers son visage, regarde Phèdre (?) assise, à qui une servante présente une phiale. Assise au-dessus des personnages, une Erinye se retourne vers H.

DOCUMENTS D'ÉPOQUE IMPÉRIALE

Peintures murales

79. Pompéi VII 1, 40 (3), Casa di M. Caesius Balanus. – Helbig, Wandgemälde n° 1247; Schefold, WP 167; idem, VergPpl. 180, 2; Croisille 82 n. 38 pl. 30, 2; PittPavPompei III 44 n° 14. – IV^e style. – Couple en buste dans un médaillon: à g. un jeune homme, manteau sur les épaules, épée au côté et lance sur l'épaule g., lève la main dr., paume en avant. A dr., une femme voilée le regarde. Le geste du jeune homme et le regard de la femme peuvent faire penser à H. et Phèdre.

80. Détruite. Pompéi IX 5, 11 (h). – Schefold, WP

259. - Époque de Vespasien. - Médaille avec deux bustes: H.(?), le manteau noué sur l'épaule dr., avec une hampe, et Phèdre(?) qui le regarde, de profil, la tête couverte d'un voile.

Reliefs

81.* (= 52 avec bibl., = 13, = 98) Sarcophage de marbre attique, petit côté dr. Marsa Susa-Apollonia, Mus. D'Apollonia. - Fin du 2^e quart du III^e s. ap. J.-C. - Au centre un jeune homme nu, de face, tient un disque de la main g. et lève la main dr. à hauteur de son visage; à sa g., un herme au pied duquel est posé un vase. A g. un autre jeune homme nu tient un objet indistinct de la main dr. baissée. A dr. une femme dans une attitude pensive, jambes croisées, lève le visage vers la g. Il s'agit peut-être de Phèdre qui contemple H. et un de ses compagnons à la palestra.

82. (= 90 avec bibl., = 120) Sarcophage de marbre attique, petit côté g. Tarragone, Mus. Nat. Arch. 15.482. Découvert au large de Tarragone. - Fin du 2^e quart du III^e s. ap. J.-C. - A g., deux femmes: celle de g., en chiton, tient une coquille dans la main dr. baissée et de la main g. un objet anguleux (une tablette?) près de l'épaule de sa compagne; celle-ci, vêtue d'un chiton et d'un manteau, jambes croisées, regarde vers le centre du relief où sont figurés deux jeunes gens de face, l'un à demi nu, un manteau devant les cuisses, l'autre nu, accompagné d'un cheval. A l'extrémité dr., un jeune homme tourné vers la g. et un cheval. La scène a été diversement interprétée: Aphrodite, Phèdre, Thésée et H. ou plutôt Phèdre et une servante, H. et ses compagnons?

83. Sarcophage de marbre romain, face antérieure. Bourgneuf-Val-D'or (Saône-et-Loire). De Hyères. - Espérandieu IX n° 6686; X n° 7561; Michon, E., Bull-SantF 1927, 175-183; Koch/Sichtermann, RömSark 153. - Très endommagé: a g. deux hommes, puis Phèdre assise vers la dr., entourée par deux servantes, et H. nu, de face, le manteau sur l'épaule g., tenant son cheval par la bride. Au centre, un homme assis vers la g., peut-être Thésée, auquel s'adresse un homme, peut-être le messager qui lui fait le récit de la mort d'H. A l'arrière-plan un chasseur et au premier plan, sous le siège, une figure féminine émergeant du sol à mi-corps et tenant des deux mains une draperie enflée par le vent. Dans la partie dr., trois chasseurs, dont deux tiennent un cheval par la bride, et une figure féminine à demi étendue sur le sol.

84. Relief de stuc. Rome, «Basilique souterraine» de la Porte Majeure. - Bendinelli, G., MonAnt 31, 1926, 722-723 fig. 18; Mielsch, Stuckreliefs 118-119 K 16. - Vers 40 ap. J.-C. - Phèdre (diadème, tunique longue et manteau), assise vers la dr., lève la main g. vers H. Le jeune homme, debout devant elle, nu, le manteau rejeté sur l'épaule, s'appuie de la main dr. sur sa lance et de la g. sur un pilastre.

Monnaie

85. AE, Argos, Hadrien (117-138). - NumComm-Paus 42 pl. L, LIV. - Rv. H.(?) debout, le manteau rejeté dans le dos, la main levée, devant Phèdre(?) assise sur un rocher, qui écarte son voile de la main dr.

VI. Hippolyte et la nourrice

Sarcophages de marbre attiques

86.* (= 11, = 118) Face antérieure. Tyr 330. - Chéhab, o. c. 25, 50-60 pl. 31-35; Koch/Sichtermann 394; Linant 22-24. 135-138. 160-161 pl. 48. 51, 1; 53. 55. - 2^e quart du III^e s. ap. J.-C. - Au centre du relief, H. nu, le manteau rejeté dans le dos, une épée au côté, fait de la main dr. levée devant la poitrine, paume ouverte, un geste de refus: courbée devant lui à sa dr., la nourrice semble lui présenter une tablette (le relief est endommagé). Une douzaine de compagnons d'H., armés de lances ou de massues, sont alignés de part et d'autre, avec chiens et chevaux.

87.* (= 10, = 119) Face antérieure. Agrigente, Duomo. - Robert, SarkRel III 2 n° 152 pl. 47; Giuliano/Palma 30-33 n° 10 pl. 26, 64-65; 27, 66-67; Koch/Sichtermann, RömSark 394. 398 fig. 426; Linant 138-139. 143. 146. - 2^e quart du III^e s. ap. J.-C. - Même scène que sur 86 mais H., qui s'appuie de la main dr. sur une lance, est en train de lire la tablette qu'il tient de la main g. La nourrice, le visage levé vers H., a saisi sa lance.

88. (= 12, = 117) Face antérieure. Leningrad, Ermitage A 432. De Rome, Via Aurelia. - Robert, SarkRel III 2 n° 154 pl. 48; Giuliano/Palma 45 n° 1 pl. 48, 115-117; Saverkina, o. c. 64, 26-28 n° 6 pl. 14-17; Koch/Sichtermann, RömSark 394; Linant 138-140. 142-143. 146. - 2^e quart du III^e s. ap. J.-C. - Même scène que sur 86 mais on voit plus clairement le geste du refus d'H. et la tablette que lui tend la nourrice. De la main g. H. tient son cheval par la bride.

89.* Fr. Trieste, Mus. Civ. 3081. - Robert, SarkRel III 3 n° 449 pl. 144; Giuliano/Palma 49-50 n° 3 pl. 55, 136; Koch/Sichtermann, RömSark 395; Linant 139. - 2^e quart du III^e s. ap. J.-C. - Le fr. ne comprend que le groupe d'H. et de la nourrice comme sur 86 et 88.

90. (= 82, = 120) Face antérieure. Tarragone, Mus. Nat. Arch. 15.482. Découvert au large de Tarragone. - García y Bellido, A., Esculturas romanas de España y Portugal (1949) 244 n° 262 pl. 199-201; idem, AJA 54, 1950, 395-397 fig. 1-2; Sichtermann, H., AA 1954, 422-430 fig. 101-104; Koch/Sichtermann, RömSark 394-395. 396; Linant 139. 143-144. 160. - Fin du 2^e quart du III^e s. ap. J.-C. - H., sous une arcade, entouré de neuf compagnons de chasse, dans la même attitude que sur 86; la nourrice est rejetée à l'arrière-plan.

91.* (= 32 avec bibl., = 97) Petit côté g. Tyr 4230. - Fin du 2^e quart du III^e s. ap. J.-C. - Le groupe d'H. et de la nourrice comme sur 87, mais inversé; H. regarde la nourrice. A g. deux compagnons d'H. avec un cheval, à dr. un troisième.

Divers

92.* Monnaie AE. Trézène, Septime Sévère (193-211). - NumCommPaus 48. 162 n° 7 pl. GG XIII. - Rv. La nourrice, courbée, aborde H. qui s'éloigne, portant sa chlamyde sur le bras, lance et épée.

93.* Relief en os fr. Athènes, Mus. Bénaki 22119. D'Égypte? - BCH 98, 1974, 587 fig. 45; Marangou, L., Bone Carvings from Egypt I. Graeco-Roman Period

(1976) 84-86 pl. 72a. - Époque antonine. - H. nu, le manteau rejeté dans le dos, fait de la main dr. un geste de refus en se détournant de la nourrice qui l'aborde; devant celle-ci, une petite servante accroupie.

INTERPRÉTATION INCERTAINE

94. Peinture murale. Détruite. Pompéi I 3, 3. - Schefold, WP 12; Croisille 82 n. 41. - A g. H.(?) qui tient de la main g. un pan de son manteau, lève la main dr. en un geste de refus. A dr., la nourrice(?) ou Phèdre elle-même(?) se drapait dans son manteau.

94bis. Peinture murale fr. Stabies, Villa San Marco. - Archéologia 249, 1989, 41 (fig.). - 2^e moitié du I^{er} s. ap. J.-C. - H.(?) vêtu d'un manteau agrafé sur l'épaule, fait de la main dr. un geste de refus. Derrière lui, un personnage presque entièrement détruit lui passe le bras g. autour des épaules et pose la main dr. sur son bras.

95. Relief funéraire fr. Pöchlarn (Autriche), encasté dans le mur sud de l'église. Probablement de Harlanden. - Ladek, F., ArchEpigrMitt 18, 1895, 33 fig. 8; CISR Österreich I 6 (1979) n° 55 pl. 24. - II^e s. ap. J.-C. - A g. H.(?) nu, le manteau plié sur l'épaule, la main g. posée sur une hampe, lève la dr. devant la poitrine. A ses pieds, un diptyque. A dr. une femme (la nourrice?) s'éloigne, portant une cruche et un tissu.

VII. Hippolyte et Thésée

A. Hippolyte et Thésée seuls

96. (= Aigeus 24*, = Herakles 1688) Bol en argent de Bactriane. Washington, Freer Gall. 45.33. - Weitzmann, K., ArtBull 25, 1943, 309-311 fig. 13. 15. - I^{er} s. av./I^{er} s. ap. J.-C. - Weitzmann a reconnu sur ce bol diverses scènes inspirées par des tragédies d'Euripide. Thésée, trônant vers la g., lève la main dr., l'index et le majeur tendus, en direction d'H., debout devant lui. Le jeune homme (tunique à longues manches et pantalons), les mains croisées devant la poitrine, détourne la tête.

B. Hippolyte comparait devant Thésée en présence de Phèdre(?)

Sarcophages de marbre attiques

97.* (= 32 avec bibl., = 91) Petit côté dr. Tyr 4230. - Fin du 2^e quart du III^e s. ap. J.-C. - Thésée barbu, une massue dans la main dr., est assis vers la g. mais se retourne vers Phèdre qui s'appuie contre son épaule. A l'arrière-plan, une servante. H. nu, le manteau rejeté dans le dos, est debout, de face, devant Thésée; s'appuyant de la main dr. sur une lance, il tourne son visage vers la nourrice qui l'aborde. A g., un compagnon d'H. et un chien.

98.* (= 52 avec bibl., = 13, = 81) Petit côté g. Marsa Susa-Apollonia, Mus. D'Apollonia. - Fin du 2^e quart du III^e s. ap. J.-C. - A g. Thésée, barbu, est assis vers la dr., la main g. appuyée sur une massue, le visage levé vers Phèdre qui est debout à ses côtés et semble lui adresser la parole, la main dr. levée; ses cheveux sont dénoués et son vêtement a glissé, découvrant l'épaule g. H. est debout de face, au centre du relief, nu, l'himation plié sur le bras g., la main dr. écartée, le visage tourné vers Thésée. A dr., un chasseur avec un chien; à l'arrière-plan, derrière H., deux personnages: à g. une femme (la nourrice?), à dr. un chasseur.

99. (= 53 avec bibl., = 14a-b) Petit côté g. Arles, Mus. Lap. Art Païen P 541. De Trinquetaille. - Vers 250-260 ap. J.-C. - Thésée est assis vers la dr., une massue sur le bras g., le visage levé vers H. Debout de face au centre du relief, vêtu d'une chlamyde, H. s'appuie de la main dr. sur une lance; la nourrice lui a saisi le bras g. A dr. Phèdre, drapée dans un manteau, regarde la scène, soutenant son menton de la main dr. A g. deux chasseurs, l'un avec un cheval; à dr., derrière la nourrice, une autre femme qui lève une tablette.

INTERPRÉTATION INCERTAINE

100.* Fr. de petit côté g. Paris, Louvre MA 1663. - Robert, SarkRel III 2 n° 160 fig. p. 198; Koch/Sichtermann, RömSark 395; Baratte/Metzger, SarkLouvre 266-267 n° 173. - 2^e quart du III^e s. ap. J.-C. - H. est debout au centre, de face, la chlamyde rejetée dans le dos; la main g. tenait la lance, la dr. était levée à hauteur du visage, incliné sur l'épaule dr. A l'arrière-plan, à dr., la nourrice. Phèdre est assise à l'extrémité dr., le visage appuyé sur la main, un Eros accoudé sur sa cuisse; à sa dr., une servante et un jeune homme. A g., symétriquement, un homme est assis, le visage levé vers H., une épée ou une massue (disparue) à la main; imberbe, il semble cependant plus âgé qu'H. et une comparaison avec les reliefs précédents invite à l'identifier comme Thésée.

VIII. Mort d'Hippolyte

DOCUMENTS GRECS

Vases italiotes

Pour de nouvelles représentations de la mort d'H. sur des vases italiotes, cf. Oakley, J. H., QuadTic (sous presse).

101.* Fr. de cratère apulien f.r. Bâle, coll. Cahn HC 237. - RVAp 107, 42; p. de Hoppin; Bloesch, H., Das Tier in der Antike (1974) n° 261 pl. 44. - Vers 370 av. J.-C. - Zone sup.: Silène et Ménade. Zone inf.: ne subsiste que la partie antérieure des chevaux qui se cabrent à la vue du taureau surgissant de la dr.

102. (= Aphrodite 1527 avec bibl.) Cratère en calice sicilien f.r. Lipari, Mus. Arch. Eoliano 340^{bis}. - LCS Suppl. 3 275, 46h; gr. de Maron; Bernàbo-Brea, L./Cavalier, M., Il Castello di Lipari e il Museo Archeologico Eoliano (1977) 123-124 fig. 112. - Vers 360 av. J.-C. - H. vers la dr., en costume d'aurige, tirant des deux mains sur les guides, tente de retenir son attelage. Le char est déjà disloqué, trois des chevaux se cabrent, le quatrième, qui a rompu son trait, s'enfuit. La mer est représentée au premier plan par des vagues, le taureau est absent. En haut à g. apparaissent Aphrodite et Eros.

103.* (= Eros 929) Cratère à volutes apulien f.r. Naples, coll. privée 488. - RVAp Suppl. 1 86, 293a pl. 17, 4; p. des Enfers. - 350-340 av. J.-C. - Zone sup.:

Eros, Poséidon et Aphrodite. Zone inf.: H., le buste auréolé par son manteau, est debout dans le char tiré par quatre chevaux galopant vers la dr. Devant eux, un taureau émerge des flots et une Erinye s'élance à l'encontre de l'attelage.

104. (= Erinyes 99*) Loutrophore apulienne f. r. New York, coll. privée, autrefois Zurich, Galerie Nefer. - RVAp Suppl. 1 73, 20a pl. 11, 1: p. de Darius. - 340-320 av. J.-C. - H., en costume d'aurige, conduit son quadrigue vers la dr., se retournant vers une Erinye qui le menace; les chevaux se cabrent à la vue du taureau qui surgit de la mer.

105.* (= Aphrodite 1528 avec bibl., = Athena 630) Cratère à volutes apulien f. r. Londres, BM F 279. - RVAp II 487, 17 pl. 173, 1: p. de Darius. - 3^e quart du IV^e s. av. J.-C. - Zone sup.: Pan, Apollon, Athéna, Aphrodite et Eros, Poséidon. Zone inf.: debout sur son char, en costume d'aurige, H. tient les guides de la main g., le fouet de la dr. Sous les jambes des chevaux lancés au galop vers la dr., un taureau surgit de la mer, tandis qu'une Erinye se précipite sur l'attelage. A g., le vieux pédagogue, en costume de théâtre, court derrière le char.

Peinture murale

106. Peinture d'Antiphilos d'Egypte, disparue, connue par Plin. nat. 35, 114. Jadis Rome, portique de Philippe. - Overbeck, SQn 1943; Reinach, RecMilliet n° 514. - Vers 300 av. J.-C. - «H. effrayé à la vue du taureau lancé contre lui».

DOCUMENTS ÉTRUSQUES

Urnes de Chiusi en albâtre

107.* Chiusi, Mus. 526. - Brunn/Körte, Rilievi II 1 pl. 34, 4; Levi, D., Il Mus. Civ. di Chiusi (1935) 58; Thimme, J., StEtr 23, 1954, 125 fig. 55. - II^e s. av. J.-C. - H., en tunique courte, est tombé contre la caisse renversée de son char. Le taureau surgit de l'arrière-plan, entre deux chevaux cabrés; deux autres chevaux gisent à terre. Une Furie enjambe le corps d'H., un guerrier accourt de chaque côté.

108.* Chiusi, Mus. 975. - Brunn/Körte, Rilievi III 1 n° 34, 4a; Levi, o. c. 107, 59; Thimme, o. c. 107, 133 fig. 56. - II^e s. av. J.-C. - Même figuration que sur 107 mais H., tombé sur le genou dr., prend appui sur la caisse du char pour se redresser.

109.* (= Erinyes 100) Sienne, Mus. Arch. 728 (autrefois Sarteano, Pal. Bargagli). - Brunn/Körte, Rilievi II 1 pl. 34, 3; Thimme, o. c. 107, 115 fig. 52. - II^e s. av. J.-C. - Même figuration que sur 107 mais le taureau fonce sur H. (cuirasse et casque), tombé sur la roue du char disloqué.

Autre exemplaire avec peu de variantes: Brunn/Körte, Rilievi II 1 n° 34, 3a.

110. Florence, Coll. Rodolfo Giglio. - Brunn/Körte, Rilievi II 1 pl. 33, 1. - II^e s. av. J.-C. - Les chevaux sont représentés comme sur 107 mais le char est invisible. H., en tunique longue et manteau, coiffé d'un bonnet phrygien, est tombé sur son côté g. Deux jeunes gens s'efforcent de repousser le taureau qui fonce sur lui. A dr., une Furie.

111. Palerme, Mus. Reg. 42. - Brunn/Körte, Ri- lievi II 1 pl. 33, 2; Thimme, o. c. 107, 119 fig. 53. - II^e s. av. J.-C. - L'attelage, le char et le taureau sont représentés comme sur 108. H., en tunique courte et manteau, est tombé en arrière sur la caisse du char. Une Furie le menace, deux autres tiennent par la bride les chevaux cabrés.

Un exemplaire proche, mais avec seulement deux Furies: Brunn/Körte, Rilievi II 1 n° 33, 2a; un autre avec deux guerriers à la place des Furies: Levi, D., RivIstArch 4, 1932-33, 43 fig. 33.

112.* Londres, BM D 45. - Brunn/Körte, Rilievi II 1 pl. 36, 6; Pryce, BMSculpture I 2, 218 fig. 66. - II^e s. av. J.-C. - L'attelage, le char et le taureau comme sur 108. H. (casque, tunique courte) est tombé de son char contre lequel il s'appuie. Trois Furies comme sur 111, deux guerriers et deux compagnons d'H.

113. Londres, BM D 43. - Pryce, BMSculpture I 2, 208-209 fig. 64. - II^e s. av. J.-C. - L'attelage, le char et H. comme sur 108. Un compagnon d'H. tente de s'interposer, une Furie enjambe le corps d'H., une autre s'élance de la g., un guerrier se précipite à dr.

114. Chiusi, Mus. 563. - Brunn/Körte, Rilievi II 1 pl. 35, 5; Levi, o. c. 107, 59; Thimme, o. c. 107, 123 fig. 54. - II^e s. av. J.-C. - L'attelage et le char comme sur 107. H., en tunique courte, tombé à genoux contre la caisse du char, tente, à l'aide d'un bouclier, de se protéger contre l'assaut du taureau. Deux Furies, trois guerriers et deux compagnons d'H. complètent la scène.

Autres exemplaires avec peu de variantes: Brunn/Körte, Rilievi II 1 n° 35, 5a (Florence, Mus. 543; Levi, o. c. sous 111, 42 fig. 32) - d.

DOCUMENTS D'ÉPOQUE IMPÉRIALE

Peintures

115. Peinture décrite par Philostr. im. 2, 4. - Les quatre chevaux, effrayés par le taureau qui a surgi de la mer, se dispersent, abandonnant le char disloqué d'H. mourant. Ses compagnons sont figurés, les uns emportés par leurs chevaux, les autres jetés à bas de leur monture. Des personnifications caractérisent le paysage: Skopiai, prairies, Nymphes des sources.

116. Peinture mentionnée par Prud. c. Symm. 2, 49-56.

Sarcophages de marbre attiques

117. (= 88 avec bibl., = 12) Petit côté g. Lenigrad, Ermitage A 432. - 2^e quart du III^e s. ap. J.-C. - Renversé à côté de son attelage disloqué, H. nu, la chlamyde sur les épaules, le corps emprisonné dans les guides, s'agrippe au rebord du char. La tête du taureau, couverte d'écailles, apparaît au-dessus de deux des chevaux cabrés; les deux autres ont fait volte-face et se cabrent au-dessus du char. A g. un compagnon d'H. à cheval, à dr. un autre debout.

118.* (= 86 avec bibl., = 11) Petit côté dr., très fr. Tyr 330. - 2^e quart du III^e s. ap. J.-C. - Même représentation que sur 117. H. tient encore le fouet dans la main dr.; sous sa tête renversée, des lignes ondulées indiquent la mer, d'où a surgi le taureau, visible à l'angle supérieur dr. Un cavalier était figuré à g.

119.* (= 87 avec bibl., = 10) Petit côté g. Agrigente, Duomo. - 2^e quart du III^e s. ap. J.-C. - L'attelage, le taureau et le cavalier de g. sont figurés comme sur 117. H. nu, la chlamyde nouée autour du cou, les jambes retenues à la caisse du char, est traîné sur le sol.

120.* (= 90 avec bibl., = 82) Côté postérieur. Tarragone, Mus. Nat. Arch. 15.482. - Fin du 2^e quart du III^e s. ap. J.-C. - L'attelage et H., nu, sont représentés comme sur 118. De la g. surgit le taureau, tenu en laisse par une figure féminine à demi nue, appuyée sur un sceptre (Thalassa?). Entre le taureau et les chevaux, un homme debout tient un trident (Poséidon?). A dr., un homme barbu, nu, appuyé sur une massue, porte la main à son menton; à côté de lui, un jeune homme semble lui adresser la parole: il pourrait s'agir du messager qui fait à Thésée le récit de la mort d'H.

Relief provincial

121. Fr. de relief en calcaire (sarcophage?). Komarno, Podunajské Muz. De Szöny (Brigetio). - Kolnik, T., o. c. 73, 193 n° 90 fig. 90; Toynbee, o. c. 73, 404-405 fig. 30 (→ Phaethon I). - 2^e moitié du II^e s. ap. J.-C. - H. nu, de face, le manteau rejeté dans le dos, est tombé de son char; de la main g. levée il tient encore par les guides l'un de ses chevaux. A l'arrière-plan, les quatre chevaux effarouchés se cabrent.

IX. Annonce à Thésée de la mort d'Hippolyte

Voir 68-70. 72. 120.

X. Suicide de Phèdre sur le corps d'Hippolyte: interprétation incertaine 122. Lécythe aryballisque campanien f. r. Adolphseck 167. - LCS 241, 113: «Sharp-nose Gr.»; CVA 2 pl. 74, 3-4; Schauenburg, K., Gymnasium 67, 1960, 379. - 350-340 av. J.-C. - Une femme agenouillée, en chiton court et manteau, s'enfonce une épée dans la poitrine, devant un podium sur lequel est étendu le cadavre d'un jeune homme, enveloppé dans un linceul. Sur la plus haute marche du podium est posé un objet rectangulaire: une tablette? Schauenburg suggère d'interpréter la scène comme le suicide de Phèdre devant le corps d'H.

XI. Hippolyte ressuscité par Asclépios

123.* Médaillon d'applique fr. en terre cuite. Lyon, Mus. gallo-rom. De Lyon. - Desbat, A., Vases d'

Hippolytos I 23

médallions d'applique des fouilles récentes de Lyon = Finglina 5-6, 1980-81, 63-67 n° M.002 fig. p. 66. - A dr., Asclépios (inscr. AESCVLAPI[VS]), regarde Artémis qui lui désigne H. (inscr. HIPPOLYTVS) dont ne subsistent que quelques plis du manteau. A g. de la déesse, un chien au-dessus duquel on distingue une partie du monstre marin.

XII. Hippolyte héroïsé

124. (= Asklepios 101 avec bibl.) Relief votif de marbre fr. Rome, Mus. Torlonia 433. Trouvé à Rome, Via Appia, mais d'origine attique. - Beschi, L., ASAtene 45-46, 1967-68, 515-517 fig. 2; Mitropoulou, E., Corpus I. Attic Votive Reliefs of the 6th and 5th Centuries B. C. (1977) 40-41 n° 58 fig. 94. - Vers 420 (Mitropoulou), fin V^e/début IV^e s. av. J.-C. (Beschi). - Tout le haut du relief manque. Au centre, un jeune homme (pétase, chlamyde), suivi par un chien, se dirige vers la g., tenant un cheval par la bride, un lagobolon à la main g. A g., autel et adorant; au-dessus, une femme assise sur des rochers: Aphrodite (Beschi) plutôt qu'Hygieia (Mitropoulou). En haut à dr. Asclépios assis sur un rocher, au centre, entre deux colonnes, le bas d'une statue: Thémis (Beschi) ou une statue de culte d'H. (Mitropoulou). Selon Beschi, ce relief illustrerait les cultes du flanc sud de l'Acropole.

125. (= Asklepios 53* avec bibl., = Epione 11) Relief votif de marbre. Athènes, Mus. Nat. 1392. D'Epidaure. - Vers 400 av. J.-C. - Au centre, H.(?) de face, vêtu d'un chiton et d'une chlamyde, tient par la bride son cheval qui le suit, et tend de la main dr. une offrande à Asclépios trônant à g., une femme (Epione?) à ses côtés. A dr., un petit serviteur nu retient également le cheval.

126. (= Artemis 733 avec bibl.) Relief de pierre. Athènes, Mus. Nat. 1475. D'Egine. - 1^e moitié du IV^e s. av. J.-C. - Au centre, H.(?) coiffé d'un pétase et vêtu d'un chiton et d'une chlamyde, s'avance, la main dr. levée, suivi par son cheval, vers Artémis-Hékate assise sur un rocher, un chien à ses pieds.

COMMENTAIRE

Pas plus que dans la littérature, la légende d'H. n'a laissé de traces dans les monuments figurés avant l'époque classique et il semble que ce soit la tragédie attique qui l'ait véritablement introduite dans l'art, comme dans les œuvres littéraires. Les premières représentations sûres du mythe n'apparaissent en effet que dans le courant du IV^e s. av. J.-C., avec une série de vases d'Italie méridionale (101-105) qui illustrent la fin tragique d'H. Cet épisode, qui appartenait vraisemblablement aussi aux deux tragédies perdues, occupe une large place dans le second Hippolyte d'Euripide et l'on conçoit aisément que le long récit du messager ait frappé l'imagination des artistes. C'est le cratère apulien de Londres (105) qui présente la version la plus complète de l'épisode, avec le taureau qui émerge des flots et H., vêtu en aurige, qui tente vainement de retenir son attelage; derrière le char, le vieux pédagogue en costume de scène dénote une probable influence du théâtre dans l'apparition du motif sur les vases d'Italie méridionale. Une autre influence possible est celle d'une grande peinture qui aurait pu introduire, entre autres détails communs aux vases italiotes, le motif de l'Erinye (103-105) qui incarne la malédiction lancée contre H. par Thésée. On sait d'ailleurs, par le témoignage de Plinie, que le sujet avait été représenté en grande peinture par Antiphilos (106) vers la fin du IV^e s. av. J.-C.

Un autre vase apulien (7) nous offre l'unique représentation connue à ce jour d'H. enfant, en compagnie de sa mère Antiopé. La présence d'H. dans cet épisode de la légende de Rhodope n'est attestée par aucune source littéraire mais peut s'expliquer par la volonté du peintre de rapprocher deux héros au destin similaire: le sort de Rhodope, compagne d'Artémis punie par la jalousie d'Aphrodite, préfigure en quelque sorte celui d'H. qui, lui aussi, périra victime de la rivalité entre les deux déesses.

Deux autres vases italiotes (77-78) pourraient figurer H. et Phèdre selon un schéma qui évoque plutôt les scènes de gynécée; seule la présence d'une Erinye sur 78 pourrait faire allusion de façon plus précise au sort tragique d'H. Enfin un vase campanien d'interprétation très hypothétique (122) serait une représentation unique du suicide de Phèdre sur le corps d'H. Dans le second Hippolyte d'Euripide, Phèdre se suicide – par pendaison – alors qu'H. est encore vivant. Le vase campanien se rapporterait donc plutôt à la tragédie perdue dans laquelle, vraisemblablement, Phèdre se suicidait après la mort du jeune homme.

Une série de reliefs votifs attiques de la fin du V^e ou du début du IV^e s. (124-126) est à mettre en rapport, non point avec la légende telle qu'elle fut mise en scène par Euripide, mais plutôt avec l'ancien culte d'H. Tandis que le relief 126 évoque les liens privilégiés du héros avec Artémis, le relief 125 fait allusion aux liens qui unissent le culte d'H. à celui d'Asclépios qui, selon certaines versions de la légende, aurait ressuscité le héros. Ce relief provient d'Epidaure et l'on notera qu'à l'époque de Pausanias on montrait dans cette ville une stèle antique mentionnant qu'H. avait consacré vingt chevaux à Asclépios (Paus. 2, 27, 4). Quant au relief 124, il pourrait être une illustration des cultes du flanc sud de l'Acropole où Pausanias note l'existence d'un monument funéraire d'H. non loin du temple d'Asclépios et du temple de Thémis (cf. Sources littéraires).

Deux siècles environ après les peintres d'Italie méridionale, les sculpteurs étrusques reprennent le thème de la mort d'H., le seul épisode de la vie du héros qui paraisse s'être imposé en Etrurie, à Chiusi exclusivement. Le schéma de base, original, est le même sur toutes ces représentations (107-114): les quatre chevaux de l'attelage disloqué sont dirigés vers les quatre angles du relief et, au centre, H., généralement vêtu d'une tunique courte (sauf sur 110, où le vêtement est long) et d'un manteau, est renversé contre la caisse du char et semble directement menacé par le taureau. Ce schéma, commun à tous les reliefs, est enrichi par un nombre plus ou moins important de personnages annexes, compagnons d'H. qui tentent de le protéger ou au contraire Furies qui excitent les chevaux comme sur les vases apuliens.

Curieusement, à part les représentations hypothétiques d'Italie méridionale mentionnées plus haut, nous ne possédons aucun document d'époque grecque qui mette en scène simultanément H. et Phèdre. Le thème, au contraire, connaît une grande faveur dans l'art romain, et tout d'abord, à partir des années 60 ap. J.-C., dans la peinture romaine qui privilégie la scène de la «révélation» par la nourrice à H. de l'amour que lui porte Phèdre (40-47). Celle-ci, assise à une extrémité du tableau, ne semble pas vraiment prendre part à l'action (sauf en 44, où elle désigne H. de son index, et en 42, où une servante et un Eros l'incitent à regarder H.); debout à l'autre extrémité, H. est abordé par la nourrice alors qu'il s'apprête pour la chasse, armé d'une ou de plusieurs lances et accompagné de chiens (41, 44), parfois aussi d'un cheval et d'un ou de plusieurs compagnons de chasse (40, 42, 45). Seul le tableau 47 s'éloigne de ce schéma: H. est assis sur un rocher et la nourrice, qui se penche sur son épaule, lui montre Phèdre qui s'approche. Sur 41-43, 45-47, la nourrice s'adresse à H. directement tandis que sur 40 et 44 elle lui présente une tablette; dans tous les cas le jeune homme lève la main, paume ouverte, dans un geste qui exprime à la fois sa surprise et son refus d'entendre le message. Mais, sauf peut-être sur 43 où H. a jeté à terre la tablette que lui présentait la nourrice, on est loin du dialogue enflammé qui oppose les deux personnages chez Euripide. A vrai dire, la présence de Phèdre, de même que le thème de la lettre – peut-être d'origine alexandrine – ne permettent pas de trouver dans ces peintures l'écho exact de la tragédie grecque, non plus d'ailleurs que celui de la pièce de Sénèque, plus proche chronologiquement, mais où Phèdre révèle elle-même son amour à H. Seul le tableau 47 pourrait dénoter une influence plus directe de la Phèdre de Sénèque (voir Croisille 88, qui le rapproche des vers 435-588 où la nourrice exhorte H. à l'amour, entretien interrompu aux v. 583-586 par l'arrivée de Phèdre qui s'évanouit à la vue d'H.). De même on a parfois rattaché la peinture 76 où l'on voit une femme, genou à terre, supplier un jeune homme brandissant une épée, aux vers 589-712 de Sénèque: Phèdre vient de déclarer son amour à H. et celui-ci, horrifié, tire son épée puis, comprenant que Phèdre souhaite mourir de ses mains, renonce à la tuer. Le tableau représenterait le moment précis où H. lâche Phèdre pour s'enfuir (voir, en dernier lieu, les arguments avancés en faveur de cette hypothèse par Croisille 90-92).

Le couple en buste peint sur deux médaillons (79-80) pourrait figurer H. et Phèdre: le regard suppliant de la femme, voilée, et sur 79 le geste du jeune homme qui lève une main, paume ouverte, font en effet songer à une version «raccourcie» de la scène de la révélation. Plus douteuse est l'interprétation de la peinture 94, qui montre peut-être H. et la nourrice, et celle du tableau 24 où le chasseur figuré en compagnie d'Artémis pourrait être aussi bien Méléagre.

C'est dans la seconde moitié du II^e s. ap. J.-C. que les ateliers de sarcophages, romains aussi bien qu'atti-ques, commencent à illustrer le mythe d'H., avec sans doute une légère antériorité pour ces derniers. Les exemplaires attiques les plus anciens (25-26), datés autour des années 170-180, présentent en une composition unique deux tableaux très contrastés: à g. Eros, sur l'injonction d'Aphrodite, bande son arc en direction de Phèdre assise, soutenue par sa nourrice; à dr. H., au retour de la chasse, remercie sa divine protectrice dont il orne l'autel tout en surveillant le déchargement du butin. L'accent est donc mis sur l'opposition entre les sentiments et les préoccupations des deux protagonistes et la présence des deux déesses, réelle pour Aphrodite, symbolique pour Artémis, rappelle, comme le souligne constamment Euripide, qu'H. n'est que le jouet de la volonté divine.

Vers la même époque apparaît dans les ateliers romains une composition analogue, quoiqu'inspirée par des «cartons» très différents (groupe A du Catalogue). La face principale présente deux scènes, nettement séparées par une arcade: à g. Phèdre, malade d'amour, est assise au milieu de ses compagnes tandis que la nourrice s'approche d'H., prêt à partir pour la chasse, et lui révèle l'amour que lui porte sa belle-mère. La scène de dr. montre H. à cheval chassant le sanglier avec ses compagnons. Contrairement aux premiers sarcophages attiques, qui n'y font pas allusion, les sarcophages romains de ce premier groupe introduisent déjà la scène de la proposition d'amour, en une composition qui rappelle celle de la Domus Aurea (42). Les plus anciens exemplaires (55-56) sont datés des années 180-190 mais la série (55-64) se prolonge jusque dans le 2^e quart du III^e s. et connaît aussi des imitations locales (65-67). Si Aphrodite elle-même n'est pas présente, un Eros, souvent même deux Eros agissent en son nom pour enflammer de leur torche le cœur de Phèdre. Le rôle d'Artémis, quant à lui, est évoqué par son petit sanctuaire figuré derrière H. et la nourrice, mais seul l'exemplaire du Louvre (57) montre la stauette de la déesse à l'intérieur de l'édicule. On notera que deux sarcophages de la série (16, 18) montrent en outre sur un petit côté H. offrant un sacrifice à Artémis – thème assez fréquent sur les gemmes d'époque impériale (19-23). La scène de la «révélation» elle-même est comparable à celle des peintures de Pompéi; la nourrice ne présente jamais de tablettes, mais s'adresse directement à H. qui marque son refus en levant la main dr., parfois aussi en se détournant (61, 64, 66). La chasse au sanglier, qui occupe la moitié dr. des reliefs, connaît sur ces sarcophages un développement particulier. Alors que l'iconographie romaine montre généralement la chasse pedestre au sanglier, H., lui, attaque toujours l'animal à cheval – à tel point qu'on peut considérer cette particularité comme un critère d'identification sur les exemplaires où Phèdre n'est pas représentée (17). Sauf sur 57, où un valet de chiens prend la place de l'allégorie, H. est invariablement suivi par Virtus, sous les traits d'une femme casquée. La présence de la déesse, qui accompagne le héros comme, sur les sarcophages de bataille, elle suit le général victorieux, souligne l'importance symbolique du thème cynégétique qui, sur les sarcophages romains d'H., tend à prendre le pas sur le thème amoureux: au-delà de la chasse d'H., c'est plus généralement l'exercice vertueux, la chasse en tant qu'épreuve exemplaire qui sont mis en valeur sur ces monuments funéraires.

Dans le courant du 2^e quart du III^e s., au moment où sont sculptés à Rome les derniers sarcophages du groupe A, apparaît dans les ateliers attiques une nouvelle version iconographique de la légende (86-90). La face principale présente une juxtaposition de jeunes gens, compagnons de chasse d'H., qui est figuré au centre; la nourrice, petite et courbée, s'approche suppliante et lui tend les tablettes; sur 86, 88-90, H. fait de la main dr. levée le geste habituel de refus tandis que sur 87 il est en train de lire la lettre qu'il tient lui-même en main. On notera que le groupe d'H. et de la nourrice est figuré selon un schéma analogue sur des monnaies de Trézène (92) et sur un relief en os, d'origine peut-être égyptienne. Les mêmes sarcophages présentent sur leur côté postérieur une scène de chasse au sanglier (10-12) où H., comme sur les sarcophages romains, attaque l'animal à cheval. Le groupe de Phèdre est relégué sur un petit côté – la reine n'est donc pas présente à la scène de la «révélation», ce qui est plus conforme à la version de la légende transmise par la deuxième pièce d'Euripide – et l'autre petit côté (117-119) montre la mort d'H., épisode qui semble totalement absent du répertoire des ateliers romains. Se cabrant à la vue du taureau, les chevaux ont renversé H. qui, encore prisonnier des guides, est traîné sur le sol. Bien qu'elle ne soit pas sans évoquer celle – plus schématisée cependant – des urnes étrusques, cette composition dériverait plutôt d'un modèle pictural: de sources diverses nous savons en effet que la mort d'H. avait fait l'objet de peintures murales (106, 115-116) et qu'en particulier le peintre alexandrin Antiphilos avait peint le sujet (106). Certains détails des reliefs attiques – l'échelonnement des chevaux sur différents plans par exemple – dénotent d'ailleurs un procédé plus pictural que plastique. Le sarcophage de Tarragone (120) présente, cette fois sur le côté postérieur, une version plus développée de l'épisode: le char et H. sont figurés selon le même «carton» que sur les trois autres reliefs attiques (117-119) mais le taureau, dont la tête seule, sur les autres reliefs, surgit devant les chevaux, est ici entièrement représenté et il est tenu en laisse par une figure féminine à demi nue. Plus que l'animal, la principale source de frayeur des chevaux semble être le personnage au trident qui le précède et qui est probablement Poséidon lui-même, dont l'intervention dans la mort d'H. est donc ici clairement indiquée. Quant au personnage barbu appuyé sur une massue à l'extrémité dr. du relief, il s'agit sans aucun doute de Thésée à qui un compagnon d'H. fait le récit de l'accident. La présence de la divinité féminine qui retient le taureau – nymphe ou divinité marine – et l'évocation bucolique d'un paysage escarpé à l'angle g. du relief sont à mettre en parallèle avec les Σκοπαι, Λεμναί et Νύμφαι dont Philostrate émaille sa description d'un tableau de la mort d'H. (115) et viennent étayer l'hypothèse d'un modèle pictural pour ces quatre reliefs.

Vers le milieu du III^e s., un troisième groupe de sarcophages attiques (32-34, 52-53), imités par un exemplaire de facture syrienne (54), juxtapose, sur la face antérieure, au groupe d'H. et de ses compagnons de chasse celui de Phèdre assise avec ses servantes – composition qui s'apparente donc à celle des sarcophages romains du type A (55–64). Les exemplaires d'Apollonia (52) et d'Arles (53) qui montrent en même temps la scène de la proposition d'amour par la nourrice se rapprochent davantage encore de ces derniers. Sur 52 Phèdre, comme sur les sarcophages romains, détourne son visage et ne prend donc pas vraiment part à la scène; sur 53 au contraire elle regarde H. d'un air implorant et paraît appuyer la demande de la nourrice. Cette mauvaise compréhension de la légende, peut-être due à la juxtaposition de deux «cartons», est encore plus sensible sur le sarcophage de Tyr 32 où la scène de la proposition – sans tablettes – est figurée sur un petit côté tandis que sur la face principale Phèdre et H. sont directement confrontés et qu'une servante anonyme – et non plus la nourrice – présente à Phèdre les tablettes qui ont donc perdu leur véritable signification. Les côtés postérieurs des mêmes sarcophages (13–14) montrent une scène de chasse au sanglier comme sur les exemplaires précédents. Les petits côtés (97–99) portent des scènes difficiles à interpréter qui mettent en présence Thésée assis, Phèdre, H. et la nourrice dans une sorte de dramatique huis-clos. Thésée semble écouter les paroles de Phèdre, qui n'est plus voilée comme sur la face antérieure: sur 97 et 98 ses cheveux dénoués et son vêtement défait trahissent son trouble. Une seule interprétation paraît s'imposer: Phèdre, encouragée par la nourrice qui entraîne H. devant Thésée, accuse le jeune homme auprès de son père. La servante qui, sur 99, tient une tablette, rappellerait au spectateur l'épisode précédent, la proposition d'amour et le refus d'H. Certes, tandis que dans le second Hippolyte d'Euripide Thésée n'intervient qu'à la fin de la pièce, pour apprendre que Phèdre s'est pendue, dans la pièce de Sénèque en revanche Phèdre, encore vivante, accuse elle-même H. auprès de Thésée, en présence de la nourrice (Phaëdra 882–897); mais H. n'assiste pas à cette scène et ce n'est qu'ensuite que Thésée la chasse et supplie Poseidon de le châtier. Les documents qui mettent en scène H. et Thésée sont d'ailleurs très rares: nous n'en connaissons qu'un, le bol d'argent 96 – fabriqué en Bactriane, mais vraisemblablement d'après un modèle grec – et, comme l'a montré Weitzmann, il illustre les vers 943–947 du second Hippolyte d'Euripide où Thésée, apprenant la mort de Phèdre, accuse violemment H.; le jeune homme, condamné au silence par le serment qu'il a fait à sa belle-mère, ne peut s'innocenter. Aucune œuvre littéraire connue ne réunit donc Thésée, Phèdre, H. et la nourrice, ne serait-ce que pour un bref instant, comme le font les sarcophages attiques. Mauvaise compréhension de la légende, influence d'une source littéraire aujourd'hui perdue, contamination entre «cartons», ou volonté délibérée de présenter les principaux protagonistes en une dramatique synthèse? La réponse est difficile, mais la constance du thème de la tablette sur les œuvres attiques – alors qu'elle n'apparaît pas sur les sarcophages romains avant la fin du III^e s. – incite à supposer l'existence d'une œuvre littéraire, peut-être alexandrine, qui aurait introduit ce motif tout en reprenant certains thèmes développés dans les œuvres antérieures, par exemple dans le premier Hippolyte d'Euripide où Phèdre, semble-t-il, voyant ses aveux d'amour rejetés par H., n'hésitait pas à l'accuser auprès de Thésée. La tablette apparaît toutefois, on l'a vu, sur quelques peintures pompéiennes (40. 43–44) qui avaient peut-être puisé leur inspiration plus directement dans la IV^e Héroïde d'Ovide.

Après une interruption d'une cinquantaine d'années, les ateliers romains illustrent à nouveau la légende d'H., mais en adoptant une nouvelle présentation (type B). Il s'agit d'une série très restreinte de documents (68–71), chronologiquement très proches puisqu'ils furent tous exécutés entre la dernière décennie du III^e s. et le tout début du IV^e s. En une composition rigoureusement symétrique sont regroupés trois épisodes différents: à g. Phèdre entourée de ses servantes est assise selon le schéma habituel; puis H. debout tient devant sa poitrine les tablettes que vient de lui remettre la nourrice, tandis qu'un de ses compagnons de chasse s'éloigne, entraînant son cheval; à dr. enfin, un messenger, suivi d'une jeune femme et d'un vieillard, fait à Thésée assis à l'extrémité dr. du relief le récit de la mort d'H. Outre l'apparition du thème de la lettre, inconnu sur les sarcophages romains du groupe A, on note la disposition antithétique de Phèdre et Thésée assis aux extrémités du relief, encadrant ainsi le héros principal, H., représenté de face – une disposition fréquemment utilisée, dans d'autres contextes mythologiques, sur les sarcophages attiques du 2^e quart du III^e s. Comme sur les derniers sarcophages attiques illustrant la légende d'H., on note donc sur ces sarcophages romains du type B une volonté de privilégier le symbolisme formel de la représentation aux dépens de son contenu narratif. Cette influence attique – à la fois stylistique et iconographique – et la date assez tardive de ce petit groupe de documents laissent supposer qu'ils auraient pu être exécutés par des sculpteurs venus de Grèce après que les ateliers attiques eurent cessé leur activité autour des années 260–270 ap. J.-C.

En dehors des ateliers de sculpture romains et attiques, d'autres officines ont illustré la légende d'H. et de Phèdre. En Italie même, certaines copient purement et simplement les sarcophages de la métropole romaine (65–67); de même, un sarcophage syrien (54) reprend les motifs créés dans les ateliers attiques. Mais dès le II^e s., plusieurs reliefs sculptés dans la région du Danube présentent des compositions beaucoup plus originales. Sur un relief de Brigetio (73) la nourrice est agenouillée devant H. qui se détourne; la main tendue du jeune homme, doigts écartés, montre qu'il vient de jeter le diptyque représenté ouvert sur le sol. L'attitude de la nourrice est nouvelle – peintures et sarcophages la montrent debout, tout au plus courbée devant H. Plus inhabituelle encore est celle de Phèdre, accoudée sur un pilier, les jambes croisées, le haut du corps entièrement nu: une Phèdre séductrice qui n'a rien en commun avec la femme pudiquement drapée et voilée que montrent peintures et reliefs. On notera que seules les bottes caractérisent H. comme chasseur et qu'aucun des attributs qui l'accompagnent généralement – lance, chien ou cheval – n'est figuré ici. Un relief de Flavia Solva (74) se rattache au même courant iconographique: la nourrice est agenouillée, les bras tendus vers H., cette fois figuré en chasseur; comme sur 73, un Eros, torche en main, fait le lien entre H. et Phèdre. Cette dernière a presque totalement disparu mais on voit qu'elle était en train de rédiger sur une tablette le message d'amour. Les deux reliefs s'accordent donc à la montrer désireuse de déclarer sa passion à H., et peut-être faut-il voir cette fois dans le motif de la lettre écrite par Phèdre l'influence directe de la création d'Ovide. Le diptyque figure aussi sur un relief de Pöchlarn (95): il vient d'être jeté à terre par H., qui fait de la main dr. le geste habituel de refus, tandis que la nourrice – si c'est bien elle – s'éloigne à dr. Enfin, un autre relief de Brigetio (121) montre une version très dépouillée de la mort d'H., avec le jeune homme tombé de pleine face devant ses chevaux cabrés.

L'art de la mosaïque n'a pas ignoré la légende d'H. et celle-ci semble avoir connu une faveur particulière en Orient, où l'on connaît quatre pavements qui l'illustrent. Tous représentent la scène de la révélation d'amour, avec ou sans l'intervention de la nourrice. La plus ancienne mosaïque provient d'Antioche et date de l'époque antonine. H. y est figuré en chasseur, vêtu d'une tunique courte et d'une chlamyde, et il vient de jeter à terre les tablettes dans un geste qui rappelle le relief de Brigetio (73) contemporain. La nourrice n'est pas en train de supplier H. comme sur la plupart des autres représentations de cet épisode, mais elle lui désigne Phèdre qui s'approche entièrement drapée et voilée. Cette composition, où Phèdre est debout et assiste à l'entrevue, n'est pourtant pas comparable à celle des reliefs danubiens: loin de chercher à séduire H., Phèdre se drape avec pudeur et la mosaïque d'Antioche est plutôt à mettre en parallèle avec la peinture pompéienne 47 où la nourrice tente d'apitoyer H. en lui montrant le désespoir qui accable sa maîtresse. Plus proche des représentations traditionnelles est la mosaïque de Paphos 35, datée de la 2^e moitié du III^e s., qui oppose à Phèdre assise, drapée et voilée, un H. debout, presque nu, la tablette en main, dans une composition très sobre, dépouillée de tout décor et de tout personnage annexe. Eros seul assiste à la rencontre et sa présence renforce le caractère idyllique de cette scène dont le seul élément anecdotique demeure la tablette. Dans le courant du IV^e s. la mosaïque de Cheikh Zoueide (49) donne une version plus développée de la scène de la révélation et reprend, trois siècles plus tard, la composition utilisée par la peinture de la Domus Aurea (42); mais Phèdre est assise à l'intérieur de son palais et n'est donc pas supposée assister à la rencontre entre H. et la nourrice, et l'aveu d'amour se fait au moyen de la tablette. H. porte le même équipement de chasse que sur la mosaïque d'Antioche. C'est avec un costume similaire qu'il figure sur la mosaïque de la «Mégaloptychia» d'Antioche (8), datée du V^e s., en compagnie d'autres chasseurs célèbres. N'était l'inscription qui le désigne, H., pas plus que ses compagnons, ne se distinguerait sur cette mosaïque d'un chasseur «ordinaire»; en l'absence de lien précis avec la légende, il apparaît plutôt ici comme une figure symbolique concrétisant la mégaloptychia, la Magnanimité dont l'allégorie occupe le centre de la mosaïque – symbolisme qui rejoint celui des sarcophages romains où Virtus chasse aux côtés d'H. Une mosaïque du VI^e s. récemment découverte à Madaba (50) et malheureusement très endommagée illustre à nouveau l'épisode de la révélation. H. a totalement disparu mais l'inscription permet de voir qu'il était figuré dans la partie dr. avec ses compagnons de chasse, tandis que Phèdre est dans la partie g., cette fois-ci entourée de ses servantes; l'une de celles-ci semble lui désigner H., ce qui rend plus évidente encore l'analogie avec la peinture de la Domus Aurea. La principale lacune affectant le groupe d'H. et de la nourrice, il est impossible de savoir si cette dernière présentait une lettre à H. Il est tentant d'établir un parallèle entre cette mosaïque tardive et l'Ἐκφρασις ἐκλόνογος de Procope de Gaza (75) à peu près contemporaine (voir à ce sujet Buschhausen, H., dans I mosaici di Giordania [1986] 124–126). La peinture décrite par Procope est une vaste composition où se mêlent, aux éléments traditionnels de la légende d'H., un certain nombre de détails insolites comme la chasse d'H. en compagnie de Daphné ou encore le châtiment de la nourrice par un compagnon d'H. Cette dernière scène se déroule sous les yeux d'un fauconnier dont la description correspond parfaitement à celui qui figure sur la mosaïque de Madaba à côté de la nourrice. Sans pour autant conclure à une relation précise entre le texte de Procope et la mosaïque, on peut supposer que la tradition rhétorique avait joué un rôle non négligeable dans la survivance tardive de thèmes classiques comme la légende d'H.

Deux autres documents témoignent d'ailleurs de sa popularité jusqu'à la fin de l'Antiquité. Un diptyque en ivoire du V^e s. (39) présente, debout côte à côte, H. nu, en train de lire la tablette, et Phèdre qui le regarde; Eros volette au-dessus du couple – scène idyllique qui fait pendant à un autre couple d'amants figurés sur le second volet du diptyque. H. ne semble pas affecté à la lecture du message et rien ne laisse ici présager l'issue dramatique de l'aveu d'amour. Une autre étape est franchie dans cette perte du sens originel de l'image avec le décor d'un plat d'argent du VI^e s. (38). H., toujours en train de lire la tablette, tourne le dos à Phèdre dont la pose lascive rappelle celle de la Phèdre à demi nue du relief de Brigetio (73). C'est elle, et non plus la nourrice, qui agrippe ici le manteau d'H.: la méconnaissance du motif original a donc entraîné une transformation du sens de ce geste qui traduit, non plus la supplication, mais la séduction. Weitzmann a voulu voir dans cette image l'influence du thème iconographique chrétien de la séduction de Joseph par l'épouse de Putiphar. Mais une comparaison avec les documents antérieurs montre clairement comment a pu s'effectuer pareille déviation du motif sans que l'on ait à invoquer une influence extérieure.

Il reste à signaler que parmi toutes les représentations recensées dans le catalogue, où dominant, parfois regroupés sur un même monument, le thème de l'amour fatal et celui du chasseur exemplaire, un document demeure tout à fait unique, jusqu'à présent, la lampe gallo-romaine 123 qui illustre la résurrection d'H. par Asklépios – un épisode qui figure en bonne place dans la poésie latine (Verg. Aen. 7, 767-777; Ov. met. 15, 533-546).

PASCALE LINANT DE BELLEFONDS

HIPPOLYTOS II

(Ἰππόλυτος) Nom désignant, sur des vases corinthiens, divers personnages (un hoplite, un guerrier en char, un guerrier mort), parfois dans un contexte troyen.

1. (= Alexandros 67* avec bibl., = Automedousa 2, = Hektor 10, = Helene 190) Cratère à colonnettes, cor. moyen. New York, MMA 27.116. D'Italie. – Lorber, Inscriften n° 44 pl. 11. – P. de Detroit (Benson), vers 580 av. J.-C. – Au centre, Alexandros et Hélène en char, accompagnés de quatre autres couples: des inscr. désignent Daiphon, Hektor, Automedousa. A l'extrémité dr., un hoplite nommé HIΠOΛΥΤΟΣ (casque, cuirasse, cnémides) s'avance vers la g., lance dans la main dr., bouclier au bras g.

2.* Cratère à colonnettes, cor. moyen. Paris, Louvre E 636. De Cerveteri. – Payne, NC 166 n° 54 cat. 1456; Benson, KorVasen 58 n° 100, 1: p. du Cratère d'Hippolyte; Banti, L., EAA II (1959) 925 s.v. «Cratere di Ippolito, Pittore del», fig. 1186; Arena, Iscrizioni n° 66; Lorber, Inscriften n° 85 pl. 20. – 570-550 av. J.-C. – Deux guerriers s'affrontent au-dessus du corps d'H. (HIΠΠOΛYTOΣ), nu, étendu sur le sol. De part et d'autre, un cavalier.

3.* (= Damon 2* avec bibl., = Eurylochos III 1, = Kebriones 4) Cratère à colonnettes, cor. récent. Naples, Mus. Naz. 80 996 (H 685). De Nola ou Capoue. – Lorber, Inscriften n° 125 pl. 38. – Manière du p. d'Amphiaros (Benson), 570-550 av. J.-C. – Scène de départ de guerriers, à pied et en char. Tous les noms, parmi lesquels ceux d'→Hektor et Kébrionès, sont inscrits. Sur le char de dr., H. (HIΠΠOΛYTOΣ) et son cocher.

Le nom H. appartient à ce groupe de noms fréquemment utilisés par les peintres de vases corinthiens dans un contexte mythologique, mais inconnus de nous dans la littérature épique (sur ces noms et leur utilisation →Dion, Commentaire). Bien que le contexte troyen semble assuré, sur 1 et 3, par les inscriptions – Hektor figure sur les deux représentations et 1 fait clairement allusion au mariage de Pâris et Hélène à Troie – il est impossible de préciser l'identité de cet H. Nous ne sommes pas davantage renseignés par l'image du cratère du Louvre (2), où les deux guerriers qui combattent au-dessus du corps d'H. – selon le schéma bien connu du duel d'Achille et d'Hektor au-dessus du cadavre de Patrocle – demeurent, en l'absence d'inscriptions, anonymes.

PASCALE LINANT DE BELLEFONDS

HIPPOLYTOS III

(Ἰππόλυτος) Nom d'un guerrier sur un vase d'Euphronios.

1. (= Hermes 593* avec bibl.) Cratère en cloche attique à f.r. New York, MMA 1972.11.10. – v. Bothmer, D., AA 1976, 493-494 fig. 2.5.8; Simon/Hirmer, Vasen 98 fig. 103; Scheffold, SB II 225-226 fig. 303. – Euphronios (signé), vers 510 av. J.-C. – Tous les noms sont inscrits. →Hypnos, à g., et →Thanatos, à dr., soulèvent le cadavre de →Sarpédon. A l'arrière-plan, Hermès assiste à la scène qu'encadrent deux guerriers: à g. Leodamas, à dr. H., barbu (casque, cnémides), main dr. appuyée sur une lance, bouclier au bras g.

Le nom Leodamas apparaît plusieurs fois dans les sources littéraires, dans un contexte troyen: chez Hom. Il. 15, 516-517, c'est un Troyen tué par Ajax, et Q. Smyrn. 11, 20-21 en fait un guerrier lycien. Leodamas pourrait donc être un compagnon de Sarpédon. Pour H. en revanche, aucune source littéraire, à notre connaissance, ne mentionne le nom dans un contexte troyen et, bien qu'il soit inscrit sur au moins deux vases corinthiens illustrant un épisode du cycle troyen (→Hippolytos II 1. 3), rien ne permet d'affirmer qu'il s'agisse, sur le vase d'Euphronios, du même personnage. Sa présence et celle de Leodamas évoquent sans aucun doute le champ de bataille auquel les dieux vont soustraire le corps de Sarpédon; mais ni l'un ni l'autre ne paraissent s'intéresser à l'action qui se déroule sous leurs yeux, et leur indifférence accentue encore le côté surnaturel de l'enlèvement.

PASCALE LINANT DE BELLEFONDS

HIPPOMACHE → Amazones 724

HIPPOMACHOS

(Ἰππομάχος) Héros troyen, fils d'Antimaque.

SOURCES LITTÉRAIRES: Hom. Il. 12, 188-189 décrit la mort d'H. sous les coups de Léontée (Leonteus), qui le «frappe de sa javeline, en l'atteignant au ceinturon».

BIBLIOGRAPHIE: Drexler, W., MLI 2 (1884-86) 2687 s.v. «Hippomachos 1»; Scichilone, G., EAA IV (1961) 39 s.v. «Hippomachos».

1. (= Ainoi 1* avec bibl., = Deiphobos 13 avec bibl., = Hekabe 15, = Hektor 12, = Kebriones 3*) Cratère à colonnettes corinthien. Paris, Louvre E 638. De Cerveteri. – Friis Johansen, Iliad 80-82 fig. 19; De Cerveteri. – 247 n° 14; Lorber, Inscriften 80-81 n° 126 pl. 34. – 570-560 av. J.-C. – Sur la g., départ d'Hektor en présence de Priam, Hécube, Déiphobe, Polyxène et Cassandre (tous inscr.). Au centre, à l'arrière-plan derrière l'attelage conduit par Kébrionès (inscr.), H. est debout, tourné vers la g. Il est vêtu en hoplite (casque, cnémides, lance sur l'épaule dr., bouclier?) et il fait face à deux femmes drapées (sans inscr.).

L'épisode des adieux d'Hektor à ses parents, au contraire de celui des adieux à Andromaque, n'est pas relaté dans l'Iliade. La scène de 1 est donc à rattacher à une autre tradition, ou plutôt à l'individualisation d'une scène de genre (le départ de guerrier) au moyen de noms de héros empruntés à l'épopée (Friis Johansen 80-82; Scheffold, Sagenbilder 81). Dans ce contexte, rien n'interdit de voir en H. le héros des vers 188-189 du chant 12 de l'Iliade, une identification refusée jadis par O. Jahn et, à sa suite, Luckenbach, H., Jahrbücher für class. Philologie, 11. Suppl. (1880) 497. 544 n. 4. Sur le document figuré 1, l'iconographie de H. ne se distingue pas de celle de l'hoplite.

JEAN-ROBERT GISLER

HIPPOMEDON I

(Ἰππομέδων, Hippomedon) One of the Seven against Thebes, brother of →Adrastos. For literary sources and (rare) iconography in the context of the Theban expedition see →Septem. The context of the following scene is unknown:

1. Neck amphora, Attic bf. Rome, Villa Giulia. From Cerveteri. – ABV 693, 8bis: Three-Line Group; Para 140; Add 86. – About 520 B.C. – «Hippomedon (HIΠΠOMEDON) laying a flower on an altar and invoking the god with the word ὄναξ (ONAXS); his wife ΠΟΛΥΚΑΣΤΕ stands facing him, holding his helmet and girdle.»

The H. on 1 is more likely to be the H. who attacked Thebes than any of the other H.s known from literature. The Polykaste is unknown; she cannot be either of the two known Polykastēs (a daughter of Nestor and the mother of Penelope, cf. Zechner, I., RE XXI 2 [1952] 1693-1695).

Scheffold/Jung, SB V 75. 408 (with fig. 57) recall Stephani's suggestion that H. rescuing →Hypsipyle (I) is shown on the Sotades Painter cup, London D 7 (= Archemoros 11), but recent studies have favoured other interpretations: see →Hesperie I with refs.

JOHN BOARDMAN

HIPPOMEDON II

(Ἰππομέδων, Hippomedon) Victor over →Atalante in the footrace. The only literary authority naming H. rather than →Hippomenes or →Meilanion as victor over Atalante is Schol. Apoll. Rhod. 1, 769 (varia lectio).

That this is not an idle error is shown by two Roman representations which name him: a glass bowl on which Atalante pursues him with drawn sword (→Atalante 83*) and a clay relief roundel on which he stands victorious beside her (→Atalante 82*). There is no reason to identify this H. with the Hippomedon of the Seven against Thebes.

JOHN BOARDMAN

HIPPO(MEDON) III → Alexandros 67 = Automedousa 2

HIPPOMEDON IV → Doroi 1

HIPPOMENES

(Ἰππομένης, Hippomenes) Son of →Megareus of Onchestos and Merope. Victor over →Atalante in the footrace, distracting her by throwing down golden apples. They lay together in a sanctuary and were turned into lions by Zeus or Kybele.

LITERARY SOURCES: For his parents see Schol. Theokr. 3, 40b, c; Hyg. fab. 185. The fullest version of the story is in Ovid met. 10, 560-707 where Aphrodite gives him three apples, of which the last he throws down is heavier, as an extra handicap to Atalanta. Hesiod (fig. 74 Merkelbach/West) has H. competing naked against Atalante, and a scene with her father →Schoineus (fig. 75. 76) in which the three apples are introduced but H.'s name does not itself appear. Theokritos (3, 40-42) alludes to H.'s ruse with the apples. The apples are said to be from Tamassos (Ov. met. 10, 644-651) or the Hesperides (Schol. Theokr. 3, 40b, c) or from Dionysos' wreath (Schol. Theokr. 2, 120, citing Philetas [fig. 18 Powell] and a Callimachus [medicus?]). Other authorities name →Meilanion or →Hippomedon (II) as the victor. Apollodoros (bibl. 3 [108-109] 9, 2), who prefers Melanion, remarks that Euripides (Phoen. 1162) names him H. For other sources about the race see →Atalante.

BIBLIOGRAPHY: Beazley, J. D., AJA 64, 1960, 223-225 on 1; Drexler, W., MLI 2 (1886-90) 2688-2689 s.v. «Hippomenes 2»; Eitrem, S., RE VIII 2 (1913) 1887-1888, s.v. «Hippomenes 1»; Laser, S., Hermes 80, 1952, 372-376 (Hesiod and the race); Robert, Heldensage II 83; Trumpf, J., Hermes 88, 1960, 20-21 (the apples).

CATALOGUE

1. (= Atalante 73* with bibl., = Herakles 2803 with further refs.) Volute crater frs., Attic rf. Ferrara, Mus. Naz. 2865 (T 404). From Spina. – ARV 2 1039, 9; Peleus P.; Add 319; Beazley pls. 53, 1. 3; 54. – About 440-430 B.C. – Atalante stands with arms raised and H. (named) crouches before her, possibly holding her. At the l. is Kleomolpos, at the r. a boxer, Amykos. On the reverse Polydeukes receives a prize. Beazley suggests a confusion here between the Games, in which Peleus wrestled Atalante, and the Amykos episode, the latter being wrongly labelled and Peleus misnamed H.

2. (= Aphrodite 1523* with bibl., = Atalante 81 with bibl.) Calyx crater, Attic rf. Bologna, Mus. Civ. 300 from Bologna. - ARV² 1152, 7: Dinos P.; Add² 336. - About 420 B. C. - Aphrodite addresses H., apparently taking an apple (?) from Eros, who holds two others, to give to him. Beside them stands Atalante, naked, beside a laver.

3.* (= Atalante 84* with bibl.) Glass beaker, incised. Corning, Mus. of Glass 66.1.238, formerly Vincigliata, Lord Westbury Coll. From Vada, Maremma Toscana. - Ausonia 9, 1919, 82-83 figs. 1-2. - 2nd-3rd cent. A.D. - Atalante pursues H., who is naked, with a drawn sword. Both figures are named. Foliage in the background but not certainly apples.

COMMENTARY

The only Greek representation naming H. (I) shows him with Atalante in unexpected company and the action appears to imply wrestling, not running, so the inscription may be mistaken. The preparation for the race is shown on 2 with H. receiving the apples from Aphrodite and Atalante naked. Admiration of her beauty at the preparation for the race is especially noted by Hesiod and Ovid. The only illustration of the race itself is Roman, 3, of a period in which the victor is more often named → Hippomedon (II) (→ Atalante 82*. 83*). In other scenes with Atalante as an athlete her companion is more probably Peleus (→ Atalante 85-89), or at least not demonstrably H.

JOHN BOARDMAN

HIPPONIKA

(Ἰππονίκη) Beigeschriebener Frauenname auf I.

1. Kraterfr., spätkorinthisch. Delphi, Mus. Aus Delphi. - Amyx, CVP 581, 91; 638; Perdrizet, P., FDelphes V (1908) 144 Nr. 134 Abb. 594; Payne, NC 136. 166 Nr. 53; 328 Nr. 1453; Steuben 68. 123 K 6 mit Lit.; Lorber, Inscriben Nr. 84 Taf. 18; → Aias II S. 350. - 570-550 v. Chr. - Reste einer kämpfenden (?) Athena «Promachos» (ΑΘΑ); hinter ihr Namensbeischr. HIPPONIKA (zugehörige Figur verloren).

Zu den verschiedenen bisherigen Deutungen (Kentauren- oder Gigantenkampf?, Palladion in Kassandraszene einer Iliouperis; Amazonomachie) cf. Lorber und Amyx; keine davon vermag ganz zu überzeugen. Der Versuch, die Striche vor Athenas Gesicht als Zweigspitzen zu erklären, die zu einem Ast, der Waffe des Athenagegners, gehören, ist mit der Schwierigkeit verbunden, daß Athena in Kentaurenkämpfen nicht belegt ist (→ Kentauroi) und daß Giganten nicht mit Ästen kämpfen (→ Gigantes S. 215). Eher ist daher eine andere Deutung dieser Striche zu suchen (cf. Amyx). Der Name H., der als Amazonenname auf einer att. rf. Vase belegt ist (→ Amazonas 88*, ARV² 653, 2), muß nicht ausschließlich für Amazonen verwendet worden sein. Athena ist selten in Amazonomachien (→ Amazonas 49*. 50. 61; v. Bothmer, Amazons 68-69; in keinem der Beispiele kämpft sie).

PIERRE MÜLLER

HIPPONIKE → Amazonas 88

HIPPOPHORAS

(Ἰπποφώρας) Personifikation des gleichnamigen Flusses in Pisidien, heute Uluborlu Çay. Der antike Name des Flusses erscheint nur auf Münzen.

BIBLIOGRAPHIE: v. Aulock, H., Münzen und Städte Pisidiens II, IstanbMitt Beih. 22 (1979) 20-23. 54-55. 61. 63.

Münzen von Apollonia Mordiaion (Pisidien)

1.* AE, Prägungen mit Alexander dem Großen (Zeit des Caracalla); Philippus I. (244-249 n. Chr.), Gallienus (253-268 n. Chr.). - Imhoof-Blumer, Flußg 336-337 Nr. 410-411 Taf. 13, 12. 13; v. Aulock 54-55 Nr. 34-53; 61 Nr. 146-148; 63 Nr. 184-206. - Rs.: H. bärtig, linkshin gelagert, ein Himation um den Unterkörper geschlungen; ein Zipfel des Gewandes fällt über den l. Unterarm herab. In der Rechten Schilfrohr, den l. Arm auf ein Quellgefäß gelehnt, in der l. Armbeuge Füllhorn. ἸΠΠΟΦΩΡΑΣ oder Ethnikon.

2.* AE, 3. Jh. n. Chr. - v. Aulock 55 Nr. 54-56. - Rs.: Wie 1, jedoch ohne Füllhorn, l. Hand auf den Boden gestützt, r. daneben Quellgefäß; das Himation ist über die l. Schulter gezogen und scheint sich mit dem über den l. Unterarm gelegten Gewandzipfel zu vereinigen. ἸΠΠΟΦΩΡΑΣ. Vs.: → Tyche.

H. erscheint in dem in hellenistisch-römischer Zeit weit verbreiteten Schema des gelagerten Flußgottes (→ Fluvii).

THOMAS GANSCHOW

HIPPO REGIUS

Personifikation der gleichnamigen Stadt (heute Annaba in Algerien).

BIBLIOGRAPHIE: Dessau, H., RE VIII 2 (1913) 2627-2628 s. v. «Hippo Regius»; Fellmann, R., LAW 1303 s. v. «Hippo Regius»; Romanelli, P., EAA II (1959) 132-134 s. v. «Bona».

Münzen von Hippo Regius

1.* AE, 1. Jh. v. Chr. - Babelon, de Luynes IV Nr. 3977-3979; Mazard, CNNM 152-153 Nr. 517-519 Abb. 517-518; 254 Abb. 517-519. - Vs.: Kopf der Stadtgöttin mit Mauerkrone und einigen gewellten, herabfallenden Haarsträhnen nach l. Rs.: Pferd.

Die Darstellung entspricht einem der geläufigsten Stadtpersonifikationstypen, der Kopf mit Mauerkrone nach l., der besonders gern, wie auch in unserem Falle, für die Vorderseiten von Münzen verwendet wurde. Bei Babelon wurde als Prägeort noch Gazauphala, ein kleiner, unbedeutender Ort im Innern Algeriens, angesehen, jedoch wies Mazard 152 diese Münzen überzeugend Hippo Regius zu.

RAINER VOLLKOMMER

HIPPOS

(Ἴππος) Satyrname (→ Silenos, Silenoi) in einer Vaseninschrift.

1. (= Dorkis 2 mit Lit. und Beschreibung) Kolonnenkrater, chalkidisch. Brüssel, Mus. Roy. A 135. Aus Vulci. - Fränkel, Namen 7. 82 Nr. B. - H. (..ἼΠΠΟΣ) tanzt zwischen → Xantho und Fio (→ Io III).

ANNELIESE KOSSATZ-DEISSMANN

HIPPOSTROPHOS → Hippobatas, Hippostrophos

HIPPOTES

(Ἰππότης) Sohn des korinthischen Königs → Kreon (II) und Bruder der → Kreousa (II), der unglücklichen Braut des → Iason, die durch die Geschenke der → Medea umkam. H. suchte die Schwester vergebens zu retten und machte nach ihrem Tod Medea den Prozeß. Seine Mutter war → Merope (nur auf I überliefert).

LITERARISCHE QUELLEN: Als Sohn des Kreon ist der auch in anderen Sagen begegnende Name H. («Reiter») bezeugt in: Schol. Eur. Medea 19; Diod. 4, 55, 5, wahrscheinlich nach Dionysios Skytobrachion (FGrH 32 F 14 p. 257; Rusten, J. S., Dionysius Skytobrachion [1982] fig. 38) und Hyg. fab. 27, wohl nach dem Medus des Pacuvius; vgl. Helm, R., RE XVIII 2 (1942) 2167 s. v. «Pacuvius 6». Daß H. der Medea den Prozeß machte, steht bei Diod., doch wurde die Stelle von Stoll unzutreffend interpretiert (H. habe anstelle von Kreon Medea in Korinth aufgenommen), was sich über Kroll in Lexika fortgeerbt hat (s. Bibliographie). Es entspricht griechischem Rechtsempfinden, daß der Bruder die Mörderin seiner Schwester anklagt, zumal auch Kreon beim Tod seiner Tochter umgekommen war (Apollod. bibl. 1, 145; vgl. Hyg. fab. 25).

BIBLIOGRAPHIE: v. Geisau, H., KlPauly II (1967) 1178 s. v. «Hippotes 3» (wiederholt unzutreffende Interpretationen von Kroll und Stoll); Kroll, W., RE VIII 2 (1913) 1923 s. v. «Hippotes 3»; Lesky, A., RE XV 1 (1932) 47-48 s. v. «Medeia» (korrekt); Stoll, H. W., ML I 2 (1886-90) 2692 s. v. «Hippotes 3»; Trendall/Webster, Illustrations 110-111 (III 5, 4).

Mythologisch wichtiger, aber in der Bildkunst bisher nicht nachgewiesen, ist der Heraklide H., der in obigen Lexikonartikeln jeweils unter Nr. 2 behandelt ist; dazu: Prinz, F., Gründungsmythen und Sagenchronologie (1979) 300. 305-307.

KATALOG

1.* (= Aietes I mit Lit., = Iason 74 mit Lit.) Volutenkrater, apul. München, Antikenslg. 3296. - RVAp II 533, 283 Taf. 195 und Suppl. 1, 69: Unterweltsmaler; Pfuhl, MuZ Abb. 795; Robert, a. O. 2. - 330/20 v. Chr. - In einem sechssäuligen ionischen Naikos sinkt Kreonteia (Inschrift am Architrav) vor dem Thron, auf dem sie als Braut saß, im Todeschmerz nieder. Gewand und Kranz, die tödlichen Geschenke der Medea, tun ihre Wirkung. Ihr greiser Vater Kreon (Inschrift am Architrav) faßt sie um die Hüfte und infiziert sich so ebenfalls mit dem Gift. Von r. eilt H. herbei (Inschrift über seinem Kopf eingeritzt) und versucht, sie von dem Kranz zu befreien. Von l. unten stützt die Mutter Merope (Inschrift) heran und führt die Rechte wie Kreon im Klagegestus zum Haupt. H. trägt einem schmalen, um beide Schultern geschlungenen Mantel und ein Schwert an der Seite. Der Petasos im Nacken - Jason im unteren Register besitzt ihn nicht - mag auf seinen Namen («Reiter») anspielen. Da er den vergifteten Kranz berührt, ist er ebenfalls gefährdet. Den Schriftquellen zufolge überlebte er jedoch als Zeuge und Ankläger. - Das Vasenbild kann trotz Robert (zu 2) nicht mit der Tragödie des Euripides verbunden werden, da es zu viele «literarische» Abweichungen von dessen Medeia zeigt. Es wurde überzeugend mit einer uns völlig verlorenen Tragödie des 4. Jh. in Verbindung gebracht (Trendall/Webster, mit Lit.).

HYPOTHETISCHE DEUTUNG

2. Links außen stehende Gestalt auf den Medeasarkophagen (Koch/Sichtermann, RömSark 159-161), die im allgemeinen Jason genannt wird. Dagegen spricht jedoch der bekränzte junge Mann mit der Handgirlande an dieser Stelle auf dem Basler Medeasarkophag: Koch/Sichtermann, RömSark Abb. 181; gute Details: Schmidt, M., Der Basler Medeasarkophag (1969) Taf. 10, 1; 13. Da auf I nicht Jason, sondern H. sich in der Nähe der Braut befindet, kann man fragen, ob er in dem jungen Mann auf den genannten Sarkophagen jeweils zu erkennen ist. Eine sorgfältige ikonographische Analyse der gesamten Sarkophaggruppe könnte wohl weiter führen. Sowohl F. Matz d. J. als auch Koch/Sichtermann stützen sich in der Sarkophagdeutung allgemein zu sehr auf C. Robert, dessen Hermeneutik in SarkRel stärker überholt ist, als in der Forschung angenommen wird. Entsprechendes gilt für Roberts Deutung von I, so sehr er sie in Archäologische Hermeneutik (1919) 159-167 vertritt. Die Rückführung auf die Medeia des Euripides läßt sich nicht halten (vgl. Trendall/Webster).

KOMMENTAR

Die einzige inschriftlich gesicherte Darstellung des Bruders der Kreousa findet sich auf I. H. versucht vergebens, seine Schwester, die einfach als Kreontochter (Kreonteia) bezeichnet wird, von dem Giftkranz zu befreien. Dieser hat - Ironie der Medeia - die Form der Brautkrone und «paßt» so zu dem Thron im Hintergrund. Auf apulischen Vasen können nämlich Bräute am Hochzeitstag auf einem solchen prunkvollen Möbel thronen; vgl. Schmidt, M./Trendall, A. D./Cambitoglou, A., Eine Gruppe apulischer Grabvasen in Basel (1976) 98 Anm. 354 (Schmidt, M.). H. ist mit der Braut ungefähr gleichaltrig wiedergegeben, ein junger, fast nackter Heros. Er unterscheidet sich darin von dem bärtigen Jason im Register unmittelbar darunter, was durch das übereinstimmende Schema der Bewegung besonders deutlich wird. Seine Mutter Merope ist wie er nur auf I inschriftlich überliefert. Da die Mutter zur Schmückung der Braut gehört, dürfte sie sich unter den Gestalten der linken Szene des Basler Medeasarkophages (vgl. zu 2) befinden wie auch im Hintergrund der Mittelszene. Der junge Mann links außen wird hier hypothetisch H. genannt. Auch wenn sich diese Deutung bestätigen sollte, bleibt H. eine in der antiken Literatur und Bildkunst nur vereinzelt auftretende Gestalt. ERIKA SIMON

HIPPOTHOE → Peliades

HIPPOTHOON

(Ἰπποθών, HIPPOΘOON [9], ἸΠΠΟΘΩΝ [19], Ἰπποθών Etym. m. s. v., Hippothoos bzw. Hippothous Hyg. fab. 187. 252) Eleusinischer Lokal- und Kultheros, später attischer Phylenheros. Sohn des → Poseidon (Variante: des → Theseus) und der → Alope, der Tochter des Kerkyon von Eleusis. Alope setzt das Kind aus, doch Poseidon schickt eine Stute, die es nährt. Zwei Hirten finden das Kind und geraten in Streit um die Gnotismata. Sie rufen Kerkyon als Schiedsrichter an, der das Kind seiner Tochter erkennt, diese zum Tode einsperren und das Kind erneut aussetzen läßt. Da die Stute es von neuem nährt, sehen die Hirten darin das

Walten der Götter und ziehen das Kind auf, das sie H. nennen. Theseus tötet den Kerkyon auf seinem Weg von Troizen nach Athen und übergibt die Herrschaft über Eleusis dem H., der wie er selbst ein Sohn des Poseidon ist. Alope wird von Poseidon in eine Quelle verwandelt. H. ist auch sonst dem eleusinischen Fürstenhaus verbunden, ja er wird sogar als Gatte der → Metaneira bezeichnet, die wir gewöhnlich als Gattin des → Keleos und Mutter des → Triptolemos kennen. Triptolemos und Kerkyon gelten auch als Halbbrüder, Söhne einer Tochter des Amphiktyon und des Rharos bzw. des Poseidon; oder Kerkyon wird Großvater des → Mousaios genannt.

H. genoß in Eleusis seit alters Kult; so wurde z. B. der Pelanos für den Priester des H. aus dem offiziellen Mysterienfond bezahlt und H. läßt sich wahrscheinlich auf einem Fragment des athenischen Staatskalenders unter den eleusinischen Gottheiten und Heroen nachweisen. Das Heroon des H. befand sich an der heiligen Straße bei Eleusis am Kephisos, nahe dem Heiligtum des Zarex (Paus. 1, 38, 4; Hesych. s. v. Ἰπποθώντιον) und diente zugleich als zentrales Heiligtum der Phyle Hippotho(ontis). Das Hippothoontion ist das einzige der Phylenheiligümer, das sich außerhalb von Athen befand. Ungewöhnlich ist auch, daß der Kult des Phylenheros H. noch im 2. Jh. v. Chr. kein demokratisches Losamt, sondern ein gentilizisches Priesteramt geblieben war. Durch die Aufnahme des in Mythos und Kult fest in Eleusis verwurzelten H. unter die zehn attischen Phylenheroen hatte Kleisthenes Eleusis, das die Athener nach langen Kämpfen in ihren Staat eingegliedert hatten und das immer wieder zum Ausbruch neigte, fest an den athenischen Staat binden wollen.

LITERARISCHE QUELLEN: Die erhaltenen Schriftquellen sind in der Mehrzahl recht spät, am ausführlichsten ist Hyg. fab. 187. Choirilos (TrGF I 2 F 1) und Pherekyd., FGrH 3 F 147 belegen jedoch den Mythos von H. und Alope schon für das 6. bzw. das frühe 5. Jh. Außerdem nennt z. B. ein unbekannter Epiker (Powell, Collectanea Alexandrina p. 37 Euphorion frg. 35 [c]) den H. zusammen mit → Eumolpos und Dolichos, die der homerische Demeterhymnos, Hom. h. Cer. 153-156, unter den eleusinischen Fürsten aufzählt, die die umherirrende Demeter aufnehmen; auch dies zeigt übrigens, daß H. zu den mit den eleusinischen Mysterien verbundenen Heroen gehörte (bei Herodianos ed. A. Lentz II 311, 33; Lobeck, C. A., Aglaophamus [1829] I 212 schrieb diesen Vers dem Choirilos zu, v. Wilamowitz-Moellendorff, U., Menander. Das Schiedsgericht [1925] 129 dachte an die Ehöen). Der Alope-H.-Stoff war besonders im attischen Drama beliebt. Die Alope des Choirilos stammt noch aus dem 6. Jh., aus dem 5. das Satyrspiel Kerkyon des Aischylos, in dem möglicherweise auch das Geschick des H. und seiner Mutter behandelt war (cf. TrGF III p. 223) und die Alope des Euripides (TrGF frg. 105-113), aus dem 4. Jh. die gleichnamige Tragödie des Karkinos (TrGF I 70 F 1b). Sie alle sind zwar größtenteils verloren, doch scheint Hyg. fab. 187 den Inhalt der euripideischen Alope wiederzugeben, in der das künftige Schicksal der Alope und des H. wahr-scheinlich von Poseidon im Epilog verkündet wurde. Der Typus dieses von Hygin überlieferten Mythos ist uns vertraut: die Schicksale der heimlichen (Götter-) Geliebten und ihres Kindes, das gefährdet und auf wunderbare Weise gerettet wird, cf. z. B. → Antiope, → Auge, → Danae, → Hypsipyle und → Melanippe. Auch die tierische «Ammen» ist ein geläufiger Bestandteil dieser Mythen, cf. etwa → Pelias und → Neleus, → Telephos oder → Romulus und Remus (McCartney, E. S., Greek and Roman Lore of Animal-Nursed Infants. Papers of the Michigan Academy of Science, Art and Letters 44, 1924, 25 ff.; Binder, G., Die Aussetzung des Königskindes, Romulus und Kyros [1963]). Die Stute, die den kleinen H. nährte, gehörte zur ursprünglichen Geschichte und wurde nicht erst aus dem Namen H. herausgesponnen (so z. B. Kroll). Eine Stute ist gerade bei einem Sohn des Poseidon (Hippios) besonders gut passend, wie auch die ebenfalls von einer Stute genährten Poseidonsöhne Pelias und Neleus zeigen. Das Stück des Euripides hatte große Nachwirkung, so diente etwa die Schiedsgerichtsszene der Alope dem Menander zum Vorbild für seine Epitrepontes. Die athidographischen Behandlungen des H. sind leider bis auf zwei winzige Exzerpte aus Pherekyd. (s. o.) und Hellan. (FGrH 323a F 6), die hauptsächlich topographische Angaben vermitteln, verloren.

In Eleusis erinnerten nach Paus. 1, 39, 3 und Hesych. s. v. Ἀλόπη verschiedene Orte an den Mythos: Auf dem Weg nach Megara wurde das Grab der Alope, die Palaistra des Kerkyon und eine Quelle Alope oder Φιλότης gezeigt. Metaneira als Gattin des H. kennt Schol. Eur. Or. 964. Nach TrGF I 2 F 1 wurden im Drama des Choirilos Kerkyon und Triptolemos als Halbbrüder bezeichnet; Kerkyon als Vorfahren des Musaios überliefert Suda s. v. Μουσάιος.

Kerkyon und H. sind nach anderen Versionen auch in Arkadien heimisch. Kerkyon ist dort Sohn des Agamedes und Vater eines Hippothoos, der an der Kalydonischen Eberjagd teilnimmt und der Eponyme einer Phyle in Tegea wird. Das Verhältnis der eleusinischen Heroen H. und Kerkyon zu diesen arkadischen Namensvettern ist umstritten (cf. Stoll 2693; Hepding; Latte). Vermutlich spielen hier alte gemeinsame kultische Traditionen eine Rolle (so, mit etwas weitgehenden Folgerungen, Gruppe; Jacoby, F., Komm. zu Hellan., FGrH 323a F 6, Anm. 8; Kron, Phylenheroen 180; anders vor allem Latte).

Die bei Istros (FGrH 334 F 10) und Plut. Theseus 29 überlieferte Variante, daß Theseus und nicht Poseidon der Liebhaber der Alope und Vater des H. war, ist wohl eine politisch-tendenziöse Erfindung, um die athenische Vorherrschaft über Eleusis zu rechtfertigen (cf. ausführlicher Kron, Phylenheroen 179-180; anders Robert, Heldensage 2, 722: Abstammung von Theseus ist die ältere Version).

BIBLIOGRAPHIE: Gruppe, O., Griechische Mythologie I. HbAWV 1 (1906) 200. 206. 584. 600. 1147. 1187; Guerini, L., EAA IV (1961) 40 s. v. «Hippothoon»; Harrison, J. E./Verrall, M. de G., Mythology and Monuments of Ancient Athens (1890) CVI-CX. 59; Hepding, H., RE VIII 2 (1913) 1925 s. v. «Hippothoos 6»; Kroll, W., RE VIII 2 (1913) 1924 s. v. «Hippothoon»; Kron, Phylenheroen 29-31. 177-180. 182-185. 244. 276-278 H 1-20; Latte, K., RE XI 1 (1921) 314-315 s. v. «Kerkyon»; Robert, C., Archäologische Hermeneutik (1919) 397-405; idem, Heldensage 2, 721-722; Schauenburg, K., LAW 127 s. v. «Alope»; Schefold, SB IV 285-286; Séchan, Etudes 249-252; Stoll, H. W., ML I 1 (1884-86) 255-256 s. v. «Alope»; I 2 (1886-90) 2692 s. v. «Hippothoon»; 2693 s. v. «Hippothoos»; Toepffer, J., RE I 2 (1894) 1596 s. v. «Alope».

Zum Phylenheros H., zu Heiligtum und Kult des H.: Garland, R. S. J., «Religious Authority in Archaic and Classical Athens», BSA 79, 1984, 96-97. 110; Healey, R. F., «A Genetic Sacrifice in the Athenian State Calendar», in Festschr. St. Dow (1984) 135-141, bes. 137. 139-140; Kron, Phylenheroen 180-182; Martha, J., Les sacerdoce Athénien (1882) Nr. 86; Riemann, H., RE Suppl. VIII (1956) 182 s. v. «Hippothontis»; Schlaifer, R., «Notes on Athenian Public Cults», HSCP 51, 1940, 241-260 bes. 251. 253; Sokolowski, LSCG Suppl. Nr. 10; Souders, S., Die außerstädtischen Kulte Attikas und die Einigung Athens (1931) 98.

Zu H. bei der Aussendung des Triptolemos: Dugas, Ch., «La mission de Triptolème d'après l'imagerie athénienne», MEFRA 62, 1950, 7 ff. = Recueil Ch. Dugas (1960) 123-139; Kron, Phylenheroen 185-186. 277-278 H 7-15; Metzger, Recherches 16-17; Prange, H., Der Niobidenmaler und seine Werkstatt (1989) 78-80; Schwarz, G., Triptolemos. Ikonographie einer Agrar- und Mysteriengottheit (1987) 110. 114. 119.

KATALOG

(Der inschriftlich als H. bezeichnete Teilnehmer am Wagenrennen bei den Leichenspielen für Patroklos auf dem att. sf. Volutenkrater des Klitias und Ergotimos [sog. François-Vase], Florenz, Mus. Arch. 4209, ABV 76, 1; 682; Para 29, 1; Simon/Hirmer, Vasen Taf. 53. 55, ist wohl nicht mit dem Eleusinier identisch, sondern empfahl sich wegen seines hippischen Namens.)

A. Hippothoon und Alope

a) Säugung des kleinen Hippothoon durch die Stute

DEUTUNG DURCH DEN BILDTPYUS UND -ZUSAMMENHANG GESICHERT

Attische Darstellungen

I.* (= Alope I* mit Lit.) Kanne Kertscher Stils, fr. rf. Tübingen, Univ. S./10 1610. - Watzinger, KatTübingen 36 Nr. 180 Taf. 39; Kron, Phylenheroen 182-183. 187. 276 H 2 Taf. 26, 5; CVA 4 Taf. 39, 1-3; Schefold, SB IV 285 Abb. 334. - Um die Mitte des 4. Jh. v. Chr. - R. eine sich aufbäumende Stute (ehemals gelblich aufgemalt; Vorderteil verloren), die den kleinen, nach l. knienden H. (hellgelb aufgemalt, Haare und Binnenzeichnung gelbbraun) säugt. L. zuschauende Frau mit zwei langen Fackeln (Ortsnymphē Eleusis [Watzinger], nicht Alope).

2.* Attische Bleisymbole. Bisher sind fünf nicht stempelgleiche Exemplare, aber mit ähnlichem Bildtypus bekannt. - Svoronos, J. N., JArchNum 3, 1900, 331 Nr. 143 Taf. 2, 2; 331 Nr. 14 Taf. 2, 25; 331 Nr. 145 Taf. 2, 26; Lang, M./Crosby, M., Weights, Measures and Tokens. The Athenian Agora X (1964) 99 L 133 Taf. 24; 99 L 134 Taf. 24; Kron, Phylenheroen 183-184. 187. 276-277 H 3 Taf. 26, 1-4. - 4.-2. Jh. v. Chr. - Vs.: H. ähnlich wie auf I, Stute jedoch ruhig nach r. stehend.

DEUTUNG WEGEN DES BILDSTYPUS MÖGLICH

Außerattische Darstellungen

3.* Etr. Goldbulle. Paris, Louvre Bj 743 (C 190). Aus Etrurien. – de Ridder, Bijoux antiques 67 Nr. 743 Taf. 13 Abb. 743 (= H.); Brommer, Denkmälerlisten III 164, 3 s. v. «H.»; Cristofani, M./Martinelli, M., L'oro degli Etruschi (1983) 64; 315 Nr. 262; 235 Abb. 262. – Mitte des 4.–2. Jh. v. Chr. – Nackter Knabe nach r. unter einer Stute kauend, die ihn mit zurückgewandtem Kopf säugt; r. nackter Mann, der mit der Rechten nach der Stute, mit der Linken nach dem Knaben greift.

4.* Etr. Goldbullae. Vatikan, Mus. Greg. Etr. 13412. Aus Vulci. – Giglioli 70 Taf. 376, 3 (H.); Andren, A., OpuscArch 5, 1948, 95–96 Abb. 1; Becatti, G., Oreficerie antiche dalle minoiche alle barbariche (1955) 192 Nr. 359 Taf. 92 (H.); Dohrn, T., Helbig I Nr. 764 (H.); Brommer, Denkmälerlisten III 164, 2 s. v. «H.»; Cristofani/Martelli, a. O. 3, 64; 315 Nr. 260; 235 Abb. 259. – Mitte 4.–3. Jh. v. Chr. – Eine Kette mit sieben Bullae, zwei wie 3, auf den restlichen Bullae Szenen aus dem Achilleus-Mythos (→ Achle 65*–66*, → Hephaistos/Sethlans 4).

b) Schiedsgericht und Erkennung des kleinen Hippothoon

DEUTUNG UNWAHRSCHEINLICH

Außerattische Darstellungen

5. (= Alkestis 56, = Ion 4) Graeco-baktrischer Silberbecher. Leningrad, Ermitage. Aus Kustanai, Kasachstan. – Weitzmann, K., ArtBull 25, 1943, 289–292, 295–296, 319–324 Abb. 5; idem, Illustrations in Roll and Codex (1970) 26–27 Taf. 9 (Lit. in Anm. 38); van Heland, M., The Golden Bowl from Pietrosa. Acta Univ. Stockholm 24 (1973) 17–18 Abb. 7; Kron, Phylenheroen 184–185, 277 H 6. – 2. Jh. n. Chr. (nach einem hellenistischen Vorbild)? – A–B: Vier Szenen, darunter nach Weitzmann das Schiedsgericht (statt des königlichen Richters Kerkyon allerdings eine Gottheit) mit den zwei streitenden Hirten, zwischen denen am Boden das Kind H. sitzt. S. aber → Ion 4.

c) Schiedsgericht, Erkennung des kleinen Hippothoon und Rettung der Alope (?)

DEUTUNG UNGESICHERT BZW. ABZULEHNEN

Außerattische Darstellungen

6. (= Achilleus 182 mit Lit.) Goldener Gorytosbeschlagn. Leningrad, Ermitage. Aus dem Grabhügel von Chertomlyk (und Duplikate aus Iljincy, Melitopol, Elisavetovskaja). – Stephani, L., CRPetersb (1864) 165–171 Taf. 4; Richter, G. M. A., MetrMusSt 4, 1932/33, 114–115, 125 Abb. 11, 12; Minns, E. H., The Scythians and the Greeks (1913) 164 Abb. 53; 206, 207, 285 Abb. 306; Artamonow, M. J./Talbot Rice, T., Treasures from Scythian Tombs (1969) 55–57 Abb. 181, 182; Blawatzki, W., in Le rayonnement des civilisations grecque et romaine sur les cultures peripheriques (1965) 399 Taf. 94, 2; Kron, Phylenheroen 277 ?H 4; Rätzl, W., BonnJbb 178, 1978, bes. 172–178 Abb. 7, 8; Pfrommer, M., JdI 97, 1982, 152–158 Abb. 29 (zur Werkstatt und Datierung); Piotrowski, B./Gulanina, L./Gratsch, N., Skythische Kunst. Altertümer der skythischen Welt, Mitte des 7. bis zum 3. Jh. v. u. Z., Leningrad (1986) Abb. 224, 225. – Griechische Arbeit, 4. Jh. v. Chr. – Stephani wollte im oberen Bildstreifen die Bestrafung der Alope erkennen, im unteren das Schiedsgericht, in dem Theseus selbst in Gegenwart des Kerkyon den Streit der Hirten um die Gnorismata und das Kind H., das die Amme trägt, entscheidet. Abgesehen von verschiedenen Beobachtungsfehlern ist diese Version literarisch nicht belegt, eine überzeugende Deutung wurde bisher nicht gefunden.

7. (= Alope 2*) Sarkophag, römisch. Rom, Villa Doria Pamphilj 198. Aus Tivoli (?). – Robert 397–405 mit Abb. (ablehnend zur Deutung auf den H.-Mythos von J. J. Winckelmann); SarkRel III 3, 525–528 Nr. 436 Abb. 436–436b Taf. 141 (mit Lit.); Nachträge III 3, 576; Séchan, Etudes 251; Schefold, K., RA 1961, 199–200 Abb. 5 (H. und Alope); Schauenburg, 127 (H. und Alope); Kron, Phylenheroen 184–185 (ablehnend); Calza, R., Antichità di Villa Doria Pamphilj (1977) 170–171 Nr. 198 (Deutung unsicher); Turcan, R., in ANRW II 16, 2 (1978) 1720, 1722, 1724, 1730 (H. und Alope); Koch/Sichtermann, RömSark 190 mit Anm. 7 (Deutung problematisch); Schefold, SB IV 285–286 Abb. 335 (H. und Alope). – Mitte 2. Jh. n. Chr. – Beschreibung → Alope 2. – Die Deutung der einzelnen Szenen auf den Mythos von Alope und H. ist, wie schon Robert gezeigt hat, aus verschiedenen Überlieferungsgeschichtlichen sowie typologischen Gründen nicht überzeugend; cf. ausführlicher → Alope (anders wieder Schefold).

d) Hippothoon bei der Befreiung der Alope?

DEUTUNG ABZULEHNEN

8. Volutenkrater, att. rf. Ferrara, Mus. Naz. 3031 (T 579). Aus Spina. – *ARV*² 612, 1: Maler von Bologna 279; *Add*² 268; CVA I Taf. 9–10 (1653–1654); Guarducci, M., MonAnt 33, 1929, 5 ff., bes. 28; Messerschmidt, R., RM 47, 1932, 149–151; Buschor, E., Feldmäuse. SBMünchen 1, 1937, 19 Abb. 7; Brommer, *Satyrspiele*² 52 Abb. 49; Webster, *MTSP*² (1967) 47 AV 18; 150; Trendall/Webster, Illustrations II 7; Bérard, C., Anodoi (1974) 92–93 Taf. 8; Kron, Phylenheroen 276 ?H 1. – Um 450 v. Chr. – Messerschmidt versuchte das Satyrspiel im Halsbild B auf die Befreiung der Alope durch einen Hirten und Satyrn mit Hilfe des Poseidon zu deuten, den Knaben unter den Satyrn als den kleinen H. Diese Version ist jedoch weder literarisch überliefert, noch aufgrund des Bildtypus wahrscheinlich; es handelt sich vielmehr um die Darstellung der Anodos der → Aphrodite, → Pandora oder → Persephone.

B. Hippothoon als eleusinischer Heros bei der Aussendung des Triptolemos

DEUTUNG DURCH DIE BEISCHRIFT AUF IO GESICHERT

Attisch rf. Vasen

(Auf att. sf. Vasen lassen sich H. oder andere eleusinische Heroen nicht bei der Aussendung des Triptolemon nachweisen, nur andächtige, dankbare Menschen, cf. Böhr, E., Der Schaukelmaler [1982] 35; Schwarz 74–75.)

9. (= Eumolpos 4 mit Lit., = Keleos 3 mit Lit.) Stamnos. Paris, Louvre G 371. Aus Etrurien. – *ARV*² 208, 158; Berliner Maler; *Add*² 195; Schwarz, G., ÖfJh 50, 1972–75, 129–130 Abb. 5; Kron, Phylenheroen 186, 277 H 7 (H.); Raubitschek, I. K. und A. E., in Studies ... H. A. Thompson. Hesperia Suppl. XX (1982) 113; Schwarz 36 V 45; 92–93 (Eumolpos). – Um 475/60 v. Chr. – A: Aussendung des Triptolemos in Gegenwart eleusinischer Heroen, darunter wohl Keleos und Metaneira. B: Hermes und weitere eleusinische Heroen, r. wohl H.

10.* (= Demeter 346* mit Lit., = Keleos 2) Glockenkrater. Palermo, Mus. Reg. V 779. Aus Agrigent. – *ARV*² 496, 5; Oreithyamaler; Dugas 134 Nr. 37; Metzger, Recherches 15 Nr. 22; Peschlow-Bindokat, A., JdI 87, 1972, 84 Abb. 17; Kron, Phylenheroen 185–187, 277 H 8; Schwarz 39 V 61; 109–110. – Beischriften: ΗΙΠΠΟΘΟΟΝ, ΦΕΡΕΦΑΣΑ, ΤΡΙΠΤΟΛΕΜΟΣ, ΔΕΜΕΤΕΡ, ΚΕΛΕΟΣ. – Um 470/65 v. Chr. – A: Aussendung des Triptolemos im Beisein eleusinischer Heroen, darunter H.

11. (= Demeter 347 mit Lit. [A], = Keleos 8) Stamnos. Kopenhagen, Nat. Mus. 3612. Herkunft unbekannt. – *ARV*² 498, 7; Deepdene-Maler; Para 381; Dugas 134 Nr. 38; Kron, Phylenheroen 186, 278 H 9 (H.); Schwarz 39–40 V 62; 110 (Eumolpos oder H.). – Um 465/60 v. Chr. – A: Aussendung des Triptolemos. B: Frau mit Phiale zwischen zwei bärtigen Szepterträgern, wohl Metaneira, Keleos und H.

12. (= Eumolpos 6 mit Lit., = Keleos 10) Volutenkrater. London, BM E 469. Aus Altamura. – *ARV*² 589, 1; Altamura-Maler; *Add*² 264; Dugas 135 Nr. 49; Kron, Phylenheroen 185–186, 278 H 10 (H.); Schwarz 44 V 73; 115 (eleusinische Würdenträger). – Um 470/60 v. Chr. – Hals A: Aussendung des Triptolemos in Gegenwart eleusinischer Heroen, darunter H.

13. (= Demeter 350 mit Lit. [A], = Keleos 9) Kelchkrater. Leningrad, Ermitage 1601 (B 639, St 1207). – *ARV*² 591, 15; Altamura-Maler; Peredolskaja Nr. 170 Taf. 112, 1–3; Kron, Phylenheroen 185–186, 278 H 11 (H.); Schwarz 41 V 69; 114 (vielleicht H.). – Um 465/60 v. Chr. – A: Aussendung des Triptolemos. B: Zwei Paare eleusinischer Heroen beim Spendenopfer, darunter wohl Keleos und Metaneira sowie H.

14. (= Demeter 354 mit Lit., = Eumolpos 7 mit Lit., = Keleos 4) Kelchkrater. Ferrara, Mus. Naz. 2891. Aus Spina (T. 313 VT). – *ARV*² 602, 24; 1661; Niobidenmaler; Para 395; *Add*² 266–267; Kron, Phylenheroen 186, 278 H 12 (H.); Schwarz 43 V 80; 120–121 (eleusinisches Paar); Edwards, Ch. K., AJA 90, 1986, 316–317 mit Anm. 77 (l. Keleos, r. eine der Keleostöchter und H.). – Um 450/50 v. Chr. – Unterer Bildstreifen, A: Aussendung des Triptolemos im Beisein von zwei Paaren eleusinischer Heroen, r. wohl Keleos und Metaneira, l. H.

15. (= Keleos 12) Volutenkrater, fr. Reggio Calabria, Mus. Naz. Aus Lokri. – *ARV*² 603, 40; Niobi-denmaler; NotSc 1917, 154 Abb. 60; Dugas 135 Nr. 51; Kron, Phylenheroen 186, 278 H 13 (H.); Schwarz 44 V 82 (wohl Keleos und Metaneira). – Um 450 v. Chr. – A: Hinter dem Wagen des Triptolemos noch eine Frau mit zwei Fackeln erhalten, die sich nach l. zu einem Mann mit Szepter umwendet, Keleos und Metaneira oder H. und seine Gefährtin.

16.* (= Eumolpos 8 mit Lit., = Keleos 5) Volutenkrater. Paris, Louvre G 343. Aus Etrurien. – *ARV*² 600, 17; Niobidenmaler; *Add*² 266; CVA 3 Taf. 5, 3–4; 6, 7; Metzger, Recherches 15 Nr. 26; Kron, Phylenheroen 185–186, 278 H 14 (H.); Schwarz 44 V 83; 119–120 (eleusinisches Heroenpaar); Edwards, a. O. 14, 316 Anm. 75 (l. Keleos und Metaneira, r. Ortsnymph Eleusis und wegen der Nähe zum Altar eher Keryx als H.). – Um 450 v. Chr. – Hals A: Aussendung des Triptolemos im Beisein eleusinischer Heroenpaare, darunter wohl Keleos und H.

17. (= Demeter 358 mit Lit. [A], = Eumolpos 9 mit Lit. [A], = Hera 144 mit Lit. [I], = Keleos 13) Schale, wgr. rf. München, Antikenslg. 2685. Aus Vulci. – *ARV*² 837, 9; Saburoff-Maler; *Add*² 295; Kron, Phylenheroen 185, 278 H 15 (H.); Schwarz 45 V 89; 125–126 Taf. 12 (Hekate und Keleos. Daduchos und vier Mysteren). – Um 450 v. Chr. – I: Hera. A: Aussendung des Triptolemos im Beisein eleusinischer Heroen. B: fünf weitere eleusinische Heroen, darunter wohl H.

C. Hippothoon als Phylenheros

a) Hippothoon (?) beim Symposium (Siegesfeier für die Perserkriege?)

DEUTUNG Z. T. DURCH BEISCHRIFTEN GESICHERT

18. (= Erechtheus 78* mit Lit.) Widderkopfrhyton, att. rf. Richmond, Virginia Mus. 79.100. – Signatur des Töpfers Charinos längs der Widdernase; Triptolemosmaler. – Schefold, SB IV 66–68 Abb. 66, 67 (Evozierung der in den Perserkriegen hilfreichen attischen Heroen und Urkönige; Theseus kündigt dem Pandion seinen Aufbruch nach Kreta an). – Um 480/70 v. Chr. – Beischriften: ΚΕΚΡΟΦΣ, [Ε]ΥΠΟ(Μ)Π[ΟΣ] oder (verschrieben) [Η]ΙΠΠΟ[ΘΟΟΝ], ΘΕΣΕΥΣ, [ΠΑΝΔΙ]ΟΝ. – Fünf auf Kissen zum Symposium gelagerte Männer, darunter Kekrops, der greise Pandion und Theseus. Der Lyraspieler in ihrer Mitte vielleicht H.

b) Im Hesperidengarten bzw. im Elysium

DEUTUNG DURCH BEISCHRIFTEN GESICHERT

19. (= Akamas et Demophon 26* mit Lit., = Antiochos 4*, = Herakles 2717 mit Lit. und Querverweisen) Hydria, att. rf. London, BM E 224. – *ARV*² 1313, 5; Meidiasmaler; Para 477; *Add*² 361–362; Kron, Phylenheroen 142, 166–168, 186–187, 189, 193, 278 H 16 Taf. 25, 2, 3; Metzler, D., Hephaistos 2, 1980, 76–82 und in Festschr. J. Thimme (1983) 77 (mit verfehlter schamanistischer Interpretation); Neils, J., Bull. Cleveland Mus. of Art, Sept. 1983, Abb. 19–20; Schefold, SB IV 31–32 Abb. 19; Shapiro, Personifica-

tions 242–244; Burn, L., The Meidias Painter (1987) 15–25. 97 M 5 Taf. 8b. 9a. – Um 410 v. Chr. – Beischriften: ΚΑΥΤΙΟΣ, ΥΓΙΕ[Ι]Α, ΑΣΤΕΡΟΠΕ, ΧΡΥΣΟΘΕΜΙΣ, ΛΙΠΑΡΑ, ΗΡΑΚΛΗΣ, ΜΗΔΕΙΑ, ΑΡΝΙΟΠΕ, ΦΙΛΟΚΤΗΤΗΣ, ΑΚΑΜΑΣ, ΙΠΠΟΘΩΝ, ΑΝΤΙΟΧΟΣ, ΚΛΥΜΕΝΟΣ, ΟΙΝΕΥΣ, ΔΗΜΟΦΩΝ, ΧΡΥΣΙΣ. – Unter den Begleitern des Herakles im Hesperidengarten verschiedene attische Heroen und Phylenheroen, darunter H.

c) Bei der Ehrung eines Mannes, wohl eines Phylenangehörigen

20. Urkundenrelief, att. Berlin (DDR), Staatl. Mus. K 113. Aus Athen. – Blümel, KlassSkulptBerlin 80 Nr. 93 Abb. 127 (Weihrelief für zwei Heroen); Rohde, E., Griechische und römische Skulpturen in Berlin (1969) 153; Himmelmann-Wildschütz, N., Gnomon 40, 1968, 632 (Urkundenrelief mit Phylenheros); Langenfaß-Vuduroglu, F., Mensch und Pferd auf griechischen Grab- und Votivstelen (1973) 42 Nr. 84; 45. 101 (Phylenheros H.); Kron, Phylenheroen 186. 238. 278 H 17 (Phylenheros, wahrscheinlich H.); Lawton, C., Attic Document Reliefs of the Classical and Hellenistic Period (1984) Nr. 107; Meyer, M., Die griechischen Urkundenreliefs, AM 13. Beih. (1989) 290 A 89 Taf. 36, 1. – 2. Hälfte 4. Jh. v. Chr. – Heroine (Meyer a. O. 120. 194: Ortspersonifikation, Eleusis) und Heros mit Pferd, der einem Mann einen Ehrenkranz reicht.

d) Hippothoon unter den zehn Phylenheroen

21.* (= Aias I 11*, → Aigeus 40 mit Lit., = Antiochos 10* mit Lit., → Erechtheus 79 mit Lit.) Ostfries des Parthenon. London, BM und Gipsabguß, früher Paris, Ecole des Beaux-Arts, jetzt Versailles, Gipsabgußmus. – Cf. jetzt auch Hollein, H.-G., Bürgerbild und Bildwelt der attischen Demokratie auf den rotfigurigen Vasen des 6.–4. Jh. v. Chr. (1988) 255–259 (m. E. zu formalistisch). – 442–435 v. Chr. – H., einer der zehn Phylenheroen, die r. und l. von den sitzenden Gottheiten der Mittelgruppe die Panathenäenprozession erwarten, möglicherweise der Jüngling 19 (so Kron, Harrison).

22. (→ Aigeus 41 mit Lit., → Erechtheus 80 mit Lit.) Marathonweihgeschenk in Delphi, ein Werk des Phidias, nicht erhalten. – Datierung nicht gesichert, wahrscheinlich etwa 460/50 v. Chr. – Athena, Apollon, Miltiades, dazu (sieben) attische Phylenheroen und Kodros, Theseus und Philaios, sowie später Antigonos, Demetrios und Ptolemaios als Eponyme der neuen hellenistischen Phylen.

23. (→ Aigeus 42 mit Lit., → Erechtheus 81 mit Lit.) Phylenheroenmonument auf der Agora von Athen (Reste der Basis des 4. Jh. v. Chr. mit Einlassungen erhalten). – Zu den hellenistischen Bauphasen cf. auch Schalles, H.-J., Untersuchungen zur Kulturpolitik der pergamenischen Herrscher im 3. Jh. v. Chr. IstForsch 36 (1985) 140–143. – Genauer Zeitpunkt der Errichtung nicht bekannt, durch die antike Literatur seit den 20er Jahren des 5. Jh. bezeugt. – Auf einer hohen Basis standen Bronzestatuen der zehn Phylenheroen, darunter die des H.

KOMMENTAR

Bezeichnenderweise stammt die bisher älteste durch eine Beischrift gesicherte Darstellung des H. aus dem eleusinischen Sagenkreis. Auf 10, einem rf. Glockenkrater aus dem 2. Viertel des 5. Jh., wohnt H. der Aussendung des Triptolemos bei. Er steht, als älterer, bärtiger Mann, in Chiton und Himation gehüllt, mit Szepter und Myrtenkranz im schwarzen Haar am linken Bildrand. In Aussehen und Tracht entspricht er dem König Keleos von Eleusis, dem Vater des Triptolemos, der, ebenfalls inschriftlich benannt, rechts die Szene rahmt und die Rechte halb staunend, halb in ehrfürchtiger Gruß- oder Gebetsgeste vor dem Geschehen in der Bildmitte hebt. Hinter Keleos deutet eine Säule mit Gebälk Architektur an, den Königspalast oder den Tempel von Eleusis. Das würde gut zu dem betont kultischen Charakter der Szene passen. Ähnliche Architekturangaben finden sich auf 12. 13. 16. Auf 16, einer besonders reichen Darstellung des Niobidenmalers, der dieses Thema liebte und in immer neuen Variationen gestaltete, sehen wir links und rechts ein Heroenpaar. Die Frauen halten einen Strauß Ähren, die linke trägt außerdem eine große Spendeschale in der Rechten, während die andere zierlich ihren Schleier hebt. Die beiden Männer sind bärtig, bekränzt und reich gekleidet, mit langem Chiton und Himation, der linke noch zusätzlich mit einem bunt gemusterten Ependytes, beide halten ein Szepter, der linke noch einen Zweig, während er die Rechte ähnlich wie Keleos auf 10 erhebt. Hinter dem linken Paar sind wieder Säule und Gebälk zu sehen, während neben dem rechten ein Altar steht, so daß dadurch der kultische Charakter der Szene sogar noch mehr betont wird. Zu H., durch Sakralgesetze als Kultheros der Mysterien nachzuweisen, würde der Altar ebenso gut passen wie zu Keryx, dem Ahnherrn der Keryken, den man hier auch erkennen wollte. Ohne die Beischrift auf 10 hätte man kaum gewagt, den königlichen Mann H. zu nennen, obwohl auch der Mythos, wie der bei Herodianos erhaltene Vers zeigt, den H. unter den Fürsten von Eleusis kannte. Bezeichnenderweise stammt diese Namensbeischrift vom Oreithyamaler, der attische Themen liebte und in einer Zeit, als die Praxis der Namensbeischriften nachließ, noch gerne Benennungen zufügte. Die Beischriften auf 10 sind uns bei der Interpretation figurenreicher Vasenbilder mit der Aussendung des Triptolemos eine große Hilfe, da sie uns zeigen, daß es sich dabei nicht um ein Mysterienritual, sondern um eine Szene aus dem Mythos handelt und daß nicht nur eleusinische Gottheiten, sondern auch eleusinische Heroen der Aussendung beiwohnen können.

Die Benennung H. erscheint vor allem dann möglich, wenn wie auf 9. 11–17 zwei königliche Gestalten der Szene beigegeben sind, doch mögen die Vasenmaler auch bei einem «König» nicht immer nur an Keleos gedacht haben. Ohne Beischrift ist nicht sicher zu sagen, wer jeweils Keleos bzw. H. sein soll. Auf 9 und 14 ist der eine durch sein weißes Haar als der ältere gekennzeichnet, so daß ich in ihm den Vater sehen möchte, allerdings trägt gerade diese Figur auf 14 nur einen Stab, während sein Pendant ein Szepter hält, so daß eben deswegen auch die umgekehrte Benennung vorgeschlagen wird. Meist sind jedoch beide Männer durch ein Szepter ausgezeichnet. Auf 17 ist der bärtige Mann in Chiton und Himation, mit einer Binde im Haar, wohl als der königliche Vater aufzufassen, weil er sich auf der Schallenseite mit der Aussendung des Triptolemos befindet, obwohl er nicht auf ein Szepter, sondern einen Stab aufgestützt ist, während der bärtige Szepterträger der Rückseite wohl H. ist. Der Mann mit den beiden Fackeln in der Mitte wird Eumolpos sein, in den beiden Frauen zu seiner Rechten wird man zwei der Keleostöchter sehen, die dritte Keleide steht neben H.; durch nichts sind die drei Frauen und der Szepterträger als Mysterien ausgewiesen, wie man sie auch genannt hat. Hier ist vielmehr an die Tradition zu erinnern, die von einer ehelichen Verbindung des H. mit dem königlichen Haus von Eleusis wußte. Sogar Metaneira, die sonst als Gattin des Keleos und Mutter des Triptolemos bekannt ist, wird als seine Gattin genannt. Vielleicht war H. ursprünglich mit einer anderen eleusinischen Prinzessin verbunden, z. B. mit einer Tochter von Keleos und Metaneira. Die Vasen 9–17 stammen aus dem 2. Viertel des 5. Jh. Man hat vermutet, daß diese neuartigen, figurenreichen Darstellungen der Aussendung des eleusinischen Heros vom Triptolemos des Sophokles (468 v. Chr.) beeinflusst sind, doch lassen die wenigen erhaltenen Fragmente keine weiterreichenden Schlüsse zu. In der Zeit nach den Perserkriegen läßt sich ja überhaupt ein verstärktes Interesse der Bildkunst an attischen Themen feststellen.

Auch die Darstellungen des H. in seiner Eigenschaft als Phylenheros setzen etwa um diese Zeit ein. Die älteste wäre auf dem neuen Widderkopfrhyton in Richmond aus der Zeit um 480/70 v. Chr. (18) zu sehen. Fünf Athener, vier ältere Männer und ein schöner Jüngling, sind, rings um den eigentlichen Gefäßkörper zu einem Symposium gelagert, durch ihre Namensbeischriften überraschend als attische Heroen ausgewiesen. Vom Namen des Lyraspielers in ihrer Mitte sind nur wenige Buchstaben erhalten; er könnte Eupompos (cf. Pompeus auf → Akamas et Demophon 13) heißen oder Eumolpos, was gut zu seiner Tätigkeit passen würde, oder vielleicht auch H. Wenn die Lesung H. stimmt, wären die Symposiasten, die hier mit Theseus, dem attischen Nationalheros par excellence, feiern, alle attische Phylenheroen. Man hat vorgeschlagen, das Symposium in Zusammenhang mit den siegreich bestandenen Perserkriegen zu sehen, an denen die einheimischen Heroen nach attischem Glauben wichtigen Anteil hatten. Es sei nur an das Marathongemälde in der Stoa Poikile (Paus 1, 15, 3) und an das Marathonweihgeschenk (22) erinnert, bei dem die Phylenheroen das siegreiche attische Bürgerheer bei Marathon verkörperten. Möglicherweise spielt hier auch die antike Vorstellung der Theoxenie oder des lectisternium eine Rolle, zumal eine Theoxenie für Aias, den salaminischen Hauptheros und zugleich attischen Phylenheros, zum Dank für seine Hilfe bei Salamis überliefert ist (Belege bei Kron, Phylenheroen 172–173).

Die älteste Darstellung des H. als Phylenheros in der großen Kunst ist das Marathonweihgeschenk in Delphi (22), nach Paus. ein Werk des Phidias. Anlaß und Datierung sind umstritten, doch sprechen verschiedene Argumente dafür, daß es auf Veranlassung des Kimon errichtet wurde, um seinen Vater, den Marathonsieger Miltiades, zu feiern. Miltiades erscheint hier nämlich als einziger Mensch unter Göttern und Heroen, und aus der Wahl der dargestellten Heroen läßt sich ein auf die Philaiden, die Familie des Kimon und Miltiades, zugeschnittenes «Bildprogramm» ablesen. Aus der Beschreibung des Paus. 10, 10, 1 wissen wir, daß Athena, Apollon und Miltiades dargestellt waren, dazu (sieben) der attischen Phylenheroen, außerdem Theseus, Kodros und Philaios, sowie später die Könige Antigonos, Demetrios und Ptolemaios als Vertreter der drei neuen hellenistischen Phylen. Oineus, H. und Aias, die in der Beschreibung des Paus. fehlen, waren sicher ursprünglich vorhanden, da die Phylenheroen in 22 ja das attische Bürgerheer bei Marathon verkörpern sollten, und gerade die Oineis, Hippothontis und Aiantis den siegreichen rechten Flügel der marathonschen Schlachtreihe stellten. Wahrscheinlich hatten die Statuen dieser drei Phylenheroen bei der Zufügung der drei hellenistischen Eponymen von der Basis weichen müssen (cf. die ausführliche Diskussion dieser kontroversen Frage bei Kron, Phylenheroen 215–226). Möglicherweise waren die Phylenheroen hier als Krieger dargestellt, über ihr Aussehen läßt sich aber sonst nichts sagen, da weder die Originale – zuletzt hat man versucht, die Riace-Bronzen zuzuweisen – erhalten sind, noch sich Kopien nachweisen lassen. Einen anderen Charakter hatte das offizielle Phylenheroenmonument auf der Agora von Athen (23), an dessen Basis die öffentlichen Bekanntmachungen phylenweise ausgehängt wurden. Die Phylenheroen verkörperten hier sozusagen das politische System Athens und wachten symbolisch über die Bürgerpflichten. Auch dieses Denkmal ist größtenteils verloren (s. dazu → Erechtheus, LIMC IV S. 950).

Am Parthenon-Ostfries (21) hat sich dagegen eine Darstellung der zehn Phylenheroen erhalten (s. dazu allgemein → Erechtheus, LIMC IV S. 950–951). H. ist möglicherweise der Jüngling 19, der sich mit dem anderen «Ausländer» unter den Phylenheroen unterhält, dem Heraklessohn → Antiochos.

Durch eine Beischrift ist die Benennung eines lokalen Jünglings als H. auf 19 gesichert. Der Meidiasmaler hat auf seiner Londoner Hydria aus den letzten Jahrzehnten des 5. Jh. v. Chr. die idyllische Welt des Hesperidengartens geschildert, in dessen Mitte Herakles sitzt und zusieht, wie die Hesperiden selbst ihm die Äpfel der ewigen Jugend pflücken. Unter seinen Begleitern befinden sich sein treuer Gefährte Iolaos, aus dem Argonautenkreis die Zauberin Medea mit Dienerinnen und drei der Argonauten, aber auch mehrere attische Heroen und Phylenheroen, darunter H. in attischer Ephebentracht. Die Rechte lässig in die Hüfte gestützt, unterhält er sich, wie am Parthenon, mit dem neben ihm sitzenden Phylenheros Antiochos. Man hat längst erkannt, daß der Meidiasmaler hier nicht eine lokalpatriotische attische Version der Argonautensage geben wollte, sondern ein paradisi-sches Zustandsbild. In seinem Hesperidengarten, gleichbedeutend mit dem Elysium, dessen goldene Äpfel Glück, Gesundheit und ewiges Leben versprechen wie die Namen seiner schönen Bewohnerinnen, weilen auch attische Phylonheroen gleichsam stellvertretend für die Athener der Zeit. Die Friedens- und Glückssehnsucht der Menschen des späten 5. Jh. hat hier einen besonders deutlichen Ausdruck gefunden.

Eine Darstellung des Phylonheros H. läßt sich möglicherweise auf einem Urkundenrelief (20) der 2. Hälfte des 4. Jh. v. Chr. nachweisen. In der Bildmitte steht ein nackter Jüngling, von einer Frau begleitet, neben einem Pferd, der einem nach der Bildkonvention der Gattung kleiner gebildeten Menschen einen Ehrenkranz reicht. In Analogie zu anderen Darstellungen handelt es sich dabei vermutlich um die Ehrung eines Phylonangehörigen durch den Phylonheros. Ungewöhnlich ist dabei aber das Pferd, so daß das Pferd zusammen mit dem jugendlichen Alter den Jüngling als einen bestimmten Phylonheros charakterisieren soll, etwa als H. Die Frau zu seiner Linken dürfte seine Gattin sein; denn der Phylonheros galt als fiktiver Ahnherr seiner Phylonmitglieder und wurde im Phylonheiligtum vermutlich gemeinsam mit seiner Gattin verehrt, so wie es uns zahlreiche Opfergesetze zeigen (z. B. LSCG Nr. 19, A 19, E 3-4; Nr. 20, passim; SEG 33, 1983 [1986] 42 ff. Nr. 147, A passim; Kron, U., in Festschr. E. Berger, AntK [1988] 295 Anm. 27, 32 mit Lit.).

Seit dem 4. Jh. kennen wir aus der Bildkunst auch Darstellungen der wunderbaren Kindheit des H. Die Säugung des H. durch die Stute ist auf einer fragmentierten Kanne Kertscher Stils in Tübingen (1) zu sehen, wie zuerst B. Schweitzer erkannte. Der Bildtypus der Kindessäugung ist uns vor allem aus Darstellungen der Sage des → Telephos oder → Romulus und Remus her vertraut (cf. z. B. Bauchhens-Thüridl, Ch., Der Mythos von Telephos in der antiken Bildkunst [1971] 38-40; Dulière, C., Lupa Romana. Recherches d'iconographie et essai d'interprétation [1979] 21-137). Die Bildfassung von 1 unterscheidet sich dadurch, daß das Muttertier seinen Kopf nicht liebevoll zu seinem menschlichen Pflegekind herabwendet.

Die Säugung des H. findet sich auch auf attischen Bleisymbola 2 wieder, die besonders in der Darstellung des Kindes 1 sehr ähnlich sind. Solche Bleisymbola wurden in Athen seit dem späten 5. Jh. für mannigfache Zwecke im öffentlichen Leben verwendet, z. B. als Theaterkarten oder als Einlaßmarken für die Volksversammlung und andere politische Gremien. Sie wurden phylonweise ausgegeben, wie Symbola mit den Namenszeichen oder den Namen und Bildern der Phylonheroen zeigen. Trotz der großen Zahl der erhaltenen Marken sind stempelgleiche Typen selten, weil die aus billigem Material, meist Blei hergestellten Symbola eingeschmolzen und mit neuer Prägung versehen werden konnten. Bei den Bleisymbola 2 handelt es sich wohl eher um solche Phylonmarken als um Eintrittsmarken für Theaterraufführungen, so daß die Phyle neben den Symbola mit der blo-

Ben Inschrift IIII auch solche mit dem markanten Motiv aus der Kindheitsgeschichte des H. verwendet hätte.

Das gleiche Motiv erscheint auf etruskischen Goldbullae nachklassischer bzw. hellenistischer Zeit (3. 4). Besonders interessant ist 4, eine Halskette mit sieben Bullae, von denen zwei die Säugung des H. zeigen. Der nackte Knabe kauert nicht nach links wie auf 1 und 2, sondern fast frontal dem Betrachter zugewandt, nach r. unter der Stute, Kopf und Arm zur Nährmutter emporgestreckt, während diese Kopf und Hals zurück- und zu ihrem Pflögel hinabwendet. Die kühne Verkürzung läßt verstehen, warum man diese Bullae auch schon in das 3. oder 2. Jh. v. Chr. datieren wollte. Rechts greift ein nackter Mann mit der einen Hand nach dem Arm des Knaben, mit der anderen scheint er die Stute zu streicheln, vielleicht einer der Hirten, die das Kind finden. Solche Bullaeketten wurden in Etrurien von Frauen wie von Männern getragen, während man Kindern als Amulett gewöhnlich eine Bulle umhängte (cf. André, a. O. 4, 91-116 Abb.; Cristofani/Martelli a. O. 3, 19 Taf. VIII; 20 Taf. IX. X; 21 Taf. XI; 24 Taf. XXI; 64). Die Bullae mit der wunderbaren Säugung eines Kindes durch eine Stute würden zwar besonders gut zu einem Kinderamulett taugen, aber zumindest die Kette 4 wurde eher von einem Erwachsenen, vielleicht sogar von einem Mann getragen, da die restlichen Bullae Szenen aus dem Achilleusmythos aufweisen. Falls es sich wirklich um H. handelt und nicht um ein anderes Götterkind, mag dieser Stoff über die beliebte Alope des Euripides, aber ebenso gut über ein Bildmodell nach Etrurien gelangt sein.

Szenen aus der euripideischen Alope glaubte man auch auf verschiedenen (meist außerattischen) Darstellungen nachweisen zu können, etwa auf einem graeco-baktrischen Silberbecher (5), einem graeco-skythischen Gorytosbeschlagn, von dem verschiedene Duplikate existieren (6) oder auf einem viel diskutierten römischen Sarkophag antoninischer Zeit (7), ohne daß diese Deutungen überzeugen können.

Zusammenfassend läßt sich festhalten, daß H. als eleusinischer Lokal- und Kultheros wie als attischer Phylonheros in der Bildkunst kaum eine Rolle spielt. Durch die Beischrift auf 10 ist H. als bärtiger eleusinischer König auf einer Reihe von attisch rf. Vasenbildern des 2. Viertels des 5. Jh. v. Chr. bei der Aussendung des Triptolemos belegt. Diese Vasenbilder, vielleicht von Triptolemos des Sophokles abhängig, sind wesentlich älter als die meisten literarischen Quellen, deren Aussagekraft für die Frühzeit sie aber unterstreichen. Auch die seltenen Darstellungen des H. als Phylonheros (18-23) setzen nach den Perserkriegen ein, ein Phänomen, das man auch an anderen attischen Themen nachgewiesen und wohl zu Recht mit dem politischen Aufstieg Athens und seines wachsenden Nationalstolzes in Zusammenhang gebracht hat. Nach dem 5. Jh. versiegt mit dem Niedergang der athenischen Macht gewöhnlich auch das Interesse der Bildkunst an solchen urattischen Themen wieder. Bezeichnenderweise taucht das Bild des H. aber immer noch auf «Realien» der Phylonverwaltung wie Urkun-denreliefs (20) oder den Symbola (2) auf. Auf letzteren wird ein Motiv aus der wunderbaren Kindheit des H. gewählt, vielleicht von der erfolgreichen euripideischen Tragödie beeinflusst, die dem Mythos von H. und Alope ein gewisses Nachleben in der attischen (1) und vielleicht sogar in der außerattischen Kunst (3. 4) beschert hat. Eine feste Ikonographie des H. läßt sich daraus nicht gewinnen. Er kann als Kind, als Jüngling und als bärtiger König dargestellt werden, je nachdem, um welchen Mythos es sich handelt und welche Darstellung dem Zeitgeschmack entspricht.

UTA KRON

HIPPOTHOOS, HIPPOTHOOS → Meleagros

HIPPOTION I

(Ἰπποτίων) Jüngling (Pferdeknecht?) bei der Ausfahrt des → Amphiaros auf 1.

1. (= Ainippe II 1, = Amphiaros 7* mit Lit., = Baton I 3*, = Halimedes 1*) Kolonnenkrater, spätkor., sog. Amphiaroskrater. Ehem. Berlin, Staatl. Mus. F 1655, verschollen. Aus Cerveteri. - Amyx, CVP 263, 1; 571-572, 66; 553-554: Amphiaros P.; Wrede, W., AM 41, 1916, 267. - Um 570 v. Chr. - Nackter Jüngling (HIPPOTION) mit Chlamys über den Schultern, vor den Gespannpferden des aufbrechenden Amphiaros stehend, die r. Hand auf Kopfhöhe, die l. auf Brusthöhe erhoben, den Pferden zugewandt. Nicht klar wird, ob er den anderen Personen zuwinkt oder sich mit den Pferden beschäftigt.

Eine vor Gespannpferden und diesen zugewandt stehende Figur (auch mehrere Figuren, bekleidete Männer, Krieger, Frauen) ist geläufig in anonymen Ausfahrtsszenen (cf. Wrede a. O. Taf. 15-18. 21-23. 28. 31. 34 u. a.); mehrfach faßt ein Mann die Pferde, um sie vor der Abfahrt ruhig zu halten. Der Amphiarosmaler hat die Figur offenbar als Typus übernommen (ältere Beispiele cf. Wrede a. O. 241) und mit einem sprechenden Namen versehen. In anderen Darstellungen der Abfahrt des Amphiaros scheint aber kein gleichartiger nackter Mann mehr vorzukommen; vor den Pferden sind meistens Frauen und der Seher → Halimedes plaziert (entfernt vergleichbar nur im 4. Jh. v. Chr. → Amphiaros 74*).

Der Name H. erscheint weiter für einen Reiter (kor., Amyx, CVP 581-582, 92, → Laodamas) und in einer Wagenszene (att., ABV 266, 5).

PIERRE MÜLLER

HIPPOTION II → Laodamas

HIPPOURIOS

(Ἰππούριος) Nebenfluß des Mäander im östlichen Lydien. An seinem Oberlauf lag Temenothyrai, nahe seiner Mündung Blaundos. Er ist vermutlich identisch mit dem heutigen Ilver Çai. Einzige Quelle für den Namen H. ist die kaiserzeitliche Münzprägung von Blaundos.

BIBLIOGRAPHIE: Imhoof-Blumer, Flußg 296, 331; Keil, J./v. Premerstein, A., DenkWien 54/2 (1911) 144 (Blaundos), 124 (Temenothyrai); Ruge, W., RE VIII 2 (1913) 1926 s. v. «Hippurios».

KATALOG

a) Gelagerter Flußgott

1.* AE, Blaundos (Lydien), Mitte 3. Jh. n. Chr. - Imhoof-Blumer, Flußg 296, 305 Taf. 10, 11; SNG v. Aulock 2923; SNG Copenhagen Taf. 3, 80-82. - Rs.: Gelagerter H. mit Füllhorn und Quellgefäß. Inschrift ἸΠΠΟΥΡΙΟΣ. Verschiedene Magistratsnamen. Vs.: Büste des Demos.

2. AE, Blaundos, Philippus II. (244-249 n. Chr.). - Imhoof-Blumer, Flußg 296, 306 Taf. 10, 12; SNG v. Aulock 2930; SNG Copenhagen Taf. 3, 98. - Wie 1.

b) Herakles ringt mit dem gelagerten Flußgott

3.* AE, Temenothyrai (Phrygien), Salonina (Gattin des Gallienus, 253-268 n. Chr.). - BMC Phrygia 416, 38 Taf. 48, 8; Imhoof-Blumer, Flußg 331, 396 Taf. 13, 2; Voegtli, Heldenepen 69-71. - Herakles, mit der Keule bewehrt, ergreift den r. Oberarm des gelagerten H. und stemmt sein l. Bein in dessen Hüfte. H., halbnackt, stützt sich auf das Quellgefäß, aus welchem Wasser fließt, das in Wellen die Basis der Szene bildet. (Die Benennung des Flusses ergibt sich aus der Lage der Stadt.)

KOMMENTAR

Während die Prägungen von Blaundos dem Schema des gelagerten Flußgottes (→ Fluvii) folgen, ist das Münzbild von Temenothyrai ganz ungewöhnlich und stellt vielleicht einen sonst nicht überlieferten lokalen Mythos dar. Voegtli (70-71) vermutet eine Kontamination mit Darstellungen des Kampfes mit Acheloos, es besteht jedoch keine ikonographische Verbindung zu den Bildtypen des Herakles-Achelooskampfes.

HERBERT A. CAHN

HISPANIA → LIMC Suppl.

HISTIAIA → LIMC Suppl.

HISTORIA

(Ἱστορία, history) The personification of history. H. as a female figure is only represented on the relief by Archelaos of Priene with other allegorical personifications.

BIBLIOGRAPHY: → Ilias; Pinkwart, D., Das Relief des Archelaos von Priene und die «Musen des Philiskos» (1965) 69, 71, 90; eadem, API IV (1965) 55-65 pl. 30; Papadaki, Προσωποποιήσεις 14, 56, 65-66.

I.* (= Apollon 972, = Arete I I with bibl., = Chronos I* with bibl., = Ilias I) Marble relief of the «Apotheosis of Homer» by Archelaos of Priene. London, BM 2191. From Bovillae near Rome. - 130-120 B.C. - For a description see → Apollon 972. In the lowest register Homer as a God is crowned by → Chronos and → Oikoumene; the personifications of the → Ilias and → Odysseia are kneeling at his feet. Before him an altar on which → Mythos, depicted as a little boy, serves with sacrificial jug and bowl. H., the continuation of «Mythos», strews incense on the altar where a sacrifice takes place, and behind the altar a bull is visible. Beyond H. the personifications of → Poesis, → Tragodia, → Komodia, a boy, the Human nature (→ Physis), and the four Virtues (→ Arete).

COMMENTARY

History is usually personified by the Muse Klio (→ Mousa, Mousai). In the Archelaos relief, for the first time, and despite the presence of Klio in the third register, H. appears as a personification near Homer in the bottom register, where Homer's apotheosis is depicted. Here, the personification is derived from the cult of Homer which occasioned many allegorical compositions, of which the most elaborate is the relief by Archelaos of Priene. H. is a female figure wearing chiton and himation, dress reminiscent of classical types, mainly of the 4th cent. B.C. H., with the personifications of other kinds of literature (Mythos, Poesis, Tragodia, Komodia) and with the allegorical figures of Physis, Arete, Mneme, Pistis and Sophia, forms a group in front of the heroized Homer; between Homer and this group, in the middle of the scene, the sacrifice of a bull takes place. The representations of these varieties of literature imply their close relationship to Homer's work. H. as well as → Poesis played the most important role in Homer's poetry. According to Elderkin (AJA 40, 1936, 496) the fact that H. is at the head of the personifications of the varieties of literature, relates her to Klio, who was the first Muse mentioned by Hesiod in his list of Muses (theog. 77).

EFFIE LYGOURI-TOLIA

HLUDANA

In Germania Inferior verehrte Göttin, keltischen oder wahrscheinlicher germanischen Ursprungs und dann möglicherweise mit der Herd- oder Erdgöttin Hlōdyn, der Tochter und zugleich Frau des Odin und Mutter des Thor, in Verbindung zu setzen.

EPIGRAPHISCHE QUELLEN: Als Gottheit bezeugt durch vier niedergermanische Weihinschriften, aus Birten (Vetera) bei Xanten (CIL XIII 8611; Espérandieu, Recueil IX Nr. 6587), aus der Umgebung von Beetgum bei Leeuwarden (I), aus Iversheim bei Münster (II) (CIL XIII 7944) und aus Haltedoorn oder Holdoorn bei Nijmegen (CIL XIII 8723).

BIBLIOGRAPHIE: Keune, J. B., RE VIII 2 (1913) 2128 s. v. «Hludana»; idem, RE Suppl. III (1918) 1156 s. v. «Hludana»; Steuding, H., ML I 2 (1886-90) 2697-2698 s. v. «Hludana, Hludena dea».

I.* Altar, Kalkstein. Leeuwarden, Fries Mus. 46A-551. Gefunden «in einer Terp» bei Beetgum, in der Nähe von Leeuwarden. - CIL XIII 8830; Boissevan, U. Ph., «Romeinsche Steen te Beetgum gevonden», De Vrije Fries 17, 1899, 327-337 Abb. 1; Espérandieu, Recueil IX Nr. 6678; Kat. Fries Museum, Romeinse Resten 3 (o. J.) 5 Abb. - 2.-3. Jh. n. Chr. - In einer von zwei Pfeilern getragenen Nische frontal sitzende bekleidete H. Darunter die Inschrift DEAE HLUDANAE; CONDUCTORES PISCATUS, MANCIPE Q(UINTO) VALERIO SECUNDO, V(OTUM) S(OLVERUNT) L(IBENTES) M(ERITO).

Diese einzige bisher bekannte Darstellung von H. scheint an einem auch sonst in Niedergermanien bekannten Typus der frontal sitzenden, bekleideten Göttin anzuschließen, wie er z. B. für die Reliefs der → Matronae oder der → Nehalennia verwendet wurde.

RAINER VOLKOMMER

HODIOS → Achilles 438 = Eurybates II 2

HOMONOIA

(Ὁμόνοια) Personification of concord, unanimity, oneness of mind. Roman Concordia (→ Homonoia/Concordia). As a personification and an object of cult worship, H. is not attested before the 4th cent. B.C. She is first given a genealogy by the Alexandrian scholar Mnaseas (apud Suda s. v. Πραξιόδημος): H. and → Arete are daughters of Zeus Soter and Praxidike, and sisters of Ktesios. H. does not figure in any mythological narrative.

LITERARY AND EPIGRAPHICAL SOURCES: The concept Ὁμόνοια first occurs in Greek texts (not personified) only in the late 5th cent. Fragments of a speech περί ὁμονοίας of Antiphon the Sophist are preserved (Diels Vorsokr. 5 87 B 44a-71). The concept most often signifies the political ideal of harmony within the polis (Thuk. 8, 93), especially as a contrast to stasis (Lys. 18, 17) or as a reconciliation among political factions (Arist. Ath. Pol. 40, 3; Demosth. 20, 12). For Isokrates (Panath. 217) it can describe the solidarity among Spartan men which helps insure military preparedness, but most often refers to the ideal of the unity of the Greek states against the Barbarian, i. e., Persia (Panath. 13). In this plea Isokrates had apparently been anticipated by Gorgias the Sophist, in a speech περί ὁμονοίας given at Olympia probably in 408 B.C. (Diels Vorsokr. 5 82 B 8a; Philostr. v. s. 1, 9 Kayser). In the text of a law cited by Demosth. (18, 164), ὁμόνοια designates an agreement or compact between Philip II of Macedon and the Athenians.

The cult of H. is attested in many parts of the Greek world from the 4th cent. on. Among the earliest testimonia are an altar at Olympia in 363 (Paus. 5, 14, 9) and, in the 3rd cent., altars in Athens (IG II/III 2 4985), Thera (IG XII 3 Suppl. 1336), and Syracuse (Liv. 24, 22). A joint cult of the H. of the Greeks (Ὁμόνοια τῶν Ἑλλήνων) and Zeus Eleutherios at Plataea is now attested in an inscription dated ca. 261-246, found in 1971 (cf. Etienne and Piérart). The dual cult may have been founded somewhat earlier, by Philip II or Alexander (West) or, at the latest, at the time of the Chremonidean War (Etienne/Piérart). Apoll. Rhod. (2, 718) has the Argonauts build a temple to H. on the island of Thynias, probably an aetiological invention. By the Roman period there were temples and cults of H. particularly concentrated in Asia Minor, as at Tralles (App. Mithr. 23), Miletos (Chariton, Erot. 3, 2, 16), Iasos in Caria (Ancient Greek Inscriptions in the British Museum III 62 no. 443), Kition on Cyprus (CIG 2641), Perge (CIG 4342b), Apameia in Thrace (REG 85, 1972, 424-425 no. 286), and Aphrodisias (Reynolds, J., Aphrodisias and Rome [1982] 6 no. 1). The Roman Empress could be celebrated as θεὰ Ὁμόνοια or σεβαστή Ὁμόνοια e. g., IGRom IV 1098 (Drusilla); Sylloge 3 19 (Domitia).

Many statues of H. are mentioned in inscriptions, again primarily in Asia Minor: in Phrygia (Drew-Bear, T., Nouvelles inscriptions de Phrygie [1978] 50 no. 26); Kos (Paton, W. R./Hicks, E. L., The Inscriptions of Kos [1891] no. 61; Lystra/Antiochia (IGRom III 302; OGIS II 536); Mopsos/Anazarbos (Syria 2, 1921, 280 no. 11); Ephesos (Wankel, H., Die Inschriften von Ephesos Ia [1979] no. 27, 470-477); Kyzikos (AM 6, 1881, 130 no. 15); also on the Greek mainland at Delphi-Chaironeia (Sylloge 3 186) and Thessalonike (infra 1). In most instances these statues seem to have been set up to celebrate the reestablishment of friendly relations between two neighboring cities (cf. Robert).

It should be noted that the thousands of so-called Homonoia-coins of the Roman East do not necessarily, or in most cases, have any connection with the personified H. or her cult. These coins bear the legend OMONOIA on the reverse, usually with deities representing two (or more) cities, and were issued to demonstrate a political agreement or other link between these cities. To that extent they serve somewhat the same purpose as the statues of H., but generally do not depict the goddess H. herself (cf. 16, 18).

The word OMONOIA alone occurs engraved on various objects, where it is doubtful that the goddess is referred to, e. g., a black-glaze plate of ca. 400 B.C. (CVA Heidelberg 4 pl. 182, 4-5; the inscription a modern forgery according to A. E. Raubitschek); or Roman cameos with a depiction of two clasped hands (e. g., Walters, BMGems no. 3695 and cf. no. 3697).

BIBLIOGRAPHY: The political use and meaning of ὁμόνοια: Funke, P., Homonoia und Arche, Historia Einzelschr. 37, 1980; Grossmann, G., Politische Schlagwörter aus der Zeit des Peloponnesischen Krieges (1950) 32 ff.; Kramer, H., Quid valeat ὁμόνοια in litteris Graecis (1915); Moulakis, A., Homonoia (1973); de Romilly, J., in Mélanges P. Chantraine (1972) 199-209.

On H. as a personification: Bisi, A., EAA V (1963) 690 s. v. «Homonoia»; Stoll, H. W., ML I 2 (1886-90) 2701-2706 s. v. «Homonoia»; Zwicker, J., RE VIII 2 (1913) 2265-2269 s. v. «Homonoia».

Cults and statues of H.: Fears, J. R., in ANRW II 17, 2 (1981) 937-938; Robert, L., Studii Clasice 16, 1974, 68-69.

H. of the Hellenes and Zeus Eleutherios: Etienne, R./Piérart, M., BCH 99, 1975, 51-75; West, W. C., GRBS 18, 1977, 307-319.

H. on coins: Pera, R., Homonoia sulle monete da Augusto agli Antonini (1984) 119-125; Vacano, O., Typenkatalog der antiken Münzen Kleinasien (1986) 181 and passim.

CATALOGUE

Marble statuette

1. Thessaloniki, Arch. Mus. 966. From the Serapeion in Thessaloniki. - Inscribed base (IG X 2, 61, dated 182 A.D.): ΑΦΡΟΔΕΙΤΗΙ ΟΜΟΝΟΙΑΙ. Dedicated by the priest Pontianos. - Late Hellenistic or Early Imperial. - She wears chiton and himation and held a cornucopia in her l. arm. Inscription and statue are not contemporary (the original inscription has been erased).

Apulian red-figure vase

2. Pelike, Malibu, Getty Mus. - Workshop of the Darius P., probably by his own hand (Trendali). - Ca. 330 B.C. - → Kassiepeia kneels before her daughter → Andromeda, in the presence of → Perseus and → Kephheus. H. (OMONOIA) stands behind the throne of Andromeda.

Wall- or panel-painting

3. (= Homonoia/Concordia 126) Painting by Habron, lost. - Plin. nat. 35, 141.

Coins

The catalogue is complete for representations of H. on coins earlier than the 1st cent. A.D. Thereafter, a selection is given for various types and attributes.

4. AR nomos, Metapontum (Lucania), 400-350 B.C. - BMC Italy 244; Noe, S. P., The Coinage of Metapontum 2 (1984²) no. 420 pl. 32. - Obv.: head of H. with wavy hair radiating from the crown and wearing a large earring in the form of a kantharos. Leg. OMONOIA. Rev.: ear of corn.

5.* AR hemidrachm, Kimissa (Sicily), late 4th cent. B.C. - NC 1896, pl. 9 fig. 13; Rizzo, MGS 276

pl. 59, 22; Ziegler, K., RE Suppl. VIII (1956) 247 s. v. "Kimissa"; Cahn, H. A., et al., Antikenmus. Basel und Slg. Ludwig, Griech. Münzen (1988) 103-104 no. 346. - Obv.: head of H. crowned with myrtle and wearing earrings and necklace. Leg. OMONOIA. Rev.: flaming altar wreathed with laurel.

6. AE, Kimissa (Sicily), after 254 B. C. - NC 1896, pl. 9 fig. 14. - Obv.: head of H. Leg. OMONOIA. Rev.: altar.

7. * AR cistophore, Tralleis (Lydia), 145-140 B. C. - SNG v. Aulock 3253, 8281 (H.); Kleiner, F. S./Noe, S. P., The Early Cistophoric Coinage (1977) 71 series 36-37 pls. 24, 12; 15, 1-2 (Tyche). - Rev.: two snakes coiled around a bow-case; at l., a double cornucopia and star; at r., H. standing, holding cornucopia and phiale. Obv.: cista mystica in ivy wreath.

8. * AE, Thessalonike, ca. 40 B. C. - BMC Macedonia 113, 43; Gaebler, Makedonia II 121, 24 pl. 23, 17. - Obv.: veiled head of H. Leg. OMONOIA.

9. * AR drachm, Tabae (Caria), 1st cent. B. C. - BMC Caria 160, 1; Robert, J. and L., La Carie II (1954) 124 A pl. 20, 8-9. - Rev.: H. standing to l., wearing long chiton and kalathos, holding phiale and cornucopia. Obv.: head of Dionysos.

10. AR drachm, Tabae (Caria), 1st cent. B. C. - BMC Caria 163, 26-28; Robert, o. c. 9, 126 y pl. 20, 23. - Rev.: H. standing to l., holding phiale and cornucopia. Obv.: head of Herakles.

11. AE, Panormus (Sicily), 1st cent. B. C. - SNG ANS 4 no. 559. - Rev.: H. standing to l., holding a patera and filleted cornucopia. Obv.: bust of Athena.

Greek Imperials (selection)

Homonoia seated

12. * Bi tetradrachm, Alexandria, Nero, A. D. 56-60. - BMC Alexandria 18, 150; SNG Copenhagen 93, 105; Geißen, AlexKaisermünzen I nos. 120, 136, 146. - Rev.: H. holding a patera only. Leg. OMONOIA.

13. AE, Nicaea (Bithynia), Lucius Verus. - SNG v. Aulock 365. - Rev.: H. holding patera and cornucopia, an altar before her.

14. AE, Nicomedia (Bithynia), M. Aurelius and Lucius Verus. - RecGen I 3, 531, 112 pl. 91, 28. Rev.: H. seated in a temple, holding patera and sceptre. Leg. NIKOM. NEOKO[PON] OMONOIA.

15. * AE, Tralleis (Lydia), Antoninus Pius. - SNG v. Aulock 3287. - Rev.: H., wearing a polos, holds a cornucopia in her l. hand, a statuette of Zeus Nikephoros in her r.

16. * AE, Caesarea (Cappadocia) and Smyrna, Julia Domna, A. D. 205-206. - SNG v. Aulock 6481; Klose, D. O. A., Die Münzprägung von Smyrna in der röm. Kaiserzeit (1987) 57 n. 340. - Rev.: H. holding cornucopia and Mt. Argaios. Leg. ΣΜΥΡΝΑΙΩΝ ΚΑΙΣΑΡΕΩΝ ΟΜΟΝΟΙΑ.

17. * AE, Nicaea, Julia Domna. - SNG v. Aulock 587; BMC Bithynia 162, 66. - Rev.: H. enthroned, holding sceptre and patera. Leg. OMONOIA ΝΙΚΑΙΕΩΝ.

18. * AE, Philadelphia-Smyrna, time of Caracalla or later. - BMC Lydia 209, 118; Klose, o. c. 16, 62. - Rev.: H. seated to l., wearing mural crown and holding cornucopia and statues of the Nemeses of Smyrna. Obv.: bust of Demos.

19. * AE, Tios (Bithynia), Severus Alexander. - SNG v. Aulock 7172. Rev.: H. wearing a polos and holding ears of corn and a cornucopia.

Homonoia standing, alone

20. * AE, Koinon of Bithynia, Domitian. - SNG v. Aulock 6912. - Rev.: H. holding cornucopia and wreath. - Leg. ΣΕΒΑΣΘΗ ΟΜΟΝΟΙΑ.

21. AE, Iuliopolis (Bithynia), Trajan. - SNG v. Aulock 466. - Rev.: H. stands to l., holding a cornucopia in her l. hand, a branch in her r. Leg. ΣΕΒΑΣΘΗ ΟΜΟΝΟΙΑ ΙΟΥ.

22. AE, Prusias (Bithynia), Trajan. - SNG v. Aulock 886. - Rev.: H. holding a cornucopia in the l., a branch in the r. Leg. ΣΕΒΑΣΘΗ ΟΜΟΝΟΙΑ.

23. * AE, Apameia, Marcus Aurelius. - SNG v. Aulock 3496; BMC Phrygia 97, 161. - Rev.: H., veiled, holds a wreath. Leg. ΟΜΟΝΟΙΑ ΑΠΑΜΕΩΝ.

24. * AE, Alexandria, Marcus Aurelius, A. D. 161. - BMC Alexandria 156, 1292 pl. 10. - Rev.: H. holding ears of corn and cornucopia. Leg. ΟΜΟΝΟΙΑ.

25. * AE, Patara (Lycia), Gordian III. - SNG v. Aulock 4384. - Rev.: H., wearing a polos, holds a cornucopia and rudder, a bird at her feet. She stands between two fat columns, on each of which is a genius holding up a spreading baldacchino. Leg. ΠΑΤΑΡΕΩΝ ΟΜΟΝΟΙΑ.

Homonoia standing, with other figures

26. AE, Alexandria, Trajan, A. D. 113/114. - Dattari 1031. - Rev.: H. stands at r., holding a cornucopia in her l. hand. With the r. she extends a cornucopia to Sarapis.

27. AE, Alexandria, Trajan, A. D. 112-114. - BMC Alexandria 52, 428-434; Geißen, AlexKaisermünzen I nos. 603, 604, 641, 642. - Rev.: H. stands at the r., facing l., holding a double cornucopia in her l. She shakes hands with → Eirene (→ Pax), who holds ears of corn. Leg. ΕΙΡΗΝΗ ΚΑΙ ΟΜΟΝΟΙΑ or ΟΜΟΝΟΙΑ ΚΑΙ ΕΙΡΗΝΗ.

28. * AE, Koinon of Bithynia, Trajan. - SNG v. Aulock 6913. - Rev.: H., at r., wearing a polos and holding a cornucopia, shakes hands with → Demeter. Between them, an altar. Leg. ΣΕΒΑΣΘΗ ΟΜΟΝΟΙΑ.

29. * AE, Phocaea, Septimius Severus. - BMC Ionia 223, 145. - Rev.: H. stands to l., wearing a polos and holding patera and cornucopia. Behind her stands Nike, placing a wreath on H.'s head and holding another wreath.

30. AE, Nicaea, Caracalla. - SNG v. Aulock 590. - Rev.: H. at the r., holding sceptre and patera, at altar at her feet. At the l., Septimius Severus and Caracalla shaking hands.

31. * AE, Stratonicea-Hadrianopolis, Gallienus. - BMC Lydia 287, 15. - Rev.: H., holding patera and cornucopia, facing Asklepios.

COMMENTARY

The creation of the personified goddess H. took place relatively soon after the word ὁμόνοια is first attested in Greek writers of the late 5th cent. B. C. Aside from the altar at Olympia (Paus. 5, 14, 9), the earliest evidence for H., on coins (4-6) and one vase (2) is concentrated in Magna Graecia. On the early coin of Metapontum (4), the legend naming H. was taken by Noe as an epithet of Demeter and the head as that of the goddess. But the new Apulian vase, not far in date or place of manufacture from this coin, supports the view that the head is H. herself. The pelike 2 is, however, unique in placing H. within a mythological context, Kassiopeia entreating the pardon of her daughter Andromeda. It shows that H., though most often signifying a political ideal, could also operate in the private sphere, as harmony and concord within the family. Plutarch plays upon this double connotation in his advice to a bride and groom (coniugalia praecepta 144c), and Harmonia can similarly be applied to both spheres, political and private.

The earliest evidence for the tremendous popularity which H. and her cult would later experience in Asia Minor in the Roman period is a Hellenistic coin of Tralles (7). H. is not identified as such, but her attributes, cornucopia and phiale, match those of H. on many Greek Imperials, including those of Tralleis itself (15). The earliest instance of H. signifying a reconciliation between Rome and one of her conquered subjects in the East is probably the coin of Thessalonike, which bears the names of Rome and Thessalonike (8) together in the legend on the reverse.

On Greek Imperials, H.'s attributes may vary, making it often impossible to distinguish her from several other personifications. Thus the mural crown (18) is also associated with → Tyche, and the cornucopia may be held by → Eirene and various city personifications. But the combination of patera or phiale and cornucopia seems to be particularly characteristic of H. (13, 29), as it is of the Roman Concordia (→ Homonoia/Concordia 44-48). Other possible elements of H.'s iconography which accord with that of Concordia include the branch (21-22; cf. → Homonoia/Concordia 42-43); the veil (23; cf. → Homonoia/Concordia 1-7); the association with Eirene/Pax (27; cf. → Homonoia/Concordia 113); or with two emperors, to symbolize the peaceful succession to the throne (30; cf. → Homonoia/Concordia 10 and Commentary; 93) The latest issues with H. belong to the time of Gallienus and Valerian, in the 250's and 260's.

H. ALAN SHAPIRO

CONCORDIA

Personifikation der Eintracht. Der Begriff c. bezeichnet Eintracht vom persönlichen Kreis der Familie über größere Gruppen wie Berufskollegien bis zum Staat und zur ganzen Menschheit. Er setzt gewöhnlich ein Verhältnis zwischen Gleichgestellten voraus. Inhaltliche Verwandtschaft besteht besonders mit den Begriffen fides, pietas und pax (→ Fides, → Pietas, → Pax), von denen c. sich durch ihren mehr affektiven Charakter unterscheidet. Griechisches Äquivalent ist → Homonoia. In der römischen Kunst begegnet die Gestalt der C. vor allem zur Bezeichnung innerer politischer Eintracht zwischen den verschiedenen Mächten und Gruppen des Staates, ferner zur Darstellung beispielhafter Eintracht der Ehe. Kultische Verehrung der C. ist in Rom seit dem 4. Jh. v. Chr. bezeugt.

LITERARISCHE QUELLEN: Zur Personifikation und Gottheit C. s. ThLL Onomasticon II 555-558 s. v. «Concordia». Zum Begriff c. s. ThLL IV 83-87 s. v. «concordia». Wichtig für Rom die philosophisch geprägte Reflexion des Begriffs bei Polybios und Poseidonios, s. die Stellen bei Skard 74-87. Danach vor allem Cicero, s. dazu Nicolet 633-722 und Strasburger.

BIBLIOGRAPHIE: Zu den bildlichen Darstellungen: Amit, M., «Concordia, idéal politique et instrument de propagande», Luna 13, 1962, 133-169; Aust, E., RE IV 1 (1900) 831-835 s. v. «Concordia»; Béranger, J., «Remarques sur la «Concordia» dans la propagande monétaire impériale et la nature du principat», in Beitr. zur Alten Gesch. und deren Nachleben, Festschr. F. Altheim I (1969) 477-491 (= ders., Principatus [1973] 367-382); Bernhart, M., Handbuch zur Münzkunde der römischen Kaiserzeit (1926) 87; Bovini, G., «Le scene della «dextrarum iunctio» nell'arte cristiana», BullCom 72, 1946-48, 103-117; Engelhart, R., De personificationibus quae in poesi atque arte Romanorum inveniuntur (1881) 13-14, 36, 39, 43, 51-57; Hamberg, P. G., Studies in Roman Imperial Art (1945) 18-32; Hanell, K., «Das Opfer des Augustus an der Ara Pacis», OpuscRom 2, 1960, 103-116; Huskinson, J. M., Concordia Apostolorum (1982); Koch/Sichtermann, RömSark 97-106; Kötting, B., RAC III (1957) 881-888 s. v. «Dextrarum iunctio»; Levick, B., «Concordia at Rome», in Scripta Nummaria Romana to H. Sutherland (1978) 217-233; Mingazzini, P., EAA II (1959) 780 s. v. «Concordia»; Peter, R., ML I 1 (1884-86) 914-922 s. v. «Concordia»; Pottier, E., DA I 2 (1887) 1434 s. v. «Concordia»; Reekmans, L., «La «dextrarum iunctio», BIHBR 31, 1958, 23-95; Richard, J.-Cl., «Pax, concordia et la religion officielle de Janus», MEFR 75, 1963, 303-386; Richardson, L., «Concordia and Concordia Augusta: Rome and Pompeii», PP 33, 1978, 260-272; Rodenwaldt, G., Über den Stilwandel in der antoninischen Kunst, AbhBerlin 1935 Nr. 3, 13-17; Weinstock, St., RE XXIII 1 (1957) 750-756 s. v. «Pronuba».

Zum Begriff weiterhin: Axtell, H. L., The Deification of Abstract Ideas in Roman Literature and Inscriptions (1907) 11-13; Boudreau Flory, M., «Sic exempla parantur: Livias Shrine to Concordia and Porticus Liviae», Historia 33, 1984, 309-330; Cairns, F., «Concord in the Aeneid of Virgil», Klio 67, 1985, 210-215; Hellegouarc'h, J., Le vocabulaire latin des relations et des partis politiques sous la République (1963) 125-127; Jal, P., «Pax civilis» - «concordia», REL 39, 1961, 210-231; Kantorowicz, E., «Marriage Belt and Rings at Dumbarton Oaks», Dumbarton Oaks Papers 14, 1960, 4-16 (Weiterleben in christlicher Zeit); Momigliano, A., «Camillus and Concord», ClQ 36, 1942, 111-120 (= idem, Secondo contributo alla storia degli studi classici [1960] 89-104); Nicolet, C., L'ordre équestre à l'époque républicaine I (1966) 633-722; Skard, E., Zwei religiös-politische Begriffe, Euergetes - Concordia, Avhandlingar utgitt av det Norske Videnskaps-Akademi i Oslo, II. Hist.-Fil. Kl. 1931 Nr. 2 (1932), 67-105; Strasburger, H., Concordia ordinum (1931); Wissowa, Religion 328-329.

KATALOG

Die Denkmäler, auch die Münzen, werden für die Zeit bis Marc Aurel nach Möglichkeit vollständig auf-geführt; für die Zeit danach ist wegen der stereotyp werdenden Ikonographie eine Auswahl getroffen worden; dabei ist jedoch (soweit nicht anders angegeben) bei den einzelnen Kaisern für die betreffenden Typen jeweils Vollständigkeit angestrebt, um einen Eindruck von der Häufigkeit der Typen zu geben. Bei den kaiserzeitlichen Münzen werden nur die Teile der Legenden zitiert, die auf das Bild der C. Bezug nehmen.

A. Köpfe

Römische Münzen

1.* Denar, Rom, L. Aemilius Lepidus Paullus, allein und zusammen mit L. Scribonius Libo, ca. 62 v. Chr. – Crawford, RRC 415/1; 417/1; Hamilton, J. R., NC 1955, 224–225; Amit 142–143; Richard 319–321; Béranger, Principatus 370; Levick 231 Anm. 26. – Vs.: Kopf der C. mit Schleier und Diadem nach r. Leg.: PAVLLVS. LEPIDVS – CONCORDIA. Rs. (415/1): Tropaeum zwischen Togatus r. und drei Gefangenen l. Leg.: TER/PAVLLVS. Rs. (417/1): Puteal Scribonianum mit Girlande, zwei Leiern und unten Hammer. Leg.: PVTEAL. SCRIBON/LIBO.

2. Denar, Rom, P. Fonteius Capito, ca. 55 v. Chr. – Crawford, RRC 429/2; Hamilton, a. O. 1, 224–228; Amit 141–142; Richard 323–326; Morgan, M. G., Klio 55, 1973, 215–231; Levick 231 Anm. 26. – Vs.: Kopf der C. mit Schleier und Diadem nach r. Leg.: P. FONT(N)EIVS. CAPITO. III. VIR. CONCORDIA. Rs.: Villa Publica.

3.* Denar, Rom, L. Vinicius, ca. 52 v. Chr. – Crawford, RRC 436/1; Hamilton, a. O. 1, 225; Amit 142–143; Richard 318–319; Béranger, Principatus 370. – Vs.: Kopf der C. mit Lorbeerkrantz nach r. Leg.: CONCORDIAE (CONCORDIAI). Rs.: Victoria mit Palmzweig, der mit vier Kränzen geschmückt ist.

4. Denar, Rom, L. Mussidius Longus, 42 v. Chr. – Crawford, RRC 494/41–42; Hamilton, a. O. 1, 225; Amit 143–144; Richard 328–329. – Vs.: Kopf der C. mit Schleier und Diadem nach r.; im Feld z. T. (42b) Stern bzw. (42c) Halbmond. Leg.: CONCORDIA. Rs. (41): Verschränkte Hände mit Caduceus. Rs. (42): Heiligtum der Venus Cloacina (als Ort der C., weil hier die Heere der Römer und Sabiner nach Beilegung des Kampfes gemeinsam entsühnt worden waren).

5.* Quinar, Octavian und Antonius, ca. 39 v. Chr. – Crawford, RRC 529/4; Hamilton, a. O. 1, 225; Richard 336–337. – Vs.: Kopf der C. mit Schleier und Diadem. Leg.: III. VIR. – R. P. C. Rs.: Verschränkte Hände mit Caduceus. Deutung der Vs. gesichert durch den Schleier, der damals sonst nur bei Vesta sicher bezeugt ist, im Zusammenhang mit der Rs. und den übrigen Typen der Emission aber wie auf Nr. 1, 2 und 4 C. bezeichnen muß.

6. AE, Bouthroton, P. Pomponius Graecinus und Milesius, augusteisch, ca. 10 v. Chr. – Imhoof-Blumer, MGr 140, 36; Grant, M., From Imperium to Auctoritas (1946) 271–272; Richard 350. – Vs.: Kopf der C. mit Schleier und Diadem. Leg.: CONCORDIA. Offenbar angeregt von der Weihung von Standbildern der Salus, Concordia und Pax durch Augustus 10 v. Chr. (113); vgl. dazu die etwa gleichzeitige Prägung von Bouthroton, Imhoof-Blumer, MGr 139, 35 mit dem Kopf der Salus. Älter dagegen anscheinend die Prägung von Pella mit dem Kopf der Pax: Imhoof-Blumer, MGr 88 Nr. 102; Gaebler, Makedonia II 98 Nr. 24; Grant a. O. 281–283; Richard 349–350.

7. Denar (subärat), Spanien/Gallien, anonyme Prägung des Galba, 68 n. Chr. – Bonnetterre, D./Nony, D., Bull. Soc. française de numismatique Mai 1973, 384–385; Martin, P.-H., Die anonymen Münzen des Jahres 68 n. Chr. (1974) 51 Anm. 40a; 75 Nr. 48a. – Vs.: Büste der C. mit Schleier und Diadem nach r. Leg.: CONCORDIA ORB TER. Rs.: Felicitas stehend nach l. mit kurzem Szepter, hält Opferschale über brennenden Altar. Leg.: PIA FELICITAS.

8. Denar, Rom, Traian, 107 n. Chr. – BMC Emp III 140, 27 Taf. 23, 2; lxxxvi–xciii; Mattingly, H., NC 1926, 245, 249, 271, 273. – Restituierte Prägung von 1.

Rundplastik

9.* Marmorbüste mit Inschrift-Basis. Sabratha, Mus. Aus dem Capitolium. – Reynolds, J. M./Ward Perkins, J. B., The Inscriptions of Roman Tripolitania (1952) 29 Nr. 4; Ward, Ph., Sabratha (1970) 52 Taf. 24. – Um 180 n. Chr. – Büste der C. mit Diadem. Inschrift: CONCORDIAE AFRICANVS.

Relief

9a) Brunnenrelief. Pompeii, vor Nebeneingang des Eumachia-Gebäudes. – Eschbach, H., AntW 13, 3, 1983, 23 ff. Abb. 27; Kockel, V., AA 1986, 458; Zanker, P., Pompeii, 9. TrierWPr (1988) 31. – Spät augusteisch bis tiberisch. – Büste der C., frontal, mit Füllhorn.

B. Concordia sitzend

10.* Aureus und Denar, Lugdunum, Augustus, 11–13 n. Chr. – BMC Emp I 91, 544–546 Taf. 14, 8–9; cxvii (Mattingly: «Livia (?) as Ceres»); Kraft, K., Zur Münzprägung des Augustus (1969) 42–51. – Rs.: C. sitzend nach r., hält Zweig und stützt Szepter auf. Überzeugende Deutung bei Kraft.

11.* Aureus und Denar, Lugdunum, Tiberius, 14–37 n. Chr. – BMC Emp I 124–127, 30–60 Taf. 22, 20–26; 23, 1–9; cxxxi; Kraft, a. O. 10, 43–51. – Rs.: Wie 10.

12. (= Herakles 739*) Sesterz, Rom, Tiberius, 34–37 n. Chr. – BMC Emp I 137, 116 Taf. 24, 14; 139, 132–134 Taf. 25, 4–5, 7; cxxxviii; Brown, F., Temples of Rome as Coin Types (1940) 14; 17–19; Vermeule, C. C., JHS 77, 1957, 284; Küthmann, H., Mitteilungen des historischen Vereins der Pfalz 58, 1960, 70–71; Guarducci, M., RendPontAcc 34, 1961/62, 107–108; Nash, TopRom I 292–294 Abb. 347; Peck, Th., RM 73/74, 1966/67, 105–133; Fuchs, G., Architekturdarstellungen auf römischen Münzen der Republik und der frühen Kaiserzeit (1969) 45 Taf. 9, 110–111; Kraft, a. O. 10, 51; Zanker, P., Forum Ro- manum (1972) 19–23; Gasparri, C., Aedes Concordiae Augustae (1979) 21–22. S. oben 10–11. – Rs.: Fassade des von Tiberius erneuerten C.-Tempels am Forum Romanum (s. 123). Durch die Tür Kulbild der C. auf Basis zu sehen, frontal auf lehnenlosem Stuhl sitzend, in der r. Hand patera ausgestreckt, mit der l. Hand Szepter schräg haltend. Zankers Vermutung, bei der als First-Akroter dargestellten Trias könne es sich um C., Pax und Salus handeln, bleibt unsicher. Zu dem Gewerberelief im Vatikan s. 128.

13.* Aureus und Denar, Rom, Nero, 64–68 n. Chr. – BMC Emp I 209, 61–63 Taf. 39, 15–16; clxvi und clxxiv; Amit 147; Béranger, Principatus 372. – Rs.: C. sitzend, hält patera und (z. T. Doppel-)Füllhorn. Leg.: CONCORDIA AVGVSTA.

14.* Denar und Sesterz; Spanien/Gallien, anonyme Prägung Galbas; Rom, Galba; 68–69 n. Chr. – BMC Emp I 304 † (Mattingly: mit Ähren); 317–318, 55–61 Taf. 55, 17–18, cxcvii–cxcviii. ccv; Martin, a. O. 7, 83 Nr. A 9. – Rs.: C. sitzend, hält Zweig und Szepter. Leg.: CONCORDIA (IA) (AVG). Die angeblichen Ähren auf dem Denar nicht mehr zu prüfen, wohl eher Zweig. Derselbe Typus in der römischen Serie Galbas als → Pax: BMC Emp I 320, 76. Die Darstellung muß aber wohl auch dort C. meinen, da in derselben Serie die Sesterze mit C.-Legende weitaus häufiger sind; die Pax-Legende ist also anscheinend komplementär.

15.* Aureus, Denar und Dupondius, Rom, Vitellius, 69 n. Chr. – BMC Emp I 368, 1 Taf. 60, 15; 369, 6–7 Taf. 60, 18–19; 371, 20–21; 380, 65 Taf. 62, 16; 382, 72; 383; cccxxiii; Béranger, Principatus 372. – Rs.: C. sitzend, hält Füllhorn, streckt patera nach vorne aus; auf Dupondius vor ihr Altar. Leg. Aureus und Denar: CONCORDIA P R. Dupondius: CONCORDIA AVGVSTI.

16. Sesterz, Rom, Vitellius, 69 n. Chr. – BMC Emp I 375, 48 Taf. 62, 14; cccxxv. – Rs.: C. sitzend, hält Zweig und Szepter. Leg.: CONCORD AVG. Deutung als C. mit Zweig der Pax (und nicht etwa Pax mit Legende C.) dadurch sicher, daß in derselben Serie Pax in anderem Typus erscheint: BMC Emp I 377, 54–57 Taf. 63, 2–3.

17. Denar, Spanien/Gallien, anonyme Prägung Galbas, 68 n. Chr. – BMC Emp I 308 (b); cc; Martin a. O. 7, 34, 51. 69 Nr. 2. – Rs.: Weibliche Figur sitzend, hält Eberstandarte und caduceus. Leg.: CONCORDIA. Nichtromische Feldzeichen bei C. ungewöhnlich, vgl. aber BMC Emp I 308 (c): verschränkte Hände mit Eberstandarte (dazu Martin 34, 50–51. 69 Nr. 5). Der Typus ist in diesem Sinne besser als Umbildung von C.-Darstellungen wie 14–16 denn als Personifikation Galliens mit komplementärer C.-Legende (wie 146, vgl. 166) zu verstehen, da die Provinzpersonifikationen in dieser Zeit nicht thronend dargestellt werden.

18. Aureus, Denar, Sesterz, Dupondius, As, Vespasian und Titus, Rom und syrische Prägestätten, 69 (?), 71–73 n. Chr. – BMC Emp II 12, 65–66 Taf. 2, 2; 106, 505 Taf. 18, 14; 108, 514–515 Taf. 19, 4; 110, 524 Taf. 19, 10; 113, 528 Taf. 20, 1; 127, 588–589 Taf. 23, 2; 130, 603 Taf. 23, 9; 150, 660; 153, 669–669A

Taf. 27, 2; xxxv. xlv. lxix. – Rs.: C. sitzend, hält patera und Füllhorn. Auf As-Prägungen Roms 71 n. Chr. vor ihr Altar. Leg. Aureus und As: CONCORDIA AVG; Denar und Dupondius: CONCORDIA AVGVSTI; Sesterz: CONCORDIA (IA) AVGVSTI.

19.* Aureus, Denar, Dupondius, As, verschiedene Prägestätten, vor allem in Kleinasien, ferner Tarraco, Lugdunum, Narbo (?); Vespasian und unter seiner Regierung Titus und Domitian, 69–74 n. Chr. – BMC Emp II 73, 368 Taf. 12, 4; 88, 429 Taf. 15, 8; 90; 92, 442 Taf. 15, 19; 93, 445 †; 95, 453–454 Taf. 16, 6; 97, 465–467 Taf. 16, 16–18; 98, 470–472 Taf. 17, 1; 99, 474 †; 100, 477–478 Taf. 17, 7–8 (Mattingly durchweg: «Ceres») 191, 786 †; 199, 805 * (Mattingly: «Concordia»); lxvi. – Rs.: C. auf Thron sitzend, hält r. Ähren, meist auch Mohn, l. Füllhorn. Auf As-Prägungen von Tarraco und Lugdunum vor ihr Altar. Leg.: CONCORDIA AVG; Leg. Dupondius Lugdunum: CONCORDIA AVGVSTI. Deutung auf C. in allen Fällen wahrscheinlich. Der Typus erscheint gleichzeitig wie der sichere C.-Typus 18 in den Prägestätten, in denen jener fehlt. Er ist nicht zu trennen von den As-Prägungen aus Tarraco und Lugdunum, die durch den Altar auch mit den gleichzeitigen As-Prägungen Roms 18 wie auch mit 12 und 15 verbunden sind. Vgl. verschränkte Hände mit Ähren: BMC Emp II 16, 86 Taf. 2, 15 etc. (s. auch → Fides).

20.* Sesterz, Dupondius, As, Rom, Titus und unter seiner Regierung Domitian, Iulia Titi und Divus Vespasianus, 80–81 n. Chr. – BMC Emp II 263, 194 Taf. 50, 4; 266 *; 273, 238–240 Taf. 52, 5; 277, 251 Taf. 53, 2; 279 * Taf. 53, 7; lxxvii; Amit 150–151. – Rs.: C. sitzend, hält patera und Füllhorn. Leg.: CONCORDIA (IA) AVGVSTI.

21.* Denar und Sesterz, Rom, Traian, 98–102 n. Chr. – BMC Emp III 32, 4–6 Taf. 9, 3; 35, 29–30 Taf. 9, 14; 37, 46 Taf. 9, 20; 39, 64–65 Taf. 10, 7; 44 †; 148, 714. 717 Taf. 25, 2, 5; 151, 730; 156, 744 Taf. 26, 8; 158, 755 Taf. 27, 3; 166 * (ca. 104–107); 229, 1079 Taf. 44, 4 («barbarous»); lxv; Strack, Reichsprägung I 56–57. – Rs.: C. sitzend, mit Diadem, hält Doppelfüllhorn, opfert aus Schale über Altar. Deutung durch 12, 13, 15 und 18 begründet.

22. Aureus, Rom, Traian, 107 n. Chr. – BMC Emp III 143, 700 Taf. 24, 1; xcii; Mattingly, H., NC 1926, 258, 262, 277. – Rs.: C. sitzend, hält patera und Doppelfüllhorn. (Vs. Divus Claudius). «Restituierte» Prägung. Deutung wie 21.

23.* Aureus, Denar, Sesterz, Dupondius, Rom, Hadrian, 117 bis ca. 125/28 n. Chr. – BMC Emp III 237–238, 9–10 Taf. 46, 5; 239, 17–19 Taf. 46, 9; 241, 33 Taf. 46, 14; 241–242, 36–37 Taf. 46, 17; 247–248, 59–63 Taf. 48, 1–2; 251 †; 261, 164–166 Taf. 50, 6; 271, 257–261 Taf. 51, 15; 282 Anm. *; 397–398, 1102–1104 Taf. 76, 2; 398–399, 1107–1108, 1109 †; 400, 1114, 1115; 403, 1128–1129 Taf. 77, 2; 405 *; 408 *; cxxiv; Hamberg 20; Strack, Reichsprägung II 49–51. – Rs.: C. auf Thron sitzend, stützt l. Arm auf kleine Spes-Figur mit gerafftem Gewand auf Basis, hält r. patera; unter Thron Füllhorn. Leg. (kann fehlen): CONCORDIA.

24.* Aureus, Denar, Sesterz, Dupondius, As,

Rom, Sabina, Hadrian, Aelius Verus, Antoninus Pius, ca. 128–138 n. Chr. – BMC Emp III 317 * («almost barbarous»); 353–354, 894–906 Taf. 64, 12–17; 357, 928 Taf. 65, 11; 358–359, 932–935 Taf. 65, 14–15; 361 (a); 363 Anm. zu 964; 366, 981–988 Taf. 66, 20–67, 3; 367–368, 997–1002 Taf. 67, 8–9; 369 *; 526 §; 527, 1834 Taf. 97, 9; 536, 1864–1868 Taf. 98, 14; 538–539, 1888–1893 Taf. 99, 6; 543, 1918 Taf. 100, 3; 547, 1935 Taf. 101, 3; 549 †; 550 *; 551 †; cl–clii; Strack, Reichsprägung II 168. Hamburg 20; Béranger, Principatus 377. – Rs.: C. auf Thron sitzend, stützt l. Arm auf kleine Spes-Figur mit gerafftem Gewand auf Basis, hält r. patera; unter Thron Füllhorn. Varianten: Spes fehlt; Füllhorn fehlt; l. Hand auf Szepter gestützt; l. Arm auf Füllhorn oder auf Armlehne gestützt. Leg. (kann fehlen): CONCORDIA AVG (Sabina), CONCORDIA (Hadrian, Aelius Verus, Antoninus Pius).

25. Aureus, Denar, Sesterz, Dupondius, As, Rom, Faustina d. Ä., 138–141 n. Chr. – BMC Emp IV 8–9 * und 38–41 Taf. 1, 20; 2, 1; 172 *; 174, 1127 Taf. 25, 3; lii; Strack, Reichsprägung III 46. – Rs.: C. auf Thron sitzend, hält patera, stützt l. Arm auf Füllhorn neben Sitz; unter Thron Füllhorn. Variante: stützt l. Arm auf Spes-Statuette. Leg.: CONCORDIA AVG.

26. * Denar, Sesterz, Dupondius oder As, Rom, Faustina d. J., 147–161 n. Chr. – BMC Emp IV 163, 1080–1081 Taf. 23, 6; 164–165, 1086–1088 Taf. 23, 10; 166 Anm. *; 376, 2167 Taf. 52, 6; 378, 2175–2176 Taf. 52, 8; 380 †; lxxvi; vgl. 397, 85 Taf. 55, 2 und cxxxii (früh in Regierungszeit des Marc Aurel); Strack, Reichsprägung III 116, 121; Hamburg 20. – Rs.: C. sitzend (z. T. auf Thron), hält in r. Hand Blüte, stützt l. Arm auf Füllhorn, das auf Globus am Boden steht. Leg.: CONCORDIA.

27. * Denar, Rom, Marc Aurel, 161–163/64 n. Chr., Lucius Verus, 161 n. Chr. – BMC Emp IV 385–386, 1–6 Taf. 53, 11–12; 389–390, 25–28 Taf. 54, 1–2; 390 †; 408–409, 177–185 Taf. 56, 16–17; 410, 193–195 Taf. 56, 20; 413–414, 209–217 Taf. 57, 6; 417, 242; vgl. 514, 4; cxv–cxvi. Sonst selten: Aureus und Denar, Lucilla, nach 164 n. Chr.: BMC Emp IV 427, 304–307 Taf. 58, 12; 430, 332 Taf. 59, 1; Dupondius, As, Faustina d. J.: 539, 971; 969–970 Taf. 74, 7 (ohne Spes und Füllhorn). Weitere Varianten (ohne Spes): Aureus, Denar, Sesterz: 414 *; 510, 818 Taf. 70, 13; 517, 840; 523 *; s. die folgende Nr. (Übergänge fließend). – Rs.: C. auf Thron sitzend, hält patera, stützt l. Arm auf kleine Spes-Figur, unter Sitz Füllhorn. Leg.: CONCORD AVG; bei Faustina und Lucilla CONCORDIA.

28. * Denar, Sesterz, Dupondius, As, Rom, Lucilla, nach 164 n. Chr. – BMC Emp IV 430, 333–335 Taf. 59, 2; 568–569, 1140–1142 Taf. 76, 11; 576 *; 578, 1214 Taf. 78, 1; cxxxiv, cxlv. – Rs.: C. sitzend, hält patera und (teils Doppel-)Füllhorn. Leg.: CONCORDIA.

Von da an bleibt der Typus mit diesen Attributen sehr häufig. Hervorzuheben sind folgende Varianten:

29. * AE Medaillon, Commodus und Crispina, 180–192 n. Chr. – BMC Emp IV clxxxiii; Gnecci, Medaglioni II 72, 1 Taf. 91, 7. – Rs.: C. sitzend, hält pa-

tera, stützt l. Arm auf kleine Spes-Figur; unter Sitz Füllhorn. Leg.: CONCORDIA. (Vs. Büsten des Commodus und der Crispina, vgl. dazu 146–151).

30. Denar und AR Quinar, Rom und östliche Prägestätte, Iulia Paula, 219–220 n. Chr. – BMC Emp V 554–555, 171–176 Taf. 88, 12–14; 582, 316–317 Taf. 92, 11. – Rs.: C. auf Thron sitzend, hält Schale. Leg.: CONCORDIA.

31. * Denar, östliche Prägestätte, Iulia Paula, 219–220 n. Chr. – BMC Emp V 582, 321–322 Taf. 92, 13. – Rs.: C. auf sella curulis sitzend, hält patera und Doppelfüllhorn. Leg.: CONCORDIA AVGG.

32. * Antoninian, AR Quinar, Sesterz, Dupondius, As; Rom und Antiochia, Gordian III., 240 n. Chr. – RIC IV 3; 23, 65; 24, 75; 38, 219A; 47, 288. – Rs.: C. sitzend, hält patera und Doppelfüllhorn. Leg.: CONCORDIA MILIT (neben der üblichen Legende CONCORDIA AVG, z. B. 19, 35 Taf. 1, 11).

33. * Antoninian, Rom, Otacilia Severa, 246–249 n. Chr. – RIC IV 3, 81, 110; 83, 126 Taf. 7, 13; 84, 129. – Rs.: C. sitzend, hält patera und Füllhorn, vor ihr Altar. Leg.: CONCORDIA AVGG. (Daneben die übliche Version ohne Altar, teils mit Doppelfüllhorn, z. B. 82, 119, 125).

34. Antoninian und As, Rom und Mediolanum, Valerian und Gallienus, 254–257 n. Chr. – RIC V 1, 53, 191; 56, 236; 98, 376. – Rs.: C. sitzend, hält patera und (teils Doppel-)Füllhorn. Leg.: CONCORDIA EXERCIT bzw. CONCORDIA LEGG (neben der üblichen Legende CONCORDIA AVGG, z. B. 45, 79).

35. * Antoninian und Denar, Rom, Salonina, 253–268 n. Chr. – RIC V 1, 192, 2; 195, 34. – Rs.: C. sitzend, hält patera und Füllhorn. Leg.: CONCORDIA AET (neben der üblichen Legende CONCORDIA AVG, z. B. 172, 471).

36. Aureus, Trier, Ticinum und Aquileia, Diocletian, Constantius Chlorus und Mitherscher, 294–307 n. Chr. – RIC VI 203, 618–619; 287, 49–50; 310, 2; 317, 41–42. – Rs.: C. sitzend, hält patera und Doppelfüllhorn. Leg.: CONCORDIA AVGG ET CAESS NN (o. ä.). Letzte Beispiele des Typus.

37. * Solidus, verschiedene Prägestätten, Konstantin, Licinius und Crispus, 317–325 n. Chr. – RIC VII 375, 101–103 Taf. 10; 406, 116; 473, 38–39 Taf. 14; 610–611, 59–62 Taf. 20; 646, 20 Taf. 22; 685, 50 Taf. 24; Alföldi, M. R., Die constantinische Goldprägung (1963) 47, 78 Anm. 2; 91, 93, 158 Nr. 13a–24. – Rs.: C. auf Thron sitzend, hält caduceus und Füllhorn. Leg.: CONCORDIA AVGG NN. Letzte Darstellung der C. auf Münzen.

38. AR Medaillon, Licinius I., 308–324 n. Chr. – Gnecci, Medaglioni I 57, 2. – Rs.: C. sitzend, hält Steuerruder und Füllhorn. Leg.: CONCORDIA AVGG.

39. Antoninian, Antiochia, Philippus Arabs, 247–249 n. Chr. – RIC IV 3, 78, 83. – Rs.: C. sitzend, hält Waage und Füllhorn. Leg.: CONCORDIA AVGG.

40. * Aureus und Antoninian, verschiedene Prägestätten, Aurelian, 270–275 n. Chr. – RIC V 1, 268, 25; 275, 87–88; 277, 106; 283, 166; 286, 194–197;

288, 214. – Rs.: C. sitzend, hält zwei Feldzeichen. Leg.: CONCORDIA MILIT.

Rundplastik

41. Kultbild im Tempel der C. Augusta, Rom, Forum, am Fuß des Kapitols; 7 v. Chr. von Tiberius gelobt, 10 n. Chr. geweiht. S. zu 12 und 123.

C. Concordia, stehend, allein

Münzen

42. Aureus und Denar; Spanien/Gallien und Rom; Galba, 68–69 n. Chr. – BMC Emp I 305–306, 61–63 Taf. 51, 19; 306 *; 308 (a) Taf. 51, 24; 309, 1–2 Taf. 52, 1; 337, 164–165 Taf. 53, 3; 347–348, 216–225 Taf. 54, 16–21; 349 †; 352, 239–240 Taf. 55, 4–5; cxcix–cc. cciv (Zweig, nicht Ähren wie z. T. im Katalog); Hamburg 22; Kraay, C. M., NC 1949, 141–142; 1952, 78–86; Mattingly, H., NC 1952, 72–77; Martin, A. O. 7, 14, 30, 34, 43, 45, 49–51, 69, 1, 3–4. – Rs.: C. stehend, hält Zweig und Füllhorn. Leg.: CONCORDIA (PRAETORIANORVM bzw. PROVINCIALIARUM). Deutung als C. mit Zweig der Pax (und nicht etwa Pax mit komplementärer Legende C.) wird dadurch bestätigt, daß in einer dieser Serien Pax in einem anderen Typus dargestellt ist: BMC Emp I 352, 242, Taf. 55, 7.

43. Denar, Spanien, Vitellius, 69 n. Chr. – BMC Emp I 384 † (Mattingly: «style of obv. very curious»); cxcix; Béranger, Principatus 374–375. – Rs.: C. stehend, hält Zweig und Füllhorn. Leg.: CONCORDIA PRAETORIANORVM. Deutung als C. mit Zweig der Pax (und nicht etwa Pax mit komplementärer Legende C.) aufgrund von 42 wahrscheinlich.

44. Dupondius, Rom, Vespasian und Titus, 71–72/3 n. Chr. – BMC Emp II 127, Anm. zu 588; 147 ¶; vgl. 61, 12 (hybrid). – Rs.: C. stehend, hält patera, bei Vespasian auch Füllhorn. Leg.: CONCORDIA (VST).

45. * AU Quinar, Denar, Sesterz, Dupondius, As, Rom, Hadrian und unter seiner Regierung Sabina, Aelius Verus, Antoninus Pius, ca. 128–138 n. Chr. – BMC Emp III 355, 907 Taf. 64, 18; 358, 929–931 Taf. 65, 12–13; 363, 964–966 Taf. 66, 11–12; 370, 1010–1011 Taf. 67, 14; 480 *; 535, 1861–1863 Taf. 98, 13; 538, 1887 Taf. 99, 5; 544 *; cl–clii; Strack, Reichsprägung II 168. – Rs.: C. stehend, hält r. patera, trägt l. (meist Doppel-)Füllhorn, stützt meist l. Arm auf Säule. Leg. (kann fehlen): CONCORDIA AVG (Hadrian, Sabina), CONCORDIA (Aelius Verus, Antoninus Pius). Dazu BMC Emp III 361 (e) mit Leg. MONETA AVG (hybrid).

46. Aureus, Denar, Sesterz, Dupondius, As, Rom, Antoninus Pius, 140–144 n. Chr.; Faustina d. Ä., 138–141 n. Chr. – BMC Emp IV 8, 36; 9, 42 Taf. 2, 2; 22–23, 132–135 Taf. 4, 1–2; 31, 202–203 Taf. 5, 7; 171 Nr. 1114–1115 Taf. 24, 6; 173, 1125 Taf. 25, 2; lii, lvi, lxxvii; Strack, Reichsprägung III 46. – Rs.: C. stehend, hält r. patera, trägt l. (meist Doppel-)Füllhorn, stützt meist l. Arm auf Säule. Leg.: CONCORDIA AVG.

47. Denar, Sesterz, Dupondius, As, Rom, Marc Aurel und Faustina d. J. unter Antoninus Pius, 145–161 n. Chr. – BMC Emp IV 168, 1103–1105 Taf. 23, 19; 289–290, 1788–1789 Taf. 43, 9 (Variante); 383–384, 2198–2199, 2203–2204 Taf. 53, 1 und 10, lxxvi, lxxvii; Strack, Reichsprägung III 109. – Rs.: Wie 46. Variante bei Marc Aurel: Füllhorn auf Altar gestellt. Leg. (kann fehlen): CONCORDIA.

48. Denar, Dupondius, As, Rom, Marc Aurel, 163–164 n. Chr.; Faustina d. J., 161–176 n. Chr.; Lucilla, nach 164 n. Chr. – BMC Emp IV 418–419, 250–251 Taf. 57, 17; 426, 303; 538, 968; 573, 1182 Taf. 77, 4; cxxxiv, cxliv–cxlv. – Rs.: C. stehend, hält patera und (meist Doppel-)Füllhorn, stützt meist l. Arm auf Säule. Leg. (kann fehlen): CONCORDIA.

49. * Denar, Sesterz, Dupondius, As, Rom und östliche Prägestätte, Aquilia Severa, 220–222 n. Chr. – BMC Emp V 558, 184–187 Taf. 88, 20–89, 1; 585, 335–336 Taf. 93, 2; 609, 432–434 Taf. 96, 8; 609–610, 435–437 Taf. 97, 1. – Rs.: C. stehend, hält Doppelfüllhorn, opfert aus patera über Altar mit Flamme. Leg.: CONCORDIA.

50. Aureus und Antoninian, Antiochia, Gordian III., 239–244 n. Chr. – RIC IV 3, 34, 176, 178 Taf. 3, 9; 37, 208. – Rs.: C. stehend, hält Füllhorn, opfert aus Schale über Altar. Leg.: CONCORDIA AVG.

51. AU Medaillon, Aureus, Antoninian, Sesterz, Dupondius, As; Rom und Mediolanum; Valerian und Gallienus, 253–257 n. Chr. – RIC V 1, 45, 80–81; 50, 154–155; 56, 237; 73–74, 70–71 etc.; Gnecci, Medaglioni I 6, 3; Béranger, Principatus 376. – Rs.: C. stehend, hält patera und Füllhorn oder Doppelfüllhorn. Leg.: CONCORDIA (E) AVG(G) oder EXERCIT(I) oder MIL(IT). Variante: RIC V 1 56, 233–235; Gnecci, Medaglioni III 51, 12; C. opfert an Altar.

52. * Aureus und Denar, Rom, Antoninus Pius, 140–144 n. Chr.; Faustina d. Ä., 139–140 n. Chr. – BMC Emp IV 22, Anm. zu 132; 30–31, 196–201 Taf. 5, 6; lvi; Strack, Reichsprägung III 46. – Rs.: C. stehend, hält Szepter und Füllhorn. Leg.: CONCORDIA AVG.

53. * Aureus, Denar, Sesterz, As, Rom, Commodus, 190–191 n. Chr. – BMC Emp IV 739, 272–274 Taf. 97, 18; 744, 295–297 Taf. 98, 14–15; 830 * und 668; 832 *; clxv–clxvii, clxxvii. – Rs.: C. stehend, im Peplos und mit Mantel hinter dem Rücken, hält patera und Szepter. Leg.: CONCORDIAE COM(MODI) (AVG).

54. * Denar, Rom, Plautilla, 202–205 n. Chr. – BMC Emp V 235, 398–399 Taf. 37, 17; 236–237, 411–415 Taf. 38, 4. – Rs.: C. stehend wie 53. Leg.: CONCORDIA AVGG.

55. * Aureus und Denar, Rom, Marc Aurel, 148–149 n. Chr. – BMC Emp IV 98, 680–681 Taf. 14, 14–15; lxxvii; Strack, Reichsprägung III 115; Reekmans 34; Belting-Ihm, Chr., «Sub matris tutela», AbhHeidelb 1976 Nr. 3, 18; Fittschen, K., Die Bildnistypen der Faustina minor und die Fecunditas Augusta, AbhGöttingen 126, 1982, 25. – Rs.: C. im Peplos frontal stehend, breitet mit beiden Händen Manteltuch in Hüfthöhe weit aus; davor, in kleinem Maßstab, zwei kleine Figuren stehend, als kaiserliche Enkel oder als deren El-tern Marc Aurel und Faustina minor gedeutet. Leg.: CONCORDIA. Deutung nach Strack.

56. Aureus, Antiochia, Pescennius Niger, 193–194/5 n. Chr. – BMC Emp V 75 §. – Rs.: C. stehend, hebt r. Hand, hält l. Doppelfüllhorn. Leg.: CONCORDIA.

57. Antoninian, Londinum, Carausius, 286–293 n. Chr. – RIC V 2, 465, 27. – Rs.: C. stehend, streckt r. Hand aus, hält l. Szepter. Leg.: CONCORDIA AV.

58.* Aureus, Denar, Sesterz, Dupondius, As, Rom, Faustina d. J., ca. 147–161 n. Chr. – BMC Emp IV 159, 1041; 163, 1078–1079; 164, 1084–1085 Taf. 23, 8–9; 372 *; 374 †; 376, 2166; 377 *; 377–378, 2173–2174 Taf. 52, 7; 380 *; lxxvi; vgl. 397 * und cxxii (früh in Regierungszeit des Marc Aurel); Strack, Reichsprägung III 116. – Rs.: C. stehend, hält Füllhorn, zieht mit r. Hand Gewandbahn zur Seite. Leg.: CONCORDIA.

59.* Sesterz und As, Rom, Hadrian, ca. 119–120/121 n. Chr.; Antoninus Pius, 138 n. Chr. – BMC Emp III 414, 1182–1187 Taf. 78, 9; 551 *; clxv. clxxxvi; Strack, Reichsprägung II 71; Hamberg 20; Béranger, Principatus 375. – Rs.: C. stehend, hält seitlich je ein Feldzeichen aufgestellt. Leg.: CONCORDIA EXERCITIVM.

60.* AE Medaillon, Sesterz, Dupondius, As; Rom, Antoninus Pius, 140–143/144 n. Chr. – BMC Emp IV 198, 1232–1235 Taf. 28, 7; 213, 1332 Taf. 32, 5; 218, 1361; lxxxi; Gnechi, Medaglioni III 26, 125; Strack, Reichsprägung III 56; Hamberg 20. – Rs.: C. stehend, stützt mit l. Hand Feldzeichen auf, hält mit r. Hand kleine Victoria. Leg.: CONCORDIA EXERCITIVM.

61. Sesterz, Rom, Marc Aurel, 170–171 n. Chr. – BMC Emp IV 618, 1394. – Rs.: C. stehend, hält mit jeder Hand Feldzeichen aufgestellt. Leg.: CONCORDIA EXERCITIVM. – Danach bleibt der Typus sehr häufig bis zu Konstantin; hervorzuheben sind folgende Beispiele bzw. Varianten (62–64):

62. Denar, Sesterz, Dupondius, As, Rom, Commodus, 184–186 n. Chr. – BMC Emp IV 717, 159 Taf. 95, 3; 724, 195–196 Taf. 96, 1; 801 †; 802 * und †; 804, 576 Taf. 106, 8; 807 //; clxx; Grant, M., Roman Anniversary Issues (1950) 110, 161; Béranger, Principatus 376. – Rs.: C. stehend, hält seitlich je ein Feldzeichen aufgestellt. Leg.: CONCORDIA MILIT.

63. Aureus, Sesterz, Dupondius, As; Septimius Severus, Geta, 208 n. Chr. – BMC Emp V 214, 313 Taf. 34, 20; 339 *; 340, 841 Taf. 50, 10; clxxii. cliv. – Rs.: C. stehend zwischen je drei aufgestellten Feldzeichen, nach einem greifend. Leg.: CONCORDIA MILIT.

64. AU Medaillon, Severina, 270–275 n. Chr. – Gnechi, Medaglioni I 9, 1 Taf. 3, 14. – Rs.: C. stehend, hält seitlich je ein Feldzeichen aufgestellt. Leg.: CONCORDIAE MILITVM.

65. Aureus und Antoninian, Rom und Mediolanum, Claudius Gothicus und Quintillus, 268–270 n. Chr. – RIC V 1, 213, 25; 222, 140–142; 239, 1; 243, 45–46; 244, 48; Lafavrie, J., RNum 1958, 84–85 Abb. 3; 88. 102–103 Nr. 23 Taf. 9. – Rs.: C. stehend, hält Feldzeichen und Füllhorn. Leg.: CONCORDIA oder LEG.

66.* Follis, Aquileia, Licinius I. und II., 317 n. Chr. – RIC VII 393–394, 11–13 Taf. 11. – Rs.: C. stehend, hält caduceus und Füllhorn. Leg.: CONCORDIA AVGG NN.

67. Antoninian, Mediolanum, Gallienus, 260–268 n. Chr. – RIC V 1, 172, 472; Amit 163. – Rs.: C. stehend, hält patera und Ruder auf Globus. Leg.: CONCORDIA EQVIT. Möglicherweise Fortuna mit komplementärer Legende als C. Vgl. dazu RIC V 2, 367–368, 366 und 370–375 Taf. 13, 17 (Postumus); 391, 44 (Victorinus, «barbarous»).

68. Antoninian, Carausius, 286–293 n. Chr. – RIC V 2, 527, 757. – Rs.: C. stehend, hält Stab und Füllhorn. Leg.: CONCORDIA AVGG. Vgl. schon RIC IV 3, 77, 77 (keine Benennung, Deutung unsicher).

69.* Aureus und Follis, Alexandria und Siscia, Severus II., 305–308 n. Chr. – Folles: RIC VI 475, 172–175 Taf. 9 (a); 477, 186–188 (b); 669, 52 (c); Aurei: 671, 61 Taf. 16 (d); Alföldi, a. O. 37, 158 Nr. 13 (e). – Rs.: C. stehend, auf Kopf Modius, hält Szepter und Gewand (Folles a–c) bzw. patera und Szepter (Aureus d) bzw. patera und cornucopiae (Aureus e). Leg.: CONCORDIA AVGG ET CAES (Aureus) bzw. CONCORDIA IMPERII (Folles).

Rundplastik

70. Terrakottastatuen. Cosa. Aus Cosa, Tempel der Concordia (vgl. 120). – Unpubliziert. S. Brown, F., Cosa, The Making of a Roman Town (1980) 39. – Anscheinend 2. Jh. v. Chr. – Ca. 10 Figuren, bei 2 Exemplaren Schleier, Diadem und Füllhorn erhalten.

71. Marmorstatue. Neapel, Mus. Naz. 6362. Aus Pompeii, Gebäude der Eumachia. – Guida Ruesch Nr. 1002; Spano, G., RendNapoli N. S. 36, 1961, 12–16; Richardson 267–269; Kockel, V., AA 1986, 458; Zanker, a. O. 9a, 31–32. – Spätaugustisch oder tibetisch. – C. stehend, hält Füllhorn. Deutung als C. wahrscheinlich, da das ganze Gebäude der C. Augusta und der Pietas geweiht war. Für die gelegentlich vertretene Ergänzung des Kopfes des Bildnis der Livia fehlen Anhaltspunkte.

72. Marmorstatue. Tunis, Bardo. Aus Gighis. – Gauckler, P., RA 41, 1902, 402 Taf. 15, 7. Antoninisch. – C. stehend, mit Ährenkranz und Schleier, hält l. Füllhorn, r. Arm war auf Szepter gestützt. Inschrift.

D. Concordia stehend in Gruppen

Architektonisches Relief

73.* Bogen des Galerius, Pfeiler B, Südost-Seite, 3. Relief v. o. Thessaloniki. – Kinch, K.-F., L'arc de triomphe de Salonique (1890) 36–37; Laubscher, H. P., Der Reliefschmuck des Galeriusbogens in Thessaloniki (1975) 52–57 Taf. 29, 40; Meyer, H., Jdl 95, 1980, 400–405 Abb. 17. – 303 n. Chr. – Siegesopfer des Diocletian und des Galerius, umgeben von Personifikationen. Zwischen den Herrschern im Hintergrund Homonoia-Concordia mit Diadem, legt r. Hand der Oikumene um die Schulter. Der ikonographische Typus an westlichen Vorbildern orientiert.

Römische Sarkophage

74.* Sarkophage mit vier Szenen aus der Laufbahn römischer Feldherren, z. B. a) Florenz, Uff.; b) (= Iuno 189*) Frascati, Villa Taverna; c) (= Iuno 188) Mantova, Pal. Ducale; d) Los Angeles, County Mus. – Koch/Sichtermann, RömSark 99–100 Abb. 93, 94; Rossbach, A., Römische Hochzeits- und Ehedenkmalerei (1871) 153–162; Levi, A., Sculture greche e romane del Palazzo Ducale di Mantova (1931) 86–88 Nr. 186 Taf. 95–96; Rodenwaldt 3–27; Scott Ryberg, I., «Rites of the State Religion in Roman Art», MAAR 22, 1955, 165 Abb. 90; Weinstock, St., RE XXIII 1 (1957) 751–752 s. v. «Pronuba»; Reekmans 40–41; Brilliant, R., Gesture and Rank in Roman Art (1963) 157–160 Abb. 3; 134; Kampen, N. B., AJA 85, 1981, 47–58; Reinsberg, C., Jdl 99, 1984, 301–303. – Wichtig zur Deutung der C. die Stelle bei Severianus von Gabala, zit. bei Kantorowicz 8–9. – Um 170–190 n. Chr. – Szenenfolge von Kampf (bzw. Jagd oder Victoria, Zeichen der virtus), Unterwerfung (clementia), Auszugsoffer (pietas); am r. Ende Mann in Toga und Frau verhüllt im Handschlag verbunden. Die Frau von einer Gefährtin, der Mann von einem Togatus begleitet. Zwischen dem Paar im Hintergrund C. mit Diadem stehend, legt beiden Hand um die Schulter. Im Vordergrund Hymenaeus, klein, mit Fackel.

75. Schlachtsarkophag. Deckel. Rom, Mus. Naz. Rom. 112327. Aus Portonaccio. – Koch/Sichtermann, RömSark 92 Abb. 76; Hamberg, P. G., ActaArch 7, 1936, 44; idem, Studies in Roman Imperial Art (1945) 176–179 Taf. 40; Reekmans 41–42; Andrae, B., in Helbig III Nr. 2126. – Um 190–200 n. Chr. – Auf dem Deckel in der Mitte zwischen Szenen aus der Kindheit und Unterwerfung von Barbaren: Szene der dextrarum iunctio mit C. wie auf 74.

76. (= Iuno 186 mit Lit.) Hochzeitssarkophag. Vatikan, Sala delle Muse Inv. 268. – Koch/Sichtermann, RömSark 99; Rossbach, a. O. 74, 94–105; Lippold, SkulptVatMus III 1, 79–82 Nr. 522 Taf. 30; Scott Ryberg, a. O. 74, 166 Taf. 59, 94; Reekmans 38 Abb. 9; Andrae, B., in Helbig I Nr. 72. – 3. Viertel 2. Jh. n. Chr. – Hochzeitsszene nach r. Am r. Ende der Brautgarnitur in Toga stehend, hinter ihm Virtus, die ihn bekränzt, und ein sitzender Bärtiger; ihm wird von Venus (?) die verhüllte Braut zugeführt, deren ausgestreckte Hand er ergreift; zwischen beiden im Hintergrund C. stehend, legt beiden Hand um Schulter.

77.* «Hochzeits»-Sarkophag. Leningrad, Ermitage A 433. Aus Monticelli. – Koch/Sichtermann, RömSark 100–101; Himmelmann, N., in Festschr. F. Matz (1962) 120; Jucker, H., AA 1966, 512 Anm. 24; Saverkina, I. I., Römische Sarkophage in der Ermitage (1979) 38–42 Nr. 14 Taf. 28–29, 34–35; Andrae, B., SarkRel I 2 (1980) 16–17; Himmelmann, N., Über Hirten-Genre in der Antiken Kunst (1980) 125 Taf. 55; Koch, G., BonnJbb 182, 1982, 694; Reinsberg, a. O. 74, 291–317 Abb. 1. – Um 180 n. Chr. – In der Mitte Mann in Toga und verhüllte Frau beim Opfer. Zwischen beiden im Hintergrund C. stehend, mit Diadem und Peplos, der (wie sonst bei Venus) eine Brust freiläßt; sie wendet sich leicht zur Frau und legt ihr die Hand um die Schulter. Der Mann von Victoria be-kränzt, dahinter Opferpersonal mit Stier, Lictor. Die Frau von Venus mit Amor und Hymenaeus geleitet, dahinter die drei Grazien.

78.* «Hochzeits»-Sarkophag. Vatikan, Belvedere. – Koch/Sichtermann, RömSark 100–101; Robert, C., SarkRel III 2 Nr. 195; Amelung, SkulptVatMus II 290–294 Nr. 102 n. Taf. 27; Scott Ryberg, a. O. 74, 165–166 Taf. 59 Abb. 93; Reekmans 36; Himmelmann, a. O. 77, 120 Taf. 36, 2; Horster, M., AA 1975, 408–410 Abb. 8a–b; Geyer, A., Jdl 93, 1978, 372, 386–387 Abb. 3; Reinsberg, a. O. 74, 291–317 Abb. 2. – Um 190–200 n. Chr. – Mann in Toga und verhüllte Frau beim Opfer an Altar; zwischen beiden im Hintergrund C. mit Diadem stehend. Der Mann von Victoria bekränzt, dahinter zwei Opferdiener mit Stier; hinter der Gemahlin Venus, Amor und zwei Frauen.

79.* (= Abundantia 5*, = Honos 32, = Iuno 190) Hochzeitssarkophag. Rom, S. Lorenzo fuori le mura. – Koch/Sichtermann, RömSark 101 Abb. 97; Rossbach, a. O. 74, 40–94; Scott Ryberg, a. O. 74, 166–167 Abb. 95; Matz, F., Ein römisches Meisterwerk, Jdl 19. Erg.-H. (1958) 151–153 Taf. 28b; Reekmans 38 Abb. 10; Fittschen, K., AA 1971, 117–119; Andrae, B./Jung, H., AA 1977, Tabelle zu 434. – Um 180 n. Chr. – Opferszene mit Idealgestalten. Am r. Ende Brautpaar, in Handschlag verbunden, mit Begleitern; zwischen ihnen im Hintergrund C., ohne Diadem, stehend, legt beiden Hand um Schulter.

80. (= Abundantia 7*) Sarkophag, meist dem Kaiser Balbinus zugewiesen. Rom, Prätextat-Katakomben. – Koch/Sichtermann, RömSark 101–102; Gütschow, M., Das Museum der Prätextat-Katakomben, MemPontAcc 4, 2, 1938, 77–109 Taf. 10; Jucker, H., AA 1966, 501–514 Abb. 9; Geyer, a. O. 78, 382–393; Andrae, B., SarkRel I 2 (1980) 28 ff.; Reinsberg, C., MarbWPr 1985, 3 ff.; Goette, H. R., Jdl 103, 1988, 419–420 Anm. 79. – Ca. 238 n. Chr. – Links Grabherr in Rüstung und Gemahlin beim Opfer, umgeben von Idealfiguren. Rechts Grabherr in Toga und Gemahlin mit verhülltem Haupt im Handschlag verbunden; zwischen beiden im Vordergrund Hymenaeus (weitgehend verloren), im Hintergrund C. mit Diadem und Schleier stehend, legt beiden Hand um Schulter.

81.* Säulensarkophag. Rom, Pal. Giustiniani. – Koch/Sichtermann, RömSark 105; Matz/Duhn II Nr. 3098; Horster, M., AA 1975, 413–415 Abb. 13b. – Um 230 n. Chr. – In Mittelnische Mann in Toga und verhüllte Frau im Handschlag verbunden. Zwischen beiden im Hintergrund C. mit Diadem, kleiner; über der Gruppe zwei schwebende Erosen einen Giebel bildend.

82. «Brüder-Sarkophag». Neapel, Mus. Naz. 6603. – Koch/Sichtermann, RömSark 102–103; Guida Ruesch Nr. 1053; Reekmans 44–45 Abb. 14; Himmelmann, a. O. 77, 110–124; Stročka, V. M., Jdl 83, 1968, 221–239 Abb. 1; Himmelmann, N., Typologische Untersuchungen an römischen Sarkophagreliefs des 3. und 4. Jh. n. Chr. (1973) 5–6; Geyer, a. O. 78, 369–393; Fittschen, K., Jdl 94, 1979, 589–593. – Um 260 n. Chr. – Der Verstorbene in verschiedenen

Aspekten, als Konsul, als Philosoph, als Magistrat mit Camillus. Rechts der Verstorbene mit seiner Gemahlin im Handschlag verbunden; die Frau von Venus bekränzt, hinter dem Mann Genius mit Füllhorn, im Vordergrund Hymenaeus (weitgehend verloren); zwischen dem Paar im Hintergrund C. stehend.

83.* Feldherrn-Adonis-Sarkophag. Berlin (West), Staatl. Mus. 1987.2. – Dutschke, H., Antike Bildwerke in Oberitalien II (1875) 129 Nr. 316; Heilmeyer, W.-D., Antikenmuseum Berlin, Die ausgestellten Werke (1988) 17 Abb. 2. – Anfang 3. Jh. n. Chr. – Mann in Toga und verhüllte Frau im Handschlag verbunden; zwischen beiden Hymenaeus (weitgehend verloren), im Hintergrund C. mit Diadem und Schleier stehend, legt beiden Hand um Schulter. Weitere Szenen: Feldherrn-Opfer mit Pietas, Jagd des Adonis.

84. (= Abundantia 8* mit Lit., = Africa 35 mit Lit., = Annona 3, = Iuno 191 mit Lit.) «Annona-Sarkophag». Rom, Mus. Naz. Rom. 40799. Aus Rom, vor Porta Latina. – Koch/Sichtermann, RömSark 102 Abb. 102; Reekmans 42–43 Abb. 13; Andreae, B., in Helbig⁴ III Nr. 2122; idem, JbAC 13, 1970, 85–86 Taf. 3; Uggeri, G., RendPontAcc 40, 1967/68, 113–122. – Um 270–280 n. Chr. – In der Mitte hoher Beamter der Annona mit Gemahlin im Handschlag verbunden; zwischen ihnen brennender Räucheraltar, im Hintergrund C. mit Diadem stehend, zur Frau gewandt, legt ihr die Hand auf die Schulter. Seitlich Personifikationen: r. Genius Senatus, Annona (?), Africa; l. Ostia (?), Portus.

85. (= Dioskouroi/Castores 75* mit Lit. und Querverweis) Säulensarkophag. Rom, Mus. Naz. Rom. 203. Von der Via Appia. – Koch/Sichtermann, RömSark 78 Anm. 17; 104 Anm. 68; Rodenwaldt, G., RM 38/39, 1923/24, 19–20 Abb. 9; Reekmans 36–37; Andreae, B., in Helbig⁴ III Nr. 2150; MusNazRom, Le sculpture I 8, 312–315 Nr. VI 18 (L. Musso). – Um 250–260 n. Chr. – In Mittelnische Frau, in venushafter Tracht, legt Mann in Toga Arm um Schulter; zwischen beiden im Hintergrund C. stehend.

86.* Strigilis-Sarkophag (christlich). Vatikan, Mus. Pio Cristiano Inv. 26. – Bovini 110; idem, I sarcofagi paleocristiani (1949) 198–199, 319 Nr. 130 (um 320–330 n. Chr.); Reekmans 61–65 Abb. 26; Deichmann, F. W. (Hrsg.)/Bovini, G./Brandenburg, H., Repertorium der christlich antiken Sarkophage I: Rom und Ostia (1967) 71–72 Nr. 86 Taf. 25. – 1. Drittel 4. Jh. n. Chr. – Im Mittelfeld Mann in Toga und Frau verhüllt, im Handschlag verbunden; zwischen ihnen im Vordergrund Amor und Psyche, im Hintergrund C. mit Diadem stehend, legt beiden Hand um Schulter. In Außenfeldern christliche Szenen. Weitere Beispiele auf christlichen Sarkophagen bei Bovini 103–117; Kötting 885–888; Reekmans 60–65.

Mythologische Sarkophag

87. (= Apollon/Apollo 428* mit Lit., = Ares/Mars 386, = Helios/Sol 186, = Hypnos/Somnus 137) Ares-Aphrodite-Sarkophag. Grottaferrata, Abbazia. – Koch/Sichtermann, RömSark 98 Abb. 150; Sichtermann/Koch, MythSark 24 Nr. 13 Taf. 26, 1;

Schefold, K., MEFRA 88, 1976, 778–779 Abb. 14–16; Blome, P., RM 90, 1983, 203. – Um 160 n. Chr. – Am l. Ende Vulcanus und Venus, im Handschlag verbunden; zwischen ihnen im Hintergrund C. stehend, legt beiden Arm um Schulter. R. davon Hauptszene mit Aufdeckung der Affäre von Venus und Mars.

88. (= Aietes 4*, = Iason 49* mit Lit.) Argonauten-Sarkophag, Rom, Prätextat-Katakomben. – Koch/Sichtermann, RömSark 98. 153–154 Abb. 173; Gütschow, a. O. 80, 44–56 Taf. 1; Reekmans 36 Abb. 15; Sichtermann/Koch, MythSark Nr. 31 Taf. 71, 1; 74, 2; Blome, a. O. 87, 203. Weitere Exemplare: Koch/Sichtermann, RömSark 154; Robert, C., SarkRel II Nr. 189–190; Blome, a. O. 201 ff. – Um 160–170 n. Chr. – Am r. Ende gerüsteter Mann und verhüllte Frau, im Handschlag verbunden; zwischen ihnen im Vordergrund Hymenaeus, im Hintergrund C. mit Diadem und Schleier stehend. Gütschow und Sichtermann/Koch deuten das Paar als Darstellung der Verstorbenen. Die in den anderen Szenen durchgehaltene Kohärenz des Themas sowie die von Reekmans beigebrachten Parallelen (vgl. dazu 87) legen die Deutung als Iason und Medea näher.

Römisches Grabrelief

89.* Grabrelief. Manziana, Villa G. Tittioni. – Röm. Inst. Neg. 76.460. – Um 180 n. Chr. – Mann und Frau im Handschlag verbunden, im Vordergrund Hymenaeus (weitgehend verloren); zwischen ihnen im Hintergrund C. mit Diadem und Schleier stehend, auf Frau blickend.

Lampe

90. Tonlampe. Ehem. Pesaro, Slg. Passeri. – Passeri, Lucernae fictiles Musei Passerii, Pesaro I (1739) 44–45; Rossbach, a. O. 74, 35–36; Reekmans 37. – Antoninisch. – Mann und Frau im Handschlag verbunden; zwischen ihnen im Hintergrund C. stehend.

Münzen

91.* Sesterz, Rom, Titus, 80–81 n. Chr. – BMC Emp II 258, 177 Taf. 49, 2; lxxv («Pietas»); Hamburg 26; Reekmans 33 («Pietas»). – Rs.: Titus und Domitian, beide in Toga, im Handschlag verbunden. Zwischen ihnen im Hintergrund C. (oder Pietas?) stehend, in reichem Gewand, mit Schleier und Diadem, auf Titus (r.) blickend. Leg.: PIETAS AVGVST. Figur im Hintergrund nicht sicher bestimmbar. Aufgrund der Legende Deutung als Pietas möglich; dagegen könnte die spätere Tradition des Typus (93–97) sowie die Tatsache, daß Pietas auf flavischen Münzen selten und meist in anderem Sinn erscheint, für die Deutung als C. sprechen. Der Sinn wäre dann wie bei 93 mit komplementärer Legende.

92. Sesterz, Rom, Matidia, 113–117 oder 118–119 n. Chr. – BMC Emp III 562 zu S. 231 («Marciana»); Reekmans 33 («Pietas»); vgl. Strack, Reichsprägung II 67–69. – Rs.: Hadrian und Sabina (?) im Handschlag verbunden; zwischen ihnen im Hintergrund weibliche Figur stehend. Leg.: PIETAS AVG. Figur im Hintergrund nicht sicher bestimmbar, für die Möglichkeit der Deutung als C. s. zu 91.

93.* AE Medaillon, Hadrian und Aelius Verus, 136–137 n. Chr. – BMC Emp III cxxxiv; Gnechi, Medaglioni II 3, 4 Taf. 38, 3; 9, 1 Taf. 42, 7; Strack, Reichsprägung II 168; Hamburg 25–26; Reekmans 33. – Rs.: Hadrian und Aelius Verus im Handschlag verbunden; zwischen ihnen im Hintergrund C. stehend, legt beiden Hand um Schulter. Leg.: CONCORDIA (AVG).

94.* Aureus, Sesterz, Dupondius, As, Rom, Faustina d. Ä., 141–161 n. Chr.; Marc Aurel, 145–160 n. Chr. – BMC Emp IV 48–49, 326 Taf. 8, 5; 51 f; 87, 611–612 Taf. 13, 4; 289, 1786–1787 Taf. 43, 4; 292, 1801 Taf. 43, 14; lx; Strack, Reichsprägung III 109; Hamburg 26; Weinstock, St., RE 23, 1 (1957) 753; Fittschen, a. O. 55, 22. – Rs.: Marc Aurel und Faustina d. J. im Handschlag verbunden; zwischen ihnen C. stehend, blickt auf Marc Aurel. Leg.: VOTA PVBLICA.

95.* AE Medaillon, Commodus und Crispina, 180–192 n. Chr. – BMC Emp IV, clxxxiii; Gnechi, Medaglioni II 72, 2–3 Taf. 91, 8–9. – Rs.: Commodus und Crispina im Handschlag verbunden; zwischen ihnen im Hintergrund C. stehend, legt beiden Hand um Schulter. Leg.: VOTA PUBLICA.

96.* Aureus, Rom, Caracalla, 202 n. Chr. – BMC Emp V 206, 271 Taf. 33, 16; cxlvi–cxlvii; Béranger, Principatus 378. – Rs.: Caracalla und Plautilla im Handschlag verbunden. Zwischen ihnen im Hintergrund C. stehend, legt beiden Hand um Schulter. Leg.: CONCORDIA FELIX (Daneben der übliche Typus ohne C., s. u. 139).

97. AE Medaillon, Sesterz, Dupondius, As, Rom, Iulia Paula, 219–220 n. Chr.; Aquilia Severa, 220–222 n. Chr. – BMC Emp V 605, 420 Taf. 96, 3; 422–423 Taf. 96, 5; 610 *; vgl. Aureus 555 * (?); Gnechi, Medaglioni III 41, 2. – Rs.: Elagabal und Iulia Paula bzw. Aquilia Severa im Handschlag verbunden, zwischen ihnen C. im Hintergrund stehend, legt beiden Hand um Schulter. Leg.: CONCORDIA AETERNA bzw. CONCORDIA (Medaillon).

98.* Antoninian, verschiedene Prägestätten, Probus, 276–282 n. Chr. – RIC V 2, 52–54, 325–328, 331–342, 345–346 Taf. 2, 17; 87–88, 650–657 Taf. 4, 3, 10–11; 88–89, 663–668 Taf. 3, 14–15; 117, 906. – Rs.: Kaiser und C. im Handschlag verbunden. Leg.: CONCORDIA MIL(ITVM). Typus nicht zu unterscheiden von Darstellungen des Kaiserpaares. Deutung auf C. hier wahrscheinlich, da Probus anscheinend unverheiratet war, eine Kaiserin jedenfalls in seiner Münzprägung keine Rolle spielt. Von hier aus möglicherweise Deutung derselben Typen bei Aurelian, Tacitus und Florian mit der Legende «Concordia militum» zu begründen; aber nicht sicher, da militärische c. auf Münzen auch in Verbindung mit Kaiserinnen proklamiert wird. Vgl. 101, wo statt des Kaisers sein Schutzgott Hercules auftritt, ähnlich 100 mit C. und Sol.

99.* Aureus, Antoninian, Denar, verschiedene Prägestätten, Carausius, 286–293 n. Chr. – RIC V 2, 465, 23; 482, 205–208; 510, 551; 514, 600; 517,

622–624 Taf. 16, 5; 518, 634; 523, 702; 528, 761–762; 547, 1077; 548, 1080. – Rs.: Carausius und C., z. T. mit Szepter im Handschlag verbunden. Leg.: CONCORDIA MIL(ITVM). Deutung als C. wahrscheinlich, da bei Carausius auch → Fides, → Pax und Uberitas (→ Ubertas) mit dem Kaiser im Handschlag verbunden dargestellt sind.

100.* Antoninian, Lugdunum und Ticinum, Probus, 276–282 n. Chr. – RIC V 2, 22, 23; 51, 323–324 Taf. 2, 15–16; 54, 343–344. – Rs.: C. links stehend, hält in jeder Hand Feldzeichen aufgestellt; gegenüber Sol stehend, r. Hand zu C. erhoben, in l. Hand Globus haltend. Leg.: CONCORDIA MILIT bzw. CONCORDIA AVG. Vgl. RIC V 2, 110, 844–850 Taf. 4, 18; Leg.: PROVIDEN DEOR (C. mit komplementärer Legende?). S. auch → Providentia und → Fides.

101. (= Herakles 3414*) Aureus, Rom, Maximianus Herculius, 306–307 n. Chr. – RIC VI 367, 134; 373, 175–176; Alföldi, a. O. 37, 26–27, 159, 25 Taf. 2, 25. – Rs.: C. verhüllt mit Szepter und Hercules mit Keule, im Handschlag verbunden. Leg.: CONCORDIA MILIT(UM) FELICITAS ROMA-NOR(VM).

102. Antoninian, Carausius, 286–293 n. Chr. – RIC V 2, 547–548, 1078–1079. – Rs.: C. und Victoria im Handschlag verbunden; zwischen ihnen Kranz. Leg.: CONCORDIA MILITVM.

103.* Aureus und Antoninian, Mediolanum und Siscia, Aurelian, 270–275 n. Chr. – RIC V 1, 277, 107; 283, 167; 287, 198–202 Taf. 7, 97; Variante: 203. – Rs.: Zwei Concordien halten zusammen Feldzeichen zwischen sich aufgestellt, dazu jede für sich weiteres Feldzeichen. Variante: eine C. hält Füllhorn. Leg.: CONCORDIA MILIT. Vgl. den Typus mit drei Victorien: RIC V 2, 508, 530.

104. Antoninian, Carausius, 286–293 n. Chr. – RIC V 2, 515, 601. – Rs.: Zwei Concordien, einander gegenüberstehend, zwischen ihnen Feldzeichen aufgestellt. Leg.: ... CORD ...

105. Antoninian, Lugdunum, Diocletian und Mit-herrscher, 293–294 n. Chr. – RIC V 2, 223, 17; 262, 354–355; 297, 628; 304, 678; Béranger, Principatus 381–382. – Rs.: Zwei Concordien im Handschlag verbunden; beide halten Füllhörner. Leg.: CONCORDIA AVGG. Vgl. den Typus mit zwei Victorien: RIC V 2, 103, 799–800; 113, 875–876.

E. Frauen des Kaiserhauses als Concordia

Münzen

106.* Sesterz, Rom, Caligula, 37–38 n. Chr. – BMC Emp I 152, 36–37 Taf. 28, 4; cxlv–cxlvi; Grant, M., Roman Imperial Money (1954) 140–143 Abb. 49. – Rs.: Die drei Schwestern Caligulas als Personifikationen, stehend: l. Agrippina als Salus-Securitas; r. Iulia Livilla als Fortuna, in der Mitte Drusilla als C. mit patera und Füllhorn. Leg.: AGRIPPINA DRVILLA IVLIA. Deutung als C. aufgrund der Attribute nicht völlig eindeutig; jedoch wegen der Identifizierung mit Drusilla, der Lieblingsschwester Caligulas, gut begründet.

107.* Aureus und Denar, Rom, Nero, 64–68 n. Chr. – BMC Emp I 208, 52–55 Taf. 39, 11–12; clxvi, clxxiii–clxxiv. – Rs.: Nero stehend, mit Toga, Strahlenkranz, patera und Szepter; r. Kaiserin stehend, verhüllt, mit patera und Füllhorn. Leg.: AVGUSTVS AVGVSTA. Deutung der Kaiserin als C. nicht ganz sicher, aber in Anschluß an 44–51 und 106 begründet.

F. Concordia als Attribut

Münzen

108.* AE Medaillon und Sesterz, Rom, Antoninus Pius, 140–143/44 n. Chr.; Faustina d.Ä., 141–161 n. Chr. – BMC Emp IV 198–199, 1236–1240 Taf. 28, 8; 229, 1416; 230*; lx. lxxxi; Gnecci, Medaglioni III 26, 124 Taf. 148, 11; Strack, Reichsprägung III 96–97; Hamberg 26–27; Weinstock, St., RE 23, 1 (1957) 752–753 (auch zu Vorläufern der Eheschließung vor Kaiserstatuen; vgl. dazu auch Wilcken, U., Zeitschr. Savigny-Stiftung für Rechtsgeschichte, röm. Abteilung 29, 1909, 504); Reekmans 27, 35; Kantorowicz 15; Fittschen, a. O. 55, 22. – Rs.: Antoninus Pius und Faustina d.Ä., jeder auf Basis stehend, im Handschlag verbunden; Antoninus hält in l. Hand kleine stehende C. mit Füllhorn und patera, Faustina hält Szepter. Zwischen beiden kleines Paar, im Handschlag verbunden, dazwischen Altar. Leg.: CONCORDIAE (AVG).

109.* AR Medaillon, Rom, Iulia Domna, 196–211 n. Chr. – BMC Emp V 169 Anm. zu 97; Gnecci, Medaglioni I 45, 2 Taf. 22, 4. – Vs.: Büste der Iulia Domna mit Füllhorn, hält kleine C. mit Doppel-Füllhorn und patera. Deutung auf C. wohl sicher durch das Doppel-Füllhorn, das auf severischen Münzen fast nur bei C. vorkommt.

110.* Denar und Sesterz, Rom, Commodus, 181–185 n. Chr. – BMC Emp IV 714, 144–145 Taf. 94, 18; 717, 157–158 Taf. 95, 2; 777, 479 Taf. 103, 14; 780, 492; 781, 497–497A; 783, 502; 790, 523 Taf. 105, 3; clviii. – Rs.: Annona stehend, hält in r. Hand kleine C. mit patera und Szepter, in l. Hand Füllhorn; seitlich Modius mit Ähren und Heck eines Schiffes. Leg.: ANN(O) (AVG).

G. Statuen von unsicherem Typus

111. Statue der C., Rom, 164 v. Chr. vom Censor Q. Marcius Philippus an öffentlichem Platz geweiht; 154 v. Chr. Versuch des Censors L. Cassius Longinus, sie in der Curia zu weihen. Cic. dom. 130, 136. – Skard 72–73; Scullard, H. H., Roman Politics 220–150 B. C. (1951) 221–233; Zehnacker, H., Moneta I (1973) 514 (unzutreffend); Levick 220; Coarelli, F., Il Foro Romano II. Periodo repubblicano e augusteo (1985) 155–156.

112. Statue der C., Casinum, 40 v. Chr. von den Duoviri M. Papius und L. Matrius wiederhergestellt, mit Altar etc. versehen. Degr. ILLRP 562a. – Pais, E., Dalle guerre puniche a Cesare Augusto (1918) 369–373; Weinstock, St., Divus Julius (1971) 263.

113. Statue der C., Rom, zusammen mit Statuen der Pax und der Salus Publica 11 v. Chr. von Augustus aus Geldern, die Senat und Volk für Kaiserbildnisse gestiftet hatten, aufgestellt. Cass. Dio 54, 35, 1–2; Ov. fast. 3, 881–882; vgl. CIL II 3349. – Scott, K., ArRelW 35, 1938, 125–126; Liegle, J., Hermes 77, 1942, 299–301; Bömer, F., P. Ovidius Naso, Die Fasten (1958) II 204; Hanell, K., OpuscRom 2, 1960, 95–98; Weinstock, St., JRS 50, 1960, 48–49; InscrIt XIII 2, 433; Richard 347–348, 358–359; Colini, A. M., RendPontAcc 43, 1970–1971, 68–69; Torelli, M., Typology and Structure of Roman Historical Reliefs (1982) 35; Simon, E., Eirene und Pax. Sitzungsber. Wiss. Ges. Univ. Frankfurt am Main 24, 3 (1988) 72.

114. Statue der C., bezeugt durch sechseckige Basis, Cori, Pal. Riozzi. – CIL X 6508; Peter 921. – Spätrepublikanisch. – Typus der Statue unbekannt, wahrscheinlich Standbild. Geweiht von M. Aulus Buxsus und L. Saleivius Philocles (Freigelassener).

115. Statuenbasis und Altar für C. Augusta, Rom, Forum Boarium. – Colini, A. M., RendPontAcc 43, 1970/71, 55–70. – Augusteisch. – Unsicher, ob Stand- oder Sitzbild. Anscheinend zu einem Compitum gehörig. Identifizierung mit der Weihung des Augustus von 11 v. Chr. (113) unbegründet: Da jenes Bildwerk sehr wertvoll gewesen sein muß (Gold? Silber?), wäre eine Travertin-Basis unwahrscheinlich.

116. Statuette der C. aus Silber, Ostia; Stiftung eines C. Antistius Hermes in ein Lokal eines unbekannten Collegiums. – Antoninisch. – Calza, G., Epigraphica 1, 1939, 28–36; Herz, P., BullCom 87, 1980–81, 153–157. – Als weitere Stiftungen von Bildwerken werden ausschließlich Bildnisse männlicher Mitglieder des Kaiserhauses genannt. C. ist in diesem Zusammenhang zu sehen. Der Typus ist unbekannt.

Die vielen Statuen und Statuetten der C. aus der Kaiserzeit, die aus Weih-, Stiftungs- und sonstigen Inschriften bekannt sind, können in diesem Zusammenhang nicht aufgeführt und behandelt werden (würden aber eine Bearbeitung lohnen). Einige Beispiele zusammengestellt (sehr zufällig und auf veralteter Materialgrundlage) bei Engelhard 54–55; Axtell 12–13; Pais, a. O. 112, 370 Anm. 3.

H. Tempel der Concordia, deren Kultbilder für die Ausbildung der Ikonographie von Bedeutung oder charakteristisch gewesen sein müssen

117. Tempel der C., Rom, Forum, am Fuß des Kapitols; nach der Überlieferung 367/66 v. Chr. aufgrund eines Votums des Camillus errichtet. Ov. fast. 1, 641–645; Plut. Cam. 42. – Rebert, H. F./Marceau, H., MAAR 5, 1925, 53, 55–56; Platner/Ashby 138 s. v. «Concordia, aedes, templum»; Momigliano 89–104; InscrIt XIII 2, 399; Weinstock, St., Divus Julius (1971) 260–265; Levick 219–220; Richardson 260–261; Gasparri, C., Aedes Concordiae Augustae (1979) 16, 61; Coarelli, F., Roma (1980) 62–65; Fears, J. R., in ANRW II 17, 2 (1981) 740–741; Hafner, G., AA 1984, 591–594. – Authentizität der Überlieferung über den Tempelbau des Camillus umstritten. Über Kultbild nichts überliefert.

118. Aedicula der C., Rom, Comitium, auf der Graecostasis, 304 v. Chr. von Cn. Flavius errichtet. Liv. 9, 46; Plin. nat. 33, 19. – Aust 833; Platner/Ashby 138 s. v. «Concordia, aedicula»; Momigliano 95, 99; Levick 220–221; Richardson 261–262; Gasparri, a. O. 117, 16; Hafner, a. O. 117, 594. – Über Kultbild nichts bekannt.

119. Tempel der C., Rom, Arx; 218 v. Chr. von L. Manlius gelobt, 216 v. Chr. geweiht. Liv. 22, 33, 7; 23, 21, 7; Fast. Ant. mai. und Fast. Praen. zum 5. Februar: InscrIt XIII 2, 406–407. – Münzer, F., RE XIV 1 (1928) 1222 s. v. «Manlius»; Platner/Ashby 137–138 s. v. «Concordia, aedes»; Lippold, A., Consules (1963) 338–339; Richardson 262–263; Gasparri, a. O. 117, 16. – Über Kultbild nichts bekannt.

120. Heiligtum mit Altar, später Tempel der C., Cosa, Forum, neben Curia und Comitium. – Brown, F., Cosa, The Making of a Roman Town (1980) 30, 38–39. – Ende 3. Jh. (Heiligtum) bzw. 1. Viertel 2. Jh. (Tempel). – Über Kultbild nichts überliefert. Möglicherweise folgten die Votivstatuen 70 dem Typus des Kultbilds.

121. Tempel der C., Rom, Forum, am Fuß des Kapitols; 121 v. Chr. von L. Opimius gebaut (Neubau von 117?). Varro l. l. 5, 156; App. civ. 1, 26, 120; Cic. Sest. 140; Plut. C. Gracch. 17; Fest. p. 470 Lindsay; Aug. civ. 3, 25; Fast. Ant. mai. und Fast. Pinc. zum 22. Juli(?): InscrIt XIII 2, 486–487. – Aust 832–833; Rebert/Marceau, a. O. 117, 56–64; Platner/Ashby 138–139 s. v. «Concordia, aedes, templum»; Levick 218–220; Richardson 263–265; Gasparri, a. O. 117, 17, 31–36, 60–63, 130; Coarelli, a. O. 117, 62–63; Hafner, a. O. 117, 594–596. – Über Kultbild nichts bekannt.

122. Tempel für C. nova, Rom; 44 v. Chr. vom Senat zu Ehren Caesars beschlossen. Cass. Dio 44, 4, 5. – Weinstock, St., Divus Julius (1971) 260–266. – Vielleicht nicht ausgeführt.

123. Tempel der C. in der Porticus der Livia, Rom, Oppius; Porticus nach 15 v. Chr. von Augustus gebaut, 7 v. Chr. von Livia und Tiberius eingeweiht; Tempel der C. von Livia errichtet. Ov. fast. 6, 637–640; Suet. Aug. 29; Cass. Dio 54, 23, 6; 55, 8, 2; weitere Quellen bei Lugli, I., Fontes ad topographiam veteris urbis Romae pertinentes III lib. X (1955) 129 Nr. 1–2; 185–187 Nr. 386–397; Fragment der Forma urbis: Carettoni, G./Colini, A./Cozza, L./Gatti, G., La pianta marmorea di Roma antica (1960) 69–70 Taf. XVIII. – Jordan, H./Huelsen, Chr., Topographie der Stadt Rom im Altertum I 3 (1907) 315–316; Platner/Ashby 423 s. v. «Porticus Liviae»; InscrIt XIII 2, 469; Grimal, P., Les jardins romains (1969)² 176–178; Colini, a. O. 115, 67; Coarelli, F., Guida archeologica di Roma (1974) 206; Richardson 265–270; Bourdeau Flory 309–330; Zanker, P., in Urbs. Espace Urbain et histoire (Ecole Française Rome 1987). – Über Kultbild nichts bekannt.

124. Tempel der C. Augusta, Rom, Forum, am Fuß des Kapitols; 7 v. Chr. von Tiberius, zugleich im Namen seines verstorbenen Bruders Drusus, gelobt, 10 n. Chr. von ihm geweiht (Neubau von 121). Ov. fast. 1, 639–650; Suet. Tib. 20; Cass. Dio 55, 8, 1–2; 56, 25, 1; Fast. Verul. zum 16. Januar: InscrIt XIII 2, 398–400. Weitere Quellen bei Gasparri, a. O. 117, 13–15; Fr. der Forma Urbis: Carettoni/Colini/Cozza/Gatti, a. O. 123, 75–76 Taf. XXI 19 und B 6. – Darstellung (mit Kultbild): 12; Nachklang des Kultbilds viell. auch 10–11. Vgl. zu 128. – Rebert/Marceau, a. O. 117, 54–55, 64–75; Platner/Ashby 138–140 s. v. «Concordia, aedes, templum»; Vermeule, C. C., JHS 77, 1957, 284; Richard 345–349; Pekáry, Th., RM 73/74, 1966/67, 105–133; Kraft, K., Zur Münzprägung des Augustus (1968) 49–51; Zanker, P., Forum Romanum (1972) 19–23; Gros, P., Aurea Tempia (1976) 91–92, 146–147; Levick 224–226; Richardson 270–272; Gasparri, a. O. 117; Coarelli, a. O. 117, 62–63; Bourdeau Flory 323–324; s. zu 10–12, 128. – Kultbild thronend, Kopf verhüllt, hält Szepter und patera. Altar von Livia gestiftet. Auf der Türschwelle caduceus aus Bronze eingelassen (Gasparri, a. O. 117, 40 Abb. S. X).

125. Tempel der C., Patavium, zu erschließen aus dem Collegium der Concordiales. – CIL V 1, 2307, 2825, 2843, 2865, 2869, 2872, 2874–2875 S. 268 (Th. Mommsen); vgl. 3130 (Vicenza); Gasparotto, C., Patavium (1927) 36; idem, Padova Romana (o. J.) 42–43. – Über Kultbild nichts bekannt.

Weitere Heiligtümer der C. im ganzen Reich können hier nicht aufgeführt werden; eine Zusammenstellung fehlt bisher.

I. Varia

126. Gemälde mit C. (und Amicitia?) eines unbekannten Malers Habron. Plin. nat. 35, 141. – Zeit, Ort und Aussehen unbekannt.

K. Deutung als C. unsicher

Deutungen als C. sind bei verschiedenen weiblichen Idealfiguren ausgesprochen worden, die Unsicherheiten sind jedoch wegen der wechselnden und wenig charakteristischen Ikonographie der C. besonders groß. Es ist darum weniger als bei anderen Gestalten sinnvoll, die gelegentlich als C. gedeuteten Figuren, etwa mit Füllhorn und Schale, vollständig zu erfassen. Einige Beispiele:

127. Marmoraltar für C. Manlius. Vatikan, Mus. Greg. Prof. 9964. Aus dem Theater von Caere. – Niebling, G., FuF 26, 1950, 148–150; Scott Ryberg, a. O. 74, 84–87; Herrmann, W., Römische Götteraltäre (1961) 95–97 Nr. 31; Simon, E., in Helbig I Nr. 1058; Alföldi, A., Die zwei Lorbeerbäume des Augustus (1973) 34–35; Bianchi Bandinelli, R./Torelli, M., Etruria Roma (1976) Schede Roma Nr. 84; Torelli, a. O. 113, 16–20. – Um 40 n. Chr. – Rs.: auf einem steilen Felsen weibliche Figur auf Thron sitzend, hält Füllhorn und Schale. L. drei Frauen, die sich in kultischer Verehrung (supplicatio?) nähern. R. drei Männer mit Toga in heftiger Aktion (Streit? Schuldeneinzziehung?). Nach der Ikonographie Deutung als C. möglich, die auch an den Compita zusammen mit den La-ren verehrt wurde (115; Laren auf den beiden Nebenseiten des Altars), nach dem Kontext aber auch Pietas denkbar (Bianchi Bandinelli/Torelli), ebenso Fortuna; der Fels könnte schließlich auch auf eine Lokalgottheit deuten.

128. Gewerberelief (Ladenschild). Vatikan, Gall. statue, Inv. 568. – Amelung, SkulptVatMus II 611 Nr. 401a Taf. 53; Vermeule, C. C., JHS 77, 1957, 284 Anm. 11; Guarducci, M., RendPontAcc 34, 1961/62, 93–110; Simon, E., in Helbig⁴ I Nr. 140; Gasparri, a. O. 117, 23–25. – Fassade eines Gebäudes mit sechs Säulen an der Front und seitlich vorspringenden Flügeln. Darin auf gemeinsamem Thron Bilder der Roma und einer weiteren weiblichen Figur, verschleiert, mit Füllhorn, mit der r. Hand aus patera über Rundaltar opfernd. Die Deutung von Guarducci als Tempel mit Kultbild der C. am Forum Romanum zuletzt von Gasparri mit beachtenswerten Gründen angezweifelt.

129. Blaue Glaspaste. München, Münzslg. A 287. – AGDI 3 Nr. 3127. – Kaiserzeit. – Stehende Frau in Chiton und Mantel, hält patera und Füllhorn, l. Arm auf Säule gestützt. Deutung als C. nach 45–47 etc., wegen der sehr verbreiteten Attribute nicht zwingend.

130. Rote Glaspaste. Kopenhagen, Thorv. Mus. I 603. – Fossing, ThorvGems Nr. 667 Taf. 8. – Kaiserzeit. – Stehende Frau in Chiton und Mantel, hält patera und Füllhorn. S. zu 129.

131. Fragmente von Bilderschüsseln, Terra sigillata. Florenz, Mus. Arch.; Rom, Mus. Naz. Rom. – 2. Hälfte 1. Jh. n. Chr. – Klumbach, H., JbRGZM 8, 1961, 191–194 Taf. 73, 1; 73, 2. – Sitzende weibliche Figur auf Thron, hält Patera und Füllhorn. Nach Klumbach Fortuna oder Concordia.

132. Tonlampen; Hannover, Kestner-Mus. K. S. 1022; Mainz, RGZM 33782. – Klumbach, a. O. 131, 190–194 Taf. 72, 3. – Mitte 1. Jh. n. Chr. – Sitzende weibliche Figur auf Thron, hält patera und Füllhorn. Nach Klumbach Fortuna oder Concordia.

133. Bronzestatue. Trier, Rhein. Landesmus. G 53. – Menzel, H., Die römischen Bronzen aus Deutschland II: Trier (1966) 35 Nr. 74 Taf. 34. – Kaiserzeit. – Stehende weibliche Figur mit Diadem, in Chiton und Mantel, hält patera und Füllhorn.

L. Weitere Denkmäler, die mit dem Begriff der concordia verbunden sind

C. wird nicht nur als Personifikation dargestellt, sondern auch im Bild anderer Idealgestalten assoziiert und in Handlungsszenen exemplifiziert. Hier werden mit wenigen Ausnahmen nur Münzen und einige andere Werke der Kleinkunst aufgeführt, deren Deutung im Sinne der c. durch eine Beischrift sicher ist. Sie können als Grundlage für die Interpretation einer großen Zahl weiterer Denkmäler der verschiedensten Gattungen dienen, die Assoziationen dieser Art wecken sollten – und die z. T. weit älter sind als die frühesten Beispiele mit ausdrücklicher erklärender Beischrift. Dabei ist jeweils zu berücksichtigen, daß viele dieser Bildmotive auch durch andere Legenden in anderen

Aspekten erklärt werden können. Es wurde versucht, alle Motive und Varianten zu erfassen, jedoch jeweils nur in ausgewählten Beispielen.

a) Verbindung durch Handschlag (dextrarum iunctio)

134. (= Italia 9* mit Lit.) Denar, Rom, Q. Fufius Calenus und Mucius Cordus, ca. 70 v. Chr. – Crawford, RRC 403/1; Hölscher, T., Jdl 95, 1980, 278. – Vs.: Gestaffelte Köpfe von Virtus und Honos (= Honos 8). Leg. HO.VIRT/KALENI. Rs.: Italia und Roma im Handschlag verbunden. Leg.: ITAL.RO/CORDI. Frühestes römisches Beispiel der dextrarum iunctio als politisches Motiv.

135. Denar, Rom, Faustina d. Ä., 141–161 n. Chr. – BMC Emp IV 44, 298–300 Taf. 7, 13; 65, 466; lx; Strack, Reichsprägung III 96–97. – Rs.: Antoninus Pius in Toga und Faustina d. Ä. im Handschlag verbunden. Leg.: CONCORDIAE.

136. * Aureus, Sesterz, Dupondius, As, Rom, Marc Aurel und Lucius Verus, 161–162 n. Chr. – BMC Emp IV 386, 7–9 Taf. 53, 13; 390*; 391, 31–32 Taf. 54, 3 etc.; 518* und 844 Taf. 72, 6; 521†; 523, 856–862 Taf. 71, 3 etc.; Hamburg 25 Taf. 1 l–m. – Rs.: Marc Aurel und Lucius Verus, beide in Toga, im Handschlag verbunden. Leg.: CONCORDIAE AVGVSTOR.

137. AE Medaillon, Lucilla, nach 164 n. Chr. – BMC Emp IV cxlviii; Gnechi, Medaglioni II 50, 2 Taf. 76, 1. – Rs.: Lucius Verus und Lucilla im Handschlag verbunden. Leg.: CONCORDIA FELIX.

138. Sesterz, Rom, Caracalla und Geta, 211–212 n. Chr. – BMC Emp V 407, 232 Taf. 60, 3. – Rs.: Caracalla und Geta, beide gerüstet, im Handschlag verbunden, von Hercules bzw. Liber bekränzt. Leg.: CONCORDIAE AVGG.

139. Aureus und Denar, Rom, Caracalla und Plautilla, 202–205 n. Chr. – BMC Emp V 206–207, 272–274 Taf. 33, 20; 233, 390 Taf. 37, 12; 235, 400–404 Taf. 37, 18, 20, Taf. 38, 1; 237, 418–419 Taf. 38, 7; cxlvi. cliii–cliv. – Rs.: Caracalla und Plautilla im Handschlag verbunden. Leg.: CONCORDIA FELIX bzw. CONCORDIAE AETERNAE.

140. Aureus, Rom, Septimius Severus und Caracalla, 201–211 n. Chr. – BMC Emp V 214, 312 Taf. 34, 19; 255 §; 366 *. – Rs.: Caracalla und Geta, beide in Toga, einander gegenüberstehend, halten zusammen kleine Victoria. Leg.: CONCORDIA AVGVSTORVM.

141. AU Medaillon, Siscia, Constantius Chlorus, 305–306 n. Chr. – RIC VI 472, 148; Gnechi, Medaglioni I 13, 1 Taf. 5, 9. – Rs.: Constantius Chlorus und Severus, beide in Toga, einander gegenüberstehend; Severus erhält Globus von Constantius. Zwischen ihnen vota-Kranz mit Angabe XX. Leg.: CONCORDIA AVGG ET CAESS.

142. Aureus und Denar, Illyricum, Gallien und Spanien, Vespasian, ca. 69–72/3 n. Chr. – BMC Emp II 69*; 74, 369 Taf. 12, 6; 78 †; 85, 414–416 Taf. 14, 11–13; vgl. 60, 4–7; lv. lviii. lxiii; Hamburg 24. – Rs.: Zwei Soldaten, jeder einen Legionsadler haltend, im

Handschlag verbunden. Leg.: CONSEN(SVS) EXERCIT(VS).

143. Aureus, Rom, Commodus, 186 n. Chr. – BMC Emp IV 724, 197–198 Taf. 96, 2; clx; Hamburg 28. – Rs.: Vier Soldaten mit Feldzeichen, die beiden mittleren im Handschlag verbunden. Im Zentrum im Hintergrund Commodus in Militärkleidung stehend. Leg.: CONC MIL.

144. * Goldgürtel mit Relief-Medaillons. Dumbarton Oaks Collection 37.33. – Kantorowicz 4, 16; Ross, M. C., Cat. of the Byzantine and Early Mediaeval Antiquities in the Dumbarton Oaks Coll. 2 (1965) 37–39 Nr. 38 Taf. 30–32 und Farbtaf. A. – 6.–7. Jh. – Ehepaar im Handschlag verbunden; zwischen ihnen im Hintergrund Christus stehend. Leg.: EX ΘΕΟΥ-ΟΜΟΝΥΑ, im Abschnitt ΧΑΡΙΣ ΥΠΑ.

b) Sonstige Darstellungen der Verbundenheit menschlicher Personen

145. Aureus, Cyzicus, Diocletian, Maximianus Herculeus, Constantius Chlorus, Galerius, 284–295 n. Chr. – RIC V 2, 251, 292; 254, 313; 290, 601; 293, 615–616 Taf. 12, 15; Pink, K., NumZ 64, 1931, 43 (datiert 293 n. Chr.). – Rs.: Die beiden Kaiser, in Toga, auf sella curulis nach l. sitzend, jeder einen Globus haltend; beide zusammen von einer Victoria bekränzt. Leg.: CONCORDIAE AVGG NN. Vgl. Gnechi, Medaglioni I 13, 6 Taf. 5, 7; Leg.: PERPETVA CONCORDIA AVGG.

146. AE Medaillon, Caracalla, 199 n. Chr. – Gnechi, Medaglioni II 77, 2 Taf. 95, 3. – Rs.: Caracalla und Geta, beide gerüstet, an Dreifußaltar opfernd, von zwei Victorien bekränzt. Leg.: CONCORDIAE AVGG. Vgl. BMC Emp VI 144, 307 (= Gnechi, Medaglioni II 85–86, Alessandro Severo e Orbiana 2 Taf. 102, 3; der Tempel im Hintergrund kaum der der C.); RIC V 2, 586, 1–2; RIC VI 279, 1 (= Gnechi, Medaglioni I 12, Massimiano Erculeo 1 Taf. 5, 3).

c) Büsten

Vgl. 134 (Vs.).

147. Denar, Spanien/Gallien, anonyme Prägung des Galba, 68 n. Chr. – BMC Emp I 293 † Taf. 50, 3; cxcii; Kraay, C. M., NC 1949, 141–142; Martin, a. O. 7, 33. 50. 82 Nr. 98 Taf. 9. – Vs.: Büsten der Hispania und der Gallia einander gegenüber; unter ihnen Füllhorn bzw. Sechseckschild. Zwischen ihnen Victoria auf Globus, darüber Mondsichel und Stern. Leg.: CONCORDIA HISPANIARVM ET GALLIARVM.

148. Aureus und Denar, Rom, Septimius Severus und Söhne, 199–206 n. Chr. – BMC Emp V 185 †; 196*; 204, 260 Taf. 33, 8; 207, 275 Taf. 33, 17; 233, 389 Taf. 37, 11; 298 †. – Rs.: Büsten des Septimius Severus mit Strahlenkranz und der Julia Domna mit Halbmond über dem Scheitel, parallel hintereinandergestaffelt. Leg.: CONCORDIAE AETERNAE. Vgl. BMC Emp V 360*.

149. AE Medaillons, Philippus Arabs und Familie, 244–249 n. Chr. – Gnechi, Medaglioni II 97–99, 1–2. 4. 6–17 Taf. 108, 10; 109, 1–8. – Vs.: Büsten des Philippus sen. und der Otacilia gestaffelt nach r., gegen-

über Büste des Philippus iun. nach l. Leg.: CONCORDIA AVGVSTORVM.

150. AE Medaillon, Traianus Decius und Familie, 249–251 n. Chr. – Gnechi, Medaglioni II 101, 1 Taf. 110, 5. – Vs.: Büsten des Traianus Decius und der Etruscilla einander gegenüber. Leg.: CONCORDIA AVGVSTORVM. Rs.: Büsten des Herennius und des Hostilian einander gegenüber. Leg.: PIETAS AVGVSTORVM.

151. Bronzering, Berlin, Staatl. Mus. FG 993. Furtwängler, Beschreibung Nr. 993; Neverov, O. J., WZRoStock 19, 1970, 610 Taf. 29, 6. – 3. Jh. n. Chr. – Männliche und weibliche Büste einander gegenüber. Beischrift: CONCORDIA.

152. Goldring. München, Antikenslg. – Henkel, F., Die römischen Fingerringe der Rheinlande (1913) 13–14 Nr. 87; 332; CIL XIII 10024, 56. – 2. Jh. n. Chr. – Drei gelötete Auflagen. In der Mitte verschränkte Hände, auf den Seiten männl. bzw. weibl. Kopf, nach innen gewendet (wohl Marc Aurel und Faustina d. J.). Beischrift: SITIN EVM CONCORDIA (animo).

Christliche Beispiele mit Beischrift OMONOIA bei Kantorowicz 11, 13.

d) Verschränkte Hände

Vgl. 152.

153. Denar, Mussidius Longus, 42 v. Chr., = 4. Vgl. Quinar, Octavian und Antonius, ca. 39 v. Chr., = 5. Rs.; Beziehung auf C. durch Vs. Ältere Beispiele des Typus auf Münzen: Crawford, RRC 450/2; 451/1, 480/6. Auf Grabstelen: Zanker, P., Jdl 90, 1975, 288–289 Abb. 22.

154. Aureus, Denar, Sesterz, Dupondius, As, Rom, Nerva, 96–97 n. Chr. – BMC Emp III 1–2, 4–9 Taf. 1, 2–5; 4–5, 25–30 Taf. 1, 14–16; 7–8, 53–55 Taf. 2, 9–10; 14, 86 Taf. 4, 1 usw.; xxxvii; Amit 151; Hamburg 20–21 Taf. 1h–i. – Rs.: Zwei verschränkte Hände; sie halten z. T. einen Legionsadler, der auf eine Prora gestellt ist. Leg.: CONCORDIA EXERCITVVM.

155. As, Rom, Marc Aurel, 174–175 n. Chr. – BMC Emp IV 638, 1495–1497 Taf. 84, 9; cxl. – Rs.: Verschränkte Hände, halten gemeinsam Legionsadler. Leg.: CONCORD EXERC.

156. * Antoninian, Rom, Balbinus und Pupienus, 238 n. Chr. – BMC Emp VI 256–258, 67–94 Taf. 47. – Rs.: Zwei verschränkte Hände. Legg.: AMOR MVTVVS AVGG, CARITAS MVTVA AVGG (→ Caritas 1a*–b), CONCORDIA AVGG, FIDES MVTVA AVGG, PATRES SENATUS, PIETAS MVTVA AVGG.

157. Goldring. Ehem. Darmstadt, Hess. Landesmus. (verschollen). – Henkel, a. O. 152, 32 Nr. 222; 322; Weinstock, St., RE XXIII 1 (1957) 755 (weitere Beispiele). – Kaiserzeit. – Zwei verschränkte Hände. Beischrift: OMONOIA. Vgl. Henkel, a. O. 152, 196 Nr. 2217 mit Beischrift: FIDES.

158. As, Rom, Antoninus Pius, 161 n. Chr. – BMC Emp IV 363, 2114 Taf. 51, 8; cxii; Strack, Reichsprägung III 161–162. – Rs.: Drei verschränkte Hände. Leg.: CONCORD.

e) Kaiser einzeln

159. AE Medaillon, Geta, 203–208 n. Chr. – BMC Emp V clxxvi; Gnechi, Medaglioni II 78, 3–4 Taf. 95, 9–10; Hamberg 28–29. – Rs.: Geta zwischen fünf aufgestellten Feldzeichen stehend. Leg.: CONCORDIA MILITVM.

160. AU Medaillon, Claudius Gothicus, 268–270 n. Chr. – RIC V 1, 211, 1. – Rs.: Claudius Gothicus stehend, hält zwei Feldzeichen. Leg.: CONCORDIA EXERCITVS.

161. AE, Constantius II., 335–361 n. Chr.; Vetrano, 350 n. Chr.; Constantius Gallus, 351–354 n. Chr. – Cohen VII 439, 3; VIII 3–4, 1; 32, 1–3. – Rs.: Kaiser in Rüstung stehend, hält in jeder Hand Labarum. Leg.: CONCORDIA MILITVM.

f) Kaiser mit Gottheiten

162. Sesterz, Rom, Vespasian, 71 n. Chr. – BMC Emp II 113 § Taf. 20, 3; xxii, xlvi; Hamberg 27; Bé-ranger, Principatus 374; Kunkel, H., Der römische Genius, RM 20. Erg.-H. (1974) 38. 130 Nr. 2. – Rs.: Kaiser im Panzer stehend, hält Victoria und Zweig; hinter ihm Genius Senatus in Toga stehend, hält Zweig, bekränzt den Kaiser. Leg.: CONCORDIA SENATVI. Vgl. BMC Emp I 359, 260 a und § Taf. 59, 3.

163. Antoninian, Cyzicus, Florianus, 276 n. Chr.; Probus, 276–282 n. Chr. – RIC V 1, 360, 116; RIC V 2, 117, 907–908. – Rs.: Kaiser stehend, von Victoria bekränzt. Leg.: CONCORDIA MILITVM.

164. Antoninian, verschiedene Prägestätten, Aurelianus, 270–275 n. Chr.; Diocletian und Mitherr-scher, ca. 293–298 n. Chr.; Constantius und Mitherr-scher, 305–307 n. Chr. – RIC V 1, 303, 342; RIC V 2, 246, 256–258; 249, 284 Taf. 12, 5; 253, 306; 255, 321 etc.; RIC VI 283, 25–26; 355, 47; 358, 68–70; 465, 91–92; 531, 13–16 Taf. 12, etc.; 670, 59–60; 675, 84–85. – Rs.: Kaiser empfängt Victoria auf Globus (bzw. Globus oder Victoria allein) von Iuppiter. Leg.: CONCORDIA MILITVM. Variante: CONCORDIA(E) AVGG.

g) Gottheiten

165. (= Ares/Mars 223*) Aureus, Denar, As, Tarraco und Lugdunum, Vitellius und Vespasian, 69 n. Chr. – BMC Emp I 385, 81–85 Taf. 61, 16–18; 388–389, 99–102 Taf. 64, 10; 390–391, 110–112 Taf. 62, 1–2; 400, 83 bis; ccxxix; BMC Emp II 67, 349 Taf. 10, 17; lv; Hamberg 24–25. – Rs.: Mars, nackt mit wehendem Mantel, ausschreitend, hält Lanze und Legionsadler mit Vexillum. Leg.: CONSENSVS EXERCITVM.

166. As, Tarraco, Vitellius, 69 n. Chr. – BMC Emp I 389 *; ccxxix. – Rs.: → Hispania stehend, hält Rund-schild und zwei Speere. Leg.: CONSENSVS HISPANIARVM.

167. Goldring. Ehem. Metz (verschollen). – Henkel, A. O. 152, 192 Nr. 2137. – Kaiserzeit. – Amor und Psyche. Beischrift: CONCORDIA NOSTRA PERPETVA SIT.

168. Antoninian, Antiochia, Gordian III., 238–239 n. Chr. – RIC IV 3, 34, 179 mit Anm. – Rs.: → Providentia mit Globus und Szepter. Leg.: CON-

Cordia AVG. Vgl. 68 (C. mit Stab der Providentia?).

169. Aureus, Rom, Philippus Arabs, 244–247 n. Chr. – RIC IV 3, 71 Anm. zu 27. – Rs.: → Aequitas mit Waage und Füllhorn. Leg.: CONCORDIA AVGG. Vgl. 39 (C. mit Waage der Aequitas).

170. Antoninian, Carausius, 286–293 n. Chr. – RIC V 2, 527, 754. – Rs.: Neptun sitzend mit Anker und Dreizack. Leg.: CONCOR.

171. Siliqua, AE, Trier, Gratian, Valentinian II., Theodosius, 378–383 n. Chr. – RIC IX 25, 55 Taf. 2, 10; 26, 66–67 Taf. 3, 13; 27, 72 Taf. 3, 16, etc. – → Constantinopolis sitzend, hält Szepter und Füllhorn, Fuß auf Prora. Leg.: CONCORDIA AVGGG. Variante unter Valentinian II. und Theodosius, Soli-dus, 383–388 n. Chr.: Constantinopolis hält Szepter und vota-Schild: RIC IX 77–78, 7 Taf. 6, 5 (Mailand); 102, 39 Taf. 7, 5 (Aquileia) etc.

172. AE, Gratian, Valentinian II., Theodosius, 378–393 n. Chr. – RIC IX 26–27, 68–69 Taf. 3, 11–12. – Roma sitzend, hält Globus und umgedrehte Lanze. Leg.: CONCORDIA AVGGG.

h) Verschiedene Wesen und Gegenstände

173. Aureus und Denar, Rom, Diva Domitilla, 80–81(?) n. Chr.; Domitia, ca. 81–84 und 91–92 n. Chr.; Iulia Titi, ca. 86–91 n. Chr. – BMC Emp II 246, 136 Taf. 47, 11; 311, 60–61 Taf. 61, 4–5; 347, 244 Taf. 67, 11; 350, 249 und * Taf. 67, 17, 19; lxxv. lxxxviii–lxxxix; Amit 151. – Rs.: Pfau (der Iuno). Leg.: CONCORDIA AVGVST(A) oder I.

174. Aureus und Gold-Quinar, Faustina d. J., unter Antoninus Pius, ca. 148–161 n. Chr. – BMC Emp IV 65 *; 159, 1042; 163 *; 165, 1089–1090 Taf. 23, 11; lxxvi; Strack, Reichsprägung III 113, 116. – Rs.: Taube (der Venus). Leg.: CONCORDIA.

175. Denar, Antiochia, Elagabal, 218–219 n. Chr. – BMC Emp V 573, 274–276 Taf. 91, 3; vgl. 442 (a) und (b); Hamberg 30. – Rs.: Vier Feldzeichen aufgestellt. Leg.: CONCORDIA MILIT.

176. Antoninian, Carausius, 286–293 n. Chr. – RIC V 2, 528, 763. – Rs.: Wölfin mit Zwillingen. Leg.: CONCORDIA NILITVM (sic).

177. Argenteus, Galerius, ca. 302 n. Chr. – RIC VI 510, 8. – Rs.: Lagertor. Leg.: CONCORDIA MILITVM.

178. Fischmosaik (christlich), von einer Grab-Mensa in der Nekropole von Tipasa. – Bouchenaki, M., Fouilles de la nécropole occidentale de Tipasa 1968–72 (1975) 16–17, 40–45 Abb. 129–132. – 4. Jh. n. Chr. – Inschrift: IN DEO PAX ET CONCORDIA SIT CONVIVIO NOSTRO.

KOMMENTAR

Die Idee der c. hat in Rom, offenbar unter griechischem Einfluß, zunächst in den Ständekämpfen des 4. Jh. v. Chr. als innenpolitischer Leitbegriff Bedeutung gewonnen. Sie ist anscheinend die erste der vielen gedanklichen Konzeptionen, die in der mittleren Republik als Gottheiten staatlichen Kult erhielten und dadurch als staatstragende Mächte anerkannt wurden. Die Rezeption des griechischen Begriffs der → Homonoia ist wohl über Großgriechenland erfolgt, wo ihr Bild auf Münzen von Metapont und ihr Kult in Syrakus (Liv. 24, 22) bezeugt ist. In Rom gewann die Göttin C. bald weit größere Bedeutung als in Griechenland.

Die Überlieferung über einen ersten Tempelbau für C. nach dem Ausgleich der Ständekämpfe durch die licinisch-sextischen Gesetze 367/66 v. Chr. aufgrund eines Gelöbnisses des Camillus (117) ist z. T. bestritten worden, ohne völlig zwingende Gründe. Da der C.-Tempel in Cosa (120) in seiner Funktion als Haupttempel des Forums eher den späteren großen C.-Tempeln am römischen Forum (121, 124) als der Aedicula auf der Graecostasis (118) entspricht, könnte ein Bau des Camillus an dieser Stelle das Vorbild gewesen sein. 304 v. Chr. hat Cn. Flavius als curulischer Aedil zur Wiederherstellung der inneren Eintracht auf der Graecostasis am Comitium eine «bronzene» Aedicula errichtet (118), 218 v. Chr. der Praetor L. Manlius nach einer Meuterei der Soldaten einen Tempel der C. auf der Arx gelobt (119), der bald darauf ausgeführt wurde.

Seit dem 2. Jh. v. Chr. hat der Begriff c. eine umfassendere, stoisch geprägte Reflexion erfahren (Polybios, Poseidonios) und ist danach vor allem von konservativen Kreisen wegen seiner stabilisierenden Aspekte aufgenommen worden. 121 v. Chr. hat L. Opimius auf Senatsbeschluss auf dem Forum am Fuß des Kapitols einen Tempel der C. gebaut (bzw. den des Camillus erneuert), der den Mord an C. Gracchus als Eintracht stiftende Tat feiern sollte, von den Gegnern jedoch als Zynismus empfunden wurde (121).

Die Kultbilder dieser Tempel müssen die ältesten bildlichen Darstellungen der C. gewesen sein; ob sie an griechische Darstellungen der Homonoia anschlossen, ist nicht zu erkennen. Wegen ihrer eindeutigen Funktion brauchen sie noch keine sehr charakteristische Ikonographie gehabt zu haben. Dasselbe kann für das Standbild der C. gelten, das Q. Marcii Philippus 164 v. Chr. als Censor an einem öffentlichen Platz errichtete und das zehn Jahre später C. Cassius Longinus ebenfalls als Censor in der Curia aufzustellen versuchte, die damit der C. geweiht werden sollte (111). Votivfiguren aus dem C.-Tempel in Cosa mit Schleier, Diadem und Füllhorn können eine Vorstellung von den ikonographischen Möglichkeiten in republikanischer Zeit geben (70).

Breite Aktualität erlangte C. dann in den letzten Jahrzehnten der Republik, insbesondere unter dem Einfluß Ciceros: zunächst als c. ordinum, in diesem Sinn vielleicht auf den Denaren des Cicero-Anhängers L. Aemilius Lepidus Paullus (1); dann als c. der führenden Politiker des 1. Triumvirats, entsprechend wohl auf Prägungen des P. Fonteius Capito (2) und des L. Vinicius (3); schließlich als vorbildliche Haltung und Gnade des übermächtigen Caesar, dem zu Ehren der Senat 44 v. Chr. einen Tempel der Concordia nova beschloß (122), entsprechend seiner als «nova ratio vincendi» propagierten clementia (→ Clementia). Das Thema wird in der Münzprägung weitergeführt von

L. Mussidius Longus zur Feier des 2. Triumvirats (4) und dann von Octavian und Antonius nach dem Vertrag von Brundisium (5); daß dies Ereignis auch außerhalb Roms gefeiert wurde, zeigt eine Statue mit Altar in Casinum (112). Auch sonst hat der Kult der C. bereits in republikanischer Zeit über die Hauptstadt hinaus ausgestrahlt (114, 120, vielleicht 125). Die Münzen zeigen nur den Kopf der C., gewöhnlich mit Diadem und, im Gegensatz zu vielen Darstellungen der Kaiserzeit, mit Schleier als Zeichen der Verwandtschaft mit Pietas, die zumal im Umkreis Caesars ein wichtiges Leitbild wurde; der Lorbeerkanz bei L. Vinicius dürfte nach gleichzeitigen Analogien die Sieghaftigkeit dieser Eintracht betonen, passend zum Rs.-Bild mit der Victoria des Pompeius; bei Mussidius Longus könnten die Astralsymbole Halbmond und Stern im Feld schon die (damals allgemein gesuchte) Ausweitung dieser Konzeption als Element eines neuen Zeitalters anzeigen. Entsprechend erscheint das Motiv der dextrarum iunctio schon seit Prägungen aus dem Umkreis Caesars mit dem Glückzeichen des caduceus (152–153). Daß das Münzbild mit dem Kopf der C. als typisch republikanisch empfunden wurde, zeigt seine Wiederaufnahme durch Galba (7) und seine Restituierung durch Traian (8).

In der Kaiserzeit wurde c. in umfassender Weise als Grundlage des inneren Friedens und glücklicher Zustände angesehen. Bei der Begründung des Principats hat Octavian sich besonders auf den consensus universorum berufen. Ovid (fast. 6, 91–92) verbindet C. eng mit dem ersten Princeps. Augustus selbst errichtete 11 v. Chr. Standbilder der Salus Publica, der Concordia und der Pax (113): ein Programm, das der gleichzeitigen Ara Pacis entspricht, auf der die vereinte Kaiserfamilie und ihre Verbindung mit Vertretern des römischen Volkes ebenfalls zur Demonstration allgemeiner c. dient. Die Statuengruppe hat, wie Münzen aus Bouthroton zeigen (6), bis weit außerhalb Roms gewirkt. Livia feierte mit einem Tempel der C. in der Porticus Liviae die harmonische Ehe mit Augustus und unterstützte damit dessen Politik der moralischen Restauration (123). Noch bedeutsamer war der Neubau eines Tempels der C. an der Stelle des Baues des Opimius, den Tiberius 7 v. Chr., zugleich im Namen seines verstorbenen Bruders Drusus, zur Feier seines Germanentriumphs aus der Beute gelobt hat (124); er hat damit zu Beginn seines Konsulats programmatisch den zwiespältigen Charakter der republikanischen C.-Konzeptionen im Sinne einer neuen umfassenden Solidarität zu überwinden versucht, indem er einen allseits anerkannten Kriegserfolg ins Innenpolitische wendete und neben brüderlicher Verbundenheit die (freilich nicht ungefährdete) Eintracht sowohl im Kaiserhaus als auch im ganzen Staatswesen bekräftigte. Die exemplarische Demonstration idealer Zustände im Kaiserhaus als Garantie für entsprechende Verhältnisse im ganzen Staat ist bei C. immer besonders deutlich geblieben. Die Weihung des Tempels im Jahr 10 n. Chr. wurde am 16. Januar vollzogen, dem Jahrestag der Senatsitzung, die 27 v. Chr. die Alleinherrschaft des Augustus begründet hatte; durch den Beinamen Augusta wurde die Bindung der C. an das Kaiserhaus noch besonders betont. Damals kam dem Tempel zugleich neue Aktualität als Bekräftigung der c. mit Drusus' Sohn Germanicus zu. Das Kultbild, thronend, rechts wohl eine Schale, links ein Szepter haltend (12, vgl. 10–11), ist in dieser Ausprägung das erste Beispiel für einen Typus, der lange weitergewirkt hat. Rückschlüsse aus den Varianten dieser Nachwirkungen auf das Kultbild selbst, etwa im Sinne auswechselbarer Attribute oder späterer Restaurierungen mit leichten Veränderungen, sind jedoch angesichts der Praxis römischer Münzstempelschneider kaum möglich. Der Hinweis auf Frieden und Glück, später bei C. häufig, ist an dem Tempel durch einen in die Türschwelle eingelassenen caduceus deutlich gemacht.

Für die reibungslose Übergabe der Herrschaft an Tiberius mußte die c. des Kaiserhauses von zentraler Bedeutung sein. Die Deutung des Münztypus 10 mit patera und Zweig aus einer Serie, die das Verhältnis zwischen Augustus und Tiberius darstellt, auf C. als Garantin des äußeren wie des inneren Friedens ist darum plausibel. Tiberius hat den Typus übernommen (11) und später zu seinem 20jährigen Regierungsjubiläum sogar den ganzen Tempel mit dem Kultbild auf seine Sesterze gesetzt (12).

Seit Beginn der Kaiserzeit erhielten Kult und Verehrung der C. von Rom aus eine immer stärkere Verbreitung über das ganze Imperium. In der Hauptstadt konnte sie in den Compitalheiligtümern verehrt werden (115), im Reich gehörte ihr Bild vielfach zur Ausstattung von öffentlichen Anlagen, Heiligtümern etc. (9, 71, vgl. 128; s. zu 115).

In einer programmatischen Gruppe von Personifikationen wie unter Augustus (113) erscheint C. auf Sesterzen des Caligula (106), Person geworden in der Lieblingsschwester des Kaisers (vgl. schon Livia als → Salus mit Pietas und Iustitia unter Tiberius); patera und Füllhorn deuten auf die Aspekte der pietas und felicitas. Erstmals ist hier die (in diesem Fall eher exzentrische) c. des Herrscherpaares explizit als Exempel und Garant für allgemeine glückliche Eintracht dargestellt, ähnlich wie in der Folgezeit öfters. Unklar sind Anlaß und Aspekt der Opfer, die die Arvalbrüder «pro salute» des Kaisers Claudius u. a. im Tempel der C. und an der Ara Providentiae darbrachten (Henzen, W., Acta fratrum Arvalium [1874] LVI und 165). Sehr eng ist die Beziehung auf das Herrscherhaus jedenfalls bei den Feiern an den Geburtstagen der Agrippina von 57 und 58 sowie des Nero von 58 und 60 n. Chr., wo von den Arvalbrüdern bei der Kaisermutter für C. ipsius, beim Kaiser für C. honoris Agrippinae Aug. geopfert wird (Henzen a. O. LXIV, LXX, LXXVII, 57). In ähnlichem Sinne kann später auf neronischen Prägungen Poppaea mit Patera und Füllhorn in der Verbindung mit Nero (mit Strahlenkranz) auf C. hinweisen (107). Dieselbe Beziehung auf das Herrscherpaar muß die gleichzeitige Prägung der Concordia Augusta haben, die hier wie eine Reihe weiterer Personifikationen glücklicher Stabilität thronend dargestellt ist (13).

In den Bürgerkriegen nach Neros Ende erlangt die Idee der c. unmittelbarere Aktualität; sie betrifft nun nicht mehr nur die Eintracht des Kaiserhauses, die die Dynastie sichert, sondern im Sinne einer pax interna

das gute Einvernehmen und die Zustimmung (consensus) aller Machtfaktoren des Reiches: Kaiser, Senat, Heer, Provinzen. C. bildet hier mit → Clementia, → Fides, → Pax und → Pietas einen geschlossenen Ideenkomplex; die entsprechenden Personifikationen werden sehr ähnlich und mit vielfachen Hinweisen auf wechselseitige Querverbindungen dargestellt, so daß sich häufig Überschneidungen in der Ikonographie ergeben. – Teilweise ist die Bedeutung der C. noch eher traditionell, allgemein, oft eng auf den Kaiser bezogen. Bei Galba und Vitellius ist der Sitztypus als Concordia Aug. durch ein Szepter ins Feierliche gesteigert und durch einen attributiven Zweig mit Assoziationen an Pax versehen (14, 16, s. auch → Clementia) wie bereits unter Augustus und Tiberius (10–11). Daneben nimmt Vitellius die neronische Charakterisierung mit patera und Füllhorn noch einmal auf; mit dem erstmals explizit eingesetzten Genitiv der Legende «Concordia Augusti» betont er die Beziehung auf die eigene Person (15), ähnlich wie es bei Nero zu erschließen war. Daß bei aller Hervorhebung der Eintracht verschiedener Machtfaktoren weiterhin breite Tendenzen bestanden, den Kaiser als persönlichen Garant der c. zu verstehen, zeigt auch die Episode bei der vergeblichen Abdankung des Vitellius, als seine Anhänger ihn mit den Worten beschworen, er selbst sei die C., worauf er nicht nur im Herrscheramt blieb, sondern auch den Beinamen C. angenommen haben soll (Suet. Vit. 15; vgl. Tac. hist. 3, 68). Desgleichen wird wie unter Nero die Eintracht des Herrscherpaares anlässlich des Geburtstags der Kaiserin Galeria durch ein Opfer der Arvalbrüder an C. als Grundlage der Einigkeit im Reich gedeutet (Henzen a. O. XCV, 57). Auf den Dupondien des Vitellius ist der Sitztypus, zum verstärkten Hinweis auf pietas, durch einen Altar erweitert, auf dem das Opfer stattfindet (15). Hier ist die Bedeutung als C. populi Romani stark ausgeweitet; schon unter Galba war → Fortuna, ebenfalls opfernd, auf «salus generis humani» bezogen worden. Bereits bei Galba wird der Sitztypus auch erstmals durch Eberstandarte und caduceus zur Formulierung der gleichgewichtigen Aspekte Sieg und Frieden als Folge der c. benutzt (17).

Die programmatische Ausweitung der Idee der c. findet sich bei Galba auch in dem bewußt auf die Republik (1–5) zurückgreifenden Typus mit dem Kopf der C. und der Erklärung als c. orbis terrarum (7).

Neben diesen umfassenden Konzeptionen wird von Galba zur Darstellung der konkreteren c. provinciarum (vor allem Gallien und Spanien, vgl. 147) sowie der c. praetorianorum ein stehender Typus mit Zweig und Füllhorn eingesetzt (42), der dann von Vitellius mit Bezug auf die Praetorianer (vgl. Suet. Galba 16) übernommen wird (43). Die Beliebtheit des Zweiges als Attribut der Pax zeigt besonders deutlich, warum und in welchem Aspekt C. gerade in der Bürgerkriegssituation neue Aktualität bekommen hat.

Seit den ersten Regierungsjahren des Vespasian wird endgültig die sitzende C. mit Füllhorn und patera, z. T. auch mit Altar, für lange Zeit der vorherrschende Typus (18). Daneben wird vor allem in verschiedenen kleinasiatischen Prägstätten C. als reich-tumspendende sitzende Gestalt mit Ähren, Mohn und Füllhorn gepriesen (19), die dort in der Tradition der alten Fruchtbarkeitsgöttinnen Anklang finden konnte. Vielleicht sind hier Maßnahmen bzw. Hoffnungen für die öffentliche Versorgung gemeint. Der stehende Typus begegnet nur noch selten (44). Die C., die hier als Grundlage der neuen Regierung gefeiert wird, hat mehrere Aspekte: zum einen die Einigkeit zwischen dem Kaiser und seinem Heer, das ihn auf den Thron gebracht hat, entsprechend den Prägungen mit Soldaten im Handschlag oder Mars mit Feldzeichen als Ausdruck des consensus exercituum (142, 165); zum zweiten das gute Verhältnis zum Senat, wie auf dem Sesterz, auf dem der Genius Senatus Vespasian bekrönt (162); schließlich die Eintracht in der Herrscherfamilie, deretwegen C. in Rom seit der Erhebung des Titus zum Mitkaiser 71 n. Chr. besonders betont wird (18).

In demselben Sinne erscheint der Sitztypus darum wieder unter Titus zu den Vs.-Bildern aller wichtigen Mitglieder des flavischen Kaiserhauses (20). Gleichzeitig erfährt das Motiv der dextrarum iunctio seine endgültige Ausgestaltung. Nachdem es schon in der späten Republik zur Darstellung programmatischer Verbundenheit eingesetzt (4–5, 134) und diese Bedeutung unter Vespasian mit dem Begriff «consensus» auch explizit in der Legende formuliert worden war (142), wird jetzt erstmals die im Handschlag verbundene Gruppe um eine zentrale Idealgestalt erweitert, die den Sinn der Szene verkörpert und wohl als C. zu deuten ist (91). – Als dann Domitian allein übrig geblieben war, reduzierte sich die Demonstration von c. auf die (wechselhaften) ehelichen Verhältnisse; sie wurde hier erstmals Domäne der kaiserlichen Frauen, die mit dem Pfau der Iuno ihre Verbundenheit mit dem jupiterhaften Herrscher bezeichneten (173).

Damit hat die Gestalt der C. zwei Schwerpunkte bekommen: allgemeine politische Eintracht, die vor allem zu Beginn der Regierung hervorgehoben wird, und Eintracht des Herrscherhauses, die zugleich die Nachfolge sichert. Nachdem Nerva den Nachdruck auf die c. des Heeres mit dem Motiv der verschränkten Hände gelegt hatte (154), hat Traian in den ersten Regierungsjahren den Sitztypus offenbar in sehr umfassendem Sinn zur Demonstration des guten Einvernehmens mit Senat und Heer, Vorgänger und Göttern eingesetzt (21, vgl. auch 8 und 22); das Opfer über einem Altar betont besonders die pietas. In demselben Sinn hat Hadrian den Typus (ohne Altar) mit der lapidaren Legende «Concordia» zu Beginn seiner Regierung aufgenommen, wobei eine zusätzliche Spes-Figur den Aspekt der Zukunftshoffnung hervorhebt (23). Auf Aes-Prägungen wird dies Bild bald von einem Typus abgelöst, der einen Vorläufer unter Galba hatte (17), von jetzt an aber eine lange Tradition haben sollte: der stehenden C. mit Feldzeichen als Ausdruck der c. exercituum (59), wichtig als Grundlage der angestrebten Herrschaft – und darum von Antoninus Pius in den letzten Monaten vor dem Regierungswechsel wieder aufgegriffen (59). Ebenfalls wohl unter Hadrian wurde auf Prägungen der Matidia der seit Titus bekannte (91) Typus der dextrarum iunctio mit C. (?) in der Mitte für den Kaiser und Sabina wieder aufgenommen (92). Vor allem aber ist C. in den letzten Jahren Hadrians von Sabina und dann den adoptierten Nachfolgern Aelius Verus und Antoninus Pius in einem weiteren Sinn proklamiert worden: zum einen mit dem bisherigen Sitztypus (24), der z. T. in der Variante mit patera und Szepter Verwandtschaft zu → Iustitia und → Pietas annimmt; zum anderen in einer neuen und langlebigen Darstellungsweise der stehenden C., die sich auf einen Pfeiler stützt (45); schließlich in dem Typus der dextrarum iunctio mit einer zentralen C.-Figur, die Hadrian und Aelius Verus zusammenführend die Hände um die Schultern legt (93).

Das breiteste Spektrum wird unter Antoninus Pius entfaltet. Auf Prägungen des Kaisers selbst erscheint C., wieder bald nach Regierungsantritt, stehend mit Füllhorn und dem Herrschaftssymbol des Szepters, im umfassenden Sinn wie bei den Vorgängern (52); ferner, ebenfalls früh, als c. exercituum mit Feldzeichen und kleiner Victoria als Attributen (60). Wie stark auch in der Bevölkerung die Verehrung des Kaisers und seiner vorgesehenen Nachfolger mit der Idee der c. verbunden war, zeigt die Stiftung einer silbernen Statuette für ein collegium in Ostia (116). Bei der Kaiserin dagegen steht mehr die Eintracht des Herrscherpaares im Vordergrund. Neben die überkommenen Typen der sitzenden C. mit patera, Füllhorn und Spes-Statuette (25) sowie der stehenden C. mit patera und Füllhorn an der Säule (46) tritt bei ihr betont die Darstellung der dextrarum iunctio im Sinne der einträchtigen Ehe (135). Nach ihrer Divinisierung wurde offenbar, wie später auch beim Tod der jüngeren Faustina, beschlossen, daß alle Jungverheirateten Paare vor ihrem und des Kaisers Standbild «ob insignem eorum concordiam» (Cass. Dio 71, 31, 1–2; Altar Ostia: CIL XIV 5326) opfern sollten; dies wird auf einem reich gestalteten Sesterz-Typus verkündet, der das Kaiserpaar als exemplum einträchtiger Ehe zum Vorbild für alle Eheschließungen im Reich darstellt (108; vgl. 152; Vorläufer des Verfahrens schon in der frühen Kaiserzeit!). – Entsprechend ist dann die Ehe des vorgesehenen Nachfolgers mit der jüngeren Faustina gefeiert worden: Der stehende Typus ist von Marc Aurel bei dieser Gelegenheit um einen Altar zur Verkündung der vota publica erweitert worden (47); der Sitztypus erscheint mit der Blüte der Spes und einem Globus unter dem Füllhorn als Ausdruck weitreichender (besonders dynastischer) Zukunftshoffnungen und kosmisch ausgeweiteter Glückserwartungen neu gestaltet (26). An Spes erinnert weiterhin das neue Motiv des herausgezogenen Gewandzipfels (58), das gleichzeitig etwa auch bei → Clementia erscheint. Schließlich wird mit dem einprägsamen Motiv des ausgebreiteten Mantels, in dessen Schutz zwei Töchter des jungen Paares stehen, ein Aspekt der → Pietas auf C. übertragen (55). Die Göttin erscheint daher auch in den Darstellungen der dextrarum iunctio des Paares als zentrale Mittelfigur (94).

Damit hat das ideelle wie das ikonographische Spektrum der C. eine gewisse Konsolidierung erfahren; die folgenden Epochen bringen nur vereinzelte Erweiterungen. Die bisher ausgebildeten ikonographischen Möglichkeiten reichten im wesentlichen auch unter gewandelten historischen Verhältnissen aus, als sich durch die gleichzeitige Herrschaft mehrerer Kaiser sowie durch manifeste dynastische Ansprüche neue Anlässe zur Demonstration von c. ergaben. Man konnte, wie etwa Marc Aurel und Lucius Verus, entweder auf einen der allgemeinen C.-Typen oder auf das Motiv der dextrarum iunctio und vergleichbare Zusammenstellungen der betreffenden Partner zurückgreifen (27. 28. 136–137). Für die folgenden anderthalb Jahrhunderte ist daher eine systematische Aufstellung möglich, die zugleich die früheren Denkmäler unter typologischen Gesichtspunkten einbezieht.

Der im Kultbild des spätaugusteischen Tempels zuerst greifbare Typus der sitzenden C. (10–12) wird bis in konstantinische Zeit weitergeführt. Die frühkaiserzeitliche, an Pax erinnernde Variante mit dem Zweig als Attribut (10–11. 14. 16) findet sich nach Vitellius nicht mehr. Die von Hadrian eingeführte Bereicherung durch eine Spes-Figur als Stütze des Armes (23–25) wird noch einmal von Marc Aurel und Lucius Verus in programmatischer Weise zu Regierungsbeginn aufgenommen, um die c. des neuen Doppelkaisertums zu etablieren (27), und erscheint ein letztes Mal auf einem Bronze-Medaillon des Commodus und der Crispina (29); üblich wird jedoch, im Sinne schlagwortartiger Vereinfachung, wieder der ursprüngliche augusteische Typus mit Füllhorn und patera (28. 30–32. 34–36), unter Philippus Arabs auch noch einmal mit Altar (33). Insbesondere wird dies der beliebteste Typus bei Kaiserinnen, deren Würde durch das feierliche Thronen am angemessensten zum Ausdruck gebracht werden konnte. Die Bedeutung ist entsprechend meist C. Augusti bzw. Augustorum, gelegentlich aber auch C. militum o. ä. (32. 34).

Ebenso häufig findet sich weiterhin der seit Caligula (106) gebräuchliche Typus der stehenden C. mit Schale und Füllhorn (44–48), häufig an einem Altar opfernd (49–51); er gehört meist, aber nicht ausschließlich, den Kaisern selbst, wieder vor allem in der Bedeutung als C. Augusti bzw. Augustorum, aber gleichfalls auch als C. exercitus, militum etc. (51). Der Zweig findet sich auch beim stehenden Typus nach Galba und Vitellius (42–43) nicht mehr. Das Szepter bleibt als Attribut selten, fast durchweg bei der stehenden Figur (52–54. 57. 69, Ausnahme: 24, vgl. schon 10–12. 14. 16), gewöhnlich auf Prägungen der Herrscher selbst.

Neben diesen allgemeinen Typen gewinnt mit zunehmender Militarisation der Herrschaft die C. mit Feldzeichen, fast durchweg stehend (59–65. 100. 103; Ausnahmen: 17. 40), als Ausdruck der c. militum o. ä. immer mehr an Bedeutung; nach dem Vorläufer unter Galba (17) erstmals unter Hadrian (59) geprägt (also nicht erst unter dem Einfluß der äußeren Bedrohung des Reiches seit den Markomannen-Kriegen, vgl. auch die Legenden 42–43. 142. 154. 165), erscheint sie wieder bei Marc Aurel zum 10. Jahrestag seiner Übernahme des Heeres (61), bei Commodus anlässlich der Perennis-Affäre (62), bei Didius Iulianus und Pescennius Niger in den Thronprätendenten-Kriegen, bei Septimius Severus im Parther- und im Britannien-Feldzug (63), dann ständig von Valerian bis Konstantin, z. T. auch bei Kaiserinnen in ihrer Eigenschaft als mater castrorum (64, vgl. 65). Der Typus ist von Fides militum o. ä. oft nicht zu unterscheiden (vgl. Hamberg 20).

Neben diesen geläufigen Typen wurde in vereinzelten Fällen der Charakter der C. mit ungewöhnlichen Attributen erweitert. Schon seit Beginn der Kaiserzeit ist die Praxis zu beobachten, auf diese Weise verwandte oder komplementäre Vorstellungen mit C. zu assoziieren: Außer Füllhorn, Schale und Altar erscheint etwa der Zweig der Friedensgöttin (10–11. 14. 16. 42–43), der caduceus (17) oder die gallische Eberstandarte (17). Die unter Galba auftauchende Legende «Concordia orbis terrarum» (7) hat eine bildliche Entsprechung im Attribut des Globus bei Faustina d. J. (26). Vor allem aber hat das 3. Jh. mit seiner Tendenz zu pauschalen und verschliffenen Konzeptionen einige neue Motive eingeführt. Der Aspekt der Fortuna und der Felicitas, gewöhnlich durch das Füllhorn repräsentiert, wird noch einmal unter Licinius und Konstantin zusätzlich durch den caduceus vorgetragen (37. 66, vgl. Legende 101). Seit Gallien findet sich ferner ein stehender Typus mit Steuerruder, der mit der Legende «C. equitum» zum Spezialtypus für die Loyalität der Reitertruppen wird, die gegen die östlichen Gegner Bedeutung gewinnen (67, vgl. 38). Zu den vielen alten Verbindungen mit Motiven der pietas (patera, Altar) ist nicht nur unter Antoninus Pius der ausgebreitete Mantel (55), sondern vielleicht auch unter Pescennius Niger das vereinzelt Motive der erhobenen Hand zu zählen (56, vgl. 57?). Von Aequitas erhält C. unter Philippus Arabs die Waage (39, vgl. 169), gleichzeitig und unter Carausius von Providentia den Stab (68, vgl. 100. 168). In frühkonstantinischer Zeit trägt sie als C. imperii den Modius auf dem Kopf wie der → Genius Populi Romani (69, vgl. schon 110). Ebenso wird sie mit den globalen Hoffnungen in Zusammenhang gebracht, die sich an die vota zu den kaiserlichen Regierungsjubiläen knüpfen (94. 141). Eine Liste von Attributen, an denen C. zu erkennen wäre, läßt sich somit nicht aufstellen, da es vielfach gerade Attribute anderer Gottheiten und Personifikationen sind, mit denen C. umschrieben wird. C. zeigt damit eine große Offenheit zu anderen Vorstellungskreisen, die als Ergebnisse der grundlegenden Eintracht angesehen werden. Die Pauschalität der Glückserwartungen, die mit C. verbunden werden, zeigt sich auch in den Epitheta: Auf Münzen heißt sie Felix (96. 137. 139, vgl. 101), Aeterna (35. 97. 139. 148) oder Perpetua (145, vgl. 167), vor allem unter den Severern in dem Aspekt des Zusammenhalts innerhalb der kaiserlichen Familie, insbesondere der Herrscherpaare.

Im Grund jedoch ist das Wesen der C., da es sich um einen Begriff zwischenmenschlicher Beziehung handelt, in einer einzelnen Figur schwer darzustellen. Der angemessenste Bildtypus für das zugrundeliegende Verhalten ist die dextrarum iunctio, die vielfach als Ausdruck der c. eingesetzt wird (s. u.). Die Einfügung der C.-Figur in diese Szenen, unter Titus erstmals belegt (91), bleibt seit Hadrian vielfach üblich

(92–97). Seit Marc Aurel und Faustina d. J. (unter Antoninus Pius) wird der Typus mit der zentralen C. vor allem für Ehepaare des Kaiserhauses verwendet, der regierenden Herrscher (95. 97) wie der Thronfolger (94. 96): Gemeint ist also nicht nur der Akt der Eheschließung, sondern die allgemeine eheliche Eintracht.

In diesem Sinne ist der Szenentypus seit antoninischer Zeit auf die Sarkophage, insbesondere von hohen Militärs und Beamten, übernommen worden (74–86). Vor allem antoninische Feldherrensarkophage zeigen die Szene als Teil eines programmatischen Zyklus von Darstellungen, in denen sie neben Exempeln von virtus, clementia und pietas vorbildliche c. dokumentieren soll (74). Sie lehnen sich eng an die kaiserliche Repräsentationskunst an, ahmen vielleicht sogar ein kaiserliches Denkmal unmittelbar nach – das dann freilich den Szenentypus schon aus älterer Tradition übernommen hätte. Varianten zeigen C. auch in Darstellungen, in denen die Frau dem Mann den Arm um die Schulter legt (80) oder beide beim Opfer vereinigt sind (77. 78. 85). Wie auf Münzen ist vom Typus her eheliche Eintracht ohne eine bestimmte ereignishaft Fixierung gemeint, der Kontext kann dies aber durchaus im Sinne der Hochzeit konkretisieren (76). Gegen die in diesem Zusammenhang gelegentlich immer noch vertretene Deutung der Mittelfigur als Iuno Pronuba spricht eindeutig, daß sie auf den Münzen im politischen Bereich auch zwischen zwei männlichen Partnern erscheint; in Hochzeitsbildern wird sie von Severianus von Gabala (zit. bei Kantorowicz 8–9) ausdrücklich C. genannt. Die Geltung des Typus als Chiffre war schließlich so eingespielt, daß er auch für Vulcanus und Venus sowie für Iason und Medea Verwendung finden konnte (87. 88); die Konstellation der Verstorbenen hat auch den Mythos geformt, in dem sie präfiguriert ist. Es ist deutlich, daß C. in all diesen Szenen nicht mehr als konkrete göttliche Gestalt gemeint ist, sondern rein als Verkörperung eines ideellen Gehalts. In diesem abstrakten Sinne konnte sie auch noch auf christlichen Sarkophagen der konstantinischen Zeit erscheinen (86).

Im politischen Bereich der großen Staatsreliefs ist der Typus dagegen nur ein einziges Mal und spät in einer Variante erhalten (73): Am Bogen von Thessaloniki legt Homonoia-Concordia eine Hand um die Schulter der Oikumene, um sie dem Galerius – gewissermaßen als Braut – zuzuführen. Die Tendenz zu gedanklicher Abstraktheit ist auch hier deutlich.

Diese Entwicklung zu immer abstrakteren Vorstellungen führt im 3. Jh. weiterhin dazu, daß C. die Verbindung durch Handschlag selbst ausführen kann. Einige Münzbilder dieser Zeit müssen wohl so verstanden werden, daß der Kaiser auf diese Weise mit C. verbunden ist (98. 99). Das Motiv ist alt (→ Clementia), es bezeugt trotz seines «handgreiflichen» Charakters die immer stärkere Abstraktion dieser Vorstellungen, die hier in Metaphern dargestellt werden, deren Auflösung rational kaum mehr gelingt. In ähnlicher Weise erscheint C. zusammen mit den großen Schutzgöttern der Herrscher, Sol, Hercules und Victoria (100. 101. 102). Diese Entwicklung geht schließlich so weit, daß C. verdoppelt wird und als reines Substitut der partnerschaftlichen Herrscher mit ihrem eigenen Ebenbild, z. T. im Handschlag, vereinigt erscheint (103–105, vgl. → Victoria). C. ist auch hier nicht mehr göttliche Gestalt, sondern ein zentraler Aspekt des göttlichen Herrschers. Die Kehrseite dieses Befunds ist, daß nun immer mehr auch der Kaiser selbst in verschiedenen Funktionen und Aspekten als Verkörperung und Garant allgemeiner c. erscheinen kann (s. u.).

Dieser gedanklich-abstrahierende Zug der C. ist alt und etwa bei Ovid (fast. 6, 91–92) in der Erklärung der C. als «numen opusque ducis» impliziert. Er ist an der konkreten bildlichen Figur in vielen weiteren Symptomen zu fassen. Dazu gehört zunächst, daß die Attribute sie nicht als eine personenhafte Gestalt mit festen Charakteristika und Funktionen darstellen, sondern je nach dem aktuellen Bezug wechseln und gedankliche Verbindungen zu anderen Begriffen herstellen: zu Pax, Felicitas, Pietas, Fides, Clementia, aber auch zu Providentia, Aequitas, Fortuna. Dazu gehört weiterhin, daß C. – wie die ebenfalls zur Begrifflichkeit tendierende → Victoria – sogar anderen Gestalten attributiv beigegeben werden kann: Nicht nur Antoninus Pius kann auf den Münzbildern, die ihn zusammen mit Faustina d. Ä. als einträchtiges Vorbild für jedes römische Ehepaar darstellen, eine kleine C. in der Hand tragen (108), nicht nur Iulia Domna wird auf ähnliche Weise als Garant der c. gefeiert (109); sondern sogar Annona wird unter Commodus mit einer C.-Figur ausgestattet, um die friedlichen Voraussetzungen für die Getreideversorgung zu dokumentieren (110).

Der begriffliche Charakter des ganzen Vorstellungsbereichs findet schließlich seinen Ausdruck auch darin, daß schon seit früher Zeit ungewöhnlich viele andere Bildmotive mit dem Begriff c. erläutert werden bzw. ihn erläutern können. Wichtigster Typus ist die dextrarum iunctio, die schon in republikanischer Zeit in diesem Sinn erscheint (134), später durch die Legenden der Münzen ausdrücklich als Bezeugung von consensus oder (meist) c. gedeutet wird (135–144). Wie die entsprechenden Szenen mit eingefügter C. wird auch der einfache Typus sowohl für gemeinsame Herrscher bzw. Thronfolger (136. 138. 140. 141) als auch für Ehepaare des Kaiserhauses (135. 137. 139) verwendet. Auf Vertreter des Heeres angewandt, kann das Motiv die einträchtige Loyalität der Soldaten proklamieren (142–143); das früheste republikanische Beispiel feiert die Eintracht von Roma und Italia nach dem Bundesgenossenkrieg (134). Auch dieser Typus wird im Sinne der c. unproblematisch in die christliche Ikonographie übernommen (144). – Daneben finden sich Varianten, indem die Herrscher gemeinsam eine kleine Victoria oder einen Globus halten (140. 141), gemeinsam opfern (146) oder nur nebeneinander als Weltherrscher auf je einer sella curulis sitzen (145).

Der schlagwortartige Charakter des Begriffs hat vielfach zu einprägsamer Abkürzung der Motive geführt. Statt ganzer Figuren werden vielfach nur Köpfe zusammengestellt, die in paralleler Staffellung oder symmetrischer Gegenüberstellung ihre Verbunden-heit deutlich machen (147-152, vgl. 134). Das Motiv des Handschlags ist schon in spätrepublikanischer Zeit im Sinne von c., fides, pax etc. auf zwei verschränkte Hände reduziert worden (4. 5. 153), die dann häufig mit gemeinsam gehaltenen Attributen weiter ausgestattet wurden (154-158): ein besonders deutliches Indiz für den abstrakt-ideellen Charakter der Vorstellung, deren weites Bedeutungsspektrum auf Prägungen des Balbinus und Pupienus außer mit c. auch mit amor, caritas, fides und pietas umschrieben wird (156). Die Flexibilität des Typus zeigt sich unter Antoninus Pius, wo die Eintracht mit den beiden Nachfolgern mit drei verschränkten Händen bezeichnet wird (158). In der symbolhaften Verkürzung erscheint der Typus mit zwei Händen häufig auf Fingerringen (anulus pronubus) (152. 157).

Vielfach wird c. ein reiner Aspekt des idealen Kaisers, der dies Leitbild in eigener Person verkörpert: mit Feldzeichen (159. 160), später mit dem Labarum (161) ausgestattet. Desgleichen demonstriert er sein Verhaltensmuster der c. in der Verbindung mit Göttern: Schon auf der Prägung des Vespasian (162) ist kein wirkliches Gleichgewicht zwischen Kaiser und Senat dargestellt; und wenn später der Herrscher von Victoria bekrönt wird (163) oder von Iuppiter den Globus und die Victoria als Zeichen der Weltherrschaft überreicht bekommt (164), ist weniger die Eintracht mit den Göttern gemeint als vielmehr die c. militum, die von ihm allein realisiert wird.

Andererseits können auch die verschiedensten Wesen und Gegenstände wie der Pfau der Iuno (173), die Taube der Venus (174), ferner Feldzeichen (175), die Wölfin mit den Zwillingen (176) oder ein Lagerort (177) die verschiedenen Aspekte von c. illustrieren. Auf der Ebene göttlicher Wesen können Amor und Psyche noch die Vorstellung von c. wirklich darstellen (167, vgl. auch 86); aber ganz im Bereich des Ideellen bleiben wieder Darstellungen, in denen Figuren des Mars (165) und der Hispania (166), der Providentia (168, vgl. 68. 100), der Aequitas (169, vgl. 39), des Neptun (170), schließlich der Constantinopolis (171) und der Roma (172) mit der Vorstellung von c. assoziiert werden.

Dieser Abstrahierungsprozeß war die Voraussetzung dafür, daß sowohl das Bild der personifizierten c. als auch der Begriff der c. noch auf christlichen Denkmälern erscheint (37-38. 86. 178).

TONIO HÖLSCHER

HONOS

(Honos, Honor) Personification masculine et divinité de l'honneur.

SOURCES LITTÉRAIRES ET ÉPIGRAPHIQUES: Comme la plupart des allégories, H. n'a pas de généalogie et n'a de rôle dans aucun mythe. Seul Ovide (fast. 5, 23-26) évoque son mariage avec Reverentia, d'où est issue Maiestas qui assure le respect des honneurs dus à chacun. H. est aussi cité par Horace (c. s. 57) parmi d'autres allégories dont le retour est dû à l'action bénéfique d'Auguste, et par Sil. (15, 98-99) dans un contexte militaire.

Les attributions d'H. sont précisées par diverses inscriptions provenant de plusieurs régions de l'empire: protecteur de l'aigle de la légion (CIL XIII 6752) (pour d'autres inscriptions, cf. von Domaszewski, A., Westdeutsche Zeitschrift für Geschichte und Kunst 14, 1895, 40-42), d'un poste militaire ou douanier (CIL III 5123). Il peut être aussi une divinité personnelle (CIL III 10528). Il apparaît même sans spécificité sur d'autres témoignages (CIL VIII 302. 6950).

Une autre série de textes se rapporte à l'histoire des sanctuaires d'H. à Rome: le plus ancien, celui de la porte Colline, construit après la découverte d'une plaque portant son nom (Cic. leg. 2, 58); le second à la porte Capène (Liv. 29, 11, 13), enrichi et agrandi par la suite (Cic. nat. 2, 61; Verr. 2, 4, 121. 122; Liv. 27, 29, 7; 25, 40; Plin. nat. 35, 120). H. est fréquemment associé à → Virtus, rapprochement justifié dès l'antiquité (Aug. civ. 5, 12; Symm. epist. 1, 20, 1). Ils possèdent en commun plusieurs sanctuaires à Rome: un non localisé (CIL I² p. 195, XVIII, 16-18; InscrIt XIII 3, 83, 16-18; Fest. 468, 1 L.; Vitr. 3, 2, 5; 7 praef. 17), un autre au théâtre de Pompée (CIL I² p. 217. 244. 324; Fast. Allif. et Amit., 12 août) où ils sont associés à → Venus Victrix et à → Felicitas. En dehors de Rome leur culte est attesté à Pouzzoles (CIL X 1781) et dans d'autres provinces (CIL III 3307; IX 2214); sont aussi attestés des jeux en leur honneur (CIL X 8260) et un clergé (CIL XII 4371; XI 3205; VIII 6951). Mais on ne sait rien du culte si ce n'est qu'Auguste en fixa la fête au 29 mai (Cass. Dio 54, 18) et que l'on sacrifiait selon le rite grec (Plut. quaest. Rom. 266 f).

Mais la notion d'honneur est souvent mentionnée dans les textes en dehors du monde des allégories; elle apparaît aussi comme une conséquence de la virtus; pour une étude de ce mot cf. Klose, F., Die Bedeutung von honos und honestus (Diss. Breslau 1933) et Drexler, H., «Honos», Romanitas 3, 1961, 135-137.

BIBLIOGRAPHIE: Bieber, M., «Honos and Virtus», AJA 49, 1945, 25-34; Deubner, L., ML III 2 (1902-09) 2154-2155 s.v. «Personifikationen»; Fittschen, K., AA 1972, 756-758; Latte, RR 235-237; Mannsperger, B., «Libertas-Honos-Felicitas zur Prägung des Münzmeisters Palikanus», Chiron 4, 1974, 327-342; Oppermann, M., Römische Kaiserreliefs (1985); Pfanner, M., Der Titusbogen (1983) 65-71; Richardson Jr., L., «Honos et Virtus and the Via Sacra», AJA 82, 1978, 240-246; Saggiò, E., DA III 1 (1899) 248 s.v. «Honos»; Samter, E., RE VIII 2 (1913) 2292-2294 s.v. «Honos»; Scichilone, G., EAA IV (1961) 54-55 s.v. «Honos»; Sutherland, C. H. V., RICP 229-231; Torelli, M., Typology and Structure of Roman Historical Reliefs (1982) 27-29, 37-38; Toutain, Cultes 413-421; Wissowa, G., ML VI (1924-27) 336-347 s.v. «Virtus»; Wissowa, G./Drexler, W., ML I 2 (1886-90) 2707-2709 s.v. «Honos».

CATALOGUE

I. Honos hors de tout contexte historique

1. Honos seul, tête

1.* AR deniers, Rome, monétaire L. Palikanus, 48/7 av. J.-C. - Crawford, RRC 482 n° 473, 2 pl. 56;

Mannsperger 336 pl. 30, 4-5. - Av. Tête d'H. à dr. (cheveux courts, couronne de laurier). Lég. HONORIS. Rv. Chaise curule.

2.* AU, AR, Rome, monétaire M. Durmius sous Auguste, 18 av. J.-C. - a)* AU aurei - BMC Emp I 10 n° 51 pl. 2, 8. - Av. Tête d'H. à dr. (cheveux enroulés au-dessus du front), entre deux étoiles. Lég. M. DURMIUS. III. VIR. HONORI. Rv. Couronne de chêne. b) AR deniers. - BMC Emp I 10-11 n° 52-58 pl. 2, 9-11. - Av. Même type sans étoiles. Rv. Auguste sur un bige d'éléphants; quadriges; Parthe agenouillé.

2. Honos seul, en pied

Les émissions de la période 140-152 ont comme lég. HONOS, HONORI AVG, et/ou l'indication TR.P. COS.

3a)* AU aurei; AR deniers; AE sesterces et dupondi ou asses. Rome, Marc Aurèle César, 140-144 ap. J.-C. - BMC Emp IV 40 n° 263-266 pl. 6, 19-20. 26; 225 n° 1395-1396 pl. 33, 13; 227 n° 1406 §. - Rv. H. debout de face, en toge, la tête à g., tient un rameau dans la main dr. et une corne d'abondance dans la g. Lég. HONOS. - 3b) AR deniers, AE sesterces, Rome, Marc Aurèle César, 144/5 ap. J.-C. - BMC Emp IV 73 n° 508-509 pl. 11, 10; 85-86 n° 594-602 pl. 12, 20; 266 pl. 43, 1. - Rv. Même type (un ou plusieurs rameaux dans la main dr.).

4.* AE sesterces et dupondi, Rome, Antonin, 145/6 ap. J.-C. - BMC Emp IV 271-272 n° 1683-1686 pl. 40, 2; 280 n° 1783 pl. 42, 3; Turcan, R., Religion romaine I (1988) 46 n° 130 pl. 47. - Rv. H. debout de face, en toge, la tête à g., un rameau dans la main dr. et une corne d'abondance dans la g. Lég. HONORI AVG COS IIII.

5. AE sesterces et dupondi ou asses, Rome, Marc Aurèle César, 147-149 ap. J.-C. - BMC Emp IV 296-297 n° 1819-1820 pl. 44, 9; 303 n° 1845-1848 pl. 45, 8. - Rv. H. (toge) debout à dr., un sceptre dans la main dr. et une corne d'abondance dans la g. Lég. HONOS TR POT II (ou III) COS II.

6.* AE sesterces, dupondi ou asses, Rome, Marc Aurèle César, 151/2 ap. J.-C. - BMC Emp IV 318-319 n° 1914-1915. 1918 pl. 46, 15. - Rv. H. debout de face, en toge, tête à g., un rameau dans la main dr., une corne d'abondance dans la g. Lég. HONOS SC (dans le champ).

DOCUMENT D'INTERPRÉTATION INCERTAINE

7. Pâte de verre. Copenhague, Mus. Thorv. I 618. - Fossing, ThorvGems 102 n° 584; Scichilone 55. - Ep. romaine. - H. (?) debout de face, le corps nu, les jambes drapées, sceptre dans la main g. et corne d'abondance dans la dr. Cf. un objet similaire: Berlin, Staatl. Mus. - Furtwängler, A., Geschnitt. Steine im Antiquarium zu Berlin (1896) n° 2925.

3. Honos et Virtus, têtes

8.* AR deniers (serrati), Rome, monétaires Kalenus et Cordus, après 67 av. J.-C. - Crawford, RRC

413 n° 403, 1 pl. 50; Richard, J.-Cl., MEFRA 75, 1963, 313-315; Richardson 244; Turcan, o. c. 4, 46 n° 128 pl. 47. - Av. Tête d'H. de profil à dr. (cheveux courts et couronne de laurier); derrière, tête de Virtus. Lég. HO. VIRT. KALENI. Rv. Italia (→ Italia 9) et → Roma, debout face à face, se donnent la main.

4. Honos et Virtus en pied

9.* AE sesterces, Rome. a)* Galba, 68 ap. J.-C. - BMC Emp I 357 n° 255-257 pl. 58, 10; RICP 254, 474-478; Kent/Hirmer, RömMünze n° 214 pl. 61. - Rv. H. debout de profil à dr., nu, les jambes drapées, s'appuie du bras dr. levé sur un sceptre; le bras g. baissé tient une corne d'abondance; devant lui Virtus en tunique courte, casquée, s'appuie sur une lance renversée et tient le parazonium, un pied posé sur un casque (une tête de sanglier?). Lég. HONOS ET VIRTUS SC. - b) Vitellius, 69 ap. J.-C. - BMC Emp I 375; RICP 274, 113. - Rv. Semblable (frappé avec des coins de a): Virtus a le pied posé sur un casque.

10.* AE sesterces, Rome et Tarragone, Vespasien, 71 ap. J.-C. - BMC Emp II 114 n° 530-531 pl. 20, 2; 185 n° 760 pl. 32, 8. - Rv. Semblable à 9, mais la pointe de la lance de Virtus est levée. Lég. HONOS ET VIRTUS SC.

DOCUMENT DISPARU

11. Base de statue. De Visentium. - CIL XI 2910. - Dédicace à H. sur une base de statue, trouvée avec une autre mentionnant Virtus (CIL XI 2911).

DOCUMENT D'INTERPRÉTATION INCERTAINE

12.* AR denier, Rome, P. Cornelius Lentulus Marcellinus, 100 av. J.-C. - BMC Rep. n° 1704. 1713. 1724; Crawford, RRC 329 n° 329, 1 pl. 42; Richardson 245 n. 18. 19. - Rv. H. (?) debout de face; le bras g. baissé porte une corne d'abondance, le bras dr. levé tend une couronne au-dessus de la tête de Virtus, debout de face, casquée, tenant une lance (Richardson) (Crawford: → Genius Populi Romani et Roma).

II. Honos dans un contexte historique

1. Divinité de la victoire et des triomphes

Reliefs monumentaux (pierre)

13.* (= Ares/Mars 459). Socle de calcaire, Mayence, Mittelrhein. Landesmus. S 265. De Mayence. - Kähler, H., «Ein röm. Siegesdenkmal in Mainz», Germania 15, 1931/1, 20-28 pl. 2, 4; Picard, G. C., Les trophées romains (1957) 348-349. - 73/4 ap. J.-C. - Sur un pilier rectangulaire, H. debout de face (seule la partie supérieure est conservée); un pan du manteau qui lui drapait les jambes passe sur l'épaule et le bras g.; le bras dr. levé s'appuie sur un sceptre, le bras g. baissé tient une corne d'abondance. H. est figuré avec Mars, → Victoria et Virtus.

14.* Arc de Titus, Rome, in situ. - Bieber 25 fig. 1; Pfanner 49, 68-71 pl. 48. 78; Van de Grift, J., AJA 88, 1984, 428-430; Oppermann 35-36. 39. 42. - 4° quart du I^{er} s. ap. J.-C. - a)* Intérieur du pylône nord. Triomphe de Titus: H. (tête arrachée), nu, les jambes drapées, le bras dr. tendu, marche près du char de Titus couronné par Victoria; l'attelage est mené par Roma ou Virtus. b)* Clé de voûte, côté ville. H. debout de face, drapé dans un manteau, tient une corne d'abondance dans le bras g. De chaque côté, une Victoire lui tend palme, couronne de chêne et trophée. Sur l'autre face, Virtus.

Gemmes

15.* Sardoine. New York, MMA 42.11.32. - Richter, G. M. A., Ancient Gems from the Evans and Beatty Collections (1924) 54; Bieber, M., AJA 48, 1944, 111-112; eadem, AJA 49, 1945, 27 fig. 4; Richter, MetrMusGems 132 n° 658 pl. 75. - III^e s. ap. J.-C. - H. nu (manteau drapé autour des jambes), le bras dr. en avant, une branche dans la main g., marche à côté du char d'un général victorieux mené par Virtus; un Amour (→ Eros/Amor, Cupido) survole la scène.

16. Sardoine, Vienne, Kunsth. Mus. Du sud de la France. - Bieber 25-27 fig. 3. - IV^e s. ap. J.-C. - Scène centrale analogue, mais le char est précédé par un homme, suivi par deux autres, et il n'y a pas d'Amour.

17. Sardoine brune. Philadelphie, coll. priv. - Bieber 25-27 fig. 2; eadem, Archeology 10, 1957, 61; Hölscher, T., Victoria Romana (1967) 82 n. 485. - IV^e s. ap. J.-C. - Scène centrale comme sur 15, mais le char est suivi par un seul homme en toge.

18. Londres, Victoria and Albert Mus., anc. coll. Hawkins, Bignor Park (G-B). - Conze, A., AA 1864, 167; Michaelis, A., AZ 1874, 12; Michaelis, AntM 213; Bieber 25, 27; Richter, MetrMusGems 132. - IV^e s. ap. J.-C. - Proche des précédentes.

2. Honos dans l'entourage de l'empereur

19. Ara Pacis Augustae, façade est, panneau de g. - Helbig⁴ II n° 1937 (Simon, E.); Torelli 37-38 pl. 2, 13 (bibl.); Oppermann 16. 18. - 9-13 ap. J.-C. - H. (seule la tête est conservée: cheveux courts, bandeau), à la dr. de Roma assise sur des armes; à g. Virtus.

20.* (= Ares/Mars 286) Coupe en argent dite «d'Auguste». Perdue, anc. coll. Rothschild. De Boscoreale. - Héron de Villefosse, A., MonPiot 5, 1899, 13-138 n° 103 pl. 32, 1-2; Hölscher, o. c. 17, 181 VG 15 pl. 3, 1; idem, JdI 95, 1980, 281-288 fig. 14 (bibl.); Simon, E., Augustus (1986) 143 fig. 147. - Milieu du I^{er} s. ap. J.-C. - H. nu (jambes drapées dans un manteau), debout de face, les bras baissés, tient dans la main dr. une patère et dans la g. une corne d'abondance, la tête tournée à g. vers Virtus; à dr. un Amour et Vénus Victrix tendant une Victoire à Auguste; de l'autre côté Mars guide les provinces pacifiées vers l'empereur.

21. Relief de marbre de la «Cancellaria», frise B. Vatican, inv. 13392-13395. - Keller, E., «Studien zu den Cancellaria-Reliefs», Klio 49, 1968, 213; Koepel, G., BonnJbb 169, 1969, 138. 172-174 (bibl.). - Fin du I^{er} s. ap. J.-C. - Adventus de Vespasien: au second plan, H. (nu, drapé dans un manteau), de profil à g., est figuré sur une base; du bras dr. levé il s'appuie sur un sceptre, le bras g. baissé tient une corne d'abondance; derrière lui le → Genius Senatus.

22.* Arc de Trajan à Bénévent. Façade côté campagne, pylône g., relief supérieur. - Hassel, F. J., Der Trajansbogen (1966) 14 pl. 8, 1 (bibl.); Fittschen, K., AA 1972, 756-758; Oppermann 87-88. 99-100. - 114 ap. J.-C. - H. (cuirasse et couronne de laurier) présente à Trajan (tunique et paludamentum) les provinces pacifiées.

23.* (= Ares/Mars 291, = Iuno 4 avec bibl.) Base circulaire en marbre. Rome, Mus. Nuovo 3320. De l'abbaye de Grottaferrata. - Pensabene, P., dans Calza, R., et al., Antichità di Villa Doria Pamphili (1977) 117-120 n° 138 pl. 90-92 (bibl.). - Milieu du II^e s. ap. J.-C. - H. nu, debout de face, couronné de laurier, un bouclier derrière la jambe g., un manteau sur l'épaule g.; les bras baissés, il tenait une corne d'abondance de la main g. et de la dr. un rameau. Il est figuré parmi des divinités et des personnages historiques: Vénus Victrix sous les traits de Faustine l'Aînée, Virtus, le Génie du Sénat, → Victoria, Iuno Sospita et Antonin le Pieux.

24.* Relief de marbre. Rome, arc de Constantin, côté sud de l'attique. Provient de l'arc de Marc Aurèle. - Pfanner 70 n. 165; Oppermann 160 fig. 32 (bibl.). - 176 ap. J.-C. - Face à Marc Aurèle lors de sa profectio, H. debout de face, en légionnaire (cuirasse, manteau, épée, casque), tient le vexillum; sur le sol, devant l'empereur, → Tellus (?).

25.* Relief de marbre. Tripoli, Mus. Arch. De Lepcis Magna, attique de l'arc de Septime Sévère, frise sud-ouest. - v. Heintze, H. F., dans Kraus, PKG 339 n° 235 (bibl.); Strocka, V. M., AntAfr 6, 1972, 157-160 avec pl.; Pfanner 69. - 206-209 ap. J.-C. - Concordia Augustorum: au centre Septime Sévère, Caracalla, Géta et Julia Domna; à dr. H. debout (cuirasse, manteau), à g. Virtus; au second plan Minerve (→ Athena/Minerva), Hercule (→ Herakles), → Tyche/Fortuna, Liber (→ Dionysos/Bacchus).

DOCUMENTS D'INTERPRÉTATION INCERTAINE

26. Fr. de relief de marbre. Local. inconnue, anc. coll. C. Albizzati, Milan. - Saletti, C., «Due frammenti di un rilievo storico romano», Athenaeum 67, 1976, 255-270; Pfanner 69. - 1^{er} quart du II^e s. ap. J.-C. - Tête masculine juvénile de profil à dr. (cheveux dans le cou, couronne de chêne; près du visage une hampe tenue par la main): H.? Sur un autre fr. du même relief une tête féminine: Virtus?

27. (= Demeter/Ceres 174* avec bibl.) «Grand Camée de France». Sardoine. Paris, Cab. Méd. 264. - Jucker, H., «Der grosse Pariser Cameo», JdI 91, 1976, 211-250 (bibl. et interprétations ant.). - 20-40 ap. J.-C. - Au registre médian, face à un groupe de personnages historiques, un jeune homme assis (cheveux courts, tunique) tient un volumen (le cursus honorum de Germanicus: Simon, E., KölnerJb 9, 1967-68, 17): H.?

28. (= Athena/Minerva 444, = Demeter/Ceres 175* avec bibl.) «Gemma Claudia». Sardoine. Vienne, Kunsth. Mus. IX a 63. - Möbius, H., Abh-München NF 59, 1964, 28 pl. 7, 2; Zwierlein-Diehl, E., KölnerJb 17, 1980, 36; Oberleitner, W., Geschnittene Steine. Die Prunkkameen der Wiener Antikensammlung (1985) 55 fig. 37-38; Simon, o. c. 20, 82-83 fig. 106. - 48/9 ap. J.-C. - Deux couples de bustes jumelés se font face, émergeant de cornes d'abondance séparées par un aigle: à g. Claude et Agrippine la Jeune, à dr. H. de profil à g., couronné de chêne, sous les traits de Germanicus, et derrière lui Virtus casquée, sous les traits d'Agrippine l'Aînée.

III. Honos, divinité privée

29. (= Abundantia 5* avec bibl., = Homonoia/Concordia 79* avec bibl., = Iuno 190) Sarcophage de marbre. Rome, San Lorenzo fuori le Mura. - Fittschen, K., AA 1971, 117-119 (bibl.); Koch/Sichter-mann, RömSark 101 fig. 97. - Fin du II^e s. ap. J.-C. - Scène de dextrarum iunctio: parmi les Vertus présentes, entre Fortuna et → Pietas, H. (toge, couronne de laurier) debout de face, la tête tournée à dr. vers la scène du mariage, tient un volumen dans la main g.

30. Autel dédié à H. et Virtus. Budapest, Mus. Nat. R-D 352. D'Eszék ou de Peës. - CIL III 10285; Toutain, Cultes 420; Samter 2294; Kähler, o. c. 13, 22. - 4^e quart du II^e s. ap. J.-C. - H. en légionnaire, debout de face, une lance dans la main dr. et un bouclier dans la g.; à ses pieds, à une échelle réduite, un homme nu à terre. Sur la face opposée, Virtus, sous l'apparence d'une Victoire sur un globe.

COMMENTAIRE

H. est une divinité essentiellement liée à Rome et qui ne s'est pas implantée dans les provinces. Les dédicaces proviennent toutes d'établissements, légions ou postes douaniers (CIL III 5123), ou de personnages officiels (CIL III 10285). Son culte et son clergé ne sont attestés, en dehors de Rome, que dans des colonies au sens strict: Sicca Veneria (CIL VIII 6951), Cirta, dont le nom officiel Colonia Iulia Iuvenalis Honoris et Virtutis Cirta (CIL VIII 7041. 7071) mentionne le nom du dieu, et Narbo (CIL XII 4371). Les monnaies à son effigie ont été émises à Rome ou dans la ville d'origine de l'empereur (9-10). De même, si dans quelques textes grecs on utilise pour désigner la divinité le mot (féminin) Τιμή (Cass. Dio 54, 18, 2), Plut. (quaest. Rom. 266 f) lui préfère la transcription (masculine) du nom latin, Ὀνῶπ.

L'apparence d'Honos

H. agit dans plusieurs domaines, aussi son aspect est-il variable. Le plus souvent, il est figuré comme un jeune homme aux cheveux courts, fréquemment couronné de laurier, nu, drapé dans un manteau, portant une corne d'abondance et un sceptre ou des rameaux, suivant ainsi le type iconographique le plus courant des Genii (pour des images particulièrement indécises: 7), notamment le Genius Populi Romani (12. 14-18. 20-21). Ce type reflété par les monnaies (9-12) est probablement celui des statues de culte à Rome et à Visentium (11).

Le caractère militaire d'H. est parfois traduit par le port de la cuirasse (22. 24-25. 30). Sur un autel (30) seule l'inscription permet de reconnaître H. dans le personnage dont l'aspect est celui de Mars. Il est aussi indiqué par la présence de Virtus et par le port du sceptre (9-10).

Mais H. peut aussi, dans un contexte civil, être vêtu de la toge (3-6. 29) ou d'une tunique (27). Enfin seul le contexte permet d'identifier H. dans un personnage nu (23).

Les attributions d'Honos

a) Dans le domaine militaire

Le caractère militaire d'H. est marqué par l'association à des victoires de la construction et de l'aménagement de ses sanctuaires: celui de la Porte Capène fut dédié en 233 av. J.-C. pour une victoire sur les Ligures, enrichi avec les chefs-d'œuvre de Syracuse et agrandi à l'occasion de la bataille de Clastidium; celui d'H. et Virtus au Capitole fut construit par Marius avec le butin pris sur les Cimbres et les Teutons (CIL XI 1831). Une monnaie (12) où H. (?) couronne Virtus (?) fait peut-être allusion, comme le souligne le revers, à l'union nationale réalisée grâce à Pompée (Richard, o. c. 8). Mattingly, enfin, associe à la pacification d'une révolte gauloise une émission monétaire de Galba (9a).

H. est aussi divinité de la légion, comme en témoignent les inscriptions réparties dans l'empire: il protège plus particulièrement l'aigle ou les soldats à titre personnel (cf. Sources littéraires et épigraphiques).

Par sa nature même H. prend place parmi les divinités du triomphe et de la victoire. Il est figuré à ce titre sur plusieurs reliefs, sur l'arc de Titus (14) où H. est aussi nécessaire au triomphe terrestre de l'empereur qu'à son apothéose, et sur des gemmes (15-18). Ce rôle est souligné par la situation même des sanctuaires au Champ de Mars et au Capitole, soit au départ et à l'arrivée des triomphes. H. a, pour la même raison, été identifié à l'entrée de l'Ara Pacis (19), où il semble accueillir Auguste sur ce monument construit pour évoquer la paix revenue à la suite de victoires.

Il est associé non seulement à la célébration de la victoire mais aussi à la pacification et à l'hommage rendu à l'empereur par les provinces conquises, dans un premier temps comme témoin de l'action de Mars qui les guide (20) et dans un second comme acteur à la place du dieu (22).

Les liens d'H. et de la victoire sont soulignés à plusieurs reprises par son association avec Mars (13), marquée par la proximité de leurs temples, et avec Vénus Victrix (20. 23, et sanctuaire commun au théâtre de Pompée, cf. Sources litt.). H. revêt d'ailleurs sur un autel (30) l'aspect du dieu et Virtus celui de la Victoire; sur cette image dédiée par un personnage officiel, il illustre l'honneur de la légion victorieuse en terrassant un Barbare.

b) Dans l'ordre civil

H. apparaît en plusieurs occasions comme Ovide le dépeint: divinité civile de l'ordre social. Ce rôle est exprimé par le monnayage de Marc Aurèle (3-6) où H., vêtu de la toge, seul, tient un rameau symbolisant la paix. Son illustration est encore plus évidente dans une scène de dextrarum iunctio où H. remplace Virtus (29): il est là en tant que divinité privée. Parmi les divinités qui entourent Antonin le Pieux dans un contexte politique, il illustre par son voisinage avec le Genius Senatus l'accord de l'empereur et du Sénat (cf. Pensabene, o. c. 23).

Il apparaît aussi comme la personnification du cursus honorum sur une gemme (28) où sous les traits de Germanicus il sert de garant au mariage de Claude; dans ce même contexte il est figuré sur un sarcophage (29), tenant un volumen qui concrétise le cursus honorum, comme peut-être sur une autre gemme où il participe à une apotheose (cf. arc de Titus, 14). Il est sous cet aspect beaucoup plus intimement lié à une personne comme Genius personnel; il peut aussi représenter l'empereur (4; CIL VIII 6951) ou la personnification de son esprit (23): ainsi, H. est-il probablement figuré sous les traits de Marc Aurèle (3a).

Honos et Virtus. Il est impossible d'évoquer H. sans Virtus. Leur union fréquemment illustrée découle du fait que l'honneur est la rétribution de la virtus. Elle est particulièrement marquée par l'utilisation des capita iugata (8, 28), qui supprime toute hiérarchie entre les deux divinités. Ces liens n'ont pas toujours été si étroits: les témoignages les plus anciens - temple de la Porte Colline, plaquette gravée (CIL VI 30913) - sont dédiés à H. seul; l'opposition des Pontifes à un sanctuaire commun vient confirmer cette indépendance. Sur les monnaies, à une époque plus tardive, la signification d'H. diffère lorsqu'il est seul (1-6) ou avec Virtus (8-10, 12): son caractère militaire s'affirme alors davantage.

Honos dans l'entourage de l'empereur. Par deux fois H. porte la corona civica (26, 28) et sur l'arc de Titus (14b) une Victoire la lui tend. Cette couronne le rapproche de l'empereur à qui elle est attribuée fréquemment. Il est présent près de l'empereur à des moments particulièrement solennels, fictifs (20, 22) ou réels: à Lepcis Magna (25) où il est parmi les garants d'une union politique, et pendant l'adventus de Vespasien (21) et la profectio de Marc Aurèle (24) où, comme les licteurs sont le signe de la dignité de celui qui a droit à leur escorte, H. accompagne l'empereur.

CATHERINE LOCHIN

HOPLADAMAS, HOPLODAMAS

(Ὁπλαδάμας, Ὁπλοδάμας, Ὁπλόδαμος, celui qui dompte par les armes) Géant (→ Gigantes).

Paus. 8, 32, 5; 36, 2, mentionne à Méthydrion, en Arcadie, le Géant Hoplodamos (Hoplodamas, selon une conjecture de Xylander; Ὁπλόδαμος codd.) qui, avec ses compagnons, a protégé → Rhea enceinte de → Zeus, lorsqu'elle s'est réfugiée sur le mont Thaumasion. Sur cette tradition, sans doute ancienne, qui assimile les Géants à une confrérie armée pareille à celle des Courètes, cf. Waser, O., RE Suppl. III (1918) 746; Vian, F., La guerre des Géants (1952) 238-246; Jost, M., Sanctuaires et cultes d'Arcadie (1985) 243-245, 277-278. Ce nom, sous la forme Hoplodamas ou Hopladamas, est restitué avec vraisemblance sur deux vases attiques à f. n. figurant des Gigantomachies:

1. (= Gigantes 105 avec renvois) Frs. d'un dinos signé Lydos. Athènes, Mus. Nat. Acr 607. - 560-550 av. J.-C. - Géant... JΛΔΑΜΑΣ tombé à genoux devant Apollon.

2. (= Gigantes 171) Dinos Fr. Malibu, Getty Mus. 81.AE.211. - 560-550 av. J.-C. - Géant... JMAΣ, terrassé devant Zeus.

FRANCIS VIAN

HOPLON → Lapithai

HOPLOS → Lapithai

HORAI

(Ἥραι, Horae) Filles de → Zeus et de → Themis, sœurs des Moires (→ Moirai). Forces physiques et morales personnifiées plutôt que divinités du panthéon grec, elles sont les protectrices de la végétation (leur nom exprime l'idée de croissance, de fructification) ainsi que de l'ordre divin, en tant qu'hypostases de Thémis.

Êtres abstraits à la personnalité incertaine, elles se présentent d'ordinaire en groupe, le plus souvent d'abord en triades, comme les Charites (→ Charis, Charites), les Moires, les Muses (→ Mousa, Mousai), les Nymphes (→ Nymphai). Par la suite, elles en viennent à personnifier les changements dans la nature, les saisons: leur nombre se fixe à quatre, et elles se distinguent par leurs symboles (→ Horai/Horae, → Kairoi/Tempora anni).

SOURCES LITTÉRAIRES: D'après la tradition littéraire, les H. sont filles de Zeus, dieu du temps et souvent de l'agriculture, et de Thémis, déesse de la justice (Hes. theog. 901-903; erg. 74-75; Pind. Pae. 1, 5-8; O. 13, 6-8; fig. 30 Snell/Maehler; Panyassis, Davies EGFF 13 = Bernabé PEG fig. 17; Apollod. bibl. 1 [13] 3, 1; Diod. 5, 73); leurs noms, chez Hésiode, sont → Eunomia, → Dike et → Eirene (Εὐνομία, Δίκη, Εἰρήνη), qui d'après certains seraient de simples hypostases de Thémis.

En Attique, Pausanias (Paus. 9, 35, 2; cf. Hyg. fab. 183) cite les noms Thallô (Θαλλώ) et Karpô (Καρπώ) comme ceux des H. tandis que Auxô (Αὐξώ) et Hégémoné (Ἡγεμόνη) sont des Charites; suivant d'autres versions Thallô, Auxô et Karpô (Pollux 8, 106: Thallô, Auxô, Hégémoné) sont les trois H. et caractérisent les trois étapes de la floraison.

Étymologiquement, ἥρα signifie «période définie de temps; saison, heure; la belle saison», l'adjectif ἥρατος «de la saison», pour des jeunes gens «en fleur», d'où «joli, gracieux» (Chantraine s. v. ἥρα; cf. Pind. N. 8, 1; Hesych., Suda et Etym. m. s. v. ἥρα; Eust. 1349, 8-10 ad Hom. Il. 24, 262). Les H. sont aussi mentionnées comme déesses de la beauté juvénile.

Leur séjour est situé dans l'Olympe, parmi les divinités du panthéon; elles sont chargées d'ouvrir et de fermer les portes du ciel aux nuages et, comme auries des dieux, de tenir les chevaux divins d'→ Hera et d'→ Athena (Hom. Il. 5, 749-751 = 8, 393-395; 8, 433-435; Paus. 5, 11, 7; Nonn. Dion. 2, 703-705; Philostr. im. 2, 34; Ov. fast. 1, 125; Etym. m. s. v. ἥρα).

On ne sait si depuis la plus haute antiquité l'on se représentait les H. sous forme humaine. La tradition littéraire les décrit comme de belles jeunes femmes directement liées à la végétation, exerçant une influence bénéfique pour les mortels, surtout dans les domaines de la fécondité et de la santé, en raison de leur force apotropaïque (cf. Philoch., FGrH 328 F 173).

Elles sont liées à la naissance et à l'enfance des dieux olympiens, présentes en particulier lors de la naissance d'→ Hermes; elles confèrent des charmes et des dons exceptionnels aux nouveaux-nés, p. ex. à → Pandora (→ Charis, Charites 4) et à → Aphrodite (Hes. erg. 74-75; Hom. h. 6, 5-13). D'autres divinités, comme Héra et → Dionysos, bénéficient de leurs soins au cours de leur enfance (Antigenes, Sutton, D. F., Dithyrambographi Graeci [1989] n° 8 T 1; Pind. dith. pour Athènes, fig. 75, 14-15 Snell/Maehler; Paus. 2, 13, 3).

Les H. s'occupent aussi d'Aristée (→ Aristaios I), le fondateur de Cyrène (Pind. P. 9, 59-65); elles donnent la beauté à la Nymphé Okyrrhoë (Apoll. Rhod. fig. 7 Powell).

Leur présence aux mariages de → Thetis et Pélée (→ Peleus), de Zeus et Héra, de Zeus et → Europe (I) (Moschos 2, 164; Hyg. astr. 2, 5), de Dionysos et Ariane (→ Ariadne; Eratosth. kat. 5; cf. Robert, Heldensage 66), d'→ Eros et → Psyche (Apul. met. 6, 24) indique leur influence favorable et bienfaisante. Avec Zeus, qui est leur père d'après toutes les généalogies, les H. partagent un but commun, celui de protéger l'agriculture (Pind. O. 4, 1-3; Pae. 1, 5-6; Aristoph. Pax. 1168).

Comme saisons, elles sont proches de → Demeter (Hom. h. Cer. 54. 192. 492; cf. Paus. 3, 19, 4; un paysan sacrifie à Déméter et aux H.: Anth. Pal. 6, 98), qui est appelée Δημήτηρ Ἀρηφόρος (Hom. h. Cer. 54. 192. 492); au printemps, ce sont elles qui ramènent → Persephone sur terre (Orph. h. 29, 9; 43, 7). Les H. ont donc très tôt une relation implicite avec l'arrivée du printemps, et plus généralement avec le changement du temps. Plus tard, il arrive qu'on les associe aux Génies des saisons, qui apportent des fleurs et des fruits (cf. Philoch., FGrH 328 F 173; Technau, W., JdI 1937, 102 n° 2). Leur culte est dans ce cas étroitement lié à celui que l'on rend aux divinités de la végétation.

Une relation étroite existe aussi entre les H. et le dieu du soleil, → Apollon, qui, assimilé à → Helios, a pour fonction de favoriser la fécondité de la terre (Porph. de abst. 2, 7). Callimaque (Kall. h. 2, 87) appelle les H. Καρπειάδες Ἥραι (saisons des «fêtes Carnéiennes», trad. E. Cahen), et Apollon lui-même a pour éphithètes Ἠρίτης, Ἀρπειδοτής, Ἀρμυέων.

Protectrices de la beauté, elles sont liées à la déesse de la beauté et de l'amour, Aphrodite (Kypria, Davies EGFF 4 = Bernabé PEG fig. 4; Hom. h. 6, 5-13), comme le montre le culte reçu en commun sur le même autel (Aristoph. Pax 456). Les H. dansent avec Aphrodite et les Charites dans l'Olympe (Hom. h. Ap. 194-196).

D'autre part, elles aident Dionysos à faire mûrir le vin. Le sanctuaire des H. à Athènes abritait un autel consacré à Dionysos Orthos (Philoch., FGrH 328 F 5b) et une inscr. provenant du sanctuaire de Dionysos Orthos est dédiée aux H. et aux Nymphes (IG II/III^a 4877). Cette relation est confirmée par Antigenes, Sutton o. c. n° 8 T 1, qui appelle les H. Διονυσιάδες.

Enfin → Pan est σύνθερος des H., il reçoit lui aussi un culte en commun avec elles (Orph. h. 11, 4).

Les H., divinités qui incarnent d'abord le changement de temps, finissent par se confondre en nombre avec les quatre saisons (Hom. Od. 10, 469; 11, 295; 14, 294; Soph. Oid. t. 156; Aristoph. Aves 696; Kall. h. 2, 80-83).

Dans la comédie attique, les H. n'apparaissent que comme des figures conventionnelles. Pourtant, en Attique, elles sont considérées comme divinités du climat, de la végétation, comme des divinités locales. Un fait indique bien l'importance de leur culte en Attique: dans le serment que prêtaient les éphèbes athéniens parvenus à leur vingtième année, les H. étaient invoquées au même titre que les autres divinités (Pollux 8, 106; G. Daux, «Deux stèles d'Acharnai», dans Charisterion A. Orlandos I [1965] 81).

BIBLIOGRAPHIE: von Geisau, H., KlPauly 2 (1967) 1215-1216 s. v. «Horai»; Hamdorf, Kultpersonifikationen 39; Hanfmann, G. M. A., The Season Sarcophagus in Dumbarton Oaks (1951); Hild, J. A., DA III 1 (1900) 249-256 s. v. «Horae»; Jolles, A., RE VIII (1913) 2300-2313 s. v. «Horai»; Papadaki, Προσωποποιήσεις 109-111; Rapp, A., ML 1 2 (1886-90) 2712-2731 s. v. «Horai»; Simon, E., EAA VII (1966) 468-473 s. v. «Stagioni».

CATALOGUE

I. Les Horai seules ou en groupes

A. Sans autres personnages

Œuvres connues par des témoignages littéraires
Relief et ronde bosse

1. Statues de marbre. Erythrées (Ionie). - Paus. 7, 5, 9: œuvre d'Endoios. - Des statues des H. et des Charites étaient érigées en plein air, devant l'entrée du temple d'Athéna Polias.

2. (= Charis, Charites 7) «Trône» de marbre. Amyclées (Laconie). – Paus. 3, 18, 10: œuvre de Bathylès. – 2^e moitié du VI^e s. av. J.-C. – Deux H. et deux Charites soutiennent le «trône» d'Apollon.

3. (= Hyakinthos 1 avec renvois et bibl.) Autel d'Hyakinthos dans le «trône» d'Amyclées. – Paus. 3, 19, 3-4: les H. et les Moires avec d'autres divinités (Déméter, Coré, Hadès, Aphrodite, Athéna, Artémis). Paus. 3, 19, 5: les H. et les Muses avec les filles de → Thestios (→ Thestiadès).

4. (= Charis, Charites 43) Ornaments du trône de la statue chryséléphantine de Zeus. Olympie, temple de Zeus Olympien. – Paus. 5, 11, 7: œuvre de Phidias. – 435 av. J.-C. – Le haut du dossier, au dessus de la tête de Zeus, est décoré d'un côté des trois H., de l'autre des trois Charites.

5. Décor de la statue de Zeus Olympien, dans son sanctuaire à Mégare. – Paus. 1, 40, 4: œuvre de Théokosmos, aidé par Phidias. – Au-dessus de la tête de Zeus sont représentées les H. et les Moires.

6. (= Charis, Charites 44) Ornaments de la statue chryséléphantine d'Héra. Argos, temple d'Héra. – Paus. 2, 17, 4: œuvre de Polyclète, 2^e moitié du V^e s. av. J.-C. – La couronne de la déesse a pour décor les H. et les Charites.

7. (= Apollon 803, = Demeter 437) Décor en relief d'une table cultuelle. Agora de Mégapolis, péripole des Grandes Déeses. : Paus. 8, 31, 3: œuvre de Damophon de Messène, II^e s. av. J.-C. – Froning, Schmuckreliefs 40 n. 45; Jost, M., Sanctuaires et cultes d'Arcadie (1985) 227. – Deux H. sont représentées à côté de Pan et d'Apollon.

Reliefs de marbre

8.* Bruxelles, Mus. Roy. A 1150 (anc. coll. Tyszkiewicz). De Laconie? – Fröhner, W., La coll. Tyszkiewicz (1892-97) pl. 30; Lippold, GrPl 31 n. 17: Euménidenrelief; Langlotz, E., Frühgriech. Bildhauerschulen (1927) 86-87, 91 n. 3 pl. 44 d. – 2^e quart du VI^e s. av. J.-C. – Trois H. (ou Korai?) de profil vers la dr., en péplos, tenant des objets indéterminés. Inscr. ΚΟΡΑΣ ΕΟΤΙΑΣ.

9.* Plaque de marbre pentélique. Athènes, Mus. Nat. 259. Du théâtre de Dionysos. – Kavvadias, P., Γλυπτὰ τοῦ Ἐθν. Μουσείου, Κατάλογος (1890-92) n. 259; Reinach, RépRel II 371, 3; Svoronos 239 pl. 32; BrBr 600; Weege, F., Der Tanz in der Antike (1926) fig. 85; Karouzou, S., Cat. des sculpt. (1967) 188-189; Fuchs, W., Die Vorbilder der neuatt. Reliefs, JdI 20. Erg.-H. (1959) 99-101, 172 n. 16 pl. 99 b; 102 a; 103; Edwards, Ch., Greek Votive Reliefs to Pan and the Nymphs (1985) 205-207 pl. 74 fig. 44. – Fin du I^{er} s. av. J.-C. – H. (chiton, himation) dansant vers la g.

10.* Marbre pentélique. Athènes, Mus. Nat. 260. – Reinach, RépRel II 372, 2; Fuchs, o. c. 9, 99-101. – H. (chiton, himation) se retournant vers la g.; les cheveux serrés dans un sakkos, elle porte une couronne.

11.* Marbre pentélique. Athènes, Mus. Nat. 2667. – Becatti, G., RivIstArch 7, 1940, 81; Fuchs, o. c. 9, 99-101, 172 n. 16 pl. 99 c; Edwards, o. c. 9, 205-206 pl. 74 fig. 43. – Fin du I^{er} s. av. J.-C. – H. (chiton) dansant sur la pointe des pieds.

12.* Delphes, Mus. 5752 + 2170. – Ducat, J./Fuchs, W., BCH 89, 1965, 15 fig. 1; Fuchs, o. c. 9, 72 n. 53; Zagdoun, M. A., FDelphes IV 6, Monuments figurés, les reliefs (1977) 99-100 n. 25 fig. 88. – Fin du II^e s. av. J.-C.; ép. d'Hadrien (Fuchs). – Trois H. dansant (fin péplos agité par le vent).

13. (= Charis, Charites 23*) Reliefs copiés sur un original perdu. Florence, Uff.; Vatican; Munich, Glypt. – Ducat/Fuchs, o. c. 12, 18 fig. 2; Edwards, o. c. 9, 777 n. 86 pl. 39. – Ep. d'Hadrien. – Groupe de trois H. (ou Charites: Harrison) qui se tiennent par les mains et avancent vers la dr. La première tient un épi de blé.

14. (= Artemis Ephesia 88* avec bibl.) Relief ornant une statue de marbre. Tripoli (Libye), Mus. Arch. 150. De Leptis Magna. – I^{er} s. ap. J.-C. – Sur le buste, autour du cou, quatre H. portant une corne d'abondance décorent le haut du vêtement.

Reliefs de terre cuite

15. (= Horai/Horae 3* avec bibl.) Reliefs architectoniques. – Campana, Antiche opere in plastica II (1842-51) pl. 31; v. Rohden/Winnefeld 89-92 fig. 179-180 pl. 57; Hanfmann II 141-142 n. 69-73. – Ep. d'Auguste, ou fin I^{er}-début II^e s. ap. J.-C. – Borbein, A. H., Campanareliefs, RM 14. Erg.-H. (1968) 189, n'identifie pas les figures comme des H.

16. (= Horai/Horae 9* avec bibl.) Vases «arétins» à reliefs. – Hanfmann II 140-141 n. 57-60; Marabini Moevs, M. T., «Penteteris e le tre Hore nella pompè di Tolomeo Filadelfo», BollArte 42, 1987, 1-36. – Début de l'ép. impériale. – Quatre H.: portant des fruits dans le rabat de son vêtement; chasseresse, avec le lagobolon et du gibier; avec une phiale et un chevreau; avec des fleurs et une couronne. Hanfmann juge difficile de préciser l'original, Furtwängler pense à une influence directe des reliefs classicisants en métal du cercle de Pasitélès, Marabini Moevs montre que ce sont les figures les plus proches des H. de la procession de Ptolémée II.

Ronde bosse

17. a) (= Horai/Horae 35) Statue de marbre. Florence, Uff. 136. – Reinach, RépStat I 217 n. 806; Hanfmann II 139 n. 48; Mansuelli, ScultUff 153 n. 124 fig. 120. – Œuvre archaïsante de la 2^e moitié du I^{er} s. ap. J.-C. – H. de l'Automne (chiton, himation) portant des fruits. – b) Statue fr. de marbre. Budapest, Mus. Beaux-Arts 4757. De Rome. – Hekler, A., Die antiken Skulpturen im ungar. Nat. Mus. (1929), 26 n. 17; Hanfmann II 139-140 n. 53. – Œuvre classicisante du I^{er} s. ap. J.-C. – Ces deux répliques font partie d'une série d'une dizaine de copies reconnaissables à l'attitude dansante des figures ou aux fleurs, guirlandes etc., qu'elles portent. Elles ont été pour la plupart trouvées en Italie et attribuées à Pasitélès et à son atelier (sur ce type, cf. Hanfmann II 139-140 n. 46-56; Schlörb, B., Timotheos [1965] 81 n. 241; Lippold, GrPl 213: le copiste romain montre une préférence pour les types féminins du IV^e s. av. J.-C. et même pour ceux, archaïsants, de la fin du V^e s., de l'atelier de Callimaque).

Mosaïque d'époque impériale

18. Pavement polychrome. Castelli (Crète), Mus. De Castelli Kissamou, villa romaine. – Markoulaki, St., «Οι Ὁρές και οι Εποχές από το Καστέλλι Κισάμου», Κρητική Έστια D 1, 1987, 33-58. – 2^e moitié du II^e s. ap. J.-C. – Les trois H. forment une ronde autour d'un autel cylindrique (elles ne font que se toucher les mains): H. (chiton, himation autour de la taille), des bandeaux multicolores et une couronne de fleurs dans les cheveux; H. vue de dos (chiton, himation, bracelet), avec une couronne de feuillage vert; H. de l'Hiver? (chiton, himation, voile) au second plan derrière l'autel. A g., un arbre.

B. Avec d'autres personnages

1. Les Horai avec Phinée

19.* (= Boreadai 7*, = Harpyai 14) Coupe chalcidienne f.n. Würzburg, Wagner-Mus. L 164. De Vulci(?). – Rumpf, ChalkVasen n. 20 pl. 40-44; Simon, FührerWüzb 84-85 pl. 19; Schefold, SB II 176 fig. 232; Vojatzki, M., Frühe Argonautenbilder (1982) 66 n. 553-559. – Vers 530 av. J.-C. – Deux H. (inscr. de lecture difficile) dont l'une tient une fleur, debout à côté du lit de Phinée.

2. Les Horai en procession conduites par Dionysos

20.* Pyxide f.n. Berlin-Ouest, Staatl. Mus. F 3989. De Béotie. – Furtwängler, BerlinVasen II 1010 n. 3989. – Vers 540 av. J.-C.

21. Procession de Ptolémée II Philadelphe. – Athen. 5, 198a-b; Price, E. E., The Grand Procession of Ptolemy Philadelphus (1983); Marabini Moevs, o. c. 16. – Quatre personnages costumés en H., portant chacun les fruits caractéristiques d'une saison, suivent le cortège dionysiaque pentétérique dédié à la mémoire des parents du roi.

Reliefs de marbre

BIBLIOGRAPHIE: Becatti, G., «Lo stile arcaistico», CrArt 6, 1941, 32-48; Edwards, o. c. 9, 171-179; Froning, Schmuckreliefs 71 n. 42; Fuchs, o. c. 9, 151-159, 172 n. 9 pl. 11b; Hanfmann I 111-113; II 137-139; Harrison, E., Agora XI, Archaic and Archaistic Sculpture (1965) 59; Hauser, F., Die neuattischen Reliefs (1889); Havelock, C. M., «Archaistic Reliefs of the Hellenistic Period», AJA 68, 1964, 55-59 pl. 22 fig. 18-19, 22; Marabini Moevs, o. c. 16; Schmidt E., Archaistische Kunst in Griechenland und Rom (1922) 92; Tiverios, M., «Archaistica II», dans Festschr. N. Himmelmann, BonnJbb 47. Beih. (1989) 393-397 pl. 62, 2; Zagdoun, M.-A., La sculpture archaïsante dans l'art hellénistique et dans l'art romain du Haut Empire (1989) 122-126: Dionysos et les H.

Type I: Louvre-Fribourg

22. a)* (= Dionysos 596 avec bibl., = Horai/Horae 1a) Paris, Louvre MA 968. – Fin de l'ép. républicaine (Fuchs, Froning, Zagdoun) d'après un original de la fin du IV^e s. av. J.-C. sous l'influence de Lysippe (Schmidt); début de l'ép. hellénistique (Harrison); 4^e quart du III^e s. (Havelock, Edwards); vers 160 av. J.-C. (Fuchs, Zagdoun) d'après des modèles de la 2^e moitié du IV^e s. (Tiverios). – Dionysos barbu (himation court, bottes montantes), le thyrses à la main, conduit les trois

Horai 23

H. conservées: le Printemps (chiton, himation long), tenant de la main dr. l'extrémité de l'himation, porte des fleurs dans le rabat ainsi formé; l'Été (chiton, himation enroulé en bourrelet), de trois quarts dos, tient deux épis de blé de la main g.; l'Automne est vêtu d'un chiton et d'un himation drapé en oblique. - b) (= Horai/Horae 1b) Relief fr. en marbre. Anc. Fribourg-en-Brigau, Univ. - Fuchs, o. c. 9, 172 n° 10 avec bibl. - Fin de l'ép. républicaine d'après un original grec. - Les figures fragmentaires des H. de l'Été, de l'Automne et de l'Hiver aident à compléter le schéma du relief 22a et à constituer le type I, Louvre-Fribourg (cf. Zagdoun pl. 40 fig. 145).

23. * (= Horai/Horae 1c) Relief très fr. Le Pirée, Mus. Arch. 2034 + 2089 + 2091. Du port du Pirée. - Fuchs, o. c. 9, 51. 187 n° 6; Harl, o. c. 29, 135 n° 7; Stephanidou-Tiveriou, Th., Neoattika (1979) 40 n° 68-70 fig. 6; Zagdoun 123. 247 n° 356; Tiverios 391-394 pl. 63. - Tout début de l'ép. d'Antonin, d'après un original créé très probablement à Athènes sous l'influence alexandrine (Tiverios). - L'H. du Printemps (chiton long, himation oblique) s'avance à grand pas vers la g., soulevant avec les mains un pan de son vêtement qui contient des fleurs. Derrière elle, deux épis de blé, attribut de l'Été (chiton long, petit himation en bourrelet) qui de sa main dr. tenait la main dr. de l'Automne - très fr., la seule H. qui tourne la tête vers l'arrière. Suit l'Hiver, en chiton et himation long. Dionysos devait figurer sur ce relief, conduisant le cortège (Tiverios 393).

24. Fr. de relief. Vatican, Mus. Chiaramonti. - Amelung, Skulptur VatMus I 545-546 n° 358 pl. 58; Tiverios 396 n. 34. - Seuls sont conservés le dos et le bras g. de l'H. de l'Été (chiton, himation en bourrelet).

Type II: Pourtalès-Gorgier

25. (= Charis, Charites 39, = Dionysos 597 avec bibl.) Varsovie, Mus. Nat., anc. Cracovie, coll. Czartoryski, de la coll. Pourtalès-Gorgier. - Copie romaine d'un original du IV^e s. av. J.-C.; vers 150 av. J.-C. (Havelock, Harrison); après la fin de l'ép. hellénistique (Zagdoun); création romaine (Schmidt). - Dionysos (chiton, himation à rabat) s'avance solennellement, la main dr. tendue en avant, la g. appuyée sur un long thyrsos. Les trois H. (deux d'entre elles en chiton et himation, la troisième en péplos archaïsant) se tiennent par les mains. Elles ne portent aucun attribut mais se distinguent par les vêtements et les gestes.

26. * Reliefs fr. du type Pourtalès-Gorgier. a) * Würzburg, Wagner-Mus. 2440. - Schmidt 92 n° 3 pl. 12, 5; Zagdoun 124. 258 n° 507. - Partie inférieure des deux dernières H. - b) Klagenfurt, Landesmus. - Schmidt 92 n° 2; Hanfmann 137 n° 27; Zagdoun 124. 238 n° 215.

Glyptique

27. Pâte de verre. Berlin, Staatl. Mus. - Hanfmann 137 n. 28; Zagdoun 121. 321 n° 103. - Trois H. se tenant par les mains, du type II.

Reliefs mixtes ou dérivés

28. Reliefs mixtes combinant des figures de types I et II. a) Base ronde de marbre. Wilton House. - Schmidt 94 pl. 11, 2-3; Fuchs 57; Zagdoun 126. 257 n° 504. - Règne de Claude. - Dionysos (type II) suivi de l'Hiver et du Printemps. - b) Base de candélabre de marbre. Rome, Villa Borghese CXVI. - Schmidt 94 n° 5; Fuchs 57; Cain, H. U., Röm. Marmorkandelaber (1985) 174 n° 73 pl. 68, 2 Beil. 6. 7; Zagdoun 126. 253 n° 440. - Début de l'ép. d'Auguste (Cain). - Sur les panneaux de la base, deux Dionysos (type II) et l'H. du Printemps (type I).

29. * Deux fr. d'un même relief. Vienne, Kunsth. Mus. 913 + 944. De l'agora d'Ephèse. - Harl, F., «Reste eines archaischen Reliefs in Epheesus in Wien», AA 88, 1973, 133-137; Edwards, o. c. 9, pl. 64; Zagdoun 126. 202. 257 n° 497. - Début de l'ép. impériale. - Sont conservées une partie de l'H. de l'Été, la tête et l'épaule de l'Hiver (de type I); l'état de conservation très fragmentaire ne permet pas de savoir si le relief reproduisait un seul type ou combinait les deux.

30. Relief fr. Tripoli, Mus. Arch. De Leptis Magna. - Traversari, G., QuadLibia 9, 1977, 93-96; Zagdoun 126. 209. 255 n° 464 pl. 41 fig. 152. - II^e s. ap. J.-C. - Sont conservés Dionysos (type I), l'H. du Printemps (type II) et un autre personnage.

3. Les Horai avec Dionysos et Pan

31. * Relief en marbre des îles. Rhodes, Mus. Arch. BE 2103. - Zagdoun 126. 248 n° 370 pl. 41 fig. 152a. - I^{er} s. av. J.-C. - Dionysos tient le thyrsos et une amphore (Zagdoun: adaptation très libre du type II); il tourne le dos à l'H. de l'Hiver, figurée de trois quarts vers la g. Pan s'avance de trois quarts vers la dr. Quel qu'en soit le modèle, la liberté dans la représentation du sujet ainsi que la présence de Pan éloignent ce monument des stéréotypes.

4. Les Horai avec Pan

32. * Relief votif de marbre. Athènes, Mus. Nat. 1449. De Mégapolis ou de Sparte. - Michaelis, A., Adl 35, 1863, 292-293 suppl. pl. L2; Dressel, H./Milchhöfer, A., AM 2, 1877, 379, 80; Svoronos 450-451 pl. 76; Pottier, B., BCH 5, 1881, 353-354; Hauser, F., «Disiecta membra neuattischer Reliefs», OeJh 6, 1903, 86-87; Fuchs, o. c. 9, 21-23. 70-71. 139; Becatti, G., o. c. 11, 80 pl. 54; Lippold, GrPl 299; Hanfmann 83. 139 n° 44; Karousou, o. c. 9, 96; Harrison, E., AJA 1977, 267; Edwards, o. c. 9, 777 n° 86 pl. 39; Jost, o. c. 7, 464 n. 3; Marabini Moevs, o. c. 16, 22 n. 155 fig. 45. - Après 323 av. J.-C.: type conçu par Céphissodote le Jeune. - A l'entrée d'une grotte, Pan assis sur un rocher joue de la syrinx. Trois H. (ou Nymphes) viennent presque en dansant vers lui. Elles sont vêtues d'un chiton et enveloppées dans leur himation; la première à g. porte des épis de blé et un pavot.

5. Les Horai avec Thémis, Zeus et Héra

33. Statues de marbre disparues. Olympie, temple d'Héra. - Paus. 5, 17, 1. Œuvre de Smilis. - VI^e s. av. J.-C. - Les trois H. étaient représentées assises sur des trônes.

II. Les Horai dans un contexte de naissance/anodos et d'enfance

A. Naissance/apparition-anodos

1. Naissance et enfance d'Artémis

34. * (= Apollon 987, = Artemis 1260/1262) Plaque de marbre de la frise du scanae frons. Hiérapolis, Mus. T 471. Du théâtre de Hiérapolis (Phrygie). - D'Andria, Fr./Ritti, T., Le sculpture del Teatro: i rilievi con i cidi di Apollo e Artemide. Hierapolis, scavi e ricerche II (1985) 102 pl. 29, 1. 2. - Fin du II^e s. ap. J.-C., influence hellénistique. - Les H. (ou les Moires) assistent à l'éducation d'Artémis: l'Été (chiton, himation) porte des épis et des pavots; l'Automne tient une grappe de raisin et retourne la tête; l'Hiver repose la tête sur sa main g. pliée, et de la dr. verse de l'eau avec une cruche; à g. se trouve vraisemblablement le Printemps, à côté de Zeus qui tient Artémis. Les vêtements des H. ne correspondent pas aux saisons, l'Hiver ayant le plus léger, mais les attributs sont canoniques.

2. Naissance d'Aphrodite et anodos de Perséphone/Coré

35. * (= Demeter 332 avec bibl.) Pinax attique à f.r. Athènes, Mus. Nat. Acr. 1051. De l'Acropole d'Athènes. - ARV^a 1341: P. de Mikion (Euemporos?); Add^a 367; Graef/Langlotz II pl. 81 n° 1051; Hanfmann II 136 n° 7. - Vers la fin du V^e s. av. J.-C. - Perséphone/Coré émerge des Enfers assistée d'une H.(?).

36. (= Aphrodite 1170 avec bibl.) Corniche d'autel, dite «trône Ludovisi». Rome, Mus. Naz. Rom. 8570. - Paribeni, E., EAA VII (1966) 1020-1022 s. v. «Trono Ludovisi». - 470-460 av. J.-C. - Le plus généralement acceptée comme une naissance d'Aphrodite; selon une autre hypothèse, il s'agirait de Perséphone émergeant des Enfers, avec les deux H. qui l'accueillent.

B. Les Horai avec des enfants

1. Aétion

37. (= Aétion 1*, = Dike 17 avec bibl.) Plusieurs éléments fr. d'un groupe statuaire de marbre. Vienne, Kunsth. Mus. I 344 + I 696. De Samothrace, devant la façade nord du Hiéron en 1873. - Conze, A./Hauser, A./Niemann, G., Archäol. Untersuchungen auf Samothrake (1875) pl. 37-38. 41; Schober, A., «Der neue Tempel von Samothrake», OeJh 29, 1935, 8-10 fig. 4. 16; Lehmann, Ph., The Hieron I. Samothrace (1969) 268-272. 289-300 fig. 231. 233. 256; Oberleitner, W., et al., Funde aus Ephesos und Samothrake. Kat. der Antikenslg. II (1978) 135-137 n° 241. 244 fig. 122. - 150-125 av. J.-C. - Du groupe des trois H. auxquelles Diké confie le petit Aétion, il reste une figure féminine assise sur un rocher (chiton, himation) et, d'une deuxième statue, le torse et la jambe dr. drapés. Pour la reconstitution de l'ensemble, cf. Kat. Ephesos Museum fig. 120 n° IV-VI (d'après Lehmann).

2. Képhalos

38. (= Aglauros 36, = Aphrodite 1261, = Eukleia 13 avec bibl., = Eunomia 1*) Lécythe attique f. bl. Kansas City, Nelson Gall. 31.80. D'Apéro, Mace-rata(?). - ARV^a 1248, 8: P. d'Érétie; Add^a 353; Jucker, I., «Kephalos im Göttergarten», dans Festschr. H. Bloesch, AntK 9. Beih. (1973) 63-68 pl. 20. - 430-420 av. J.-C. - L'H. Antheia (inscr.) derrière Peitho.

III. Les Horai parmi les dieux olympiens dans une scène mythologique

A. Les Horai présentes dans une assemblée divine

39. Hydrie attique f. n. Berlin-Ouest, Staatl. Mus. F 1899. De Vulci. - ABV 329, 1: P. de Berlin 1899 (proche du P. de Madrid); Furtwängler, Berlin Vasen I n° 1899; Neugebauer, Führer Berlin II 79-80. - 530-520 av. J.-C. - Zeus et Athéna assistés des deux H.; d'autres déesses sont figurées, ainsi qu'Hermès et Dionysos.

40. (= Dodekathēoi 4b*, = Demeter 463* avec bibl. et une identification différente) Statues de marbre. Londres, BM. Figures G, E, F du fronton est du Parthénon. - Berger, E., Die Geburt der Athena (1974) 32-33 n. 25. - 438/7-433/2 av. J.-C. - Les trois H. attiques (Auxō, Thallō, Karpō) parmi les dieux au moment de la naissance d'Athéna.

B. Jugement de Pâris (→ Paridis iudicium)

41. Stamnos attique f. r. Detroit, Inst. of Arts 1924.13. - ARV^a 291, 28; Tyszkiewicz P.; Clairmont, C., Das Parisurteil in der antiken Kunst (1951) pl. 31-32; Philippaki, B., The Attic Stamnos (1967) 36 pl. 23. - Vers 480 av. J.-C. - A: Aphrodite, Héra, Hermès; B: Aphrodite tenant le miroir, flanquée de deux H. (chiton, himation).

C. Accueil d'Héraclès dans l'Olympe

42. * (= Herakles 2859 avec bibl. et renvois, = Hestia 8*) Coupe attique f. r. Berlin-Ouest, Staatl. Mus. F 2278. De Vulci. - ARV^a 21, 1; 1620: P. de Sosias; Para 321; Add^a 154; CVA 2 pl. 49-50; Karousos, C., JHS 71, 1951, 100; Hanfmann 135 n° 6; Knell, H., Die Darstellungen der Göttersammlung (1965) 65-68; GGK, Führer Berlin 136-137; Simon/Hirmer, Vasen 102 fig. 117-119; Tiverios, M., ArchEph 1977, 3 pl. 3a; Marabini Moevs, o. c. 16, 23 n. 162. - Vers 500 av. J.-C. - Parmi les dieux assemblés pour la réception d'Héraclès dans l'Olympe, les trois H. (inscr. HOPAI) apportent les fruits de l'automne: un rameau de vigne, des branches avec des fruits et un fruit (Tiverios [Bibl. I B 2] 392).

43. (= Athena 437 avec bibl., = Hera 473 avec bibl., = Herakles 2870 avec bibl. et renvois) Cratère en cloche attique f. r. Rome, Villa Giulia 2382. De Falterii. - ARV^a 1339, 4: proche du P. de Talos; Add^a

367. – Fin du V^e s. av. J.-C. – Athéna présentant Héraclès à Zeus et à Héra accompagnée de deux H.(?) ; Aphrodite et Eros ; Niké attend, tenant une couronne.

D. Noces de Thétis et Pélée

44.* (= Hera 419* avec bibl. et renvois) Dinos attique f.n. Londres, BM 1971.11-1.1. – Para 19, 16 bis: Sophilos; Add^a 10-11; Bakir, G., Sophilos (1981) 64 pl. 1-4; Tiverios [Bibl. I B 2] 396 n. 40. – 580 av. J.-C. – Les trois H. (inscr. probablement dans la lacune) à côté du char de Zeus et d'Héra lors du mariage de Thétis et Pélée.

45.* (= Dionysos 496 avec renvois, = Hera 421 avec renvois) Cratère à volutes attique f.n., dit «Vase François». Florence, Mus. Arch. 4209. De Chiusi. – ABV 76, 1; Kleitias; Para 29-30; Add^a 21; Hanfmann 135 n° 1; Cristofani, M., et al., Il vaso François, BollArte ser. spec. I (1981) 67. 132. 202 fig. 81. – 580-560 av. J.-C. – Dans la procession lors du mariage de Thétis et Pélée, les trois H. (inscr.) suivent Dionysos.

46. (= Athena/Minerva 397, = Horai/Horae 6*) Sarcophage en marbre. Rome, Villa Albani. De Rome, tombeau de Caecilia Metella. – Helbig⁴ IV 261-263 n° 3291; Simon, E., «Zum Hochzeitsarkophag mit Peleus und Thetis in der Villa Albani», RM 60-61, 1953-54, 211-223; Himmelmänn, N., AnnPisa ser. 3, 4/1, 1974, 146-147 pl. 5-6. – Ep. d'Hadrien. – Unique représentation des noces de Thétis et Pélée sur un sarcophage romain; le cortège nuptial comprend Minerve et Vulcain (= Vulcanus). Les H. des quatre saisons occupent le centre de la composition: l'Hiver (manteau, bottes montantes) porte le gibier de la chasse saisonnière; l'Automne tient de la main g. une corbeille pleine de fruits, de la dr. un petit bouc; l'Été tient une guirlande de fleurs; le Printemps porte dans le rabat de son vêtement de petits fruits ronds.

E. Mission de Triptolème

47. (= Aphrodite 1368*, = Demeter 374 avec bibl.) Cratère à volutes apulien f.r. Leningrad, Ermitage 586 (St 350). De Ruvo. – RVAp I 193, 6: P. de l'Ilioupersis; Stephani, L., CRPetersb 1862, pl. 4; Cook, Zeus I pl. 19; Hanfmann I 136 n° 10; RdA 10, 1986, 31-33 fig. 1. – 370-360 av. J.-C. – Déméter fait une libation pendant que Triptolème s'en va. Deux H. (Ἥσπαι) à g. de la scène, qui se déroule au bord du Nil.

48.* (= Adonis 1 avec bibl., = Demeter 373) Cratère à volutes apulien f.r. Vatican, Mus. Greg. 17162. Des environs de Bari. – RVAp I 408, 60 pl. 144, 1-2: entre le P. de l'Ilioupersis et le P. de Lycurgue; Helbig⁴ I 709 n° 990 (Speier, H.); Hanfmann I 136 n° 12. – Vers 350 av. J.-C. – Préparatifs du départ de Triptolème: à dr. une H. nourrit l'un des serpents du char, une autre tient une branche dans la main.

49. (= Apollon 934) Cratère en cloche apulien f.r. Naples, Mus. Naz. 81946 (H 690). D'Armento. – RVAp I 423, 51 pl. 155, 4: proche du P. de Lycurgue –

Berlin Ganymede Gr.; Heydemann, Neapel n° 690; Macchiolo, V., «I ceramisti di Armento in Lucania», Jdl 27, 1912, 288 fig. 12a; Trendall, A. D., dans Festschr. F. Brommer (1977) 284 n° 10 pl. 75, 4; Hanfmann I 136 n° 11. – Vers 350 av. J.-C. – Déméter, Hermès et deux H. assistent au départ de Triptolème; registre supérieur: Apollon, Aphrodite et Eros.

IV. Les Horai/Saisons dans le calendrier

50.* (= Astra 95 avec bibl.) Frise de marbre. Athènes, calendrier de l'église d'Agios Eleuthérios (Petite Métropole, Panagia Gorgoépikoos). – Svoronos I 23 n. 1; Steiner, P., «Antike Skulpturen an der Panagia Gorgoépikoos», AM 31, 1906, 325-341; Coche de la Ferté, E., EAAIV 1039-1047 s. v. «Mesi e Calendario»; Simon, E., «Die attischen Monatsbilder», Jdl 80, 1965, 113-115; Papadaki, Προσωποποιήσεις 109-110; Michaelides, D., RDAC 1986, 219. – Ep. hellénistique tardive. – L'ensemble conservé de cette frise illustre les saisons, les mois (→ Menses), les fêtes officielles, les occupations des gens à chaque saison, ainsi que les signes du Zodiaque (→ Zodiacus). L'unique saison représentée par une figure féminine est l'Automne (Opore): ailée, en chiton ceinturé, elle court vers la dr. en tenant un plateau plein de fruits.

V. Identification erronée

51. (= Bileithyia 30 avec bibl.) Vase attique fr. f.n. (Beazley: skyphos ou forme de canthare). Athènes, Mus. Nat. Acr. 597. De l'Acropole d'Athènes. – ABV 77, 3; Kleitias; Graef/Langlotz I 66 n° 597 a-b pl. 24; Hanfmann II 136 n° 2. – Vers 540 av. J.-C. – Les trois Moires (inscr. MOI) assistent à la naissance d'Athéna en présence d'Hermès. Hanfmann les identifie aux H.

COMMENTAIRE

Les H. ont probablement été vénérées depuis la plus haute antiquité (Hanfmann I 78-79) comme esprits, forces divines, protectrices de la végétation (cf. Persson, A. W., The Religion of Greece in Prehistoric Times [1942] 32-34). Pour un autre groupe, celui des Charites, E. Harrison suppose une représentation datée déjà de l'ép. mycénienne (→ Charis, Charites 8* et Commentaire): elles seraient figurées comme des danseuses escortant le dieu de la végétation.

Le fait d'être représentées en groupe prive les H. de toute caractéristique personnelle, tout au moins jusqu'à l'ép. classique. Elles sont, dans la littérature et dans l'art, des figures complémentaires, des comparées, jamais des protagonistes. Comme telles, elles assistent à des assemblées des dieux ainsi qu'aux événements mythologiques qui ont lieu dans l'Olympe ou sur terre en présence des Olympiens.

Nous pouvons nous faire une très vague idée des premières représentations des H. dans l'antiquité; il

reste néanmoins difficile de préciser d'une part si elles se distinguaient entre elles, et d'autre part si le spectateur pouvait faire la distinction entre leur groupe et des triades analogues, les Charites, les Moires ou les Nymphes.

Au cours du VI^e s. av. J.-C., les sources littéraires mentionnent une représentation des H., (33: Paus. 5, 17, 1), leurs statues, dues à Smilis d'Egine, assises sur des trônes dans l'Héraion d'Olympie à côté de leur mère Thémis, d'Héra et de Zeus. Nous pouvons nous en faire une idée d'après les statues assises des prêtres Branchides de Milet.

Une innovation iconographique, datée vers la fin du VI^e s., est due au sculpteur athénien Endoios: il représente à Erythrées d'Ionie (1) les H. debout, en suivant très probablement le type des Korai archaïques (→ 8) ou plus précisément celui des Caryatides, comme c'est aussi le cas pour 2.

Contrairement aux Charites et aux Nymphes qui sont représentées se tenant par les mains, «en danse cyclique», les H. sont d'abord figurées l'une à côté de l'autre (8. 44-45), parfois couvertes d'un même manteau – détail indiquant l'affection qui les unit (Buchholz, H. G., Jdl 102, 1987, 1-55) –, ou de façon paratactique, dans une procession (19. 22a-32) où elles prennent l'attitude de la danse (cf. Xen. symp. 7, 5: σχήματα ἐν οἷς Χάριτες τε καὶ Ὀραι καὶ Νύμφαι γράφονται): La mosaïque 18 illustre cette façon inconnue par ailleurs, de représenter les H. C'est parce qu'elles ont l'habitude de danser tout au long de l'année qu'elles sont représentées sur les reliefs de bases (9-12), de même que sur les plaques où elles s'avancent en procession (21-32) dans cette attitude.

Les H. sont de jolies jeunes femmes, aux vêtements amples et fins, ornés, au plissé décoratif (à la manière de Callimaque). Dans l'iconographie, elles empruntent des types d'Aphrodite, surtout sur les vases peints (41-42. 44-49). A l'exception de quelques vases (19. 42. 44. 45. 47) où une inscription révèle leur identité, l'interprétation s'appuie sur des témoignages iconographiques confirmés par la tradition littéraire. Une seule fois (38) l'H. ANΘΕΙΑ est indiquée par son nom.

Il reste tout de même parfois difficile de distinguer s'il s'agit des Charites, des Moires (51: seule l'inscr. MOI les identifie), ou des Nymphes (32).

Sur des monuments non conservés (1-2. 4. 6), les H. formaient un pendant iconographique aux trois Charites dans des représentations figurant Zeus (4), leur père et le dieu du temps, Héra (6), Athéna (1), Apollon (2). D'autre part elles coexistent avec les Moires (5) ou – plus rarement – avec les Muses (3).

L'association des H. avec les Muses sur 3, avec Apollon citharède et Pan joueur de syrinx sur 7, suggère leur relation avec les arts, qui relèvent habituellement des Muses et des Charites (cf. Hanfmann I 81).

Une interprétation analogue peut expliquer la présence des H. aux côtés des déesses éleusiniennes lors du départ de Triptolème (47-49): leur qualité de Génies de la végétation, du changement du temps, est sous-entendue.

En tant que divinités bienfaisantes, elles font partie

des processions nuptiales (44-46); la tradition littéraire les veut d'ailleurs présentes à plusieurs mariages divins. Dans le même domaine, elles sont chargées de l'éducation des petits enfants (37-38), qui revient en principe aux Nymphes. Leur présence indique la fin des peines de Phinée après les persécutions des Harpyies (19), et rappelle la légende d'après laquelle ce sont les H. qui lui apportent enfin sa nourriture.

Protectrices de la beauté juvénile, elles accompagnent Aphrodite (41) ou l'aident à émerger des flots – thème bien connu de la tradition littéraire: est-ce le sujet représenté sur le trône Ludovisi? (36). Elles dansent avec la déesse et les Charites sur l'Olympe. Elles parent aussi Pandora de fleurs (Hes. erg. 74-75), scène qui n'est pas attestée dans l'imagerie.

Leur séjour dans l'Olympe est également représenté: elles sont figurées en compagnie des Olympiens (39-40), surtout lors d'un événement important (42-43). Conformément à la tradition littéraire l'iconographie les montre en relation étroite avec Zeus, Héra, Athéna, Apollon, ainsi qu'avec les divinités chthoniennes et le héros Hyakinthos (3) dont elles ornent l'autel.

Hors du contexte mythologique, leurs représentations les plus fréquentes suivent l'iconographie des danseuses (9-12) ou celle d'une procession: les H. sont conduites par Dionysos ou par Pan (20-32). Cette imagerie s'inspire directement des reliefs des Nymphes (cf. Edwards, o. c. 9) et se développe suivant l'évolution des figures de danseuses (atelier de Callimaque, avec ses Ménades et ses danseuses à kalathiskos: cf. Tiverios, M., «Saltantes Lacaenae», ArchEph 1981, 25-37; → 9-11). Le Pan de 32 est lui aussi emprunté aux reliefs des Nymphes, avec lesquelles il reçoit en commun un culte.

C'est comme danseuses que les H. incarnent les Génies des saisons (16-17a-b). Au début leurs caractéristiques personnelles ne sont pas clairement rendues; par la suite elles se distinguent par l'âge, la plus jeune étant celle du Printemps, la plus âgée celle de l'Hiver. L'Été porte le vêtement le plus léger et le plus fin: son himation enroulé passe comme une bande d'une main à l'autre.

L'Hiver est enveloppé dans un lourd himation, qui couvre même la tête: sur 9 la danseuse est drapée de la même façon, ce qui impliquerait une H. de l'Hiver. L'H. de l'Automne porte un vêtement moins léger que celle du Printemps. L'évolution des figures, ainsi que leur relation iconographique, sont très claires sur les reliefs néoattiques (22a-23) et transparaissent sur les statues classicisantes (17a-b). En plus des vêtements, de l'allure, de l'âge, leurs attributs aussi les distinguent les unes des autres. Le Printemps porte les fleurs, l'Été l'épi de blé, l'automne des fruits, l'Hiver le lagobolon et le gibier, ce qui fait de lui une H. chasseresse (16).

Les H. étant dans la littérature et dans l'art d'abord au nombre de trois (Hanfmann I 78-79), la typologie de leurs représentations suit l'iconographie plus commune des Nymphes. Cette division correspond d'une part aux trois étapes de la végétation, la naissance, la croissance et la mort (cf. les noms Thallô, Auxô et Carpo des H. attiques: Hanfmann, l. c.), et d'autre part

367. – Fin du V^e s. av. J.-C. – Athéna présentant Héraclès à Zeus et à Héra accompagnée de deux H. (?); Aphrodite et Eros; Niké attend, tenant une couronne.

D. Noces de Thétis et Pélée

44.* (= Hera 419* avec bibl. et renvois) Dinos attique f.n. Londres, BM 1971.11.1.1. – Para 19, 16 bis: Sophilos; Add² 10-11; Bakir, G., Sophilos (1981) 64 pl. 1-4; Tiverios [Bibl. I B 2] 396 n. 40. – 580 av. J.-C. – Les trois H. (inscr. probablement dans la lacune) à côté du char de Zeus et d'Héra lors du mariage de Thétis et Pélée.

45.* (= Dionysos 496 avec renvois, = Hera 421 avec renvois) Cratère à volutes attique f.n., dit «Vase François». Florence, Mus. Arch. 4209. De Chiusi. – ABV 76, 1; Kleitias; Para 29-30; Add² 21; Hanfmann 135 n° 1; Cristofani, M., et al., Il vaso François, BollArte ser. spec. I (1981) 67. 132. 202 fig. 81. – 580-560 av. J.-C. – Dans la procession lors du mariage de Thétis et Pélée, les trois H. (inscr.) suivent Dionysos.

46. (= Athena/Minerva 397, = Horai/Horae 6*) Sarcophage en marbre. Rome, Villa Albani. De Rome, tombeau de Caecilia Metella. – Helbig⁴ IV 261-263 n° 3291; Simon, E., «Zum Hochzeitsarkophag mit Peleus und Thetis in der Villa Albani», RM 60-61, 1953-54, 211-223; Himmelmann, N., AnnPisa ser. 3, 4/1, 1974, 146-147 pl. 5-6. – Ep. d'Hadrien. – Unique représentation des noces de Thétis et Pélée sur un sarcophage romain; le cortège nuptial comprend Minerve et Vulcain (→ Vulcanus). Les H. des quatre saisons occupent le centre de la composition: l'Hiver (manteau, bottes montantes) porte le gibier de la chasse saisonnière; l'Automne tient de la main g. une corbeille pleine de fruits, de la dr. un petit bouc; l'Été tient une guirlande de fleurs; le Printemps porte dans le rabat de son vêtement de petits fruits ronds.

E. Mission de Triptolème

47. (= Aphrodite 1368*, = Demeter 374 avec bibl.) Cratère à volutes apulien f.r. Leningrad, Ermitage 586 (St 350). De Ruvo. – RVAp I 193, 6: P. de l'Ilioupersis; Stephani, L., CRPetersb 1862, pl. 4; Cook, Zeus I pl. 19; Hanfmann I 136 n° 10; RAA 10, 1986, 31-33 fig. 1. – 370-360 av. J.-C. – Déméter fait une libation pendant que Triptolème s'en va. Deux H. (Ἥσπαι) à g. de la scène, qui se déroule au bord du Nil.

48.* (= Adonis 1 avec bibl., = Demeter 373) Cratère à volutes apulien f.r. Vatican, Mus. Greg. 17162. Des environs de Bari. – RVAp I 408, 60 pl. 144, 1-2: entre le P. de l'Ilioupersis et le P. de Lycurgue; Helbig⁴ I 709 n° 990 (Speier, H.); Hanfmann I 136 n° 12. – Vers 350 av. J.-C. – Préparatifs du départ de Triptolème: à dr. une H. nourrit l'un des serpents du char, une autre tient une branche dans la main.

49. (= Apollon 934) Cratère en cloche apulien f.r. Naples, Mus. Naz. 81946 (H 690). D'Armento. – RVAp I 423, 51 pl. 155, 4: proche du P. de Lycurgue –

Berlin Ganymede Gr.; Heydemann, Neapel n° 690; Macchioro, V., «I ceramisti di Armento in Lucania», Jdl 27, 1912, 288 fig. 12a; Trendall, A. D., dans Festschr. F. Brommer (1977) 284 n° 10 pl. 75, 4; Hanfmann I 136 n° 11. – Vers 350 av. J.-C. – Déméter, Hermès et deux H. assistent au départ de Triptolème; registre supérieur: Apollon, Aphrodite et Eros.

IV. Les Horai/Saisons dans le calendrier

50.* (= Astra 95 avec bibl.) Frise de marbre. Athènes, calendrier de l'église d'Agios Eleuthérios (Petite Métropole, Panagia Gorgoepikoos). – Svoronos I 23 n. 1; Steiner, P., «Antike Skulpturen an der Panagia Gorgoepikoos», AM 31, 1906, 325-341; Coche de la Ferté, E., EAAIV 1039-1047 s. v. «Mesi e Calendario»; Simon, E., «Die attischen Monatsbilder», Jdl 80, 1965, 113-115; Papadaki, Προσωποποιήσις 109-110; Michaelides, D., RDAC 1986, 219. – Ep. hellénistique tardive. – L'ensemble conservé de cette frise illustre les saisons, les mois (→ Menses), les fêtes officielles, les occupations des gens à chaque saison, ainsi que les signes du Zodiaque (→ Zodiacus). L'unique saison représentée par une figure féminine est l'Automne (Opore): ailée, en chiton ceinturé, elle court vers la dr. en tenant un plateau plein de fruits.

V. Identification erronée

51. (= Bileithyia 30 avec bibl.) Vase attique fr. f.n. (Beazley: skyphos ou forme de canthare). Athènes, Mus. Nat. Acr. 597. De l'Acropole d'Athènes. – ABV 77, 3; Kleitias; Graef/Langlotz I 66 n° 597 a-b pl. 24; Hanfmann II 136 n° 2. – Vers 540 av. J.-C. – Les trois Moires (inscr. MOI) assistent à la naissance d'Athéna en présence d'Hermès. Hanfmann les identifie aux H.

COMMENTAIRE

Les H. ont probablement été vénérées depuis la plus haute antiquité (Hanfmann I 78-79) comme esprits, forces divines, protectrices de la végétation (cf. Persson, A. W., The Religion of Greece in Prehistoric Times [1942] 32-34). Pour un autre groupe, celui des Charites, E. Harrison suppose une représentation datée déjà de l'ép. mycénienne (→ Charis, Charites 8* et Commentaire): elles seraient figurées comme des danseuses escortant le dieu de la végétation.

Le fait d'être représentées en groupe prive les H. de toute caractéristique personnelle, tout au moins jusqu'à l'ép. classique. Elles sont, dans la littérature et dans l'art, des figures complémentaires, des comparses, jamais des protagonistes. Comme telles, elles assistent à des assemblées des dieux ainsi qu'aux événements mythologiques qui ont lieu dans l'Olympe ou sur terre en présence des Olympiens.

Nous pouvons nous faire une très vague idée des premières représentations des H. dans l'antiquité; il

reste néanmoins difficile de préciser d'une part si elles se distinguaient entre elles, et d'autre part si le spectateur pouvait faire la distinction entre leur groupe et des triades analogues, les Charites, les Moires ou les Nymphes.

Au cours du VI^e s. av. J.-C., les sources littéraires mentionnent une représentation des H., (33: Paus. 5, 17, 1), leurs statues, dues à Smilis d'Egine, assises sur des trônes dans l'Héraion d'Olympie à côté de leur mère Thémis, d'Héra et de Zeus. Nous pouvons nous en faire une idée d'après les statues assises des prêtres Branchides de Milet.

Une innovation iconographique, datée vers la fin du VI^e s., est due au sculpteur athénien Endoios: il représente à Erythrées d'Ionie (1) les H. debout, en suivant très probablement le type des Korai archaïques (→ 8) ou plus précisément celui des Caryatides, comme c'est aussi le cas pour 2.

Contrairement aux Charites et aux Nymphes qui sont représentées se tenant par les mains, «en danse cyclique», les H. sont d'abord figurées l'une à côté de l'autre (8. 44-45), parfois couvertes d'un même manteau – détail indiquant l'affection qui les unit (Buchholz, H. G., Jdl 102, 1987, 1-55) –, ou de façon paratactique, dans une procession (19. 22a-32) où elles prennent l'attitude de la danse (cf. Xen. symp. 7, 5: σχήματα ἐν οἷς Χάριτες τε καὶ Ὅραι καὶ Νύμφαι γράφονται): La mosaïque 18 illustre cette façon inconnue par ailleurs, de représenter les H. C'est parce qu'elles ont l'habitude de danser tout au long de l'année qu'elles sont représentées sur les reliefs de bases (9-12), de même que sur les plaques où elles s'avancent en procession (21-32) dans cette attitude.

Les H. sont de jolies jeunes femmes, aux vêtements amples et fins, ornés, au plissé décoratif (à la manière de Callimaque). Dans l'iconographie, elles empruntent des types d'Aphrodite, surtout sur les vases peints (41-42. 44-49). A l'exception de quelques vases (19. 42. 44. 45. 47) où une inscription révèle leur identité, l'interprétation s'appuie sur des témoignages iconographiques confirmés par la tradition littéraire. Une seule fois (38) l'H. ANΘΕΙΑ est indiquée par son nom.

Il reste tout de même parfois difficile de distinguer s'il s'agit des Charites, des Moires (51: seule l'inscr. MOI. les identifie), ou des Nymphes (32).

Sur des monuments non conservés (1-2. 4. 6), les H. formaient un pendant iconographique aux trois Charites dans des représentations figurant Zeus (4), leur père et le dieu du temps, Héra (6), Athéna (1), Apollon (2). D'autre part elles coexistent avec les Moires (5) ou – plus rarement – avec les Muses (3).

L'association des H. avec les Muses sur 3, avec Apollon citharède et Pan joueur de syrinx sur 7, suggère leur relation avec les arts, qui relèvent habituellement des Muses et des Charites (cf. Hanfmann I 81).

Une interprétation analogue peut expliquer la présence des H. aux côtés des déesses éleusiniennes lors du départ de Triptolème (47-49): leur qualité de Génies de la végétation, du changement du temps, est sous-entendue.

En tant que divinités bienfaisantes, elles font partie

des processions nuptiales (44-46); la tradition littéraire les veut d'ailleurs présentes à plusieurs mariages divins. Dans le même domaine, elles sont chargées de l'éducation des petits enfants (37-38), qui revient en principe aux Nymphes. Leur présence indique la fin des peines de Phinée après les persécutions des Harpyies (19), et rappelle la légende d'après laquelle ce sont les H. qui lui apportent enfin sa nourriture.

Protectrices de la beauté juvénile, elles accompagnent Aphrodite (41) ou l'aident à émerger des flots – thème bien connu de la tradition littéraire: est-ce le sujet représenté sur le trône Ludovisi? (36). Elles dansent avec la déesse et les Charites sur l'Olympe. Elles parent aussi Pandora de fleurs (Hes. erg. 74-75), scène qui n'est pas attestée dans l'imagerie.

Leur séjour dans l'Olympe est également représenté: elles sont figurées en compagnie des Olympiens (39-40), surtout lors d'un événement important (42-43). Conformément à la tradition littéraire l'iconographie les montre en relation étroite avec Zeus, Héra, Athéna, Apollon, ainsi qu'avec les divinités chthoniennes et le héros Hyakinthos (3) dont elles ornent l'autel.

Hors du contexte mythologique, leurs représentations les plus fréquentes suivent l'iconographie des danseuses (9-12) ou celle d'une procession: les H. sont conduites par Dionysos ou par Pan (20-32). Cette imagerie s'inspire directement des reliefs des Nymphes (cf. Edwards, o. c. 9) et se développe suivant l'évolution des figures de danseuses (atelier de Callimaque, avec ses Ménades et ses danseuses à kalathiskos: cf. Tiverios, M., «Saltantes Lacaenae», ArchEph 1981, 25-37; → 9-11). Le Pan de 32 est lui aussi emprunté aux reliefs des Nymphes, avec lesquelles il reçoit en commun un culte.

C'est comme danseuses que les H. incarnent les Génies des saisons (16-17a-b). Au début leurs caractéristiques personnelles ne sont pas clairement rendues; par la suite elles se distinguent par l'âge, la plus jeune étant celle du Printemps, la plus âgée celle de l'Hiver. L'Été porte le vêtement le plus léger et le plus fin: son himation enroulé passe comme une bande d'une main à l'autre.

L'Hiver est enveloppé dans un lourd himation, qui couvre même la tête: sur 9 la danseuse est drapée de la même façon, ce qui impliquerait une H. de l'Hiver. L'H. de l'Automne porte un vêtement moins léger que celle du Printemps. L'évolution des figures, ainsi que leur relation iconographique, sont très claires sur les reliefs néoattiques (22a-23) et transparaissent sur les statues classicisantes (17a-b). En plus des vêtements, de l'allure, de l'âge, leurs attributs aussi les distinguent les unes des autres. Le Printemps porte les fleurs, l'Été l'épi de blé, l'automne des fruits, l'Hiver le lagobolon et le gibier, ce qui fait de lui une H. chasseresse (16).

Les H. étant dans la littérature et dans l'art d'abord au nombre de trois (Hanfmann I 78-79), la typologie de leurs représentations suit l'iconographie plus commune des Nymphes. Cette division correspond d'une part aux trois étapes de la végétation, la naissance, la croissance et la mort (cf. les noms Thallô, Auxô et Carpô des H. attiques: Hanfmann, l. c.), et d'autre part aux saisons du calendrier, compte tenu du fait que l'Été et l'Automne sont personnifiés en une seule et même H. (12-13, où elles ne portent pas d'attributs: seule l'H. conduisant le cortège sur 13 porte un épi de blé).

Dès l'ép. hellénistique l'iconographie des H. s'adapte au calendrier et à la division de l'année en quatre saisons; c'est lors de la fête célébrée par Ptolémée II en l'honneur de la Pentétéride (21) que fut officiellement adopté dans l'iconographie le type de la procession en file de quatre saisons (Marabini Moevs, o. c. 16, Tiverios: → 22a).

A une époque plus tardive des Génies masculins (Amorini, putti: cf. en général → Kairoi/Tempora anni) viennent s'ajouter aux figures féminines des saisons.

En tant que divinités du changement de temps, les H. ont, d'abord dans la littérature puis dans l'art, un rapport très étroit avec la déesse de l'agriculture Déméter ainsi qu'avec sa fille Coré, dont le retour du royaume de Hadès/Pluton coïncide avec la floraison, la végétation. De même leur relation avec Dionysos dans la littérature et l'art (20-31) ainsi que dans le culte est très importante. Il est - si l'on met à part Pan (32) et Zeus (44) - le compagnon par excellence de leur cortège.

VASSILIKI MACHAIRA

HORAE

(Ἥραι, Horae) Roman version of the Greek Horae, on whom they are exactly modelled. Daughters of → Zeus and → Themis, and sisters of the → Moirai, although rare late sources make them daughters of → Helios and → Selene. One of them, whose name is not specified, had a son by → Zephyros, named Karpōs. Because of their direct derivation from Greek prototypes, they almost appear in threes and are related to some classical divinities, above all to → Dionysos and → Hermes.

LITERARY SOURCES: The extant Roman literary sources referring to the Horae inevitably repeat themes current in the Greek. Thus, the three sisters are the guardians of Olympus (Ov. fast. 1, 125; Paus. 5, 11, 7; Q. Smyrn. 2, 594-602; Nonn. Dion. 2, 176; Etym. m. s. v. Ἥραι), are servants of Helios (Ov. met. 2, 118; Val. Fl. 4, 92; Stat. Theb. 3, 410) and of Hera (Paus. 2, 17, 4; Q. Smyrn. 10, 334-342), take part in the nourishment and nursing of the gods when children (Philost. im. 1, 26), especially of Dionysos (Nonn. Dion. 9, 11-12); attend the marriages of gods (Moschos 2, 164; Apul. met. 6, 24; Nonn. Dion. 8, 5) and take care of the food set on their table (Q. Smyrn. 4, 134-136). They are young and beautiful (Q. Smyrn. 1, 50-51; 4, 142; Pollux 8, 106; Anth. Pal. 5, 70; Etym. m. s. v. Ἥραι), with rose coloured skin (Nonn. Dion. 11, 487; 47, 90), they protect law and order (Diod. 5, 73), help child-birth (Nonn. Dion. 3, 381-382; 9, 12-15; 48, 801); they announce the future (Nonn. Dion. 7, 107; 9, 13) and recall the past (Paus. 3, 19, 4-5). They live in Aether (Nonn. Dion. 2, 176) enjoying their powers (Q. Smyrn. 2, 603; Nonn. Dion. 2, 176) as goddesses (Philoch., FGH 328 F 173; they receive offerings) and as their father Zeus' representatives (Paus. 5, 11, 7; Diod. 5, 72, 5); hence they distribute dew (Paus. 9, 35, 2) and the fruit of their garden (Ov. fast. 5, 215-218). For their appearance we know that they wore long and undulating garments (Ov. fast. 5, 217; Nonn. Dion. 11, 498-499). They move quickly and silently because they have wings (Philost. im. 2, 34; Nonn. Dion. 7, 107) and can walk on tiptoe over ears of corn without bending them (Philost. im. 2, 34). Their number, when it is mentioned, is normally three (Paus. 5, 11, 7), although the figure can vary (Artemidoros 2, 34); Artemidoros says that the difference between Moirai, Horae, and Nymphs is that the first are dressed, the second naked and the third bathers (o. c. 2, 44). Other texts already mention four Horae; as in the description of Athen. 5, 198b, who refers to Ptolemy's Procession and cites among the various attendants four Horai, who are carrying their corresponding fruits (καρπός).

This record is the first in which it is possible to identify the four Seasons through their respective attributes. The idea will develop in Roman Imperial times. Thus Ovid, besides mentioning the Horae in the traditional way, describes them with their corresponding attributes (met. 2, 23-26) with other chronological personifications, possibly derived from a Hellenistic poem. Ovid also tries to connect the Horae with traditional Roman divinities, considering them as assistants of → Janus and → Flora (fast. 1, 125; 5, 215-218) who had a temporal function to the Romans. In this author we also find the first Roman mention of the Seasons as representing the cycle of birth and death (met. 15, 199-213). This is the result of the earlier process (Stoicism, Neopythagorism) of association of the Seasons with gods, with parts of the world, or with divisions of time in general. In this sense Varro (ap. Geoponica 1, 1, 2) associated → Zephyrus with Spring, other sources associate Notus with Summer, Eurus with Autumn, and → Boreas with Winter, and Lucretius (5, 737-744), Spring with → Venus and → Flora, Summer with Ceres (→ Demeter/Ceres), and Autumn with Bacchus (→ Dionysos/Bacchus); Ovid (met. 15, 199-213) himself associated the Seasons with the four Ages. The succession of the Seasons will occupy a central position in the concepts of the Roman religious world during the 2nd cent. A. D. They are associated with Zeus, inasmuch as he is invoked as the creator of order and responsible for the proper distribution of the Seasons (Q. Smyrn. 10, 343; Paus. 1, 40, 4; Plut. de exilio 601a-b). This function is transferred to Helios when he assumes the role of director of the Cosmos (Orph. h. 8, 5, 10). This role of Helios acquires special importance with the Neopythagorians. Porphyrius, in the 3rd cent. A. D. (de abstinentia 2, 7; de antro nymphaeum 27) mixes both traditional conceptions of the Horae: Helios, as → Horos, reigns over the Seasons of Heaven, but those of Earth belong to Demeter and wear a crown of flowers, the symbol of Spring, and a crown of wheat ears, the symbol of Summer. Julian also mentions Helios as the father of the Seasons (or. 11 [4] 147-148d). Macrobius (Sat. 1, 17; 18, 8; 21, 13) says that Apollo, as the Σὺν, is called Horus, and that from his name the twenty-four hours of the day and the four Seasons that fill the circle of the year are called Horae.

BIBLIOGRAPHY: Alföldi, A., Aion in Merida und Aphrodisias (1979) 6-8; Fuchs, W., Die Vorbilder der neuattischen Reliefs (1959) 51-58, 63-67; Hanfmann, G. M. A., The Season Sarco-phagus in Dumbarton Oaks (1951); Hild, J.-A., DA III 1 (1899) 249-256 s. v. «Horae»; Jolles, A., RE VIII 2 (1913) 2300-2313 s. v. «Horai»; Koch/Sichtermann, RömSark 217-223, 434; Kranz, P., SarkRel V 4. Die Jahreszeitenarkophage (1984); Ling, R., «The Seasons in Romano-British Mosaic Pavements», Britannia 14, 1983, 13-22; Parrish, D., Season Mosaics of Roman North Africa (1984); Rapp, A., ML 2 (1886-90) 2712-2741 s. v. «Horai»; Schwinzer, E., Schwebende Gruppen in der Pompejanischen Wandmalerei (1979) 87-98; Smith, D. J., «Mythological figures and scenes in Romano-British Mosaics», in Munby, J./Henig, M. (eds.), Roman Life and Art in Britain (1977) 129-132.

CATALOGUE

Reference is only made to female representations with seasonal attributes, because those without attributes cannot be certainly identified. (cf. → Horai, → Charis, Charites, → Nymphae, → Moirai). For male personifications see → Kairoi/Tempora anni. Cataloguing is complicated by the fact that they are not isolated representations, but groups of four figures (Spring, Summer, Autumn, Winter), which also derive from different iconographic traditions. Representations of → Tropai corresponding to the Solstices are not included, although their iconography is so close to that of the Seasons that they are only distinguishable through inscriptions.

A. Horae following Dionysos in procession. Archaistic type.

1. Horae in archaistic marble reliefs from a lost Attic original with their corresponding seasonal attributes. These make it possible to differentiate them from other groups of three female figures without attributes, that have frequently and unjustly been identified as Horae (→ Charis, Charites, → Moirai, → Nymphae). - Schmidt, E., Archaistische Kunst in Griechenland und Rom (1922) 26-28 Beilage 4; Fuchs, W., Die Vorbilder der neuattischen Reliefs (1959) 51-55. - From comparison of the different extant copies, it can be deduced that the four Seasons were originally represented. The original has been dated by Schmidt c. 300 B. C., and more probably by Fuchs c. 160 B. C. - a) (= Horai 22a* with further refs.) Paris, Louvre MA 968. From Villa Albani. - Schmidt, o. c. pl. 18, 1 Beil. 4; Fuchs o. c. pl. 11b. - Dionysos followed by three young women. Spring with flowers on a fold of her garment. Summer with naked torso, carrying a sheaf of corn. A third figure with tunic and mantle who probably carried a bunch of grapes in the l. hand. - b) (= Horai 22b) Once Freiburg, Univ. From Italy. - Schmidt, o. c. pl. 18, 2 Beil. 4; Fuchs, o. c. Upper part of three Horae; Summer with naked torso, Autumn with head turned and a bunch of grapes in the l. hand. Winter (?) with mantle crossed over the breast. - c) (= Horai 23* with bibl.) Piraeus Mus. - Fuchs, o. c. 51. - Late Hadrianic copy of the same original.

B. Horae alone. Archaistic type.

2. (= Artemis 1192*, = Charis, Charites 38, = Dodekathēoi 30*) Marble base of a candelabrum («Ara Borghese»). Paris, Louvre MA 672. From Gabii. - Schmidt, o. c. 1, 58; Fuchs, o. c. 1, 58; Hanfmann II no. 34; Reinach, RépStat 1, 66. - Probably mid 2nd cent. A. D. - The three sides of the base are divided into three registers: in the upper one the twelve gods, and in the lower one groups of personifications: Charites, Moirai and Horae. It is one of the rare monuments, though late, that differentiates these groups of personifications. The Horae are three, wear different kinds of archaistic garments, stephanai and are bare-foot. Spring with turned head and a flower in the hand; Autumn with a bunch of grapes; Summer with an ear of corn.

C. Dancing Horae in procession. Neoclassical type.

1. Related to the marriage of Thetis and Peleus

3.* (= Horai 15) Terracotta «Campana» reliefs. London, BM D 583-584; Paris, Louvre S 750; Rome, Villa Albani 173. From Rome. - Campana, G. P., Antiche opere in plastica discoperte, raccolte e dichiarate (1842); Walters, BM Terracottas D 583-584 pl. 42; v. Rohden/Winnefeld 89-92 pls. 47, 57, 98; Reinach, RépRel 2, 139, 262; Hanfmann II no. 69; Simon, E., RM 60/61, 1953/54, 211-223 pl. 88-89. - From mid-1st cent. B. C. to Hadrianic; probably about 1st quarter of 1st cent. A. D. - The series of plaques would be as follows:

a) Campana proposed the existence of an original group representing the marriage of Thetis and Peleus, towards which the four Seasons would be walking preceded by a young man with a bull on his shoulders (Campana, o. c. pl. 62; Reinach o. c. 2, 262). However, v. Rohden/Winnefeld doubted this reconstruction because one of the plaques on which Campana relied, was neither in his Collection Catalogue nor known from other sources (o. c. 89). But the original plaques are preserved, one with the marriage of Thetis and Peleus and another with Hercules with the boar followed by Winter. So we may suppose that, although the next plaque has been lost, or perhaps never existed, the Horae could have been taking part in such a representation. In one of the preserved series it seems that the succession of Horae who walked to the r. was as follows: Summer with hair tied back, dressed with tunic and mantle, with a garland in the r. hand and sheaf of corn and poppies in the l.; Spring, with wavy hair covered by a hat, a tunic that leaves her r. shoulder uncovered and mantle drawn over her l. arm, holding a basket with leaves and flowers in her l. hand, and a kid by the front legs with the r.; Winter, also with wavy hair covered with a bonnet, wearing tunic and mantle drawn over the l. arm, and shoes, holding a boar by the hind legs with the r. hand and, on her l. shoulder, a curved shepherd's stick from the front of which two birds hang and from the back a hare; Autumn, coiffed in a similar way to Summer, with chiton and mantle which, as for Spring, leaves the r. shoulder uncovered, carrying on a fold of her garment bunches of grapes and a pomegranate. All figures are looking front and walking.

b) This plaque might have existed (see above) at least in another series, related to the marriage of Thetis and Peleus, where the first Hora, heading the procession and immediately after Hercules, was Winter who, furthermore, was exactly like the one just described (v. Rohden/Winnefeld pl. 57).

c) E. Simon (o. c. 214 n. 26 pl. 91, 2) has brought to light the Ascoli Piceno fragment where, after Winter, depicted in the normal way, appears Spring shown in the characteristic manner of the Arretine reliefs (9): a vessel in the l. hand, although the fruit are not seen, and a kid in the r. hand but placed in front of her, as frequently on the other reliefs though not on other Campana reliefs. Although the relief is fragmentary, it seems that she is also turning her head.

4. Marble puteal with the marriage of Thetis and Peleus. Copenhagen, Glypt. - Simon, o. c. 3, pls. 91, 1; 92, 1-2; Fuchs, o. c. 1, 158, n. 75. - Late Republican. - The H. are taking part in a procession, preceded by a young man with a bull on his shoulders, as in the Campana relief. Everything is framed in the marriage of Thetis and Peleus. After him is Winter who, despite the poor preservation, seems to carry the two birds, hare and boar, as on the Campana reliefs.

5.* Glazed relief skyphos. Munich, Antikenslg. SL 492. - Simon, o. c. 3, 215 pls. 93, 1-2; 94, 1; Hanfmann II no. 67; Hochuli-Gysel, A., Kleinasiatische glasierte Reliefkeramik (1977) 63. 151 T 45 pl. 42. - 1st cent. A.D. (Hochuli). - Poorly preserved. Interpretations of the figures differ. Hanfmann identifies: Hermes, Summer, Spring, Hercules with the bull, Winter, Autumn and Peleus, while Simon sees: Thetis and Peleus, Dionysos, Hermes, Spring, Summer, Hercules and Autumn. Hochuli identifies: Autumn (holding fruit in a fold of her garment), Hercules, Winter (with an animal held before her), Spring (with turned head, holding a bowl in the l. and a kid in the r. hand), Peleus and Thetis, Dionysos, and a youth. The position of the animal of Winter is changed with regard to the Arretine representations and the Albani sarcophagus (6).

6.* (= Athena/Minerva 397, = Hymenaios 5* with bibl.) Marble sarcophagus with the marriage of Thetis and Peleus. Rome, Villa Albani 131. From Rome. - Robert, SarkRel II 2-6 pl. 1; Toynbee, J., The Hadrianic School (1934) 189-191 pl. 39, 2; Hanfmann II no. 65; Simon, o. c. 3, 211-223 pls. 88-89. - About 140 A.D. - As central group on the sarcophagus front are the four H., very close to 3a. The procession is headed by Winter, who only differs in that she holds a duck instead of birds at the front of the stick; she is followed by Spring, with more fruit in the basket and more folds in her tunic; Summer, with a long garland; Spring, without hat. All wear sandals.

7. Glass vase. London, BM. From Zicycum. - Carabella, T., RA 1879, 204-207 pl. 7; Robert, SarkRel II 5; Hanfmann II no. 68; Simon, o. c. 3, 215 n. 33. - Separated by columns are the figures of a young man with a boar, Winter, in the traditional attitude, although the boar is exchanged for a stick. Hermes and a figure identified by Hanfmann as Summer, but who is actually → Hymenaios, who appears on the Villa Albani sarcophagus (6) with a torch (here exchanged for a curved shepherd's stick, probably influenced by Winter) in the l. hand, and a loutrophoros in the r.

2. Not related to the marriage of Thetis and Peleus

8.* Marble altar. Rome, Villa Albani 66. From Rome. - ML I 2, 2734; Fuchs, o. c. 1, 158 n. 75; Helbig IV no. 3225; Simon, o. c. 3, 213; Hanfmann II no. 63. - Neoattic; 2nd cent. A.D. (Hanfmann), late Hellenistic (Fuchs). Around Selene are the four H. in procession, lightly dancing. The cortege is headed by Summer, with a similar attitude and garment to the former, although quieter: in the r. hand she holds a wreath, more clearly defined than in the former examples, and in the l. hand sheaf of corn and poppies; then follows Spring, who turns her head back and holds a kid in the r. hand and a vessel, seemingly empty, in the l.; then Winter with the characteristic boar, birds and hare, although now there are three birds hanging on the front of the stick; finally Autumn, showing the fold of the garment without fruit. The garments of Summer and Autumn are identical: tunic and mantle billowing at their backs; Autumn's garment only differs in that the mantle is raised by the wind as a result of her movement; Winter, on the other hand, wears it in the usual manner.

9.* (= Horai 16 with bibl.) Arretine Terra Sigillata by Cn. Ateius, shape Dragendorff 1. London, BM L 54. From Capua. - Walters, BMVases IV L 54 pl. 6; Oxe, A., Arretinische Reliefgefäße vom Rhein (1933) no. 132a-g pl. 32-34; Hanfmann II no. 59. - 10-1 B.C. - Numerous examples essentially identical. Six figures separated by columns and candelabra. All wear tunic and mantle except Summer, who has her head covered with a bonnet. Winter also wears boots, holds a boar by one of its back feet in the l. hand and with the r. holds, on the l. shoulder, a curved shepherd's stick from which hang a hare at the back and a bird at the front. Spring is looking back, holding a basket of fruit in her l. hand while with the r. she is holding the hind legs of a kid. Summer is moving ahead, with a crown in the r. hand and ears of corn in the l., her hair in a top-knot; Autumn holds with both hands a basket containing flowers and fruit. Summer and Autumn are twice repeated. The identification of Spring and Autumn is exchanged in Walter's description.

10. Glass intaglio. Berlin, Staatl. Mus. FG 6232. - Furtwängler, Beschreibung no. 6232 pl. 43; Robert, SarkRel II 5; Hanfmann II no. 61. - Augustan. - Three H. walking to the r.: Spring with turned head and the kid ahead: Summer and Autumn with the usual attributes.

11. On many other intaglios some of these figures are repeated, isolated: a) Sardonyx. Berlin, Staatl. Mus. FG 6712. - Furtwängler, AG pl. 39, 25; Hanfmann II no. 74. - Autumn. - b) Glass. London, A. J. Evans Coll. - Furtwängler, AG pl. 38, 3; Hanfmann II no. 62. - Summer. - c)* Glass. New York, MMA 74.51.4296. - Richter, MetMusGems no. 385; Hanfmann II no. 72 fig. 81. - Winter.

12. Candelabrum base, marble. Chantilly, Mus. Condé. From Rome. - Robert, SarkRel II 3 (from Codex Coburgensis); Müller, F. G., MedetRome II, 1985, 103-106 pl. 27, 5; Hanfmann II no. 74a. - About 100 A.D. - Four sided, with sphinxes below and terminals in the shape of rams above. One H. on each side: Winter shows the usual attitude, with the order of the animals on the lagobolon changed: two birds at the upper end and a hare at the lower; she wears trousers and her attitude reminds us more of Hymenaios on the sarcophagus 6 and the glass vase 7 than Winter on these same monuments. Spring looks ahead, holds a kid behind, and with the other hand picks up her dress. Summer, without attributes, has a naked torso, with the mantle billowing back. Autumn has the usual fruit on a fold of her garment. The figures are shown less mobile than others, and less in profile. This monument was copied by Pignatelli in the Codex Coburgensis and by a pupil of Raphael in a drawing in the Fogg Museum (Müller, o. c.).

13.* (= Demeter/Ceres 138 with bibl.) Onyx vase with engraved figures called «Braunschweiger Vase». Braunschweig, Mus. Gem 300. From near Mantua. - Furtwängler, AG III 339 figs. 185-188; Hanfmann II no. 14 and 73. - 1st cent. A.D., perhaps Neronian. - In a procession with → Triptolemos (Nero?) and Demeter appear the H. among other characters. The procession is headed by Winter who looks back, holds in the r. hand a young boar by the hind legs (the lagobolon, otherwise characteristic, is lacking); with the other hand she picks up her dress hem, the head covered with a bonnet. After her is Spring with the kid in front of her held with her r. hand and the basket with flowers and fruit in the l.; she does not turn her head, but looks ahead. Finally, Summer, seated with ears of corn and a basket of fruit. After her a young man carrying a basket with fruit on his head, who could be interpreted as Autumn. This monument, therefore, is already iconographically quite far from the usual pattern of the group; only Winter, who combines features of Spring on the Arretine reliefs (9) and the sarcophagus 6, and Spring close to the Campana reliefs, recall it.

D. Dancing Horae not in procession

An extensive group of figures who keep, to a certain extent, a dancing attitude, variously emphasized, but do not form a procession, although sometimes some or all may appear together.

1. Forming a frieze

Wall paintings

14.* Pompeii VII 13, 4 (House of Ganymede). - Helbig, Wandgemälde no. 975. 981. 989. 1000; DA III 1 (1899) 255 fig. 3880 s. v. «Horae»; Hanfmann II no. 85. - One of the rare Pompeian paintings that show the four H. together, although not in procession, but frontal. Spring, with tunic, mantle and shoes, holds with the l. hand a lamb around her neck and with the r. a vessel with ricotta. Summer, naked above the waist, holds a sickle in the l. hand; Autumn with tunic, mantle and shoes holds with the l. hand and on her knee a basket with fruit, while with the r. she rests an olive branch on her shoulder; Winter is well protected with the mantle that covers her head, holding two ducks in the r. hand and a dry stick in the l.; Spring and Autumn are crowned.

To this group possibly belong two representations known from literary sources:

14a) Picture. Philostr. im. 2, 34. - 3rd cent. A.D., although perhaps much earlier. - Dancing H.; Spring is related to hyacinths and roses. Winter walking on soft fields makes them fruitful. Autumn is related to the grape and the making of wine.

14b) Horae in a Dionysiac context. Nonn. Dion. II, 484-521. - 5th cent. A.D. - H. dressed. Winter hides her face with a veil and is blowing through black clouds; a circle of white snow covers her breast. Spring, crowned with dew, blows a wind to enliven the mortals. Summer is carrying a corn sheaf and a sickle. Autumn is crowned with olive branches.

2. Horae alone

Wall paintings

This type, isolated in the middle of a panel, is quite common in Pompeian painting. Spring and Autumn usually wear tunic and mantle, leaving one shoulder uncovered. Autumn usually has the mantle billowing back, and wears boots. Summer has a naked torso, and Winter tunic and mantle that covers the head, and boots.

15.* Pompeii VI 16, 7 (House of the Amorini Dorati). - Hanfmann II no. 97 pls. 87. 91. 94. 97. - Spring holds a hare in one hand and a basket in the other. Summer, naked, holds a sickle. Autumn, with fruit on a fold of the garment. Winter with two ducks in one hand and a stick in the other.

16. Pompeii VI 5, 13 (House of Modestus). - Helbig, Wandgemälde nos. 979. 994. 1001; Reinach, Rép-Point 136, 13. - Spring with a kid in one hand and a garland in the other. Autumn with fruit on a fold of the garment. Winter with two ducks and a stick.

17. Pompeii VI 8, 3 (House of the Tragic Poet). - Hanfmann II no. 87 pl. 88; Helbig, Wandgemälde nos. 997. 990. 1004; Reinach, Rép-Point 133, 10. - Spring with basket of flowers and a branch of fruit, perhaps pomegranates; Autumn also with a basket. Winter is shown in an unusual attitude, with fruit on a fold of the garment in the manner of Autumn.

18. Pompeii VII 12, 26 (Vicolo del Balcone Pensile). – Helbig, Wandgemälde nos. 976. 992. – Spring with a hare in one hand and a basket in the other. Autumn with a bunch of grapes.

19. Pompeii VIII 4, 34 (Strada di Iside). – Helbig, Wandgemälde nos. 982. 988. 1002. – Summer with sheaf of corn and a sickle. Autumn with basket and a bunch of grapes. Winter with a stick from which two ducks are hanging, and perhaps fruit on a fold of the garment.

20. Pompeii VIII 4, 4 (Strada di P. Olconio). – Helbig, Wandgemälde nos. 984. 993. – Summer with ears of corn and sickle. Autumn with a bunch of grapes.

21. Pompeii VIII 4, 48 (House of the Caccia antica). – Helbig, Wandgemälde nos. 987. 998; Hanfmann II no. 89 pl. 96. – Autumn with torso completely covered and legs naked from the knees up, holding a basket in one hand and a wreath in the other. Winter with a pole from which three ducks are suspended and a jar in the hands, her l. leg uncovered.

22. Fullonica della Via dell'Abbondanza. – Spinazzola, Pompei 784. – Summer with ears of corn and sickle.

23. Pompeii I 7, 10–12 (House of P. Cornelius Tegeus or of the Ephebs). – Maiuri, A., MonPitt III Pompei II 19 fig. 14. – Summer, similar to the former but with a more emphasized movement.

24. Pompeii V 5, 2 (Vicolo di Modesto). – Helbig, Wandgemälde no. 995. – Autumn carrying fruit on a fold of the garment.

25. Pompeii VI 13, 6 (House of the Forno di Ferro). – Helbig, Wandgemälde no. 991. – Autumn with a bunch of grapes.

26. Rome, Domus Aurea of Nero, painted vault of room 60. Lost. – Egger, R., Codex Escorialensis. Ein Skizzenbuch aus der Werkstatt Domenico Ghirlandaios. Sonderschriften des Österr. Arch. Inst. IV (1906) 96–98 pl. 3; Weege, F., JdI 28, 1913, 174 pl. 6; Rizzo, PER pl. 29; Hanfmann II no. 102. – A.D. 64–69. – In each corner of the vault, which has Iuppiter as central subject, there is a H. placed on the diagonal. Spring holds a crown. Summer, naked from the hips up, holds a sickle and ears of corn. Autumn, also with naked torso, holds a vessel and a bunch of grapes. Winter with the head covered.

Stucco

27. Vault of the Tomb of the Pancratii, Via Latina, Rome. – Petersen, E., AdI 1861, 204–205; MonInst 6, 1861, pl. 49; Wadsworth, E., MAAR 4, 1942, pl. 25–32; Hanfmann II no. 119; Mielsch, Stuckreliefs no. K 115. – Mid 2nd cent. A.D. – Four stucco figures in relief in the four angles of the vault, with Iuppiter on an eagle as central motif; two are quite well preserved. Spring dressed with tunic and mantle, has the r. breast naked, and part of an animal, probably a kid, is preserved; Summer, naked, with a chlamys hanging at her back and covering her l. leg, holds a sickle. Autumn and Winter are almost completely lost.

Mosaics

28. Black and white mosaic. Ancona, Mus. Naz. From Pesaro. – Blake, MAAR 13, 1936, 98–99. 177–180 pl. 44; Hanfmann II no. 117 pl. 86. – Antonine. – Four Seasons are placed in octagons around the central motif: → Leda and the Swan. Spring naked above the waist, crowned with flowers, holds a basket in her l. hand and seems to be sowing seeds as she walks. Summer, perhaps the less dancing figure, completely naked, crowned with stalks, holds a sickle and a basket with ears of corn; Autumn, naked above the waist, crowned with leaves and vine tendrils, holds a basket with fruit in one hand and a bunch of grapes in the other. Winter, hooded, has a hand hidden under the mantle and with the other holds a pole from which something, maybe a dead animal, is suspended.

29.* (= Kairoi/Tempora anni 192) Polychrome mosaic. – Tunis, Bardo A 292. From La Chebba (Tunisia). – InvMos II no. 86 colour pl.; Hanfmann II no. 118 = 445; Parrish no. 49 pls. 66b–68. – 2nd half of 2nd cent. A.D. – Four frontal figures in the vault corners. Spring, naked, with mantle hanging at her back and draped over the forearms; crowned with roses, with a rose in one hand and a basket of roses in the other; wears necklace and bracelet and is flanked by two rose stems crossed over her, a dog at one side and a bed of roses at the other. Summer, crowned with ears of corn, with a sickle in one hand and a sheaf of ears of corn in the other; a mantle draped over the l. arm; wearing a necklace and a bracelet, and is surrounded by two corn stalks crossed before her. A lion and a young man gathering corn are by her side. Autumn, crowned with grapes, is half naked, with a jug in one hand and a thyrsos in the other, flanked by vines, with a panther at one side and a young man loading barrels full of grapes at the other. Winter, in a dance movement, is fully dressed with tunic and mantle draped over the head, wears a crown of reeds and boots and carries a pole from which two ducks are suspended; the figure is framed by olive branches and flanked by a boar among reeds and by an olive-harvester.

30. (= Ganymedes 213) Polychrome Mosaic. Thydrus (Tunisia), in situ. – Foucher, L., Découvertes archéologiques à Thydrus en 1961 (1961) 22–25 pls. 23–24; Parrish no. 32 pls. 48b–49. – Late Severan. – Four women placed in the dome diagonals but next to the central circle, occupied by the kidnapping of Ganymede. Spring, with tunic that leaves a shoulder naked, and crown of roses, holds up a basket with roses in the l. hand and a hare in the r. Summer, naked, with a chlamys hanging at her back, wears a crown of ears of corn, holds a sheaf of corn up in the l. hand and a sickle in the r. Autumn, naked, dancing, with a mantle hanging at her back and extending her legs, a vine crown, bunch of grapes in one hand and a basket in the other. Winter, wrapped in a mantle that covers her head, with shoes, and a pole on the shoulder, on which a duck is hanging; the other hand is hidden under the mantle.

31. Polychrome Mosaic. Trier, Rhein. Landesmus. From Trier, Walramsneustraße. – Hanfmann II no. 122; Parlasca, C., Die römischen Mosaiken in Deutschland

(1959) 40 pls. 40–41. – 2nd half of 3rd cent. A.D. – Four women in the corners of the mosaic, but only two and part of a third remaining. Autumn, naked above the waist and with the mantle billowing at her back, a thyrsos in the r. hand and a tray with fruit, is dancing. Summer, naked above the waist, with a thyrsos and a basket with ears of corn. Spring is lost. Winter is all covered, even the head, holding a pole from which two ducks are suspended. By the sides of each H. there are allegorical animals in compartments in the order: leopards, lions, fawns and boars.

Stone reliefs

32. Relief of the Concordii. Reggio Emilia, public garden. From Boretto. – Aurigemma, S., RivIstArch 1931/32, 271–274 pl. 5–8; Hanfmann II no. 115. – Mid 1st cent. A.D. – Central relief of a funerary monument; four frontal female H., who still maintain a certain attitude of movement and dance; between the two central ones a Cupid reclines on a tree. Spring wears tunic and mantle billowing behind her head, a garland of flowers across her breast, and seemingly flowers in the mantle; by her side, a bird in a small tree and a goat suckling a kid. Summer, naked above the waist, holds a sheaf of ears in the r. hand and wears a crown of corn stalks. Autumn wears a crown of vine and holds a vine branch; her mantle is also billowing, and she wears a crown of vine-leaves. Winter, head covered with the mantle, is resting on a sort of stele, and has a dog in front of her.

33. Funerary Relief of Clodia, limestone. Rocca-giovane. – Lugli, MonAnt 31, 1926, 495–499 figs. 9–11; Hanfmann II no. 116 pl. 83–84. – 1st cent. A.D. – Front of a funerary monument with inscription and Seasons. Three H. preserved: Autumn, dressed with tunic and mantle, on a fold of which much fruit (according to Hanfmann, she should be Winter); Summer, naked, with a mantle that hangs at her back although one end covers her sex, is crowned with stalks and holds a sheaf of corn, flowers and a jar from which liquid is pouring; Spring with tunic and mantle, is the quietest of the three, and holds in the r. hand the back feet of a new-born fawn and in the l. what Lugli identifies as a bow, but which may be a simple branch.

34. (= Endymion 73* with further refs.) Endymion sarcophagus. Rome, Pal. Doria. From Rome. – Robert, SarkRel III no. 77 pl. 20. – 3rd cent. A.D. – The H. flank the main subject and are placed at the ends of the sarcophagus front. To the l., Summer or Spring, barefoot, with naked torso, extending her hand; next to her, almost hidden, Winter, hooded; at the opposite end, Autumn, the most classical of them, dancing, seems to be leaving the central scene; she wears tunic and mantle swept over the head as if it was blown by the wind, holds fruit on a fold of her garment and wears sandals.

Statuary

Dispersal of original groups of H. make it difficult to identify any such groups with certainty.

35. (= Horai 17a with bibl.) Marble statue. Florence, Uff. 136. – Reinach, RépStat 1, 217, 806; Hanfmann II no. 48. – 1st cent. A.D. – Autumn, dancing, fully dressed or with a naked shoulder, carrying fruit on a fold of her garment.

36.* Marble statue. Venice, Arch. Mus. – Ame-lung, W., EA 2438; Reinach, RépStat 5, 1, 106, 4; Hanfmann II no. 51; Traversari, G., RdA 11, 1987, 75–77 fig. 1. – 1st–2nd cent. A.D. – As 35.

37. Marble statue. Once Rome, Ludovisi Coll. – Reinach, RépStat 2, 1, 253, 2; Hanfmann II no. 55; Palma, B., MusNazRom, Le sculpture 16, 27–28 no. II, 6. – 1st–2nd cent. A.D. – As 35. Head lost.

38.* Bronze figurine. London, BM 1513. From Padova. – Reinach, RépStat 5, 107, 3; Hanfmann II no. 47. – As 35.

39. Marble statue. London, Leconfield Coll. – Reinach, RépStat 5, 1, 106, 5; Hanfmann II no. 54. – 1st half of 2nd cent. A.D. – Winter: a figure dressed with tunic and mantle, the head uncovered, wearing sandals and holding two ducks in the r. hand and a hare in the l.

40.* Marble statue. Rome, Pal. Barberini. – Ame-lung, W., EA 2909; Reinach, RépStat 5, 1, 107, 4; Hanfmann II no. 52. – 1st cent. A.D. – Spring wears tunic and mantle, r. shoulder uncovered, and holds flowers and fruit on a fold of her garment, a kid in the r. hand. Heavily restored.

E. Dancing Horae with a male partner

Painting

41. Wall painting. Pompeii VI 15, 1 (House of the Vettii), Room of Ixion, in situ. – A.D. 62–79. – Schwinzer 87–88 no. 22–24 pls. 12–13. – Three groups including a H. and satyr, each with seasonal attributes, in the centre of wall panels. Autumn: satyr depicted frontally, naked and with a crown, a chlamys that hangs at his back, and a goatskin over the shoulder; the corresponding H. wears a tunic that leaves the r. shoulder uncovered and is billowing at the back, a hair net and shoes. The H. and the satyr are looking at each other while the H. is helping the satyr to carry the goatskin. Summer: H. crowned, naked above the waist, with a billowing chlamys, sickle in her l. hand and a snake or taenia in the r.; the corresponding satyr is naked, with a chlamys at his back; in his r. hand he holds a pedom and in the l. carries a basket full of fruit, with branches on his shoulders. Spring is similar to Autumn: the crowned satyr holds a dish with fruit in his l. hand, while the attribute of the H. is lost. All the groups are surrounded, above, by a garland that they hold in their hands.

42. Vault painting. Rome, tomb of the Nasonii. Lost. – Andrae, B., Studien zur römischen Grabkunst (1963) 88–127 pls. 41–71. – Late 1st or beginning of 2nd cent. A.D. – Vault with → Pegasos as central subject; the diagonal corners are decorated by compartments with couples, arranged beside a floral candelabrum. Spring: naked satyr with a pedom in one hand and a kid held around the neck in the other; the H.

wears tunic and chlamys, and holds a basket with flowers and fruit and an object that seems to be a small thyrsos; above her a square with scenes of hunting a fawn. Summer: naked satyr with a chlamys over the shoulder and corn ears in the hair, holding a fruit basket; the maenad, naked above the waist, picks a flower; above, a lion hunt. Winter: satyr with tunic and a heavy mantle that covers the head, a reed in one hand and a duck in the other; the maenad, dressed, holds a duck in one hand; the hunting scene above her is lost, but it would likely be of a boar. Autumn: satyr with short skirt carrying two grape baskets, one in the hand and the other hanging on a pole; the H. has bare breast and is holding a similar basket from which vine branches emerge; above them a panther hunt.

Polychrome mosaics

43. Madrid, Arch. Mus. From Hellin (Albacete). - Stern, H., MonPiot 54, 1965, 39-59; Hanfmann II no. 377a. - 1st half of 3rd cent. A.D. - Personifications of the Months and the Seasons, the latter represented by a Bacchic dancing couple identified by inscriptions. Winter (HIEMS): H. with tunic and mantle that covers her head, with a basket in her r. hand covered with sticks and many objects that cannot be clearly determined, leans on a naked satyr who plays a flute. Spring (VER): there remain the legs of a satyr in profile and the lower part of a dressed maenad. Summer (AES[TAS]): H. in profile, naked except for a leg partially covered with the chlamys; wears a crown of ears of corn and carries a basket full of ears of corn in one hand; the satyr, with horns, wears a chlamys and carries a small basket. Autumn (AVT[VMNVS]): H. dressed in a short tunic that leaves bare the r. breast, wears a crown of tendrils and in her r. hand carries a stick that she puts in a cup held by her pair of dancers; she has also a small basket full of grapes and holds the maenad by the waist.

44. El Djem, Arch. Mus. A 17-18. From Thysdrus. - Parrish no. 34 pl. 52-53. - Severan. - In hexagons around a central floral motif, couples representing the Seasons. Three remain: Winter, an old woman with head covered and crowned with olives and branches, in her arms an unidentified winged figure; by her side a hoe and two ducks. Summer: H. dressed in a flowing garment, dancing, with a basket of stalks and a sickle; a naked satyr next to her. Autumn is also dancing; a naked satyr with chlamys that hangs at his back hides in part a female figure with floral crown and a branch of flowers.

Stucco relief

45. Tomb of San Urbano alla Caffarella, Via Appia, Rome. - Gros, P., MEFRA 81, 1969, 175-180 pls. 7-8; Mielsch, Stuckreliefs 89 no. K 114. - About A.D. 160. - Caissons vault; in the centre remains part of a female figure with tunic and mantle around her hips, with two ducks held by the feet in her r. hand; to her l., part of another figure, male, with naked torso, with a bird in one hand (according to the old drawings). He seems to be Winter, but the figure is quite unlike any met so far, and his central position is strange, since it leaves eccentric the medallions with the other Seasons.

F. Horae with a male figure

Wall Painting

46. Vault of the tomb of Grottarossa, Via Flaminia, near Rome. - Bendinelli, G., NotSc 1927, 298-309 pls. 6-7; Hanfmann II n. 120a. - Late 2nd cent. A.D. - Four female figures in an almost frontal position, enclosed in panels, mark the transition between the central circle and the angles. Spring, partly lost, had a naked torso and an attribute in her r. hand. Summer, seemingly male, wears a short tunic and a hat and holds a sickle. Autumn, with a bowl or a vessel in the l. hand, and another attribute, perhaps a branch in the r. hand, and another attribute, perhaps a branch in the r. hand. Winter is hooded, holding a twig in her r. hand.

Mosaics

47. Lost. Tivoli, Villa of Hadrian. - Ashby, T., BSR 7, 1914, pl. 15b; Hanfmann II no. 377. - A.D. 125-135. - The four Seasons placed in the corners enclosed within circles. There are doubts about their sex and their identification. The most dressed one must be Winter, though the crown and the dish carried in the hand are not the usual attributes. The following H. is Autumn with a pedom and a basket with fruit, naked except for the chlamys that hangs behind. Summer is very similar to Autumn, although with another dish instead of the pedom. Spring, almost naked, with a drapery that covers her sex and without visible attributes. Winter and Spring seem to be female figures; both others male.

48. Black and white Mosaic. Mérida, Nat. Mus. From Mérida. Mosaic signed by Seleukos and Anthius. - Blanco, A., MosEsp I no. 9 pls. 12-16; late 2nd cent. A.D. - Muses, a bucolic poet and, in the corners, the Seasons: three female and one male. Spring: young woman with tunic and mantle drawn over the arms, a basket with flowers in her r. hand and a stick in the r.; a branch and three roses around her; Summer, lost, seems to have been dressed too, with a sheaf of corn and a sickle in her hands; next to her a bunch of ears of corn. Autumn is a naked young man surrounded by a vine; Winter, hooded, a duck in the r. hand and a cane in the l.; a mushroom alongside.

49. (= Dirke 20, = Kairoi/Tempora anni 122) Mosaic with polychrome emblem depicting the Punishment of Dirke. Sagunto, Arch. Mus. From Sagunto. - Vall de Pla, M. A., Archivo de Prehistoria Levantina 9, 1961, 157-165 pl. 5. - Severan. - Around the emblem, at the mosaic corners, are the four Seasons, three males naked and one female: Winter, with naked arms, wears tunic, mantle and shoes, a branch with leaves in her r. hand and a tray in the l. This is a very unusual representation.

50. Polychrome mosaic. Loupian, France. - Lavagne, H./Proudhomme, R./Rouquette, H., Gallia 34, 1976, 226 pl. 10-11. - 5th cent. A.D. - Four compartments in the mosaic corners with representations placed in parallel: two busts, seemingly male, and two female full figures: one of them, almost lost, has still parts of a chlamys billowing at the back and a garland of roses and leaves in the r. hand; it may be Spring. The other, whose breast is missing, is a figure with tunic and mantle, also billowing, with a duck held by the hind legs in the r. hand and a hare in the l.; in front of her a basket with fruit and green leaves. The last figure is difficult to identify since, although the duck seems to indicate Winter, the hare and the basket with fruit and leaves point to another Season, probably Autumn.

Reliefs

51. (= Kairoi/Tempora anni 121) Marble plaque. Rome, Antiquarium Palatino. From the Stadium of Domitian, Palatine, Rome. - Fabbrini, L., NotSc 1965, Suppl. 140-145 pl. 2-3; Kranz no. 862. - Late Gallienic. - Parts of two figures. Winter is almost complete except for the head; it might have been carved on a slab profiled by the four sides; wears a long mantle clung to the body suggesting its form; a reed in the l. hand and two ducks held by the hind legs in the r. Another fr. was found near this, which though very damaged, allowed identification of a young male, naked, with something on the shoulder, who could be Spring.

52. (Uncertain) Funerary Ara, marble. Althofen, Saint Thomas Church. From Althofen (Austria). - Piccottini, G., CSIR Österreich II 2 (1984) no. 324 pl. 14. - Mid 2nd cent. A.D. - A maenad and a satyr depicted on the small sides; the first is Spring, naked, dancing, holding a bird in her l. hand, and a knife down in her r. hand; the second is Autumn, naked, holding a basket with fruit in one hand and a bunch of fruit in the other. It is possibly a Dionysiac representation.

G. Horae related to the former, but with restrained movement

A quite heterogeneous and long-lasting group, although with few examples.

Wall painting

53. Pompeii III 2, 3 (House of Loreius Tiburtinus, peristyle). - Spinazzola, Pompei 385 pl. 441; Hanfmann II no. 100. - Mid-1st cent. A.D. - Summer: standing, with hat, chlamys that falls down her back and hides her r. leg, a sickle in her r. hand and stalks in the l. Iconographically she reminds us of some representations of Aphrodite.

Polychrome mosaics

54. (= 117, = Annus I with bibl., = Kairoi/Tempora anni 130) El Djem, Arch. Mus. A 53. From Thysdrus. - Parrish no. 25 pls. 34b-37a. - Late Antonine. - Floral tendrils, with Annus in centre; in the diagonals remain three different superimposed personifications of each Season; the centre is occupied by the main figure: a female bust with her attributes; above her a naked satyr and below her a female figure dressed with tunic, over her head a big tray, various objects, and a seasonal symbol in the other hand:

Spring a crown, Summer grapes, Autumn, thymiaterrion; Winter a metal vessel. The maenad of Summer seems to be correctly identified, in spite of her attribute of grapes, because the superimposed bust has the hair adorned with ears of corn.

55. Known by a drawing. Pfeffikon. - v. Gonzenbach, V., Die röm. Mosaiken der Schweiz (1961) 201 no. 100 pl. 44. - Frontal female figure, of which only the upper part preserved; her r. hand rests on her breast, the l. one, down, holds a patera; on her head a crown with a big flower at one side and a fruit at the other. This is possibly Spring or Autumn.

56.* From Antioch, «Tomb of Mnemosyne». - Levi, Antioch 295. 626 pl. 66a. 67c; Hanfmann II no. 124 = 145. - 5th cent. A.D. - Winter, a female figure draped in a mantle that covers her head, is holding a vessel with both hands, from which bare branches or a sheaf are emerging. Beside her, the inscription XEIMON; very close to her a bust that repeats the shape, with the inscription ΤΡΟΠΗ ΧΕΙΜΕΡΙΝΗ.

57. (Uncertain) Littlecourt Park (England). - Walters, B., in III^e Colloque sur la mosaïque antique, Ravenna 1980 (1983) 433-441 pl. 1-3. - About 360 A.D. - Orpheus in centre, and around him four female figures standing in front of animals; Venus, with naked torso and a mirror in her hand, is in front of a fawn; a figure with a swan, whom the author identifies with Nemesis, also with naked torso, is in front of a leopard; a third one, fully dressed, is holding a pole in front of a bull. This is identified with Ceres by the author. A fourth, also dressed in tunic and mantle, is in front of a goat, and could be Proserpina. They might be a representation of the four Seasons.

Reliefs

58. Marble base. Rome, Mus. Torlonia 381. From Rome. - Visconti, C., I monumenti del Mus. Torlonia riprodotti con la fototipia (1885) 285 no. 381 pl. 94; Hanfmann II no. 64. - 1st-2nd cent. A.D. - On three of the sides are represented female personifications who pick up their mantles with one hand and display an attribute in the other: Spring with a bulb; Summer with a flower and Autumn with a fruit; but the one with the flower turns her head and this relates her rather to the figures of Spring.

59. Marble relief. Florence, Mus. Arch. - Minto, A., Hommages à J. Bidez et F. Cumont (1949) II 208 pl. 10, 2. - 2nd cent. A.D. - Upper part of a relief, probably funerary; in the lower part, a shell. Four female figures, fully dressed with tunic and mantle, in frontal standing position. Spring with a branch of flowers in the r. hand and a kid in the l. Summer with sickle and stalks. Autumn with a cornucopia full of fruit and a thick cane. Winter with two big fishes, a strange attribute, and hooded.

60.* Marble sarcophagus. Genoa, S. Lorenzo, embedded in the Campanile. From Genoa. - Kranz 102-103 no. 7 pl. 18, 1. - 190-220 A.D. - Sarcophagus with columns and six arches in front; both ends are occupied by the Dioscuri; the other four by H., all on moulded bases. They wear tunic and mantle. Spring holds with her r. hand the horns of a kid. Summer is in front of a flowered tree. Autumn near a grapevine. Winter, without attributes, with the mantle billowing at the back of her head.

61. Sarcophagus fr., marble. Aquileia, Mus. Naz. 135. From Udine. - Kranz 102-103 no. 555 pl. 117, 1; Canciani, F., Aquileia Nostra 57, 1986, 515; idem, Antichità Altoadriatiche 29, 1987, 143. - Time of Gallienus. - Parts of two arcades and heads of female figures; one has an ear of corn near her (Summer); the other has the mantle billowing, as Winter on 60.

Marble statues

62. Rome, Mus. Torlonia 102a. - Reinach, RépStat 2, 1, 252, 8; Hanfmann II no. 46. - Autumn holds fruits in a fold of the garment.

63.* Vatican, Belvedere. - Reinach, RépStat 4, 163, 5; Hanfmann II no. 49. - As 62.

H. Horae standing and forming part of scenes related to other gods

1. Not taking part in the action

Wall painting

64. (= Apollon/Apollo 419*, = Helios/Sol 170) Rome, Domus Aurea, vault of room 34. Lost. - Ponce, Description des bains de Titus ... (1786) 10-17 pl. 12; Hanfmann II no. 18 pl. 82; Perrin, Y., MEFRA 94, 1982/2, 876-884. - Neronian. - In the centre of the vault, under a baldachin and near a vase with vine leaves, there is a male divinity crowned with tendrils, a sceptre in one hand and a cup in the other; he seems to be Bacchus, but some authors identify him with Sol. He is surrounded by four female figures: one, dressed, with crown of olive (?) (Summer?), another with flowers (Spring) and the third carrying an empty dish (Autumn).

Reliefs

65. (= Helios/Sol 173* with bibl.) Back of a Mithraic Altar, stone. Dieburg Mus. 220.52. From Dieburg. - Strong, E., JRS 27, 1937, 124 n. 47 pl. 20; Hanfmann II no. 19; Vermaseren, CIMRM no. 1247 pl. 324. - Sol naked, seated on a throne, and near him Mithras. To his l. Summer, naked, with a mantle that falls down her back and that covers her r. leg, with an indeterminate object in her hands which Vermaseren thinks is a corn ear. Autumn, in the middle distance, with naked torso and a dish in the l. hand and the r. raised over her head; Winter, with a mantle that covers the head, and a rush (?) in the l. hand. In the lower part, Caelus, Tellus and Oceanus.

66. (= 81) Phaëthon sarcophagus, marble. Liverpool, Merseyside County Mus., once Ince Blundell Hall. Probably from Rome. - SarkRel III 3 no. 332 pl. 108; Ashmole, B., A Cat. of the Ancient Marbles at Ince Blundell Hall (1929) no. 87. - 190-200 A.D. - The four Seasons are placed at the l. of the front, three standing and one seated. Winter with tunic and mantle that covers the head, has a hand hidden and with the other holds a reed or a bare branch; Autumn dressed, to whom the old descriptions attribute a crown full of grapes, vine shoots and some bunches of grapes; Summer, seated, with naked torso, ears of corn in the l. hand and a lamb and a sheep at her feet; Spring, with tunic and mantle that leaves the r. breast uncovered, and with a bunch of flowers in the l. hand.

67. (= 82) Phaëthon sarcophagus, marble. Paris, Louvre. From Ostia. - SarkRel III 3 no. 336 pl. 108. - Tetrarchic. - The four H. are grouped in the l. part of the front, two seated and two standing. Winter, almost hidden, hooded. Autumn, with the r. shoulder uncovered, grapes and grape leaves in the hair, and a basket with fruit. Summer, seated, naked torso, hat, and a basket of fruit in the l. hand and a sickle in the r. Spring, with a garland on the head and a basket of flowers to her l. on which she leans a hand. Summer and Spring are seated.

UNCERTAIN

Marble sarcophagi

68. Sarcophagi with the representation of the Rape of Proserpine. Robert, SarkRel III 3 thinks that the female figures - winged or not - placed in the corners are H., clad in a tunic that sometimes may leave exposed one or both legs, placing flowers.

a) (= Demeter/Ceres 126* with further refs.) Rome, Villa Giustiniani-Massimo and Vatican 741 (right half). SarkRel III 3 no. 362 pl. 120. - About A.D. 150. - In the corners, two winged H. with garlands in the hands; both figures appear between Minerva and Ceres, with the baskets on the floor.

b) (= Hades/Pluto 36* with bibl., = Demeter/Ceres 127 with bibl.) Rome, Pal. Rospigliosi. - SarkRel III 3 no. 363 pl. 120. - Mid-Antonine. - As a; winged female figures with hitched up dress, in the corners.

c) (= Eros/Amor, Cupido 15* with further refs., = Demeter/Ceres 128 with further refs.) Florence, Uff. 86. - SarkRel III 3 no. 372 pl. 121. - Late mid-Antonine. - Like b, winged figures with hitched up garments, placed in the corners.

69. Sarcophagi with the representation of the Rape of Proserpine. Both figures, who as a rule are placed between the chariots of Pluto and of Proserpine, and who have baskets with flowers as attributes, could be H. However, the fact that they are only two and that both have baskets of flowers as attributes, makes this identification doubtful.

a) Villa Giustiniani, embedded in front of the Via Merulana. From Rome. - SarkRel III 3 no. 377 pl. 122. - Hadrianic or early Antonine. - One H. standing and another kneeling, the first with tunic, the second with mantle billowing over the head; vases with flowers at their feet.

b) (= Demeter/Ceres 133* with further refs., = Ianitor Orci 5*) The so called sarcophagus of Charlemagne. Aachen, Münster G 3. - SarkRel III 3 no. 378 pl. 122; Hanfmann II no. 114. - About 225 A.D. - Both H. are kneeling, both wear crowns and hold a basket with flowers that are fallen on the floor. Hanfmann considers that the chariot driver is a third H.; but, though she also wears a crown, this seems unlikely. Both female figures appear again at the l. end (fig. 378a); one standing and the other leaning over, with a basket of flowers; near them, a nude youth holds another basket of flowers. According to Robert the first two are representations of the Oceanids - the same that appear on the Pluto and Ceres frontal - the third would be the representation of Spring. However, if we consider this as Spring, we have also to consider as Seasons the two youths, and this is not clear since all have the same seasonal symbol. One the small r. side, three youths look more like Seasons: Spring with flowers on garment, Summer crowned with ears of corn and holding a sickle; Autumn with thyrsos.

70. (= Dioskouroi/Castores 148* with bibl.) Sarcophagus with the Rape of the Leucippides. Florence, Uff. 104 K. - SarkRel III 2 no. 180 pl. 57. - Mid 2nd cent. A.D. - Two female winged figures with garlands in their hands.

2. Taking part in the action

Wall painting

71. (= Kairoi/Tempora anni 45) Stabiae, Antiquarium. From the villa of Stabiae. - Elia, O., Pitture di Stabia (1957) 26-32 pl. 1. - 50-79 A.D. - Armillary sphere formed by the interlacing of several archs. Inside are couples of H. and → Karpoi moving forward. Summer: naked torso, with the mantle billowing at the back of the head, is turning towards the boy who is near her, carrying a sheaf of corn. The rest of the group is less well preserved: one female figure similar to the last, of whom only one side remains, who rests her hand on a putto who carries a leveret; she must be Spring. A third, dressed with a nebris that leaves a shoulder uncovered, and with a putto near by, must be Winter, and a fourth, crowned with tendrils, Autumn. The Karpoi of these two last figures are lost.

Mosaics

72. (= Aion 11* with bibl.) Black and white mosaic. Ostia, Mus. From Ostia, tomb no. 101. - Calza, G., La necropoli del porto di Roma nell'Isola Sacra (1940) 183-184 pl. 92; Hanfmann II no. 81. - Hadrianic. The four Seasons move to pass through the zodiacal circle, a single ring; first Spring, with crown of flowers; then Summer, crowned with stalks and with a sickle to the l., though rather far from her hand; Autumn crowned with tendrils, and Winter, hooded. The circle is held by Aion, seated on a rock, and above is a reclining figure who can be identified as Tellus. There are no Karpoi.

73.* (= Aion 12 with bibl., = Aeternitas 72, = Karpoi 4, = Kairoi/Tempora anni 46) Polychrome mosaic. Mérida, House «of the Mithraeum». From Mérida. - Blanco, A., MosEsp I no. 17 pls. 32-36; Alföldi 6-7 figs. 1. 4 pl. 13 col. pl. 3; Quet, M.-H., La mosaïque cosmologique de Mérida. Propositions de lecture. (1981); Musso, L., RivIstArch 1984, 160-167 figs. 12-13. - Many dates have been suggested from Late Antonine (Blanco) to the 4th cent. Scholars now seem inclined to a Late Antonine or a Severan date. - In the centre, part of two H.: an arm which carries a bunch of grapes with the inscription AVTVMNVS and a female figure, almost complete, who has the breast and r. arm uncovered, leading by the hand a dressed boy who holds a sheaf of stalks; at her feet the inscription AES-TAS. They are approaching a larger figure, of which remains only part of the head, with wings and the inscription AET[ernitas] at her feet. Recently, L. Musso proposes a reconstruction based on the mosaic of Silin (74), which is, in our opinion, quite fitting. Thus it would be the representation of the Seasons with their respective Karpoi, passing through the Zodiac circle. It can be deduced that Summer had a Karpos with ears of corn and herself a sheaf of corn in her l. hand.

74. (= Helios/Sol 199, = Kairoi/Tempora anni 47) Polychrome mosaic. Silin, Tunisia. From Silin. - Al Mahjub, O., III Congr. Int. sul mosaico antico Ravenna 1980 (1983) I 299-300 col. pl. after p. 148; Musso, o. c. 73. - Probably Severan. - The central emblem represents the seated Aion supporting the zodiac circle, through which the Seasons are walking. Spring with uncovered breast, a tray full of flowers and fruit, crown of flowers and a small branch in the r. hand. Summer, with naked breast, crown of corn stalks, a big stalk in the l. hand and a Karpos held in the r. hand, also crowned with stalks. Autumn, similar to the last, crowned with grapes and tendrils, holds a Karpos on her l. shoulder with a bunch of grapes in the hand. Winter with tunic and mantle that covers her head, wears crown of reeds, a reed in her l. hand and a Karpos under her r. arm.

Coins and medallions

75.* A series of Roman medallions present variations of this subject: Aion (→ Aion 24) standing, grasping with the r. hand the Zodiac circle and three H. crossing through it: Spring with a flower basket, Autumn with a bunch of grapes and Summer with stalks. a)* AE medallion, Antoninus Pius (A.D. 138-161). - Alföldi 7 pl. 12, a; Hanfmann II no. 80; Gnecci, Medaglioni II 15, 54 pl. 48, 9. - b) (= Aion 24*) AE medallion, Commodus (A.D. 177-192). - Gnecci, Medaglioni II 60, 75 pl. 83, 3; Alföldi 7 pl. 12b, c; Hanfmann II no. 82-83. - c) AU medallion, Siscia, Probus (A.D. 276-282). - Gnecci, Medaglioni I 10, 6-7 pl. 4, 2; Alföldi 7-8 pl. 12d; Hanfmann II no. 84. - In the last the four Seasons are already depicted. Legend TEMP FELICITAS; in the exergue SIS.

76.* Medallions with Tellus reclining on the reverse and the four Seasons as small female figures in procession: a) AE medallion, Hadrian (A.D. 117-138). - Gnecci, Medaglioni III 19, 90 pl. 145, 12. - Rev.: Tellus reclining to the l., resting her r. hand on the globe and the four Seasons around her, in the shape of female figures as on b. - b)* AE medallion, Commodus, A.D. 187. - Toynbee, o. c. 6, 143 pl. 19, 11; Gnecci, Medaglioni II 65, 125-131 pls. 86, 8-10; 87, 11. - The Seasons are approaching Tellus, carrying in their hands the corresponding seasonal products. Above Tellus, a grapevine. In the exergue TELLVS STABIL(ITA). The seasonal fruits are hard to identify. The first H. portrays Winter and holds a reed over her l. shoulder and a duck (?) in her r. hand. After her Spring, with a garland held with both hands, Summer with a crown in the r. and a stalk in the l., and Autumn with something that seems to be a bunch of grapes in the r. hand and a tray with fruit and flowers in the l. – c) AU aureus, AR denarius, AE sestertius, Rome, Iulia Domna (A.D. 196–211). – Hanfmann II no. 79; BMC Emp V 159, 20. 21 pl. 27, 9; 307, 766 pl. 46, 17. Rev.: →Fecunditas and four Seasons, as b. In the exergue FEVNDITAS.

I. Seated Horae

77. (= Kairoi/Tempora anni 166) Painted vault. Villa of Hadrian, Tivoli. – Ponce, o.c. 64, pl. 10; Wirth, RM 49, 1929, 158, who doubts that it belongs to the Villa of Hadrian; Hanfmann II no. 16. – The vault is a circle with four octagons inside; in each and also inside another circle are the seated H.: three female and one male. Spring, naked torso, rests the r. hand on a flower basket. Summer, naked torso too, holds a sheaf of stalks in the r. and a sickle in the l. hand. Autumn, clad in the same way, holds a basket with flowers or fruit and a flowered thyrsos in the l. Winter is an old bearded man, fully dressed, who warms his hands at the fire.

78. Wall painting described by John of Gaza, in Gaza or Alexandria. Lost. – John of Gaza 2, 253–313; Friedländer, P., Johannes von Gaza und Paulus Silentarius (1912) 209–212 pl. 1; Krämer, G., De Tabula Mundi ab Joanne Gazaeo descripta (1920) fig. 1 (also reproduced in Blanco, o.c. 48, II fig. 3); Hanfmann, Latomus 3, 1936, 111–118. – Not before the 5th cent. A.D. – John of Gaza describes two cycles of H. (cf. 103). One cycle shows them seated together and looking at Helios. Spring, crowned with roses with a necklace of roses and roses held in the kolpos of her garment, as well as in a silver patera that she holds in one hand «full of flowers from Cythera». Autumn has still some remains of the corresponding fruit on her garment. Summer wore a light garment and a hat, though, in spite of it, drops of sweat fall down her brow; in her hands ears of corn and a sickle, and the serpent of destiny that she showed to the travellers. Winter is covered with a green mantle and holds a vase from which rainwater pours.

79. Polychrome mosaic. Lost. From Fernan Nuñez (Córdoba). – Blazquez, J. M., MosEsp III no. 32 pl. 39; Debord, REA 1–4, 1984, 217. – 3rd cent. A.D. – The central part of a rectangular mosaic can be partially recomposed. In it seem to be two seated female figures; one of them half naked, holds in one hand an object, hard to identify; the other, clad, has at her feet a bearded male figure, a group that Blazquez identifies as Antioch and the Orontes; another two figures, who might have been inserted in this square, portray two Seasons; each is seated on a stool or bench; the one at the l. is wrapped in a dark mantle and has her head covered (inscr. ΜΩΝΗ?); near her, a figure that in part hides her, is wrapped in a light mantle, has her legs extended and seems to hold something in her hands; inscr. ΜΕΤΟΠΙΩΝ?, that identifies her as Autumn. It would be possible, in this context, that the figure with naked torso was Spring, however, she seems not to have had the corresponding inscription.

80. (= 107, = Kairoi/Tempora anni 57*/193) Polychrome mosaic. St-Germain-en-Laye, Mus. Ant. Nat. From Saint-Romain-en-Gal. – Lancha, J., Rec-MosGaule III 2, Vienne (1981) no. 368 pls. 109–111. – 200–225 A.D. – Mosaic with a calendar representation in a series of vignettes. There is a double cycle: seasonal activities and Erotes riding animals. The nude Erotes are riding a bull, a lion and a tiger corresponding respectively to Spring, Summer and Autumn, while a female figure similar to the putti, but wrapped in a mantle that covers her head, with a crown of reeds and a reed in her hand, is riding a boar, which corresponds with Winter.

81. (= 66) Phaëthon sarcophagus. – Summer, see 66.

82. (= 67) Phaëthon sarcophagus. – Summer and Spring, see 67.

83. (= Euthenia I with bibl.) Sardonyx patera, the «Tazza Farnese». Naples, Mus. Naz. 27611. – Furtwängler, AG III 253 pl. 55; Hanfmann II no. 13. – The identification of Triptolemos with Ptolemy Soter has been proposed, in which case 3rd cent. B.C.; certainly 3rd–2nd cent. B.C. – There are several Egyptian or Egypt-related divinities: →Neilos, →Euthenia, →Triptolemos, two Winds and possibly two H.: one seated and the other standing, both with naked torso; the first holds a bowl in the l. hand; the second, a horn or an empty rhyton; after her, five stalks. According to Furtwängler, the first would symbolize the Season of the flood, and the second of the sowing and harvest, the only two Seasons in Egypt.

84. (= 13*) Braunschweig onyx vase. – Summer, see 13.

85. (= Demeter/Ceres 164* with further refs.) Silver patera. Wien, Kunsthst. Mus. VII A 47. From Aquileia. – Matz, F., MarbWPr 1964, 22–31 pl. 12; Kraus, PKG pl. 370b. – 2nd quarter of 1st cent. A.D. – Representation of an Eleusinian sacrifice. Triptolemos helped by several boys; above, Ceres and Iuppiter and below, in the exergue, Tellus. Four female figures, probably H.; two to the r. of Triptolemos, one of them standing, with flowers on the head, wears a light tunic and rests on another who is seated, with head turned towards the centre of the patera; her naked torso and the big stalks on her head identify her as Summer. The other two H. are to the l. of the patera; one stoops, with naked torso, to feed from a tray the swans that pull the chariot, and can be identified as Autumn; another standing, fully dressed, strokes one of the swans' heads; she can be Winter, although the crown on her head seems to be made with leaves instead of reeds.

86.* (= Kairoi/Tempora anni 81/214) Silver Situla. London, BM. From near Vienne (France). – Walters, BMSilverPlate 18–20 pls. 10–11; Hanfmann II no. 384; Strong, D., Greek and Roman Gold and Silver Plate (1966) 176–177. – Disputed date: 1st–5th cent. A.D.; probably 1st–2nd cent. – H. on animals alternating with putti and vegetable motifs. Spring seated sideways on a panther, with a mantle that covers the legs and is billowing over her head; crowned with flowers, holding a branch with two flowers in her r. hand; in front of the panther there is a basket full of flowers and around her some Erotes are fluttering: one of them is in front of her, and crowned with flowers; behind her are two, one with a garland in his hands, another without wings, with a lamb on his back. Summer, seated on a reclining bull, wears a crown of ears of corn, clad as the last, and with a sheaf of ears in his l. hand; behind, two genii, one winged and the other not, the last holding a sickle and a winnowing device. Autumn reclining on a panther, with a crown of vine leaves and a mantle that covers the legs; in his r. hand, a vine branch with a bunch of grapes, and with his l. hand holding on his knees a basket full of grapes and of other fruit; in front, a winged putto with a dish of fruit on his head; behind, another with a bunch of grapes and a third holds the panther's claw. Winter is portrayed as an old woman seated on a boar, with long tunic and mantle that also covers her head. Behind her, a winged genius with hood, a shepherd's stick in his l. hand and two birds held by the legs in his r. Almost every Eros wears a mantle floating over the shoulders.

J. Reclining Horae

Reliefs

87. Cinerary Urn of Cassius. Boston, MFA 1972.356. – Comstock/Vermeule, SculptBoston no. 243; Koch/Sichteremann, RömSark 54 n. 161 pl. 59. – 2nd cent. A.D. – Two reclining figures at the front of the lid: a bearded satyr and an H. (Comstock/Vermeule: maenad) with naked torso. Two Erotes offer a garland to the Satyr (Spring), and a basket to the H. (Autumn).

88. (= Kairoi/Tempora anni 90*) Sarcophagus lid, marble. Rome, Mus. Naz. Rom. 121657. From Rome, Vigna Casali. – Kranz no. 374 pl. 96, 2. – About 160 A.D. – Four recumbent H. confronted in pairs, rest their hands on baskets with seasonal products, served by Erotes that lean on one of their legs. Spring, with tunic and mantle billowing back, wears a wreath of flowers, holds a basket with flowers; Summer with nude torso, crowned with ears of corn, with ears in the background and also a basket with ears carried by an Eros. Autumn, in the opposite direction, clad like Spring, with a basket of grapes, is served by an Eros who brings her a bunch of grapes; at her feet grows a vine; Winter, with tunic and mantle that covers the head, with a crown of reeds and in front of a landscape of reeds, with a basket and a sheaf of reeds in her hand; her Eros, dressed, brings a hare in his l. hand and a duck in the r.

89.* (= Kairoi/Tempora anni 93) Sarcophagus lid, marble. Vatican, Gall. Lapidaria 9265. – Kranz no. 400 pls. 104, 3–4; 105. – Last decade of the 2nd cent. A.D. – Like 88, although with some differences; the order is: Winter, Autumn, Summer and Spring; the products are inside cornucopiae; here there is no landscape against which the figures stood out; the Erotes are portrayed frontal, independent of the H., and bring their products in baskets, except the one of Winter who brings them in his hands. Moreover, the cornucopia of Winter is full of olive branches.

90.* (= Kairoi/Tempora anni 92) Sarcophagus lid. Cleveland Mus. of Art 28.856. From Rome. – Kranz no. 343 pl. 96, 4. – 2nd half of 2nd cent. A.D. – Like 88, 89, with the succession: Autumn, Summer, Spring and Winter. Winter's basket also contains olive branches.

91. (= Kairoi/Tempora anni 244) Sarcophagus lid. Rome, Gall. Borghese 87. – Kranz no. 368 pl. 100, 7. – About A.D. 150. – Four H. of the same type, with the usual attributes, although some of the baskets seem to be empty; between them, instead of Erotes, there are craters, the first full of flowers and ears of corn, the second, of grapes and olive leaves. The succession is: Spring, Summer, Autumn and Winter.

92.* (= Kairoi/Tempora anni 89/189/200) Sarcophagus lid, marble. Vatican, Cortile Ottogono of the Belvedere 941. – Kranz no. 399 pls. 96, 1; – A.D. 140–150. – Three H. naked above the waist, with mantle billowing behind the head; Autumn, with grapes, a stick behind her on which she rests her hand, and a winged putto who also brings grapes; Summer, with stalks in her hand and behind, and a harvesting putto; Spring, with a vessel full of flowers and two putti, one supporting it and another getting ready to bring a similar vessel; Winter, veiled, before a landscape of reeds, surrounded by two putti with short tunics and trousers; one carries a kid on his shoulders and another holds a hare by the ears. On both sides of the frieze, at the ends of the lid, by way of acroteria, there are two heads: one crowned with vine leaves and another with reeds, next to Autumn and Winter respectively, which can also be considered as representing these Seasons.

93.* (= Kairoi/Tempora anni 91, →Iason 67 with bibl.) Sarcophagus lid, marble. Rome, Mus. Naz. Rom. 75248. From Porta Maggiore. – Kranz no. 372 pl. 96, 3. – About A.D. 160. – The four H. are dressed with a sleeveless tunic and a mantle billowing behind the head; Winter, with covered breast, Spring and Autumn with uncovered breast and Summer naked above the waist. They have the characteristic attributes, except Spring who has a circular garland in her r. hand.

Gem

94.* Glass. Copenhagen, Thorv. Mus. I 344. – Fossing, ThorvGems 116, 686 pl. 9. – Autumn: H. reclining on a rock under a vine, whose grapes are gathered by Eros.

Sculpture in the round

95.* Sculptural group, marble. London, BM. – Smith, BMSculpture III no. 1764; Hanfmann II no. 379; Toynbee, o.c. 6, 106 pl. 27, 1 (Hispania). – Late 2nd cent. A.D. (Toynbee). – Winter: reclining female figure, fully dressed, with tunic and mantle that covers her head, rests her r. hand on a hare which is in a basket on her r. leg, a little raised, offered by a young man dressed in a long-sleeved tunic and trousers.

96. Sculptural group, marble. Paris, Louvre. – Reinach, RépStat I 72, 94. – 2nd cent. A.D. – Autumn: reclining female figure, with tunic and mantle billowing over her head, rests her l. hand on a basket with fruit and grapes served by a naked Eros.

97.* Sculptural group, marble. Vatican, Chiaramonti Mus. 6. From a Roman villa. - Amelung, SkulptVatMus I 314 pl. 31; Helbig¹ I no. 384. - 2nd half of 2nd cent. or early 3rd cent. A.D. - Autumn: reclining female figure, dressed in tunic and mantle around her waist; holds a bunch of grapes in the r. hand and with the l. holds a vine branch; in front, four Erotes with bunches and baskets of grapes.

98.* Sculptural group, marble. Vatican, Chiaramonti Mus. 13. Found with 97. - Amelung, SkulptVatMus 321 pl. 32; Hanfmann II no. 398; Helbig¹ I no. 384. - Same date as 97. - Winter: reclining female figure completely wrapped in a mantle from which only the face, neck and hands emerge; in the l. hand she holds a reed; around her, five Erotes are playing with ducks and with a turtle in a stream.

K. Winged Horae

I. Alone

a) Standing

99. (Uncertain) Painted ceiling. Villa of Hadrian, Lost. Drawing by F. Bartoli, reproduced by Ashby, T., BSR 7, 1914, 32 pl. 14, 1. - The ceiling has in its centre a square with curved sides, held by four winged figures, who have been interpreted as seasonal representations. However, they have not the corresponding attributes; Spring would wear a light tunic that leaves her r. breast uncovered; Summer would have the torso totally uncovered; Autumn would be fully dressed, although in dancing the l. knee is uncovered; Winter would be dressed with a heavier and dark garment. There is a chromatic gradation from the brightest (Spring) to the darkest (Winter). Underneath, following the same diagonals, wingless busts, also Seasons, framed on wreaths. In the centre of the vault, a Victory. The H. have big wings that stretch from head to waist.

100.* Polychrome mosaic. Paris, Louvre. From Antioch (Syria), House of Daphne. - Levi, Antioch pls. 52-57, esp. 54-55. - About A.D. 325. - Large mosaic in two parts; one depicting personifications of abstract ideas and the other in which we are interested, an octagonal well at centre. Four lateral trapezia with hunting scenes were separated by four bands, set according the pavement diagonals; the four corners of these bands were occupied with plants, from which emerge female figures representing the Seasons. Spring, with a sheer tunic, crowned with flowers, grows out of a bed of flowers and holds open a garment full of flowers; Summer, with a similar tunic, although with more movement, is emerging from stalks, wears a big hat and has a sheaf of corn in her arms; Autumn, rising from olive and vine, is crowned with olive leaves and carries a garment full of fruit (grapes and others); Winter, who grows out of reeds, wears tunic and mantle that covers the head and a wreath of reeds; the central part with the objects she would carry is lacking. This is the only Season depicted standing, without the rhythmic movement of her sisters. All wear earrings and necklaces, and Spring also wears two bracelets. Above Spring and Summer, apparently branches of olive; above Autumn, branches of olive and vine, and above Winter, reeds.

101.* Bronze statuette. Paris, Cab. Méd. - Babalon/Blanchet, BiblNatBronzes 42 no. 94. - 2nd cent. A.D. (?) - Autumn: female figure growing out of an acanthus chalice; wears a nebris on which is carried various fruit.

b) Seated

102.* Polychrome mosaic. Tunis, Bardo. From Carthage. - Parrish no. 12 pls. 20-21. - A.D. 300-325. - Mosaics, whose figure motives were in four squares with the representation of a Season in each; two are lost. Spring, clad in tunic and mantle, and with haloed head, is seated on a rock, placed in a rocky landscape, with a column behind which sits a bird. She wears a crown of pine branches (?) and flowers on a fold of her garment; next to her a goat. Summer, similar except for the naked torso and the stalks crown, also carries stalks on her garment. At the back a vase on a column, and partridges pecking the floor alongside.

2. With other figures

103. (= 78) Painting described by John of Gaza. - The second cycle shows six H. (who seem to have wings), pulling Eos' chariot, and another six, surely winged, following it, and a seventh H., dark, walking beside; they are the personifications of the hours of the day (six of the morning, six of the afternoon and one of the night, the dark one) who are very different to our seasonal H., in spite of the identity of name. All of them carry a light yoke around their necks, that they hold in their hands.

104. Vault mosaic. Samos, Imperial Baths. - Martini, W., Das Gymnasium vom Samos (1984) 200 colour pls. 1a, b, 3; pl. 28. - 2nd half of 2nd cent. A.D. - Only parts of two heads survive, one frontal, of a winged female figure, of whose wings only the upper part is preserved, and another in profile, with a crown of ears of corn. They could be two winged female Seasons forming part of the vault's iconographical plan. A reconstruction of the first figure has been proposed carrying in her hands an object or dress which probably held seasonal products; in this case, the first could be Autumn or Spring, and the second is certainly Summer.

L. Heads with attributes only in the hair

I. Emerging from vegetal or floral motifs

105. Ceiling painting in the tomb of the Pancratii. Rome, Via Latina. - Petersen, E., AdI 1860, 348-415; MonInst 6 pl. 53, 1. - Probably 2nd cent. A.D. - In the corners heads of H. that grow out of acanthus leaf calyxes. Two remain: Summer, crowned with ears of corn and with two young bulls alongside, and Autumn, with vine leaves and two panthers by her side.

Mosaics

106. Black and white mosaic. Lost. From near the SS. Trinità dei Pellegrini Church, Rome. - Blake, o. c. 28, 169-170 pl. 39, 3; Hanfmann II no. 221 pl. 113. - Antonine. - In the centre Mercury and Abundantia surrounded by scrolls, which in the corners of the mosaic each frame a Season. They include the head, neck and part of the shoulders, and grow out of an acanthus leaf calyx. Winter, veiled, with bare stalks alongside her head. Spring with a crown of leaves. Autumn, with a crown of vine leaves with bunches of grapes hanging by her head. Summer with a crown of stalks.

107. (= 80., = Kairoi/Tempora anni 57*/193) Polychrome mosaic. Saint-Germain-en-Laye, Mus. Ant. Nat. From Saint-Romain-en-Gal. Hanfmann II no. 227-303; Lancha, RecMosGaule III 2 (1981) no. 368 pls. 119, 121-122. - About A.D. 225. - Seasons and Months. On one of the small sides (the other is lost), four heads are emerging, without neck. At the sides, from the floral calyx grows a vertical stalk that opens in a corolla from which the head emerges; in the two panels between them the heads emerge directly from the floral calyx and wear a kind of helmet; alongside scroll-shaped stalks which end in flowers. Lancha 221 suggests in the exterior two panels representations of Spring and in the interior of Summer and supposes that in the lost end, similar representations would be of Autumn and Winter.

108.* Polychrome mosaic. Vatican, fourth stanza of Raffael, called Sala di Costantino. From Laterano. - Nogara, B., I mosaici antichi conservati nei palazzi pontifici del Vaticano e del Laterano (1910) 7-8 pls. 10-14. - 3rd cent. A.D. (?) - Mosaic with geometric decoration except for the four octagons of the centre, which have the heads and upper necks of the Seasons. Three grow out of an acanthus leaf calyx; only Winter does not, and is hooded, with a pair of aquatic plants growing alongside. Spring with flowers; Summer with ears of corn; Autumn with fruit, complete the four Seasons, all the attributes being on the heads.

109. Polychrome mosaic. Vienne (Isère), rue des Colonnnes. - Stern, H., in III Coll. Int. sul mosaico antico, Ravenna 1980 (1983) II 328 fig. 4. - Circular geometric mosaic, surrounded by a scroll with female busts (head, neck and part of the shoulders) resting on pairs of leaves. Spring with a crown of flowers.

110. Polychrome mosaic. Aquileia, Oratory of the Good Shepherd of the Abito Singulare. - Bertacchi, L., «Architettura e mosaico», in Da Aquileia a Venezia (1980) 266-268 pls. 213-215. - 5th cent. A.D. - Christian. Mosaic of the good Shepherd in the central circle, surrounded by a floral scroll band with birds. In the corners, busts of the H. with nimbi, growing out of acanthus calyxes and flanked by stalks with leaves and flowers. Spring: crown of flowers. Summer: stalks in the hair. Autumn: crown of fruit. Winter: mantle that covers her head and aquatic plants.

2. Related to floral or vegetable elements, but not emerging from them

111. Polychrome mosaic. Rome, Mus. Naz. Rom. (formerly Antiquarium Com.). From Rome. - Blake, MAAR 17, 1940, 100-101 pl. 14, 2. - Period of decline (Blake); 2nd cent. A.D. (?) - Twelve squares separated by cable; at the corners, set on the diagonal, are the busts (head, neck and part of the shoulders), resting on the closed central leaf of a group of three acanthus leaves emerging from the angle; the lateral leaves are longer and frame the busts partially. The Seasons are depicted quite schematically: two of them seem to correspond to Winter, hooded and with bare stalks by the side. The other two are hard to identify; one has a crown with small pointed leaves and the other small branches, Y-shaped with small balls at the ends; these could belong to Spring or to Summer.

3. Independent of floral elements, although they may be inserted in them

112. Polychrome mosaic. El Djem, Arch. Mus. A 86. From Thysdrus. - Parrish no. 27 pl. 39a-c. - Late Antonine. - Four floral rings with four female heads with seasonal attributes at their centre: Spring, with hair adorned with flowers; Summer, with stalks; Autumn, with a crown of vine leaves; Winter, with covered head and crown of reeds. All of them wear earrings.

113. Polychrome mosaic. Synagogue of 'Isfiya (Israel). - Avi Yonah, M., «A 6th cent. synagogue at 'Isfiya», The Quarterly of the Department of Antiquities in Palestine 3, 1934, 125-126 pl. 44. - 4th cent. A.D. - Circular Zodiac; heads of the Seasons in the angles between the Zodiac circle and the square inside which it is inserted. Only one survives: head and neck very schematic, necklace and crown; by the side, pomegranates, ears and objects difficult to identify. It is probably Autumn.

UNCERTAIN

114. Polychrome mosaic. Knossos, Roman villa. - Payne, H., JHS 55, 1935, 164 pl. 11; Hanfmann II no. 219. - Mid-2nd cent. A.D. - Dionysos in the centre, surrounded by plants of the four Seasons; below, in squares at the corners of the mosaic, four heads without attributes that may symbolize each Season.

115. Marble relief. Klagenfurt, Landesmus. für Kärnten 246. - Piccottini, G., CSIR Österreich II 4 no. 312 pl. 11. - 2nd cent. A.D. - Central medallion with a nude maenad; to the l., two smaller medallions: a youth, perhaps a male (Autumn), and a female head wrapped in a mantle (Winter); two symmetrical medallions should be at the opposite side of the central motif.

M. Busts with attributes only in the hair

I. Growing out of plants

Painting

116. (Uncertain) Vault of a room in the Via della Navicella. Rome, Antiquarium Comunale. - Collini, M., MemPontAcc ser. 3, 7, 1944, 240 fig. 198; Hanf-mann II no. 225. - 3rd cent. A.D., belonging to a repair of the decoration. - In the vault corners are four busts growing out of acanthus calyxes: head, neck and part of the breast; wearing tunic, haloed and crowned with seasonal fruits; the attributes are hard to identify.

Polychrome mosaics

117. (= 54) El Djem, Arch. Mus. A 53. From Thysdrus. - Late Antonine. - Three lines of floral scrolls; in the centre, a medallion with a male bust crowned with plants of the four Seasons; in the diagonals, three figures alluding to each of them. From the baskets which they hold, grow floral stalks framing the busts; these lean on floral tendrils emerging from the junctions. Spring, a youth with tunic and crown of roses. Summer, naked, with necklace and stalks in the hair. Autumn, clad, with crown of grapes and the hair pinned in two curls tied with a wide band. The satyrs also have similar attributes. All the figures have African type faces.

118. From Vibo Valentia (Catanzaro, Italy). - Delplace, C., AntClass 43, 1974, 413 pl. 64. - Octagon with curved sides inserted in a square, with a central medallion with fishes. At the interior and exterior of the octagon, floral motifs and birds; inside the octagon, following the diagonals of the square, busts of the Seasons flanked by floral tendrils that seem to grow out of them, separated by peacocks and pairs of partridges. Spring, with a thick necklace, naked breast and crown of flowers; Autumn, with a tunic that leaves the l. shoulder uncovered and crown of vine leaves; Winter with mantle and covered head; Summer, half naked torso, wearing a hat.

119.* London, BM. From Thrupton. - Hinks, BMPaintings no. 35 pl. 111; Smith no. 94. - 4th cent. A.D. - Circular emblem with Bacchus, lost; in the corners between the exterior circle and the square in which it is inserted, four busts flanked by long leaves emerging from the shoulders. Although damaged, it is possible to identify Winter from her hooded head; the other two preserved are quite similar, with flowers and leaves in the hair, and seem to be Spring and Autumn, or Spring and Summer. All the busts, except Winter, are depicted naked.

120. (Uncertain) Knossos, Roman villa. - Payne, o.c. 114, 164 pl. 12. - 2nd cent. A.D. - Christian. Head of Medusa surrounded by triangles with curved angles. Inside the circle, in the angles formed by the square in which they are inserted, busts of the Seasons (?) growing out of floral scrolls.

Relief

121. (Uncertain) Stone capital. Kreuznach, Mus. - Espérandieu, Recueil VIII 6159. - Four busts growing out of an acanthus chalice. Without visible attributes.

2. Outlined busts separated from the frame

a) Straight bust

Painting

122.* Miniature. Leyden, Univ., Cod. Voss. Lat. Q 79, fol. 82v. - Thiele, G., Antike Himmelsbilder

(1898) 133-134 pl. 57; Hanfmann II no. 159. - The original probably belongs to the last 3rd of 4th cent. A.D. - Four female busts in the corners of the folio. All of them wear a light tunic and a mantle over the l. shoulder, except Winter who is covered with a mantle. Spring, with crown of flowers. Autumn, with crown of tendrils. Summer, with crown of stalks.

Polychrome mosaics

123. Lost. St. Colombe. - Lancha, RecMosGaule III 2 no. 355 pl. 98. - 1st-2nd cent. A.D. - Two hexagons with birds and one with a female figure veiled, the hair tied with a fillet and a crown of small leaves and bunches of grapes alongside the head (Autumn).

124. Lost. From Hadrumetum. - Parrish no. 60 pl. 82. - Severan. - Four tondi framed by floral garlands with three medallions inside. There remain: Winter hooded; Summer with a sleeveless tunic and crown of stalks; Autumn with a red band and grapes as a crown, with a nebris over the breast and tunic.

125. Córdoba, Alcazar of the Christian Kings. From Córdoba, Plaza de la Corredera. - Blazquez, J.M., MosEsp III no. 27 pl. 1, 1. 9. - Late 3rd or beginning of fourth cent. A.D. - Central medallion with Amor and Psyche; the four Seasons in the smallest. Only Winter, hooded and crowned with olive branches, and Spring, crowned with flowers, are preserved.

126.* Mérida, Nat. Mus. 3366. From the Hinojal (Mérida). - Blanco, A., MosEsp I no. 65 pls. 95-98. - 4th cent. A.D. - Boar-hunting emblem, framed by floral scrolls in the middle of which are the Seasons. Winter, wrapped in a mantle that covers the back of the head, a fillet with two big leaves encircles her front; with earrings; inscr. HIB(ernus). Spring with a tunic and a fillet in the hair with two round flowers; inscr. VIRAN(us). Summer, a garment drawn over the l. shoulder, crown of ears and inscr. HESTAS. Autumn, tunic and mantle, band in the hair and bunches of grapes by the sides; inscr. AVTVMNVS.

127. Lost. From La Quintilla (Murcia). - Ramallo, S., Mosaicos romanos del Conventus Carthaginiensis (1986) 100-101 pl. 19. - 4th cent. A.D. - In the central medallion, Venus with the shell; in the corners, four female busts set following the diagonal. Autumn, with the hair tied with a fillet and uncovered shoulders; Winter, with mantle and the head covered, leaves probably of ivy, around; Spring, with leaves and flowers; Summer, with naked torso, except the l. shoulder, and crown of stalks.

128. Aquileia, Theodosian Basilica, in situ. - Menni, L., «Architettura e mosaico», in Da Aquileia a Venezia (1980) 202 pls. 173. 175. - Various busts inside circles in the central mosaic; among them, at least two Seasons; Summer, draped with tunic and big spikes alongside the head. Spring, clad in the same way and with a band and flowers on the head in the manner of a crown.

Reliefs

129. Sarcophagus of C. Ateius Valerius, marble. Ivrea, in front of the Cathedral. - Gabelmann, H., Die Werkstattgruppen der oberitalischen Sarkophage (1973)

no. 61; 124. 139 pl. 28. - Severan. - Sarcophagus of the tabernacle type, in which acroteria are depicted as busts of the four Seasons. In the front Spring and Summer; at the back Autumn and Winter; all of them show the r. shoulder uncovered, though Winter covers her head with a mantle. Autumn wears grapes in the hair; Spring, crown of flowers; Summer, of stalks.

130.* Sarcophagus of P. Vettius Sabinus, marble. Modena, Mus. Lapidario Estense. From Modena. - Gabelmann, o.c. 129, no. 80; 139 pls. 45-47. - Severan. - Sarcophagus of the tabernacle type. There is a complete cycle of birds and seasonal plants in the acroteria. In those at the back are the busts of Spring crowned with flowers and of Summer with a crown of stalks.

131. Capital with reliefs. Treves, Rhein. Landesmus. From Neumagen. - Espérandieu, Germanie 5194. - 3rd cent. A.D., probably. - Capital with four «anguipedes» in the corners, and four female busts, crowned with leaves, in the centre of each side.

132. (= Helios/Sol 288* with bibl.) Bronze plaque. Budapest, Nat. Mus. 6.1943.1. From a Mithraeum in Brigetio. - Vermaseren, CIMRM no. 1727 pl. 448. - Mithras relief; four busts in medallions at the corners, seemingly without attributes, except Winter in the lower l. corner who is hooded. According to Vermaseren, Spring and Autumn are male and the other two female.

b) Slightly curved busts

Wall painting

133. (Uncertain) Naples, Mus. Naz. From Pompeii IX 5, 2. - HBr pl. 139; Curtius, WP 220 pl. 130. - Mid 1st cent. A.D. - On Achilles' shield it is possible to see among other figures four small heads, that have been interpreted as Seasons. They are, however, too small for certainty.

Polychrome mosaics

134. Tunis, Bardo. From Carthage. - Parrish no. 15 pl. 24. - Severan. - Rows of triple concentric circles of floral elements with various busts and animals inside; in the third row (the last preserved, and damaged in the lower part), four busts; one satyr and a bearded man in profile, and two Seasons; Spring with a crown of flowers and a light tunic, and Winter with mantle and hooded. It seems illogical to try to complete here a mixed cycle with the satyr and the bearded head in profile. It rather seems that the two lacking Seasons are under the extant ones.

135. (= Helios/Sol 272 with further refs.) Orbe, Boscéaz (Switzerland), in situ. - v. Gonzenbach, o.c. 55, 184-194 no. 95 V pls. 60-67. - A.D. 200-225. - Nine octagons separated by squares with geometric borders. The planetary gods, among others, are shown on them. All is surrounded by a band with animals and, in the corners, the four Seasons. Spring and, in bad condition, Autumn still survive. Spring wears a diadem, and green branches and red flowers at the temples, and has the l. shoulder uncovered; Autumn, with crown of vine leaves and grapes, with both shoulders covered. Part of another bust, seemingly naked, who might be Summer, is also preserved.

c) Round busts

136. Polychrome mosaic. Seville, House of the Countess of Lebrija. From Itálica. - Blanco, A., MosEsp I no. 1 pls. 1-3. - 2nd half of 2nd cent. A.D. - A cable moulding forms a net or circles alternately large and small, with several mythological figures: young Polyphemus or Apollo, Leda, Ganymede, Europe, etc.; those at the corners are occupied with Seasons, set following the diagonals. Summer, with nude torso and crown of ears of corns; Autumn, probably a male figure, is naked, with a skin over the shoulder and crown of tendrils; Winter, with covered head and crown of reeds; Spring, tunic and crown of flowers.

3. Busts not outlined nor separated from the frame

a) Busts in squares

Polychrome mosaics

137. (= Dionysos/Bacchus [in peripheria occ.] 201* with bibl.) El Djem, Arch. Mus. A 70. - From Thysdrus. - Parrish no. 38 pl. 56. - Mid-3rd cent. A.D. - Twelve squares, the central occupied with Bacchus, and the next four with the Seasons: Autumn, Summer and Spring wear a sleeveless tunic and crown of grapes, stalks and flowers respectively. Winter with mantle over the head.

138. Ephesus, Thermae of Scholastikia, paidiskeion. - Mellink, M., AJA 63, 1959, 84 pl. 24, 10. - Late 1st cent. A.D. - Four squares separated by a cable frame and occupied by the four Seasons: Summer and Spring are lost; Winter, wrapped in a mantle that covers the head; Autumn, with a sleeveless tunic and crown of vine leaves.

139. Lyon, Guimet Mus. From Lyon. - Stern, RecMosGaule II 1 no. 48 pls. 29-31. - A.D. 170-180. - Five squares separated by guilloche. Dionysos in the centre; in the others the Seasons: Spring, with crown of flowers tied with a fillet and mantle across the l. shoulder. Winter, hooded and with crown of reeds. Only part of the head of Autumn, with a crown of leaves, is preserved.

140. Saint-Roman-en-Gal. - Lancha, RecMosGaule III 2 no. 407 pls. 170-171. - 3rd cent. A.D. - Twenty squares separated with bands; in the biggest ones, geometric decorative motifs, animals and part of two Seasons: Spring or Autumn with tunic and band with small leaves by way of crown. Winter, quite damaged, with a crown of ivy leaves and covered head.

141. Rome, Antiquarium Comunale. - Blake, o.c. III, 109 pl. 25. - Caracallan. - Summer, with tunic, necklace and band surrounding the hair and two stalks at the temples.

142. Rome, Mus. Naz. Rom. 1252. From the villa of Baccano. - Becatti, G., Mosaici antichi in Italia, Reg. VII: Baccano: Villa romana (1970) 9-11 pl. 1. - 2nd cent. A.D. (Becatti); late 3rd-4th cent. (Parlasca); probably Severan, for its relationship with the Zliten mosaics. - Spring, with tunic and mantle hanging over the arms; crown of small leaves tied with a fillet and flowers at the ears.

143. Rome, Pal. of the Quirinal. - Becatti, G., in Mosaïque gréco-romaine II (1971) 185 n. 54 pl. 52, 2. - Late 2nd or beginning of 3rd cent. A.D. - Insert in a modern mosaic. Summer with light tunic and mantle across the breast; hat, and ears of corn by the head side. She possibly had wings, but it is likely that this is the result of restoration.

144. Destroyed. From Hadrumetum. - Parrish no. 59 pls. 80-81. - Thirteen squares with the representation of animals, plants and, in the centre, an inscription; four of them, with the Seasons. Only part of the mantle and of the band which formed the crown of Winter survive. Autumn, with tunic, without mantle, and a crown of grapes joined with a band. Spring, a crown of flowers; Summer, of stalks.

145. Köln, Röm.-Germ. Mus. From near the south tower of the cathedral of Köln. - v. Boeselager, D./Precht, R., BonnJbb 183, 1983, 417-419 pls. 16-20. - Mid 3rd cent. A.D. - In one of the extant squares is Venus; in another, Winter as a veiled woman crowned with reeds.

Reliefs

146. Mithras relief, stone. Schloß Philippsruhe, Hanau. From the Mithraeum of Rüdingen, Hanau. - CIMRM II 1137. - Late 2nd or 3rd cent. A.D. - Mithras tauroctonos; above him a series of friezes with several figures related to him; among them, four small busts, the four Seasons: two are lost, and a female head and a bearded man with veil, probably Winter.

147. Mithras relief, stone. Wiesbaden, Städtisches Mus. - From the Mithraeum of Hedderheim, Nida. - CIMRM 1083 A 10 pl. 274. - The four Seasons in profile placed in the frame of the relief next to the Winds. Spring, with flowers in the head and a wreath of leaves over the shoulders; Summer, with a fillet in the hair; Autumn, with crown of stalks in the hair and leaves on the breast; Winter veiled.

b) Busts inside pointed squares

148. Polychrome mosaic. Vienne, Mus. Lap. Grenoble, Mus. Dauphinois. From Saint-Roman-en-Gal. - Lancha, RecMosGaule III 2, no. 383 pls. 135-137. - Advanced 2nd cent. A.D. - Alternation of stars with eight points and squares; in those at the corners are the Seasons, placed following the diagonal in their corresponding square. Winter (?), tunic across the r. shoulder, fillet in front with pine cones alongside; Spring (?), a sleeveless tunic with a fibula at each shoulder, fillet with leaves and fruit, perhaps grapes.

c) Slightly curved busts

Polychrome mosaics

149. (= Ganymedes 216 with bibl.) Partly destroyed. The rest in the Mus. Lap., Vienne. From Saint-Romain-en-Gal. - Lancha, RecMosGaule III 2, no. 366 pls. 89b. 103b. 104. - A.D. 175-200. - Rape of Ganymede in the central medallion; at the sides, squares with curved sides with the busts of the Seasons. Only the bust of Winter, with head covered and crown, maybe of pine leaves, is preserved.

150. Sens, Mus. Municipal. From Sens. - Darmon, P., RecMosGaule II 3, no. 415 pls. 11. 15. - 225-275 A.D. - Emblem of a big mosaic with the Sun subduing the horses of Phaethon. In the corners between the medallion and the exterior square, are the four haloed busts of the Seasons. Winter, with mantle over the head; Autumn, with crown of grapes joined with a band. Summer, a crown of leaves.

d) Semicircular busts

Painting

151. Miniature. Illustration of a Codex with the Notitia Dignitatum. a) Copy of the 15th cent. Paris, Bibl. Nat. - Hanfmann II no. 143a pl. 116. - Four busts with nimbi, tunic and mantle, without visible attributes, with the inscriptions AVTVMNVS, HIE-MIS, AESTAS, VERNVS (sic), in the four corners of the ara, the front presenting a Divina Electio held by two winged Victories. Winter has a mantle over the head. - b) Copy of the 15th cent. Munich, Staatsbibliothek, Latinus 10291. - Seek, O., Notitia Dignitatum (1876) 102. - Similar to a, except that Winter has the head covered and the inscription HIEMS.

Polychrome mosaics

152. Tunis, Bardo A 402. From Oued Glat. - Parrish no. 55 pl. 74a. - Severan. - Only part of the mosaic survives. In a medallion, bust of Winter, with the upper part of the head lost; the head was covered with a mantle; below, two small squares with a rabbit and a feline, respectively, maybe related to the Season. In the next medallion, which might belong to a corner of the mosaic, a rose basket, probably the symbol of Spring. It seems to be a double cycle: female busts with animals as attributes and seasonal plants.

153.* Palermo, Mus. Reg. 2289. From Marsala. - v. Boeselager, D., Antike Mosaiken in Sizilien (1983) 146-149 pl. 95-99. - 2nd-3rd cent. A.D. - Spring with a sleeveless tunic and a fillet in the hair. Summer with a crown of stalks tied with a fillet. Winter, tunic, mantle that covers the head and reeds tied with a fillet. Autumn, tunic that leaves the r. arm uncovered and a crown of vine leaves.

154.* Cremona, Mus. Civ. - Donderer, M., Die Chronologie der römischen Mosaiken in Venetien und Istrien bis zur Zeit der Antonine (1986) no. 19 pl. 46. - 3rd quarter of 2nd cent. A.D. - A series of octagons and squares; the first, with an eight-petalled rosette inside; the second, with stylized floral motifs and busts of the Seasons. Of these survive only Spring, with floral crown and chlamys across the l. shoulder, and another with naked torso, the head covered with a veil and a crown of leaves. If it is Winter, as has been suggested, it is unorthodox.

155. Vienne, Mus. Lap. From Vienne. - Lancha, RecMosGaule III 2, no. 313 pls. 52-53. - A.D. 175-180. - Several motifs in squares or circles: one part with animals and the other with Theseus and Ariadne, each with a medallion, flanked by others with the four Seasons, arranged following their diagonals.

Summer, whose upper part is lost, wore a crown of ears of corn; over the shoulders there are remains of a chlamys. Autumn, a tunic and on the head a band that holds vine leaves and bunches of grapes. Winter, a mantle that covers the head and pine cones with pine leaves by the head side, tied with a fillet in the manner of a crown.

156. Loupian (Hérault), Gallo-Roman villa. - Lavagne, H./Rouquette, D./Prudhomme, R., Revue Archéologique de Narbonnaise 14, 1981, 198-200 pls. 18-19. - 4th cent. A.D. - The four Seasons in the circles at the corners. Spring with a sleeveless tunic buttoned up the shoulders and a crown with leaves and flowers. Winter covered with mantle.

157. Seville, Santiago del Campo Coll. From Itálica. - Blanco, A., MosEsp II 25 pls. 50-51. - A.D. 200-225. - There might have been five busts but only three survive: all wear a fillet in the hair as if it was a diadem, to support the seasonal attributes; Spring, with tunic and crown of leaves; Winter, with tunic and mantle over the head and a crown of bare branches. Another figure, seemingly male, has a baldric across the naked breast and laurel crown. It could be Apollo, surrounded by the Seasons.

158.* London, BM M 29. From Carthage. - Parrish no. 10 pls. 17-18. - 2nd half of 4th cent. A.D. - Panels with the representation of the twelve Months and in the corners busts of the four Seasons. Spring, tunic adorned with clavi and mantle on the l. shoulder; a bun at the middle of the head with a pearl or a flower on it, and earrings; Summer, nude torso, except the mantle over the l. shoulder; crown of stalks, earrings and necklace.

Relief

159. Stone, Volubilis, Arch of Caracalla, in situ. - Domergue, C., Mél. A. Piganiol (1966) 463-472. - Round medallions with the seasonal attributes. Autumn, crown of tendrils, mainly lost; Winter, with covered head and crown of reeds; Summer, chlamys across leaving uncovered the r. shoulder, and crown of ears of corn; Spring, lost, crown of small leaves. This kind of representation is more mosaistic than sculptural.

e) Busts at the exterior corners of mosaics

Polychrome mosaics

160. Cherchel, Park of the Mosaics. From Caesarea (Algeria). - Parrish no. 18 pls. 27-28a. - 1st half of 4th cent. A.D. - Vintage scenes on a wide band around the central square with Bacchic scenes; in the corners busts of the Seasons. Only two are partially preserved: Winter with the head covered and Spring with crown of flowers.

161. Sousse, Arch. Mus. From Thysdrus. - Parrish no. 24 pls. 33-34. - Early Severan. - In the centre, Achilles on Skyros; marine subjects. In the corners, busts of the Seasons. Autumn, only part of the face and of a crown of grapes survive; Winter, with mantle that covers the head and crown of reeds; Summer, parts of a crown of ears of corn.

162. El Djem (Thysdrus), in situ. - Parrish no. 31

pls. 46-48a. - Severan. - Bacchic figures, birds and Seasons. Spring, crowned with flowers and tunic across the l. shoulder; Summer, crown of ears of corn and necklace; Winter, head covered with mantle, which also covers her chin.

N. Heads with attributes also at the sides

1. Growing out of vegetal motifs

Polychrome mosaics

163. Aquileia, House of Calendio and Iovina. Aquileia. - Brusin, BollArte 49, 1964, 261 pl. 16; Bertacchi, L., Aquileia Nostra 34, 1963, 19-83 pls. 21-25. - 1st half of 4th cent. A.D. - Six square panels, two with geometric motifs and the others with heads of the Seasons, with the neck and part of the shoulders. Winter grows out of a calyx of acanthus leaves. Spring wears a tunic over the r. shoulder, a crown of flowers, with two birds next to her: a dove and a magpie. Summer, with the same garment, with a fibula at the r. shoulder and a crown of ears of corn; next to her two partridges. Autumn, with a crown of flowers and vine leaves, with birds hard to identify because of the break. Winter, with tunic and mantle that covers the head, marshy leaves, a robin and another bird.

164. (= Achilles 121) La Olmeda, Pedrosa de la Vega, Palencia, in situ. - Palol, P./Cortés, J., La villa romana de la Olmeda (Palencia) (1974) 46-50 pls. 37-38. - Late 4th cent. A.D. - Exterior band of the mosaic of Achilles. Floral frieze with ducks and medallions with portraits. In the corners, placed diagonally, busts of the Seasons. Only the bust of Winter and the faces of Spring and Autumn are preserved. All of them grow out of calyxes of acanthus leaves. Winter had a veiled head and an amphora next to her. Autumn, a crown of tendrils and grapes tied with a fillet. Spring, a crown of small flowers.

2. Not growing out of floral motifs

Polychrome mosaics

165. Toledo, Santa Cruz Mus. From the Vega of Toledo. - Blazquez, J. M., MosEsp V no. 26 pls. 20-23. 47-48 (colour). - 3rd cent. A.D. - Emblem with fishes; around it, heads of the Seasons surrounded by seasonal attributes. Spring, apparently without attributes in the hair, is surrounded by baskets full of flowers and of isolated fruit. Summer with a crown of stalks and stalks growing next to her, is surrounded by baskets full of ears of corn, big isolated ears and a sickle. Autumn, crowned with vine leaves and grapes, is also surrounded by bunches and fruit, maybe pomegranates. Winter, wrapped in the mantle and with covered head, is surrounded by birds and olive branches full of olives.

166. Madrid, Arch. Mus. From Palencia, street Arbol del Paraíso. - García y Bellido, A., ArEspArg 39, 1966, 148-150 pls. 2-3. - 3rd cent. A.D. - A cable band divides among other spaces, five octagons, one central with the head of Medusa, and four following the diagonals with the heads of the Seasons. Summer, crowned with ears and a sickle near her; Autumn, quite damaged; Winter, with the head frontal and covered; Spring, with crown of flowers and a garment across the r. shoulder.

O. Busts with attributes also at the sides

1. Busts outlined

Polychrome mosaics

167.* Rome, San Paolo alle Tre Fontane. From Ostia, Imperial Palace. - Blake, MAAR 17, 1940, 108 pl. 24, 2; Beccatti, G., Scavi di Ostia, I mosaici e pavimenti figurati (1961) no. 313 pl. 104. - Mid 2nd cent. A.D. - Four squares framed by a meander with the representation of the Seasons. Spring clad with tunic, wears a crown of small flowers. Summer, also clad with tunic, crown of stalks in the hair and a sickle on the r. shoulder. Autumn, with a leopard skin and crowned with grapes. Winter, covered head and aquatic plants at the shoulders and head. Inscriptions: AVTV[mnus], HIEMS, VER, AESTAS.

168. (= Ganymedes 215, = Herakles 1740) Volubilis, Maison des Travaux d'Hercule, in situ. - Parrish no. 67 pls. 91-93. - Late Severan. - Squares and ovals, with an octagon with curved sides at the centre with the Rape of Ganymede. Busts of the Seasons in the squares and the Labours of Hercules in the ovals. Spring, with a sleeveless tunic and crown of flowers. Winter, head covered with the mantle, l. shoulder naked and, by her side, two reed stalks. Autumn, naked, with two belts that cross her breast; grapes in the hair.

169. Sousse, Arch. Mus. 28. From Thysdrus. - Parrish no. 36 pl. 54b. - 3rd quarter of 3rd cent. A.D. - Four squares with the Seasons around a central one with the toilette of Venus. Each H. holds a basket as attribute. Summer is almost completely lost; only the l. shoulder and the basket with corn ears remain; Spring, sleeveless tunic, crown of roses and rose basket; Winter, mantle and covered head, and a basket full of olives or nuts; Autumn, sleeveless tunic, crown of grapes and basket with grapes.

170. Sfax, Mus. M. 10. From Taparuta. - Parrish no. 57 pls. 77-78. - 3rd quarter of 3rd cent. A.D. - A big circle with nine smaller inside, framed by a floral band; inside are a philosopher and the Muses. In the corners, busts of the Seasons. Autumn, lost; it is perhaps possible to see part of a pedum; Winter, a mantle that covers the head and olive crown, flanked by an olive branch, a pot and a stick with ducks; Spring, tunic and mantle, crown of roses and branches of roses by her side; Summer, tunic and mantle, crown of ears of corn and by the side a sheaf of stalks and sickle.

171. Lost. From Villacarrillo, Jaén. - Blazquez, J. M., MosEsp III no. 52 pl. 60. - 2nd cent. A.D. - A central circle and four semicircles tangent to this; in the centre, the → Lupa Romana and the twins; in the semicircles, lions and tigers; in the corners are the Winds, and in the curved squares that remain in the interior are the Seasons. The two of the lower part are lost. The upper ones are: Winter, with a mantle that covers the head and by her side something that seems to be a bare stick or reed; Spring with tunic, seemingly sleeveless and a garland by her side.

172. York, Yorkshire Mus. From York. - Smith 132 no. 95; Toynbee, J. M. C., Art in Britain under the Romans (1964) 289 pl. 64b. - Central square with the head of Medusa and four in the corners with the four Seasons. Winter, clad, uncovered head and a bare stick by her side; Spring with a bird; Summer, with a bunch of grapes (according to Ling it is a modern restoration); Autumn with a rake. The busts of Spring and Summer are rather unreal. It is doubtful whether the one with the grapes is Summer. Both Autumn with a rake and Summer with grapes are strange. Judging from 176 it is likely that the one with the rake is Summer and the other with the grapes Autumn.

Relief

173.* (= Eros/Amor, Cupido 212 with bibl.) Sarcophagus, marble. Modena, Mus. Lapidario Estense. From Modena, Piazza Matteotti. - Gabelmann, o.c. 129, no. 57; 125. 139 pl. 25. - Antonine. - At the acroteria, four busts of the Seasons. At the front, Summer and Autumn, both with garment across the l. shoulder, the r. one uncovered, a crown of ears of corn and sickle for the first, and ivy leaves and tendrils for the second. At the back, Spring and Winter with a garment that covers both shoulders, the first with a crown of flowers and the second with a crown of reeds.

2. Curved busts

174.* (= Aion 10 with bibl., = Kairoi/Tempora anni 171) Painted Vault. Ostia, tomb 57. - Calza, o.c. 72, 140-142. 319-320 figs. 66-68 colour pl. 1. - Mid 3rd cent. A.D. - A central circle with Aion inside the Zodiac, and four quarters of circles at the corners, with busts of the Seasons. Spring with crown of flowers; Summer with stalks; Autumn is missing; Winter (perhaps male, cf. Calza: «dal viso maschio»), with covered head and reeds on the head and alongside.

175. Black and white mosaic. Ostia, Forum of the Corporations, statio 11, in situ. - Becatti, o.c. 167, no. 93 pl. 174. - A.D. 190-200. - Three dolphins, one of them ridden by an Eros; above them, two busts inside circles. The one to the r., the best preserved, shows a head crowned with ears, a small sickle over the r. shoulder and a stalk on the l. one, clad with tunic. The one to the l. is harder to identify. It is also dressed and has no attributes, although, according to Becatti, it had once a small sickle on the l. shoulder. If it is really a sickle it would be Summer, which is quite strange; if it is another attribute, it should probably be Spring or Autumn.

176. Polychrome mosaic. Seville, Arch. Mus. 1053. From Itálica. - Blanco, o.c. 48, II no. 3 pls. 11-13. - 2nd half of 2nd or beginning of 3rd cent. A.D. - Nine round medallions inside a geometric frame, with representations of Bacchus and Ariadne in the centre, and wild animals and two busts, hard to identify, in the others. Between these medallions, four pointed squares with the Seasons. Spring, clad, crowned with flowers, with two rose buds over the shoulders; Autumn, dressed with an animal skin and crowned with tendrils; Winter with covered head and two reeds on the shoulders; Summer, crowned with ears of corn, with a sickle on the r. shoulder and a rake over the l.

177. Polychrome mosaic. El Djem, Arch. Mus. A 26, 43, 44, 49, 50, 56. From Thysdrus. - Parrish no. 28 pls. 40-41. - Late Antonine. - Within a bigger composition, with animals and Bacchic scenes, there is a roof with circles; inside the four corners, female busts with the representation of the Seasons. Winter, with tunic and mantle that covers the head, crown of olive and weeding hoe; Spring, sleeveless tunic and rose crown; Summer, tunic, sickle and ears crown of ears of corn; Autumn, a sash of vine leaves crossing her breast is her only dress; she also wears a vine leaves crown.

3. Fairly curved busts

Polychrome mosaics

178. Seville, Arch. Mus. From Dos Hermanas. - Blazquez, J. M., MosEsp IV (1982) no. 5-6 pl. 4. - 2nd half of 2nd cent. A.D. - Two round medallions with Spring and Winter. Both wear tunic; Spring, with a sleeveless one, has small flowers in the hair; Winter has a bare stick alongside.

179.* Timgad, Mus. 43. From Thamugadi. - Parrish no. 63 pls. 84b-85. - Late Severan. - Four Seasons inside medallions. Spring, tunic, mantle and flowers crown; Summer, tunic and mantle, and a crown of stalks and a sickle; Autumn, tunic and nebris.

180. Tunis, Bardo. From Leptis Minor. - Parrish no. 52 pl. 71. - Severan. - Medallions with Apollo and the Muses. The upper four are for the Seasons. Spring, mantle over the shoulders, crown of flowers and thyrsos adorned with ribbons; Summer, a sleeveless tunic, crown of ears, ears and sickle; Autumn, crown of grapes and thyrsos with ribbons; tunic and mantle across shoulder and neck; Winter, the head covered with a mantle and crown of reeds.

181.* El Djem, Arch. Mus. F 3 (A 54). From Thysdrus. - Parrish no. 34 pls. 50-52. - Early Severan. - Six round medallions with the busts of the Sun, the Moon and the Seasons. In the centre Saturnus (→ Kronos/Saturnus). Spring wears a crown of roses, tunic and necklace. Summer, a tunic that leaves the l. shoulder uncovered and corn crown. Autumn, nebris and olive branches; Winter, reeds over her l. shoulder.

182. (= Kairoi/Tempora anni 86) Lost. From Acholla. - Parrish no. 3 pl. 5. - Severan. - Each Season is represented by a pair of figures: a female bust and a winged putto. Spring: the putto (the only one surviving) holds a garland of flowers in his r. hand and a basket with roses in the l. Winter: female bust with the head covered and a reed behind her r. shoulder; her putto, also with mantle, seems to hold an olive branch. Autumn with a sleeveless tunic and nebris, crown of vine leaves; her putto has a short tunic and, seemingly, a pedum.

4. Round busts

Polychrome mosaics

183. Palermo, Mus. Reg. 2286. From Palermo, House A, Victory Square. - v. Boeselager, o.c. 153, 175-183 pl. 121. - 1st half of 3rd cent. A.D. - A cable surrounds a series of octagons with concave-sided medallions with varied scenes inside them (Bacchic scenes, Neptune and Sol, Leda and the Swan, Pegasus and Bellerophon, etc.). Four of the smallest round medallions are occupied with the Seasons alternating with the Winds and geometric elements. Spring with tunic and a crown of leaves and flowers; Summer with tunic across the breast, crown of ears of corn and sickle; Autumn is lost; Winter, tunic and mantle across the breast, reeds behind the l. shoulder and a reed crown.

184. (= Dionysos/Bacchus [in periphria occ.] 28 with bibl., = Kairoi/Tempora anni 119) Volubilis, House of Dionysos and the four Seasons, room 7, in situ. - Parrish no. 66 pls. 87b-90; Etienne, R., MEFRA 63, 1951, pl. 4. - A.D. 217-235. - Composition similar to 183. In the main medallions, Bacchus and maenads. Double cycle. Spring: a man wears a tunic draped over the shoulder and holds a rose, and a female bust with golden tunic and a fibula at the r. shoulder, and a rose crown that ends in two big flowers. Summer, bust like the last, with a big crown of ears of corn, and a young woman, naked but with a mantle billowing at her back and ears of corn in her hand. Autumn, a female bust like the last, with crown of tendrils and grapes. Winter is a young male, depicted frontal like the last, with two birds in the hand; the female bust, with tunic adorned with clavi, has the head covered, a crown of reeds and sheafs of reeds behind the shoulders.

185. Volubilis, House of the Cortege of Venus, room 10, in situ. - Parrish no. 65 pls. 86-87a. - Late Severan. - Spring, with a sleeveless tunic and roses in the hair. Summer, with a crown of ears of corn and a sickle, wears a sleeveless tunic with central clavus. Autumn, with a similar tunic, nebris and mantle that hangs from her l. shoulder; crown of grapes and perhaps a destroyed pedum. Winter, mainly lost, with covered head and reeds.

186. Lost. From Tourmont (Poligny, Jura). - Stern, RecMosGaule I 3, no. 346 pl. 43. - About A.D. 220. - This mosaic probably imitates a vault decoration: in the central medallion a lion, centaurs and griffins. Spring, a young woman with flower crown and a bunch in front of her breast. Summer, young (male?), with a sheaf of stalks. Autumn, a man with a vine branch full of bunches of grapes. Winter, an old woman with covered head; by her side a bare wood branch and a fork.

187.* (= Aktaion 73) Cirencester, Corinium Mus. From Cirencester. - Smith no. 86; 130 pl. 6, 11; Toynbee, J. M. C., Art in Roman Britain (1962) no. 181 pl. 210-212. - About A.D. 200. - Centaur (?), satyr, Actaeon. Four medallions with Seasons, only three survive: Summer, naked torso, with leaves and crown of ears of corn and a sickle over her r. shoulder; over the l. one a bunch of ears of corn; Autumn, with a nebris across the l. shoulder, crown of vine leaves and grapes; in front of her l. shoulder a pruning knife; Spring, with a sleeveless tunic and crown of flowers and leaves; over her r. shoulder a branch with flowers and over the l. shoulder a swallow. Winter is missing.

188. Vacat.

189. Berlin (DDR), Staatl. Mus., and Orange (Texas), Stark Mus. of Art. From Gerasa. - Kriseleit, L., Forschungen und Berichte 24/25, 1984, 75-97 pl. 2, 10. 18; Joyce, RM 87, 1980, 307-325 pls. 101, 105, 110. - Bacchic scenes. There is a frieze with the busts of the Muses on garlands surrounding it and in the corners, inside circles, the busts of the Seasons. Spring, almost lost, seems to wear a sleeveless tunic and an object over the shoulder. Summer, with a sickle over the r. shoulder, a chlamys across the breast, a crown of ears of corn and the inscription ΘΕΡΟΣ. Autumn, flowers on the lap, sickle over the shoulder and inscription ΜΕΤΟΠΙΩΝ. Winter, covered head (even the mouth), and inscription ΧΕΙΜΩΝ.

190. Tunis, Bardo 2967. From Thugga. - Parrish no. 20 pls. 29-30. - 3rd quarter of 3rd cent. A.D. - Five medallions, the central one occupied with a time god and the others with the four Seasons. Autumn, sleeveless tunic, buttoned up the shoulders, and a vine crown. Winter, with covered head and a hoe. Spring, with sleeveless tunic adorned with clavi. Summer, with a sleeveless tunic and crown of ears of corn.

191.* Algiers, Nat. Mus. From Ain-Babouch. - Parrish no. 4 pls. 6-7. - Severan. - Four round tondi. Winter, tunic and mantle over the head, a reed crown, branch of olive to the l. and hoe to the r. Autumn, nebris, thyrsos, and vine crown tied with a fillet. Summer, tunic with clavi, sickle and crown of stalks. Spring, with a tunic like Summer's, rose crown and a basket with roses in her l. hand.

192.* Tunis, Bardo 3599, 3602, 3603. From Acholla. - Parrish no. 2 pls. 2-4. - Mid 2nd cent. A.D. - Beside the large central mosaic, there are small mosaics with the Triumph of Bacchus as the central emblem. By the sides, candelabra with tondi in their centres with the busts of the Seasons, and thiasos scenes around. Winter, with tunic and mantle that covers her head, crown of olive and necklace; a hoe over her r. shoulder. Spring, tunic and mantle, a floral crown, earrings and necklace. Summer, mantle across the breast, crown of stalks and necklace.

193.* Tunis, Bardo 3591. From Acholla. - Parrish no. 1 pl. 1. - Severan. - Two garlands of laurel leaves frame six medallions, four with the Seasons and two with floral motifs. Winter, with tunic and mantle that covers the head, crown of olive and a branch of olive to her l.; to the r., reeds. Spring, a sleeveless tunic and mantle over the shoulder; crown of roses, roses in a basket and one rose to her r. Summer, tunic and mantle, crown of stalks, sickle and stalks. Spring, sleeveless tunic and nebris, crown of tendrils, basket with grapes and a vine branch. Each Season has two attributes, one beside the head.

194. Cordoba, Cruz Conde street, in situ. - Blazquez, o. c. 79, III (1981) no. 12, pls. 13-16. - Late 2nd cent. A.D. - Central octagon with the head of Bacchus; satyrs and maenads around, and in the corners medallions with the Seasons. Summer, with tunic, crown of ears of corn and sickle. Autumn, nebris across the breast, pedom and crown of tendrils. Winter, veiled, quite damaged. Spring is lost. According to García y Bellido, they seem to be male not female.

195. Taranto, Mus. Naz. From Taranto, Giordano Bruno Square. - De Juliis, E./Laiacomo, D., Taranto. II Mus. Arch. (1985) 135 pl. 19. - Late 4th cent. A.D. - Medallion with a veiled head and a branch, probably olive, to the l.; the rest is lost. The veil is tied with a fillet and two fibulae beside the head.

196. Ptolemais, room 5 of the villa. - Kraehling, C. H., Ptolemais, City of the Libyan Pentapolis (1962) 250-251 pl. 61. - Four medallions with the Seasons. In spite of the break it is possible to see the covered head of Winter. Spring with a shepherd's cane, next to what seems to be an animal skin. Autumn, crown of vineleaves and grapes, with a similar garland crossing her breast, and tunic across the l. shoulder. Summer, naked, with a garland of stalks crossing her breast and crown of ears of corn.

197.* Lullingstone (Kent), Roman villa, in situ. - Toynbee, o. c. 187, no. 193 pls. 228-229; Smith no. 89; 131 pl. 25. - Ca. A.D. 330. - Curve-sided rectangle with Bellerophon and the Chimaera. In the corners there are round medallions with the four Seasons. Summer, with chlamys across the l. shoulder, wears crown of ears of corn. Autumn, lost. Spring, tunic and bird over her r. shoulder. Winter has the head covered. According to Smith, they should be male busts. Fairly poor quality.

198. Kingston upon Hull, Mus. of Transport and Arch. From Rundston (York). - Smith no. 92; 132 pl. 6, 28. - Mid 4th cent. A.D. - Mosaic with a victorious auriga. At the sides, following the mosaic diagonals, the four Seasons. Winter, quite damaged, had a rake over the l. shoulder (Ling thinks that this is Autumn). Summer, naked torso, ears of corn and flowers in the hair. Spring, naked torso, with a small bird over the r. shoulder.

5. Busts not separated from the frame

a) Busts in hexagons

Painting

199. Millière-aux-Mesnuls (Yvelines, France). - Zuber, F./Depraeter-Darguery, M., Peinture murale en Gaule. Actes des Séminaires de Limoges et Sarrebourg (1984). - Late 1st and beginning of 2nd cent. A.D. - Spring, crown of flowers and small leaves, with two V-shaped floral stalks. Summer, crown of leaves without flowers; corn ear over her l. shoulder. Autumn, three birds, one over the l. shoulder and two on a branch over the r. one. Winter is seemingly without attributes. All wear tunics, Winter's adorned with clavi.

Polychrome mosaics

200. Bignor villa, Sussex, in situ. - Smith no. 81 pl. 4a; Toynbee, o. c. 187, no. 188 pl. 218. - 4th cent. A.D. - Mosaic with a lost central medallion and four with the Seasons; only one with Winter, wrapped in a mantle, with the head covered and a bare branch over the shoulder, survives.

201. Hippo Regius, in situ. - Parrish no. 47 pl. 63. - Severan. - Only two H. remain: Autumn, who seems male, with tunic and mantle over the shoulder, crown of grapes and pomegranates, and a thyrsos. Winter, tunic and mantle that covers her head, crown of reeds and reeds by her side.

202. Orbe, Boscéaz (Switzerland), partially in situ. - v. Gonzenbach, o. c. 55, 177-180, III pls. 54-57. - A.D. 200-225. - Pastoral representations with animals, floral motifs and Seasons. Summer, with sickle, ears of corn and hat, and seemingly a chlamys across the l. shoulder. Winter, draped, with reeds crown and reeds alongside. Spring and Autumn are not clearly distinguishable in the old drawings.

b) Busts in squares

Polychrome mosaics

203. Carmona, Town Hall. From Carmona. - Blazquez, o. c. 79, IV 15 pls. 11-12. - Late 2nd cent. A.D. - Head of Medusa and the four Seasons. Autumn, with tunic, mantle and cornucopia. Winter, tunic and mantle that covers her head, chin and neck, with a vessel to her r. Spring, with tunic, flowers over the shoulders and basket with flowers to her l. Summer, with tunic, and crown of twisted ears of corn and a hoe.

204. Coimbra (Conimbriga), in situ. - Oleiro, B., in La mosaïque gréco-romaine I (1965) 261 pl. 9; Camargo e Almeida, F., Actas do II Congresso Nacional da Arqueologia (1970) 496-498 pl. 1. - 3rd cent. A.D. - Mosaic with a quadriga, taken to be that of the Sun. In the outer squares: Summer, with a sickle over the r. shoulder; Autumn, with a crown of grapes and vine leaves; Spring, crown of leaves and flowers; Winter, veiled head.

205. Lost. Drawings in the Royal History Academy, Madrid. From Comuni6n (Alava). - Blazquez, o. c. 79, V no. 2 pl. 3. - Late 4th cent. A.D. - Seasons placed in diagonals of the square in which they are inserted. Winter, with tunic and a mantle that covers the head, reeds alongside. Spring, tunic and mantle buttoned up the shoulders and flowers around. Summer, similar garment, with sickle and ears of corn by the sides; the sickle is very small. Autumn, similar garment, with vine branches around. All, except Winter, have a fillet in their hair.

206. Tetuan, Arch. Mus. From Lixus, House of the Three Graces. - Parrish no. 53 pl. 73. - Severan. - In the central part, the three Graces; at the small sides the Seasons. Winter, with tunic, mantle and crown of reeds; by her side, reeds and a basket with fruit, hard to identify. Spring is almost lost. Summer, with a sleeveless tunic and hat, sickle and sheafs of stalks. Autumn, with a sleeveless tunic, crown of grapes and a basket with grapes by her side.

207. Rome, Mus. Naz. Rom. 59585. From the Via Appia. - Blake, o. c. 111, 101 pl. 20, 5-7; Dorigo, Pittura tardoromana (1966) colour pls. 37-38. - Late 4th or beginning of 5th cent. A.D. - In the central panel Apollo and Marsyas. Autumn, with a sleeveless tunic and mantle over the l. shoulder; to her r. a bunch of grapes and leaves or floral buds. Winter, with sleeveless tunic, mantle over the l. shoulder and two reeds over the shoulders. Spring, with similar garment, bunch of roses to her r. and loose roses to the l. Summer, similarly draped, with ears of corn over the shoulders.

208. Destroyed. From Saint-Romain-en-Gal. - Lancha, RecMosGaule III 2 no. 362 pl. 101. - 3rd quarter of 2nd cent. A.D. - Achilles in the house of Lycomedes; above him, the Seasons flank the central square with the Gorgon. Winter, covered head, crowned with leaves - probably of olive - and reeds alongside, over the shoulders. Autumn, tunic, thyrsos and crown of vine leaves and bunches of grapes. Summer, tunic, sickle and crown of flowers and ears of corn. Spring, whose face is lost, has tunic and pedom. Each Season has the attribute resting on the r. shoulder.

209. From Malton (Yorkshire). - 4th cent. A.D. - Smith no. 90; Cookson, Romano-British Mosaics (1984) pl. 89. - Only Winter, wrapped in a mantle that also covers the head, and a bare branch behind her r. shoulder, survives.

c) Busts set obliquely in the corners

Polychrome mosaics

210. Messina, outside the Mus. From the foot of Lipari Acropolis. - Boeselager, o. c. 153, 133 pl. 82. - Advanced 2nd cent. A.D. - Emblem with the Rape of Europe. Winter, mantle that covers the head and reed on the l. shoulder. Autumn, tunic and crown of vine leaves. Summer, crown of ears of corn and sheaf of corn in the l. hand. Spring, garment across the l. shoulder and crown of flowers.

211. Vienne, Mus. Lap. From Vienne, House of the Athletes. - Lancha, RecMosGaule III 2 no. 264 pl. 13. - Late 2nd or beginning of 3rd cent. A.D. - Nine hexagonal medallions within a round geometrical background with victorious athletes. In the outer angles, the Seasons. Autumn, naked, with a thyrsos over the r. shoulder and crown of vine leaves and a bunch of grapes hanging over each ear; she wears a fillet in the hair that hangs over the l. shoulder, and has male features. Winter, wrapped in a mantle and covered head; pine branch with leaves and cone in front of the r. arm. Spring lost. Summer, quite damaged; crown of leaves, ears of corn and flowers or fruit; over the r. shoulder a branch that ends in a fruit or a flower similar to those of the crown.

212. Brading (England), in situ. - Smith 129 no. 83 pl. 6b. - 4th cent. A.D. - Corners of a mosaic with remains of mythological scenes. Autumn is missing although there are remains of tendrils and leaves from her crown; below, part of a peacock. Spring, tunic and crown of leaves and flowers. Summer, tunic and crown of luxuriant ears of corn and flowers, and a peacock. Winter, with mantle that covers the head and, over the l. shoulder, a pole from which a dead bird is suspended.

213. (= Helios/Sol 292 with bibl.) Na'aram Synagogue, Israel. - Sukenik, E. L., The Ancient Synagogue of Beth Alpha (1932) 39-40, 54 fig. 49 pl. 5. - 6th cent. A.D. - Sun and the zodiac, similar to 226. Winter and Autumn destroyed. Spring, upper part of the breast destroyed; a bird to her l., to the r. a tree; remains of the Hebrew inscription. Autumn, the best preserved, is also a bust with a bird to the l. and a pedum in her r. hand; Hebrew inscription.

Relief

214. Bronze helmet. Frankfurt, Hist. Mus. From Hedderheim, Roman camp. - Woelcke, K., Germania 14, 1930, 149-151 fig. 3 pl. 3, 1. - 3rd cent. A.D. - In the four corners, busts of the Seasons. Summer, naked, with a leather strip crossing the breast, crown of ears of corn and a sickle. Spring, tunic across the breast, four-petal flowers on the head and a similar one, with a big stalk, over her l. shoulder. Autumn, like Spring, with bunches of grapes on the head and a bunch over her r. shoulder.

P. Busts with hands

Polychrome mosaics

215. Known from an old drawing. Algiers, Mus. Nat. 787. From Lambaesis. - Parrish no. 50 pl. 69. - Severan. - Octagons curved with Bacchus in the centre surrounded by medallions with busts of the Seasons. Autumn, light white tunic with a nebris falling down the l. side of the breast and buttoned up on the r. near the neck, ivy leaves and bunches of grapes beside the head, tied with a fillet. Winter, covered head, holds with the l. hand a mantle in order to cover the chin and with the other a hoe. Spring, naked breast, except for the mantle that covers the l. shoulder; crown of leaves and flowers tied with a fillet. Summer, clad like Spring, holds a sickle with the r. hand and wears a crown of stalks. They seem real portraits.

216. Djebel Oust, in situ. - Parrish no. 48 pls. 65, 66a. - 2nd half of 4th cent. A.D. - Winter, a sleeveless tunic and a mantle over the l. shoulder, with the l. hand holds an olive basket and with the r. an olive branch, has necklace and bracelet. Summer, dressed similarly, holds a peacock's feather and a disc-shaped flabellum. Spring, tunic with wide sleeves adorned with clavi has also a necklace; to the l. there is a basket with flowers and a flower that she is putting in her hair. Autumn, with tunic and mantle holds a bunch of grapes and a pruning knife, has a pearl necklace and a golden bracelet.

217. Carthage, Mus. From Carthage. - Parrish no. 7 pls. 10-12. - 1st half of 4th cent. A.D. - Six tondi, four with the Seasons, one with a duck and the other with a peacock. Among them, Aion, Venus and maybe Pan. Winter, mantle covering the shoulder, tied with a fibula, two hoes and an olive branch. Autumn, vine branch and thyrsos on the shoulder, floral wreath and a sleeveless tunic, necklace. Summer, tunic, necklace and earrings, sickle and stalks alongside. Spring, almost lost, tunic with clavi and a necklace; rose crown in the l. hand and rose branches beside.

218. Eleutheropolis (Beit Djibrin). - Vincent, L. H., RBibl 31, 1922, 275 pls. 9-10. - 4th cent. A.D. - Ge, the Seasons and hunting scenes. Spring, with tunic and mantle, a bowl in the l. hand with flowers and a bird on it, covered head, a pearl necklace, l. arm bent in front of the waist; two flowers beside the head and to her r. the inscription EAP. Summer, part of the head lost, wears a sleeveless tunic girt at the waist, a sickle in the l. hand and a sheaf of stalks in the r., remains of an inscr. ΘΕ(ρην). Winter, tunic and mantle covering the head, the hand hidden by the mantle holds a hare, and over the shoulders an amphora to the r. and an olive branch to the l. Frontal figures.

Marble reliefs

219. Vatican, once Mus. di S. Pietro. - Strong, E., La scultura romana (1926) 306 figs. 183-184; Hanfmann II no. 160; Manganaro, G., ArchClass 12, 1960, 191 pl. 63, 2. - Severan. - Tellus in centre, framed by two stalks with four spirals enclosing the four Seasons, two above and two below the central figure. Autumn, with tunic across the r. shoulder, crown of tendrils and in the l. hand a bunch of tendrils and a bunch of grapes. Winter, wrapped in the mantle, has the head covered, and wears a crown of reeds and a big reed in the r. hand. Spring, with a sleeveless tunic, crown of flowers and a branch that finishes in three flowers in the r. hand and a basket of flowers in the l. hand. Summer, naked, with crown of ears of corn, a sheaf of ears in the r. hand and a sickle in the l.

220. Capital. Tunis, Bardo. From Segermes. - Diehl, C., BullArchCTH 1904, 465-466 pls. 61-62. - From the Christian basilica, but reused from a former building. Probably 3rd cent. A.D. - Corinthian capital. Instead of the usual rosettes appear female busts, clad with tunic and seasonal attributes. Spring has a sheaf of flowers on a fold of the garment. Summer, sickle and ears. Autumn, situla full of grapes. Winter, a hoe.

Q. Busts with wings (Without hands.)

Polychrome mosaics

221.* (= Kairoi/Tempora anni 238) Tunis, Bardo 529. From Thysdrus. - Parrish no. 40 pl. 57b. - Late Antonine. - Apollo and Marsyas in the emblem and the four Seasons in medallions following the mosaic diagonals. Each personification is followed by a crater with the corresponding fruit. It is in fact a double cycle. Winter, with a mantle that covers the head and which she brings near her face to cover her chin, crown of reeds and to her l., a golden krater full of olive branches. Spring, tunic and mantle across the l. shoulder, necklace and crown of leaves and flowers, and roses in the krater. Summer, naked torso, except for the mantle that covers the l. shoulder, necklace and crown of ears of corn, her krater is full of ears. Autumn, tunic and mantle that covers both shoulders, necklace and crown of leaves and bunches of grapes. Her krater is full of grapes.

222.* Tripoli, Arch. Mus. From Zliten (Dar-Buc-Ammera). - Parrish no. 68 pls. 94-95. - Late Severan. - Eight square panels, five with marble intarsia motifs and four with the busts of the Seasons. There are other squares beside with animals and scenes showing pygmies hunting and fishing. Spring, with a sleeveless tunic, crown of flowers tied with a fillet, earrings and necklace; two vessels with ricotta in front of the breast, and a pedum; pointed wings. Autumn, with a sleeveless tunic, crown of leaves and flowers with fillet, earrings and necklace; in front of her a red flower and a bunch of grapes; pointed wings. Summer, chlamys drawn across the l. shoulder, necklace, crown of ears and a sickle on the r. arm. Winter, with tunic and mantle that covers the head, crown of reeds and a reed behind the l. shoulder.

223.* Lambèse Mus. M 10. From Lambaesis. - Parrish no. 73 pl. 100. - Severan. - In the centre of a geometric mosaic, in the manner of an emblem, the bust of a young female, seemingly winged, quite damaged. She wears a sleeveless tunic and remains of a vine crown; behind her a stalk with reddish flowers.

224. (= Charis, Charites/Gratae 12a) Shahba Mus. From Shahba-Philippopolis. - Balty, J., ANRW II 12, 2 (1981) 409-410 pl. 43. - 2nd half of 2nd cent. A.D. - The three Graces in the central emblem; beside there are two small panels with three personifications in each, among them the four Seasons. Only two are reproduced, and the others are not described. Autumn, with inscription ΜΕΘΟΠΙΩΝ, with chlamys over the l. shoulder, crown of leaves and flowers and two small protuberances like small horns at the front. Summer, with crown of fruit and leaves and inscription ΘΕΡΟΣ.

225. Caesarea Maritima. - Spiro, M., AJA 85, 1981, 219. - A.D. 450-550. - Two panels with traces of Greek inscriptions; it seems to be a complete cycle of Seasons. Summer, with crown and sheaf of ears of corn. Spring, with crown and basket of roses.

226.* (= Ananeosis I with bibl.) Antakya, Mus. Hatay. From Antioch, sector 10-Q. - Levi, Antioch 320 pl. 73b. - Mid 5th cent. A.D. - Personification of Ananeosis inside a wreath; in the cardinal points there are small busts with the Seasons. Two are clearly distinguishable: Winter with covered head and Summer, above, with crown of flowers; the others are harder to identify.

COMMENTARY

Standing Horae

The first evidence for the H. with seasonal attributes, although not specified, is Ptolemy's Pompe in which they take part in a Bacchic thiasos. A series of later archaistic reliefs (1-3), derived, according to Fuchs, from an original of about 160 B.C., also show the H. in a Bacchic procession, but already with some of the attributes that will be characteristic: flowers for Spring, naked torso for Summer, a bunch of grapes for Autumn and mantle crossed over the breast for Winter. This type of archaistic Horae soon disappears from Roman iconography, although they remain isolated in some Imperial monuments (2).

More frequent are the processional H. of the Neo-classical type, who are shown related to the marriage of Thetis and Peleus (3-7), following a classical tradition depicted in works as old as the François Vase or the dinos of Sophilos. Various series exist which differ only in the order of the H., whose personal features and classical attributes are already perfectly shown; they wear tunic and mantle and carry various attributes: Spring, flowers and a kid held by the hind legs, as a rule held behind her, however she can also hold it in front (3c. 5. 6); she turns her head back, as if looking at the animal. Summer, crown, ears of corn and poppies in her hands. Autumn, grapes and pomegranates carried on a fold of her mantle. Winter, with birds and hares hanging from a pedum held over the shoulder in one hand and in the other holding a boar by the hind legs; occasionally, instead of the boar, she carries another pole (7) or a duck suspended from a cane (6). Spring and Summer wear bonnets. These representations occur in different monuments, from the Campana reliefs to the Villa Albani sarcophagus (6), dating from the end of the 1st cent. B.C. to the mid-2nd cent. A.D. Here, to the traditional characters are added a young man with a bull on his shoulders, who is perhaps Hercules, and another with a torch or cane who seems to be Hymenaios (6. 7).

Related to these, although independent of the marriage of Thetis and Peleus, is a series of monuments (8-13) that include terracotta reliefs, marble altars and various gems; they may be processional H. around a divinity (8. 13), but more often they appear alone (10. 11) or in a group, but they are always independent of each other; that is the case, for example, of the Arretine reliefs (9), where they are separated by candelabra and columns, and where some are represented twice. It seems clear that on these monuments the H. are considered personifications in their own right, independent of the gods or of the mythological scenes, to which they had hitherto been related. The attributes and personal features of each are basically the same as before, though there exist variants; Spring may not turn the head or, as seen before, not carry the kid before her (10. 13). In some of the later monuments, as the «Braunschweiger Vase» (13), there are combined standing and seated figures, as well as male (one) and female (three); Winter combines features of Spring on Arretine reliefs (9) and some from the Villa Albani sarcophagus (6), and Spring is close to the Campana type (2). Summer, seated, and Autumn, male, are, on the other hand, far from these groups.

Dancing H., not taking part in processions, are quite frequent in the Roman world. There are pictures described by Philostratos and Nonnos, with this type of H., although it is not possible to understand these scenes exactly (14b. c). Only in one Pompeian painting (14) is a group of four H. forming a frieze preserved. Some of their attributes are peculiar: for example, a lamb around Spring's neck and the vessel with ricotta carried in the hand, attributes more suitable to other Seasons, and the olive branch (?) which with the fruit basket is an attribute of Autumn. Summer and Winter, on the other hand, with a sickle and two ducks and a bare branch respectively have the usual attributes. All wear tunic and mantle, except Summer who is naked above the waist. Winter has a covered head. Spring and Autumn are crowned with flowers and sheaf of corn respectively.

The rest of the representations of this group (15-40) are isolated and it is not always possible to recompose the whole cycle. They are quite frequent on Pompeian paintings (15-25), where, as a general rule, Spring and Autumn appear with tunic and mantle that leaves a shoulder uncovered; Autumn usually wears a mantle billowing at her back, and boots. Summer, with naked torso, and Winter with tunic and mantle that covers the head, and with boots. For the attributes: Spring holds a basket and hare (15, 18), kid and garland (16), basket with flowers and fruit, maybe pomegranates (17). Summer, a sickle (15), a sheaf of corn and a sickle (19, 20, 22). Autumn, fruit on a fold of her garment (15, 16, 24), basket with fruit (17), bunch of grapes (18, 20, 25), basket and bunch of grapes (19), basket and crown (21). Winter, two ducks and a branch (15, 16), fruit on a fold of her garment, in the manner of Autumn - an exceptional representation (17) that can be combined with the most traditional, consisting of two ducks suspended from a pole (18), in this case however it is not certain that she carries fruit. There can also be three ducks suspended from the pole, while in her other hand she holds a jug (21). In vault spandrels we have paintings of this type attested until the mid-2nd cent. A.D. In one of them (26) Spring wears a crown, Summer carries a sickle and ears of corn, Autumn a glass and a bunch of grapes, and Winter covers the head with a mantle. From another (27), a stucco relief, only remain Spring and Summer; the first with tunic and mantle and, at least, a kid nearby; the second naked, with a chlamys hanging at her back, and a sickle.

This type of H. is less common (28-31) on mosaics, even though the extant monuments run from the mid 2nd to mid 3rd cent. A.D. Spring and Autumn may have a naked torso (28, 31) or be naked with a chlamys hanging at their backs (29), or wearing a tunic that leaves one of their shoulders uncovered (30). Summer is completely naked (28-31) or with naked torso (33). Winter with covered head. As attributes Spring once carries a basket and is sowing out of it while walking (28); sometimes roses and a basket with roses (29), a basket with roses and a hare (30). Summer, a sickle and basket with sheaf of corn (28), a sickle and sheaf of corn ears (29, 30), a basket with ears of corn and thyrsos (31). Autumn, a basket with fruit and a bunch of grapes (28), pitcher and thyrsos (29), bunch of grapes and basket (30), thyrsos and a tray with fruit (31). Winter, a pole from which animals are always suspended. As a general rule, in vaults as in mosaics, the figures are placed at the outer ends of the diagonals. Frequently these representations are flanked by plants or scenes with seasonal meaning.

They are attested on reliefs from Hellenistic times to the 3rd cent. A.D. The most ancient representation, the frieze of the Church of St. Eleutherios (→ Horai 50), belongs to a Greek context and it is not completely canonical. On the others Spring wears tunic and mantle, and occasionally, a billowing mantle at her back. Summer, naked above the waist or with a chlamys hanging at her back. Autumn, with tunic and mantle (33), which in some cases is billowing behind her head (32, 34). Winter, with covered head. As attributes, Spring wears a garland of flowers over the breast and flowers in a fold of her garment (32), or carries a branch and a new-born fawn (33). Summer, sheaf of corn (32), or ears, flowers and a jug from which liquid pours. Autumn, a vine branch (32) or fruit held on a fold of her garment (33). Winter is once resting on a stele and has a dog nearby (32). On sculptures dated to the 1st and 2nd cent. A.D., there remain chiefly Autumns, dressed but with naked shoulder and fruit on garment (35-37), and Winters wearing tunic and mantle with head uncovered, and two ducks and a hare as attributes (39). One Spring holds a kid (40).

Of special interest are the dancing couples of H. and satyrs, or, at least of H. with a male figure (41-45), in painting as in reliefs. With several variants these can be found from the 2nd half of the 1st cent. A.D. to the mid 3rd cent. A.D. The satyr corresponding to Spring once has a dish with fruit (41) and in another case a pedum and a kid on the shoulders (42), while the maenad holds a basket with flowers and fruit and a small thyrsos (42). The satyr of Summer clad only with a chlamys over his shoulder, holds a basket with fruit and leaves (42, 43) and on one occasion also a pedum (41), whereas the H. with, at least, naked torso, carries various attributes: sickle (41) with an indeterminate object in the other hand, sheaf of corn (43), a basket with sheaf of corn and sickle (44), a flower (42). With Autumn the half-naked satyr fills a goatskin (41) or a basket of grapes (42, 43) and the H. with a breast or at least a shoulder naked may hold vine branches (43) or other attributes, hard to identify (43). Winter is a satyr with tunic and mantle covering his head, once carrying reeds and ducks (42), or naked and playing the flute (43). His H. holds a duck (42), hoe and ducks (44) or other attributes, hard to determine.

There are also H. who form a seasonal cycle combined with male figures (46-52). They are not numerous and have no uniform typology, while they range in date from the beginning of the 2nd cent. A.D. to the 1st half of the 4th cent. As a rule there are three female and one male figure, although sometimes (49) there can even be three male and one female. Spring can have a naked torso (46), almost naked (47) or dressed with tunic and mantle (48), sometimes billowing at her back (50). Summer is naked (47). Autumn also naked (48) or with tunic and mantle billowing (50). Winter with tunic and mantle (49) sometimes also with covered head (48). As attributes, a basket with flowers and a stick or a branch (48), garland and roses (50). Summer, a sheaf of ears and sickle (48). Autumn, with bowl or glass and branch (46), dish (47), hare, basket with fruit and leaves, and ducks (50), although the last is not certain. Winter, branch (46), branch and tray (49), and a reed and two ducks (51). It is not a homogeneous group and is quite problematic.

Less frequent (53-63) in comparison, are the H. shown in restrained movement on mosaics and reliefs between the mid-1st cent. A.D. and the fifth cent. (most of them belong to the 2nd or 3rd cent.). In one case (54) they are female figures dressed with tunic, with a tray on their heads and differing only in the seasonal symbol carried in their hands; they are unusual attributes (Spring, crown; Summer, grapes; Autumn thymiaterion; Winter, metal vessel) although they seem to correspond to the Seasons, because they are placed under other busts with clearer attributes. Included in this group are the only two sarcophagi with seasonal H. (60-61) dated to the end of the 2nd and the beginning of the 3rd cent. A.D., clad with tunic and mantle, with Winter attributeless, Spring holding a kid by the horns, Autumn near a grapevine and Summer once in front of a tree and once in front of an ear of corn. In almost every other case the four H. are dressed with tunic and mantle and their attributes vary. On 58, they are a bulb, a flower and a fruit, probably corresponding to Spring, Summer and Autumn, the figure of Winter missing; while on 59 Spring has a bunch of flowers and a kid, Summer a sickle and spikes, Autumn a cornucopia and cane, and Winter with covered head and two big fishes, a very strange attribute. The earliest representation, from Pompeii (53), is also quite rare in the Pompeian context since it shows the only static figure in this group: Summer, who is naked, with a hat, sickle and sheaf of corn.

Sometimes the H. are shown taking part in scenes where they are related to other gods, whether taking part in the action, or not. In the latter case, they appear in relationship with Dionysos and Helios, in Mithraic scenes or on sarcophagi with the myth of Phaëthon (64-67); there are very doubtful examples of their presence on some sarcophagi with the myth of Proserpine (68-69). In relationship with Bacchus - though probably he is Sol - some scholars have tried to relate the Domus Aurea paintings (64), with four quite hieratic figures: Winter draped and with an olive crown as unique attribute, and the other three respectively with naked torso, crown of olive, flowers and an empty dish in the hands. However, the fact that we know them only through very idealized copies prevents secure identification. On sarcophagi with the myth of Phaëthon (66-67), there are both standing and seated H., varying in number, as well as some of their attributes, which are always, however, normal (flowers for Spring, ears of corn for Summer, grapes for Autumn and covered head and reed for Winter). On one relief from Dieburg (65) Spring and Autumn have naked torsos, while Summer is naked and Winter has a mantle that covers the head; as attributes, Spring has none, Summer holds a sheaf of corn, Autumn a dish and Winter a reed.

Most interesting are the H. who take a direct part in the divine scenes in which they appear. The most numerous group and the most important is the one related to the zodiacal circle or with corresponding divinities. The earliest evidence (71) shows, in a painting from Stabiae of the mid-1st cent. A.D., the four H., including Summer with naked torso and a nebris, and Autumn walking, with their respective → Karpoi through the interior of an armillary sphere; judging by the little evidence extant, it seems that in this case the Karpoi indicate the seasonal attributes, although the H. can also show some of these, like the vineleaves crown of Autumn. Other evidence is simpler, and depicts the H. crossing the zodiac circle on monuments of the 2nd and 3rd cent. A.D. Some of them (73-74) show the H. again in relationship with the Karpoi. In the mosaic from Silin (74), Aion, seated, supports the zodiac circle, towards which the four H. are walking, three with naked breast and the fourth, Winter, with a mantle that covers her head. Thus, they as well as their Karpoi carry the usual attributes in the form of a crown or of branches in their hands. This mosaic has suggested a new reconstruction of the well-known cosmic mosaic from Mérida (73), which possibly has a similar composition, with H. and Karpoi with their seasonal attributes walking towards the zodiac circle, supported by a seated Aion (Aeternitas according to the inscription). In both cases, the figures are dressed, though Spring and Summer have naked breasts.

The most numerous examples are those on which the H. appear without Karpoi. The mosaic from Ostia (72) shows the four personifications dressed only with a chlamys hanging at their backs, and crowned with their respective fruit, except Winter who, as usual, wears a mantle that covers the head, and only Summer has an added seasonal attribute: a sickle near one of her hands. Here Aion, also seated, shares the scene with Tellus who is on a lower level. Variations on this subject (H. walking through the zodiac circle supported by Aion who is standing), are found on several medallions of the 2nd and 3rd cent. A.D.; at first (75a, b) there seems to be only three Seasons: Spring, Summer and Autumn; however, in the 3rd cent. (75c), Winter is added. The legend on some of these coins, Temporum Felicitas, clearly alludes to the succession of time. In Antonine and Severan times also we can see H. approaching Tellus who is reclining and with one hand on the globe (76a-c); Winter with a reed and a duck leads the procession; the other Seasons with floral attributes in their hands follow her; the legends Tellus stabilita and Fecunditas, allude to seasonal renewal and to the Earth's fertility thanks to the course of the Seasons.

Horae seated and reclined

Seated H. are not very numerous among the Roman representations; they are attested from Hellenistic times until the 3rd cent. A.D. and curiously the oldest are on reliefs made of silver, onyx and sardonyx, expensive and luxury objects (83-86), on which the H. are frequently in relationship with Triptolemos. The earliest, the «Tazza Farnese» (83), shows only two seated H., probably alluding to the two seasons of the Egyptian climate. The other two already show a combination of seated and standing H., and in both cases Summer is the one seated. On 84 she holds ears and a basket with fruit; on 85, she has big ears of corn on the head, while the other two are standing and the fourth is crouching; the one who feeds the swans that pull the chariot can be identified with Autumn. In all of them the seasonal representations show unusual features.

On 86 the typology of the H. is closer to the most characteristic, but they are most unusually seated on animals; Spring, Summer and Autumn are naked with a mantle that covers their heads; as attributes, branch with flowers, ears, vine branch, in addition to the characteristic crowns for the first three and no special attribute except the covered head and the boar on which the fourth is seated. In the mosaic 80 the four seasonal representations are also riding animals, the only female being Winter, also on a boar. Completely feminine cycles are described by John of Gaza (78), where Spring and Autumn hold flowers and fruit respectively on a fold of their garments; Summer, with a lighter garment, ears of corn, sickle and serpent, and a hat; finally Winter, covered with a mantle and pouring water from the pitcher she holds; and perhaps also on the mosaic 79, where the Seasons wrapped on mantles are named in Greek and seem to form part of a wider composition.

Related to these seated H. must be the reclining, who are especially frequent on sarcophagus lids with the Seasons (88-94) and in sculpture (95-98). On the first the H. are usually in confronted pairs repeating usual schemata and sometimes surrounded by winged putti who bring them the seasonal attributes. Almost all these monuments are dated in the 2nd half of the 2nd cent. A.D.; according to Kranz, Spring and Autumn wear tunic and billowing mantle, Summer has a naked torso and Winter tunic and mantle that covers her head; the seasonal attributes are almost always the same; flowers, grapes, ears of corn and reeds (92) or vine branches respectively. What varies is the arrangement of the H. and of the surrounding putti, but in any case, all these representations are strongly related. And they are also in relationship with the less numerous sculptural groups in which a reclining H. is playing with rabbits (95), ducks (98) (Winter) or resting her hand on grapes (97) and fruit (96) (Autumn).

Winged Horae

These constitute a special group with standing as well as seated H., always few in number, and except for isolated or doubtful examples they occur only on oriental monuments. Among the first there are some of the most beautiful representations in ancient mosaic, the figures of the House of Daphne from Antioch (100), clad with light tunics and with the usual attributes (flowers for Spring, ears for Summer, olive and grapevine for Autumn and possibly reeds for Winter), completed with a hat for Summer. Rather more numerous are the seated H. on oriental mosaics and paintings. In some of these, for example in the Chahba-Philippopolis mosaic (→ Aion 3 = Karpoi 1) of the 2nd half of the 3rd cent., they appear as Solstices (inscr. ΤΡΟΠΙΑΙ) and not as Seasons. In a north African mosaic (102), Spring also wears tunic and mantle and Summer has a naked torso; the first is seated on a rock with a column in the background on which rests a bird; she holds flowers and there is a goat nearby; in the second there is also a column with a pitcher on it and partridges alongside. The attributes are the characteristic flowers and ears of corn.

Heads and busts without added attributes

Heads with seasonal attributes only in the hair (105-114) are exclusively found on paintings and mosaics, though some isolated examples may be found on reliefs and sculpture (115); dates range from the 2nd cent. A.D. to the 6th, the majority belong to the 2nd-3rd cent. A.D., and the latest are Christian (110) or Jewish (113). As a general rule they are related to vegetable or floral elements (111), from which they can emerge directly (105-110). The attributes are the usual ones: crown of flowers, ears of corn, grapes, fruit and reeds or bare branches; Winter usually has the head covered.

The busts that show attributes only in the hair appear mainly on mosaics, although they also appear on paintings and reliefs. The distinction made in the catalogue, according to the bust shape, makes easier the localization of parallels, but has no special interest from an iconographical point of view, and is not to be used as a basis to establish iconographically differentiated groups. The oldest examples are dated in the 2nd cent. A.D., though some isolated monuments seem to belong to the last decades of the 1st cent. A.D. (138). The apogee occurs from 2nd to 4th cent. A.D., but in the orient they can reach the 6th cent. The busts can appear naked or half-naked, especially Summer (117-119, 127, 135, 136, 158), and more rarely Spring (118, 119) and Autumn who as a rule appear with tunic (Spring, 117, 121, 126, 128, 134, 136, 144, 157; Summer, 117, 121, 128, 141; Autumn 144, 154, 155) or with tunic and mantle (Spring, 139, 142, 158; Summer, 124, 143, 151; Autumn 126; Winter with the head covered with the mantle, 118, 119, 124-126, 129, 132, 134, 136, 138, 140, 144, 145, 149, 152, 153, 156, 159, 160-162); on some monuments they wear a sleeveless tunic (Spring, 137, 148, 153, 156; Summer, 137; Autumn, 137, 138) or tunic that leaves at least one shoulder uncovered (Spring, 135; Summer 129, 159; Autumn 118, 127). Autumn can likewise wear a nebris drawn over one of the shoulders (124, 136) and sometimes it is hard to determine if it is a female figure or a Bacchic representation with female features.

As characteristic attributes, Spring wears a crown of flowers, Summer of ears of corn, Autumn of grapes or vineleaves and Winter of reeds (136, 139, 145, 153, 157, 159, 161) or, less frequently, of olive branches (125), ivy leaves (127, 140), pine leaves and cones (148, 149, 155); in the case of Winter, they may be hidden under the mantle that covers the head. Some of these attributes can vary; for example, Summer can wear a hat (118), Spring and Autumn cornucopia with flowers and fruits (121), Winter, cones (148), pine leaves (149), bare branches (157) and cornucopia or a vessel from which water is pouring (121); in the last case the examples are always oriental. Some busts have inscriptions to identify them, in the west they are Latin (126, 151) and in the east Greek. Quite infrequent are the busts with nimbi (150). The association of seasonal busts with Bacchic motifs is common (119, 137, 139, 160), although they are also associated with Amor and Psyche (125), Venus (127), the hunt of the boar (126), Ganymede (149), Theseus and Ariadne (155), Achilles in Skyros (161) and, on reliefs, Mithra (132, 146, 147).

Heads and busts with added elements

This group differs very little from the last, except that the H. have supplementary attributes, though often not carried by every H.

Some heads of this group are also closely related to vegetable elements. Almost every one is depicted on mosaics dated between the 3rd and 4th cent. A.D. The complementary symbols are birds (163), and baskets with flowers (165) for Spring; for Summer, birds (163), baskets with ears of corn (163) and sickle (163, 166); bunches of grapes and fruit (165) for Autumn; and birds (163), amphora (164) and olive branches (165) for Winter.

The considerations stated for the former group apply also to the busts. Chronologically it goes from the 2nd to the 6th cent. A.D., the last also in Jewish contexts (213); in some cases it is possible to propose a date at the end of the 1st cent. A.D. (199), though this is not completely sure. The majority of the monuments are mosaics, however the busts also appear, less numerous, in paintings and reliefs. The general appearance differs very little from the last group. The most repeated attribute is beyond doubt the sickle for Summer (167, 175, 176, 179, 183, 185, 189, 194, 202, 204, 208) which occasionally alternates with ears of corn (180, 187, 193, 205) or with ears of corn and a hat (202, 206), and the reeds and aquatic plants for Winter (167, 168, 174, 181-185, 205, 208, 210) once in alternation with a basket full of objects that are hard to identify (206); there are also many baskets with ears of corn and the ears alone (199, 207, 210), the ears and flowers (211) for Summer (169); garlands (171), flowers (186, 205, 207, 214) baskets with flowers (191, 193, 203), birds (172, 197, 198), sometimes in alternation with flowers too (187, 212) and thyrsos (180) or pedom (196, 208) for Spring; grapes (172, 206, 214), grapes and a vine branch (193), or only a vine branch (205), bunches of grapes and flowers (207), thyrsos (180, 201(?), 208, 211) or pedom (194), pruning knife (187), cornucopia (203) and birds (199) for Autumn; and bare branches (176, 200, 209) or of olive (191, 193), pine branches and cones (211), and agricultural implements, a vessel (203) or a pole with a dead bird hanging (212) for Summer (186, 190, 192, 198). There are also some atypical representations, as the Autumn with flowers and sickle, who is however clearly identified by inscription (189) or the Summer with an agricultural implement (203). On the latest monument, the Jewish mosaic from Na'aram (213), Spring has a bird and a tree alongside, and Autumn a bird and a pedom. Some of these representations are haloed (150).

Busts with hands

Much less frequent are the busts with the representation of hands. As in the former group, the four figures do not always show their hands but frequently only one or two of them. The busts with hands often appear also in mosaics, dating from the 3rd to the 6th cent. A.D., more common after the 4th cent. and especially in eastern Imperial areas. It seems evident, therefore, that this type of representation begins after the last group, and spread all over the eastern part of the Empire. They are indeed a next development of the last group, because the logical following step to the inclusion of attributes alongside the busts is to give them hands in which they hold them. The inclusion of hands and arms means that many of these busts are longer than the older ones. The attributes are sometimes also different.

Spring can be shown with naked breast (215) or more frequently dressed with tunic, generally sleeveless (216, 217, 220), or with tunic and mantle (218). Her attributes are the usual ones: basket with flowers, alone or with a flower in the other hand (216), crown of flowers and flowers (217), basket with flowers on which a bird is perched (218), branch with flowers and a bowl with fruit (219) or flowers gathered on a fold of her garment, as in the oldest scenes. Summer with a dress in the manner of Spring, except (219) where she is naked, and in some isolated cases in which she has no mantle (218). Her more usual attribute is the sickle (219) that can alternate with a sheaf of corn (217-220). In some cases there appear strange attributes such as the flabellum and the peacock's feather on the Djebel Dust mosaic (216). Autumn is like Spring, although in some cases she can also wear a light nebris (215). Her usual attributes are the crown of grapes and ivy leaves (215), the grapes and a pruning knife (216), grapes and thyrsos (217), or only the grapes (219), which in some cases can be carried in a basket or situla (220). Winter, besides the traditional type that covers the head with the mantle (215, 218, 219), can also appear with mantle over the shoulder (216, 217). Her attributes are the hoe (215, 220), sometimes with the olive branch (217), or the basket with olives and the olive branch (216), the reed (219) or a hare in the hands and an amphora and an olive branch in the most elaborate example (218). The eastern mosaics (218) usually have inscriptions with the Seasons' names in Greek or Hebrew (213).

Winged busts

This last group consists of female winged busts. All are North African or eastern monuments which, as in the latter group, have their corresponding inscriptions. Their date goes from mid 2nd cent. A.D. to the end of the 6th, when they are found especially on Christian and Jewish monuments. Spring occasionally wears tunic and mantle (221), although this can also be a sleeveless tunic or a tunic that leaves one of the shoulders uncovered (222); as attributes, roses in a crater (221), vessels with ricotta and a pedum (202). Summer can be shown with uncovered breast, but she usually wears a chlamys or dress draped over the shoulders (221, 222). Her attributes are sheaves of corn in a crater (221) and a sickle (222). Autumn usually wears similar garments to the corresponding Spring, with grapes (221, 222). Winter, a tunic and mantle that covers the head (221, 222), and as attributes, olive branches (221) and reeds (222). All the figures, except Winter who is hooded, wear the characteristic crowns.

LORENZO ABAD CASAL

HOROS

(Ἥρος, Horus) est le nom génériquement donné à différents dieux-faucons adorés dans plusieurs villes d'Égypte sous divers noms: Horus l'Ancien, Horus d'Edfou, Horus de Hérakléopolis, Harsomtous, Haroëris, Harmachis, Harendotes, Harsiesis, Onouris etc. Ils étaient représentés soit sous forme de faucon coiffé du pschent, soit avec une tête de faucon sur un corps humain, soit sous une forme purement humaine. Pour les Grecs et les Romains, H., dieu solaire, est assimilé à Apollon; toutefois dans l'iconographie, H. se présente surtout comme un dieu guerrier, cuirassé à la manière de Ares et de Heron, Anubis, Apis, Makedon.

Horus passait pour être le fils tantôt d'Isis et d'Osiris, tantôt de Hathor et d'Osiris. H. enfant s'appelle aussi Harpokrates. L'épisode le plus connu de sa légende est sa lutte contre le dieu Seth.

SOURCES LITTÉRAIRES: Outre les textes déjà cités dans Harpokrates, on trouve des mentions de l'assimilation par les Grecs de H. avec Apollon dès le V^e s. av. J.-C.: Hdt. 2, 144 et 156. Tous deux sont des dieux solaires et utilisent comme animal l'épervier ou le faucon: Apollon comme messager (Apollon, commentaire p. 185) et H. sous l'aspect thériomorphe ou mixte. Ail. nat. 10, 14 parle de la vénération des Égyptiens pour les faucons considérés comme H., et Plut. de Is. et Os. 358b-c, du choix du cheval par H. comme le meilleur animal pour la guerre.

BIBLIOGRAPHIE: Bénédict, G., «Une nouvelle représentation d'Horus légionnaire», RA 4^e sér., 3, 1904, 111-118; ExpSieglin I (1908) 149 fig. 93; 158 n. 76; Chapot, V., «L'Horus garde-frontière du nome Sethroïte», dans Mém. G. Maspero II, MémInstArchO 67 (1937) 225-231 pls. 1-2; Clermont-Ganneau, Ch., «Horus et Saint Georges d'après un bas-relief inédit du Louvre», RA 32, 1876, 196-204 pl. 18; 372-399; idem, «Horus et Saint Georges. Note additionnelle», RA 33, 1877, 23-31; Kantorowicz, E. H., «Gods in Uniform», ProcAmPhilSoc 105, 1961, 368-393 figs. 7, 8, 10; Lewis, S., «The Iconography of the Coptic Horseman in Byzantine Egypt», Journal of the American Research Center in Egypt 10, 1973, 34-35 fig. 36; Mercer, S. A. B., Horus. Royal God of Egypt (1942); Paribeni, R., «Divinità straniere in abito militare romano», BullAlex 13, 1910, 177-183; Roeder, G., RE VIII 2 (1913) 2433-2457; Schenkel, W., LA III (1980) 14-25 s. v. «Horus»; Seyrig, H., «Les dieux égyptiens en habit militaire», Syria 47, 1970, 101-107.

CATALOGUE

A. Horos hiéracocéphale vêtu à l'égyptienne

Les monuments de l'Égypte hellénistique et romaine représentant H. en costume égyptien sont parfois difficiles à distinguer de ceux de l'époque saïte.

Parmi ceux dont le style dénote une influence classique, on peut citer:

1. (= Dioskouroi 17*) Stèle en calcaire. Turin, Mus. Egizio Suppl. 1321. Provient d'Égypte. - v. Bissing, W. Frh., Aegyptus 33, 1953, 347-349 fig. - Fin de l'ép. hellénistique (?) - Au-dessus des Dioscures, dans le champ, H. (ou Rê?) vers la dr., tenant un sceptre.

Intailles

2. Amulette ovale. Loc. inc. (seule une empreinte semble être connue). - Cades, T., Imprime Gemmarie vol. 21 verso, P 101 (dactylothèque consistant en 75 vols. d'empreintes et en un vol. manuscrit de catalogue; exemplaires à Bâle, Univ.; Hanovre, Kestner-Museum; Rome, DAI). - Av.: H. marchant vers la dr., couronné du pschent, tient un sceptre orné d'un faucon dans la g. et un signe ankh dans la dr.

3.* (= Abraxas 48) Amulette ovale. Loc. inc. - Bonner, C., Hesperia 20, 1951, 323 n° 12 pl. 96, 12. Av.: représentation similaire à 2 (H. avec disque solaire sur la tête).

4.* (= Abraxas 50) Amulette ovale. Loc. inc. - Bonner, C., Hesperia 23, 1954, 145 n° 28 pl. 35, 28. Rv.: représentation similaire à 2 (H. coiffé d'une couronne composite, tient un sceptre w3s dans la g.).

B. Horos hiéracocéphale (sauf 8) cuirassé, debout

Reliefs en calcaire

5.* Berlin-DDR, Staatl. Mus., Ägypt. Mus. 17549. Acheté à Gizeh. - Erman, A., Religion der Ägypter (1934) 394 fig. 167; Bonnet, H., Reallex. der ägypt. Religionsgeschichte (1952) 313 fig. 79; Parlasca, K., dans Festschr. zum 150jährigen Bestehen des Berliner Ägypt. Mus. (1974) 487 pl. 87a (et non 82a). - H. coiffé de la perruque et du pschent, tient une lance de la dr., l'arc de la g.; il a un carquois sur le dos et un bouclier rond derrière lui; il porte la lorica squamata, le paludamentum, un ceinturon et des bottes.

6.* Le Caire, Mus. Egypt. CG 27573. De Louxor. - Edgar, CatGénCaire. Greek Sculpture (1903) n° 27573 pl. 25; Lewis 34-35 fig. 36; Tran tam Tinh, Sérapis debout, EPRO 94 (1983) 121-122 n° IC 1 fig. 56. - Ep. romaine tardive. - H. a la dr. levée, la g. sur la garde de l'épée; il porte la perruque, le pschent et le paludamentum. A ses côtés, Isis, Harpocrate, Sarapis, Ammon-Rê et un cavalier.

7.* (= Isis 196) Le Caire, Mus. Egypt. JE 40715. Provient d'Égypte. - Kraus, Th., MDIK 19, 1963, 97-98 pl. 15; Tran tam Tinh, o. c. 6, 89-90 n° IA 2 fig. 2. - Dans un naos, H. entre Isis et Sarapis debout accompagné du Cerbère tricéphale. H. porte la thorax, est coiffé de la perruque et du disque solaire et porte le paludamentum drapé sur les épaules. Il lève la main g. et tient un objet (patère?) dans la dr. baissée.

8.* Fr. Hildesheim, Pel.-Mus. 2242. - Kayser, H., Die ägypt. Altertümer im Roemer-Pelizaemus-Mus. in Hildesheim (1973) 130 n° 2242; Götter und Pharaonen (Expos. Hildesheim 1979) n° 194 et fig. - II^e s. ap. J.-C. - Sans doute H. tenant une lance de la g. Au-dessus: Isis trônant couronne Harpocrate; une statue de divinité (à g.) et Harpocrate (à dr.).

9. Grès. Alexandrie, Mus. Gréco-Rom. 3167. - Breccia, E., Alexandria ad Aegyptum (1922) 170 n° 19; Kraus, o. c. 7, 100 pl. 16b. - H. debout vers la dr., avec bouclier, perruque et pschent.

Intailles

10.* Jaspe noir. Göttingen, Univ. G 78. - AGD III n° 604 pl. 81. - III^e s. ap. J.-C. - H. tient une lance de la dr., un fourreau d'épée de la g.

11. Pâte de verre bleu foncé. Munich, Ägypt. Slg. - H. coiffé d'un emblème (?), tient une lance dans la dr. levée.

Monnaies de plomb

12.* Nome d'Athribis. - Milne, Cat. of Alexandrian Coins (1933) 5277 pl. 6. - Av.: Nil assis. Rv.: H. vers la g., cuirassé, tient un faucon sur la main dr. et une lance dans la g.

13.* Nome de Hérakléopolis (?). - Milne, o. c. 12, 5338 pl. 6; Geissen, AlexKaisermünzen IV 3604; - Av.: H. cuirassé, botté, tient sur la main dr. une Nikè volant le couronnant et de la g. une lance. Rv.: Nikè.

Statuettes en pierre

14.* Fr. Oxford, Ashm. Mus. M. 1964. 181.

15.* Fr. Copenhague, Glypt. AE.I.N.332. - Morgensen, M., La coll. égyptienne (1930) 28 n° A 114 et Album pl. 26. - Ep. romaine. - H. (tête endommagée) porte la lorica squamata et le paludamentum; il avait le bras dr. levé et pose sa g. sur la poignée de son épée; trou au sommet de la tête (pour emblème ou pschent rapporté).

Statuettes en bronze

16.* Athènes, Mus. Nat. Dimitrios 675. Sans doute d'Alexandrie, où a été formée cette collection. - Breccia, E., BullAlex 17, 1919, 185 n. 2. - Ep. romaine. - H. coiffé d'un pschent avec uraeus; il porte la lorica squamata avec gorgoneion et ceinturon et est chaussé de bottes; le bras dr. levé tenait sans doute une lance.

17.* Moscou, Mus. Poushkin, Cat. 2985. Anc. coll. V. Golenishev. - Hodjache, S., Les antiquités égypt. au Mus. des Beaux-Arts Pouchkine (1971) fig. 69; Pavlov, V. V./Hodjache, S. I., Egipetskaja plastika malich form (1985) 70 fig. 124. - II^e s. ap. J.-C. - H. est coiffé d'un pschent avec uraeus, porte la lorica squamata avec gorgoneion et ceinturon et est chaussé de bottes; il semble darder une lance vers un ennemi disparu.

18.* London, BM, Dept. of Egyptian Antiqu. 36062. - Clermont-Ganneau, Ch., RA 33, 1877, 23-25 fig.; Bénédict 116; Chapot 228 pl. 2; Kleopatra (Expos. Munich 1989) n° 128 pl. - Ep. romaine. - H. est coiffé d'une perruque égyptienne, porte la thorax et le paludamentum autour du bras g., et est chaussé de bottes; le bras dr. manque.

19. Alexandrie, anc. coll. Sinadino. - ExpSieglin I (1908) 149 fig. 93; 158 n. 76. - H. est coiffé du pschent et de la perruque, porte la thorax avec ceinturon, le paludamentum, des bracelets et est chaussé de bottes; il tient un faucon de la g. et devait tenir une lance de la dr.

20. Paris, Louvre, Dépt des Antiquités égyptiennes E 7977. De Basse-Égypte (?). - Hoffmann/Fröhner, W., Coll. Br. Gréau (1885) 170-171 n° 849 pl. 17; Chapot 225-231 pls. 1-2; Kantorowicz 370 fig. 7. - II^e s. ap. J.-C. (?) - H. est coiffé de la perruque, du pschent, d'une couronne de feuilles et de sept rayons; il porte la lorica squamata, le paludamentum, un ceinturon et des bottes.

21.* London, BM, Dept. of Egyptian Antiqu. 36052. - Bénédict 116.

22.* Fr. London, BM, Dept. of Egyptian Antiqu. 36051 (68.5-10.2). - Bénédict 116. - H. est coiffé d'une perruque et tient un objet dans la dr. levée.

23.* Le Caire, Mus. Egypt. CG 27696. De Médinet Habou. - Edgar, CatGénCaire. Greek Bronzes (1904) n° 27696 pl. 4. - Emblème indistinct (disque?); paludamentum autour du bras g., bras dr. tendu.

24. Le Caire, Mus. Egypt. CG 27695. De Médinet Habou. - Edgar, o. c. 23, n° 27695. - H. coiffé de la perruque et du pschent, avec paludamentum autour du bras g.

25.* Boston, MFA 1974.415. - Morgan, S. K., The Ancient Mediterranean (1975) 59 n° 91 fig. 30; Romans and Barbarians (1976) 18 n° 22 fig. - Vers 150 ap. J.-C. - H. est coiffé du pschent et porte la lorica squamata, un ceinturon et le paludamentum; il tient une patère de la dr. et devait tenir une lance dans la g.; le bas des jambes a disparu.

C. Horos hiéracocéphale cuirassé, à cheval

26.* Relief ajouré en grès. Paris, Louvre, Dépt des Antiquités chrétiennes X 5130. D'Antinoë. - Clermont-Ganneau, Ch., RA 32, 1876, 196-204 pl. 18; Koptische Kunst. Christentum am Nil (Expos. Essen 1963) 235 n° 77 fig.; du Bourguet, P., L'art copte (1968) 95-96 pl. p. 78; Lewis 63 fig. 32; Badawy, A., Coptic Art and Archaeology (1978) 152 fig. 371. - V^e s. ap. J.-C. - H. vers la g., avec lorica squamata, paludamentum et perruque, transperce de sa lance un crocodile piétiné par son cheval.

D. Horos hiéracocéphale cuirassé, trônant

27.* Patère fr. en stéatite. Oxford, Ashm. Mus. 1891.501. - Ep. romaine. - H. trônant entre un lion et un faucon.

28.* Statuette en calcaire. London, BM, Dept. of Egyptian Antiqu. 51100. - Ep. romaine. - H. avec lorica squamata, paludamentum et bottes, les bras baissés.

E. Horos hiéracocéphale cuirassé, en buste

Patères en stéatite

29. Alexandrie, Mus. Gréco-Rom. 26726 (anc. coll. Farouk). - Bustes d'H. et d'Isis se donnant la main.

30.* Le Caire, Mus. Egypt, CG 18753. - v. Bis-sing, F. W., CatGénCaire. Steingefässe (1907) 161 n° 18753 fig. - Quatre bustes: H. (ou Osiris?) hiéracocéphale avec pschent donnant la main à Isis; autre buste d'H. hiéracocéphale avec disque solaire; quatrième personnage disparu.

31.* Berlin-Ouest, Staatl. Mus., Ägypt. Mus. 17347. Acquis à Kéneh. - Ägypt. Mus. Berlin (1967) n° 1017. - II^e/III^e s. ap. J.-C. - Trois bustes: H. cuirassé avec disque solaire; H. cuirassé avec pschent; Hathor (ou Isis?).

32.* Oxford, Ashm. Mus. 1941.1252. Acquis à Louxor. - Petrie, F., Objects of Daily Use (1927) 38. - Deux bustes: H. avec cuirasse, paludamentum, perruque et pschent; Isis.

33. Oxford, Ashm. Mus. 1891.546. - Petrie, o. c. 32, 38. - Deux bustes: H. cuirassé et Isis.

34. Le Caire, Mus. Egypt. Temp. No. 13.11.01.9. - Deux bustes: H. avec perruque et petit emblème; Isis.

35. Alexandrie, Mus. Gréco-Rom. 26424. - Deux bustes: H. avec perruque et déesse (Isis?).

36. Paris, Louvre, Dépt des Antiquités égyptiennes. - Bustes d'H. avec perruque et pschent.

Bijou

37. Pendentif rond en or. Baltimore, Walters Art Gall. - Pagan and Christian Egypt (Expos. Brooklyn 1941) 42 n° 131 fig. - III^e s. ap. J.-C. (?) - Bustes sur pieds d'H. avec lorica squamata, perruque et emblème (pschent ou disque?) et d'Isis-Déméter.

Monnaie de plomb

38.* Nome de Hérakléopolis. - Milne, o. c. 12, n° 533 I pl. 6. - Av.: buste de Sarapis. Rv.: buste d'H. cuirassé vers la dr., avec perruque et emblème atef.

Ronde bosse

39.* Buste de calcaire. Le Caire, Mus. Egypt. JE 66143. - H. avec nimbe radié, pschent, perruque et couronne de feuilles, portant la lorica squamata et le paludamentum.

40.* Buste de stéatite. Hambourg, Mus. KG 1960.8. - Hoffmann, H., AA 1960, 73-75 figs. 9-10; idem, JbHamburg 6, 1961, 323 sq. fig. - I^e/II^e s. ap. J.-C. - H. cuirassé, avec paludamentum, baudrier et la poignée d'une épée, sortant d'une corolle de feuilles de lotus; bec et emblème cassés.

41.* Buste en terre cuite. Anc. coll. Fouquet. - Perdrizet, P., Les terres cuites grecques d'Egypte de la coll. Fouquet (1921) 36 n° 110 pl. 51 en bas. - H. avec perruque, lorica squamata, gorgoneion et paludamentum; emblème cassé. Au revers, inscription qui serait, selon Perdrizet, la signature du potier.

42. Buste de bronze. Marseille, Mus. Borély 1300. - Maspero, G., Cat. du Mus. égyptien de Marseille (1889) n° 644. - H. avec perruque, lorica squamata et paludamentum; emblème brisé.

43.* Applique (?). Munich, Ägypt. Sig. 3421. - H. avec perruque et pschent, lorica squamata, paludamentum et baudrier.

44.* Poids de balance. London, BM, Dept. of Egyptian Antiq. 36053 (68.11-2.7). - H. cuirassé, avec perruque et pschent.

F. Horos hiéracocéphale en costume militaire, à cheval

45. Patères de pierre. H. chevauchant, vêtu de braies collantes, d'une tunica manicata ceinturée et d'un paludamentum flottant, semblant darder sa lance. - Ep. romaine. - a) Anc. coll. A. Wiedemann. Acquis à Ptolemaïs. - Wiedemann, A., Proceedings of the Soc. of Biblical Archeol. 36, 1914, 107-117 n° 26 pl. 8, 26 en haut; Parlasca, K., dans Das römisch-byzant. Ägypten, Symposium Trier 1978 (1983) 151 n. 4; 157 n. 75 pl. 22, 5. - b) Fr. Amsterdam, Allard Pierson 10183. - Parlasca, o. c. 151 pl. 22, 6. - H. avec perruque et pschent. - c) Deux frs. Mayence, Univ., Kunstgeschichtliches Inst. (anc. coll. du prince Johann-Georg de Saxe, Inv. 516 et Inv. 967). - Parlasca, o. c. 157 n. 76; 159 pl. 24, 2 (Inv. 516); idem, dans Studien zur spätantiken und frühchristlichen Kunst ... des Orients (1982) 21 pl. 11, 1 (Inv. 967). - d) Londres, Univ. College 2450. Petrie, o. c. 32, 38 pl. 34, 29 (le cheval avait été identifié à tort par Petrie comme une panthère); Parlasca, o. c. 157 n. 74. - e) Fr. Faenza, Mus. Internaz. delle Ceramiche 103. - Parlasca, o. c. 157 n. 74.

46.* Statuette en terre cuite. Berlin-Ouest, Staatl. Mus., Ägypt. Mus. 9685. Acquis au Caire. - Weber, W., Die ägyptisch-griech. Terrakotten, Königl. Mus. zu Berlin (1914) 89 n° 82 pl. 7; Erman, o. c. 5, 395 fig. 168; Philipp, H., Terrakotten aus Ägypten (1972) 9. 13. 32 n° 46 fig. 42. - Env. 400 ap. J.-C. - H. sur un cheval paradant vers la dr., dardant sa lance; il est coiffé de la perruque et du pschent, vêtu d'une tunica manicata ceinturée sur des braies collantes, avec paludamentum.

G. Horos hiéracocéphale, en costume militaire, trônant

47.* (= Anubis 68*) Fr. de sarcophage en marbre. Istanbul, Mus. Arch. 665 (M. 40). De Hiérapytna (Crète). - Mendel, Sculpt I (1912) 135-145 n° 40 fig. p. 138; Dunand, F., Le culte d'Isis dans le bassin oriental de la Méditerranée, EPRO 26 II (1973) 209 pl. 27. - II^e s. ap. J.-C. - H. trônant vers la dr., en compagnie d'autres divinités, vêtu de la tunica manicata ceinturée sur des braies collantes, d'un paludamentum et chaussé de bottes; la main dr. fait un geste de salut, la g. tient un long sceptre et un objet mal identifiable, peut-être un fouet.

MONUMENTS INCERTAINS

Représentations de H. (?) à tête humaine, debout et imberbe

48.* Stèle en calcaire. Amsterdam, Allard Pierson 7802. Acquis à Louxor (provenant d'Edfou?). - Parlasca, o. c. 5, 486-487 pl. 86a (et non 81a). - Ep. romaine. - H. (?) couronné, vêtu d'une tunique courte ceinturée, botté, tenant une lance et un bouclier rond;

il porte sur l'épaule dr. un faucon avec pschent; un second faucon couronné est près de son épaule g.

Bijoux

49.* Ornement de collier en or repoussé, Berlin-Ouest, Staatl. Mus. Misc. 11863,6. Provient sans doute d'Egypte. - Greifenhagen, A., Schmuckarbeiten in Edelmetall II (1975) 32 n° 3 et 6 pl. 28, 6; Tran tam Tinh, o. c. 6, 109 n° IB 8 fig. 34a-b. - II^e/III^e s. ap. J.-C. - H. (?) cuirassé, avec emblème, levant le bras dr. et portant un bouclier rond.

50. Pendentif en or repoussé. Athènes, Mus. Benaki 104/72. - Segall, B., Kat. der Goldschmiede-Arbeiten (1938) 135 n° 207 pl. 42. - H. (?) cuirassé, avec emblème indistinct, paludamentum, lance et bouclier.

51.* Pendentif en or repoussé. London, BM 2979. - Marshall, BM Jewellery 355 n° 2979 pl. 69. - H. (?) cuirassé, avec pschent et bouclier rond, en compagnie d'autres divinités.

Monnaies

52. AE, nome de Léontopolis, Antonin le Pieux, 144/145 ap. J.-C. - BMC Alexandria 344, 16; Dattari 6284 pl. 36; 6285; Milne o. c. 12, 1829; Geissen, AlexKaiser Münzen IV 3433. 3434. - Rv.: H. (?) demi-drapé, avec sceptre dans la main dr. et lion sur la main g.

53. Plomb, nome de Hérakléopolis (?). - Dattari 6540; Milne, o. c. 12, 5335 pl. 6; Geissen, AlexKaiser Münzen IV 3605. 3606. - Av.: H. (?) radié, cuirassé, portant une Nikè sur la main dr., tenant une lance dans la g. Rv.: Nikè.

54. (= Ares [in peripheria orientali] 18a) Bi, AE, nomes sébennite et sébennite inf., de Domitien (81-96 ap. J.-C.) à Antonin le Pieux (138-161 ap. J.-C.) - BMC Alexandria 354, 56-60; Dattari 6376-6381. 6383-6385 pls. 33. 34. 36. - Av.: Arès. Rv.: H. de Sébennytos, cuirassé.

IDENTIFICATION ERRONÉE

55. Paris, Louvre MA 2732. - Michon, E., Cat. sommaire des marbres antiques (1896) 157 n° 2732. - Trois bustes: dieu à tête de bélier (et non H. hiéracocéphale) avec gorgerin et emblème entre deux cornes torsadées, encadré par deux déesses identiques.

COMMENTAIRE

Le plus ancien type de représentation de H. est, avec la forme purement thériomorphe du faucon (→ Anubis 68. 69) ou de l'épervier (ni les artistes antiques ni la plupart des archéologues modernes ne semblent s'être beaucoup préoccupés des différences ornithologiques) couronné du pschent, la forme mixte: un homme à tête de rapace. Sur les monuments qui suivent la tradition pharaonique, H. est vêtu de son costume égyptien traditionnel: un pagne laissant le torse nu; il est coiffé d'une perruque surmontée du pschent et tient le sceptre et le signe ankh (2-4). En l'absence d'attributs spécifiques, il est parfois difficile de le distinguer d'un autre dieu-faucon comme Rê (1).

Ces monuments sont difficiles à dater mais la présence de ce type de H. sur des intailles gnostiques (2-4) montre qu'il était encore utilisé à la fin de l'antiquité.

Le second type de H., H. cuirassé souvent appelé H. «légionnaire» (terme utilisé par Bénédictine) est une symbiose d'éléments égyptiens et gréco-romains. H. a gardé, de la tradition égyptienne, la tête de faucon coiffée de la perruque (18. 22. 26. 34. 35. 41. 42), le plus souvent surmontée du pschent (5. 6. 9. 19. 20. 32. 36. 38 [?]. 43. 44), parfois du disque solaire (7. 30. 31) ou de l'emblème atef (38). Plus rarement, H. est couronné du seul pschent (25. 30), parfois décoré d'un uraeus (16. 17).

Exceptionnellement, H. porte, entre la perruque égyptienne et le pschent, une couronne de feuilles et un nimbe radié (39) ou des rayons (20) à la manière romaine. Par contre, les vêtements et les armes sont ceux des officiers romains. Sur quelques monuments seulement, H. porte la thorax musclée (7. 18. 19), cuirasse de type grec mais encore utilisée par les officiers romains (ce qui ne facilite pas la datation des monuments). Sur les autres - lorsque les détails sont discernables - H. revêt la lorica squamata (5. 15-17. 20. 25. 26. 28. 37. 39. 41-43) dont les écailles se confondent avec les plumes du faucon, en particulier sur les œuvres de petites dimensions comme les patères en stéatite (29-36). La cuirasse est parfois ornée d'un ceinturon (5. 16. 17. 19. 20. 25) et d'un gorgoneion (16. 17. 41. 42). H. porte presque toujours le paludamentum (5-7. 15. 18-20. 23. 25. 26. 28. 32. 39-41. 43) et est chaussé de courtes bottes découvrant les orteils (5. 13. 15. 16-20. 28). D'après les positions du bras et de la main (ou ce qu'on peut en reconstituer), H. devait darder une lance vers un crocodile (26), un adversaire disparu (17) ou il la tenait à la manière d'un sceptre (5. 8. 10-13). Il porte parfois aussi une épée (6. 10. 15. 40), un bouclier (5. 9), un arc et un carquois (5) ou un baudrier (40. 43). Il peut aussi tenir un faucon (12. 19) ou une Nikè qui le couronne (13) ou faire une libation avec une patère (7 [?]. 25).

La plupart du temps, H. est représenté debout, dans une attitude majestueuse, soit seul (5. 9. 15. 25), soit en compagnie d'Isis et Sarapis (7), d'Harpocrate, Ammon-Rê, et d'un cavalier (6) ou d'Isis et Harpocrate (8). Beaucoup plus rares semblent être les monuments montrant H. cuirassé trônant (27. 28) ou plus étonnamment, H. à cheval transperçant de sa lance un crocodile, l'animal du dieu Seth; c'est là le seul épisode légendaire représenté (26); ce relief, datable du V^e s. ap. J.-C., a été considéré comme un prototype de Saint Georges avec le dragon.

De nombreuses représentations d'H. le montrent en buste, soit seul (36. 38. 39. 44) soit avec Isis (29-35. 37) parfois sortant d'une corolle de feuilles de lotus (40).

Un autre type de H. militaire hiéracocéphale est H. portant le costume «de campagne» des soldats: la tunica manicata ceinturée sur des braies collantes, avec le paludamentum (45-47); il est coiffé de la perruque et du pschent (45b. 46). Il est toujours représenté à cheval. La seule exception est celle d'un sarcophage du II^e s. ap. J.-C., provenant de Crète, d'un style plus égyptisant

30.* Le Caire, Mus. Egypt, CG 18753. - v. Bis-sing, F. W., CatGénCaire. Steingefässe (1907) 161 n° 18753 fig. - Quatre bustes: H. (ou Osiris?) hiéracocéphale avec pschent donnant la main à Isis; autre buste d'H. hiéracocéphale avec disque solaire; quatrième personnage disparu.

31.* Berlin-Ouest, Staatl. Mus., Ägypt. Mus. 17347. Acquis à Kénch. - Ägypt. Mus. Berlin (1967) n° 1017. - II^e/III^e s. ap. J.-C. - Trois bustes: H. cuirassé avec disque solaire; H. cuirassé avec pschent; Hathor (ou Isis?).

32.* Oxford, Ashm. Mus. 1941.1252. Acquis à Louxor. - Petrie, F., Objects of Daily Use (1927) 38. - Deux bustes: H. avec cuirasse, paludamentum, perruque et pschent; Isis.

33. Oxford, Ashm. Mus. 1891.546. - Petrie, o. c. 32, 38. - Deux bustes: H. cuirassé et Isis.

34. Le Caire, Mus. Egypt. Temp. No. 13.11.01.9. - Deux bustes: H. avec perruque et petit emblème; Isis.

35. Alexandrie, Mus. Gréco-Rom. 26424. - Deux bustes: H. avec perruque et déesse (Isis?).

36. Paris, Louvre, Dépt des Antiquités égyptiennes. - Bustes d'H. avec perruque et pschent.

Bijou

37. Pendentif rond en or. Baltimore, Walters Art Gall. - Pagan and Christian Egypt (Expos. Brooklyn 1941) 42 n° 131 fig. - III^e s. ap. J.-C. (?) - Bustes sur piédouches d'H. avec lorica squamata, perruque et emblème (pschent ou disque?) et d'Isis-Déméter.

Monnaie de plomb

38.* Nome de Hérakléopolis. - Milne, o. c. 12, n° 5331 pl. 6. - Av.: buste de Sarapis. Rv.: buste d'H. cuirassé vers la dr., avec perruque et emblème atef.

Ronde bosse

39.* Buste de calcaire. Le Caire, Mus. Egypt. JE 66143. - H. avec nimbe radié, pschent, perruque et couronne de feuilles, portant la lorica squamata et le paludamentum.

40.* Buste de stéatite. Hambourg, Mus. KG 1960.8. - Hoffmann, H., AA 1960, 73-75 figs. 9-10; idem, JbHamburg 6, 1961, 323 sq. fig. - I^{re}/II^e s. ap. J.-C. - H. cuirassé, avec paludamentum, baudrier et la poignée d'une épée, sortant d'une corolle de feuilles de lotus; bec et emblème cassés.

41.* Buste en terre cuite. Anc. coll. Fouquet. - Perdrizet, P., Les terres cuites grecques d'Égypte de la coll. Fouquet (1921) 36 n° 110 pl. 51 en bas. - H. avec perruque, lorica squamata, gorgoneion et paludamentum; emblème cassé. Au revers, inscription qui serait, selon Perdrizet, la signature du potier.

42. Buste de bronze. Marseille, Mus. Borély 1300. - Maspero, G., Cat. du Mus. égyptien de Marseille (1889) n° 644. - H. avec perruque, lorica squamata et paludamentum; emblème brisé.

43.* Applique (?). Munich, Ägypt. Slg. 3421. - H. avec perruque et pschent, lorica squamata, paludamentum et baudrier.

44.* Poids de balance. London, BM, Dept. of

Egyptian Antiq. 36053 (68.11-2.7). - H. cuirassé, avec perruque et pschent.

F. Horos hiéracocéphale en costume militaire, à cheval

45. Patères de pierre. H. chevauchant, vêtu de braies collantes, d'une tunica manicata ceinturée et d'un paludamentum flottant, semblant darder sa lance. - Ep. romaine. - a) Anc. coll. A. Wiedemann. Acquis à Ptolemaïs. - Wiedemann, A., Proceedings of the Soc. of Biblical Archeol. 36, 1914, 107-117 n° 26 pl. 8, 26 en haut; Parlasca, K., dans Das römisch-byzant. Ägypten, Symposium Trier 1978 (1983) 151 n. 4; 157 n. 75 pl. 22, 5. - b) Fr. Amsterdam, Allard Pierson 10183. - Parlasca, o. c. 151 pl. 22, 6. - H. avec perruque et pschent. - c) Deux frs. Mayence, Univ., Kunstgeschichtliches Inst. (anc. coll. du prince Johann-Georg de Saxe, Inv. 516 et Inv. 967). - Parlasca, o. c. 157 n. 76; 159 pl. 24, 2 (Inv. 516); idem, dans Studien zur spätantiken und frühchristlichen Kunst... des Orients (1982) 21 pl. 11, 1 (Inv. 967). - d) Londres, Univ. College 2450. Petrie, o. c. 32, 38 pl. 34, 29 (le cheval avait été identifié à tort par Petrie comme une panthère); Parlasca, o. c. 157 n. 74. - e) Fr. Faenza, Mus. Internaz. delle Ceramiche 103. - Parlasca, o. c. 157 n. 74.

46.* Statuette en terre cuite. Berlin-Ouest, Staatl. Mus., Ägypt. Mus. 9685. Acquis au Caire. - Weber, W., Die ägyptisch-griech. Terrakotten, Königl. Mus. zu Berlin (1914) 89 n° 82 pl. 7; Erman, o. c. 5, 395 fig. 168; Philipp, H., Terrakotten aus Ägypten (1972) 9. 13. 32 n° 46 fig. 42. - Env. 400 ap. J.-C. - H. sur un cheval paradant vers la dr., dardant sa lance; il est coiffé de la perruque et du pschent, vêtu d'une tunica manicata ceinturée sur des braies collantes, avec paludamentum.

G. Horos hiéracocéphale, en costume militaire, trônant

47.* (= Anubis 68*) Fr. de sarcophage en marbre. Istanbul, Mus. Arch. 665 (M. 40). De Hiérapytna (Crète). - Mendel, Sculpt I (1912) 135-145 n° 40 fig. p. 138; Dunand, F., Le culte d'Isis dans le bassin oriental de la Méditerranée, EPRO 26 II (1973) 209 pl. 27. - II^e s. ap. J.-C. - H. trônant vers la dr., en compagnie d'autres divinités, vêtu de la tunica manicata ceinturée sur des braies collantes, d'un paludamentum et chaussé de bottes; la main dr. fait un geste de salut, la g. tient un long sceptre et un objet mal identifiable, peut-être un fouet.

MONUMENTS INCERTAINS

Représentations de H. (?) à tête humaine, debout et imberbe

48.* Stèle en calcaire. Amsterdam, Allard Pierson 7802. Acquis à Louxor (provenant d'Edfou?). - Parlasca, o. c. 5, 486-487 pl. 86a (et non 81a). - Ep. romaine. - H. (?) couronné, vêtu d'une tunique courte ceinturée, botté, tenant une lance et un bouclier rond;

il porte sur l'épaule dr. un faucon avec pschent; un second faucon couronné est près de son épaule g.

Bijoux

49.* Ornement de collier en or repoussé, Berlin-Ouest, Staatl. Mus. Misc. 11863,6. Provient sans doute d'Égypte. - Greifenhagen, A., Schmuckarbeiten in Edelmetall II (1975) 32 n° 3 et 6 pl. 28, 6; Tran tam Tinh, o. c. 6, 109 n° IB 8 fig. 34a-b. - II^e/III^e s. ap. J.-C. - H. (?) cuirassé, avec emblème, levant le bras dr. et portant un bouclier rond.

50. Pendentif en or repoussé. Athènes, Mus. Benaki 104/72. - Segall, B., Kat. der Goldschmiede-Arbeiten (1938) 135 n° 207 pl. 42. - H. (?) cuirassé, avec emblème indistinct, paludamentum, lance et bouclier.

51.* Pendentif en or repoussé. London, BM 2979. - Marshall, BMJewellery 355 n° 2979 pl. 69. - H. (?) cuirassé, avec pschent et bouclier rond, en compagnie d'autres divinités.

Monnaies

52. AE, nome de Léontopolis, Antonin le Pieux, 144/145 ap. J.-C. - BMC Alexandria 344, 16; Dattari 6284 pl. 36; 6285; Milne o. c. 12, 1829; Geissen, AlexKaisermünzen IV 3433. 3434. - Rv.: H. (?) demi-drapé, avec sceptre dans la main dr. et lion sur la main g.

53. Plomb, nome de Hérakléopolis (?). - Dattari 6540; Milne, o. c. 12, 5335 pl. 6; Geissen, AlexKaisermünzen IV 3605. 3606. - Av.: H. (?) radié, cuirassé, portant une Nikè sur la main dr., tenant une lance dans la g. Rv.: Nikè.

54. (= Ares [in peripheria orientali] 18a) Bi, AE, nomes sébennyte et sébennyte inf., de Domitien (81-96 ap. J.-C.) à Antonin le Pieux (138-161 ap. J.-C.) - BMC Alexandria 354, 56-60; Dattari 6376-6381. 6383-6385 pls. 33. 34. 36. - Av.: Arès. Rv.: H. de Sébennytos, cuirassé.

IDENTIFICATION ERRONÉE

55. Paris, Louvre MA 2732. - Michon, E., Cat. sommaire des marbres antiques (1896) 157 n° 2732. - Trois bustes: dieu à tête de bélier (et non H. hiéracocéphale) avec gorgerin et emblème entre deux cornes torsadées, encadré par deux déesses identiques.

COMMENTAIRE

Le plus ancien type de représentation de H. est, avec la forme purement thériomorphe du faucon (→ Anubis 68. 69) ou de l'épervier (ni les artistes antiques ni la plupart des archéologues modernes ne semblent s'être beaucoup préoccupés des différences ornithologiques) couronné du pschent, la forme mixte: un homme à tête de rapace. Sur les monuments qui suivent la tradition pharaonique, H. est vêtu de son costume égyptien traditionnel: un pagne laissant le torse nu; il est coiffé d'une perruque surmontée du pschent et tient le sceptre et le signe ankh (2-4). En l'absence d'attributs spécifiques, il est parfois difficile de le distinguer d'un autre dieu-faucon comme Rê (1).

Ces monuments sont difficiles à dater mais la présence de ce type de H. sur des intailles gnostiques (2-4) montre qu'il était encore utilisé à la fin de l'antiquité.

Le second type de H., H. cuirassé souvent appelé H. «légionnaire» (terme utilisé par Bénédictine) est une symbiose d'éléments égyptiens et gréco-romains. H. a gardé, de la tradition égyptienne, la tête de faucon coiffée de la perruque (18. 22. 26. 34. 35. 41. 42), le plus souvent surmontée du pschent (5. 6. 9. 19. 20. 32. 36. 38 [?]. 43. 44), parfois du disque solaire (7. 30. 31) ou de l'emblème atef (38). Plus rarement, H. est couronné du seul pschent (25. 30), parfois décoré d'un uraeus (16. 17).

Exceptionnellement, H. porte, entre la perruque égyptienne et le pschent, une couronne de feuilles et un nimbe radié (39) ou des rayons (20) à la manière romaine. Par contre, les vêtements et les armes sont ceux des officiers romains. Sur quelques monuments seulement, H. porte la thorax musclée (7. 18. 19), cuirasse de type grec mais encore utilisée par les officiers romains (ce qui ne facilite pas la datation des monuments). Sur les autres - lorsque les détails sont discernables - H. revêt la lorica squamata (5. 15-17. 20. 25. 26. 28. 37. 39. 41-43) dont les écailles se confondent avec les plumes du faucon, en particulier sur les œuvres de petites dimensions comme les patères en stéatite (29-36). La cuirasse est parfois ornée d'un ceinturon (5. 16. 17. 19. 20. 25) et d'un gorgoneion (16. 17. 41. 42). H. porte presque toujours le paludamentum (5-7. 15. 18-20. 23. 25. 26. 28. 32. 39-41. 43) et est chaussé de courtes bottes découvrant les orteils (5. 13. 15. 16-20. 28). D'après les positions du bras et de la main (ou ce qu'on peut en reconstituer), H. devait darder une lance vers un crocodile (26), un adversaire disparu (17) ou il la tenait à la manière d'un sceptre (5. 8. 10-13). Il porte parfois aussi une épée (6. 10. 15. 40), un bouclier (5. 9), un arc et un carquois (5) ou un baudrier (40. 43). Il peut aussi tenir un faucon (12. 19) ou une Nikè qui le couronne (13) ou faire une libation avec une patère (7 [?]. 25).

La plupart du temps, H. est représenté debout, dans une attitude majestueuse, soit seul (5. 9. 15. 25), soit en compagnie d'Isis et Sarapis (7), d'Harpocrate, Ammon-Rê, et d'un cavalier (6) ou d'Isis et Harpocrate (8). Beaucoup plus rares semblent être les monuments montrant H. cuirassé trônant (27. 28) ou plus étonnamment, H. à cheval transperçant de sa lance un crocodile, l'animal du dieu Seth; c'est là le seul épisode légendaire représenté (26); ce relief, datable du V^e s. ap. J.-C., a été considéré comme un prototype de Saint Georges avec le dragon.

De nombreuses représentations d'H. le montrent en buste, soit seul (36. 38. 39. 44) soit avec Isis (29-35. 37) parfois sortant d'une corolle de feuilles de lotus (40).

Un autre type de H. militaire hiéracocéphale est H. portant le costume «de campagne» des soldats: la tunica manicata ceinturée sur des braies collantes, avec le paludamentum (45-47); il est coiffé de la perruque et du pschent (45b. 46). Il est toujours représenté à cheval. La seule exception est celle d'un sarcophage du II^e s. ap. J.-C., provenant de Crète, d'un style plus égyptisant qu'égyptien, où H. trône en compagnie de divinités du cercle isiaque (47); il tient alors un long sceptre et un attribut qui est peut-être un fouet.

Le dernier type, dont l'identification n'est pas certaine (sauf sans doute 8), est le H. anthropomorphe, portant la cuirasse, le bouclier (48-51) et la lance (48. 50. 53); il se distingue des autres dieux cuirassés par la présence de faucons (48) ou le port du pschent (51) ou d'un emblème peu distinct (49. 50).

A part le sarcophage de Hiérapytna en Crète (47) et un relief d'Antinoë (26), tous les monuments sont de provenance inconnue. Certains ont été acquis en Egypte (1. 5-7. 16 [?]. 20 [?]. 23. 24. 31. 32. 45a. 46) et presque tous semblent de fabrication locale. Les rares monnaies représentant sûrement H. ont été frappées en Egypte, pour le nome d'Athribis (12) et de Hé-rakléopolis (38) mais ce sont des monnaies de plomb non datées. D'après leur style, la plupart des monuments pourraient dater du II^e s. ap. J.-C. Cependant, les intailles gnostiques (2. 4. 10. 11) semblent plus tardives et récemment M. Pfrommer (dans Parlasca, o. c. 45a, 159-160) a proposé une datation des patères en stéatite au II^e s. av. J.-C. au lieu des I^{er}/II^e s. ap. J.-C., comme le pensent plusieurs auteurs.

MARIE-ODILE JENTEL

HOSIOS KAI DIKAIOS

(Ὅσιος καὶ Δίκαιος, auch Θεός Ὅσιος καὶ Δίκαιος, Ἀγ- γελος Ὅσιος καὶ Δίκαιος, Ὅσιοι καὶ Δίκαιοι, Ὅσια καὶ Δικαία, Θεὸν Ὅσιον καὶ Δίκαιον) Nur epigraphisch bezeugte kleinasiatische Gottheit, die vor allem in Phrygien und Lydien, aber auch in Mysien, Galatien und Moesien verehrt wurde. Nach den Votivgaben zu schließen, setzte der Kult im 1. Jh. n. Chr. ein und erlebte seine Blüte im späten 2. und frühen 3. Jh. n. Chr. Aus den Inschriften geht hervor, daß die Gottheit keinen fest umrissenen Charakter besaß, denn sie wurde nicht nur unterschiedlich bezeichnet, sondern oft auch mit anderen Gottheiten assoziiert, besonders mit → Helios, → Apollon und → Zeus.

BIBLIOGRAPHIE: Crusius, O., ML 12 (1886-90) 2751 s. v. «Hosios»; Cumont, F., REV 1 (1903) 564 s. v. «Dikaïos 2»; Malten, L., REV 8 (1913) 2492 s. v. «Hosioi 3»; Tacheva-Hitova, M., Eastern Cults in Moesia Inferior and Thracia, EPRO 95 (1983) 266-268.

KATALOG

Da sich die zumeist sehr einfachen Darstellungen auf den Votivstelen und -altären in mehr oder weniger stereotyper Weise wiederholen, wird im folgenden nur eine kleine Auswahl der Denkmäler angeführt.

A. Hosios kai Dikaïos als Reiterfigur

1. Marmorstele. Istanbul, Arch. Mus. 6298. Aus der Umgebung von Kula (Lydien). – Sayar, M. H., ZPE 49, 1982, 191-192 Nr. 3 Taf. 10; SEG 32, 1215. – 182/83 n. Chr. – H. k. D. reitet nach r., hält einen Palmzweig über der l. Schulter. Inschrift ΜΕΤΑΛΩ ΘΕΩ ΟΣΙΩ ΚΑΙ ΔΙΚΑΙΩ...

2. Marmorstele. Manisa, Mus. 1944. Aus der Umgebung von Kula (Lydien). – Herrmann, P./Polatkan, K. Z., SbWien 265, 1 (1969) 50 Nr. 7 Taf. 6. – 3. Jh. n. Chr. – H. k. D. reitet nach r., flankiert von zwei Zypressen. Darunter zehn Adorantenfiguren in drei Registern. Inschrift ΘΕΩ ΟΣΙΩ ΚΑΙ ΔΙΚΑΙΩ...

3. Marmorstele. Manisa, Mus. 1945. Aus der Umgebung von Kula (Lydien). – Herrmann/Polatkan, a. O. 2, 50-51 Nr. 8 Taf. 6. – 257/58 n. Chr. – H. k. D. reitet nach r., trägt einen Strahlenkranz. Darunter drei Adorantenfiguren um einen Altar. Inschrift ΘΕΩ ΟΣΙΩ ΚΑΙ ΔΙΚΑΙΩ ΚΑΙ ΟΣΙΑ ΚΑΙ ΔΙΚΑΙΑ...

4. Marmorstele. Manisa, Mus. 1948. Aus der Umgebung von Kula (Lydien). – Herrmann/Polatkan, a. O. 2, 51-53 Nr. 9 Taf. 6. – 256/57 n. Chr. – H. k. D. reitet nach r. Darunter zwei Adorantenfiguren um einen Altar. Inschrift [Σ]ΤΡΑΤΟΝΕΙΚΟΣ ΚΑΚΟΛΕΙΣ ΤΟΥ ΕΝΟΣ ΚΑΙ ΜΟΝΟΥ ΘΕΟΥ [Ι]ΕΡΕΥΣ ΚΑΙ ΤΟΥ ΟΣΙΟΥ ΚΑΙ ΔΙΚΑΙΟΥ...

5. Marmoraltar. Istanbul, Arch. Mus. 51. Aus der Umgebung von Inönü (Phrygien). – Mendel, Sculpt III Nr. 846. – 3. Jh. n. Chr. – Auf der Hauptseite: H. k. D. reitet nach r., hält in der erhobenen r. Hand eine Doppelaxt. Auf den übrigen Seiten: weibliche Figur mit Waage und Elle, weibliche Figur mit Füllhorn, → Asklepios. Inschrift ... ΘΕΟΙΣ ΟΣΙΟΙΣ ΚΑΙ ΔΙ[Ι]ΚΑΙΟΙΣ...

6. (= Dioskouroi [in peripheria or.] 15* mit Lit.) Marmorstele. Istanbul, Arch. Mus. 748. Aus Dorylaeion (Phrygien). – Mendel, Sculpt III Nr. 847. – 3. Jh. n. Chr. – Oben im Giebfeld: H. k. D. reitet nach r., hält ein Blitzbündel (?) in der erhobenen r. Hand, wird von einem Hund begleitet. Unten auf dem Stelenschaft: in der Mitte sitzende → Selene, flankiert von den stehenden → Dioskouroi, darunter → Helios in Quadriga. Inschrift ... ΟΣΙΩ ΔΙΚΕΩ ΕΥΧΗΝ.

B. Hosios kai Dikaïos als stehendes Paar

7. Kalksteinstele. Kütahya, Mus. Aus Yayla Baba Köy (Phrygien). – Sheppard, A. R. R., Talanta 12/13, 1980/81, 87-90 Nr. 8 Taf. 1; SEG 31, 1130. – 3. Jh. n. Chr. – H. k. D. stehen frontal nebeneinander, tragen Manteltracht und weisen beide schulterlanges Haar auf; sie reichen sich die Hand (vgl. 8) und halten eine Waage bzw. eine Meßlatte. Oben im Giebfeld Büste des Helios. Inschrift ... ΟΣΙΩ ΔΙΚΕΩ ΕΥΧΗΝ. Vom gleichen Fundort stammen gegen 40 weitere Votive (sehr wahrscheinlich auch 8), was auf ein Heiligtum schließen läßt.

8. Marmorstele. Privatbesitz. Aus Phrygien. – Unpubliziert. – 3. Jh. n. Chr. – Genau wie 7, wohl aus derselben Werkstatt. Inschrift ΤΙΜΟΘΕΟΣ ΟΣΙΩ ΚΕ ΔΙΚΕΩ ΕΥΧΗΝ.

9. Marmorstele. Paris, Louvre MA 4288. Aus Dorylaeion (Phrygien). – Robert, L., RPh 13, 1939, 202-207 Nr. 4 Taf. 1. – 3. Jh. n. Chr. – In der Mitte stehen H. k. D. frontal nebeneinander und reichen sich die Hand, wobei sie in der anderen Hand eine Waage bzw. eine Meßlatte halten; sie werden flankiert von einer Reiterfigur l. und einer weiblichen Büste r. Darunter → Herakles mit Keule, → Hermes mit Kerykeion und Geldbeutel, Ochsen gespannt. Oben Büsten von Helios, Zeus und Selene, Adler. H. k. D. werden in der Inschrift nicht genannt.

10. Steinaltar. Afyon, Mus. 825. Aus Phrygien. – Drew-Bear, T., GRBS 17, 1976, 262-266 Nr. 17 Taf. 10; SEG 26, 1386. – 3. Jh. n. Chr. – H. k. D. stehen frontal nebeneinander, halten eine Waage bzw. eine Meßlatte. H. k. D. werden in der Inschrift nicht genannt.

11. Marmorstele. Afyon. Aus dem Gebiet von Dokimeion (Phrygien). – MAMA VI (1939) Nr. 389 Taf. 69. – 3. Jh. n. Chr. – H. k. D. stehen frontal nebeneinander und blicken sich an, die Figur r. hält eine Meßlatte. Inschrift ΝΕΣΤΩΡ ΣΤΡ[Α]ΤΩΝΟΣ ΟΣΙΩ [ΕΥΧ]ΗΝ.

12. Steinaltar. Kara Ağıl. Aus Hadrianopolis (Phrygien). – MAMA VII (1956) Nr. 132 Taf. 8. – 3. Jh. n. Chr. – H. k. D. stehen frontal nebeneinander, die Figur l. hält eine Meßlatte. Inschrift [Ο] ΔΗ[ΜΟΣ] ΟΣΙΩ[ΙΣ ΚΑΙ] ΔΙΚΑ[ΙΟΙΣ]...

C. Identifizierung unsicher

13. Marmorstatuette. Adana, Mus. Angeblich aus Sardis. – Petzl, G., in Studien zur Religion und Kultur Kleinasiens. Festschr. F. K. Dörner, EPRO 66 (1978) 756-761 Nr. 4 Taf. 180-183; SEG 28, 929. – 2./3. Jh. n. Chr. – Barfuß stehende männliche Gestalt (Kopf und r. Unterarm weggebrochen), trägt kurzen Chiton und Chlamys, hält in der gesenkten l. Hand ein Kerykeion. Inschrift ΘΕΩ ΟΣΙΩ ΚΑΙ ΔΙΚΑΙΩ...

14. Marmorstele. Avdan. Aus der Umgebung von Dorylaeion (Phrygien). – Frei, P., in I. Araştırma Sonuçları Toplantısı 1983 (1984) 61 Nr. 3 Abb. 4; SEG 34, 1294. – 1. Jh. n. Chr. – Ältester bisher bekannter Beleg von H. k. D. Bei den in der Inschrift genannten silbernen und marmornen «Eikones» handelt es sich – nach dem üblichen Sprachgebrauch zu schließen (s. Robert, L., REA 62, 1960, 316-324) – kaum um Darstellungen von H. k. D. und Helios, sondern eher um Bildnisse der Stifter oder römischer Kaiser. Inschrift ... ΟΣΙΩ ΔΙΚΑΙΩ ΤΕ ΜΕΓΙΣΤΩ ΛΑΜΠΡΩ Θ ΗΛΙΩ ΡΟΔΟΔΑΚΤΥΛΩ ΑΣΙΑ ΔΩΡΑ ΕΙΚΟΝΑΣ ΑΡΓΥΡΕΟΥΣ ΚΑΙ ΜΑΡΜΑΡΙΝΟΥΣ ΑΝΕΘΗΚΑΝ...

KOMMENTAR

Seit dem 2. Jh. n. Chr. weisen ein Teil der Votivstelen und -altäre an H. k. D. bildliche Wiedergaben dieser Gottheit auf. Die Darstellungen sind mehrheit-lich sehr bescheidener Art und lassen sich im wesentlichen in zwei Gruppen gliedern.

Die erste Gruppe (1-6) gibt H. k. D. als Reiterfigur wieder, die eine Doppelaxt (5), einen Palmzweig (1) oder evtl. auch ein Blitzbündel (6) als Attribut aufweisen kann. Es handelt sich dabei nicht um einen spezifischen, sondern um einen sehr geläufigen ikonographischen Typus, der im kaiserzeitlichen Kleinasien zur Darstellung verschiedener bekannter und lokaler Gottheiten verwendet wurde und daher auch zur Wiedergabe von H. k. D. rezipiert werden konnte. Auf 3 wurde H. k. D. mit einem Strahlenkranz versehen, womit die in den Inschriften oft vollzogene Angleichung an Helios hier auch bildlich vorgenommen wurde.

Die zweite Gruppe (7-12) stellt H. k. D. als frontal nebeneinander stehendes Paar dar. Es handelt sich um zwei in Manteltracht gekleidete männliche Figuren, die allerdings manchmal (sicher auf 7. 8) schulterlanges Haar aufweisen. Auf 7-9 sind die beiden Figuren durch Handschlag verbunden. Besonders kennzeichnend sind die Attribute, welche H. k. D. als eine Gottheit der Gerechtigkeit charakterisieren: eine Waage und eine Elle bzw. eine längere Meßlatte. Diese Attribute sind jedoch keineswegs spezifisch für H. k. D., sie wurden vielmehr aus der Ikonographie der → Dikaïosyne bzw. der → Nemesis übernommen. Der ikonographische Typus insgesamt ist durchaus eigenständig und bringt die dualistische Auffassung der Gottheit sinnfällig zum Ausdruck, stellt also wohl gegenüber dem traditionellen, polysemen Reitertypus eine jüngere Entwicklung dar.

Zu den beiden genannten Kategorien kommen weitere Darstellungen hinzu, deren Identifizierung mit H. k. D. möglich, aber nicht sicher ist. Besonders interessant ist die bisher einzigartige Statuette 13, die möglicherweise H. k. D. in Gestalt von Hermes wiedergibt, was etwa damit zu erklären wäre, daß H. k. D. als Mittler zwischen göttlicher und menschlicher Sphäre aufgefaßt wurde. Gerade aufgrund des nicht klar definierten Charakters von H. k. D. ist grundsätzlich mit weiteren bildlichen Erscheinungsformen zu rechnen, doch wird eine weitergehende Differenzierung und Analyse der Ikonographie von H. k. D. erst möglich sein, wenn die Denkmäler dieser noch kaum erforschten Gottheit auf wesentlich breiterer Basis untersucht werden können.

RUDOLF KÄNEL

HUSRNANA → Maris

HYADES

(Ῥάδες, Suculae) Nymphen (→ Nymphai), filles d'→ Atlas et d'Aithra ou Pleioné. Leur nombre varie de deux à sept. Inconsolables après la mort de leur frère → Hyas, elles se suicident; Zeus, pris de pitié, les transforme en une constellation (→ Astra, → Zodiacus) située à la tête du Taureau, tout près des → Pleiades (→ Astra). Elles sont également connues comme Nymphes de Nysa, comme Nymphes de Dodone ou Naïades, ainsi que comme membres du cortège dionysiaque, s'identifiant dans ce cas aux Ménades (→ Mainades).

SOURCES LITTÉRAIRES: Dans les premiers textes littéraires, les H. sont uniquement citées comme une constellation (parmi les premières mentions: Hom. Il. 18, 486; Hes. erg. 615; «Hes.» astronomia frg. 291 Merkelbach/West) qui sert de repère aux navigateurs (Eur. Ion 1156). C'est seulement chez les scholiastes et les auteurs tardifs que nous trouvons des indications sur la vie et la personnalité des H.: les traditions ne s'accordent pas sur leur généalogie, leur nombre et l'origine de leur nom.

Origine du nom: pour les uns, il est tiré de la lettre Y, d'après la forme de la constellation dans le ciel (Eratosth. kat. 14; Hyg. fab. 192); pour d'autres, du verbe βειν, pleuvoir (Hellan., FGH 4 F 19a; Eratosth. kat. 14; Cic. nat. 2, 43, 111) car leur lever et leur coucher coïncident avec une période de pluie (Verg. Aen. 1, 743; 3, 516; Ov. fast. 5, 165-166; Horat. c. 1, 3, 14; Hyg. fab. 192; Plin. nat. 2, 106; Etym. m. s. v. 'Υάδες); pour d'autres encore du mot ὑς, porc, truie (Hesych. s. v. 'Υάδας ai σῶες), d'où le diminutif poétique latin suculae, les petites truies (Cic. l. c.). Les Romains appellent aussi la constellation Palilicium ou Parilicium parce que la fête des Palilia (21 avril) coïncide avec l'apparition des H. (Plin. nat. 18, 247).

Une autre étymologie rattache le mot à 'Υης, nom de Dionysos, ou à 'Υη, nom de Sémélé (Pherekyd., FGH 3 F 90); c'est pourquoi les H. sont connues comme nourrices de Dionysos (o. c.).

Selon une troisième tradition, elles sont appelées H. d'après le nom de leur frère (ou père) Hyas: ce sont d'abord des Atlantides, filles d'Atlas; après la mort de leur frère, Zeus transforme cinq d'entre elles en H., les sept autres en Pléiades (Eust. Il. 55, 43-48 ad Hom. Il. 18, 486; Serv. Aen. 1, 744).

Sur l'identité de leurs parents, les traditions sont moins divergentes: leur mère est Aithra (Mousaios, Diels Vorsokr. 2 B 18; Timaios, FGH 566 F 91; Ov. fast. 5, 171) ou Pleioné (Hyg. fab. 192, 248; Tzet. Lycophr. 149; Serv. Aen. 1, 744; Eust. l. c.), mais dès l'antiquité, on admet l'idée que Pleioné soit un autre nom d'Aithra, indiquant le grand nombre de ses enfants (Timaios l. c.).

Outre Atlas on cite, comme père des H., → Okeanos (Mousaios l. c.; Ov. fast. 5, 171-172; Hyg. fab. 182), le roi de Crète Mélissée (Parmeniskos frg. 20 Breithaupt), Hyas lui-même, uni à Boiotia (Hyg. astr. 2, 21), → Erechtheus (Eur., TGF 466 frg. 357; Serv. Aen. 1, 744), → Kadmos I (Myrsilos, FGH 477 F 15).

Enfin Claud. paneg. 28, 172-173 confond les H. avec les Héliades (→ Phaethon I).

Le nombre des H. varie de deux à sept, mais selon certains elles seraient douze, confondues avec les Pléiades. Leurs noms les plus couramment cités sont Ambrosia, Coronis, Eudora, Dioné (ou Thyoné), Phaisylé (ou Aisylé), Polyxo, Phaio (nombre différent et diverses combinaisons des noms: «Hes.» astronomia frg. 291 Merkelbach/West; Pherekyd. l. c.; Timaios, FGH 566 F 91; Hyg. fab. 182, 192; astr. 2, 21; Diod. 5, 52; Serv. georg. 1, 138).

Les mythes relatifs à la vie et aux occupations des H. ne sont pas non plus uniques. Elles sont en général connues comme nourrices des enfants divins. Nymphes de Dodone, elles sont les nourrices de Zeus (Timaios l. c.; Hyg. fab. 182): les noms cités sont alors ceux des Nymphes dodonides ou bien ceux des Naïades.

Elles sont plus généralement mentionnées comme nourrices de Dionysos (Ov. met. 3, 314-315): elles le préservent de l'acharnement d'→ Hera (Hyg. astr. 2, 21; Pherekyd., FGH 3 F 90d) et le confient à → Ino; après quoi elles se réfugient chez leur grand-mère → Tethys (I) pour échapper à la poursuite de Lycurgue (→ Lykourgos I); Zeus vient à leur secours et les transforme en constellation après que Médée (→ Medeia) les a rajeunies (Hyg. fab. 182; Eratosth. kat. 14; Ov. fast. 5, 163-168; met. 7, 294-296; Apollod. bibl. 3 [29] 4, 3; Aischyl., TGF III F 246a; Schol. Aristoph. Equ. 1321). Ou bien, comme on l'a vu, Zeus les catastrophe en tant que sœurs d'Hyas (Serv. Aen. 1, 744; Eust. Il. 55, 43-46 ad Hom. Il. 18, 486), pour les consoler de la perte de leur frère au cours d'une chasse en Libye.

Dans la littérature astronomique, les H. ne sont pas mentionnées parce qu'elles font partie du signe du Taureau. Elles se trouvent à la tête du Taureau, près d'→ Orion et des Pléiades (Hom. Il. 18, 486). Leur apparition annonce les pluies du printemps ou de l'automne: les agriculteurs peuvent alors commencer les labours, mais les marins doivent tirer leurs navires à terre (Hes. erg. 614-630). Cependant elles servent de repères célestes aux marins (Eur. Ion 1156-1157); Ptolémée (tetr. 1, 9 Boill/Boer) les mentionne comme une étoile très brillante (Λαμπαδίας, ὁ λαμπρὸς τῶν Υάδων) suivie de quatre autres.

BIBLIOGRAPHIE: Baudrillart, A., DA IV 1 (1905) 509 s. v. «Pleiades-Hyades»; Boardman, J., «Herakles in extremis», dans Studien zur Mythologie und Vasenmalerei, Festschr. K. Schauenburg (1986) 127-132; Bouché-Leclercq, A., L'astrologie grecque (1899) 134 n. 1; 576; Cook, Zeus II 274-276; III 506-524; Engelmann, R./Weizsäcker, P., ML I (1886-90) 2752-2758 s. v. «Hyades»; v. Geisau, H., KIP 2 (1975) 1251-1252 s. v. «Hyades»; Grimal, Dictionnaire 215 s. v. «Hyades»; Gundel, W., RE VIII (1913) 2615-2624 s. v. «Hyades»; Metzger, Représentations 210-211, 217, 277-278; Scichilone, G., EAA IV (1961) 57-58 s. v. «Hyades»; Seyrig, H., «Tristes Hyades», RNum 1968, 283-285 = Scripta Numismatica (1986) 485-487; Vocotopoulou, L., Χαλκαὶ κορινθιωγενεῖς πρόχοι (1975) 96-97.

CATALOGUE

A. Les Hyades porteuses d'hydries

Représentées comme des femmes qui apportent ou versent de l'eau pour éteindre un bûcher; elles interviennent dans deux épisodes:

a) Les Hyades au bûcher d'Alcmène

Céramique italote (f. r.)

1.* (= Alkmene 6*, = Antenor II 1 avec bibl.)

Amphore camp. à col. Londres, BM F 193. De Capoue. - LCS 231, 36 pl. 90, 7: P. du Louvre K 491. - 350-325 av. J.-C. - Au-dessus de l'arc-en-ciel qui encadre la scène principale (Alcmène assise sur un autel, Antenor s'approchant pour mettre le feu), deux H. debout de part et d'autre versent l'eau de leurs hydries.

2.* (= Alkmene 5, = Amphitryon 2*, = Antenor II 2 - avec bibl.) Cratère en cloche paestan. Londres, BM F 149. De S. Agata dei Goti. - RVP 139, 239 pl. 88: Python (sign.). - 350-325 av. J.-C. - De part et d'autre de l'arc-en-ciel, les H. versent de l'eau (cf. 1); derrière elles Zeus et Eos.

3. (= Alkmene 7, = Amphitryon 3* - avec bibl.) Amphore camp. New York, marché des ant. De Grande-Grèce. - LCS Suppl. 3, 123, 147b: Parrish P. - 350-325 av. J.-C. - Scène en trois registres: au-dessus d'Alcmène et d'Amphitryon, deux H. versent de l'eau. Au-dessus d'elles et sur la g., Zeus.

b) Le bûcher d'Héraclès sur l'Oeta et son départ pour l'Olympe.

Céramique attique à f. r.

4. (= Herakles 2909 avec bibl.) Cratère en cloche fr. Rome, Villa Giulia 11688. De Conca. - EVP 103-104. - Vers 460 av. J.-C. - A: Héraclès sur le bûcher; de part et d'autre deux femmes portent des hydries. B: porteuses d'hydries.

5.* (= Arethousa 4*, = Athena 533, = Herakles 2916*, = Hybris II 1 - avec bibl.) Péliké. Munich, Antikenslg. 2360. De Vulci. - ARV* 1186, 30: P. de Cadmos; Add* 341. - 420-400 av. J.-C. - Héraclès sur le char d'Athéna. Au registre inférieur, au centre, le bûcher d'Oeta: à g. deux Silènes (→ Silenos, Silenoi), à dr. deux Nymphes qui apportent de l'eau avec leurs hydries: inscr. ΑΡΕΘΟΥΣΑ, ΠΡΕΜΝΟΙΑ (→ Arethousa 4).

6.* (= Amymone 15 (B), = Apollon 924, = Herakles 2917*, = Hyas 1 - avec bibl.) Cratère en calice. New York, MMA 52.11.18. - 400-380 av. J.-C. - A: Au registre inférieur, de part et d'autre du bûcher, deux Nymphes versent l'eau de leurs hydries; une troisième se hâte du côté dr.

7. (= Herakles 2918* avec bibl.) Cratère en cloche. S. Agata dei Goti, coll. Mustilli. - ARV* 1420, 5: P. de Londres F 64. - 400-380 av. J.-C. - Héraclès monte vers l'Olympe sur un quadriga conduit par → Nike. En bas, une Nympe verse de l'eau sur le bûcher pendant que Philoctète (→ Philoktetes) s'éloigne vers la dr., tenant les armes d'Héraclès.

Céramique italote (f. r.)

8. (= Herakles 2919* avec bibl.) Cratère à volutes apul. Milan, coll. H. A. 260. De Ruvo. - RVAp I 417, 13: P. de Lycurgue. - 360-340 av. J.-C. - Héraclès pa vers l'Olympe. Au registre inférieur, deux Nymphes versent l'eau de leurs hydries sur le bûcher et une troisième s'approche, portant une hydrie.

9. (= Herakles 2920 avec bibl.) Cratère à volutes apul. Tokyo, coll. privée. - RVAp Suppl. 1, 84-85, 287a: Underworld P. - 330-320 av. J.-C. - Au registre inférieur, deux Nymphes en train d'éteindre le bûcher.

Relief romain

10. (= Herakles 2912 avec bibl.) Relief de calcaire. Vienne, Niederösterreich. Landesmus. De Lichtenwörth (près de Wiener Neustadt). - II^e s. ap. J.-C. - Héraclès sur le bûcher; en haut à dr. deux bustes de femmes de face.

c) Hors de tout contexte mythologique

INTERPRÉTATION INCERTAINE

11. Intaille, jaspe jaune et brun. Paris, Cab. Méd. 255, anc. coll. W. Froehner. - Delatte, A./Derchain, Ph., Les intailles magiques gréco-égyptiennes (1964) n° 255; Seyrig 283-285 (= 485-487) fig. 1. - Femme voilée vêtue d'une longue robe, «debout sur une roue, versant d'une main le contenu d'une cruche et montrant de l'autre une constellation de sept astres, disposée au ciel en forme de triangle» (Seyrig: H.; Delatte/Derchain: → Nemesis ou → Tyche).

B. Les Hyades, Nymphes et nourrices

12.* (= Dionysos [in per. or.] 97* avec bibl.) Pavement de mosaïque. Néa Paphos, «maison d'Aion», in situ. - Michaelides, D., RDAC 1987, 243 pl. 62, 4; idem, Cypriot Mosaics (1987) 29 n° 27 pl. 22; Daszewski, W. A./Michaelides, D., Mosaic Floors in Cyprus (1988) 59. 62 fig. 28. - 2^e quart du IV^e s. ap. J.-C. - Panneau rect. supérieur à dr.: une H. (inscr. ΑΜΒΡΟΣΙΑ) parmi les Nymphes de Nysa qui entourent Dionysos enfant.

13. (= Achilleus 3*, = Ambrosia II 1*, = Anatrope 1* - avec bibl.) Pavement de mosaïque. Néa Paphos, «villa de Thésée», in situ. - Michaelides, RDAC 1987, 247 pl. 61, 5; idem, Cypriot Mosaics 44-45 n° 50 pl. 31. - Fin IV^e/début V^e s. ap. J.-C. - Le premier bain d'Achille: à g. une H. (inscr. ΑΝΒΡΟΣΙΑ), apportant une cruche pour le bain, se précipite vers Anatrope qui tient le nouveau-né.

COMMENTAIRE

Les H. sont mentionnées dans les textes antiques comme Nymphes et comme nourrices, en relation étroite avec Zeus: elles lui rendent des services et il leur montre de la bienveillance. En tant que constellation, elles annoncent l'arrivée des pluies et des orages. C'est ainsi qu'elles apparaissent sur les monuments figurés, d'une part comme des porteuses d'hydries en train d'éteindre un bûcher (1-10), d'autre part comme Nymphes et nourrices (12-13).

Dès le milieu du V^e s. et au cours du IV^e s. av. J.-C., les H. (une ou plusieurs, le plus souvent deux) sont représentées en train de se précipiter pour éteindre le bûcher de l'Oeta, soit en présence d'Héraclès (4), soit après son départ pour l'Olympe (5-9). Ces figures, identifiées aux H. par Cook, sont aussi interprétées comme des Nymphes, Nymphes locales ou Nymphes des fontaines (Beazley, Boardman; cf. etiam → Arethousa 4 pour le nom inscrit sur 5). La façon de représenter les deux Nymphes sur le relief romain 10 rappelle beaucoup l'aspect des H. sur 1-3; leur identification comme H. reste malgré tout douteuse.

Sur les vases italiotes, deux H. sont figurées dans l'épisode du châtement d'Alcmène par Amphitryon (1-3): placées au-dessus de la scène principale, elles versent l'eau de leurs hydries pour éteindre le bûcher et accomplir ainsi la volonté de Zeus. Sur 2, Zeus et Eos encadrent la scène: il s'agit en fait d'une représentation théâtrale de l'orage envoyé par Zeus au secours d'Alcmène.

Dans ces deux épisodes mythologiques les H. agissent sous les ordres de Zeus. Leur présence coïncide avec deux moments cruciaux dans la vie d'Héraclès, où Zeus intervient directement pour sauver son fils de l'acharnement d'Héra: sa naissance (châtement d'Alcmène par Amphitryon, 1-3) et son apothéose (4-10), conformément à l'oracle d'Apollon (Diod. 4, 38, 3).

De même, dans les textes littéraires, Zeus demande aussi l'aide des H. pour sauver le bébé Dionysos. Sur une mosaïque tardive (12) Ambrosia, l'une des H., est représentée parmi les Nymphes de Nysa. Sur l'autre mosaïque de Néa Paphos (13), Ambrosia a une fonction similaire, bien que le contexte mythologique diffère (→ Ambrosia II 1); signalons à ce propos qu'aucune légende ne met en relation les H. et la vie d'Achille (→ Achilleus 3). VASSILIKI MACHAIRA

HYAKINTHOS

(ῥάκινθος, Hyacinthus) Figure de nature héroïque et divine, d'origine peut-être préhellénique d'après son nom, qui est aussi celui d'une fleur; mis en rapport avec la Laconie pré-dorienne, puisque fils d'Amyclas et inhumé à Amyclées, il était cependant aussi en liaison étroite avec → Apollon: le fameux «trône» d'Amyclées, élevé par les Spartiates en l'honneur du dieu, renfermait la tombe du héros (Paus. 3, 19, 3-4). Pourtant le même monument le représentait aussi emmené au ciel en compagnie de sa sœur → Polyboia, et dans les mêmes conditions qu'→ Herakles (Paus. 3, 19, 4).

Mais si les Hyakinthia étaient l'une des fêtes les plus importantes de l'Etat spartiate (cf. Hdt. 9, 7, 11; Eur. Hel. 1468-1475; Thuk. 5, 23, 4; Xen. Hell. 4, 5, 11), les Lacédémoniens n'étaient pas les seuls Doriens à honorer H., puisque le mois Hyakinthios se retrouve non seulement à Théra, d'origine laconienne, mais aussi à Rhodes, Cos, Calymnos dans le Dodécannèse, à Lato en Crète, à Byzance, de même qu'en Sicile dans les colonies doriennes de Géla et de Syracuse. Enfin les Tarentins, eux aussi d'origine laconienne, abritaient «le tombeau dit d'Hyakinthos ou, comme on l'appelle aussi, d'Apollon Hyakinthos» (Pol. 8, 28) et l'honoraient, semble-t-il, d'un culte.

SOURCES LITTÉRAIRES: Il faut souligner les liens étroits qui unissent Apollon au bel éphèbe dont il tombe amoureux, au point «de lui offrir tout ce qu'il possède et de participer à tout ce qui lui est attaché: c'est ainsi qu'il lui enseignera la connaissance de la divination, le tir à l'arc et la musique, l'usage de la lyre sans notes discordantes; il le chargera des jeux de la palestres et lui donnera de parcourir, transporté sur des cygnes, toutes les contrées chères à Apollon» (Philostr. im. 14). Aussi la figure d'H. n'est-elle pas toujours facile à distinguer de celle du dieu.

Cependant son identification est rendue plus aisée par la poursuite amoureuse que le rival d'Apollon, → Zephyros, exerçait sur lui (Palaiph. 46 Festa). Mais il fut aussi aimé de → Thamyris, qui inventa pour lui la pédérastie (Apollod. bibl. 1 [16] 3, 3).

Les circonstances enfin de la mort d'H. apparaissent dans la plus ancienne mention connue du mythe, chez Hésiode peut-être (frg. 171 Merkelbach/West), et surtout chez Euripide (Hel. 1472-1473; cf. aussi Apollod. bibl. 1 [17] 3, 3; 3 [116] 10, 3): il aurait été frappé involontairement par le disque que lançait Apollon et qu'aurait peut-être, par malveillance, détourné le souffle jaloux de Zephyros (Philostr. im. 1, 24; Lukianos d. deor. 16, 2). Et c'est du sang du bel adolescent que serait née, comme on le sait, la fleur qui porte son nom (Palaiph. 46 Festa; Ov. met. 10, 162-219).

BIBLIOGRAPHIE: Beazley/Magi, Raccogliammi (1939) 88-89; Beazley, EVP (1947) 50; Brommer, Vasenlisten (1973) 526-528; Caprino, C., EAA III (1960) 869-870 s.v. «Giakinto»; Curtius, L., «Neue Hermeneutische Miscellen», AA 1948-49, 48-50; Dietrich, B. C., «The Dorian Hyacinthia», Kadmos 14, 1975, 133-142; Eitrem, S., RE IX 1 (1914) 7-16 s.v. ῥάκινθος; v. Geisau, H., KlPauly 2 (1975) 1254-1255 s.v. «Hyakinthos 1»; Hauser, F., «Hyakinthos», Philologus 52, 1893, 209-218; Kaempf-Dimitriadou, S., Die Liebe der Götter in der alt. Kunst des 5. Jh. v. Chr., AntK 11. Beih. (1979) 14-16, 80-81 pl. 6-7; Lacroix, L., «Hyakinthos et les monnaies incuses de Tarente», Etudes d'archéol. num. (1974) 23-35 pl. 1, 45-4; Mellink, M. J., Hyakinthos (Diss. Utrecht 1943); Pasquier, A., «Une nouvelle représentation d'Hyakinthos», RA 1980/2, 197-212; Piccirilli, L., «Ricerche sul culto di Hyakinthos», Studi classici ed orientali 16, 1967, 99-116; Roscher, W. H./Greve, M. L. 2 (1886-90) 2759-2766 s.v. «Hyakinthos»; Rossi, D., «Sei terrecotte tarentine e il culto di Hyakinthos», dans ΑΠΑΡΧΑΙ, Nuove ricerche in onore di P. E. Arias II (1982) 563-567 pl. 161-162; Schefold, SB II (1978) 49-50; SB III (1981) 324-327; Sichtermann, H., «Hyakinthos», Jdl 71, 1956, 97-123.

CATALOGUE

Si l'on excepte le document probablement le plus ancien — le trône d'Amyclées (1) — et le plus récent, figurant H. en discobole (48), l'essentiel de l'iconographie, qui se répartit en gros sur deux siècles et demi, de la fin du VI^e jusqu'au milieu du III^e s. av. J.-C., concerne soit les amours d'H. et d'Apollon: soit la poursuite amoureuse d'H. par Zephyros.

On peut naturellement hésiter sur l'identité des personnages qui figurent sur des documents de petites dimensions, comme les pierres gravées ou les monnaies, puisqu'Apollon prête à son amant certains de ses attributs. Le fait cependant que les figures juvéniles chevauchant des cygnes soient d'incontestables H. dans la céramique attique des VI^e-V^e s. (cf. H. échappant à la poursuite de Zephyros grâce au cygne d'Apollon sur le skyphos de Vienne 191, 41), et que cette monture soit rarement l'attribut d'Apollon en personne — qu'il chevauche le cygne ou qu'il le monte de côté (→ Apollon 343-344) — incite à reconnaître H. sur les nombreuses pierres gravées grecques et étrusques où apparaît une figure analogue (17-28, 33); de la même façon, puisqu'Apollon prête incontestablement à H. son char tiré par des cygnes (cf. l'oenochœ étrusque 35 = Apollon/Aplu 74), la reprise du même thème sur des scarabées étrusques (37-40) se réfère sans doute aussi à H. Enfin, plus anciennement, le char ailé monté par un jeune homme debout, illustré par Douris (34), ne correspond guère à celui de → Triptolemos, qui est figuré assis sur un char ailé, mais dépourvu d'attelage.

Précisons toutefois qu'H. n'est jamais nommé, désigné, sauf sur une pierre gravée tardive figurant un discobole, d'après Myron (48)!

A. Hyakinthos divinisé

a) Apothéose d'Hyakinthos laconien

1. (= Demeter 304, = Hades 67 avec bibl., = Horai 3) Elément de frise figurant sur l'autel qui formait sans doute la base de la grande statue d'Apollon, elle-même placée au centre du monument appelé le «trône» d'Amyclées en Laconie (→ Apollon 55). — Paus. 3, 19, 3-4; Martin, R., RA 1976, 205-218 = Architecture et urbanisme (1987) 369-386: œuvre de Bathyclès de Magnésie. — Dernier quart du VI^e s. av. J.-C. — Déméter, Coré (→ Persephone) et Hadès, les Moires (→ Moirai) et les Saisons (→ Horai), Aphrodite, Athéna et Artémis emmènent au ciel H. barbu et sa sœur Polyboia, une jeune fille.

b) Hyakinthos tarentin

2. Statuettes en terre cuite. Pise, Antiquarium, Ist. Arch. Univ., et Tarente, Mus. Arch. De Tarente (dépot votif d'un sanctuaire suburbain). — Rossi 563-567 pl. 161-162. — Fin IV^e-début III^e s. av. J.-C. — Jeune homme nu tenant une cithare, une lyre, un coq ou une phiale (ces statuettes sont accompagnées de figurines symétriques de jeunes filles drapées tenant une oenochœ ou une phiale, interprétées comme Polyboia).

B. Hyakinthos amant d'Apollon

a) Hyakinthos sur le cygne d'Apollon

Vases attiques

3.* Coupe fr. f.r. Paris, Louvre Cp 11217-11218 + Erlangen I 459 (actuellement déposé au Louvre). — *ARV*² 58, 45-46; Olto; *Add*² 164; Sichtermann 104 fig. 8; CVA 19 pl. 28, 2-3; Pasquier 209 fig. 11. — Vers 515-510 av. J.-C. — A: entre des palmettes et des yeux prophylactiques, jeune homme drapé à dr. chevauchant un cygne.

4.* Coupe f.r. type C. — Vente Sotheby, Londres

10-11 juillet 1989, 86-87 n° 212. — Olto (? attr. cat.). — Vers 510 av. J.-C. — I: (incomplet) adolescent à longue chevelure chevauchant un cygne aux ailes déployées passant à dr.; il avance les bras comme pour tenir les rênes ou le col de l'oiseau.

5. Fr. de plat f.r. Athènes, Mus. Nat. De Brauron. — *ARV*² 17, 23; Euphronios; Sichtermann 97-98 fig. 1; Schefold, SB II 50 fig. 53. — Vers 510 av. J.-C. — I: jeune homme nu, drapé, allongé (?) sur un cygne volant vers la dr. auquel il s'accroche du bras g.

6. Coupe f.r. Oxford (Mississippi), Univ. 1977.3.102 (anc. coll. Robinson). — *ARV*² 121, 25; Apollodoros; CVA Baltimore, Robinson Coll. 2, pl. 4; Sichtermann 100 fig. 3; Schefold, SB III 325 fig. 472. — Vers 500 av. J.-C. — I: jeune homme nu, sauf une draperie sur les épaules, chevauchant un cygne au long col volant vers la g. au-dessus de flots peuplés de dauphins.

7. Fr. de coupe f.r. Leipzig, Univ. T 521. D'Orvieto. — *ARV*² 121, 24; Apollodoros; Sichtermann 104 fig. 7. — Vers 500 av. J.-C. — I: jeune homme drapé chevauchant un cygne volant vers la g. au-dessus de flots peuplés de dauphins.

8.* (= Apollon 342 avec bibl.) Lécythe f.n. Berlin-DDR, Staatl. Mus. 30852. — Stella 165; Schefold, SB III 325 n. 708. — P. d'Athéna, vers 500-490 av. J.-C. — Jeune homme nu chevauchant un cygne volant vers la g. au-dessus des flots où bondissent des dauphins; il est couronné des mêmes rameaux de points qui garnissent le champ.

9.* Coupe f.r. Bâle, coll. Cahn H C 665. — Inédite: Douris (? attr. H. Cahn). — Vers 480-470 av. J.-C. — I: jeune homme nu chevauchant un cygne volant vers la g. au-dessus des flots avec deux dauphins: il tient une couronne dans la main dr.

10.* Coupe f.r. Bâle, coll. privée. — Para 417: P. d'Akestoridès; *Add*² 289; MuMAukt. 34 (1967) 82 n° 158 pl. 50; Boardman, ARFH I fig. 368. — Vers 480-470 av. J.-C. — I: jeune homme nu chevauchant un cygne volant vers la g. au-dessus des flots; tous deux tendent le nez vers le ciel; le jeune homme tient de la main g. une tige florale à volutes.

11. Fr. de coupe f.r. Arezzo, Mus. Arch. 142. — *ARV*² 784, 19; P. de Munich 2660; Sichtermann 100-101 fig. 4. — 2^e quart du V^e s. av. J.-C. — I: jambes d'un éphèbe chevauchant un cygne volant vers la g. au-dessus des flots.

Céramique italiote (f.r.)

12.* Cratère à volutes apulien. Naples, Mus. Naz. 82261 (H 3252). De Ruvo. — RVAp II 977, 200 pl. 382; P. du Saccos blanc; Sichtermann 106 fig. 11. — Vers 320 av. J.-C. — Dans une frise au bas de la vasque, jeune homme nu chevauchant un cygne blanc volant vers la g.; il porte un plateau de la main dr. et tient de la g. un rameau.

Céramique étrusque (f.r.)

13.* Hydrie fr. Paris, Louvre S 5081 = 9830054 AGR. — Jolivet, V., Rech. sur la cér. à f.r. tardive du Mus. du Louvre (1982) 93 fig. 1 p. 141: style falisque, P. de l'hydrie du Louvre; CVA 22, 38-39 pl. 16, 1-4. —

Vers 320-300 av. J.-C. - Jeune homme nu allongé sur un cygne volant vers la g.

14.* (= Apollon/Aplu 70 avec bibl.) Stamnos. Carlsruhe, Bad. Landesmus. 348 = B 1879. De Vulci. - EVP 142, 6: Funnel Gr. - Dernier quart du IV^e s. av. J.-C. - A: jeune homme nu chevauchant un cygne passant à g.

15.* (= Apollon/Aplu 69 avec bibl.) Stamnos. Bâle, coll. privée. - Funnel Gr. - Vers 330-320 av. J.-C. - A: jeune homme drapé, couronné de laurier, assis sur un cygne tourné à g. qui tient dans son bec une sorte de panier.

16.* Amphore. Mayence, RGZM 33836-33837. - Büsing-Kolbe, A., CVA 2, 14-15, pl. 3: P. du Funnel Gr. de Berlin. - Dernier quart du IV^e s. av. J.-C. - A: jeune homme drapé assis sur un cygne passant à dr.; il enlace son col recourbé.

Pierres gravées grecques

17.* (= Apollon 346* avec bibl.) Scarabée, cristal de roche. Londres, BM H 367 (anc. coll. Hamilton). - Sichtermann 100-101 fig. 6. - Fin du VI^e s. av. J.-C. - Jeune homme nu chevauchant un cygne volant vers la dr., au-dessus des flots d'où bondissent des dauphins; il tient un rameau de la main g.

18.* (= Apollon 347 avec bibl.) Agate. Paris, Cab. Méd. - Fin du VI^e s. av. J.-C. - Jeune homme nu chevauchant un cygne volant vers la dr., les ailes déployées; inscr. EPOE.

19. Calcédoine. Londres, BM 1931.5-17.1. - Vente Sotheby, mai 1931, 123 pl. 11; BMQ 6, 1931-32, 34 pl. 344; Sichtermann 100-101 fig. 5. - V^e s. av. J.-C. - Jeune homme demi-nu allongé sur un cygne volant vers la dr., relevant la tête et battant des ailes; il tient un rameau de la main g.

Scarabées étrusques, cornaline

20.* Oxford, Ashm. Mus. 1941.349. - Zazoff, EtrSk 133 n° 276 pl. 51; Boardman/Vollenweider, CatGemsOxford I n° 242 pl. 40. - Style a globolo: IV^e-III^e s. av. J.-C. - Jeune homme nu chevauchant un cygne volant vers la g., la tête levée.

21. Oxford, Ashm. Mus. Fortnum FR. 799 (anc. coll. Castellani). - Boardman/Vollenweider, CatGemsOxford I 59-60 n° 247 pl. 41. - Style a globolo: fin IV^e-début III^e s. av. J.-C. - Jeune homme nu chevauchant un cygne vers la g.

22. Vatican, Mus. Greg. Etr. 13235. - Zazoff, EtrSk 167 n° 737. - Style a globolo ancien: IV^e s. av. J.-C. - Jeune homme nu chevauchant un cygne.

23.* (= Apollon/Aplu 72* avec bibl.) Copenhague, Mus. Thorv. 73. - Style a globolo: IV^e-III^e s. av. J.-C. - Jeune homme nu chevauchant un cygne vers la g.

24.* Copenhague, Mus. Nat. 165. - Zazoff, EtrSk 187 n° 738. - Style a globolo: IV^e-III^e s. av. J.-C. - Même thème.

25.* Munich, Münzslg. 21.797. - Zazoff, EtrSk 187 n° 739; AGD I 2, n° 651 pl. 73. - Style a globolo: IV^e-III^e s. av. J.-C. - Même thème.

26. Anc. coll. von Heyl. - Furtwängler, AG pl. 61, 50; Zazoff, EtrSk 168 n° 741. - Style a globolo: IV^e-III^e s. av. J.-C. - Jeune homme nu chevauchant un cygne avançant vers la dr.

27. Malibu, Paul Getty Mus. - Boardman, J., Intaglios and Rings, Greek, Etruscan and Eastern from a Private Coll. (1975) 106 n° 147. - Style a globolo: fin du IV^e-début du III^e s. av. J.-C. - Jeune homme nu chevauchant un cygne avançant vers la dr.; les bras levés, il semble tenir un aiguillon.

28.* Londres, BM 825. - Walters, BMGems 100 n° 825; Zazoff, EtrSk 168 n° 740. - Style a globolo: IV^e-III^e s. av. J.-C. - Homme nu barbu agenouillé sur un cygne(?), la tête penchée.

Terres cuites

29.* Groupe plastique béotien. New York, MMA 07.286.24. - Pasquier 211 fig. 12 (en haut). - V^e s. av. J.-C. - Ephèbe demi-nu assis vers la dr. sur un cygne aux ailes repliées.

30.* Fr. de plaque tarentine. Naples, Mus. Naz. 140942. - Sichtermann 107 fig. 12. - Fin du V^e ou IV^e s. av. J.-C. - Jeune homme demi-nu assis sur un cygne, vers la dr.

Monnaies

31.* (= Apollon 349 avec bibl.) EL statères, Cyzique (Mysie), vers 475-410 av. J.-C. - Babelon, Traité II 2, 1431 n° 2692 pl. 165, 16 («Apollon»); Caprino 870 («H.»?); Waggoner, N. M., Early Greek Coins from the Coll. of J. P. Rosen (1983) n° 506 pl. 19. - Av. Figure juvénile en himation, une couronne de laurier dans la main dr., qui chevauche un cygne volant à g.; au-dessous, un thon. Rv. Carré creux.

b) Hyakinthos sur deux cygnes

Terre cuite grecque

32.* (= Aphrodite 790* avec bibl.) Groupe plastique attique. Paris, Louvre MNB 545. - Mollard-Besques I 15 pl. 11, B 88; Pasquier 198 fig. 1. - Dernier quart du VI^e ou I^{er} quart du V^e s. av. J.-C. - Jeune homme drapé, assis sur un siège sans dossier dont les montants latéraux sont en forme de protomés de cygne à long col.

Pierre gravée étrusque

33.* (= Apollon/Aplu 73 avec bibl.) Scarabée cornaline. Zagreb, Mus. Arch. 208 (201). De Starigrad. - Style a globolo IV^e-III^e s. av. J.-C. - Jeune homme nu chevauchant deux cygnes vers la dr.

c) Hyakinthos sur le char d'Apollon

Céramique attique (f. r.)

34. Coupe. Berlin, Staatl. Mus. inv. 3168. - *ARV*² 428, 13; Douris; *Add*² 236; AA 1891, 117-118; Hartwig pl. 27; AA 1979, 18-19. 21-23 fig. 1-4. 8. 10-11. - Vers 500-490 av. J.-C. - I: jeune homme nu, debout vers la dr., tenant les rênes d'un char ailé tiré par des animaux non figurés.

Céramique étrusque (f. r.)

35.* (= Apollon/Aplu 74* avec bibl.) Oenochœ. Vatican G 111 (anc. coll. Guglielmi). De Vulci. - I^{er} quart du IV^e s. av. J.-C. - Se faisant face, bige monté par Apollon qui tient un grand rameau de laurier et char tiré par deux cygnes, conduit par H. à demi nu.

Peinture de chevalet

36. Tableau perdu. Alexandrie, puis Rome, temple d'Auguste. Par l'Athénien Nicias. - Plin. nat. 35, 131; Paus. 3, 19, 4. - 2^e moitié du IV^e s. av. J.-C. - Hyakinthos adolescent, en tant qu'amant d'Apollon.

Scarabées étrusques, cornaline

37.* (= Apollon/Aplu 76 avec bibl.) Copenhague, Mus. Thorv. I 8. - Fossing, ThorvGems 40 pl. 2, 72. - Style a globolo ancien: IV^e s. av. J.-C. - Jeune homme nu sur un char tiré par deux cygnes volant vers la g.

38.* (= Apollon/Aplu 76) Anc. coll. Lord Southesk A 2. - Southesk, Cat. Ant. Gems (1908) pl. 1, 13; Zazoff, EtrSk 167 n° 736. - Style a globolo: IV^e-III^e s. av. J.-C. - Dans un char tiré vers la g. par deux cygnes, homme agenouillé tenant un aiguillon(?).

39.* (= Apollon/Aplu 76* avec bibl.) Berlin-Ouest, Staatl. Mus. FG 242. - Furtwängler, Beschreibung pl. 5, 242. - Style a globolo récent: III^e s. av. J.-C. - Jeune homme nu sur un char tiré par deux cygnes courant vers la dr.

40. Naples, Mus. Naz. 161593. De Cumes. - Panunzi, CatGlittNapoli I 89 n° 131. - Style a globolo: fin IV^e-début III^e s. av. J.-C. - Jeune homme nu sur un char tiré par deux cygnes en marche vers la dr., tenant les guides et brandissant l'aiguillon.

C. Hyakinthos aimé par Zéphyros

a) Hyakinthos sur le cygne d'Apollon poursuivi par Zéphyros

41.* Skyphos att. f. r. Vienne, Kunsthst. Mus. IV 191. - *ARV*² 976, 2: P. de Zéphyre; Para 436; Hauser 209-211; Smith, H. R. W., Der Lewismaler (1939) 17 pl. 27-334; CVA 1, pl. 38, 1-3; Sichtermann 116 fig. 19-20; EAA VII 1253; Kaempf-Dimitriadou n° 49 pl. 6, 1-2. - Vers 470 av. J.-C. - A: H., jeune adolescent nu, chevauche vers la dr. le cygne d'Apollon en train de s'envoler; du bras g. il encourage sa monture; la figure grimaçante, il tend de sa main dr. une κυνόδεσμη (CVA) ou un Yo-Yo (Kaempf) à (B) Zéphyros, ailé, qui tend le bras dr. vers lui; il porte une étoffe (le vêtement peut-être de H.) autour du bras g.

b) Hyakinthos poursuivi par Zéphyros

Céramique attique

42. Skyphos f. r. Bruxelles, Mus. Roy. A 72. - *ARV*² 976, 1: P. de Zéphyre; CVA 3, pl. 19, 1; Sichtermann 118; Kaempf-Dimitriadou n° 50 pl. 6, 3-4. - Vers 470 av. J.-C. - A: Zéphyros nu, ailé, vole en direction de (B) H., jeune adolescent nu, sauf un himation sur le bras g., qui s'enfuit vers la dr. en se retournant vers son poursuivant; un arbre situe la scène en plein air.

43. Cratère à colonnettes f. r. Ferrare, Mus. Naz. 2666. De Spina (T 539). - *ARV*² 228, 27: P. d'Eucharides; *Add*² 199; Sichtermann 116 fig. 21-22; Kaempf-Dimitriadou n° 48; Alfieri, Spina 7 fig. 21. -

Vers 470 av. J.-C. - A: Zéphyros nu, barbu, ailé, une draperie sur le bras g., poursuit vers la dr. (B) un jeune homme drapé, une canne à la main, qui s'enfuit en se retournant vers lui.

44.* Disque double en terre cuite f. bl. polychrome. New York, MMA 28.167. - *ARV*² 890, 175; 1673: P. de Penthésilée; *Add*² 302; BullMMA 23, 303-305; Diepolder, H., Der Penthesilea-Maler (1936) 16 pl. 19, 2; Sichtermann 119; Caprino 870 fig. 1084; Mertens, J. R., Attic White-Ground (1977) 141, 2; Kaempf-Dimitriadou n° 53 pl. 7; Reinhardt, H., AntK 23, 1980, 44 (Zéphyros interprété comme Thanatos); Schefold, SB III 327 fig. 478; Wehgartner, I., Attisch weißgrundige Keramik (1983) 157-158 n° 6. - Vers 460 av. J.-C. - A: Zéphyros nu, ailé, saisit par le bras H. adolescent, nu sauf un himation qui tombe de l'épaule g.; H. tient une lyre dans la main g. et se retourne vers Zéphyros. Tous deux sont diadémés; inscr. HO ΠΑΙΣ ΚΑΛΙΟΣ. Autre scène de poursuite amoureuse - Eos et Képhalos(?) - en B.

c) Hyakinthos enlevé par Zéphyros

Vases attiques à f. r.

45.* Coupe. Boston, MFA 95.31. De Tarquinia. - *ARV*² 443, 225: signée par Douris; Para 375; *Add*² 240; Caskey/Beazley III pl. 71, 127; Kaempf-Dimitriadou n° 55; Schefold, SB III 325 fig. 473. Pour Sichtermann 121; Greifenhagen, A., Griech. Eros (1957) 79-80; Vermeule, E., AntK 12, 1969, 14; Shapiro, H. A., AJA 85, 1981, 142 n. 71 pl. 28, 13, la figure ailée ne serait pas Zéphyros, mais Eros. - Vers 490-480 av. J.-C. - I: Zéphyros nu et ailé et H. nu, étroitement enlacés, s'élèvent dans les airs; dans le champ, fleur, palmettes et rinceaux.

46. Fr. de coupe. Boston, MFA 13.94. De Caeré. - *ARV*² 1570, 30: proche de Douris; *Add*² 389; Vermeule, E., AntK 12, 1969, 14 n° 20 pl. 12, 5; Kaempf-Dimitriadou n° 54; Shapiro, o. c. 45, 142 n. 71 pl. 28, 14 (même remarque que pour 45). - Vers 490-480 av. J.-C. - I: réplique de la précédente.

47.* Coupe. Berlin-DDR, Staatl. Mus. F 2305. De Nola. - *ARV*² 450, 31: manière de Douris; Sichtermann 120 fig. 27; Kaempf-Dimitriadou n° 56 pl. 7, 2. - Vers 480 av. J.-C. - I: Zéphyros nu et ailé, enlaçant étroitement H. qui tient une lyre de la main g., s'élève avec lui dans les airs; sous leurs jambes repliées, une fleur.

D. Hyakinthos au disque

48.* Pierre gravée, cornaline. Londres, BM. - Smith, BMSculpture I 91 fig. 5; Furtwängler, AG pl. 44, 26; Walters, BMGems 198 n° 1865; Schröder, B., AA 1920, 62 fig. 2. - Ep. impériale romaine. - H. dans l'attitude du discobole de Myron; inscr. YAKINΘΟΣ.

E. Représentations incertaines

Vases peints

49.* (= Hera 459*, = Herakles 2861 avec bibl.) Coupe fr. laconienne f. n. New York, MMA 50.11.7

(anc. coll. Curtius). - P. des Boréades; Lane, A., BSA 34, 1933-34, 163-164; Pelagatti, P., BCH 82, 1958, 493; Scheffold, SB II 49 fig. 52. - Vers 570-560 av. J.-C. - I: partie inférieure d'un homme nu conduit par la main et présenté à Zeus et Héra assis, par une figure juvénile de plus grande taille, coiffée d'un polos. Au lieu d'Héraclès introduit dans l'Olympe par Athéna on a voulu parfois (Curtius, Scheffold) reconnaître ici l'apothéose de H. en compagnie de sa sœur Polyboia.

50. Hydrie attique f. r. Naples, Mus. Naz. SA 197. - *ARV*² 594, 57; P. d'Altamura; Sichtermann 110 fig. 15; Scheffold, SB II 327 fig. 480. - Vers 460 av. J.-C. - Bège monté par un jeune homme drapé qui tient les rênes avec, au premier plan, Apollon à la cithare et une déesse, à dr., qui semble les accueillir. Le cocher d'Apollon pourrait être Lycomédès, selon Beazley.

Monnaies

51. AR statères incus, Tarente, vers 510-500 av. J.-C. - *BM Guide*² 10 n° 2 pl. 6; Kraay/Hirmer, GrCoins 314 n° 295 pl. 102; Stazio, A., AttiMGreca 10, 1970 (1971) 152; Lacroix 23-35 pl. 1, 45-4; Kraay, ArCoins 175 n° 663 pl. 38. - Av. Jeune homme nu à g., un genou à terre, tenant une lyre de la main g. et une fleur de la dr. Rv. Même type en creux, inversé. Diverses interprétations: H. (Stazio, Kraay), Apollon Hyakinthios (*Guide*², Kraay/Hirmer), → Taras (BMC Italy 165, 33), Eros aptère (Lacroix; LIMC III s. v. «Eros» p. 934).

Pierre gravée étrusque

52. Scarabée, cornaline. Londres, BM 676. - Furtwängler, AG pl. 20, 31; Walters, BMGems n° 676 pl. 12; Zazoff, EtrSk 84 n° 148 pl. 31; de Simone, Entlehnungen I 105; Cristofani, M./Martelli, M., et al., L'oro degli Etruschi (1983) 240 fig. 269; 316-317 n° 269. - IV^e s. av. J.-C. - Figure juvénile nue s'écroulant vers la dr.; une pluie de sang s'écoule de son crâne sur le disque tombé à terre; inscr. étrusque Puce (interprétée comme → Phokos par de Simone).

COMMENTAIRE

Pausanias (3, 19, 4) souligne le contraste qui existe entre la figure barbe du H. d'Amyclées (1) et l'aspect juvénile que lui a donné le peintre athénien Nicias, dans un tableau célèbre (36) de la 2^e moitié du IV^e s. (cf. Plin. nat. 35, 131); car, souligne Pausanias, «si le peintre Nicias, fils de Nicomédès, lui a donné la délicatesse de l'adolescence, c'est qu'il a fait allusion à la légende concernant l'amour qu'Apollon avait pour lui». De fait, la figure du H. laconien d'Amyclées ou de Tarente, qui oscille entre l'héroïsation funéraire et l'assimilation à la divinité, semble bien différente de l'image poétique du jeune adolescent passionnément aimé, de «cet enfant, qui est le crime et la douleur de Phoebus» (Martialis 14, 173), celle qui a séduit les peintres de vases athéniens, sensiblement avant que l'Hélène d'Euripide n'évoque, à propos de fêtes spartiates, la mort accidentelle du bel éphèbe, premier essai de syncrétisme entre les deux images.

Quoi qu'il en soit, dans la céramique attique comme dans les documents un peu plus récents, surtout d'origine étrusque, qui reprennent la même tradition, l'amour d'Apollon pour le beau pais s'inscrit fort bien dans ce courant pédérastique qui alimente tout le «style sévère» jusque vers 480 (3-10, 17-19); il est peut-être symptomatique aussi que les trois documents qui illustrent pour la première fois l'intervention de Zéphyros et qui datent de la fin de cette période (par Douris et son atelier: 45-47) représentent un enlèvement très amoureux d'H., dont la tradition écrite ne conserve d'ailleurs aucune trace.

En revanche la poursuite amoureuse d'H. par Zéphyros (41-44) s'inscrit dans toute une série de quêtes du même genre, très populaires dans la céramique attique à f. r. du début de l'ép. classique (Eos et Céphale, Borée et Orithye, Poséidon et Amydone par exemple): ce qui rend parfois quelque peu incertaine l'identification de la scène. Il en est ainsi, croyons-nous, pour les deux skyphoi bien connus du peintre de Lewis (Naples 126057 et Schwerin 731 = *ARV*² 974, 23-24; Sichtermann fig. 23-26; Kaempf-Dimitriadou n° 51-52 pl. 6, 5-6) que nous avons exclus, car le prétendu H. est poursuivi par une figure ailée qui est de caractère incontestablement féminin (cf. CVA Schwerin I, pl. 32, 1-2; 34, 1-2).

Enfin, l'évocation du disque mortel, littérairement attestée à partir de la fin du V^e s. (chez Euripide) et qui prend par la suite un développement romanesque considérable, n'est guère présente dans l'iconographie, sauf si l'on suppose - ce qui n'a rien d'évident - que la peinture réelle de Nicias (36) comportait cet épisode, qui se trouve décrit dans les tableaux, sans doute imaginaires, évoqués par Martial et les deux Philostrate.

LAURENCE ET FRANÇOIS VILLARD

HYAS

(Υας, Hyas) Fils d'→ Atlas et de l'Océanide Aithra ou Pleioné, frère des → Hyades et des → Pleiades; il fut tué au cours d'une chasse en Libye. Il n'est mentionné qu'en rapport avec ses sœurs, les Hyades. A distinguer d'un héros béotien du même nom, éponyme d'Hyampolis.

SOURCES LITTÉRAIRES: L'histoire d'H. est connue par des mythographes tardifs qui veulent expliquer le nom des Hyades et leur transformation en constellation (Eratosth. kat. 14; Mousaios, Diels Vorsokr. 5 2 B 18; Timaios, FGH 566 F 91; Ov. fast. 5, 170. 172. 181; Hyg. fab. 192. 248; Hyg. astr. 2, 21; Serv. Aen. 1, 744; Eust. 1155, 43-47 ad Hom. Il. 18, 486; Stat. silv. 1, 6, 21-22). Pendant une chasse en Libye (Timaios, FGH 566 F 91; Eust. l. c.), H. fut tué, soit par un serpent (Timaios l. c.; Eust. l. c.; Schol. Arat. 254 p. 73, 33), soit par un lion (Hyg. astr. 2, 21) ou par «un lion ou un sanglier» (Hyg. fab. 192. 248; Schol.

Germ. Caes. BPP 75, 14). Plusieurs de ses sœurs (cinq ou sept selon les traditions) en moururent de chagrin. Zeus, pour les consoler, les transforma en étoiles et leur donna le nom d'H. d'après celui de leur frère bien-aimé.

BIBLIOGRAPHIE: Grimal, *Dictionnaire*² 215 s. v. «Hyas»; Gundel, W., RE VIII (1914) 24-25 s. v. «Hyas»; Robert, C., Eratosthenis catasterismorum reliquiae (1878) 12-14; Scichilone, G., EAAIV (1961) 58 s. v. «Hyades»; Weizsäcker, P., MLI 2 (1886-90) 2766-2767 s. v. «Hyas 1».

1. (= Amydone 15, = Apollon 924, = Héraklès 2917*, = Hyades 6 - avec bibl.) Cratère en calice att. f. r.; New York, MMA 52.11.18. - Vers 400-380 av. J.-C. - A: dans la scène de l'apothéose d'Héraclès, on a proposé de reconnaître H. dans deux personnages masculins: au registre inférieur, à g. d'Athéna et des Hyades qui versent de l'eau, un jeune homme vêtu d'une chlamyde, le pétase sur le dos, tenant de sa main dr. deux javelines, qui se précipite vers la g. en retournant la tête vers la scène de l'extinction du bûcher; ou au registre supérieur, derrière le char d'Héraclès et de Niké, au-dessus des Hyades qui versent de l'eau, un jeune homme vêtu comme le précédent, dans la même attitude, qui tient de sa main dr. la lance et se précipite vers la g. en regardant derrière lui.

La figure d'H. n'a pas jusqu'à présent été identifiée avec certitude sur les monuments antiques, et l'épisode de sa mort, connu par les sources littéraires, n'est pas iconographiquement attesté. Sur le cratère 1, la présence auprès des Hyades d'un jeune homme vêtu en chasseur - qu'il s'agisse du premier ou du second - peut faire supposer qu'il s'agit de leur frère H., mais tant que l'identification n'est pas confirmée par une inscription ou tout au moins par une tradition littéraire, cette hypothèse nous semble arbitraire.

ELEUTHERIA SERBETI

HYBLAIA

(Υβλαία θεός, Venus Victrix Hyblensis ?) Déesse locale d'origine sicule d'une des trois cités d'Hybla en Sicile, celle qui était placée la plus au nord, assez près de Catane (Paus. 5, 23, 5), et que l'on situe en général sur l'emplacement de l'actuelle Paternò; une inscr. d'époque romaine trouvée à Paternò (CIL X 2, 7013) semble permettre d'identifier H. à Vénus Victrix Hyblensis (→ Venus).

SOURCES LITTÉRAIRES: Pausanias (5, 23, 6), à propos d'une offrande des Hybléens à Olympie, rapporte qu'H., dans son sanctuaire, était vénérée par tous les Siciliens; il ajoute, d'après Philistos, que ces Hybléens étaient les plus pieux de tous les barbares de Sicile et qu'ils interprétaient les présages et les songes. C'était, semble-t-il, les Galeotai qui étaient doués de ce don de divination (cf. Cic. div. 1, 20, 39, à propos de la mère de Denys 1^{er} de Syracuse et toujours d'après Philistos). Il est donc tentant d'identifier le siège du culte d'H. avec l'Hybla Geléatis que Thucydide place dans cette région (Thuk. 6, 62, 5), d'autant plus qu'on la retrouve, semble-t-il, mentionnée aussi par Pausanias sous la forme d'Hybla Geréatis (Paus. 5, 23, 6).

Mais l'Hybla Mégala, dont les monnaies comportent le seul témoignage iconographique possible se référant à la déesse H., est nettement distinguée par le même Pausanias de son Hybla Geréatis et par Stéphane de Byzance (s. v. Υβλαί) de celle des Hybléens Galeotai, auxquelles il ajoute une troisième Hybla, l'Hybla Héraia.

BIBLIOGRAPHIE: Sur le culte d'H., cf. Ciaceri, E., Culti e miti nella storia dell'antica Sicilia (1911) 15-23; Hepding, H., RE IX 1 (1914) 29 s. v. «Hyblaia»; Dunbabin, T. J., The Western Greeks (1948) 130-132.

Sur les trois Hyblai, cf. Ciaceri, E., «Megara Iblea ed Iblea Geréatis», Studi Storici 2, 1909, 163-183; Pareti, L., «I Galeotai, Megara Iblea ed Iblea Galeatide», dans Studi Siciliani ed Italiani (1914) 101-112; Ziegler, K., RE IX 1 (1914) 26-28 s. v. «Hybla»; Dunbabin, o. c. 144-145.

Sur les monnaies d'Hybla Mégala, cf. Drexler, W., ML I (1890) 2767; Hill, G. F., Coins of Ancient Sicily (1903) 221; Head, HN 147-148; Ziegler, o. c. 28; Hepding, o. c. 29; Dunbabin, o. c. 44 n. 5.

1*. AE, Hybla Mégala fin III^e-II^e s. av. J.-C. (après 210). - Gábrici, Bronzo 141 pl. 7, 11; SNG Copenhagen I n° 325-328 pl. 7. - Av. Tête de femme voilée, vers la dr., portant un modius; derrière elle, abeille. - Rv. Dionysos tenant un canthare et un thyrsos, vers la g., avec une petite panthère; lég. HYBAAΣ MEΓAΛAΣ.

La présence d'une abeille derrière la tête supposée d'H. pourrait faire allusion à la renommée du miel de l'Hybla mégarienne (cf. Strabon, 6, 2, 2 p. 267; Verg. ed. 1, 53-55; Sil. 14, 199-200); mais cette dernière, depuis longtemps, n'existait plus. La figure de Dionysos pourrait au contraire rappeler les vins célèbres de l'Etna, donc l'Hybla Geléatis. Mais rien en tout cas ne vient évoquer la troisième Hybla, celle du sud, habituellement identifiée à Hybla Héraia et placée près de l'actuelle Ragusa (contra Manganaro, G., La Sicilia antica II 2 [1980] 453).

FRANÇOIS VILLARD

HYBRIS I

(ὕβρις, superbia) Frevelhafte Überheblichkeit. Im Griechischen zentraler Begriff des Frevels, nach welchem sich der Mensch in seiner Selbstüberhebung in Wort und Tat anmaßt, sich durch eigene übergrössige Kraft, Geschicklichkeit, Glück oder Reichtum den Göttern gleichzustellen oder gegen Götter und Menschen mit Gewalt oder Betrug besonders schwere Frevel zu begehen. Aus überheblichem Stolz oder aus Anmaßung überschreitet der Freveler aus Hybris (ὕβρις) die von den Göttern gesetzten Schranken und die Grenzen der Ordnung. Er fordert damit den Unwillen und die Empörung der Götter heraus und muß mit ihrer Rache und Vergeltung rechnen (→ Nemesis). Daneben gibt es Hybris auch in «harmloser» Form, als Mutwilligkeit besonders von jungen Tieren und Menschen, die keine Götterstrafe nach sich zieht. So kann auch ein Satyr den Namen H. tragen (→ Hybris II).

LITERARISCHE QUELLEN: Hybris und die von diesem Begriff abgeleiteten Wörter kommen schon bei Homer vor, ihre Antithese ist → Eunomia. Aber weder Homer noch Hesiod personifizieren H., so viele andere Übel die Nacht Hes. theog. 211–232 auch hervorbringt (→ Apatē). Hes. theog. 307 und 514 heißen → Typhon und Menoitios hybristai. Im Zeitaltermythos wird der Untergang der Menschengeschlechter ihrer H. zugeschrieben (Hes. erg. 134–135, 145–146, 191–192; ferner 217–224, 238–239). Nach Solon, West IEG II fig. 6, 3–4 bringt Übersättigung (Koros) die H. hervor, in den Theognidea ist diese Aussage wiederholt (West IEG 153–154). In der zitierten Edition druckt West diese Wörter klein, faßt sie also nicht als Personifikationen auf. Entsprechendes dürfte dann für das Orakel des Bakis Hdt. 8, 77 gelten, in dem umgekehrt Koros als «Sohn» der H. bezeichnet wird. Das ist absichtlich dunkle Orakelpoesie, nicht klare Genealogie wie bei Hesiod, obwohl G. Strasburger an dieser Stelle in der Nachfolge früherer Gelehrter Personifikationen sieht. Es scheint vielmehr für die griechische Literatur wie für die Bildkunst charakteristisch zu sein, daß H. gestaltlos blieb, oder besser, daß sie durch hybristai dargestellt wurde. Diese bevölkerten die tragische Bühne des 5. und 4. Jh. v. Chr. Die Themen von Schuld und Sühne waren wahrscheinlich in der Zeit Solons und der Peisistratiden in ihren kanonischen Fassungen geprägt worden. Sie dienten als mythische Exempla. Neben den frühen «Empörern» (→ Gigantes, → Typhon, Menoitios, → Prometheus, → Aloaidai) standen die vier bekannten Frevler → Ixion, → Sisyphos, → Tityos und → Tantalos. Genannt seien daneben → Aktaion, Pandareos, → Salmoneus, → Arachne, → Niobe, → Eriphyle und → Aigisthos. Die Zahl dieser mythischen hybristai war groß. Ihre Schuld bestand in Vergehen gegen Götter oder in Gottlosigkeit, in Mord, Prahlerei, Lügen, Raub, Vergewaltigung, Inzest usw. Die Strafen waren vielfältig: ewiges Leiden in der Unterwelt, gewaltsamer Tod, Wahnsinn, Erblindung, Tierversandlung, Versteinigung. Die Götter treffen die Frevler mit ἀτμή (Verblendung) und senden ihnen die strafende δίκη, die wie Nemesis im Gegensatz zu Hybris steht.

BIBLIOGRAPHIE: Bertram, G., Theologisches Wörterbuch zum Neuen Testament VIII (1969) 295–305 s. vv. ὕβρις, ὕβριζω, ἐνὺβριζω, ὕβριστής; Del Grande, C., Hybris. Colpa e castigo nell'espressione poetica e letteraria degli scrittori della Grecia antica da Omero a Cleante (1947); Dirat, M., L'hybris dans la tragédie grecque (1973); Dodds, E. R., The Greeks and the Irrational (1951) 28–63; Fisher, N. R. E., Hybris, A Study of the Values of Honour and Shame in Ancient Greece (im Druck); Fraenkel, J. J., Hybris (1941); Genet, L., Recherches sur la pensée juridique et morale en Grèce (1917) 1–33; MacDowell, D. M., «Hybris in Athens», Greece and Rome 2, 23 (1976) 14–31; Nestle, W., «Legenden vom Tod der Gottesverächter», ArRelW 33, 1936, 246–269; Payne, R., A Study of Pride (1960) bes. 5–40; Rosenmeyer, Th. G., «Hubris and the Greeks», in Hubris, Man and Education (1959) 19–30; Saïd, S., La faute tragique (1978); Schefold, SB II 68–73, 272–273; Schefold, SB III 137–190, 331–333, 336; Simon, E., «Zur Bedeutung des Greifen in der Kunst der Kaiserzeit», Latomus 21, 1962, 770–780; Stojanović, L., «La notion de «Hybris» dans l'Iliade», Acta Antiquae Academiae Scientiarum Hungariae 16, 1968, 81–88; Strasburger, G., Lexikon zur frühgriech. Geschichte (1984) 186.

KATALOG

Wie bereits oben festgestellt wurde, ist es eine Besonderheit der griechischen Literatur und Bildkunst, H. nicht zu personifizieren, sondern sie szenisch darzustellen. Es ist hier nicht der Ort, die Untaten und Strafen der mythischen Frevler aufzuführen, da diese unter den jeweiligen Namen erscheinen; man vgl. auch zu → Dike oder → Nemesis. Die letztere wurde ohne Namensänderung in die römische Religion übernommen, während ihre Gegnerin lateinisch superbia hieß. «Nemesis, die gegen superbia Kult erhält» heißt es bei Macr. Sat. 1, 22, 1. Deren Bestrafung wird wiederum nicht durch Personifikationen, sondern in allegorischen Szenen geschildert: Greife, die Trabanten der Nemesis, fallen über superbi (d. h. hybristai) her (Simon 774–780). In einem Fall ist jedoch Hybris-Superbia tatsächlich gestalthaft dargestellt:

1.* Marmorrelief. Brindisi, Mus. Prov. – Schweitzer, B., «Dea Nemesis Regina», JdI 46, 1931, 183–194 Taf. 3; idem, Die spätantiken Grundlagen der mittelalterlichen Kunst. Leipziger Universitätsreden Heft 16, 1949 = Schweitzer, B., Zur Kunst der Antike. Ausgewählte Schriften II (1963) 295 Taf. 74; Will, E., Le relief cultuel gréco-romain (1955) 424–427 Abb. 73. – 1. Drittel 3. Jh. n. Chr. – «Nemesis, die Himmelskönigin, als die sie in Ägypten und Syrien verehrt wurde, erscheint siegreich auf der Hybris, dem personifizierten Bösen, stehend, umgeben von dem Kranz ihrer geflügelten himmlischen Heerscharen, während Siegesgöttinnen ihren Schleier tragen» (Schweitzer 295). H.-Superbia ist eine nackt am Boden liegende Frau, mit angezogenen Beinen und nach unten gewandtem Gesicht, über das beide Arme geführt sind. Nemesis setzt beide Füße auf den Rücken der Gegnerin in einer uralten Gebärde des Sieges, während H. verzweifelt ihr Haar rauf. Es handelt sich um ein Kultrelief, das in der späteren Antike in bestimmten Kulte, etwa in dem des → Mithras, das vollplastische Götterbild ablöst; vgl. auch Rapp, U., Das Mysterienbild (1952).

KOMMENTAR

Zum Bildtypus der Nemesis, die den Fuß auf einen hybristes bzw. einen besiegten Feind setzt, → Nemesis; Schweitzer, a. O. I, 187, 210–212, 214–216; Schwartz, J., Qasr-Qarun/Dionysias 1950. Fouilles Franco-Suisses, Rapports II (1969) 64; Baratte, F., RLouvre 1981 (3), 171–178; Lichocka, B., Klio 71 (1989) 1, 115–116. Die Gebärde der triumphierenden Gestalt, die auf einen bezwungenen Gegner tritt, wurde vom Alten Orient und Ägypten übernommen (cf. Schweitzer a. O. 216–217) und auf dieses Motiv übertragen.

Obwohl H. in der Vorstellungswelt der Griechen eine zentrale Stelle einnimmt, fehlen bildliche Darstellungen von ihr bis hin zur Spätzeit. Das dürfte kein Zufall unserer Überlieferung sein, sondern ein grundsätzliches Merkmal. Es ist, als ob man es für Hybris gehalten habe, H. zu personifizieren. Dagegen tritt sie vielfältig in den Darstellungen mythischer hybristai zutage, besonders eindringlich etwa im Verhalten der Giganten am großen Fries von Pergamon (→ Gigantes 24). Die einzige personifizierte H.-Superbia gehört in Stil und Komposition, auch als Kultrelief, bereits in die Nähe der frühchristlichen Kunst (1). Nemesis, die Siegerin über H., steht auf ihr wie Maria auf der Schlange.

Es sei daran erinnert, daß im Altertum sonst nur im Alten Testament ein der hybris/superbia gleichwertiger Begriff öfters vorkommt. Die Sünde ist als Überheblichkeit (gaon, evrah = hybris/superbia), Überhöhung und Stolz (gav'hut, rum) und als Auflehnung gegen Gott verstanden und wird streng bestraft. S. Bertram 299–305.

EHUD HERBERT LOEB

HYBRIS II

(ὕβρις) «Übermut», «Mutwilligkeit», Satyrname (→ Silenos, Silenoi) in einer Vaseninschrift. Gemeint ist hier H. in harmloser Form im Gegensatz zu H. als frevelhafte Überheblichkeit, vgl. → Hybris I.

1. (= Arethousa 4 mit Lit., = Herakles 2916* mit Lit. und Querverweisen) Pelike, att. rf. München, Antikenslg. 2360. Aus Vulci. – ARV² 1186, 30; 1685; Kadmosmaler; Add² 341; Fränkel, Namen 28. 68. 104 Nr. 7; v. Geisau, H., RESuppl. IX (1962) 1898 s. v. «Hybris 4c». – 420/400 v. Chr. – Oben fährt Herakles mit Athena im Wagen gen Himmel. Unten Scheiterhaufen mit Waffen. Während r. die beiden Quellnymphen → Arethousa und → Premnousia das Feuer zu löschen versuchen, wollen l. die Satyrn → Skopas (I) und H. (YBPIS) die Waffen stehlen. H. (betränzt) hat bereits die Lanze gepackt und eilt nach l. davon.

ANNELIESE KOSSATZ-DEISSMANN

HYDRA → Herakles 1990–2092

HYDRIS

(ὕδρις) Satyrname (→ Silenos, Silenoi) in einer Vaseninschrift. Von ὕδωρ (Wasser) abgeleitet oder Verschreibung von → Hybris?

1. (= Babakchos 1* mit Lit. und Beschreibung, = Hera 327 mit Lit., = Iris I III mit Querverweisen [B]) Schale, att. rf. London, BM E 65. Aus Capua. – ARV² 370, 13; Brygosmaler; Para 365; Add² 224; Fränkel, Namen 29. 90c; Simon, E., in Das Satyrspiel (Wege der Forschung) 1989) 367 Taf. 1. – 490 v. Chr. – A: Vier Satyrn wollen Hera angreifen, der zweite von r. (betränzt) ist H. (HYAPIE) benannt.

ANNELIESE KOSSATZ-DEISSMANN

HYELE

(Ἥელ, Ἑλη, Ἑλέα, Velia) Ninfa dell'omonima città lucana nell'Italia meridionale.

FONTI LETTERARIE: Ἥელ era la fonte vicina al sito scelto dai Focei per la fondazione di Velia (Strabon 6, 1, 1 p. 252, ivi anche Ἑλη; cf. Hdt. 1, 167). Il nome, mutato più tardi in Ἑλέα (Strabon l. c., Steph. Byz. s. v. Ἑλέα, Suda s. v. Ἑλέα), divenne in latino Velia (Plin. nat. 3, 71; Serv. Aen. 6, 359); l'incertezza nella grafia è giustificata con la preesistenza di un termine indigeno che i Greci avrebbero cercato di rendere nella loro lingua.

BIBLIOGRAFIA: Ebner, P., «Della Persephone sullo statero velino del suo incisore», RINum 51, 1949, 3–18; idem, «Le monete di Velia», PP 21, 1966, 346–349; Imhoof-Blumer, F., «Nymphen und Chariten», JArchNum 11, 1908, 18, 30–33 tav. 1, 30–33; Lacroix, L., «Fleuves et Nymphes éponymes sur les monnaies grecques», RBNun 99, 1953, 16; Mangieri, L., Velia e la sua monetazione (1986); Ronconi, L., «La ninfa Hyele», Atti Acc. Patavina 95, 1982/83, 65–72.

CATALOGO

Monete di Velia

1.* AR, didrammi, I 490/80–460 a. C., II 440–420 a. C. – SNG Copenhagen 1523–1528; SNG Oxford 1085–1093, 1095–1098; Mangieri tavv. 1–2, 4, 13–26, 54–55. – D.: Leone a d. R.: Testa di H. con capelli acconciati in krobylos, YEAH o YEHTΩN. Oppure D.: H. come sopra. R.: Leone a d., in alto civetta.

2.* AR, dracme e frazioni, I 490/480–440 a. C., II 440–400 a. C. – SNG Copenhagen 1530–1534; SNG Oxford 1099–1107; Mangieri tavv. 2–3, 6, 30–50, 52–53, 83–97. – D.: Testa di H. a s. o a d. con i capelli acconciati variamente. R.: Civetta su ramo di ulivo, YEAH.

3.* AR, didrammi, 415–410 a. C. – SNG Oxford 1094; Mangieri tav. 4, 56–57. – D.: Leone a d. R.: Testa di H. a d., dinanzi tralcio di vite con grappolo e pampino, Φ, YEAH.

4.* AR, didrammi, 420–400 a. C. – Mangieri tav. 4, 58. – D.: Testa di H. coronata di canne a d., YEAHTH. R.: Leone a d. Etnico.

COMMENTO

La ninfa H., priva sulla monetazione di alcun attributo personale, è costantemente abbinata ai tipi del leone e della civetta su ramo di ulivo, le stesse immagini che si accoppiano ad Atena quando, negli ultimi decenni del V sec. a. C., fa la sua comparsa sulle monete veline, coesistendo inizialmente con H. e poi sostituendosi del tutto. Poiché l'iconografia di Atena, in età arcaica ma anche con sopravvivenze successive, è priva dell'attributo delle armi e di altri simboli che la caratterizzeranno in seguito (→ Athena pp. 958-959), i Focci potrebbero aver assimilato la dea locale ad Atena. H. avrebbe avuto pertanto natura guerriera, sottolineata dal simbolo del leone, col ruolo di protettrice della città di cui è eponima. Il conio 4 con H. coronata di canne, in cui il nome YEAHTH è stato inteso come aggettivo di un sottinteso ἡγήνη (Strabon I. c.), ne evidenzerebbe il legame con le acque, l'aspetto ctonio, e il potere sulla fecondità e la fertilità della terra, esaltato dalla costante presenza sulle monete del simbolo dell'ulivo. Tale carattere di Grande Dea risulta anche dalla moneta 3 con H. accompagnata dal ramo di vite con grappolo, simbolo che dai paleo-orientali era consacrato alle Dee Madri, ed identificato con l'albero di vita.

MARIA CACCAMO CALTABIANO

HYGIEIA

(Ῥγία, Ῥγία, Ῥγία sur I, ion. Ῥγία, hellénistique et tardif Ῥγία, Ῥγία; lat. Hygia; → Valetudo plutôt que → Salus, cf. Thraemer 2786) Déesse de la santé, généralement considérée comme l'une des filles d'→ Asklépios. Personnification d'un concept, H. est de toute façon une création relativement tardive de la religion grecque, et ne joue aucun rôle dans la mythologie. Le seul cadre où elle prenne une véritable existence est celui de la famille d'Asklépios: supplantant très vite non seulement → Epione, l'inconsistante épouse du dieu, mais même ses autres filles, les «guérisseuses» Iasô, Akésô et Panakeia, auxquelles s'adjoignent parfois Aiglê (→ Asklepiadai, → Machaon), elle devient dès la fin du V^e s. av. J.-C. sa compagne principale et paraît associée à son culte dans tous les sanctuaires connus. A la différence de ses «sœurs», simples allégories exprimant la fonction médicale d'Asklépios, H. incarne la Santé elle-même, c'est-à-dire l'équilibre physique et le bien qu'il procure, ce qui explique qu'elle soit apparue très tôt comme sa fille par excellence, voire comme son épouse (cf. Tambornino 95). Mais cette prééminence qui lui semble donnée a priori parmi les divinités féminines du groupe a conduit depuis longtemps à s'interroger sur ses origines, qui sont loin d'être claires. Car si H., à partir du IV^e s., fait figure de parèdre sans véritable individualité, il est possible qu'elle ait été d'abord une divinité autonome avant d'être annexée au culte d'Asklépios, lorsque celui-ci connut vers la fin du V^e s. un développement considérable.

SOURCES LITTÉRAIRES ET ÉPIGRAPHIQUES: H. n'ayant aucune existence mythologique, les textes qui la mentionnent intéressent essentiellement l'histoire religieuse et l'histoire de l'art, notamment de la sculpture.

Deux séries de documents permettent, sinon de résoudre, du moins de poser le problème de ses origines: l'une concerne sa présence dans les sanctuaires du Péloponnèse, l'autre l'existence en Attique d'un culte d'Athéna Hygieia.

Parmi les offrandes de Mikythos à Olympie se trouvait, à côté d'un Asklépios, la plus ancienne statue connue d'H., œuvre de Dionysios d'Argos (226), dont l'activité se situe dans le 2^e quart du V^e s. Et à Titanè se dressait encore du temps de Pausanias, toujours à côté de celle d'Asklépios, une statue d'H. (227), sans doute acrolithe, à laquelle les femmes rendaient un culte d'allure très archaïque. On a voulu rapprocher ce fait de l'origine sicyonienne du poète Ariphron, auteur d'un hymne célèbre durant toute l'Antiquité (Thraemer 2777; Tambornino 94) où il appelle H. «la plus ancienne et la plus vénérable des déesses». Mais l'hymne d'Ariphron a été composé à Athènes, et n'est sans doute pas antérieur à la fin du V^e s. ou au début du IV^e (Crusius, O., RE II 1, 846 s. v. «Ariphron»). Aussi le témoignage de Likymnos de Chios (Thraemer 2783; Hausmann 30), qui l'associe non pas à Asklépios, mais à Apollon, est-il en fin de compte plus décisif quant à l'autonomie originelle d'H.

En Attique la situation est à la fois plus nette et plus ambiguë. La consécration sur l'Acropole d'une statue en bronze d'Athéna Hygieia, œuvre de Pyrrhos, dont on a retrouvé la base inscrite (Overbeck, SQ n° 906), même si elle n'est pas due, comme le rapporte Plutarque (Per. 13), à Périclès lui-même, peut être datée du début de la Guerre du Péloponnèse (AM 16, 1891, 153-165). Elle doit être en tout cas antérieure à 420, date de l'introduction officielle du culte d'Asklépios à Athènes (cf. Holtzmann 864). Plutarque précise d'ailleurs que l'autel près duquel avait été dressée la statue était plus ancien que celle-ci, et deux dédicaces des potiers Euphronios (Jdl 2, 1887, 144) et Kallis (AM 16, 1891, 154) paraissent attester la présence d'une Athéna Hygieia sur l'Acropole dès la fin du VI^e s. av. J.-C. Il reste qu'il ne s'agit pas d'H., mais d'Athéna Hygieia, et qu'il est permis de n'y voir qu'une épiclese parmi d'autres (comme Athéna Niké p. ex.): le texte de Pausanias (1, 23, 4), qui prend soin de distinguer la statue d'H., «que l'on dit fille d'Asklépios» (228), de celle d'Athéna, «qui porte aussi le surnom d'Hygieia», reflète clairement l'embarras où se trouvaient déjà les Anciens devant la coexistence des deux divinités.

Il faut bien dire que cette perplexité est toujours la nôtre, car aucune des explications proposées jusqu'ici n'est pleinement satisfaisante. Si l'on veut, avec Thraemer 2777, situer dans le Péloponnèse l'origine d'H., on admet du même coup sa dépendance étroite par rapport à Asklépios, qu'elle accompagne tout naturellement lors de son installation à Athènes (Beschi, L., ASAtene 45-46, 1967-68 [1969] 381-436). Mais il est difficile de comprendre comment cette divinité secondaire (notamment à Épidaure, où elle n'aura pas de temple avant l'époque impériale), parvient si rapidement à supplanter Athéna dans une fonction qui lui était depuis longtemps dévolue, au point qu'elle possédait à ce titre sur l'Acropole un sanctuaire spécial. On pourra donc être tenté par l'hypothèse, que retenait Tambornino 94, d'une origine attique: la déesse Hygie se serait alors progressivement dégagée de l'Athéna Hygieia primitive. Mais que faire dans ces conditions de l'H. de Titanè et de la statue de Dionysios d'Argos, certainement antérieure à 460? Le problème ne comporte pas actuellement de solution sûre. Mais l'idée de diviniser la Santé n'est pas si originale (la Salus des Romains existait bien avant d'être plus ou moins assimilée à H.) qu'il faille y voir nécessairement l'invention exclusive de telle ou telle région. Force est bien d'admettre de toute façon que la divinité dont les Athéniens, vers 430, commandèrent l'effigie à Pyrrhos, n'était pas celle qu'avait représentée à Olympie, quelque trente ans plus tôt, Dionysios d'Argos. En la matière seule la documentation iconographique pourrait nous aider, mais on verra qu'elle fait ici cruellement défaut.

Quoi qu'il en soit, c'est seulement à partir du dernier quart du V^e s., après l'installation d'Asklépios à Athènes, que le culte d'H. connaît, en Attique et ailleurs, un véritable développement. Mais sauf exception - H. est p. ex. associée à Amphiaraios dans son sanctuaire d'Oropos (Tambornino 96) et apparaît à Thespies (236) aux côtés de Dionysos et de Tychè - ce développement suit pour l'essentiel celui du culte d'Asklépios (cf. Holtzmann 864-865).

Outre les textes mentionnés plus haut, divers témoignages littéraires ou épigraphiques attestent la création de groupes statuaire réunissant Asklépios et H. En l'absence de description précise, le type ne saurait toutefois en être déterminé, dans les cas les plus favorables, que de manière hypothétique. Ils seront donc regroupés sous une rubrique spéciale en fin de catalogue (226-237). Aucune mention n'est faite, à propos de ces groupes statuaire, des autres Asklépiades (→ Machaon), et la peinture de Nikophanès de Sicyone (238) où, selon Pline, H. était associée aux trois «guérisseuses» Aiglê, Iasô et Panakeia, ferait figure d'exception si son témoignage n'était, comme on verra, recoupé par un certain nombre de reliefs.

CARACTÈRES GÉNÉRAUX DE L'ICONOGRAPHIE D'HYGIE: Sans qu'on puisse savoir exactement à partir de quelle date la «famille» s'est constituée en tant que telle (cf. Blinkenberg, Ch., AM 24, 1899, 294-309), il est clair qu'H. y occupe très vite une situation privilégiée: le relief de Télémachos (4), dès la fondation de l'Asklépieion d'Athènes, la représente seule aux côtés du dieu. Mais elle y est assise, comme sur trois vases, légèrement plus récents, du P. de Meidias (1-3), où elle est exceptionnellement accompagnée d'autres divinités. Qu'il y ait là ou non les traces d'une autonomie ancienne, celle-ci disparaît en tout cas complètement à partir du IV^e s. H. ne semble pas avoir jamais eu de temple lui appartenant en propre (contrairement à ce qui est indiqué EAA IV 97, pour Épidaure - cf. Paus. 2, 27, 6 - et Pergame), et l'on peut douter, même lorsqu'elles nous sont parvenues isolées, que les statues d'H. aient été conçues comme telles. Dès la 1^{re} moitié du IV^e s. se constitue en effet l'image d'une divinité virginale, qui n'a d'autre fonction que d'assister son père avec un respect mêlé de familiarité: le plus souvent Asklépios est assis, H. se tenant debout à côté de lui, éventuellement accompagnée d'autres membres de la famille. Et même quand elle n'y est pas seule avec Asklépios, H. occupe dans ces groupes, beaucoup plus souvent que sa «mère» Épionè, la place d'honneur.

Malgré la diffusion de son culte dans la totalité du monde antique (Thraemer 2784-2787) et la multiplication de ses images, l'iconographie d'H., privée de tout support mythologique, reste très pauvre: le plus souvent debout, elle est généralement associée au serpent, à qui elle donne à boire dans une phiale, et les seules variations possibles concernent la position de ces attributs et la structure du drapé. Aussi, après avoir donné lieu à quelques créations majeures de la sculpture du Second Classicisme, dont la documentation existante ne permet que rarement de préciser les traits, l'image d'H. se fait-elle de plus en plus banale et impersonnelle. Et ce processus s'accroît à l'époque romaine, aggravé encore par l'assimilation quelque peu hésitante (cf. Thraemer 2786) avec Salus ou Valetudo, qui coexistent d'ailleurs avec une Hygia, au nom directement transcrit du grec. Mais cela n'empêche pas H. de rester jusqu'à la fin de l'Antiquité l'une des figures divines les plus représentées.

BIBLIOGRAPHIE: Arias, P. E., Skopas (1952) 122-125; Ashmole, B., BSR 10, 1927, 1-11 pl. 1-5: type Hope; Becatti, G., ArchCl 25-26, 1973-74, 26-42 pl. 12-13: types statuaire; Curtius, L., Jdl 19, 1904, 55-85: type Hope; Delivourias, A./Linfert, A., «La statue d'Hygie dans le temple d'Aléa à Tégée», BCH 107, 1983, 277-288: H. de Tégée; Hamdorf, Kultpersonifikationen 47-48, 105-107; Hausmann, U., Kunst und Heilum (1948) 28-34, 166-168, 175-178: reliefs (= Hausmann); idem, AM 69-70, 1954-55, 144-146, Beil. 50-53: types statuaire (= Hausmann 2); Heiderich, G., Asklepios (1966) 27-28, 58-62, 96-98: types statuaire; Holtzmann, B., LIMC II 1, 863-897 s. v. «Asklepios»; Kabus-Jahn, R., Studien zu Frauenfiguren des vierten Jh. v. Chr. (1963) 45-46, 85-87: types Broadlands et Hope; Koepp, F., AM 10, 1885, 256-266, pl. 8-9: H. attique; Körte, A., AM 18, 1893, 249-250: sanctuaire de l'Acropole; Marcadé, J., BCH 110, 1986, 323-324: H. de Tégée; Meyer, M., AM 102, 1987, 213-224: relief de Copenhague; Μητροπούλου, E., Η τυπολογία της θεάς Ῥγίας με φίδι (1984) (= Mitropoulou) (cf. Lambrinoudakis, V., Archatognosia 4, 1985-86, 189-196); Paribeni, E., EAA IV (1961) 97-99 fig. 126-128 s. v. «Igea»; Stewart, A. F., Skopas of Paros (1977) 83-84: H. de Tégée; Tambornino, J., RE IX 1 (1914) 93-97 s. v. «Hygieia»; Thraemer, E., ML I 2 (1886-90) 2772-2792 s. v. «Hygieia»; Waywell, G. B., The Lever and Hope Sculptures (1986) 68-69.

Ouvrage paru après la mise à l'impression du présent article: Sobel, H., Hygieia. Die Göttin der Gesundheit (1990).

CATALOGUE

Bien que l'iconographie d'H. soit évidemment liée dans son développement à celle d'Asklépios, et en dé-pit des associations nombreuses offertes surtout par les reliefs, mais aussi par la ronde-bosse et les monnaies, on verra que la reconstitution des groupes originaux est le plus souvent problématique, et qu'il faut bien se résoudre à considérer isolément des images qui n'avaient pas été conçues pour cela. Privées de tout contexte mythologique, celles-ci ne présentent que des variations purement formelles: la posture – assise ou debout – de la déesse, la présence ou l'absence de son attribut principal – le serpent –, et dans le premier cas l'attitude de celui-ci, ainsi que la nature et la disposition du vêtement sont dès lors les seuls critères sur lesquels puisse se fonder un classement des représentations. La documentation consistant dans son immense majorité en copies ou en adaptations romaines de types créés pour l'essentiel aux IV^e et III^e s. av. J.-C., une présentation chronologique eût été à la fois incertaine et peu éclairante. Notre classement sera donc surtout fondé sur des critères formels, la situation historique des types ainsi définis et leurs liens éventuels avec tel ou tel type d'Asclépios devant être discutés dans le Commentaire. Étant donné la nette prédominance de la statuaire, les documents, pour chaque type, seront présentés dans l'ordre suivant: ronde-bosse, reliefs, lampes, monnaies, intailles, peintures.

PLAN DU CATALOGUE

A. Hygie assise	I-19
1. Avec diverses divinités	I-3
2. En compagnie d'Asclépios	4-7
3. Seule avec le serpent	8-19
B. Hygie inclinée	20
C. Hygie debout	21-215
1. En position d'appui	21-39
a) Sur l'épaule d'Asclépios ou le dossier de son siège	21-27
b) Contre une stèle, un pilier ou un arbre	28-34
c) Sur un support latéral	35-39
2. En position équilibrée	40-215
a) Jambe gauche d'appui	40-123
Représentations atypiques	40-57
– certaines	40-52
– incertaines	53-57
Type Tégée	58-60
Type Aegion	61-62
Type Broadlands	63-108
Type Timgad	109-111
Type Torlonia	112-113
Type Florence	114-115
Type Héraklion	116-123
b) Jambe droite d'appui	124-215
Représentations atypiques	124-143
– certaines	124-136
– incertaines	137-143
Type Melchett	144-149
Type Mégare	150-159
Type Hope	160-187
Type Sparte	188-190
Type Belvédère	191-194
Type Munich	195-206

Type Pitti	207-208
Type Chiaramonti	209-212
Type Nicosie	213-215
D. Têtes isolées	216-225
– certaines	216-220
– incertaines	221-225
E. Représentations perdues, connues seulement par les textes	226-238

A. Hygie assise

1. Avec diverses divinités

Céramique attique à f.r.

1.* (= Herakles 2717* avec bibl. et renvois, = Hesperides 26) Hydrie. Londres, BM E 224. – ARV² 1313, 5: P. de Meidias; Para 477; *Add*² 361; Burn, L., The Meidias Painter (1987) 36-37. 97, M 5 pl. 2b-3. – Vers 410 av. J.-C. – Au reg. inf., Héraclès au Jardin des Hespérides: à g., formant le pendant du héros, une femme assise sur un rocher, vêtue d'un fin chiton, portant couronne et sceptre dans la main g., détourne la tête pour regarder la scène. Au-dessus du personnage, inscr. peinte: ΥΓΙΕΑ (sic).

2.* (= Adonis 10, = Aphrodite 1266, = Eudaimonia I – avec bibl.) Hydrie. Florence, Mus. Arch. 81948. – ARV² 1312, 1: P. de Meidias; Para 477; *Add*² 361; CVA 2, pl. 63, 1; Arias/Hirmer pl. 217; Burn, o. c. 1, 97, M 1 pl. 23b. – Vers 410 av. J.-C. – Aphrodite et Adonis entourés d'autres divinités: en haut à dr. H. tenant sur ses genoux → Paidia (inscr.).

3. (= Chrysogeneia 1, = Eudaimonia I 2 – avec bibl.) Florence, Mus. Arch. 81947. ARV² 1312, 2: P. de Meidias; Para 477; *Add*² 361; CVA 2, pl. 65, 1; Burn, o. c. 1, 97 M 2 pl. 29b. – Vers 410 av. J.-C. – → Phaon et Démonassa entourés d'autres personnages: en haut à dr., assises dos à dos, H. et Eudaimonia (inscr.).

2. En compagnie d'Asclépios

Reliefs

4. (= Asklepios 394*) Stèle commémorative de Télémachos. Fr. dispersés. – Beschi, L., ASAtene 45-46, 1967-68 (1969) 381-436. – Début du IV^e s. av. J.-C. – H. est assise vers la g., mais tournée vers Asclépios, debout à dr., qui la regarde. Sous son siège, un chien couché. On ne distingue pas de serpent.

5. (= Asklepios 98*) Relief complet. Istanbul, Mus. Arch. 109. – Inédit. – IV^e s. av. J.-C. (?) – Asclépios et H. assis côte à côte, la tête inclinée, vus de trois quarts; H., au second plan, coiffée du cécryphale, tient des deux mains une phiale où vient boire le serpent enroulé autour d'une sorte de candélabre (?).

6. (= Asklepios 259, = Amphiaros 64*, = Hestia 18 – avec bibl.) Fr. de relief votif. Oropos, Mus. De l'Amphiareion. – 1^{re} moitié du IV^e s. av. J.-C. – A dr. H. (?) assise sur un rocher; devant elle, lui tournant le dos, Amphiaros-Asclépios debout.

Céramique

7.* (= Asklepios 41* [B] avec bibl.) Cratère bœtien à f.r. Athènes, Mus. Nat. 1393. – Lullies, R., AM 65, 1940, 21-22 pl. 26, 1-2. – Vers 400 av. J.-C. – A: H. assise à dr. Devant elle, une femme apportant des offrandes. B: Asclépios, couché sur un lit, donne à boire au serpent dans un canthare.

3. Seule avec le serpent

Ronde-bosse

8.* Statue fr. New York, MMA 03.12.11A (anc. coll. Giustiniani). – Richter, MetMusSculpt n° 202 pl. 143 c-d.; Mitropoulou n° 233. – Conservée du bassin à la plinthe; pieds brisés. – Copie romaine d'un original hellénistique. – H., assise sur un rocher, tient un énorme serpent sur ses genoux.

9.* Statuette, Leningrad, Ermitage A 68. – Waldhauer, Skulpt III n° 275 pl. 29; Mitropoulou n° 225. – Fin du I^{er} s. ap. J.-C., d'après un original hellénistique. – H., assise sur un rocher, vêtue du chiton et de l'himation, tient de la main dr. le corps du serpent qui se love sur ses genoux, et lui donne à boire dans une phiale tenue de la main g.

10.* Statuette. Venise, Mus. Arch. – Reinach, RépStat I 292 pl. 554 (1166); Waldhauer, Skulpt III 35 n. 2; Mitropoulou n° 234. – Ép. impériale. – H., assise sur un rocher, nourrit son serpent.

11. Statuette en br. Rome (?). – Thraemer 2791; Reinach, RépStat II 1 pl. 300, 8; Mitropoulou n° 227. – Ép. impériale (?). – H. couronnée, assise sur une sorte de tabouret, nourrit son serpent.

Relief

12. Fr. de relief. Paris, Louvre. – Mitropoulou n° 236 pl. 33. – Fin du IV^e s. av. J.-C. – H. assise à g.; sur ses genoux s'enroule le serpent.

Lampe

13. Londres, BM. Walters, BMLamps 1086. – II^e s. ap. J.-C. – H. (?) assise à g., le visage tourné vers la dr., tient une phiale de la main g. Contre son épaule g. apparaît la queue du serpent.

Monnaies

14. AR, Priansos (Crète), IV^e s. av. J.-C. – BMC Crete 73 pl. 18, 6; Thraemer 2791; Mitropoulou n° 240. – Av. H. (?) trônant caresse le serpent de la main dr.; à sa g. un palmier. Rv. → Poseidon.

15. AE, Béroia (Macédoine), ém. pseudonomes, III^e s. ap. J.-C. – Gaebler, Makedonia I 22. 189; 2, 47 pl. 11, 25. – Rv. H., assise sur un trône à dossier où elle s'appuie du bras g., tient de la main dr. une phiale qu'elle présente au serpent dressé devant elle. Av. Tête d'Alexandre.

16.* AE, Hiérapolis (Phrygie), ém. pseudonomes des II^e-III^e s. ap. J.-C. – BMC Phrygia 236, 57 pl. 30, 6; SNG v. Aulock 3626. 3627-3629. – Rv. H. drapée, coiffée du calathos, assise sur un trône vers la g., tend une phiale de la main dr. au serpent qui est devant elle. Derrière elle → Télésphoros. Av. Tête d'→ Apollon Lairbenos.

17.* AE, Hiérapolis (Phrygie), Otacilia (244-249). – BMC Phrygia 254, 153 pl. 32, 4; Mitropoulou n° 245 pl. 33. – Rv. H. trônant, assise vers la g., appuyée sur le coude g., nourrit le serpent de la main dr. Derrière elle Télésphoros.

18.* AE, Pergame (Mysie), Élagabal (218-222). – BMC Mysia n° 331 pl. 32, 4. – Rv. H.-Tychè (couronne tourelée) trônant de profil à g., la main g. levée en arrière, tenant un sceptre, la dr. abaissée vers le serpent à qui elle tend la phiale.

19.* AE, Corinthe, Plautilla (202-205). – Papatzis, Paus. Korinthiaka 72 fig. 4; Mitropoulou n° 239 pl. 33; cf. BMC Corinth 89, 674 pl. 22, 11. – Rv. H.-Tychè trônant de profil à g.; devant elle le serpent, dans son bras g. la corne d'abondance.

B. Hygie inclinée

Ronde-bosse

20.* Petite statue fr. Athènes, Mus. Nat. 299. D'Épidaure. – Schlörb, B., Timotheos (1965) 37-39 fig. 37-40; Carouzu, S., Mus. Arch. Nat. Collection des sculptures (1968) 101 pl. 38; Mitropoulou n° 210. – Vers 370 av. J.-C. – Courbée en avant, les deux genoux fléchis, la déesse, vêtue d'un chiton transparent, qui laisse à découvert le sein et le flanc g., et d'un ample himation retombant sur la cuisse g., pose le pied g. sur un rocher, auprès duquel rampe le serpent. Manquant la tête et les deux bras.

C. Hygie debout

1. En position d'appui

a) Sur l'épaule d'Asclépios ou le dossier de son siège

Ronde-bosse

21. (= Asklepios 38*) Groupe de petit format. Copenhague, Glypt. 535. – Poulsen, CatNyCarlsberg-Glypt 88 n° 92 pl. 7; Arias 124 pl. 9 fig. 33; Mitropoulou n° 222. – Ép. impériale. – Asclépios juvénile, imberbe, est assis sur un rocher. A sa dr. H. debout, les jambes croisées, en position fortement hanchée, s'appuie contre son épaule. Le bras dr. manque.

22.* (= Asklepios 39) Groupe de petit format. Vatican, Mus. 571. – Amelung, SkulptVatMus II 602-605 n° 399 pl. 51; Helbig⁴ I n° 137; Mitropoulou n° 223. – Ép. impériale. – Même type que le précédent (la tête barbe d'Asclépios est un complément moderne).

Reliefs

23. (= Asklepios 71*) Relief entier. Athènes, Mus. Nat. 1339. – Svoronos 258 pl. 38; Hausmann 177 n° 140. – Vers 350 av. J.-C. – Derrière Asclépios assis H., jambes croisées, se penche vers lui et s'appuie sur le dossier du siège, à proximité de son épaule dr.

24.* (= Asklepios 69) Relief entier. Berlin-DDR, Staatl. Mus. SK 685. – Hausmann 177 n° 139 pl. 11; Blümel, KlassSkulptBerlin 84 n° 100 fig. 125. – Vers 325 av. J.-C. - Derrière Asclépios assis, appuyée au dossier, H., la jambe g. croisée devant la jambe dr. d'appui, main dr. sur la hanche, regarde le groupe d'adorants qui s'avance.

25. (= Asklepios 72*) Relief fr. Vatican 739. - Amelung, SkulptVatMus II 436 n° 260 pl. 53; Hausmann 177 n° 138. - 2^e moitié du IV^e s. av. J.-C. - Même type que le précédent, mais le mouvement d'H. est plus retenu.

26. Fr. de relief. Athènes, Mus. Nat. 2437. De l'Acropole. - Svoronos 642 pl. 152. - IV^e-III^e s. av. J.-C. - H., en péplos, s'appuie contre le dos d'Asclépios assis; le siège est une base quadrangulaire sur le côté de laquelle monte le serpent.

27. (= Asklepios 70*) Relief fr. Athènes, Mus. Nat. 1344. - Svoronos 263 pl. 39; Hausmann 177 n° 137. - 2^e moitié du IV^e s. av. J.-C. - Derrière Asclépios assis, vu de trois quarts, subsiste la moitié supérieure de la figure d'H., représentée de face, appuyée du coude g. sur le dossier.

b) Contre une stèle, un pilier ou un arbre Reliefs

28.* Fr. de relief votif. Athènes, Mus. Nat. 1383. - Svoronos pl. 38, 4; Hausmann n° 74. - 1^{re} moitié du IV^e s. av. J.-C. - H. appuyée du bras g. au pilastre du naïskos croise les jambes et tourne la tête vers la partie g. du relief; au milieu, pilier porte-relief et autel. Au bord de la cassure, jambe de cheval.

29.* (= Asklepios 76) Relief votif. Athènes, Mus. Nat. 2557. - Svoronos pl. 172; Hausmann n° 143; Mitropoulou n° 213 pl. 29. - 1^{re} moitié du IV^e s. av. J.-C. - H., jambes croisées, appuyée contre un pilier porte-relief au pied duquel s'enroule le serpent, en présence d'Asclépios assis à g. (seuls subsistent les pieds).

30. Fr. de relief votif. Athènes, Mus. Nat. 2508. - Svoronos pl. 154; Hausmann n° 75; Mitropoulou n° 214. - Fin du IV^e s. av. J.-C. - Même type que le précédent: seules subsistent les jambes d'H., avec le bas du pilier et le serpent.

31. (= Asklepios 63*) Partie g. d'un relief votif. Athènes, Mus. Nat. 1330. - Svoronos 245 pl. 35; Hausmann 178 n° 144 fig. 9. - Vers 350 av. J.-C. - Au premier plan à g. Asclépios trônant, vu de profil; au second plan H. de face, dans une position très hanchée, s'appuie du bras dr. à une haute stèle couronnée d'un disque, la main g. sur la hanche.

32. (= Asklepios 64*) Relief complet. Paris, Louvre MA 755. - Hausmann 178 n° 146. - Après 350 av. J.-C. - Même type que le précédent.

33. (= Asklepios 66*) Relief fr. Athènes, Mus. Nat. 1333. - Svoronos 252 pl. 36; Hausmann 177 fig. 6. - Après 350 av. J.-C. - Variante du type de 25 et 26: l'attitude d'H. est inversée, et le pilier remplacé par un tronc d'arbre.

34. (= Asklepios 96*) Partie dr. d'un relief. Athènes, Mus. Nat. 1335. - Svoronos 254-256 pl. 36; Hausmann 178 n° 145. - Après 350 av. J.-C. - Autre variante du même type: en arrière d'Asclépios assis au premier plan, H., le bras dr. tendu, s'appuie contre un arbre autour duquel s'enroule le serpent.

c) Sur un support latéral Reliefs

35. (= Asklepios 360*) Fr. de relief votif. Vérone, Mus. Arch. Provient presque sûrement de l'Asclépieion d'Athènes. - Hausmann 191 n° 270. - IV^e s. av. J.-C. - Derrière Asclépios debout, H., vêtue du chiton ceinturé et de l'himation, hanchée vers la g., s'appuie du bras dr. tendu sur un pilier bas, tandis qu'elle porte la main g. à son épaule.

36. (= Asklepios 73*) Relief entier. Rome, Mus. Cap. 617. - Stuart Jones, SculptMusCap 267 n° 113 pl. 63; Hausmann 177 n° 141; Helbig¹ II n° 1374. - Dernier quart du IV^e s. av. J.-C. - A côté d'Asclépios assis à g. de trois quarts, H., vêtue du chiton et de l'himation, le coude dr. appuyé sur un pilier, jambes croisées (la g. d'appui), main g. sur la hanche.

37. Relief fr. Athènes, Mus. Nat. 1365. De l'Asclépieion. - Svoronos 284-285 pl. 50; Hausmann 171 n° 73. - IV^e s. av. J.-C. - H. (?) de profil, accoudée du bras g. à un pilier, fait face à trois dieux assis, dont les deux premiers seraient Poséidon et Asclépios.

38.* Panneau d'ivoire, deuxième volet du «Diptyque Gaddi» (→ Asklepios 388*). Liverpool, Merseyside County Mus. M 10.044. - Graeven, H., RM 28, 1913, 237-243, pl. 4; Becatti 18-42 pl. 12. - Vers 400 ap. J.-C. - H., en appui sur la jambe dr., s'accoude à g. au trépied delphique; le serpent monte le long du trépied, passe sur le bras g. et derrière les épaules, réapparaissant à dr. où la déesse de sa main levée lui présente un œuf (?).

Monnaie

39.* AR deniers, Mn. Acilius, Rome, 49 av. J.-C. - Crawford, RRC n° 442/1a pl. 52; cf. Mitropoulou n° 193 pl. 26. - Av. Tête de Salus couronnée de laurier; lég. SALVS. RV. H. - Valetudo, accoudée à un pilier, en position fortement hanchée, tient de la main dr. la tête du serpent qui est passé derrière son dos; lég. VALETUDO.

2. En position équilibrée

La grande majorité de la documentation est ici fournie par la ronde-bosse: en règle générale H. porte le serpent, à qui elle présente la phiale. Parmi les reliefs, c'est essentiellement sur les monnaies, les intailles et les lampes que l'on peut espérer trouver le relief approximatif de certaines créations de la statuaire.

a) Jambe gauche d'appui

REPRÉSENTATIONS ATYPIQUES: On classera d'abord sous cette rubrique les types de représentation qui ne sont en l'état actuel des choses attestés que par un seul document.

- certaines:

Ronde-bosse d'époque impériale

40.* Statue. Kassel, Staatl. Kunstslg. D'Ostie. - BrBr 492; Bieber, SkulptKassel 29-31 n° 48 pl. 30;

Bieber, Copies 49 fig. 173-175; Mitropoulou n° 1 pl. 3. - H. est vêtue d'un chiton transparent et d'un himation qui enveloppe le dos à partir de l'épaule g., dégagée par le chiton, et forme sur le bas-ventre un rabat triangulaire dont le bourrelet supérieur est retenu par l'avant-bras g. tendu en avant. Autour de l'avant-bras dr. s'enroule le serpent, qui devait se diriger vers la phiale tenue dans la main g.

41. Statue acéphale. Tazoult, Mus. S.2. Du temple d'Esculape à Lambèse. - Cagnat, R., Musée de Lambèse (1895) 27. 43 pl. 2, 2; Reinach, RépStat II 1, 300, 3; Mitropoulou n° 2 pl. 3. - Pourrait être considérée comme une variante du type précédent mais l'attitude est plus hanchée, l'épaule g. complètement dénudée et le drapé beaucoup plus animé. Le chiton, plus épais, est ceinturé juste au-dessous des seins.

42.* Petite statue. Londres, BM 1388. Du temple d'Apollon à Cyrène. - Huskinson, J., Roman Sculpture from Cyrenaica in the British Museum (1975) n° 44 pl. 19. - H. est vêtue du péplos et d'un himation qui forme bourrelet sur la poitrine, de l'épaule dr. au coude g. Les deux bras son fléchis, mains tendues en avant; le serpent s'enroule autour de l'avant-bras dr., la main g. brisée devait tenir la phiale. La tête, rapportée, paraît être d'origine; elle porte un haut diadème orné de rosettes.

43. Statue. Beyrouth, Mus. Nat. Du Nymphée de Byblos. - Lauffray, J., BullMusBeyrouth 4, 1940, 27 pl. 4; Kabus-Jahn 73 n. 61. - Ép. antonine. - Adaptation en H., par adjonction du serpent, qui entoure les épaules et descendait le long du bras dr., sans doute en direction de la phiale, d'un type célèbre où l'on a proposé de reconnaître la Sapphô de Silanion: cf. en dernier lieu Vierendeel-Schlörb, KatSkulptMünchen II 413-421.

44.* Statuette entière. Athènes, Mus. Nat. 271. D'Épidaure. - ArchEph 1886, 249, pl. 11 à g.; Mitropoulou n° 181 pl. 24. - Sur la base, inscr. TH YTEIA ΓΑΙΟΣ ΙΑΤΡΑ. H., vêtue d'un ample chiton à apotygmata, lève les deux bras comme dans un mouvement de danse, tandis que le serpent s'enroule en spirale autour de son corps.

45.* (= Asklepios 149) Groupe complet de petit format. Rome, Pal. Barberini. - Furtwängler, A., Meisterwerke der griech. Plastik (1893) 397 fig. 60; Amelung, W., Führer durch die Antiken in Florenz (1897) 68-71 fig. 19; Mitropoulou n° 219 pl. 30. - Ép. antonine. - H., étroitement enveloppée dans l'himation, tient contre sa jambe g. un bâton autour duquel s'enroule son serpent; sans s'appuyer sur lui, elle pose familièrement la main dr. sur l'épaule g. d'Asclépios, debout à ses côtés.

46.* Statue. Vatican, Mus. Chiaramonti. - Amelung, SkulptVatMus 775-777 n° 683 pl. 83; Helbig¹ I n° 333. - Ép. impériale, d'après un original du début du III^e s. av. J.-C. - Figure féminine vêtue d'un péplos sans ceinture; sur son épaule dr. se pose la main d'un personnage, sans doute masculin, qui se tenait à sa g.; dans cette main, restes d'un serpent. Interprété depuis Amelung comme le reste d'un groupe d'Asclépios et d'H.

47. Statue fr. Héraklion, Mus. Arch. 313. De Lyttos. - Mitropoulou n° 216 pl. 30. - Moitié inf. d'une figure féminine vêtue du chiton et de l'himation; contre la jambe dr. bâton ou tronc d'arbre autour duquel s'enroule un serpent.

Reliefs

48.* Relief entier. Athènes, Mus. Nat. 2926. - Svoronos 656 pl. 186; Hausmann 167 n° 8; Mitropoulou n° 176 pl. 23. - Début du IV^e s. av. J.-C. - Ag., derrière Asclépios qui fait face à deux adorants, H. tient le serpent (?) de la main dr. et semble le guider vers sa main g. relevée.

49. (= Asklepios 100*) Relief complet en basalte. Malibu, Getty Mus. 71.AA.319. Du Hauran (Syrie). - Downey, S. B., GettyMus 6-7, 1979, 111-119 fig. - Ép. impériale tardive. - H., debout à g., en chiton et himation, se penche pour nourrir le serpent qui s'enroule autour du bâton d'Asclépios, trônant à dr.

50. (= Asklepios 389* avec bibl.) Couvercle d'une boîte en ivoire. Sion, Mus. cantonal de Valère. - IV^e s. ap. J.-C. - H., à la g. d'Asclépios, tourne la tête vers lui; elle tient de la main dr. le corps du serpent dont la tête s'approche de la phiale tenue dans la main g.

Monnaie

51. (= Asklepios 43*) AE médaillon, Antonin, après 145 ap. J.-C. - Gnechi, Medaglioni II 19 n° 86 pl. 52, 9. - H. à g., tournée vers Asclépios trônant à dr., verse un liquide dans une phiale qu'il lui tend.

Céramique

52. (= Eudaimonia 14 avec bibl.) Lécythe attique à f.r. Londres, BM E 698. De Ruvo. - *ARV*² 1316; manière du P. de Meidias; *Add*² 362; AM 32, 1907, 118 fig. 8; Burn, o. c. I, 33. 101 (Pl) pl. 20c. - Fin du V^e s. av. J.-C. - Eudaimonia assise sur un rocher, entourée d'autres personnages parmi lesquels H. (inscr.) debout, à l'extrémité g. de la scène. La déesse est vue de trois quarts, la tête tournée vers la g. et inclinée, le bras g. relevant le pan de l'himation au niveau du visage, la dr. le retenant sur le ventre.

- incertaines:

Reliefs

53. (= Hades 32a avec bibl.) Relief votif. Copenhague, Glypt. 1430. - Poulsen, CatNyCarlsbergGlypt n° 197; Meyer 212-224 (bibl.) pl. 15. - Vers 420-410 av. J.-C. - Encadrées par deux figures masculines, l'une à g. entièrement nue, l'autre drapée dans l'himation jusqu'à la taille, deux jeunes femmes en péplos, la tête voilée; celle de dr., sur qui se concentrent tous les regards, se présente de face (le visage est arraché) et fait de la main g. le geste du dévoilement, tandis que sa compagne, vue de profil, pose la main g. sur son épaule dr. En l'absence de tout attribut caractéristique comme de tout parallèle iconographique, l'identification récemment proposée des deux personnages de dr. avec H. et Asclépios demeure sujette à caution.

54. (= Asklepios 103*) Relief entier. Corfou, Mus. - Hausmann 166 n° 4; Fuchs, W., RM 68, 1961, 171 pl. 76, 1. - Vers 410-400 av. J.-C. - Face à Asclépios qui lui tend une phiale, H. (?), en chiton et himation, y verse le contenu d'une petite cruche qu'elle tient de la main dr.

55. (= Asklepios 58) Relief fr. Bergama, Mus. De Pergame. - Fuchs, o. c. 54, 172 n. 25; 173-175 pl. 75. - Vers 400 av. J.-C. - Derrière Asclépios (?) trônant, H. (?) péplore de face, puisant de la main dr. dans une amphore.

56. Fr. de relief. Athènes, Mus. Nat. 1396. De l'Asclépieion. - Svoronos 276 pl. 50; Hausmann 171 n° 62. - Début du IV^e s. av. J.-C. - H. (?) de face, avec à sa g. quatre adorants; le chiton transparent découvre l'épaule g., le bras relevant l'himation à la hauteur du visage (perdu).

57. (= Asklepios 93) Relief fr. Athènes, Mus. Nat. 2417. - Svoronos 641 pl. 150; Hausmann 176 n° 130. - 1^{re} moitié du IV^e s. av. J.-C. - Surface martelée: on distingue à dr. la silhouette d'H. (?), au second plan derrière Asclépios assis vers la g.

TYPE TÉGÉE: La rencontre sur le site d'un torse de grande statue et d'un relief reproduisant le même schéma permet de parler ici de type, tout problème d'attribution étant provisoirement laissé de côté (voir Commentaire).

Ronde-bosse

58. Fr. de statue. Tégée, Mus. - Delivorrias, A., AAA 1, 1968, 117 fig. 1; Delivorrias/Linfert 277-288 fig. 1-2; Marcadé 323-325. - IV^e s. av. J.-C.

Reliefs

59.* (= Asklepios 20*) Relief fr. Tégée, Mus. 29. - Mendel, G., BCH 25, 1901, 264 n° 2 pl. 3 bas; Heiderich 68-70; Delivorrias/Linfert 283-285 fig. 6. - IV^e-III^e s. av. J.-C. - H. de face, vêtue d'un chiton ceinturé sous les seins et d'un himation qui glisse sur la hanche dr. et forme sur les cuisses un rabat triangulaire, se tient à la g. d'Asclépios, le bras dr. tendu et abaissé touchant celui du dieu, le bras g. replié au niveau de la hanche. Les têtes sont martelées, mais il semble qu'Asclépios était ici imberbe.

60. (= Asklepios 308*) Relief fr. Sparte, Mus. 580. - Hausmann, U., Griechische Weihreliefs (1960) 74-75 fig. 43. - III^e s. av. J.-C. - Manquent la tête d'Asclépios et toute la moitié sup. du personnage d'H. Le drapé est plus élaboré, mais structure du vêtement et pondération sont à peu près les mêmes.

TYPE AEGION: Ce type bien caractérisé n'est pour le moment attesté que par le monnayage impérial d'Aegion.

Monnaies

61.* AE, Aegion, Commode (180-192). - NumCommPaus 84 pl. R XI; Papachatzis, Paus. Achaika Arkadika 139 fig. 103, 2; Mitropoulou n° 212 pl. 28. -

Rv. Groupe complet d'Asclépios, assis à g., et d'H. debout à dr., tournée vers lui, vêtue du chiton et de l'himation, abaissant la main dr. vers un autel autour duquel s'enroule le serpent.

62. AE, Aegion, Septime Sévère (193-211). - NumCommPaus 84 pl. R X; Papachatzis, l. c. 139 fig. 103, 4; Mitropoulou n° 211 pl. 28. - Rv. H. seule, dans la même attitude que précédemment.

TYPE BROADLANDS: Attitude et pondération sont proches de la statue de Kassel (40), mais avec un vêtement différent: le chiton ceinturé monte jusqu'au cou, l'himation couvre les épaules, passe sous le bras dr. et forme bourrelet sur le ventre avant de retomber sur l'avant-bras g. La main dr. guide le serpent, qui s'enroule autour de l'avant-bras, vers la phiale tenue dans la main g. La tête était légèrement penchée vers la g.

Ronde-bosse d'époque impériale

63.* Petite statue. Broadlands (Hampshire), coll. Palmerston. - Michaelis, AncM 221, n° 14; Reinach, RépStat I 294 (1181); EA 4856; Lippold, GrPl 265; Kabus-Jahn 45-46. - La tête est moderne.

64.* Statuette. Malibu, Getty Mus. 71.AA.280. - Vermeule, C./Neuerburg, N., Cat. of Anc. Art in the J. Paul Getty Museum (1973) 23 n° 46, pl. - Les deux avant-bras sont brisés, mais une partie du serpent subsiste sur le bras dr.

65. Statue acéphale. Istanbul, Mus. Arch. Des thermes de Milet. - Milet 19 (K. A. Neugebauer/Th. Wiegand) 98 n° 2 pl. 26.

66.* Statue acéphale. Rome, Mus. Cap. 1845. - Mustilli 68-69 n° 10 pl. 43, 174; Helbig⁴ II n° 1708; Mitropoulou n° 21 pl. 4.

67.* Statue acéphale. Rouen, Mus. Dép., coll. Campana 25. - Reinach, RépStat III 91, 7; Espérandieu, Recueil IV 176 n° 3071.

68. Statue fr. Plovdiv, Mus. Arch. - Mitropoulou n° 22 pl. 5.

69.* Petite statue. Ostie, Mus. 115. Des thermes. - AA 51, 1936, 466 fig. 13; De Chirico, R., «Una nuova Igea di Ostia», BollArte 30, 1936-37, 518-527 fig. 1-2, 4-5; Helbig⁴ IV n° 3039; Mitropoulou n° 15 pl. 4. - Variante: le bourrelet de l'himation est serré juste au-dessous des seins.

70.* Statue. Paris, Louvre MA 374. - Reinach, RépStat II 1, 300, 4. - Variante: le bourrelet de l'himation est remonté très haut et barre la poitrine au-dessus des seins. Tête et bras dr. (avec le serpent) modernes.

71. (= Hypnos/Somnus 147* avec bibl.) Statue complète. Cos, Mus. Arch. - BollArte 35, 1950, 241 fig. 73; Kerényi, C., Asklepios (1950) fig. 33. - Variante: l'himation couvre le sein g.; la coiffure comporte un haut chignon bouclé.

72. Statue complète. Rhodes, Mus. Arch. - Konstantinopoulos, G., Musées de Rhodes I: Mus. Arch. (1977) fig. 170; Mitropoulou n° 70 pl. 8. - Variante: le bras dr. est nu, l'himation glissant au niveau de la hanche.

73. Statue. Castle Howard (Yorkshire), coll. Carlisle. - Michaelis, AncM 326 n° 5; Reinach, RépStat 290 (1172A); Mitropoulou n° 7 pl. 3. - Variante: chiton à manches, rabat triangulaire de l'himation sur le ventre. La tête n'appartient pas à la statue.

74. Statue entière. Timgad, Mus. Des thermes du sud. - Reinach, RépStat III 91 4; Ballu, A./Cagnat, R., Musée de Timgad (1902) 9 pl. 2, 5. - Vêtement comme sur 73.

75. Statue acéphale. Guelma, Mus. - Reinach, RépStat IV 177, 5; de Pachtère, F. G., Musée de Guelma (1909) 31 pl. 5, 5; Manderscheid, H., Die Skulpturen-ausstattung der Kaiserzeitl. Thermenanlagen (1981) n° 447 pl. 46. - Même vêtement que les deux précédentes.

76.* Petite statue fr. Vatican, Mus. - Lippold, SkulptVatMus III 2, 363 n° 106 pl. 156. - Les deux avant-bras sont perdus (avec les attributs), mais pondération et drapé sont très proches de 74; la tête (coiffure à bandeaux et stéphanè) est conservée.

77. Statue complète. Rome, Pal. Corsini. - Reinach, RépStat I 295 (1182A); De Luca, G., I monumenti antichi del Pal. Corsini in Roma (1976) pl. 23, 13; Mitropoulou n° 58 pl. 6. - Variante: l'himation passe sur l'épaule dr. et recouvre tout le torse de longs plis obliques qui enveloppent la cuisse g. jusqu'au genou et retombent partiellement sur l'avant-bras.

78.* Statue. Copenhague, Glypt. 1615. De Minturnes. - Poulsen, CatNyCarlsbergGlypt 381 n° 545; Kruse, H.-J., Röm. weibliche Gewandstatuen des 2. Jh. n. Chr. (1975) 172, 370-371 (D 80). - Même vêtement que 73. Portrait d'une dame romaine en H. Au lieu de la phiale, elle tient dans la main g. un œuf, qu'elle présente au serpent enroulé autour du bras dr.

79. Statuette acéphale en porphyre. Mediana, Mus. Du palais impérial. - Jovanovic, A., Starinar 24-25, 1973-74, 57-65 n° 2 pl. 3. - III^e s. ap. J.-C. - H., l'himation remonté jusqu'au cou, tient de la main dr. le serpent et une phiale dans la main g.

80. (= Asklepios 144, = Hypnos/Somnus 146* avec bibl.) Petit groupe statuaire. Moscou, Mus. Pouchkine II/a 34. - Hausmann 2, 128 n° 5, Beil. 50, 1; Heiderich 58-63. - H. de face, entourée à sa g. d'Asclépios, qui posait sans doute la main sur son épaule, et de Télésphoros (?) accroupi contre sa jambe dr. Manquent la tête et les mains d'H. ainsi que la main dr. d'Asclépios.

81.* (= Asklepios 306) Petit groupe statuaire. Anc. Munich, marché des ant. D'Adana (Cilicie). - EA 1050; Mitropoulou n° 14 pl. 4. - H. de face tient de la main dr. le serpent, à qui elle présente la phiale de la main g.; à sa g. Asclépios, appuyé sans doute du bras dr. (brisé au-dessus du coude) sur son bâton, autour duquel s'enroule un autre serpent, tient dans la main g. un rouleau.

82.* Groupe fr. Vatican. - Reinach, RépStat II 229, 4; Amelung, SkulptVatMus I 106, 151. - H. de face, tête et avant-bras brisés; à sa g. restes de la jambe dr. d'Asclépios et de son bâton avec le serpent enroulé.

83.* Groupe fr. Beaune, Mus. - Reinach, RépStat IV 177, 6. - H. seule conservée (sans la tête) avec la plinthe et les deux pieds d'Asclépios, devant lesquels subsiste la queue du serpent.

Reliefs

84. Naïskos à relief fr. Anc. Budapest, Mus. Beaux-Arts 4748 (disparu pendant la 2^e guerre mondiale). De Fano. - Hekler, n° 43. - IV^e s. av. J.-C. - H. de face, seule, le bourrelet de l'himation remonté sous les seins, nourrit son serpent; la tête porte une sorte de stéphanè.

85. (= Asklepios 134*) Relief en calcaire. Le Caire, Mus. Égypt. - Hausmann, o. c. 60, 75 fig. 44. - Vers 100 av. J.-C. - Variante: l'himation recouvre la tête d'H. et dégage tout le buste jusqu'aux hanches.

86. Naïskos à relief. Sofia, Mus. Arch. Nat. De Pautalia. - IGBulg IV n° 2059 pl. 62 (2060). - II^e-III^e s. ap. J.-C. - H. à la dr. d'Asclépios; entre eux, Télésphoros.

87. (= Asklepios [in Thracia] 17*) Relief votif. Sofia, Mus. Arch. Nat. 3431. - IGBulg II n° 517. - II^e-III^e s. ap. J.-C. - H., à la dr. d'Asclépios, nourrissant son serpent.

88. (= Asklepios [in Thracia] 18*, = Hégieia [in Thracia] 5) Relief votif. Sofia, Mus. Arch. Nat. 3773. - IGBulg II n° 521. - Même type que le précédent.

89. (= Asklepios [in Thracia] 19* avec bibl.) Relief votif. Sofia, Mus. Arch. Nat. 3429. - Même type que les précédents.

90. Relief fr. De Panagurište, sanctuaire d'Héra. - Kazarow, G., AA 44, 1929, 315 fig. 22; Mitropoulou n° 195 pl. 26. - Variante: H., en péplos, lève le bras dr. pour tenir le serpent qui se dirige en ondulant vers sa main g. où se trouve la phiale.

91. Naïskos à relief. Istanbul, Mus. Arch. 2491. - Mitropoulou n° 30 pl. 6. - H. avec Asclépios à sa g.

92. Relief d'un autel. Budapest, Mus. Nat. - Mitropoulou n° 29 pl. 15. - IV^e s. ap. J.-C. - H. de face, nourrissant son serpent; à sa g. Asclépios, appuyé sur son bâton, tient dans la main g. un rouleau (?).

93. (= Asklepios 121*) Relief fr. Bucarest, Mus. Nat. d'Hist. L 726. - Bordenache, ScultBucarest I 18-19 n° 10 pl. 6. - Ép. impériale tardive. - H. avec Asclépios et Télésphoros.

94. Relief fr. Plovdiv, Mus. Arch. De l'Asclépieion de Batkun. - IGBulg III 1, n° 1154 pl. 98. - Même sujet que le précédent.

95. Relief complet. Golenica Bresnica (Bulgarie). - Hausmann, o. c. 60, 77 fig. 45. - III^e s. ap. J.-C. (?) - H. à la dr. d'Asclépios; entre eux, au niveau de leurs têtes, Télésphoros.

Lampes

96. (= Asklepios 122* avec bibl.) Bruxelles, Mus. Roy. R603. - II^e s. ap. J.-C. - H. à la dr. d'Asclépios, légèrement tournée vers lui.

97. (= Asklepios 123) Londres, BM. - Walters, BMLamps 159 n° 1061. - II^e s. ap. J.-C. - Même type que la précédente.

Monnaies impériales

98.* AE, Brouzos (Phrygie), Septime Sévère (193-211). - BMC Phrygia 111, 6 pl. 14, 3. - Rv. H. seule, en chiton et himation, de profil à dr., nourrit son serpent.

99. AE, Nikaia (Bithynie), Antonin (138-161). -

RecGen 410, 91 pl. 69, 1. - Rv. Même type, avec une variante dans le vêtement qui semble être un péplos.

100.* AE, Corinthe, Lucius Vêrus (161-169). - BMC Corinth 80, 620 pl. 20, 20; NumCommPaus 25, pl. F 117. - Rv. Même type, avec Asclépios.

101.* AE, Corinthe, Plautilla (202-205). - BMC Corinth 89, 671 pl. 22, 10. - Rv. Comme la précédente.

102.* AE, Pergame (Mysie), Maximus César (235-238). - BMC Mysia n° 340 pl. 33, 1. - Rv. Comme les précédentes.

103.* AE Akmonia (Phrygie), Caracalla (198-217). - BMC Phrygia 13, 63 pl. 3, 9. - Rv. Même groupe que précédemment, mais avec des attitudes plus dramatiques.

104. (= Asklepios 309*) AE médaillon, Lucius Vêrus (161-169). Paris, Cab. Méd. - Gnechchi, Medagliani II 48, 31 pl. 75, 4. - Variante d'un style encore plus maniéré.

105.* AE médaillon Bizya (Thrace), Philippe l'Arabe (244-249). - BMC Thrace 89, 8 (fig.); Jurukova, J., Die Münzprägung von Bizya (1981) 18, 71 n° 129 A pl. 20. - Rv. Les deux protagonistes du groupe habituel sont inversés pour s'intégrer à une composition complexe. Au centre Apollon flanqué de Téléphoros et de l'omphalos autour duquel s'enroule un serpent, à g. Asclépios, à dr. H., qui pour le regarder tournent la tête dans le sens opposé à celui du type initial; au-dessus d'eux, comme en arrière-plan, deux petites figures, apparemment Tychè et Zeus tonnant (?).

Gemmes d'époque impériale

106. (= Asklepios 125*. Cf. etiam → Asklepios 126-127) Cornaline. New York, MMA 81.6.91. - Richter, MetMusGems 79 n° 341 pl. 45. - H. nourrit son serpent en se tournant vers Asclépios qui la regarde.

107.* Sardonyx. Copenhague, Mus. Thorv. I 523. - Fossing, ThorvGems 111 n° 655 pl. 8. - H. seule, dans la même attitude que précédemment, mais vêtue du péplos.

108. (= Asklepios 135*) Copenhague, Mus. Nat. 236. - Variante: H. ne porte pas de serpent, mais tend la phiale à celui qui s'enroule autour du bâton d'Asclépios.

TYPE TIMGAD: Très proche du précédent pour le vêtement et la pondération, mais le bras dr. se tend vers le bas et s'écarte du corps, obligeant le serpent à se diriger obliquement vers la phiale par de grandes ondulations ascendantes.

Ronde-bosse d'époque impériale

109.* Petite statue acéphale. Timgad, Mus. (réserves). Des thermes du sud. - Ballu/Cagnat, o. c. 74, 9 pl. 2, 6; Manderscheid, o. c. 75, 122 n° 478 pl. 48. - II^e s. ap. J.-C.

110.* Statue complète. Dresde, Staatl. Kunstslg. - Reinach, RépStat I 292 (1170 B). - Variante: chiton sans ceinture découvrant l'épaule g.

111.* Statuette de bronze. Londres, BM. - Walters, BMBronzes 1431 pl. 27. - Même chiton que 110, mais les deux épaules sont couvertes.

TYPE TORLONIA: La pondération et le drapé évoquent la statue de Kassel (40), mais le bras dr. retombe le long du corps, tenant ainsi éloigné de la phiale le serpent qui s'enroule autour de lui.

Statues en marbre, d'époque impériale

112.* Rome, Mus. Torlonia 268. - Reinach, RépStat I 293 (1175); Mitropoulou n° 114 pl. 13.

113.* Anc. Munich, marché des ant. (1913). - EA 5025; Mitropoulou n° 115 pl. 13.

TYPE FLORENCE: H. vêtue du chiton et de l'himation en relève les plis de son avant-bras g., sur lequel elle porte aussi le serpent qui se dirige vers la phiale tenue dans la main g. Le bras dr. retombait le long du corps ou s'appuyait sur la hanche.

Statues d'époque impériale

114.* Florence, Uff. 214. - EA 353; Reinach, RépStat II 1, 299, 1; Mansuelli, ScultUff 145 n° 21 pl. 25; Mitropoulou n° 189 pl. 25. - Ép. impériale, d'après un modèle du IV^e s. av. J.-C.

115. Paris, Louvre MA 566. - Reinach, RépStat I 305 (1170); Mitropoulou n° 186 pl. 25. - Variante: main dr. posée sur la hanche, le serpent s'enroule autour du bras g.

TYPE HÉRAKLION: Pondération et vêtement sont proches du type Broadlands (avec l'himation remonté plus haut sur le buste) mais le serpent, parti du bras dr., passe derrière le cou et descend de l'épaule g. vers la phiale qui était sans doute tenue de la main g.

Ronde-bosse d'époque impériale

116. Statue acéphale. Héraklion, Mus. Arch. 312. De Lyttos. - Mitropoulou n° 163 pl. 21. - Manquent l'épaule et le bras dr. ainsi que l'avant-bras g. qui était rapporté.

117. Statue acéphale. Héraklion, Mus. Arch. 351. De Gortyne. - Perali, P., ASAtene 1, 1914, 158-159 fig. 8; Mitropoulou n° 164 pl. 21. - Manquent l'avant-bras dr. et la main g.

118. Statue acéphale. Leningrad, Ermitage A 854. - Waldhauer, SkulptErm III n° 272 pl. 27; Mitropoulou n° 172 pl. 22. - Manquent les deux avant-bras; le serpent n'est conservé que sur l'épaule dr.

119. Statuette fr. Marché des ant. en 1971 (anc. coll. Melchett). - Reinach, RépStat II 1, 801, 1; Curtius, L., Jdl 19, 1904, 76 fig. 11; Mitropoulou n° 175 pl. 23. - Variante: le bras g. est abaissé et le serpent devait descendre vers la phiale. Manquent la tête, le bas des jambes, le bras dr. et la main g.

120.* Statuette. Athènes, Mus. Nat. 272. D'Épidaure. - ArchEph 1886, 249 pl. 11 à dr.; Mitropoulou n° 173 pl. 23. - Variante: l'himation glisse sur la hanche dr., découvrant le torse et formant sur les cuisses un rabat triangulaire. Manquent les deux avant-bras.

121. Statuette. Athènes, Mus. Nat. 273. D'Épidaure. - Inédite. - Même type que la précédente.

122. Statuette acéphale. Épidaure, Mus. - Reinach, RépStat II 1, 298, 7; Kabus-Jahn 109 n. 13; Xapitavt-δov, A., Ἐπίδαυρος fig. 50. - Même drapé que 120. Les deux mains sont brisées, ainsi que le serpent à g.

123.* Statuette fr. Athènes, Mus. Acropole 2319. - Ashmole 3; Mitropoulou n° 165 pl. 22. - Variante: le chiton découvre l'épaule dr.; le serpent monte le long du dos sur l'épaule g. et redescend vers l'avant-bras. Tête, bras et jambes sont brisés.

b) Jambe droite d'appui

REPRÉSENTATIONS ATYPIQUES

- certaines:

Ronde-bosse

124.* Statue acéphale. Syracuse, Mus. Reg. 21687. - Horn, R., Stehende weibliche Gewandstatuen in der hellenistischen Plastik (1931) 85 pl. 30, 3; Mitropoulou n° 10 pl. 3. - II^e s. av. J.-C. - L'attitude est nonchalante avec un hanchement très prononcé. Chiton fin, ceinturé sous les seins et montant jusqu'au cou. L'himation recouvre l'épaule et le bras g., enveloppe le dos, la hanche et la jambe dr., retenu à g. par l'avant-bras tendu. Le serpent s'enroule autour du bras dr., mais la main abaissée ne semble pas le guider vers la phiale que tenait peut-être la main g. perdue.

125. Statue acéphale. Worcester Art Mus. 1936. 36. D'Antioche. - Stilwell, R., Antioch-on-the-Orontes III 116-117 n° 241 pl. 1; Hausmann 2, 130, Beil. 52, 1; Mitropoulou n° 8 pl. 3. - II^e s. av. J.-C. - Variante, avec une pondération inversée et un drapé plus mouvementé, du type de la statue de Lambèse (41).

126. Petite statue acéphale. Argos, Mus. Des thermes A. - Marcadé, J., BCH 81, 1957, 418-419 fig. 10; idem, dans BCH Suppl 6, 1980, 138-140 fig. 6. - Ép. impériale, d'après un modèle hellénistique. - Peut-être dérivé du type Héraklion, avec pondération et drapé inversés; le serpent monte le long du flanc g., mais n'est pas conservé au-dessus de l'épaule.

127.* (= Hypnos/Somnus 149) Statue complète. Malibu, Getty Mus. 71.AA.338. - Vermeule/Neueburg, o. c. 64, 21 n° 42, fig. - Ép. impériale. - Chiton ceinturé haut, himation retombant sur l'épaule g. et retenu sur l'avant-bras dr. La main g. abaissée tient le serpent, la dr. est levée, tenant un œuf. Contre la jambe dr., enfant nu assis, endormi (Éros?). Coiffure à haut chignon bouclé.

128.* (= Asklepios 119) Groupe colossal. Turin, Pal. Reale. - Bendinelli, G., BollArte 9, 1929, 481-499 pl. 1 et fig. - Ép. impériale. - H. à la dr. d'Asclépios debout: la déesse, vêtue d'un chiton transparent qui découvre l'épaule dr. et d'un himation qui glisse sur les hanches et que retient le genou g. légèrement soulevé, pose le coude g. sur l'épaule d'Asclépios, tandis que de la main dr. elle lui présente son serpent.

129. Fr. de statuette. Belgrade, Mus. Nat. 666. De Stobi. - Grbic, M., Choix de plastiques gr. et rom. du Mus. Nat. de Belgrade (1958) 31 n° 50 pl. 61. - Ép. impériale. - Moitié inf. du corps, vêtu du péplos; à dr. de la figure, tronc d'arbre autour duquel s'enroule un serpent. Schéma proche de 47, avec pondération inversée.

130.* Statuette de bronze. Boston, MFA 1906. 2372. - Comstock/Vermeule, BronzesBoston n° 113. - Ép. impériale. - H., vêtue du chiton et étroitement drapée dans l'himation qu'elle retient du bras g., tient le serpent enroulé autour de son bras dr., et une phiale (?) dans la main g. La tête est coiffée d'une sorte de céryphale.

Reliefs

131. (= Amphiaros 65*, = Asklepios 372) Relief complet. Athènes, Mus. Nat. 1396. De l'Amphiarosion d'Oropos. - Svoronos pl. 50, 4; Hausmann 168 n° 20. - Vers 320 av. J.-C. - De g. à dr. Amphiaros-Asclépios, le dédicant derrière un autel, H. (inscr.). Celle-ci, vêtue d'un fin chiton et d'un himation qui enveloppe le bassin et les jambes, se présente de trois quarts; dans la main g. elle tient une petite cenochoé, et pose la main dr. sur la tête du dédicant.

132. Fr. de relief. Athènes, Mus. Nat. 2421. De l'Acropole. - Svoronos 643 pl. 152; Hausmann 171 n° 66. - 2^e moitié du IV^e s. av. J.-C. - H. derrière un autel contre lequel monte un serpent. Chiton ceinturé, himation. Le bras dr. est replié sur le ventre, le g. relevé comme pour le geste du dévoilement; mais la tête est brisée au ras du cou.

133. Relief de terre cuite. Sparte, Mus. 6228. D'Amyclées. - JHS 77, 1957, Suppl. 13 pl. 1c. - IV^e s. av. J.-C. - Devant Asclépios assis à g., H. en péplos, de trois quarts, lui présente la phiale autour de laquelle s'enroule le serpent.

134. (= Asklepios 252* avec bibl.) Relief votif. Paris, Louvre MA 602. - 144 ap. J.-C. - Asclépios et H., côte à côte, nourrissant chacun un énorme serpent; le vêtement d'H. correspond à peu près au type Broadlands, mais la main dr. tient le bourrelet de l'himation tandis que la g. s'écarte pour présenter la phiale au serpent.

135. Relief votif en calcaire. Skopje, Lapidarium 118. - Josifovska, B., Bodniciz lapidarium arheološki Muz. Skopje (1961) 63 101, fig; Düll, S., Die Götterkulte Nordmakedoniens (1977) 366-367 n° 186 fig. 51. - 2^e moitié du II^e s. ap. J.-C. - H. de face, à la g. d'Asclépios, tient le serpent serré contre sa poitrine.

136.* Relief votif fr. Skopje, Lapidarium 57. - Vulic, A., Spomenik 98, 1941-48, 315 n° 105; Düll, o. c. 135, 365 n° 184 fig. 7. - Ép. impériale. - H. de face, flanquée de deux énormes serpents (de celui de dr. seule subsiste la tête) qu'elle nourrit chacun d'une main.

- incertaines:

Reliefs attiques

137. (= Asklepios 102* avec bibl.) Relief fr. Brocklesby Park (Lincolnshire) 10. - Hausmann 166 n° 3 pl. 13. - Vers 415 av. J.-C. - Derrière Asclépios debout, tenant une phiale, H. (?) en péplos, une petite cruche dans la main dr.

138. (= Asklepios 105 avec bibl.) Relief entier. Le Pirée, Mus. Arch. 405. – Hausmann 166 n° 1 pl. 1. – Fin du V^e s. av. J.-C. – Scène de guérison: à dr. du lit, derrière Asclépios, H. (?) en péplos, coiffée du céryphale. On peut songer aussi à lasô ou Panakeia.

139. (= Asklepios 106* avec bibl.) Relief fr. Athènes, Mus. Nat. 2373. – Hausmann 166 n° 2. – Début du IV^e s. av. J.-C. (?) – A dr., derrière Asclépios, jambes d'une péplophore: même problème que pour le relief précédent.

140. (= Asklepios 60* avec bibl., = Epione 13) Relief complet. Athènes, Mus. Nat. 1388. De l'Asclépieion. – Hausmann 175 n° 121 pl. 16. – Vers 400 av. J.-C. – A dr. d'Asclépios assis sur un rocher, H. (?) péplophore, de face, faisant de la main dr. le geste du dévoilement.

141. (= Asklepios 86*) Relief complet. Athènes, Mus. Nat. 1338. – Svoronos 257-258 pl. 38; Hausmann 176 n° 127. – Vers 400 av. J.-C. – Entre Asclépios assis à dr. et un autel, figure féminine de trois quarts, étendant la main dr. au-dessus de la tête d'un adorant situé de l'autre côté de l'autel: malgré l'absence d'inscription, l'analogie du schéma avec celui de 131 invite à y reconnaître H.

142. (= Asklepios 387) Fr. de relief. Athènes, Mus. Acropole 2997. – Walter, O., Beschreibung der Reliefs im kleinen Akropolismuseum in Athen (1923) 50-51 n° 83, fig. – 1^{re} moitié du IV^e s. av. J.-C. – A dr. d'Asclépios (?) et devant lui, bassin et jambes d'H. (?) péplophore.

143. (= Asklepios 90*, = Hera 357 – avec bibl.) Relief architectural. Athènes, Mus. Nat. 1425. D'Épidaure. – Hausmann 176 n° 129 pl. 18. – Milieu du IV^e s. av. J.-C. – Devant Asclépios, assis à g., H. (?) de face, en chiton et himation recouvrant la tête (perdue), le bras dr. levé.

TYPE MELCHETT: Bien que la pondération du personnage d'Hygie elle-même y semble mal fixée, les coïncidences formelles qu'offre une série de reliefs votifs autorisent ici à parler de type, et à supposer l'influence de quelque groupe statuaire, même si la ronde-bosse n'en a fourni jusqu'à présent aucune reproduction.

Reliefs votifs

144.* (= Asklepios 206) Relief complet. La Havane, coll. El Conde de Lagunillas (anc. coll. Melchett). – Hausmann 168 n° 26 pl. 19. – Fin du IV^e s. av. J.-C. – H. est à la g. d'Asclépios et se présente comme lui de trois quarts, légèrement tournée vers la dr., la jambe g. croisée devant la jambe dr. d'appui, la main dr. sur la hanche, le coude tendant l'himation qui passe sur le dessus de la tête, et que la main g. vient saisir selon le schéma dit du geste de dévoilement. L'himation enveloppe tout le bas du corps, formant sur le ventre un bourrelet qui laisse apparaître la ceinture du chiton.

145. (= Asklepios 250*) Relief votif fr. Thessalonique, Mus. Arch. 1208. – Hausmann, o. c. 60, 72 fig. 41. – IV^e s. av. J.-C. – H. à la g. d'Asclépios, tous deux de face. Même drapé mais pondération inversée, de même que le geste de dévoilement confié à la main dr., avec le coude enveloppé dans l'himation comme sur 144. Le bras g. est perdu.

146. (= Asklepios 338* avec bibl., = Epione 17) Relief mutilé. Athènes, Mus. Nat. 1334. – Svoronos 254 pl. 38, 2; Hausmann 167 n° 17. – Milieu du IV^e s. av. J.-C. – Ag. Asclépios et H. de face, à côté d'un autel dont s'approchent trois adorants, à dr. Même variante que 145; de la main g. H. présente une phiale.

147. (= Asklepios 344*) Relief fr. Athènes, Mus. Nat. 1345. – Svoronos 264 pl. 35; Hausmann 167 n° 15 pl. 12. – 1^{re} moitié du IV^e s. av. J.-C. – A la g. d'Asclépios, moitié dr. du personnage d'H., dans un schéma de groupe très semblable à celui de 144.

148. (= Asklepios 205) Naïskos à relief. Athènes, Mus. Nat. 2406. – Svoronos 640 pl. 148. – IV^e s. av. J.-C. – A la g. d'Asclépios, H. de face, en appui sur la jambe dr., faisant de la main dr. le geste du dévoilement.

149. (= Asklepios 249) Relief votif complet. – Hausmann 168 n° 27a; Hausmann 2, 145 Beil. 53, 2. – IV^e s. av. J.-C. – H. à la dr. d'Asclépios, dans la même attitude que sur 145.

TYPE MÉGARE: H., tournée vers la g., tient le serpent sur son bras g. et du bras dr. étendu le présente à Asclépios. Evidemment inspiré d'un groupe statuaire (→ 231), ce type n'est pourtant attesté jusqu'à présent que par les monnaies et les intailles.

Monnaies

150.* AE Mégare, Septime Sévère (193-211). – BMC Megaris pl. 22, 4; NumCommPaus 5 pl. A VI; Papachatzis, Paus. Attika fig. 309. – Rv. H. avec Asclépios; la main dr. tient peut-être une phiale.

151.* AE Prousius (Bithynie), Caracalla, (198-217). – BMC Bithynia 202, 5 pl. 36, 3; Mitropoulou n° 103 pl. 9. – Rv. H. seule; il n'y a pas de phiale et la déesse semble seulement tenir la tête du serpent. Elle semble vêtue du péplos.

152. AE Amastris (Paphlagonie), Marc Aurèle (161-180). – BMC Paphlagonia 87 pl. 20, 8. – Rv. H. seule; même type que sur la précédente.

Gemmes

153. (= Asklepios 128*) Cornaline. Vienne, Kunsth. Mus. IX B 1550. – AGOE I n° 205 pl. 35. – Vers 60-50 av. J.-C. – H. avec Asclépios. Même schéma que sur les monnaies, mais dans une version plus raffinée: H. tient dans sa main dr. levée une phiale où vient boire le serpent, dont elle tient la queue de la main g. et qui passe derrière son dos.

154.* Agate. Copenhague, Mus. Thorv. I 1606. – Fossing, ThorvGems 43 n° 93 pl. 2. – 1^{er} s. av. J.-C. – H. tient la phiale de la main dr.; le serpent ondule derrière sa silhouette.

155. Cornaline. Sofia, Mus. Arch. Nat. 541. – Dimitrova-Milceva, A., Antike Gemmen und Kameen aus dem arch. Nationalmuseum in Sofia n° 110. – Ép. impériale. – H. péplophore avec Asclépios; même schéma que sur 151.

156. Cornaline. Sofia, Mus. Arch. Nat. 4406. – Dimitrova-Milceva, o. c. 155, n° 109. – H. avec Asclépios; elle porte le péplos et tient peut-être une phiale dans la main dr. Le serpent semble passer derrière son dos.

157. Cornaline fr. Sofia, Mus. Arch. Nat. 7903. – Dimitrova-Milceva, o. c. 155, n° 107. – H. seule, en péplos, tient dans la main dr. la phiale où vient boire le serpent qui passe derrière son dos.

158. Cornaline. Sofia, Mus. Arch. Nat. – Dimitrova-Milceva, o. c. 155, n° 108. – H. seule, dans la même attitude que sur la précédente, mais en chiton et himation.

Plaque de marbre gravée

159.* Izmir, Basmahane 5131. – Ép. impériale tardive (?). – Représentation naïve où le schéma est cependant bien reconnaissable; H. tient le serpent horizontalement dans ses bras et le présente à Asclépios.

TYPE HOPE: H. est vêtue d'un chiton à manches courtes et d'un himation qui enserré étroitement le torse de l'épaule g. au genou dr., formant en haut un bourrelet qui dégage le sein dr. Le bras g. retombe le long du flanc, le dr. se tend légèrement vers l'avant pour présenter la phiale au serpent, qui descend obliquement de l'épaule g. en direction de la main dr. La tête est tournée vers la dr. et inclinée vers la phiale. Il s'agit cette fois d'un type très largement attesté; c'est aussi le seul dont nous possédions sûrement la tête.

Ronde-bosse d'époque impériale

160.* Statue. Los Angeles County Mus. 50.33.23. Trouvée à Ostie en 1797; anc. coll. Hope. – Curtius 55-85 fig. 6; Ashmole 1-11; Kabus-Jahn 85-87 pl. 15; Waywell 68-99 pl. 47 et fig. 10. – Ép. antonine. – Manquent le nez, les deux avant-bras et la moitié antérieure du serpent.

161.* Tête de statue. Rome, Mus. Naz. Rom. 1085. – Curtius fig. 1-2 pl. 2; Ashmole fig. 11. 13. 15. 17. 19; Helbig⁴ III n° 2258; MusNazRom I 1, 228 n° 143 (J. Papadopoulos). – Ép. julio-claudienne.

162. Tête de statue. Vienne, Kunsth. Mus. – Curtius 56 fig. 3-4; Ashmole fig. 20-22.

163.* Tête fr. Athènes, Mus. Acropole. – Casson, S., Cat. of the Acropolis Mus. II (1921) 69 n° 1223; Ashmole 1-6 fig. 1-14; Kabus-Jahn 85-86.

164.* Statue acéphale. Athènes, Mus. Nat. 701. Trouvée au Zappeion avec l'Asclépios inv. 702 (→ Asklepios 167). – EA 717; Curtius 71 fig. 8. – Ép. antonine.

165. Statue acéphale. Cyrène, Mus. 14.425. Trouvée au théâtre romain avec un Asclépios du type Gius-tini (→ Asklepios 162). – Paribeni, ScultCirene n° 225 pl. 118.

166. Torse de statue. Messine, Mus. Reg. – Reinach, RépStat V 128, 1; MonAnt 24, 1916, 207 fig. 52; Ashmole 3(g).

167. Torse de statue. Mégare, Mus. 78. – Inédit.

168. Petite statue. Cyrène, Mus. 14.172. De l'agora. – Paribeni, ScultCirene n° 226 pl. 118. – Les bras manquent et le visage est mutilé.

169. Petite statue acéphale. Leningrad, Ermitage A 886. – Waldhauer, SkulptErm II n° 274 pl. 28.

170. Petite statue fr. Héraklion, Mus. Arch. 350. De Gortyne. – Kabus-Jahn 109 n. 13; Mitropoulou n° 155 pl. 20. – Brisée au cou et au-dessous des genoux.

171.* Statuette entière. Athènes, Mus. Nat. 1810. – D'Épidaure. – Lippold, GrPl 253; Carouzu, o. c. 20, 161-162; Kabus-Jahn 78-79; Mitropoulou n° 179 pl. 24. – Seule manque la main dr. avec la phiale.

172. Statuette. Marché des ant. en 1963 (anc. coll. Lansdowne). – Michaelis, AncM 439 n° 10; Ashmole 3(j) pl. 5 fig. 31; Mitropoulou n° 145 pl. 18.

173. Statuette acéphale. Sparte, Mus. 471. – Tod, M. N./Wace, A. J. B., A Cat. of the Sparta Mus. (1906) 182; Mitropoulou n° 151 pl. 19.

174. Statuette acéphale. Sparte, Mus. 806. – Tod/Wace, o. c. 173, 212; Mitropoulou n° 152 pl. 19.

175. Torse de statuette fr. Sparte, Mus. 289. – Tod/Wace, o. c. 173, 161; Mitropoulou n° 153 pl. 19. – Brisé au cou et aux genoux.

176. Statuette acéphale. La Canée (Chania), Mus. A 49. – Mitropoulou n° 150 pl. 19.

177.* Statuette acéphale. Le Pirée, Mus. 244. – Ashmole 3(k); Mitropoulou n° 154 pl. 20.

178. Statuette entière. Brocklesby Park (Lincolnshire). – Smith, A. H., Antiquities at Brocklesby Park (1897) 23 n° 58; Mitropoulou n° 160 pl. 20. – Variante: combinaison du type Hope, pour la position du serpent, avec le type Munich pour le drapé.

179. Torse de statuette fr. Almyros, Mus. A 35. – De Larissa. – Mitropoulou n° 161 pl. 21. – Même type mixte que 178.

180. Petite statue acéphale. Cyrène, Mus. 14.171. – Paribeni, ScultCirene n° 227 pl. 118. – Début du IV^e s. ap. J.-C. – Autre variante de la contamination des types Hope et Munich: le bras dr. et le serpent sont conformes au premier, mais la retombée du lourd himation sur le bras g. rappelle le second.

181. Statuette complète. Rome, Marché des ant. (anc. Pal. Sciarra). – Curtius 71 fig. 9; Ashmole 3(n); Kabus-Jahn 109 n. 13; Mitropoulou n° 144 pl. 19. – Adaptation du type: la main dr. tient la tête du serpent, tandis que la g. pend le long du corps avec la phiale (?).

182. Statuette complète. Rome, Pal. Barberini. – Reinach, RépStat VI 72, 1; Ashmole 3(o); Mitropoulou n° 199 pl. 27. – Autre adaptation, mal comprise: H. tend la phiale de la main dr., mais le serpent est à ses pieds et elle tourne la tête vers la g.

183. Petite statue complète. Leningrad, Ermitage A 837. – Waldhauer, SkulptErm III n° 273 pl. 28. – Adaptation incohérente: le mouvement des bras est inversé et le serpent ne se dirige plus vers la phiale, présentée par la main g., mais vers une pyxide que tient la main dr.

Reliefs votifs

184. (= Asklepios 207*) Cambridge, Fitz. Mus. M 14.1865. De l'Asclépieion d'Athènes. – Ashmole pl. 5 fig. 33; Hausmann 168 n° 28 pl. 20. – 1^{er} s. av. J.-C. – H. avec Asclépios: n'était l'absence du serpent, la figure serait exactement conforme au type Hope.

185. Fr. de relief. Corinthe, Mus. S 2793. – Mitropoulou n° 158 pl. 20. — Ép. impériale. — Brisé de tous les côtés: on distingue une partie du torse d'H. avec le serpent, et à sa g. la tête de Télésphoros.

186. Véria, Mus. 250. — BCH 73, 1949, 531 fig. 15; Mitropoulou n° 159 pl. 20. — Ép. impériale. — H. à la dr. d'Asclépios imberbe.

187. Calcaire. Argos, Mus. Du sanctuaire d'Athéna Oxyderkès. — Vollgraff, W., Le sanctuaire d'Apollon Pythéen à Argos (1956) 59 fig. 48. — Ép. impériale. — De g. à dr. H., Télésphoros, Asclépios.

TYPE SPARTE: Très proche du précédent pour le drapé et l'attitude, mais le serpent descend de l'épaule dr.

Ronde-bosse d'époque impériale

188. Statuette. Sparte, Mus. 6697. — Mitropoulou n° 168 pl. 22.

189. Statuette acéphale. Istanbul, Mus. Arch. — Mendel, Sculpt III 10-11 n° 808; Reinach, RépStat V 128, 6.

190. Statuette acéphale. Épidaure, Mus. — Mitropoulou n° 168a pl. 22.

TYPE BELVÉDÈRE: H., vêtue d'un chiton ceinturé haut et d'un himation qui couvre presque toutes les jambes, formant sur le ventre un bourrelet en arc de cercle dont l'extrémité est coincée sous le coude g., tend les avant-bras pour rapprocher la tête du serpent de la phiale qu'elle lui présente de la main g.

Ronde-bosse d'époque impériale

191. Statuette. Vatican, Mus. Chiaramonti 1246 (anc. Belvédère). — Amelung, SkulptVatMus II 227-232 n° 85 pl. 22; Helbig⁴ I n° 298; Mitropoulou n° 139 pl. 17. — I^{er} s. ap. J.-C. — Les deux bras sont restaurés avec les attributs.

192. Statuette acéphale. Rome, Mus. Cap. — Mustilli 88-89 n° 10 pl. 52, 211; Kabus-Jahn 104 n. 106; Helbig⁴ II n° 1724; Mitropoulou n° 141 pl. 18. — I^{er} s. ap. J.-C. — Identique à la précédente, sans la restauration des avant-bras.

193. Statuette complète. Berlin-DDR, Staatl. Mus. SK 353 (R 38). De Frascati. — Kabus-Jahn 54-56 pl. 8; Mitropoulou n° 140 pl. 18. — II^e s. ap. J.-C. — Variante: au lieu de nourrir le serpent, H. le serre contre elle en le tenant des deux mains, dont le geste constitue la seule différence avec les exemplaires précédents; la tête doit être un portrait.

Relief

194. Chapiteau de pilastre à relief. Thessalonique, Mus. Arch. 6690. — ArchDelt 20, 1965, Chron. 409 pl. 458; Mitropoulou n° 69 pl. 7. — Variante proche de la précédente: le bras dr., autour duquel s'enroule le serpent, est replié sur le ventre.

TYPE MUNICH: Vêtue du chiton ceinturé haut et d'un lourd himation, H. tient le serpent de la main dr. sans lui présenter de phiale. L'himation enveloppe en effet les épaules et les deux bras, ne laissant dépasser que la main dr. et recouvrant obliquement le sein dr. et le ventre avant de retomber sur l'avant-bras g., qu'il dissimule complètement.

Ronde-bosse d'époque impériale

195. Statuette. Munich, Glypt. 310. De Rome. — Hausmann 2, 130, Beil. 52, 2. — La tête est moderne.

196. Statuette acéphale. Sparte, Mus. 293. — Hausmann 2, 130 n° 6, Beil. 52, 3; Mitropoulou n° 136 pl. 16.

197. Statue fr. Sparte, Mus. 321. — Hausmann 2, 130 n° 5; Mitropoulou n° 137 pl. 17.

198. Statue. Paris, Louvre MA 260. — Reinach, RépStat II 1, 298, 5; Charbonneaux, SculptLouvre 209, n° 260; Mitropoulou n° 129 pl. 15. — La tête n'est pas d'origine.

199. Statuette acéphale. Vienne, Kunsthst. Mus. 1718. De Rome. — EA 5018; Bieber, Copies fig. 760.

200. Statuette acéphale. Léros, Mus. Arch. — Benson, J. L., Ancient Leros (1963) 14 pl. 13 a-b.

201. Statuette acéphale. Paphos, Mus. 546. De Nea Paphos. — Mitropoulou n° 133 pl. 15.

202. Statuette acéphale. Toulouse, Mus. Saint-Raymond. — Reinach, RépStat I 294 (1185); Espérandieu, Recueil II 52 n° 931, fig.

203. Torse de statuette. Berlin, Staatl. Mus. Proviendrait d'Ephèse. — Hausmann 2, 130 n° 3; Mitropoulou n° 134 pl. 16.

204. Statuette acéphale. Plovdiv, Mus. Arch. — Mitropoulou n° 135 pl. 15. — Variante: le serpent s'avance horizontalement vers le bras g.

Relief

205. (= Asklepios 251) Fr. d'un relief votif. Bonn, Akad. Kunstmus. B 68. De Chios. — Hausmann 2, 131, Beil. 53, 1. — Fin du IV^e s. av. J.-C. — H. à la dr. d'Asclépios appuyé sur son bâton; attitude et drapé reproduisent fidèlement le type, mais on ne distingue pas le serpent.

Céramique à reliefs

206. (= Asklepios 253) Pélikè «oinophoros». Athènes, marché des ant. — Hausmann 2, 129-138, Beil. 43; Mitropoulou n° 111 pl. 12. Cf. etiam: Asklepios 253*. 255-256. — III^e s. ap. J.-C. — Adaptation du type: il semble qu'H. tienne une phiale dans la main g.

TYPE PITTI: Semblable au type Timgad, avec une pondération inversée.

Ronde-bosse d'époque impériale

207. Statue complète. Florence, Pal. Pitti. — Dütschke, Antike Bildwerke in Oberitalien (1875) 14-15 n° 30; Reinach, RépStat I 292 (1172); EA 227; Wrede, H., Die Antikengärten der del Bufalo bei der Fontana Trevi (1982) 7 et n. 57 pl. 7, 2.

208. Statue. Florence, coll. part. (?) — Mitropoulou n° 104 pl. 12. — Presque identique à la précédente, mais l'himation descend plus bas sur les jambes et le serpent est incomplet.

TYPE CHIARAMONTI: Vêtement, attitude et pondération proches du type précédent mais le bras dr. abaissé, autour duquel s'enroule le serpent, lui maintient la tête résolument éloignée de la phiale tenue dans la main g. L'himation, serré autour de la taille, forme un épais bourrelet.

Ronde-bosse d'époque impériale

209. Statuette complète. Vatican, Mus. Chiaramonti. — EA 1175 A; Amelung, SkulptVatMus I 364 n° 83 pl. 38.

210. Petite statue entière. Rome, Mus. Torlonia 176. — Mitropoulou n° 118 pl. 13.

211. Statuette. Vatican, Mus. Chiaramonti. — Amelung, SkulptVatMus I 366 n° 86 pl. 38; Mitropoulou n° 120 pl. 14. — Le type est altéré par la restauration des bras, qui a maladroitement inversé les attributs.

212. Statuette. Florence, Pal. Corsini lung'Arno 70. — Dütschke, o. c. 207, 117 n° 288; EA 4071.

TYPE NICOSIE: Variante du type Broadlands, avec pondération inversée.

Ronde-bosse d'époque impériale

213. Petite statue acéphale. Nicosie, Cyprus Mus. Sal.St. 17. Du gymnase de Salamine. — Karageorghis, V., Sculptures from Salamis I (1964) 16 n° 6 pl. 14. — I^{er} s. ap. J.-C. — Le serpent qui s'enroule autour de l'avant-bras dr. est d'une grosseur inhabituelle.

214. Statuette acéphale. Vatican, Magazzini. — Kaschnitz, SculptMusVat n° 102 pl. 27. — Réplique très médiocre; bras dr. et main g. brisés.

Relief

215. Relief votif. Thessalonique, Mus. Arch. 1079. De Dion. — Mitropoulou n° 26 pl. 5. — Ép. impériale tardive (?). — A la g. d'Asclépios, H., dans une adaptation simplifiée du type.

D. Têtes isolées

Par commodité l'on a regroupé sous cette rubrique non seulement les représentations isolées de la tête d'H., mais les documents que les hasards de la conservation ont séparés de leur contexte et qui ne peuvent être rapportés à aucun des types répertoriés ci-dessus.

— Représentations certaines

Ronde-bosse

216. Tête colossale provenant d'une statue acrolithe. De l'Asclépieion de Phénées. — Protonotariou-Deilaki, E., ArchDelt 17, 1961-62, Chron. 57-61 pl. 63. — II^e s. av. J.-C. (?) — Faisait partie d'un groupe d'Asclépios assis (restes des deux pieds chaussés de sandales et fragments de doigts) et d'H. debout, dont seule la tête est conservée. Sur la base, sign. du sculpteur athénien Attalos fils de Lacharès. Type matronal, aux cheveux serrés dans une tainia, à l'expression sévère, qui conviendrait bien à une Héra.

Relief

217. Haut-relief en médaillon. Toulouse, Mus. Saint-Raymond. De Martres-Tolosanes. — Espérandieu, Recueil II 32 n° 892, 10. — II^e s. ap. J.-C. — Buste d'H. de face, en chiton, avec le serpent passant derrière son cou. Coiffure à bandeaux ondulés et tainia; visage juvénile mais sévère, directement inspiré d'un type classique.

Lampe

218. Carthage, Mus. 08.30. — Deneauve, J., Lampes de Carthage (1969) n° 970. — II^e-III^e s. ap. J.-C. — Tête d'H. de profil à g.; devant elle apparaît la tête du serpent. Type semblable à celui de 217.

Monnaies

219. AR statères, Métaponte, 400-350 av. J.-C. — Noe, S., The Coinage of Metapontum (rev. ed. 1984) n° 411 (cf. etiam n° 412-413) pl. 30-33. — Av. Tête fém. de profil à dr.; sur la «cassure» du cou, inscr. HYGIEIA. Chevelure maintenue par une tainia qui fait deux fois le tour du crâne, formant sur la nuque une sorte de corymbos. Beau visage pensif de la fin du V^e s. av. J.-C., identique à celui des autres émissions contemporaines de Métaponte représentant Déméter. Rv. Épi de blé.

220. AE, Pergame (Mysie) II^e s. av. J.-C. — BMC Mysia 129, 163 pl. 27, 5; v. Fritze, H., Die Münzen von Pergamon (1910) pl. 23; Lacroix, L., RBNM 97, 1951, 9 pl. 1, 5. — Av. Tête d'H. de profil à dr.; devant, un serpent. Rv. Serpent enroulé autour de l'omphalos; inscr. ΑΣΚΛΗΠΙΟΥ ΚΑΙ ΥΓΕΙΑΣ.

— Représentations incertaines

Ronde-bosse

221. Tête de statue. Athènes, Mus. Nat. 3602. De Tégée. — Dugas, Ch., Le sanctuaire d'Aléa Athéna à Tégée au IV^e s. (1924) 117-124 n° 97 pl. 113-115; Stewart 83-84; Delivorrias/Linfert 286-288 fig. 7-9. — 3^e quart du IV^e s. av. J.-C. — Visage ovale aux traits fins, un peu mous, à l'expression rêveuse; les cheveux tirés horizontalement sur les tempes forment un chignon plat derrière le crâne. La tête était fortement inclinée vers la dr. L'identification avec H. ne repose que sur l'attribution, traditionnelle mais dénuée de toute vraisemblance, à Scopas (voir Commentaire).

222. Tête de statue, brisée à la base du cou. Nicosie, Cyprus Mus. Du gymnase de Salamine. — Karageorghis, o. c. 213, 18-11 n° 2 pl. 8-9. — I^{er} quart du IV^e s. av. J.-C. — Visage ovale, très allongé, avec un menton assez lourd; les cheveux sont remontés sur le sommet du crâne et noués en un gros chignon rond. La tête était légèrement inclinée vers la g. L'identification, suggérée avec prudence par Karageorghis, reste une simple hypothèse.

223. Tête de statue, brisée à la base du cou. Lemnos, Mus. Du Cabirion. — Polacco, L., ASAtene 14-16, 1952-54, 471-475 fig. 1-2. — 2^e moitié du III^e s. av. J.-C. — Évidemment dérivée du même type que la précédente.

224. Tête de statue, brisée au ras du menton. Athènes, Mus. Nat. 190. De l'Asclépieion. — Koepp 265-266 pl. 8; Polacco, o. c. 223, 473-474 fig. 4-5. - IV^e s. av. J.-C. (?) - Le nez est arraché. Visage assez trapu, aux yeux profonds et écartés, à la bouche charnue et sinueuse, au menton volontaire; la chevelure, mal conservée, était coiffée selon le même schéma que sur le document suivant.

225. Tête entière avec le cou, travaillé pour être encastré dans la statue. Athènes, Mus. Nat. 191. - Koepf 266 pl. 9; Polacco, o. c. 223, 474 fig. 6. - Ép. hellénistique (?). - Bien conservée dans l'ensemble, malgré la cassure du nez, cette tête paraît offrir une version un peu affaiblie du type de la précédente; la chevelure, tirée sur le dessus du crâne, se rassemble en un large chignon plat.

E. Représentations perdues, connues seulement par les textes

L'identification du type, quand elle n'est pas strictement impossible, demeurant en pareil cas toujours conjecturale, et cela quelle que soit la vraisemblance de certaines hypothèses (voir Commentaire), on a choisi de regrouper ci-après, systématiquement, toutes les représentations dont l'existence n'est attestée que par les sources écrites.

Ronde-bosse

226. Statue d'H., œuvre de Dionysios d'Argos. - Paus. 5, 26, 2-3. - Vers 460 av. J.-C. - Faisait partie, avec un Asclépios, de la série de statues, très probablement en bronze, dédiée par Mikythos à Olympie, le long du côté g. du temple de Zeus.

227. Statue de culte de l'Asclépieion de Titanè. - Paus. 2, 11, 6. - V^e s. av. J.-C. (?) - A côté de celle d'Asclépios, dont selon Pausanias on ne pouvait déterminer la matière (bois ou métal?) parce que l'on n'en voyait que le visage, les mains et les pieds, tout le reste du corps étant recouvert d'un chiton de laine et d'un himation, se dressait la statue d'H. dont il dit seulement qu'elle était semblable, et également difficile à voir tant elle était recouverte par les boucles de cheveux que lui consacraient les femmes. On peut penser à des statues acrolithes, et il est vraisemblable pour des raisons pratiques (mais on ne peut exclure que les boucles de cheveux aient été accrochées au vêtement d'une statue debout) que celle d'H. au moins était assise.

228. Statue d'H. dédiée sur l'Acropole d'Athènes, près de la statue d'Athéna Hygieia, œuvre de Pyrrhos, dont la base inscrite a été retrouvée (Overbeck n° 906). - Paus. 1, 26, 4. - Date inconnue.

229. Statues d'Asclépios et d'H. en marbre pentélique, œuvres de Scopas, qui se dressaient dans le temple d'Aléa à Tégée, de part et d'autre de la statue d'Athéna. - Paus. 8, 47, 1. - 3^e quart du IV^e s. av. J.-C. - Sur l'appartenance possible du torse 58 à la statue d'H., voir Commentaire.

230. Statues d'Asclépios imberbe et d'H., œuvres de Scopas, dans le temple d'Asclépios à Gortys d'Arcadie. - Paus. 8, 28, 1. - IV^e s. av. J.-C. - Peut-être à rapprocher des groupes 21-22 (voir Commentaire).

231. Statues d'Asclépios et d'H., œuvres de Bryaxis, dans le temple de Zeus Kronios sur l'acropole de Mégare. - Paus. 1, 40, 6. - 2^e moitié du IV^e s. av. J.-C. - Le schéma général de ce groupe nous a peut-être été transmis par le monnayage impérial de Mégare: cf. 150.

232. Groupe d'Asclépios et d'H. dédié par Euthias dans l'Asclépieion de Cos, œuvre de Timarchos et de Céphiosdote le Jeune, fils de Praxitèle. - Hérodas (Herodas) 4, 1-23. - Fin du IV^e s. av. J.-C. - Sans doute à rapprocher du groupe 80 et, en ce qui concerne H., de notre type Broadlands (voir Commentaire).

233. Groupe d'Asclépios et d'H., œuvre de Nikératos, qui se trouvait à l'ép. impériale dans le temple de la Concorde à Rome. - Plin. nat. 34, 80. - Le sculpteur est sans doute à identifier avec un artiste athénien dont l'activité est attestée à Pergame sous le règne d'Eumène II (Fränkel, M., Die Inschriften von Pergamon, Pergamon VIII [1890] n° 132): 1^{re} moitié du II^e s. av. J.-C.

234. Groupe de l'Asclépieion d'Aegion, œuvre de Damophon de Messène. - Paus. 7, 23, 4. - II^e s. av. J.-C. - La structure générale du type nous est sans doute transmise par les monnaies locales (61-62): voir Commentaire.

235. Groupe d'Asclépios assis et d'H. debout, en marbre, sculpté par les Argiens Xénophilos et Straton pour le plus important des Asclépieia d'Argos. - Paus. 2, 23, 4. - Début du I^{er} s. av. J.-C.

236. Statue d'H. à Thespies. - Paus. 9, 26, 8. - Le nom du sculpteur comme la date sont inconnus.

237. Statues en marbre d'Asclépios et d'H. dans le temple d'Asclépios à Corinthe. - Paus. 2, 4, 5. - Date et auteur inconnus.

Peinture

238. Fresque ou tableau représentant Asclépios avec H., Aiglè, Panakeia, Iasô et «le paresseux» - Oknos», œuvre de Nikophanès, élève de Pausias de Sicyone. - Plin. nat. 35, 137. - 2^e moitié du IV^e s. av. J.-C.

COMMENTAIRE

Au terme de cet inventaire, qui ne prétend naturellement pas être complet mais permet au moins de prendre une vue d'ensemble du problème, on serait tenté de dire que l'image d'H. à proprement parler n'existe pas. Ou plutôt qu'elle ne parvient jamais qu'à une existence relative, sans cesse menacée d'absorption dans la typologie banalisée des figures féminines drapées du Second Classicisme. La première cause de cette fragilité iconographique est évidemment le caractère non-mythologique du personnage. Pas plus que celles de la Paix et de la Richesse, la représentation de la Santé ne saurait déborder le domaine de l'allégorie volontariste, et la seule caractérisation anthropomorphe qui lui soit offerte procède encore de la simple logique, selon laquelle la fille préférée du dieu guérisseur ne peut être que la Santé elle-même. Ce n'est d'ailleurs pas un hasard si la première - et peut-être la seule - tentative réussie pour donner un contenu sensible à cette idée abstraite se situe dans la période qui aboutit aussi à l'étrange chef-d'œuvre de Céphiosdote: il y a entre l'Hygie Hope et le groupe d'Eirène et Ploutos non seulement des affinités formelles (Ashmole 11), mais une conception commune de l'allégorie, humanisée par son insertion dans un univers psychologique et affectif. On verra en tout cas que dès la génération suivante, et malgré l'intervention - dont la documentation existante ne permet guère au demeurant de mesurer l'importance - de maîtres comme Scopas et Bryaxis, la personnalité iconographique d'H. commence à s'estomper et à se fondre dans un répertoire formel largement polyvalent.

Ce ne sera d'ailleurs qu'une sorte de retour aux origines: si l'on ne tient pas compte des statues d'Olympie (226) et de Titanè (227), dont la première au moins était sûrement antérieure au milieu du V^e s. mais que nous ne pouvons guère qu'imaginer, les premières représentations connues sont aussi peu caractérisées que possible. Mettons à part le cas des statères de Méta-ponte (219) où il s'agit sans doute en réalité d'une Déméter Hygieia. Il reste que sans les inscriptions qui la désignent sur les vases du P. de Meidias (1-3) ou de son entourage (52) on n'aurait aucune raison d'y reconnaître H., et que les reliefs de la fin du V^e s. (53-55. 137-141) demeurent le plus souvent énigmatiques, tant la référence obligée aux types parthéno-niens rend les figures féminines interchangeables. Le premier critère est évidemment la présence d'Asclépios (que l'on confondrait lui-même aisément, dans certains cas, avec quelque «héros attique» échappé de la frise est), mais la provenance (l'essentiel de la série vient de l'Asclépieion d'Athènes), et la situation relative des personnages peuvent être déterminants. Le principe, énoncé par Hausmann 33-34, selon lequel toute figure féminine représentée seule aux côtés d'Asclépios doit être reconnue pour H., n'est toutefois qu'une hypothèse, au demeurant très vraisemblable. On jugera en revanche bien systématique la distinction établie récemment par M. Meyer, 220, entre une Épiponè toujours assise et une H. qui serait généralement debout: le fait est qu'un type d'H. assise est largement attesté par toutes sortes de documents (1-19). Divers recoupements donnent même à penser qu'il pourrait s'agir d'une représentation ancienne de la déesse. Pour de simples raisons pratiques on imaginera plutôt l'H. de Titanè (227), dont le corps disparaissait sous l'amoncèlement des boucles de cheveux que lui sacrifiaient les femmes, comme une statue assise; or un type monétaire assez largement répandu à l'époque impériale (14-19) nous transmet l'image d'une H. trônante, nourrissant son serpent de la main dr. tandis que du bras g. elle s'accoude au dossier, dans une posture proche du type célèbre de l'«Aphrodite-Olympias» avec lequel L. Beschi, o. c. 4, 432, ■ signalé que l'H. assise du relief de Télémachos, qui par hypothèse doit reproduire un schéma en vigueur à l'époque de la fondation du sanctuaire, n'était pas sans relation. On s'est interrogé (cf. Hausmann 29-32) sur l'origine de la déesse qui vint en 420 s'installer à Athènes avec Asclépios, mais ce fut généralement pour conclure en faveur d'Épidaure, où pourtant la présence d'H. reste insaissable avant le IV^e s. Il faut bien dire que dans ces conditions la vieille théorie de Körte, qui suggérait Titanè (o. c. 249-250), garde toute sa valeur. D'autant que l'étonnante figure, majestueusement assise sur un rocher, portant couronne et sceptre, qui apparaît une fois, vers 410, sur l'hydrie de Londres (1), et que personne ne s'est trop soucié d'expliquer, pourrait y trouver un contexte vraisemblable.

Il est d'ailleurs sans doute significatif que de telles images disparaissent très rapidement pour faire place à un personnage nouveau qui est probablement une création attique, aussi bien du point de vue religieux que du point de vue iconographique: celui de la fille d'Asclépios, debout derrière le trône de son père dans une attitude à la fois déférente et familière (21-27) ou l'assistant lorsqu'il accueille debout un groupe d'adorants (35. 48. 137). Mais il est visible que cette image virginale met quelque temps à se constituer: faute de la pourvoir d'attributs spécifiques (l'absence totale du serpent, sauf peut-être sur 48, est remarquable dans la série de l'Asclépieion), ou d'un vêtement particulier, les sculpteurs de reliefs paraissent avoir choisi peu à peu la voie d'une caractérisation psychologique. Ce n'est pas en tout cas avant le milieu du IV^e s. que le maintien modeste et réservé des premiers reliefs fait place à des postures nonchalantes (28-34. 57), voire désinvoltes (36), où semble s'exprimer l'assurance d'être la préférée du père de famille. Le rythme de ces figures, qui par certains aspects - le bras levé notamment, qui en garantit l'équilibre - ne peuvent guère passer pour les reproductions directes d'un type statuaire, évoque toutefois de manière si frappante le Pothos de Scopas que l'on ne peut s'empêcher de penser au groupe de Gortys d'Arcadie (230). A la différence des statues de Tégée (229) qui étaient placées de part et d'autre de l'effigie archaïque d'Athéna, celles de Gortys pouvaient constituer une composition unitaire dans laquelle H. debout s'appuyait contre l'épaule d'Asclépios assis, et dont les deux groupes de Copenhague et du Vatican (21-22) nous conservent peut-être, au moins pour l'essentiel, la structure. Le premier, que l'on s'accorde à considérer comme le plus fidèle à l'original (Poulsen, CatNyCarlsberg Glypt 88), présente un Asclépios imberbe, ce qui était précisément le cas de celui de Scopas. L'identification reste donc fort séduisante; et elle expliquerait la rapide diffusion, sous des formes plus ou moins adaptées, de ce type de figure aux jambes croisées, en appui latéral, dans l'iconographie d'H. vers le milieu du IV^e s. Que le groupe entier n'ait pas été reproduit ne doit pas étonner: les sculpteurs de reliefs pratiquaient de toute façon un large éclectisme, et l'Asclépios trônant auquel ils associent régulièrement H. s'inspire directement de la statue chryséléphantine de Thrasymédès de Paros (Holtzmann 891) qui était seule dans le temple d'Épidaure (Paus. 2, 27, 2). Il est évident que ce type barbu et paternel convenait mieux que le type imberbe (à propos duquel on ne peut s'empêcher d'évoquer l'hypothèse jadis avancée par Körte 250 n. 3, d'une H. péloponnésienne épouse d'Asclépios) à l'image nouvelle qu'à Athènes on entendait donner de la relation entre les deux divinités. Au demeurant, même si cette série de figures appuyées trouve bien son origine dans une création scopasique, il s'agit toujours d'adaptations libres où purent se combiner diverses influences. La plus éloignée du modèle, que présentent les reliefs 31 et 32, a d'ailleurs été justement rapprochée d'une tête de statue trouvée à l'Asclépieion d'Athènes (224), dont le style renverrait plutôt à Léocharès qu'à Scopas.

Cet effort constant pour créer une image d'H., qui marque en Attique toute la première moitié du IV^e s., a dû de toute façon susciter bien d'autres créations de la statuaire que celles dont les textes anciens nous ont conservé la trace. A part la petite statue d'Épidaure 20, certainement due à l'atelier de Timothéos, mais qui reste étrangement isolée, le type Hope (160-187) en est la preuve la plus éclatante: car il est à la fois le plus réussi, l'un des mieux diffusés et sans doute le plus difficile à attribuer à un maître, voire à un atelier connus. Étudié par Curtius, qui évoquait la statue de Scopas à Tégée, puis par Ashmole, qui croyait reconnaître l'original dans une tête fragmentaire de l'Acropole et le rapprochait de l'Eirène de Céphissodote, le type a été plus souvent considéré comme une création péloponnésienne (cf. Kabus-Jahn 85-87), peut-être sortie du même atelier de bronziers – et vers la même époque, c'est-à-dire dans le premier quart du IV^e s. – que l'original de l'Asclépios Giustini (cf. Holtzmann 894). Si vraiment, comme le supposait K. A. Neugebauer (78. BerlWPr 1921), le type Giustini nous transmet l'image de la statue de culte de l'Asclépieion d'Athènes, il est tentant dans ces conditions de lui adjoindre l'«Hygie Hope», dont le type apparaît à ses côtés sur le relief de Cambridge 184, et dont deux répliques au moins (164-165) lui sont associées par leur lieu de trouvaille. C'était d'ailleurs la solution retenue par Neugebauer (FuF 10, 1934, 109), mais elle a généralement suscité plus que des réserves. Kabus-Jahn 86-87, tout en admettant le principe d'une origine commune, considérait le type Hope comme un peu plus récent et l'attribuait à un maître différent. Heiderich, 28, contestait le rapprochement et proposait de voir dans l'Asclépios Giustini la réplique d'une statue isolée, œuvre de Colotès, mentionnée par Strabon (8, 3, 4 p. 337) à Cylène d'Élide. H. von Steuben enfin (Helbig⁴ II n° 1774) soulignait la fragilité de la thèse péloponnésienne comme les incertitudes de la chronologie, et situait la création de l'Asclépios à Athènes vers 350. B. Vierendeel-Schlörb, qui a dernièrement repris toute la question (KatSkulptMünchen II 216-224), aboutit à l'hypothèse – vraiment bien subtile – d'un sculpteur venu du nord-est du Péloponnèse travailler à Athènes dans un atelier attique proche de Céphissodote: encore qu'un peu inattendue, la comparaison qu'elle établit entre l'Asclépios Giustini et l'Eirène n'est pas du tout gratuite, et bien qu'elle écarte catégoriquement (o. c. 223 n. 20) l'H. Hope du dossier en l'attribuant à Naucydès, on ne pourra s'empêcher de constater que le rapprochement avec Céphissodote nous ramène en fait, par un détour singulier, aux premières intuitions d'Ashmole concernant le style de celle-ci. L'hypothèse d'une double création attique, dans le style classicisant qui se développe vers 380-370 en réaction contre les excès du «style riche», et sans doute destinée au nouvel Asclépieion, apparaît donc en fin de compte comme la plus simple et la plus plausible. Mais il va de soi que la question reste ouverte, et il est probable que, comme l'Asclépios qui lui était peut-être associé, cette figure gracieuse et sobre, qui est sans nul doute l'une des créations majeures de la première moitié du IV^e s., l'une des rares images d'H. en tout cas où le serpent, par son intégration à la fois rigoureuse et sensible à la composition, apparaisse vraiment comme un animal familier, non comme un attribut rapporté, n'a pas fini d'alimenter les controverses.

Il est d'autant plus décevant de devoir la laisser dans l'anonymat que dans les cas où la tradition littéraire nous a transmis des noms de sculpteurs, la documentation archéologique est au contraire pauvre ou incertaine. S'il paraît à peu près assuré que le groupe reproduit sur les monnaies de Mégare (150) nous renvoie en gros l'image des statues de Bryaxis (231), l'absence de répliques précises ne permet pas d'en dire beaucoup plus. Le seul document relativement ancien qui puisse se rapporter à ce groupe (153) est d'un style précieux qui trahit la réélaboration néo-classique, et il n'est pas exclu qu'il ait subi l'influence d'un autre groupe, celui dont le Diptyque Gaddi (38), à la fin de l'Antiquité, reproduit encore l'image avec une étonnante précision. Adjoignant à un Asclépios du type Pitti (Holtzmann 895) une H. accoudée dérivée du schéma de l'Aphrodite à la tortue, ce groupe a été identifié de manière convaincante par G. Heiderich, 96-98, avec l'œuvre de Nikératos (233), créée à Pergame dans la première moitié du II^e s. av. J.-C., puis transportée à Rome où elle se trouvait au temps de Plinius dans le Temple de la Concorde: le fait qu'une H. accoudée semblable à l'H. Gaddi se retrouve sur des monnaies romaines de la fin de la République (39) ne peut évidemment que renforcer la vraisemblance de cette hypothèse. Mais il est permis de se demander si certains des traits caractéristiques du groupe de Nikératos – notamment la position des deux personnages, tournés l'un vers l'autre, et le motif du serpent passant derrière le dos d'H. et repris par la main dr. levée – n'étaient pas empruntés à l'œuvre de Bryaxis: une série de gemmes thraces (154-157), où H. n'est pas accoudée mais tient le serpent à peu près comme sur le Diptyque Gaddi, nous transmet peut-être plus directement qu'aucun autre document la structure du groupe de Mégare.

Il n'est pas certain qu'on puisse en dire autant du relief de Tégée (59) où Heiderich 68-69, puis Delivrias/Linfert 283-288, ont proposé de retrouver l'image des statues de Scopas (229). S'il faut y voir une reproduction fidèle, comme le pensent Delivrias et Linfert, puisque c'est sur son seul témoignage qu'ils fondent leur identification du torse 58 comme un fragment de l'original, le moins que l'on puisse dire est que le maître parien n'avait pas mis dans cette création beaucoup de son tumultueux génie. Et il est difficile de ne pas partager le scepticisme exprimé par Marcadé 323-324. Mais ce relief, même s'il est relativement ancien, est de facture très médiocre et ne nous renvoie sans doute que le reflet simplifié et banalisé de modèles dont un relief fragmentaire de Sparte, datable du III^e s. av. J.-C. (60), suggère qu'ils ont pu être sensiblement plus animés. Il resterait à savoir si l'Asclépios – du type Museo Nuovo, généralement tenu (cf. Holtzmann 896) pour une adaptation éclectique du début de l'époque hellénistique – qui y figure peut au moins dériver d'une création de Scopas: ce n'est pas évident. Et quant à la figure d'H., dont le buste est perdu, elle n'apporte rien de plus au dossier, dont la pièce maîtresse est en fin de compte le torse 58. Étant entendu que le relief 59 n'a d'autre valeur qu'iconographique, seule une confrontation stylistique de ce fragment avec les sculptures du temple paraît en effet pouvoir fonder son attribution à Scopas, qui demeure séduisante, mais malheureusement peu démontrable. Quant à la fameuse tête du Musée National (221), on nous permettra de ne la mentionner ici que pour mémoire: comme son identification avec l'H. de Scopas, dont Ch. Dugas d'emblée avait montré la gratuité, semble avoir la vie dure, il convient de redire ici nettement, après Stewart 83, que ce type d'Aphrodite praxitélisante n'a strictement rien à voir, ni à Tégée, ni ailleurs, avec ce que nous connaissons de l'œuvre du maître.

À côté de l'H. Hope, dont le type Sparte (188-190) paraît être une simple variante, il faut peut-être situer, parmi les créations anonymes de la première moitié du IV^e s., le type Florence (114-115), faiblement attesté mais dont G. Mansuelli, ScultUffl 45, soulignait la relation étroite avec l'Eirène de Céphissodote. Quant aux statues isolées comme 40, qui reprend fidèlement le type de l'Héra Borghèse, ou 42, qui paraît reproduire un prototype des environs de 360 (cf. p. ex. Süsserott, H. K., Griech. Plastik des 4. Jh. v. Chr. [1938] pl. 4, 1), il est évidemment malaisé de dire s'il s'agit de tentatives anciennes, demeurées sans lendemain, ou d'adaptations ponctuelles dues aux ateliers de copistes romains. On penchera plutôt pour la seconde hypothèse, car l'H. de Byblos (43) nous donne un clair exemple de ces détournements de types. Le cas du type Torlonia (112-113) est moins simple: attitude et pondération évoquent là encore l'Héra Borghèse, mais avec un drapé qui ne trouverait guère de parallèles avant les environs de 330. Peut-être faut-il y voir la création d'un atelier conservateur de la seconde moitié du IV^e s.

C'est en tout cas dans le troisième quart du siècle que l'on placera l'apparition du type Melchett (144-149), dont il est difficile de savoir s'il est le reflet d'un groupe statuaire, dont l'Asclépios aurait été une réédition du type Giustini, ou s'il procède seulement de l'éclectisme des sculpteurs de reliefs. Le type Héraklion (116-123), dont les diverses variantes doivent s'échelonner durant la même période, doit dériver quant à lui d'un prototype qui s'efforçait de renouveler le motif du serpent tout en demeurant dans l'esprit du type Hope; mais la diversité de ses répliques montre suffisamment qu'il ne parvint pas à s'imposer, submergé sans doute, dès le début du dernier quart du siècle, par l'énorme succès du type Broadlands.

Largelement attesté par toutes les catégories de documents (63-108) et inlassablement reproduit jusqu'à la fin de l'Antiquité, celui-ci faisait évidemment partie d'un groupe, et il est d'ailleurs régulièrement associé à un même type d'Asclépios dont le modèle est le type Éleusis (Holtzmann 894), bien daté par la dédicace d'Épicratès des environs de 320 et considéré comme une adaptation du type Giustini dans le style praxitélisant. La figure d'H., en dépit de son élégance (que seules quelques répliques laissent entrevoir), n'est elle-même qu'une variante d'un type connu par une statue de New York (Richter, MetMusSculpt n° 126 pl. 96), datable des environs de 330 (Kabus-Jahn 44), dont rien n'autorise à penser qu'il avait été conçu pour représenter H. L'intervention du sculpteur a donc surtout consisté à modifier légèrement le mouvement des bras pour ajouter le serpent. Il n'est pas sans intérêt de savoir que cet habile adaptateur était probablement, comme l'a établi Heiderich 58-63, l'un des fils de Praxitèle: l'analyse du groupe de Moscou (80) permet en effet d'y voir une reproduction fidèle du groupe sculpté par Timarchos et Céphissodote le Jeune pour le sanctuaire de Cos (232). Le style des meilleures répliques comme la date qu'imposent aussi bien la dédicace d'Épicratès que la dépendance par rapport à la statue de New York – les environs de 320 – conviennent parfaitement, et cette identification, qui peut être tenue pour pratiquement acquise, permet de comprendre la popularité considérable et la vaste diffusion des deux types. Elle rend compte également du nombre particulièrement important des types d'H. qui ne s'expliquent guère que comme des adaptations plus ou moins réussies du type Broadlands, et dont la création peut n'être pas postérieure à la première moitié du III^e s.: les types Belvédère (191-194), Nicosie (213-215), Timgad (109-111), Pitti (207-208) et Chiaramonti (209-212) ne sont en effet qu'autant de variations sur la pondération et sur la position du bras dr., et donc du serpent par rapport à la phiale, dans un cadre général qui reste celui du type Broadlands.

La fin du IV^e s. allait cependant connaître encore une création relativement originale, en tout cas indépendante de la série issue du groupe de Cos. Le type Munich (195-206), défini par Hausmann 2, 129-138, présente un drapé très particulier où l'himation recouvre complètement la main g. Ce motif, qui se retrouve sur la quasi-totalité des répliques, est certainement d'origine (la présence d'un trou de goujon sur l'un des exemplaires, 196, ne suffit pas à prouver, comme le voulait Hausmann, l'existence primitive d'une phiale) et constitue une variation importante par rapport au thème traditionnel d'H. nourricière. Mais le fait est en lui-même significatif d'une iconographie dépourvue de substance: le serpent ne joue plus ici que le rôle d'un attribut, d'un simple signe permettant de reconnaître H. au milieu d'une série de figures féminines drapées dont elle ne se distinguerait pas autrement. L'association de ce type avec un Asclépios sur un relief de Bonn (205), en un groupe d'ailleurs harmonieux, invitait a priori à chercher une identification possible. Mais l'Asclépios du relief paraît reproduire là encore le type Éleusis: il est donc probable qu'il s'agit seulement d'une composition éclectique et que l'on doit renoncer, comme le faisait sagement Hausmann, à mettre un nom de sculpteur derrière cette ultime création du IV^e s.

Il faut attendre ensuite, semble-t-il, un bon siècle pour voir apparaître de véritables créations. Le type Aegion (61-62) reflète sans nul doute le groupe de Damophon de Messène (234), mais la documentation, étrangement limitée aux monnaies locales, ne nous en laisse apercevoir que la structure générale. Notons seulement qu'il revenait à un schéma courant sur les reliefs attiques de la première moitié du IV^e s.: Asclépios trônant, H. debout devant un autel. C'était aussi le cas des statues de l'Asclépieion d'Argos, dues à Xénophilos et Straton (235), dont Pausanias donne une description assez précise, mais que l'on n'a pu jusqu'à présent mettre en relation avec aucun des documents livrés par la fouille: pas plus que l'Asclépios imberbe trouvé en 1972 (→ Asklepios 31*), notre H. 126, qui semble être une sorte de variante du type Héraklion, ne peut en être rapprochée. En tout cas l'impressionnante trouvaille de Phénéos (216) est venue compléter cette série péloponnésienne: le groupe colossal d'Attalos comportait lui aussi un Asclépios assis et une H. debout, dont la tête est l'un des rares documents sûrs que nous possédions en la matière. On ne jugera pas indifférent qu'au II^e s. encore cette H. arcadienne soit d'un type matronal affirmé, dont quelques documents isolés (217-218) paraissent d'ailleurs attester la longue fortune en Occident à l'époque impériale. L'inspiration des milieux pergaméniens semble avoir été tout autre: un type monétaire du II^e s. av. J.-C. montre une tête d'H. à l'expression juvénile et souriante (220), et on a vu que très probablement le Diptyque Gaddi nous renvoyait fidèlement l'image du groupe de Nikératos, où les références au Classicisme attique de la fin du V^e s., notamment à l'iconographie d'Aphrodite, sont sensibles. En revanche le drapé tumultueux des deux statues isolées de Lambèse (41) et surtout d'Antioche (125) paraît refléter l'existence, dans la première moitié du II^e s., de réinterprétations purement pergaméniennes des schémas légués par le IV^e s. finissant. Elles forment un frappant contraste avec la curieuse statue de Syracuse (124), dont la pose alanguie et le drapé linéaire trahissent l'adaptation classicisante des mêmes schémas, en milieu attique vraisemblablement, et au moins cinquante ans plus tard. Il reste que ce ne sont pas ces variations hellénistiques qui assurent à l'inconsistant personnage d'H. sa surprenante longévité iconographique: les images du couple protecteur qui s'imposeront jusqu'à la fin de l'Antiquité à la conscience populaire, et dont témoignent de manière si frappante les reliefs et les gemmes thraces (88-95, 154-155) ainsi que l'extraordinaire stèle gravée d'Izmir (159), étaient déjà fixées avant la fin du IV^e s. av. J.-C.

FRANCIS CROISSANT

HYGIEIA (IN THRACIA)

Le culte d'H., toujours associée à Asclépios (→ Asklepios [in Thracia]) et parfois aussi à → Telesphoros, est bien attesté en Thrace à l'époque impériale, surtout dans l'ouest du pays. Les effigies d'H. sur les monnaies frappées par les grandes villes des deux provinces de Thrace et de Mésie Inférieure suivent les types iconographiques gréco-romains (p. ex. à Bizya: → Hygieia 105), et c'est uniquement sur les reliefs votifs que l'on peut reconnaître des traits originaux, propres à la Thrace. Dans les inscriptions, qui proviennent des grands sanctuaires du pays tout entier, le nom des deux divinités est souvent suivi d'une épithète régionale ou locale: Zusōrhnoi, Zumōrhnoi, Σαλδηνοί.

BIBLIOGRAPHIE: Cončev (Tsontchev), D., Le sanctuaire thrace près de Batkun (1941); Dobruski, V., AIM 1, 1907, 3-86; Düll, S., Die Götterkulte Nordmakedoniens (1977) n° 182-200; Ljubenova, V., Svetilište pri Pernik, Sanctuaria Thracorum, Monumenta Thraciae antiquae II (1980) 15-84.

CATALOGUE

I. Iconographie d'inspiration gréco-romaine

A. Hygie seule

1. Statue en marbre. Pernik, Mus. Hist. 671. Du sanctuaire thrace près de Pernik. - Ljubenova 130-131 fig. 147-148. - II^e-III^e s. ap. J.-C. - H. debout, la tête légèrement tournée à g., la jambe dr. en faible retrait et fléchie au genou (long chiton dénudant l'épaule dr., himation passant autour du corps et rejeté sur l'épaule et la main g.). Autour de l'avant-bras dr. s'enroule un serpent.

Cf. etiam des statues et statuettes: → Hygieia 68 (type Broadlands). 204; des gemmes avec H. seule: → Hygieia 157-158.

B. Hygie et Asclépios

2. (= Asklepios [in Thracia] 9 avec bibl.) Relief votif en marbre. Sofia, Mus. Arch. Nat. 3434. Du sanctuaire thrace de Glava Panega. - II^e-III^e s. ap. J.-C. - H. debout de face (long chiton ceinturé, himation enveloppant le bas du corps, passant dans le dos et revenant sur l'épaule et le bras g.), tenant de la main g. une phiale vers laquelle un serpent, enroulé autour de l'avant-bras dr., tend la tête. A dr. Asclépios debout. Inscr.

Cf. etiam des gemmes: → Hygieia 155-156.

C. Hygie, Asclépios et Télesphore

Reliefs votifs en marbre

3.* (= Asklepios [in Thracia] 15 avec bibl.) Varna, Mus. Arch. II 1462. De Bjelopoljane (dép. Kărdžali). - II^e-III^e s. ap. J.-C. - H. debout comme ci-dessus; à dr. Asclépios, au milieu Télesphore et, au-dessus de sa tête, un grand serpent enroulé. Dans les angles inf. deux petites figures masculines. Inscr. grecque.

4.* (= Asklepios [in Thracia] 16 avec bibl.) Kjustendil, Mus. 13. De Kjustendil. - II^e-III^e s. ap. J.-C. - H. debout comme ci-dessus: à dr. Asclépios, au milieu Télesphore. Dédicace KYPIOIE [AEKAH]ΠIO KAI YTEIA.

Un grand nombre de reliefs provenant du sanctuaire de Glava Panega portent des représentations analogues (cf. Dobruski), qui sont très rares en revanche dans les sanctuaires de Batkun (cf. Cončev) et de Pernik (cf. Ljubenova).

5. (= Asklepios [in Thracia] 18*, = Hygieia 88 - avec bibl.) Sofia, Mus. Arch. Nat. 3773. Du sanctuaire thrace de Glava Panega. - Ag. H. selon le schéma habituel, à dr. Asclépios; en haut, entre leurs têtes, le petit Télesphore. Dans l'angle inf. dr., une sphère. On retrouve le même schéma sur quelques reliefs provenant du sanctuaire de Batkun (cf. Cončev): → Hygieia 94.

Cf. etiam des reliefs votifs: → Hygieia 86-87 (= Asklepios [in Thracia] 17*). 89 (= Asklepios [in Thracia] 19*). 90. 94-95; une monnaie de Bizya: → Hygieia 105.

II. Iconographie thrace

A. Asclépios, Hygie et le Cavalier thrace (→ Heros equitans)

6. (= Asklepios [in Thracia] 23 avec bibl.) Relief votif en marbre. Plovdiv, Mus. Arch. D'Isvorovo (dép. Stara Zagora). - II^e-III^e s. ap. J.-C. - Dans la partie dr. du relief, Asclépios à dr. et H. à g., représentés de la manière habituelle. Dans la partie g. un Cavalier thrace s'avance vers la dr., tenant une patère dans la main dr. Au centre, entre H. et le Cavalier, un autel enflammé.

B. Cavalier thrace avec dédicace à Hygie et Asclépios

7. (= Asklepios [in Thracia] 28* avec bibl.) Relief votif en marbre. Sofia, Mus. Arch. Nat. 3425. Du sanctuaire thrace de Glava Panega. - II^e-III^e s. ap. J.-C. - Cavalier thrace allant vers la dr. Devant le cheval un autel, derrière lui un arbre autour duquel s'enroule un serpent; à dr. une femme debout de face, vêtue d'un chiton deux fois ceinturé. Dédicace KYPIO AEKAH-ΠIO KAI YTEIA ΣΟΛΛΗΝΟΙΣ...

8. (= Asklepios [in Thracia] 27 avec bibl.) Relief votif en marbre. Plovdiv, Mus. Arch. 2284. Du sanctuaire de Batkun. - II^e-III^e s. ap. J.-C. - Cavalier thrace s'avancant vers la dr. Devant le cheval une femme debout de face, vêtue d'un long chiton et d'un himation, la tête voilée. Dédicace AEKAHΠIO ZYAMYZAPHNO.

Représentation analogue sur un relief de Batkun: Cončev 45 n° 6 fig. 136.

COMMENTAIRE

Les types iconographiques d'H. sont illustrés en Thrace par des reliefs votifs et très rarement par des statues de marbre. Ces dernières suivent les schémas grecs beaucoup plus fidèlement que les reliefs, qui proviennent de sanctuaires thraces et présentent des traits originaux de l'iconographie locale d'H.

H. n'est figurée seule que dans la statuaire (1). Elle est le plus souvent représentée avec Asclépios, parfois aussi avec Télesphore (2-5).

Elle est conventionnellement vêtue d'un long chiton et d'un himation qui entoure son corps et revient sur l'épaule et le bras g. Sa main g. tient une phiale vers laquelle un serpent, enroulé autour de l'avant-bras dr., avance la tête.

Sur les documents d'inspiration plus proprement thrace, H. est représentée comme la Déesse Mère thrace, associée au Cavalier thrace syncrétisé avec Asclépios (6-8).

ZLATOZARA GOČEVA

HYGIEIA/SALUS, VALETUDO

→ Hygieia, → Salus, → Valetudo

HYLAIOS

(Υλαίος «Waldmann», von ὕλη «Wald», lat.: Hylaeus) Einer der → Kentauroi, der nach der ikonographischen Überlieferung an dem Kampf gegen → Kaineus wie auch gegen → Herakles auf dem Berg Pholoe teilnahm.

LITERARISCHE QUELLEN: Obwohl H. schon im 6. Jh. v. Chr. bekannt war, wird er erst in hellenistischen und besonders römischen Quellen erwähnt und zwar im Zusammenhang mit den Sagen der → Atalante (Kall. h. 3, 221; Apollod. bibl. 3 [106] 9, 2; Prop. 1, 1, 13; Ov. ars 2, 191) und dem Kentaurenkampf, wobei er von → Herakles (Verg. georg. 2, 457; Hor. c. 2, 12, 5-6) oder von → Theseus (Serv. Aen. 8, 294) getötet wurde. Bei Verg. Aen. 8, 294, wird nicht erwähnt, in welchem Kampf Herakles den H. erlegte, da aber der Kentaure → Pholoe ebenfalls genannt wird, ist zu schließen, daß der Kampf auf Pholoe gemeint ist. Bei Nonn. Dion. 17, 200-207 wird H. auf dem Indienzug des → Dionysos von Orontes getötet.

BIBLIOGRAPHIE: v. Geisau, H., KIPauly II (1967) 1265 s. v. «Hylaios»; Sittig, E., RE VIII 3 (1914) 109 s. v. «Hylaios I»; Stoll, H. W., MLI (1884-90) s. v. «Hylaios I».

Attisch schwarzfigurige Vasen

1. (= Hasbolos 1* mit Lit.) Volutenkrater, sog. François-Vase. Florenz, Mus. Arch. 4209. - ABV 76, 1; 682; Kleitias; Add 21. - Um 570-560 v. Chr. - Hals, Seite B. 2. Zone: Kentaurenkampf. 3. Gruppe: H. (HYAΛΙΟΣ) nach l., einen Ast haltend, und die Kentauren Akrios und → Hasbolos versuchen Kaineus in die Erde zu schlagen.

2. (= Achilleus 189 [Seite A], = Hasbolos 2* [Seite B] mit Lit.) Kantharos. Berlin (West), Staatl. Mus. F 1737. - Para 72, 1: Soklesmaler; Add 49. -

Um 550 v. Chr. – Seite B: H. (ΥΑΛΙΟΣ) mit einem Ast und → Petraios galoppieren nach r., um → Herakles zu erschlagen. In der Mitte Herakles nach r. gegen Hasbolos.

Die Identifikation des H. auf 1 und 2 wird nur durch die beigelegten Inschriften ermöglicht, da er von anderen Kentauren nicht zu unterscheiden ist.

STYLIANOS E. KATAKIS

HYLAS

(Υλᾱς; Hylas, Hyllas, Hyllos – alternate spellings due to conflation or confusion with → Hyllos I, son of Heracles). Son of Theiodamas (and the nymph Menodice, daughter of → Orion), Theiomenes, Keyx, or Heracles (the latter due also to confusion with Hyllos). → Heracles raised the boy from childhood and in many sources is not only his companion, but his lover. H. accompanied Heracles during his adventures with the → Argonautai. When the Argo had come ashore in the Propontis (Kios, Mysia) because Heracles had broken his oar, and the heroes made ready for a meal, H. went in search of water. Upon finding a spring (river or grotto), he was overcome and pulled into the water by a water-nymph (or nymphs who are sometimes associated with Artemis) as he went to draw water. His cry for help was heard by Heracles (and Polyphemus, son of Elatus) who searched for the youth, believing H. to have been overcome by robbers or wild beasts, but the search was unsuccessful. Heracles' distress caused him to prolong the search, and his grief and calls for H. became proverbial.

LITERARY SOURCES: Although the myth is known in literature as early as the 5th cent. B. C. (Hellen., FGH 4 F 131), it was most popular with Hellenistic and Roman writers. It may have been used earlier since Schol. Apoll. Rhod. 1, 1357 says the story was given by Kinaithon, the epic poet, in his Herakleia (Davies EGFp. 142; Bernabé PEGF 6), but the poet's name has sometimes been emended to read Konon, a late aetiological writer, because Schol. Apoll. Rhod. 1, 1165 (FGH 26 F 2) refers to Konon in his Herakleia. The earliest full accounts are given by Apoll. Rhod. 1, 1171–1357 and Theokr. 13. The former tells us that Heracles took the child from his father's (Theiodamas) house after Heracles had killed Theiodamas for refusing to give up the steer with which Theiodamas was ploughing. Both poets relate how the Argonautai departed and left the searching Heracles behind. Later writers give different variations. In Orph. Arg. 639–657 H. does not go for water, but rather is detained at a grotto by nymphs after he became lost in the forest while secretly following Heracles who was hunting, while in Val. Fl. 3, 481–740 H. accompanies Heracles while hunting, but pursues on his own a stag sent by Juno which leads him to the spring and the nymphs. In the Schol. Bernensia Verg. ed. 6, 43 H. accompanies Heracles in a search for wood to make a new oar. Nikandros (frg. 48 Schneider) says he was transformed into an echo, while Prop. 1, 20, 49–50 reports that Heracles' calls for Hylas are answered only by echoes (cf. Schol. Aristoph. Plutus 1127). In some sources the nymphs do not play a role at all, as H. is said either to have fallen off the ship and drowned (Schol. Bernensia Verg. ed. 6, 43), or to have fallen into the pool of water and drowned (Onasos, Amazonika, FGH 41 F 1 and Serv. Aen. 1, 619).

Polyphemus, the son of Elatus, is an important figure in many accounts. He can be the lover of H. instead of Heracles (Euphorion frg. 76 Powell and Sostrates Argivus, FGH 310 F 15), or he is left behind to search for H. (Nikandros frg. 48 Schneider). He is sometimes credited with founding the city of Kios (Apoll. Rhod. 1, 1321–2; Apollod. bibl. 1, 9, 19).

Zetes and Calais, the → Boreadai, also occasionally play a part in the story. Prop. 1, 20, 25–31 lists them as the initial pursuers of Hylas who attempt to embrace him and steal kisses, and in Apoll. Rhod. 1, 1298–1309 they are the agents who persuade the Argonautai not to return to fetch Heracles.

In other sources H. is connected with local cult. Nikandros (frg. 48 Schneider) says that the people of the area still sacrifice to H. and the priest calls his name three times which is answered three times by an echo. Strabon 12, 4, 3 p. 564 reports that the locals hold a festival in which they process through the mountains calling for H.

BIBLIOGRAPHY: Balty, J., RDAC 1988, 210–213, 216–217; Blazquez, J. M., «Mosaicos Hispanos del Bajo Imperio», ArEspArq 50/51, 1977/78, 269–294; Croisille, J.-M., Poésie et art figuré de Néron aux Flaviens. Recherches sur l'iconographie et la correspondance des arts à l'époque impériale, Coll. Latomus 179 (1982) 148–151; Grünhagen, W., Der Schatzfund von Groß-Bodungen (1954) 53–57; Huxley, G. L., «Thracian Hylas», JHS 109, 1989, 185–186; Koller, H., «Narziss oder Hylas?», ZAK 33, 1976, 94–101; Lancha, J., «L'iconographie d'Hylas dans les mosaïques romaines», in III Coll. Int. sul mosaico antico, Ravenna 1980 (1983) II 381–392; Ling, R., «Hylas in Pompeian Art», MEFRA 91, 1979, 773–816; Robert, Heldensage II 836–842; Seeliger, K., MLI 2 (1886–90) 2792–2796 s. v. «Hylas»; Sittig, E., REIX 1 (1914) 110–115 s. v. «Hylas»; Thouvenot, R., Maisons de Volubilis: le palais dit de Gordien et la maison à la mosaïque de Vénus, PSAM 12 (1958) 69–74; Türk, G., De Hyla (Breslauer Philologische Abhandlungen VI) (1895); idem, «Zu den Darstellungen des Hylas», JdI 12, 1897, 86–91 (= Türk 2); Voegtli, Heldenepen 138–139.

CATALOGUE

A. Hylas alone, going to draw water

ROMAN

1.* Wall Painting. Stabiae, Villa Varano. – RM 84, 1977, 61 fig. 5 pl. 32, 2; Ling 781 fig. 2, 11 pl. 7. – About 55–79 A. D. – H. in three-quarter view goes l., a jug in his extended r. hand. The figure is now faded and nearly lost.

2.* Mosaic. Tunis, Bardo A 293. From Henchir-Thina (Thaenae), public baths southwest of lighthouse. – Gauckler, P., in Cat. Mus. Alaoui, suppl. 1

(1910) pl. 18, 2; Yacoub, M., Le Musée du Bardo (1969) 122; Dunbabin, Mosaics 273. – Late 3rd cent. A. D. – H. (chlamys, spear in l. hand, jug in r.) stretches to the l. to draw water from a spring; his r. knee rests on the ground; the l. leg is extended backwards.

Coins of Kios (Bithynia)

AE. – Voegtli, Heldenepen 138–139 pl. 24r. – Rev.: H. (chlamys, jug in l. hand) goes r., l. leg bent at knee, r. arm extended back:

3. Severus Alexander (222–238 A. D.). – RecGén 325, 87.

4. Maximinus (235–238 A. D.). – RecGén 326, 97.

5.* Tranquillina (241–244 A. D.). – RecGén 328, 110.

6. Volusianus (251–253 A. D.). – RecGén 330, 125; SNG v. Aulock 518.

B. Hylas attacked by the nymphs

ROMAN

Wall Paintings

7.* Pompeii IX 7, 16. – Schefold, WP 268; Schefold, VergP 88 pl. 11, 2; Herbig, R., RM 69, 1962, pl. 61, 2; Ling pl. 1; Schefold/Jung, SBIV 206 fig. 253. – About 15 B. C.–20 A. D. – H. (jug in r. hand) stands ankle deep in water surrounded by three nymphs. He attempts to go r., but they restrain him. The figures are small and set into a landscape. A reclining woman (nymph or → Echo?) on the r. behind and above them observes the action. H. and the nymphs are now lost from the painting.

8. Pompeii I 7, 19. – Maiuri, A. Le pitture delle case di M. Fabius Amandio, del Sacerdos Amandus e di P. Cornelius Tegetes (MonPitt III, Pompei II) (1938) 30 fig. 23; Schefold, WP 36; Ling pl. 2. – About 40–50 A. D. – H. (jug in l. hand) attempts to move r. but is restrained by three nymphs who surround him. The head and shoulders of a male onlooker (Polyphemus? or more likely Heracles) appears on the upper l. above the wall of rock behind them.

9. Pompeii VI 13, 19 (House of Sextus Pompeius Axiochus). – Türk 2, pl. 4; Schefold, WP 131; Croisille pl. 68, 2; Ling 778 fig. 1. – About 40–50 A. D. – H. (chlamys, jug in l. hand) attempts to go r., but is restrained by three nymphs on the l. Two stand and grab his arms and shoulders, while the third, waist deep in the water, grabs his r. leg; the painting is now faded and known only from a drawing.

10.* Naples, Mus. Naz. 8882. From Pompeii VII 4, 62 (Casa delle Forme di Creta). – Rizzo, PER pl. 129; Schefold, WP 189; Croisille pl. 67, 1; Ling pl. 3. – About 60–79 A. D. – H. (chlamys, sword in scabbard, baldric, bronze jug in l. hand) attempts to move r. while being restrained by three nymphs on the l. Two of them, one standing behind him and the other coming towards him, grab his r. arm; the third crouches between them and grabs his r. knee. Two youths (→ Boreadai?, or Polyphemus and Heracles?), the front one seated, the other standing holding a club, observe the action from the rocks above on the upper r.

11.* Naples, Mus. Naz. 8864. From Herculaneum, the so-called Basilica. – HBr pl. 87 bottom, r.; Croisille pl. 67, 2; Ling pl. 4. – About 70–79 B. C. – H. (jug in r. hand) immersed up to his chest in water, attempts to move r. in a swimming motion with outstretched arms. He is surrounded by three nymphs who grab and try to restrain him. On the r. is Heracles with lionskin hat who faces l., looking on, his r. hand raised to his mouth in a gesture of concern. The surface of painting is now much deteriorated.

Mosaics (18: opus sectile)

12.* Seville, Mus. Arch. From Itálica, Casa de Hylas. – Fernández-Chicarro, C./Gómez, F. F., Cat. del Mus. Arq. de Sevilla II (1980) 60 fig. 21; Blazquez 284 fig. 3. – Beginning of 3rd cent. A. D. – H. (chlamys, spear in l. hand, jug in r.) reaches towards the l. to draw water, his r. leg bent under. He looks back to the r. with a frightened glare towards Heracles who stands frontally, a club in his l. hand nestled against his shoulder, the r. raised up in response to the situation. Three reclining nymphs on the l. grab H.; the lower two hold his legs, the upper his r. arm and shoulder.

13. Grenoble, Mus. From St. Colombe (near Vienne, France). – Lancha 383 fig. 2. – About 175–200 A. D. – H. (chlamys, spear in l. hand, jug in r.) leans l., looking round; his r. leg is bent under, his l. extended back. A seated nymph to either side grabs his arm.

14. Léon, Mus. Arch. From Los Villares (near La Bañeza, Spain). – Blazquez 282–283 figs. 1–2; Lancha 384 fig. 3. – 2nd or 3rd cent. A. D. – H. (chlamys, spear in l. hand, jug in r.) is poised nearly frontally, his l. leg resting up on a rock and bent underneath, the r. extended down. He looks off slightly to the l. A seated nymph to either side grabs his r. arm with one hand, while the other arm is wrapped behind his shoulders.

15.* Amphipolis (Greece). From a Roman villa. – Stikas, E. G., Praktika 1975, part 1, text plan E and pls. 75, b; 76, b; 77; BCH 100, 1976, 686 fig. 233. – 2nd or 3rd cent. A. D. – H. (inscription) is poised nearly frontally, the l. leg bent under and resting on a rock, the other extended down and out. He looks l., his r. arm raised up in the air. A seated nymph to either side grabs him, and a third stands behind him. The vase he once held lies on the ground on the bottom r. Pendant: → Amymone 29.

16.* Constantine (Algeria), Mus. From site 10 km south of Constantine. – Ling pl. 9 (part); Lancha 388 fig. 6. – 2nd or 3rd cent. A. D. – H. (chlamys, sword in scabbard, baldric, jug in r. hand) moves l. bending toward the water. A nymph on the r. pursues and attempts to restrain him from behind by grabbing his l. arm, another on the l. reclines on the rocks, supporting her head with the l. hand.

17.* (→ Eros/Amor, Cupido 66) Volubilis (Morocco), House of the Venus Mosaic. – Thouvenot pl. 18; Croisille pl. 69, 2; Lancha 385 fig. 4; 390 figs. 7–8; color pl. after 460. – 215–230 A. D. – H. (chlamys, his hydria spilled over in front of him) is poised nearly frontally, looking slightly to the l.; his l. leg is bent under and resting on a rock, the r. extended out.

His hands extend out in fright, the r. raised up high. A nymph from either side attacks him. The one on the r. holds up a jug in her r. hand as if she is about to hit him with it, the l. one grabs his raised r. hand. The latter may be wearing a quiver which suggests an association with Artemis, since H. comes upon the nymphs dancing in a celebration connected with Artemis in Apoll. Rhod. 1, 1223-1225.

18. Opus sectile. Rome, formerly Pal. del Drago, now Mus. Naz. Rom. From Rome, Basilica of Junius Bassus. - EAA IV color pl. opp. 104; Bianchi Bandinelli, RFAA 293 fig. 270 (color); Ling pl. 11. - 331 A.D. - H. (chlamys, sword in scabbard, headband, baldric, jug in r. hand) is poised nearly frontally, looking l.; his l. leg rests on a rock and is bent under, the r. is extended down. His r. hand is raised in fright. A nymph to either side grabs him. On the r. a third reclines and watches, while resting on a jug from which water pours.

19.* Djemila (Cuicul, Algeria), Mus. From Djemila, House of Hylas. - Blanchard-Lemée, M., Maisons à mosaïques du quartier central de Djemila (Cuicul) (1975) pl. 43; Ling pl. 13. - 4th or 5th cent. A.D. - H. (chlamys, jug in r. hand) attempts to go r. poised in nearly a frontal view, while looking l.; his r. leg is slightly bent. Three nymphs surround and attempt to restrain him. One to either side grab his arms, the third behind him wraps her arms around his waist.

20. Toledo (Spain), Mus. de Santa Cruz de Toledo. From Carranque. - Arce, J., MM 27, 1986, pl. 71, b. - Signed by Hirinius (for Herenius). - 350-450 A.D. - H. in nearly a profile view kneels to the r. towards a spring from which he tries to draw water with a vessel in his r. hand. Two nymphs seated around the spring on the r. grab him, a third seated on the l. observes the action.

Stone Reliefs

21.* Marble puteal with reliefs. Lost but known from a plaster cast in Copenhagen, Thorv. Mus. L 298. From Ostia. - Rizzo, PER pl. 130 left; Manino, L., Boll. Soc. Piemontese di Arch. e di Belle Arti 6/7, 1952/53, 45 fig. 8; Croisille pl. 71, 2. - Middle of 2nd cent. A.D. - H. (chlamys, spear in l. hand, jug in r.) moves r. in nearly a frontal view, his r. leg bent. A nymph on either side attempts to restrain him, the l. one sits and grabs his r. arm, the r. one squats and holds his l. leg. Other seated nymphs frame the scene and serve as transitional elements to a scene of → Narkissos and Echo on the other side of the puteal.

22. (= Charites/Gratae 44 with bibl., = Fons 1*, = Herakles 743 with bibl.) Marble relief. Rome, Mus. Cap. 504. From Rome, Via Appia, Villa Mattei. - Dedicated to Springs and Nymphs. - Stuart Jones, SculptMusCap pl. 53, 93; Helbig⁴ II no. 1332. - 2nd half of 2nd cent. A.D. - H. (chlamys, vessel in r. hand) attempts to go r. in nearly a three-quarter view, his l. leg bent. A nymph standing to either side attempts to restrain him, the one on the l. grabs his r. arm, the one on the r. places her l. hand on his shoulders in order to prevent him from advancing. This scene occupies the r. third of the relief; on the l. are the three Graces and in the center Hermes, Heracles, and a reclining river god.

23. Ash-chest with relief. Lost and known only from a drawing after a paper squeeze. From Constantine (Algeria). - Robert, C., SarkRel III 1 (1897) 164. - 2nd half of 2nd cent. or 3rd cent. A.D. - H. (chlamys, water vessel in l. hand) goes r. in nearly a frontal view, l. leg bent, r. hand raised in the air. A nymph on either side attempts to restrain him by grabbing his arms. On the l. behind a tree is Heracles (club in l. hand) who stands with knees slightly bent, gesturing with his r. hand, as he looks on helplessly.

24.* Marble sarcophagus. Rome, Pal. Mattei. Much restored. - Koch/Sichtermann, RömSark pl. 169; Ling pl. 10. - Mid 3rd cent. A.D. - H. (chlamys, reeds or florals in l. hand, water vessel in r.) goes r. in nearly a three-quarter view with l. leg bent, while looking round. A nymph comes towards him from either side and attempts to restrain him. The head of a third standing behind him is visible in the background. To either side stands a man between Erotes. The l. one who holds a club (?) in his r. hand is probably Heracles, the r. man is most likely Polyphemus.

Stucco Reliefs

25. Baiae, so-called Baths of Venus. - Mielsch, Stuckreliefs pl. 14, 2; Ling, R. J., Archaeologia 106, 1979, 46 fig. 7 pl. 18b; Ling 781 fig. 2, 6. - 25-75 A.D. - H. goes l. in nearly a three-quarter view, r. leg bent. A standing nymph to either side attempts to restrain him by grabbing him, the l. one as if pushing him back, the r. pulling him. A tree remains on the l., and a third nymph sits on the r. observing. Much damaged; the details are difficult to discern.

26. Pompeii VIII 2, 17-20 (Terme del Sarno). - Mielsch, Stuckreliefs 125 K 26; Ling 781 fig. 2, 7 pl. 5. - 62-79 A.D. - H. (chlamys and an object [jug?] in r. hand) goes l. in nearly a three-quarter view, r. l. bent. A squatting nymph on the l. attempts to draw him towards her, while a nymph looks on to either side, the l. one reclining, the r. sits clasping her l. knee. Stucco has fallen away and only the preliminary sketch remains.

27. Naples, Mus. Naz. 9596. From Pompeii VI 9, 2 (Casa di Meleagro). - Ling 781 fig. 2, 9. - 62-79 A.D. - H. (chlamys, two spears in l. hand, jug in r.) goes r. to draw water. A nymph sits on the r. atop a rock; her r. elbow resting on a vessel from which water pours; she holds out her garment with her l. hand. There is a gap on the l. side of the scene which probably was originally meant for a third figure never added. The stucco has fallen away leaving only the imprints of the figures.

28.* Pompeii VII 1, 8 (Stabian Baths). - Schefold, WP 162; Ling 781 fig. 2, 8 pl. 6. - Shortly before 79 A.D. - H. (chlamys, two spears in l. hand, jug in r.) goes l. to draw water, r. leg bent. On the r. a crouching nymph with a vessel on her lap reaches out to grab H. On the l. are two nymphs. The one closest to H. stands in a three-quarter view to the l. resting her l. arm on a vessel atop a rock from which water pours. The second sits in a three-quarter view to the r. looking on. The stucco has fallen away leaving only painted details and preliminary sketch.

Metal relief

29. Silver situla. Once Herculaneum, now lost, mentioned by Winckelmann but without details. - Winckelmann, J. J., Sendschreiben von den herculanischen Entdeckungen (1762) 55 (Sämtliche Werke, ed. C. L. Fernow [1808-25] II, 83; ed. J. Eiselein [1825-29] II, 181). - Before 79 A.D. - H. abducted by the nymphs.

GALLO-ROMAN

30.* Sandstone relief. Trier, Rhein. Landesmus. From Igel, Monument of the Secundinii, south pediment. - Dragendorff, H./Krüger, E., Das Grabmal von Igel (1924) 84 fig. 58 pls. 14, 1; 20; Zahn, E., Rheinische Kunststätten 38, 1982, 12 figs. 10-11. - 1st third of 3rd cent. A.D. - H. (chlamys, spear in raised l. hand, water jug in r.) goes l. in nearly a frontal view. A nymph to either side attempts to restrain him by grabbing his arms; the l. one supports herself by kneeling on a rock.

C. Hylas among the nymphs

ROMAN

31.* Wall Painting. Rome, Via Flaminia, Tomb of the Nasonii. Known from a drawing by P. S. Bartoli. - Andreae, B., Studien zur römischen Grabkunst, RM Erg.-H. 9 (1963) pl. 52; Ling pl. 14. - Mid 2nd cent. A.D. - H. (mantle) sits in a three-quarter view to the r. in the center holding a batch of reeds in his l. hand, while gesturing to a nymph on the r. with his r. She sits to the l., supporting a jug with her l. hand and gesturing to him with the r. Two other nymphs sit on the l. talking with each other.

Hylas 31

32. Mosaic. Leningrad, Ermitage E 1914. From Rome, Via Appia. Heavily restored? - RM 45, 1930, pl. 52; Ling pl. 12. - 2nd, 3rd or 4th cent. A.D. - H. (chlamys) sits in upper center among rocks, chest turned slightly r., head to l., r. leg bent under, l. hidden by rocks. At a slightly lower level to the l. and r. are seated nymphs who pour water from vases held aloft. The head of a third nymph is visible beneath H. to the r.

33.* (= Daphne 40 with further refs., = Kastalia II 3) Silver situla with relief. Leningrad, Ermitage 2160/2. From Concesti (Romania). - Reinach, ABC pl. 39; Matzulewitsch, L., Byzantinische Antike (1929) 135 fig. 47 and pl. 45, 2; Spätantike und frühbyzantinische Silbergefäße aus der Staatl. Ermitage Leningrad (exp. Berlin 1978-79) 136. - Around 400 A.D. - H. stands frontally, head to l., l. leg crossed over r., l. arm resting on a large vase perched atop a rock, the r. hand raised. To the l. a seated nymph grabs his shoulder, while another further l. pours water from a vessel held aloft. To the r. a third nymph pours water from another vase into a vessel held by a fourth nymph who is seated on the far r. Filling out the rest of the frieze around the vase are scenes of → Leda and the swan, and → Apollon and → Daphne.

D. Hylas fending off a nymph

ROMAN

34. Marble funerary altar with reliefs. Turin, Mus. Arch. 535. From Acqui. - Manino, o. c. 21, 34 fig. 1. - 2nd or 3rd cent. A.D. - H. (chlamys, vase in r. hand) moves r., beating off an attacking nymph with Heracles' club which he holds above in his l. hand. The nymph stands on the l., recoiling slightly, her r. hand also grasping the jug. The figure uprooting a tree on another side of the altar may be Heracles obtaining the wood for a new oar.

E. Fragmentary, exact composition unknown

ROMAN

35. Mosaic, fr., Carthage, Mus. From Carthage, building immediately northwest of cardo maximus. - Salomonson, J. W., La mosaïque aux chevaux de l'Antiquarium de Carthage, Archeologische Studien van het Nederlands Historisch Instituut te Rome I (1965) 112 fig. 61 pl. 50, 2. - 3rd cent. A.D. - H. (chlamys, jug in r. hand) kneels l. to draw water. Traces of another figure (nymph?) to r., a horse below.

36.* Silver situla with relief decoration, fr. Halle, Landesmus. für Vorgeschichte. From Groß Bodungen (Thuringia). - Grünhagen, pl. 4. - 4th cent. A.D. - On the l., part of head in profile to r., torso and extended l. hand of H.; on the r., the head, shoulders, arms and hands of a nymph who grabs H.'s extended l. arm with both hands.

F. Some uncertain or incorrect identifications of Hylas 37. (= Hyllos I 3* with bibl.) Stemless cup, Attic rf. Paestum, Mus. Naz. T. 641. From Paestum. - Boll. Arte 54, 1980, 6, 3-6 figs. 4-10: Xenotimos P. - Ca. 420 B.C. - Youth labelled ΥΑΟΣ (stands frontally, looks l.), youth (standing r.), and Heracles (standing frontally, looking l., holding an aryballos). First youth may be H., but more likely Hyllus.

GREEK

38. (= Argonautai 32 with further refs., = Herakles 3520 with further refs.) Calyx-krater, Attic rf. Paris, Louvre G 341. From Orvieto. - *ARV*² 601, 22; 1661: Niobid P.; Para 395; *Add*² 266; Hemelrijk, J. M., in AGRP (Amsterdam) 190-192. - Hemelrijk interprets the scene on A as Heracles shown with Athena and the Argonautai while searching for the lost H. The exact identification of the scene is still uncertain.

39. Wall Painting, known from Petron. 83. It is either lost or a literary creation of the author. Apelles. - Late 4th or early 3rd cent. B.C. - H. resisting a nymph.

40. Carnelian gem. New York, MMA 1925.78.7. From Sparta. - Richter, MetMusGems 20 no. 74 pl. 13, 74; Boardman, GGFR pl. 551. - Late 5th cent. B.C. - A woman (nymph?) (sakkos) on the l. who kneels, facing r. Her r. arm is raised, while with the l. she grabs the cloak of the male figure (H.) on the r. who moves towards her. In his raised r. hand he holds drapery (?). - Cf. Boardman, GGFR 205 fig. 208 for the same group on a sealing from Persepolis.

ROMAN

Wall Paintings

41. Napoli, Mus. Naz. 9663. From Stabiae, Villa Varano. - RM 84, 1977, pl. 40, 2. - Around 55-79 A.D. - Youth (H.) stands holding a jug at his chest, head to l., body turned slightly to r. in three-quarter view. The figure may be not mythological.

42. Rome, Via Flaminia, tomb of the Nasonii. Known primarily from a drawing by P. S. Bartoli. - Michaelis, A., JdI 25, 1910, Beil. 3, 7; Andreae, o.c. 31, pl. 49. - Mid 2nd cent. A.D. - Youth (H.) (chlamys) moves l. A woman on the l. facing r. shakes his r. hand, her l. hand disappears behind his back. Behind him on the r. are two shorter women who stand to the l. holding between them a dish-like vessel in their hands. Andreae rejects the identification as H.

43. Fr. Salamis (Cyprus), gymnasium. - Kara-georghis, V., RDAC 1966 pl. 7, 2; BCH 91, 1967, 353 fig. 160; Balty 216-217 pl. 68, 3. - Early 4th cent. A.D., before earthquake of 342 A.D. - H. (?) (chitoniskos, chlamys, spear in l. hand) stands in nearly a three-quarter view on the l. He gestures with his raised r. hand to a nymph (?) on the r. Only her head, shoulders and r. arm remain. She extends towards H. (?) her r. hand from which water flows. Balty identifies the figures as Aktaion and Artemis.

Mosaics

44. Napoli, Mus. Naz. 9984. From Herculaneum? - Lancha 386 fig. 5. - Before 79 A.D.? - Youth (H.) (chlamys, spear in l. hand, r. hand on jug turned over with water spilling out) sits in upper center in a rocky landscape, chest turned slightly to r., head to r. On the bottom r. stands a woman (nymph?) who rests against the rocks looking up towards him. In the lower left sits a youth (Polyphemos?) to the r. who also looks up towards him. Possibly a scene of H., but the identity of the figures is uncertain.

45. Fr. Salamis (Cyprus), gymnasium. - Kara-georghis, V., Salamis in Cyprus (1969) figs. 123-124; Lancha 383 fig. 1; Michaelides, D., Cypriot Mosaics (1987) pl. 13; idem, RDAC 1987, pl. 62, 1; Balty 210-213 pls. 64, 1; 65, 67, 2. - Before the end of the 3rd cent. A.D. - Lower half of Artemis (?) on l., lower half of figure (H.) leaning to r. on l. knee, and shanks of a figure standing with crossed legs (nymph?). - The scene has been identified as H., as an Amazonomachy and as the slaughter of the → Niobidai. It is too fragmentary to be certain of the correct identification.

46. Antalya Mus. From Seleucia (Pamphylia), Agora. - Mellink, M. J., AJA 80, 1976, 273; Lancha 381. - The mosaic (Orpheus and the animals) has a depiction of Hyle (→ Nape), the personification of the forest and woodland, not of H.

For other dubious representations, see Ling 808.

COMMENTARY

There are several possible 5th- and 4th-cent. Greek representations of H., but none is certain. 37, a late 5th-cent., Attic red-figure, stemless cup has a figure labelled ΥΑΟΣ on the same side with Heracles. He may be either H. or Hyllus; the later is the more likely. A late 5th-cent. gem (40) with a squatting woman on the left who grabs the cloak of a male figure on the right may show the rape of H., but the scene could also be → Peleus and → Thetis, or some other mythological couple. A painting by Apelles (39) with H. being attacked by a nymph seen by Encolpius in a picture gallery is very possibly an invention of Petronius who was inspired by a Roman painting, not a Greek.

The earliest certain representation of H. is an early third style, Roman, wall painting from Pompeii (7). It, and a slightly later Pompeian painting (8), may be reflections of a lost Hellenistic wall painting which would indicate that the myth started to be depicted either around the same time it became popular in literature (Apoll. Rhod. and Theokr.), or shortly thereafter. All depictions of H. are connected with his rape by the nymphs. Most show the rape taking place either as H. goes to draw water, or shortly after.

Ling has isolated four, early Imperial, compositional types, some of which continue to be used in mid- and late-imperial iconography. The first and earliest, which is probably to be associated with the lost Hellenistic painting (7-8. 19), shows H. with water jug attempting to move right. A nymph on either side grabs him in an attempt to restrain him, while a third wraps her arms around his waist from behind.

The second type (9-10), which may be derived from the first, has H. with water jar also moving right. This time the three nymphs are all on the left; two stand and grab his arm and shoulder, while the third, either waist-deep in the water or crouching between the other two, grabs his leg.

Ling's third type is known from only one Pompeian painting (11). H. is shown chest-deep in the water with both arms extended out, the right holding a jug. He attempts to go right, away from three nymphs who encircle and grab him; two are in the water with him, the third squats on the shore on the left.

Type four is first known to have been used on wall stuccos (25-28), although it may have developed from an earlier tradition in relief sculpture. H. with chlamys and water jug is shown in the center usually going left. Sometimes he holds spears (21. 27-28), or he has a sword in a scabbard at his side (16) which suggest that the nearly contemporary Roman versions of the myth (Val. Fl.) in which H. goes hunting may have influenced the depictions. On either side are nymph(s). Usually a crouching one attempts to detain him, as may another, while others merely recline or sit, observing the action. This type continues to be used frequently in mid-imperial iconography (16. 21-24).

The more standard pose for H. in mid- and late-imperial iconography has him stretched out with one knee resting on a rock or the ground; the lower part of the leg is bent under the thigh and often hidden; the other leg is extended out and back (12-15). Normally he has a chlamys and water vessel. Sometimes he has a spear in the other hand (12-14), sometimes one hand is raised in fright and surprise (15. 17-18), and twice (15. 17) he has dropped the jug in fright. Nymphs, standing, reclining, and kneeling grab him, and they are often joined by others who casually recline and observe the action. Occasionally the action becomes more violent (17), as the nymphs attack him rather than attempt to detain him. The pose for H. with leg bent under became so commonly associated with him that in one case (2) he is shown this way alone.

Three depictions do not show the rape, but rather H. living among the nymphs (31-33). The iconographical scheme is different in each case. On 32 H. retains the pose with leg bent under, although he is placed high among the rocks above the spring and nymphs. On 31 he sits among the nymphs, while on 33 he stands among them.

A so far unique depiction of H. beating off the attack of a nymph with Heracles' club is found on a funerary altar (34).

In addition to the nymphs who number from one to four and H., other figures occasionally are present, but always in a subsidiary, observatory role. Heracles appears four (11-12. 23. 24) and possibly six times (8. 10). In each certain case he stands to one side and gestures with obvious concern at H.'s situation. On 24 a second man is present on the opposite side from Heracles. He most likely is Polyphemos, who plays an important role in a number of the literary sources. The two youths who sit above observing on 10 are more difficult to identify. They may be the Boreadai who were the initial pursuers of H. in Prop.'s version of the rape, or they may be Heracles and Polyphemos, or simply two unidentifiable youths. The female figure on 7 may simply be a nymph, although there is a possibility that she may be Echo, since H. is turned into an echo in Nikandros' version of the story.

Depictions of H. were most popular at first in paintings and wall stuccos, but in later Roman times he is depicted most often on mosaics, although there are some examples on various types of relief sculpture, coins, and silver vessels. His popularity on mosaics is most likely due to the fact that his story could easily be associated with other stories because of the elements of rape, love, and water. Other scenes with some of these elements found in association with H. include → Hyakinthos (1), → Poseidon and → Amymone (15), Erotes (17), → Narkissos (22), Apollon and → Daphne (33), and → Leda and the swan (33). In the later literary sources he is also often associated with other loves of gods (Clemens Alex. protr. 2, 33, 5 and [Clemens Romanus] hom. 5, 15). In other cases (11. 22. 34) different scenes of Heracles decorate the same monument as those with H. It is also worthy to note that H.'s rape was used to decorate a number of bathing establishments which underscores the connection of the story with water, as does the relief dedicated to the Springs and Nymphs (22).

JOHN H. OAKLEY

HYLATAS

(Υλάτας, le Sylvestre?) Géant (→ Gigantes).

Ce nom est une épiclèse d'Apollon dieu d'Hylé à Chypre: Lykophron 448; Dionysios, Bassariques, frg. 4 Livrea; Nonn. Dion. 13, 444. Il désigne peut-être un Géant sur:

I.* (= Gigantes 4 avec bibl.) Frise d'un trésor anonyme à Delphes. Delphes, Mus. - Début du V^e s. av. J.-C. - Hylatas (inscr. aujourd'hui illisible) est l'un des guerriers qui font face à un quadriges, peut-être dans une Gigantomachie. Cf. Picard, Ch./de La Coste-Meselière, P., FDelphes IV 2, 178. FRANCIS VIAN

HYLE → Nape

HYLLOS I

(Υλλος, Hyllus) Ältester Sohn des → Herakles und der Deianeira, nach dem Tod des Vaters verheiratet mit → Iole (l.) Anführer der → Herakleiden im Kampf gegen → Eurystheus und bei ihrer Rückführung in die Peloponnes. Vor Abschluß des Unternehmens fällt er am Isthmos im Zweikampf gegen den Tegeaten → Echmos. Eponym einer der drei dorischen Phylen, der Hylleer. Mit seinem Sohn Kleodaios figuriert H. in den Stammbäumen bedeutender Herrscherhäuser - im besonderen in Sparta und in Makedonien.

LITERARISCHE QUELLEN: Hyllus als Sohn des Herakles und der Deianeira wird für uns erstmals in Hes. frg. 25, 17–19 Merkelbach/West genannt. Die meisten ihn betreffenden Quellen beziehen sich einerseits auf den in der attischen Überlieferung breit ausgebauten Kampf gegen den Verfolger der Herakliden, Eurystheus, andererseits auf den Komplex der Sagen von der Rückführung der Heraklesnachkommen in die Peloponnes, der spätestens seit der früharchaischen Zeit eine vielfältige Aufgabe zur Begründung territorialer, ethnischer sowie sprachlicher Verhältnisse und überkommener Institutionen (dorische Phylonordnung) zu erfüllen hatte. Umstritten bleibt vor allem die Frage, wann und auf welche Weise die Verbindung des Heraklessohnes zum Eponymen der dorischen Hylleer zustandekam: die vermutlich alte dorische Phylonordnung mag einen Eponymen besessen haben, der erst im Lauf der Zeit die konkretere Gestalt des Heraklessohnes annahm. Die von Ephoros, FGH 70 F 15 und Strabon 9, 4, 10 p. 427 überlieferte Adoption des H. durch den dorischen König Aigimios nach dem Tod des Herakles spiegelt eine künstliche Anbindung an anderweitig vorgegebene dorische Tradition. Die Nachricht, daß das dorische Heer des Hyllos und des Aigimios Aigina erobert habe in Pind. I. 9, 1–4 (zu Hyllos und Aigimios vgl. auch Pind. P. 1, 60–70 mit Schol. P. 1, 120–121), ist auch im Hinblick auf das «Bildprogramm» des Aphaieatempels von Aigina zu beachten: vgl. dazu unten 7.

Insgesamt ist H. durch einen ähnlichen Mangel an Selbsthaftigkeit gekennzeichnet wie sein Vater, da er ursprünglich mit keiner bestimmten Stadt verbunden werden kann. So sind seine häufigen Ortswechsel nicht nur durch die Komplikationen der Heraklidenrückführung begründet, sondern sie bestimmen schon seine Jugendgeschichte. Als kleines Kind muß er mit den Eltern Kalydon verlassen, um nach Trachis weiterzuziehen (Apollod. bibl. 2 [150] 7, 6; Diod. 4, 36). Nach den genannten Quellen eignet sich die Nessos-Geschichte auf dem Weg nach Trachis (was die Anwesenheit des kleinen H. in pompejanischen Bildern dieser Sage rechtfertigt). Schwer mit der offiziellen Rolle als Anführer der Herakliden ist die «private» Biographie des erwachsenen H. zu verbinden, die ein längeres Familienleben in der Ehe mit Iole in Trachis bei Keyx einzuschließen scheint, wie Prinz 226 ff. aus Hes. frg. 251a und b Merkelbach/West folgern möchte. Fest steht, daß die Hyllos-Iole-Beziehung vorsophokleisch ist: Nach Pherekyd., FGH 3 F 82a soll Herakles Iole von Eurytos als Braut für den Sohn gefordert haben. In Soph. Trach. 1216–1250 wird sie H. vom sterbenden Herakles als Gemahlin angetragen, was er nur zögernd akzeptiert.

Bei den Ereignissen, die vor dem Kampf gegen Eurystheus liegen, spielt H. in den erhaltenen Quellen eine wenig markante Rolle. In Soph. Trach. (das folgende weitgehend bei Apollod. bibl. 2 [157–160], 7, 7 übernommen) ist H. hilfloser Zeuge beim Untergang seines Vaters, zunächst am Kap Kenaion, dann wieder in Trachis. Die Aufforderung des Sterbenden, für ihn den Scheiterhaufen anzuzünden, lehnt er ab. Die ausführlichsten Quellen zur Verfolgung der Herakliden durch Eurystheus sind neben der euripideischen Heraklidentragedie die parallelen Berichte bei Apollod.

bibl. 2 [167–168] 8, 1 und Diod. 4, 57. Bei Euripides tritt H. nicht selbst auf; erst 639–664 meldet sein Diener seine Ankunft und sein aktives Eingreifen. Im Botenbericht 799–816 erfährt man, daß H. den Eurystheus zum Zweikampf herausgefordert hatte, den dieser ablehnte. In der folgenden Schlacht nimmt nicht H., sondern Iolaos Eurystheus gefangen; 965–982 akzeptiert H., anders als die rachsüchtige Alkmene, gemäß den Grundsätzen der Athener die Schonung des gefangenen Gegners. Hingegen tötet H. selbst ihn bei Apollod. bibl. 2 (168) 8, 1 und Diod. 4, 57, 6. Die grausame Version, nach der H. ihm den Kopf abschnitt und der Alkmene übergab, die diesem die Augen austach, findet sich nur bei Apollod. a. O. (sicher abhängig davon Zenob. cent. 2, 61). – Zur mehrmaligen Verzögerung der Landnahme in der Peloponnes nach der Besiegung des Eurystheus vgl. → Herakleidai. H., der nach der Sagenchronologie Zeitgenosse des trojanischen Krieges sein mußte, wird in der Überlieferung wohl vor allem mit Rücksicht auf diese Gegebenheit daran gehindert, selbst auf der Peloponnes Fuß zu fassen, was seinen Nachkommen vorbehalten bleibt. Er fällt am Isthmos im Zweikampf mit dem Tegeaten Echemos: Schol. Pind. O. 10, 79b–80; Diod. 4, 58, 4; Paus. 8, 5, 1. Das Grab des H. wurde nach Paus. 1, 41, 2 in Megara gezeigt (zu berichtigen ist Eitrem in RE IX 1, 123 – und offenbar daraus exzerpiert KIPauly II 1267 – wo aus Paus. a. O. fälschlich ein Heroon des H. nördlich der Athener Akropolis herausgelesen wird).

Einzelne verstreute Nachrichten sind schwer in das Gesamtbild einzuordnen, so die Behauptung Hyg. fab. 244, H. habe seinen Onkel Sthenelos getötet. Zu vernachlässigen ist die seltsame Geschichte vom Zweikampf des H. mit Epopeus, der ihm ein an der Stirn gewachsenes Horn abgerissen habe, bei Ptol. Chennos 3, 1 p. 23 Chatzis. – Beachtenswert ist indessen eine Überlieferung vom zeitweiligen Aufenthalt des H. in Theben nach der Besiegung des Eurystheus bei Ant. Lib. 33 (= Pherekyd., FGH 3 F 84, s. Jacoby im Komm. dazu) – offenbar ein Versuch der Thebaner, Anschluß an die Heraklidentradiation mit ihren peloponnesischen Konsequenzen zu finden.

Als Sohn des H. und vermutlich der Iole figuriert mehrmals Kleodaios als Glied der genealogischen Reihe, die letztlich auf Herakles zurückführt: z. B. Hdt. 6, 52; 7, 204 u. a. im Stammbaum der spartanischen Könige. Etwas markanter ist der Urenkel Temenos, der u. a. im Stammbaum des makedonischen Herrscherhauses (über Perdikkas) eine Rolle spielt, so im Prolog des euripideischen Archealos (Austin, C. Nova Fragmenta Euripidea [1968] p. 14), wo selbstverständlich auch H. aufgeführt ist. Zu den Töchtern Aristachme und Euaichme vgl. oben zu Hes. frg. 251a. b Merkelbach/West.

Zur historischen Beurteilung der Sagenkonstrukte um H. als Anführer der Herakleidai bes. Lehmann sowie Prinz 206 ff.; zum Ethnikon der Hylleer und zur Überlieferung bei Apoll. Rhod. 4, 522–551, nach der ein Hyllos als Eponym der illyrischen Hylleer Sohn des Herakles und der Melite ist, sich also offenbar vom Eponymen der peloponnesisch-dorischen He-raklesnachkommen unterscheidet, vgl. Lehmann 44–45 mit Anm. 89–90. Zu den Namen Hyllos und Hylleis Neumann, G., Glotta 63, 1985, 4–6.

BIBLIOGRAPHIE (vgl. auch die Lit. zu → Herakleidai): Brommer, Herakles II 133 Nr. 67 und passim; idem, Vasenlisten 83; Eitrem, S., RE IX 1 (1914) 123–124 s. v. «Hyllos 3»; v. Geisau, H., KIPauly II (1967) 1266–1267 s. v. «Hyllos 1»; Lehmann, G. A., Die mykenisch-frühgriechische Welt und der östliche Mittelmeerraum in der Zeit der «Seevölker»-Invasion um 1200 v. Chr., Rhein.-Westf. Ak. d. Wiss. Vorträge G 276 (1985); Prinz, F., Gründungsmythen und Sagenchronologie (1979) 206 ff. und passim; Schmidt, M., «Herakliden», in Gestalt und Geschichte, Festschr. K. Schefold, AntK 4. Beih. (1967) 182–185; Weizsäcker, P., ML 12 (1886–90) 2798–2799 s. v. «Hyllos 2».

KATALOG

Für die Darstellungen von H. als Kleinkind in Familienszenen → Herakles 1674–1679. – Das von der Statue im Vatikan, → Herakles 653, gehaltene Kind könnte H. sein, doch ist Telephos im Römischen weit wahrscheinlicher.

a) Hyllos als Kleinkind beim Nessosabenteuer

1.* Wandgemälde. Neapel, Mus. Naz. 111474. Aus Pompeji IX 5, 18, f (Casa di Iasone). – Schefold, WP 264; HBr Taf. 70. – 3. Stil, um 10 n. Chr. – Deianeira mit dem kleinen H. in den Armen steht im Wagen des Zweigespanns als Zeugin beim Kampf des Herakles mit Nessos.

2. Wandgemälde. Neapel, Mus. Naz. 9001. Aus Pompeji VI 9, 3–6 (Casa del Centauro). – Schefold, WP 115, 26; HBr Taf. 147, Farbtaf. 5. – Um 40/50 n. Chr. – Deianeira, ähnlich wie auf 1 zu Wagen, umfaßt den quer ins Bild gesetzten kleinen H., der über die Schulter des Vaters auf den schon gestürzten Nessos schaut. In der l. Hand hält H. eine weißgelbliche Frucht oder eine Rose(?).

b) Hyllos als Knabe oder Jüngling mit Herakles

3.* (= Hylas 37) Schalen-Skyphos, att. rf. Paestum, Mus. Naz. Aus Grab 641 einer der nördlichen Nekropolen. – Töpfersignatur des Xenotimos. Xenotimosmaler. – Um 430/20 v. Chr. – Greco Pontrandolfo, A., BollArte 65, 1980 Nr. 6, 1–6 Abb. 4–5. 8–10; Brommer, Herakles II 134, 7; Lezzi-Hafter, A., Der Eretriamaler (1988) 84, 82. – Auf der einen Außenseite r. der bärtige Herakles mit Namensbeischrift, mit vorgestreckten Händen zur Mitte gewandt. In der einen Hand anscheinend ein Objekt (eher Aryballos als Hesperidenapfel?). Von der r. Hand hängt eine Binde herab. Ihm gegenüber unbenannter nackter Jüngling mit vorgestreckter Rechten, in der er eine Tanie hält. L. ohne erkennbare Beziehung zur Heraklesgruppe ein nackter stehender Jüngling, der den Kopf nach r. von den anderen abwendet. R. von seinem Kopf weiß aufgemalte Beischrift ΥΑΟΞ. Die drei Krieger auf der anderen Außenseite scheinen trainierende bzw. sich vorbereitende Sportler – Waffenläufer – zu sein. Die Palästraatmosphäre gilt also für beide Vasenseiten.

DEUTUNG MÖGLICH

4. (= Herakles 1559* mit Lit.) Schalenfragmente, att. rf. New York MMA 12.231.2. Aus Cerveteri. – *ARV*² 319, 6: Onesimos. Um 490 v. Chr. – I: In dem Jungen mit Petasos, Chlamys und Gepäck (Weinschlauch?), der Herakles folgt, ist vielleicht Hyllos zu erkennen: so versuchsweise Brommer, Vasenlisten 83, B 1; Williams, D., in ICG (Rouen) 139; Schefold, SB IV 220 zu Abb. 270 (Herakles und H. auf dem Wege von oder nach Oichalia?). Beazley, *ARV*² a. O. dachte an Philoktet. (B = Herakles 2794.)

DEUTUNG NICHT ZU SICHERN

5. Skyphos, att. sf. Paris, Louvre MNC 661; angeblich «trouvé dans la Locride». – Um 500 bzw. frühes 5. Jh. v. Chr. – Pottier, E., «Une aventure d'Hercule sur un vase peint du Louvre», Monuments grecs publiés par l'association pour l'encouragement des études grecques 21–22, 1893–94, 41–48 Taf. 14; Olmos, R., MM 18, 1977, 131, 10 Taf. 36 (ohne Deutungsversuch); erwähnt ferner bei Brommer, Vasenlisten 55 A 3; Fehr, B., Orientalische und griechische Gelage (1971) 88–89 Kat. Nr. 300, der Pottiers Interpretation als «ansprechend» beurteilt. – Auf beiden Seiten der Vase nähern sich je drei Männer, offenbar unter Schwierigkeiten und über unregelmäßiges (felsiges?) Gelände einem Gebäude, das auf der Seite B deutlicher architektonisch gestaltet ist. Auf A halten zwei der Eindringlinge(?) eine Keule, auf B, soweit zu erkennen, nur noch einer. Auf A befinden sich die Männer im Innenraum beim Gelage, auf B sitzen sie zwischen den Säulen des Gebäudes. Pottier wollte in den beiden Darstellungen die zwei Besuche des Herakles in Oichalia erkennen: auf A komme er mit Iolaos und Hyllos als friedlicher Symposionngast, auf B kehre er erbost mit seinen Gefährten zurück, um den Königspalast zu zerstören. – In dieser Interpretation scheint zu wenig berücksichtigt, daß die «Besucher» beide Male mit unwegsamem Gelände zu kämpfen haben; sie scheinen auf felsigem Terrain zu klettern. Ist vielleicht die listige Eroberung der Athener Akropolis durch Peisistratos mit Hilfe seiner Keulenträgergarde gemeint, wie sie Hdt. 1, 59, 1–6 überliefert? Die sitzenden Männer im Innenraum wären dann die überrumpelten Athener. Das nach-peisistratische Vasenbild wäre weniger als «historische» Darstellung, sondern eher schwankhaft zu verstehen. Vermutlich muß die Deutung aber offen bleiben.

c) Hyllos beim Tod des Herakles?

6.* Krater, fr., apul. rf. Basel, Slg. H. A. Cahn 299. – RVAp II 505, 90: Dareiosmaler; Schmidt 182–185 Taf. 59, 4 und Rekonstruktionsversuch 183 Abb. 1; Trendall/Webster, Illustrations III. 2, 12; Sinn, U., AM 102, 1987, 155 Taf. 13. – Um 330 v. Chr. – Hyllos, noch sehr jugendlich und bekränzt, nackt bis auf schmale Chlamys über einem Arm, scheint ein Bukranion als Schleuderwaffe benutzen zu wollen (gegen ein nicht erhaltenes Ziel im l. Bildteil). Über seinem Kopf die Beischrift ΥΑΟΞ. Die Aktion des stark bewegten jungen Mannes (nur oberer Teil erhalten) ist vielleicht als Rettungsversuch für den (nicht erhalte-nen) von der Wirkung des Nessosgewandes betroffenen Herakles zu verstehen; die Situation entspräche derjenigen in den Trachinierinnen des Sophokles.

d) Hyllos mit dem Heer des Aigimios in Aigina?

DEUTUNG NICHT ZU SICHERN

7. Ost-, eventuell Westgiebel des Aphaieotempels in Aigina. Giebelfiguren München, Glypt. – Um 500–485 v. Chr. – Sinn, U., «Aphaia und die Aegineten», AM 102, 1987, 131–167, bes. 150–158, vermutet in den Giebildarstellungen eine Anspielung auf die Hyllos-Aigimios-Tradition (dazu oben lit. Quellen), ohne sich auf die Benennung bestimmter Figuren festzulegen. Vielleicht sei bei dem Bogenschützen im Ostgiebel mit dem «Helm in Gestalt eines Löwenhauptes» Angleichung an Herakles und damit die Darstellung eines Herakliden, am ehesten Hyllos, beabsichtigt. Denkbar sei nach Sinn andererseits, daß «der Kampf im Westgiebel die genealogische und chronologische Fortführung des Herakleskampfes im Ostgiebel, d. h. den Eroberungsfeldzug des Hyllos» darstellen könne. Gemeint sei allgemein «der Einzug des Dorertums in Aigina... Ob dieser Kampf nun von Herakles oder Hyllos bestritten wird, ist – bezogen auf die Grundaussage – von sekundärer Bedeutung.»

e) Hyllos im Zweikampf mit Echmos

8. (= Echmos 2) Paus. 8, 53, 10 gibt an, in Tegea das Grabmal des Echmos und eine Stele mit Darstellung des Zweikampfes von Echmos gegen H. gesehen zu haben.

KOMMENTAR

Gemessen an der sagen- und stammesgeschichtlichen Bedeutung der Gestalt des H. wirken die wenigen erhaltenen Bildzeugnisse dürftig. Fast alle betonen seinen Status als Sohn des Herakles und charakterisieren ihn als noch unmündig bzw. jugendlich. Im Palästramilieu auf 3 mag die unbenannte jugendliche Mittelfigur zwischen Herakles und H. vielleicht auf den Besitzer dieser Vase (den Verstorbenen) zu beziehen sein, der durch die ziemlich unverbindlich wirkende Anwesenheit der beiden Heroen dennoch ausgezeichnet wird. – Daß H. in den (wenigen erhaltenen) Darstellungen der bedrohten Herakliden keine Rolle spielt, hängt mit der in diesen Bildern vergegenwärtigten Hiketidsituation zusammen, an der der im Kampf aktive H. keinen Anteil hat. Vermuten könnte man seine Anwesenheit allenfalls auf dem (nicht in den Katalog aufgenommenen) fragmentarischen apulischen Volutenkrater Bari 3648 (RVAp I 210, 144, → Makaria) um leider nicht erhaltenen Zentrum der Kampfdarstellung. – Die Grabstele 8, von der Pausanias berichtet, diene offensichtlich der Ehrung des Echmos und zeigte H. als Unterlegenen. Dieses Ehrenmal, das für Echmos ebenso wie für H. Historizität suggerierte, wird – schon im Hinblick auf das Darstellungsmotiv – kaum hochaltertümlich gewesen sein, es sei denn, tegeatische Lokaltradition habe an ein altes Denkmal am Ort angeknüpft. Eine Anspielung auf H. als Exponenten des Dorertums könnte allein für 7 erwogen werden (U. Sinn), doch läßt sich die Vermutung auch in diesem Falle nicht erhärten. Für die nicht erhaltene, aus tegeatischer Sicht gestaltete Stele 8 bleibt ungewiß, ob antike Betrachter dieses Monuments sich die dorische Eponymenrolle des Echmosgegners bewußt machten.

MARGOT SCHMIDT

HYLLOS II

(Υλλος) Heute Demirci Çai, nördlicher Nebenfluß des Hermos. Die Mündung liegt bei der Stadt Saïtta in Lydien, auf deren Münzen der Flußgott dargestellt ist. Ob eine Verbindung zum Heraklessohn → Hyllos (I) besteht, bleibt unklar, die ätiologischen Mythen sind späten Datums. Obwohl der Fluß auf den kaiserzeitlichen Münzen stets Hyllos genannt wird, berichtet bereits Strabon, daß zu seiner Zeit (vvvi) der Fluß Phrygios hieß.

LITERARISCHE QUELLEN: Hom. Il. 20, 392; Hdt. 1, 80; Strabon 13, 4, 5 p. 626; Paus. 1, 35, 7.

BIBLIOGRAPHIE: Büchner, L., RE IX 1 (1914) 122–123 s. v. «Hyllos 1–2»; v. Diest, W., Petermanns Mitteilungen Erg.-H. 94, 1889, 23; Herrmann, P., DenkWien 80, 1962, 12–17; Imhoof-Blumer, Flußg 298, 302; Robert, L., «Reliefs votifs et cultes d'Anatolie», Anatolia 3, 1958, 123.

KATALOG

a) Gelagerter Flußgott

1.* AE, Saïtta (Lydien), Tranquillina (Gattin des Gordianus III., 238–244 n. Chr.). – Imhoof-Blumer, Flußg 303, 322 Taf. 10, 22; SNG v. Aulock 3104; SNG Copenhagen Taf. 12, 412. – Rs.: Gelagerter H. mit Schilfrohr. Inschrift ΥΛΛΟΣ.

2. AE, Saïtta, um 250 n. Chr. – Imhoof-Blumer, Flußg 302, 321. – Rs.: Gelagerter H. mit Füllhorn und Schilfrohr. Vs.: Büste des Mên Aziottenos.

3.* AE, Gordos Julia (Lydien), Faustina iunior (Gattin des M. Aurelius, † 176 n. Chr.). – SNG Copenhagen Taf. 5, 159. – Gelagerter H. wie 2. Ebenso mit Romabüste auf Vs., um 170 n. Chr.: Imhoof-Blumer, Flußg 298, 309 Taf. 10, 14; SNG v. Aulock 2979. – Die Benennung H. ergibt sich aus der Topographie von Gordos.

b) Die gelagerten Flußgötter Hyllos und Hermos

4.* AE, Saïtta, Caracalla (198–217 n. Chr.). – BMCLydia 220, 46 Taf. 23, 9; Imhoof-Blumer, Flußg 303, 323 Taf. 10, 23; SNG v. Aulock 8249. – Die beiden Flußgötter lagern einander gegenüber, auf Quellurnen gestützt; beide halten Schilfrohre, der l. Flußgott hält Füllhorn. Zwischen ihnen Statue des Mên. Ebenso unter Gordianus III. (238–244 n. Chr.): BMC Lydia 223, 58 Taf. 23, 12.

5. AE, Saïtta, Philippus I. (244–249 n. Chr.). – Imhoof-Blumer, F., Nymphen und Chariten (1908) 167, 464; Kraft, K., Das System der kaiserzeitlichen Münzprägung in Kleinasien (1972) Taf. 15, 49d. – Wie 4, doch zwischen den Flußgöttern Sitzbild einer ungenannten Nymphe.

KOMMENTAR

Das Bild des gelagerten Flußgottes H. folgt dem kaiserzeitlichen Schema (→ Fluvii). Bei den zwei Flußgöttern wird kein ikonographischer Unterschied zwischen dem Hauptfluß Hermos und dem Nebenfluß Hyllos gemacht.

HERBERT A. CAHN

couronne (Ov. her. 6, 44) de marjolaine (Catullus 61, 6) ou de roses (Sen. Medea 70). Vêtu d'un voile couleur de flammes (Catullus 61, 8) ou safran (Ov. met. 10, 1) et chaussé de brodequins jaunes (Catullus 61, 10), il porte fréquemment une torche (Catullus 61, 14–15; Ov. met. 10, 6; Sen. Medea 111). Donné parfois comme le fils de Magnès, H. était lui-même un habile musicien (Cornelius Balbus l. c.) et un excellent chanteur (Catullus 61, 12–13). Selon une des versions de la légende, il serait d'ailleurs mort alors qu'il chantait aux nocces de Dionysos et d'Althée (Cornelius Balbus l. c.).

BIBLIOGRAPHIE: Sauer, B., ML I 2 (1886–90) 2800–2804 s. v. «Hymenaios»; Jolles, A., RE IX 1 (1914) 126–130 s. v. «Hymen, Hymenaios»; Hild, J.-A., DA 333–336 s. v. «Hymenaeus»; Guerrini, L., EAA IV (1961) 119 s. v. «Hymenaios».

CATALOGUE

Sauf sur 2, l'identification n'est que probable ou possible.

HYMENAIOS

(Υμην, Ὑμέναιος; Hymen, Hymenaeus) Dieu du mariage. Selon les sources, sa mère était l'une des Muses (→ Mousa, Mousai) ou → Aphrodite, son père → Apollon, → Dionysos ou le musicien Magnès.

SOURCES LITTÉRAIRES: chez Homère (Il. 18, 493) et Hésiode (sc. 274) le nom commun Ὑμέναιος désigne le chant nuptial qui accompagne la jeune fille vers la demeure de son époux. Plus tard, tout en conservant son sens initial, le mot, souvent redoublé sous la forme d'une invocation (p. ex. Ὑμην, ὦ Ὑμέναι' ἀναξ'), semble plutôt s'appliquer à une personification de ce chant nuptial (Pind. frg. 128c, 8–9 Snell/Maehler; Eur. Tro. 310, 314, 322, 331, 335) avant de désigner véritablement et sans équivoque possible le dieu qui préside au mariage accompli selon le rite (Catullus 61, 46–75; Sen. Medea 67).

Les sources divergent sur les origines d'H. Très souvent donné comme le fils d'une Muse – nommée Calliopé (Suda s. v. Θάλλιπος), Clio (Apollod., FGH 244 F 146), ou Uranie (Catullus 61, 2; Nonn. Dion. 24, 88–89; 33, 67–68, 84) – et d'Apollon (Asklep. Trag., FGH 12 F 6a) ou de Magnès (Ant. Lib. 23, 1–2; Cornelius Balbus, Funaioli, H., Grammaticae Romanae Fragmenta [1969] 541 frg. 2; Suda s. v. Θάλλιπος), H. passe parfois pour le fils de Dionysos (Sen. Medea 110), ou de Dionysos et d'Aphrodite (Serv. Aen. 4, 127). Tout aussi variées sont les légendes forgées, sans doute tardivement, pour expliquer que son nom soit invoqué lors des cérémonies du mariage (Serv. Aen. 1, 651; 4, 99, 127; ed. 8, 30; Proklos chrestom. 321 a 21; Eust. 1157, 21–24 ad Hom. Il. 18, 493; Schol. Hom. Il. 18, 493). Mais toutes s'accordent pour lui attribuer une mort précoce et pour le présenter comme un jeune homme d'une grande beauté (Ant. Lib. 23, 1–2; Nonn. Dion. 29, 18–21), si beau qu'on le prenait parfois pour une jeune fille (Serv. Aen. 4, 99; Cornelius Balbus l. c.). On souligne son abondante chevelure (Nonn. Dion. 29, 15; 33, 67, 81–82), qu'orne une

A. Hymenaios seul

1. Peinture murale. Naples, Mus. Naz. 9320. De Pompéi VI 9, 2 (Casa di Meleagro). – Helbig, Wandgemälde n° 855; Reinach, RépPeint 68, 6; Schefold, WP 112 (16). – IV^e style, vers 70 ap. J.-C. (Schefold). – Debout, les jambes croisées, accoudé du bras g. sur un autel, H. tient de la main g. une longue torche enflammée et de la dr. baissée une couronne de fleurs. Il est presque entièrement nu, seuls quelques plis de draperie, coulant de l'épaule g., retombent au creux des bras et sur la cuisse g. Ses longs cheveux, qui tombent en mèches bouclées sur les épaules, sont couronnés de fleurs.

B. Hymenaios dans les scènes de mariage

a) Nocces de Thétis et Pélée

Mosaïques

2.* Soueida, Mus. inv. F. De Chahba (Philippopolis). – Dunand, M., cité dans CRAI 1925, 195–196; idem, cité dans Syria 6, 1925, 295–296; idem, Syria 7, 1926 pl. 57; Balty, J., dans ANRW II 12/2 (1981) 424–425. – Fin du III^e s. ap. J.-C. – L'état de la mosaïque s'étant considérablement dégradé depuis sa découverte, on se fonde, pour la description, sur la photographie publiée par Dunand. De g. à dr.: → Komos (inscr.), puis Nérée (→ Nereus) (inscr.), qui présente Thétis assise, la main dans celle de Pélée; au centre → Zeus (inscr.) et H. (inscr. YMENEOS) vers qui s'avancent, à dr., trois femmes tenant, la première, une corbeille, la seconde une amphore (inscr. Θ[Ε]Π[Α]ΙΤΑΙ-ΝΑΙ?). H., accoudé du bras g. sur une colonnette, l'autre bras levé au-dessus de la tête, est à demi nu; seules les jambes, croisées, et le bras g. sont enveloppés d'une draperie. De la main g. il tient une longue torche enflammée.

3. Béjaia, Mus. De Ziama-Mansouriah. - Ballu, A., BullArchCTH 1913, 346-348 pl. 31; Dunbabin, Mosaics 278 n° 1. - 1^{re} moitié du IV^e s. ap. J.-C. - Ag., Thétis est assise sur un Triton portant une torche, sous un dais soutenu par une Néréide; un Centaure marin, qui tient une torche, et un Eros l'accompagnent, ainsi qu'une Néréide assise sur un monstre marin. A dr., au premier plan, s'avance Pélée, suivi par Chiron. A l'arrière-plan s'ouvre une porte en plein cintre que franchit H., vêtu d'une draperie qui lui tombe de l'épaule, une torche enflammée à la main g.

4. * Cherchel, Mus. Arch. De Cherchel (Caesarea). - Lassus, J., BAAI, 1962-65, 75-105 fig. 1, 10; Dunbabin, Mosaics 43, 255 n° 10; Parrish, D., Season Mosaics of Roman North Africa (1984) n° 18 pl. 27. - 1^{re} moitié du IV^e s. ap. J.-C. - Le tableau se compose de deux scènes opposées: d'un côté, la présentation de Thétis et Pélée en présence d'Hermès et d'un cortège de Néréides accompagnées de Chiron; de l'autre côté, la cérémonie même du mariage, avec, à l'extrémité g., H. et trois femmes, au centre Thétis et Pélée (perdus), à dr. un vieillard (→ Silenos?) et trois femmes (→ Mainades?). Le torse nu, les jambes croisées enveloppées d'une draperie qui couvre aussi le bras g., H. s'appuie de la g. sur une très grosse torche, la main dr. posée sur la hanche. Le visage, encadré de longs cheveux bouclés qui tombent sur les épaules, est légèrement incliné.

Relief

5. * (= Horai/Horae 6* avec bibl. et renvoi) Sarcophage de marbre. Rome, Villa Albani 131. De Rome. - Robert, SarkRel II n° 1; Simon, E., RM 60/61, 1953/54, 211-223 pl. 88; Bendinelli, G., RM 64, 1957, 92-97 pl. 14; Andreae, B., dans Helbig⁴ IV n° 3291; Koch/Sichtermann, RömSark 173 fig. 198; Schefold/Jung, SBV 101-102. - Époque d'Hadrien. - Thétis et Pélée, assis à dr., accueillent le cortège de divinités qui apportent leurs présents de mariage: de dr. à g., → Hephaistos, → Athena, les → Horai, puis un jeune garçon qui tient une torche renversée, suivi d'un adolescent chaudement vêtu (pantalon, tunique à manches longues, manteau, bottines) dont les cheveux longs sont ceints d'une couronne de fleurs; sur l'épaule g. il porte une torche et, de la main dr., tient une loutrophore. Cet adolescent est généralement interprété comme H., précédé de Vesper (→ Stellae). A l'extrémité g. s'éloigne une femme, poussée par un Eros: Iuno Pronuba (Robert), Virginitas (Simon), Aphrodite (Bendinelli), Thétis (Schefold).

b) Noces d'Alexandre et de Roxane

6. (= Eros 641) Tableau perdu d'Aétion, connu par une description de Lucien (Lukianos, Herodotus sive Aetion 4-6). - Reinach, RecMilliet n° 507. - 327-324 av. J.-C. - Roxane assise sur le lit nuptial, devant Alexandre debout qui lui présente une couronne. Autour de nombreux Érotes et, près du couple, Héphestion avec une torche, appuyé sur un adolescent dans la fleur de l'âge (μειραιὸν πᾶνν ἀπαλὸν) dont Lucien pense qu'il s'agit d'H.

c) Mariage humain

7. (= Homonoia/Concordia 77* avec bibl.) Sarcophage de marbre. Leningrad, Ermitage A.433. De Monticelli. - Vers 180 ap. J.-C. - Au centre, le couple d'époux de part et d'autre d'un autel, Concordia à l'arrière-plan. A dr., une Victoire couronnant l'époux, puis des serviteurs avec le taureau du sacrifice. A g., du côté de l'épouse, Vénus et Eros, puis H. et trois femmes. Figuré sous les traits d'un jeune homme, H. est vêtu d'une tunique et tient des deux mains une grande torche enflammée.

C. Hyménaios comme symbole de l'union conjugale

8. (= Ares/Mars 357* avec bibl.) Autel de marbre. Rome, Mus. Naz. Rom. 324. D'Ostie. - Rendini, P., MusNazRom I n° 180 fig. p. 291. - Peu av. 124 ap. J.-C. - Sur la face principale, Mars et Vénus de face, côte à côte; entre eux vole un Eros, qui étend les bras derrière leur tête. A dr., à côté de Vénus, un adolescent de face, nu, une draperie jetée sur l'épaule g., tient une torche de la main g.: H.?

COMMENTAIRE

Le seul document où H. soit attesté de façon absolue, est la mosaïque de Chahba 2 datée de l'époque de la Tétrarchie. L'attitude du personnage - un bras levé par-dessus la tête, l'autre appuyé sur une colonnette - et son allure presque féminine sont des traits empruntés à l'imagerie de Dionysos: ils reproduisent en effet un type iconographique du dieu extrêmement répandu en Orient, et plus particulièrement en Égypte; à partir de l'époque impériale (→ Dionysos [in per. orientali] 24-26). N'étaient l'inscription et la torche tenue, comme le thyrsos, verticalement, le long de la colonnette, la confusion avec Dionysos serait permise. Il n'est pas impossible que cette ressemblance iconographique reflète le lien de parenté entre les deux divinités, attesté par certaines sources littéraires, surtout à époque tardive. Notons en outre que Dionysos a parfois reçu l'épithète de ὕμηναιος (Anth. Pal. 9, 524, 21). Très proche de l'image d'H. sur la mosaïque syrienne est la peinture de Pompéi 1, ce qui permet de confirmer l'interprétation avancée depuis longtemps pour cette dernière, mais que l'absence d'inscription et de parallèle iconographique rendait très incertaine. Cette identification se fondait exclusivement sur les attributs du personnage - torche, couronne dans les cheveux, couronne dans la main - et sans doute aussi sur son allure féminine - cheveux longs et bouclés, hanchement très prononcé - que soulignent abondamment aussi les sources littéraires. La similitude de sujet - les noces de Thétis et Pélée - entre la mosaïque de Chahba et les deux mosaïques d'Afrique du Nord à peu près contemporaines (3-4) nous autorise à reconnaître H., à l'extrémité g. sur la mosaïque de Cherchel, à dr., dans l'encadrement d'une porte, sur celle de Béjaia (3) où il partage avec deux Tritons la fonction de porteur de torche. Comme à Chahba, il a dans les deux cas le buste nu et, sur 4, les cheveux tombent sur les épaules en longues mèches.

Plus hypothétique est l'interprétation du jeune homme portant une torche et une loutrophore sur le sarcophage de la Villa Albani (5), qui illustre également les noces de Thétis et Pélée. On y a généralement reconnu H., précédé par Vesper sous les traits d'un garçonnet: les deux noms sont en effet associés dans les épithalames, déjà chez Sappho (fig. 104a Voigt), plus tard chez Catulle. Mais l'H. du sarcophage a peu de points communs avec ceux des mosaïques: aucun trait féminin dans le personnage, sinon peut-être dans la chevelure; certes il est vêtu d'un manteau et chaussé de bottines, détails vestimentaires notés par Catulle, et il porte torche et couronne de fleurs, mais ce sont là - comme la loutrophore - les accessoires traditionnels de l'iconographie nuptiale, ce qui nous invite à n'avancer qu'avec prudence le nom d'H. lorsqu'un jeune homme couronné et porteur de torche participe à un cortège nuptial, même dans un contexte mythique. La même incertitude demeure donc pour l'interprétation du jeune homme à la torche sur le sarcophage de Leningrad 7. S'agissant cette fois d'un mariage humain, on serait enclin à interpréter le personnage comme un membre anonyme du cortège nuptial. Toutefois la présence de Concordia, d'Aphrodite et d'Eros dans la même représentation montre que sphère humaine et sphère divine s'y mêlent étroitement. Le jeune homme à la torche est placé du côté de l'épouse, derrière Aphrodite et Eros et devant trois femmes que l'on interprète soit comme les Grâces, soit, plus vraisemblablement, comme les Horai. S'il s'agissait d'un porteur de torche anonyme, ne l'eût-on pas plutôt placé du côté des humains, à dr. de l'époux? On notera à cet égard que dans les sources littéraires H. apparaît comme celui qui conduit la jeune fille vers la demeure de l'époux, rôle qui rappelle évidemment la signification première du mot ὕμηναιος, le chant joyeux qui accompagne la jeune fille vers sa nouvelle demeure.

Les représentations mentionnées jusqu'ici sont toutes datées de l'époque romaine. La seule image grecque du dieu serait celle mentionnée par Lucien dans sa description du tableau des Noces d'Alexandre et de Roxane par Aétion (1). Toutefois Lucien lui-même n'est pas sûr de son interprétation, qu'il semble fonder uniquement - en l'absence, précise-t-il, d'inscription - sur la beauté et la jeunesse du personnage représenté. C'est Héphestion, en effet, et non pas H., qui, tenant une torche enflammée, remplit ici auprès des époux le rôle de παροχος et de νυμφαγωγός. L'iconographie du dieu H. ne semble donc pas encore fixée à cette époque et sans doute n'est-ce que sous l'influence de la poésie lyrique romaine que sera forgée l'image de l'adolescent efféminé, couronné de fleurs et porteur de torche. On retiendra des documents mentionnés qu'H. n'est en tous cas jamais ailé et qu'il est étroitement associé à la cérémonie du mariage lui-même. Pour cette raison, il me paraît exclu de le reconnaître dans l'Eros, ailé ou même aptère, qui accompagne, torche en main, les scènes de dextrarum iunctio (→ Eros/Amor, Cupido 58. 60; → Homonoia/Concordia 74), à plus forte raison dans les nombreuses illustrations romaines de la découverte d'Endymion par Séléné (→ Endymion 71. 73. 77-78) où l'adolescent à la torche qui précède Séléné, souvent interprété comme H., est plus probablement Hespéros. Il n'est pas impossible, en revanche, de reconnaître H. dans l'adolescent à la torche qui accompagne Mars et Vénus sur l'autel d'Ostie (8): il est clairement distingué, par sa taille et par l'absence d'ailes, de l'Eros qui volette au-dessus du couple. La présence d'H. donnerait un sens nouveau à la représentation: plus qu'à une rencontre galante ou érotique entre les deux divinités, c'est à leur union conjugale, légitime qu'il est fait allusion, union légitime dont H. est en quelque sorte le garant.

PASCALE LINANT DE BELLEFONDS

HYPALPA → LIMC Suppl.

HYPELAIOS

(ὑπέλαιος) Quelle, eher (nach Kreophylos) am Heiligen Hafen als (nach Strabon) bei dem (noch nicht aufgefundenen) Athenaheligtum von Ephesos. Sie spielt in der ephesischen Gründungssage eine Rolle. Die athenischen Kolonisten unter der Führung von → Androklos, Sohn des Königs Kodros, erhielten einen Orakelspruch, nach dem ein Fisch und ein Eber die Stelle der zu gründenden Stadt bezeichnen würden. Als Fischer bei der Quelle H. ihr Mahl einnahmen, sprang ein Fisch mit einem Stück Kohle in ein Gehölz, das Feuer fing und einen Eber in die Flucht trieb. Dieser wurde dort getötet, wo später der Athenatempel von Ephesos stand.

LITERARISCHE QUELLEN: Kreophylos, FG+H 417 F 1; Strabon 14, I, 4 p. 634; 14, I, 21 p. 640.

BIBLIOGRAPHIE: Büchner, L., REV 2 (1905) 2785 ff. s. v. «Ephesos»; Benndorf, O., in Ephesos I (1906) 53-54; Radet, G., Ephesiaca (1922) 21 ff., bes. 27 Nr. 6.

I. * (= Androklos 1*) Figur 2 auf Block A des Marmorfrieses vom Hadrianstempel am Embolos («Kuretenstraße») in Ephesos. Selçuk, Mus. 713. Gefunden 1956. - Miltner, F., OeJh 44, 1959 Beibl. 269 ff. Abb. 133; Saporiti, N., in Essays in Memory of C. Lehmann (1964) 270-271 Abb. 2; Fleischer, R., in Festschr. F. Eichler (1967) 26 A 2 Abb. 14, S. 34 ff.; Brenk, B., IstanbMitt 18, 1968, 238 ff. Taf. 73, 1; Fleischer, R., in Bammer, A./Fleischer, R./Knibbe, D., Führer durch das Archäologische Museum in Selçuk-Ephesos (1974) 78 ff.; Foss, C., Ephesos after Antiquity (1979) 72. 74 Anm. 53; Stutzinger, D., Die frühchristlichen Sarkophagreliefs aus Rom (1982) 149 ff.; Koch, G., Anz-

Alt 41, 1988, 87. – Die Quellnymph (A 2) sitzt auf unregelmäßig gestaltetem Terrain, trägt einen Mantel um die Hüften, legt die r. Hand auf ihren Kopf und die l. auf einen zweihenkeligen Krug mit Mündung nach unten. L. von ihr steht wohl eine weitere Lokalpersonifikation (A 1), r. erscheint ein gerüsteter Krieger (A 3, Androklos?). In der r. anschließenden Szene jagt Androklos (A 4) zu Pferd den Eber. Ein gestürzter Krieger (A 5) r. unten wird sich auf die Kämpfe der Griechen gegen die einheimischen Karer und Leleger beziehen.

Unsere Personifikation, die dem üblichen Typus von Quellnymphen (→ Nymphai) folgt, ist lediglich aus dem Zusammenhang der dargestellten Handlung als H. zu benennen. In der ephesischen Münzprägung ist H. im Gegensatz zu anderen Landschaftspersonifikationen nicht dargestellt. Der aus vier Platten, die teilweise nachträglich verkürzt wurden, bestehende Fries des Hadrianstempels wurde von F. Miltner teilweise in die 1. Hälfte des 3. Jh. n. Chr. (Block A–C), teilweise in theodosianische Zeit (Block D) datiert. N. Saporiti wollte die Datierung von Block A–C auf 210–220 n. Chr. einengen. R. Fleischer sprach sich für gleichzeitige Entstehung aller vier Blöcke aus und datierte in das 3. Viertel des 4. Jh. n. Chr. B. Brenk hielt den Fries ebenfalls für gleichzeitig, aber bereits in tetrarchischer Zeit entstanden. Zuletzt vertrat D. Stutzinger eine Datierung in die Achtzigerjahre des 4. Jh., G. Koch stimmte ihr zu. ROBERT FLEISCHER

HYPERBIOS

(Υπέρβιος, le Violent) Géant (→ Gigantes).

1. (= Gigantes 170 avec bibl., = Hera 377, = Hermes 826 [face B]) Amphore à col attique à f. n. Paris, Louvre E 732. – 560–550 av. J.-C. – A. H. (HYΠΗΡΒΙΟΣ [sic]) est l'un des trois Géants armés qui affrontent → Zeus. Sur le même vase, face B, l'adversaire d'Hermès se nomme ...βιος, à lire plutôt → Polybios. FRANCIS VIAN HYPERBOREIOI → LIMC Suppl.

HYPEREIA

(Υπέρεια, Hyperia) Quellnymph in Pherai (Thessalien). Ursprünglich wohl genereller Name für hochgelegene Quellen, wird H. für die Quelle in Pherai erst in der Zeit des Sophokles belegbar. Im Zentrum von Pherai gelegen, wird auf den Münzen der Stadt die H. oft als wasserspeiender Löwenkopf verkörpert, aber auch vereinzelt als Nympe.

LITERARISCHE QUELLEN bei Kirsten; wichtig vor allem Soph., TrGF IV F 911; Plin. nat. 4, 29; Strabon 9, 439. Kirsten erörtert die schwierige Quellenlage.

BIBLIOGRAPHIE: Imhoof-Blumer, F., Nymphen und Chariten auf griechischen Münzen (1908) 65, 75; Kirsten, E., RE Suppl. VII (1940) 994–996 s. v. «Pherai»; Moustaka, A., Kulte und Mythen auf thessalischen Münzen (1983) 32, 110; Philippson, P., Thessalische Mythologie (1944) 66, 71; Rogers, E., The Copper Coinage of Thessaly (1932) 161–168.

KATALOG

Münzen von Pherai

a) Stehende Hyperiea

1.* AR Hemidrachmon, späteres 4. Jh. v. Chr. – Babelon, Traité II 4 Nr. 607 Taf. 294, 9; Imhoof-Blumer Taf. 5, 38; Moustaka 111, 72 Taf. 10. – Rs.: Stehende H. in Chiton und Himation nach l., die Rechte auf die Quelle legend, die aus einem Löwenkopf sprudelt. Davor ΑΕ/ΤΟ in Kranz. Vs.: Göttinnenkopf mit Myrtenkranz = Enodia?

b) Kopf der Hyperiea

2.* AR Stater (äginäische Währung), um 350 v. Chr. – MuM/Leu AG, Griech. Münzen aus der Slg. eines Kunstfreundes (1974) 195; Moustaka 110, 67 Taf. 10. – Vs.: Kopf der H. fast von vorne mit Schilfkranz, zur Seite Fisch nach oben. Rs. (= Enodia 2*): Reitende Enodia mit Fackel, oben Löwenkopf-Wasserspeier.

3. AR Hemidrachmen und AE, um 350 v. Chr. – Babelon, Traité II 4 Nr. 624, 625 (wo der Fisch fälschlich als Fackel bezeichnet ist), Taf. 295, 3, 4; Imhoof-Blumer Taf. 5, 10, 11; Rogers 168, 531–533. – Ähnliche Typen wie 2.

4. AR Stater (äginäische Währung), um 360 v. Chr. – Babelon, Traité II 4 Nr. 606. Taf. 294, 8; Moustaka 110, 68 Taf. 10. – Vs.: Kopf der H. mit Schilfkranz nach r., dahinter Löwenkopf-Wasserspeier. Rs. (= Artemis 888*): Reitende Enodia mit zwei Fackeln, oben ΑΕΤ/ΟΜΕ/ΔΟΝ in Kranz.

KOMMENTAR

Die Benennung der weiblichen Gottheiten auf den Münzen von Pherai ist nicht unproblematisch, wie die Deutungen von Kirsten, Philippson und Moustaka zeigen. Die zentrale Stellung des Kultes der H. in Pherai wird bezeugt durch das Vorkommen des wasserspendenden Löwenkopfes als Hauptbild auf den Münzen (z. B. Babelon, Traité II 4 Taf. 294, 10; Rogers 163, 511–514) oder als Beizeichen (1–4; Babelon, Traité II 4 Taf. 294, 1: 5. Jh. v. Chr.). Wir dürfen annehmen, daß H. überall dort dargestellt ist, wo ein Fisch oder ein Löwenkopf-Wasserspeier den weiblichen Kopf begleitet, und wo dieser Kopf mit Schilf bekränzt ist. Dies hat als erster Imhoof-Blumer (S. 65) richtig gesehen. Singulär ist schließlich die schlichte Gestalt der stehenden H. (1). Offen bleibt die Deutung der Inschrift Αστρουέδων, wohl kaum ein Beamtenname, wie angenommen wird (Moustaka S. 33), sondern eher die Epiklese der Gottheit: Für einen Beamtennamen wäre die Bekränzung und die Stelle auf dem Münzbild unerklärbar. HERBERT A. CAHN

HYPERION

(Υπερίων, Hyperion, Uprum) Titan (→ Titanes), Vater des → Helios, teils auch Beiname des Helios selbst.

LITERARISCHE QUELLEN: Homer überliefert H. als Beiwort, teils auch als selbständigen Namen des Sonnengottes Helios: Il. 8, 480; 19, 398; Od. 1, 8, 24; 12, 133, 263, 346, 374 (Υπεριονίδης nur Od. 12, 176). Auch spätere Quellen behalten für Helios und Sol teilweise die Bezeichnung H. bei (s. dazu Jessen 287). Anders dagegen verhält sich die Überlieferung bei Hesiod, der H. und Helios als Vater und Sohn trennt (theog. 134, 371–374). Danach gehört H. zur Generation der Titanen. Uranos und Gaia zeugten verschiedene Paare, darunter H. und Theia. Diese sind die Eltern der Gestirne Helios, → Selene (→ Astra, B) und → Eos. Auch dieses theogonische System wurde bei späteren Autoren wiederholt. Vermutlich gehörte es ursprünglich in eine Titanomachie, die in einem uns nicht erhaltenen Epos geschildert war. Doch ist die Teilnahme des H. am Kampf in den antiken Quellen unklar. Nach Schol. Hom. Il. 14, 274 Dindorf wird H. als Tartarosgefährte des Kronos bezeichnet und ist damit als Mitkämpfer bestraft, während nach Serv. Aen. 6, 580 und 4, 119 Sol (Helios; nach Wüst 1502 H.) sich vor dem Kampf von den Titanen trennt und nicht in den Tartaros gelangt. Wüst erklärt dies damit, daß nach antiker Vorstellung der Sonnengott nicht den Tartaros als Aufenthaltsort haben kann.

BIBLIOGRAPHIE: Jessen, O., RE IX 1 (1914) 287–288 s. v. «Hyperion 1–2»; Wüst, E., RE VI A 2 (1936) 1501–1507 s. v. «Titanes» (passim).

KATALOG

Den schriftlichen Quellen zufolge wären Darstellungen des H. zu erwarten, die entweder – laut Homer – identisch mit denen des Helios sind (s. dazu → Helios) oder – nach der anderen Version von H. als Titan und Vater des Helios – Wiedergaben der Titanomachie, die aber bislang nicht gesichert sind, s. Hampe, R., GGA 215 Nr. 3/4, 1963, 125–152. Insofern werden hier aus diesen beiden Bereichen keine Darstellungen angeführt.

1.* (= Gigantes 393) Volutenkrater, fr., apul. New York, MMA 1919.192.81, 6, 13, 15, 17. – RVAp I 402, 34: Maler der Dubliner Situlae, Taf. 141, 4 (dort nur Pentheussage abgebildet); Mayo, Vases Magna- Graecia 110 Nr. 33 Abb. (Inv. 6). – Um 360 v. Chr. – Darstellung verschiedener Sagen. Nach Trendall gehören zu diesem Volutenkrater auch zwei Fragmente, die (Inv. 6) Pegasos, sowie Zeus und Nike auf einem Viergespann und (Inv. 13) Kopf und Hände eines Mannes mit Raubtierkappe auf dem Kopf, ein Pferdebein sowie Reste zweier weiterer Personen zeigen. Der Mann mit der Fellmütze hat beide Hände, die ebenfalls in das Fell gewickelt sind, abwehrend erhoben und scheint – nach seiner Haltung zu schließen – bereits besiegt zu Boden zu gehen. Das Pferdebein oberhalb gehört sicher zum Viergespann der Sieger in diesem Kampf. Da die Inschrift den Fellträger H. (ΥΠΕΡΙΩΝ) nennt, denkt Trendall an eine Darstellung der Titanomachie. Doch ist uns dieses Thema in der Bildkunst sonst nicht überliefert und H. als Vater des Helios und Titan wäre wohl nicht mit Tierfell bekleidet dargestellt worden. Vielmehr paßt dieses wie auch das Kampfschema eher zu einem Giganten, weshalb es sich sicher um eine Wiedergabe der Gigantomachie handelt. Daß der Vasenmaler hier einem Giganten einen Titanennamen beigeschrieben hat, beruht wohl auf einer Verwechslung dieser beiden großen Götterkämpfe, die in der Antike häufiger vorkam, vgl. dazu Wüst 1501–1503.

2. (= Helios/Usil 20* mit Lit.) Bronzegriffspiegel, etruskisch. London, BM Br. 707. Aus Vulci. – Gerhard, EtrSp IV 1 Taf. 364; de Simone, Entlehnungen I 122. – Spätes 4. Jh. v. Chr. – R. von dem in Wagenlenkertracht dargestellten Usil steht Uprum (= Hyperion) in Vorderansicht, wendet aber seinen Kopf zu Usil. Er ist nackt bis auf einen Rückenmantel. In der gesenkten r. Hand hält er einen Zweig. Das athletische und jugendliche Aussehen des Uprum bereitete Schwierigkeiten, hier den Vater des Usil zu sehen und gab deshalb Anlaß zu anderen Deutungsvorschlägen, s. → Helios/Usil, Kommentar zu 20. Doch muß die Bartlosigkeit des Uprum ihn nicht unbedingt als jugendlich erweisen. Wie auch immer die Kenntnis der Etrusker von der Genealogie des Helios war, die Zusammenstellung beider Figuren hier deutet auf die Kenntnis einer Beziehung zwischen Helios und H., sei es als Vater und Sohn, sei es von H. als Beiname des Usil oder einer anderen Verbindung.

UNSICHERE DARSTELLUNGEN

3. Wegen der erschlossenen Präsenz der Familie des H. in Gestalt von Theia, Helios, Eos, Selene innerhalb der Titanendarstellungen in der Gigantomachie am Südfries des Pergamonaltares wurde auch die Anwesenheit von H. selbst postuliert, dagegen Simon, Pergamon 35–37.

KOMMENTAR

Der Titan H. ist uns aus griechischen Darstellungen nicht bekannt. Auf 1 ist lediglich einem Giganten der Name H. beigeschrieben. Nur auf dem etruskischen Spiegel 2 ist wohl der Vater des Helios gemeint. Allerdings hat er hier keine charakteristische Ikonographie, sondern hat eher die Gestalt eines Athleten.

Da es keine gesicherten Wiedergaben der Titanomachie gibt, müssen weitere, auf Deutungen beruhende Versuche, H. auf Denkmälern zu erkennen, hypothetisch bleiben. ANNELIESE KOSSATZ-DEISSMANN

HYPERMESTRA

Auch Hypermnestra (ὑπερμήστρα, ὑπερμνήστρα). Danaide (→ Danaides), Tochter des → Danaos, Gemahlin des Aigyptiden Lynkeus, Mutter des Abas.

LITERARISCHE QUELLEN: Zur Danaidsage → Danaos, → Danaides. – Einzige der 50 Danaiden, die ihren Gemahl Lynkeus (oder Lyrkeus) in der Hochzeitsnacht gegen den ausdrücklichen Tötungsbefehl ihres Vaters Danaos am Leben ließ (Schol. Eur. Hec. 886). Sie schonte ihn entweder, weil sie sich in ihn verliebt hatte (Aischyl. Prom. 865–868; vgl. Hor. c. 3, 11, 33–52; Schol. Pind. P. 9, 195b) oder, weil Lynkeus ihre Jungfräulichkeit gewahrt hatte (Apollod. bibl. 2 [21] 1, 5, 10) oder, nach röm. Version, aus pietas (Ov. her. 14, 64).

Im verlorenen 3. Stück der Danaidentrilogie des Aischylos wird H. wahrscheinlich gefangengenommen und von Danaos für ihren Ungehorsam vor ein Gericht gestellt; durch den Götterbeistand der Aphrodite aber freigesprochen (Aischyl. TrGF III F 44). Von einem Prozeß gegen H. weiß auch Paus. 2, 20, 7 zu berichten. Der Platz, auf dem die Volksversammlung über H. Gericht hielt, hieß noch zu Paus.' Zeit Kriterion. Dem Lynkeus hatte H. noch in der Hochzeitsnacht zur Flucht in das etwa sieben Meilen entfernte Lyrkeia (oder Lynkeia) verholfen. Da Lyrkeia so weit von Argos entfernt lag, mußte Lynkeus seine geglückte Flucht der H. durch Leuchtfeuer oder Fackelzeichen signalisieren. Nach Paus. 2, 25, 4–5 werden die jährlichen Fackelfeste in Lyrkeia und Argos zur Erinnerung an diese Nacht gefeiert. Nach dem Freispruch weihte H. eine Statue der Aphrodite Nikephoros (Paus. 2, 19, 6), aus Dankbarkeit für die Fürsprache der Göttin vor Gericht, und der Artemis-Peitho ein Heiligtum (Paus. 2, 21, 1), was wohl im Zusammenhang mit dem Bericht des Apollod. gesehen werden muß (s. oben). Über die Folgezeit der Bluthochzeit gehen die Berichte der Mythographen auseinander. Nach Paus. 2, 16, 2 hatten H. und Lynkeus einen Sohn Abas, der später König von Argos wurde. Nach Schol. Eur. Hec. 886 soll Lynkeus den Danaos und alle Danaiden getötet haben, um in Argos selbst zu regieren. Der bekanntesten Sagenversion zufolge starben alle Schwestern der H. unverheiratet und wurden von den Totenrichtern dazu verurteilt, Wasser in ein durchlöcheriges oder bodenloses Faß zu gießen, als Strafe für den Gattenmord (→ Danaides). Durch ihren Sohn Abas wurden H. und Lynkeus zu Stammeltern berühmter Heroen (→ Herakles, → Perseus). Von einem gemeinsamen Grab für H. und Lynkeus berichten: Paus. 2, 21, 2; Hyg. fab. 168. Außer H. hatte nur noch eine Schwester der H. ein besonderes Schicksal, die Poseidongeliebte → Amymone.

BIBLIOGRAPHIE: Bernhard, J., ML I 2 (1886–90) 2843–2844 s.v. «Hypermnestra»; Jessen, O., RE IX 1 (1914) 289–292 s.v. «Hypermnestra»; Scichilone, G., EAA IV (1961) 178–179 s.v. «Hypermnestra»; Kossatz, Dramen 45–62.

KATALOG

A. Hypermnestra als Stammutter der Könige von Argos

1. Statuengruppe, Bronze. Delphi, nördlich der Heiligen Straße, gegenüber von den «Epigonen» aufgestellt. Nicht erhalten. – Paus. 10, 10, 5; Bourguet, E., FDelphes III 1 (1910–29) 41–73 Abb. 20–21 Taf. 3, 1–2; Pomtow, H., RE Suppl. IV (1924) 1230–1233; Pouilloux, J./Roux, G., Enigmes à Delphes (1936) 46–55, zu H. bes. 48–50 Abb. 14–15; Schanz, H. L., Greek Sculptural Groups, Archaic and Classical (1980) 57–60; Jacob-Felsch, M., Die Entwicklung griechischer Statuenbasen (1969) 66. 70 Anm. 205 Kat. II 101. – Von Paus. als Weihgeschenk der Argiver anlässlich der Befreiung Messeniens im Jahre 369 v. Chr. beschrieben. Der Künstlername Antiphanes von Argos ist auf der wiedergefundenen Basis erhalten. Die Heroengruppe bestand aus 20 Bronzestatuen, deren halbkreisförmige Kalksteinbasis mit den Inschriften der Namen noch heute in situ erhalten ist. Die von Paus. genannten Könige von Argos standen in der westlichen Hälfte der halbrunden Basis. Sie waren in genealogischer Abfolge aufgereiht, angefangen von Danaos über Lynkeus bis zu Herakles und Perseus. Nach Paus. stand H., deren Basisblock nicht erhalten ist, zwischen Danaos und Lynkeus. Daß H. als Frau unter den Heroen und Königen von Argos dargestellt ist, hängt wohl mit ihrer Rolle als «Stammutter» in der argivischen Königsgeschichte zusammen.

2.* Marmorstatue. Früher Kunsthandel Sotheby (1929/1930), dann Kunsthandel Genf. – Arndt, P., Corolla L. Curtius (1937) 109–113 Taf. 32–34, 1; Meyer, H., Kunst und Geschichte (1984) 97; Lefèvre, E., Das Bildprogramm des Apollo-Tempels auf dem Palatin, Xenia 24 (1989) 12–16. 25 Abb. 4. – Um 40–30 v. Chr. – Die etwas unterlebensgroße Sitzstatue ist mit einem antiken, aber nicht zugehörigen Aphrodite-Kopf (vgl. BrBr 749) ergänzt. H. auf einem Felsen sitzend dargestellt, auf dem ihr Gewand als Unterlage dient. In der r., auf dem Schoß liegenden Hand hält sie ein kurzes, halb unter dem Gewand verstecktes Schwert, dessen Gurt auf der l. Seite herabhängt. Der Unterarm mit der l. Hand, auf die H. nachdenklich ihren Kopf stützt, ist (wohl richtig) ergänzt. Nach Arndt 111 ist H. im Augenblick der Entscheidung wiedergegeben. Der Felsensitz widerspricht seiner Meinung nach nicht den Schriftquellen, nach denen die Hochzeit an den Ufern des Sees von Lerna stattgefunden haben soll, in den die Danaiden nach der Bluttat die Köpfe der Aigyptosöhne versenkt haben. Arndt 112 verbindet die Sitzfigur der H. mit dem Danaiden-Zyklus des Apollotempels vom Palatin (vgl. → Danaides

6 und 40), der von einer großartigen Portikus umgeben war, in deren Interkolumnien die 50 Danaiden und ihre 50 Ehemänner, die Aigyptosöhne (Reiterstandbilder) aufgestellt waren. Während die Aigyptosöhne nach jüngster Forschungsmeinung (Lefèvre) als Angreifer dargestellt waren, setzten sich die Danaiden, von Danaos mit erhobenem Schwert angeführt, gegen die ägyptische Bedrohung zur Wehr. Wie Danaos, hat Augustus sich in vergleichbarer Lage gegen die ägyptische Gefahr (Antonius) bewährt. Nur unter diesem Aspekt, der den Ausdruck des Denkens dieser Zeit widerspiegelt, ist das Bildprogramm der Portikus mit den Danaiden und Aigyptiden verständlich.

DEUTUNG ABZULEHNEN

3. (= Aithra I 24) Gelbe Glaspaste. Rom, Slg. Sangiorgi (ehem. Perry-Warren). – Furtwängler, AG II 200 Nr. 7 Taf. 42, 7 (Theseus vor Aithra); Arndt, a. O. 2, 112–113 (H. und Lynkeus); Curtius L., OeJh 39, 1952, 21 (lehnt beide Deutungen ab); Bermond Montanari, G., EAA I (1958) 179–180 s.v. «Aithra»; Scichilone, G., EAA IV (1961) 178–179 s.v. «Hypermnestra»; Zwierlein-Diehl, E., Studien zum antiken Epos (1976) 24–26 Taf. 1 Abb. 3 (→ Protesilaos beim Abschied von Laodameia); Schefold/Jung, SB V 157 Abb. 140 (Protesilaos und Laodameia); vgl. auch Berger, E., QuadTic II, 1982, 59–105 und SlgLudwig III Nr. 228 (im Druck). – Republikanisch. – Die von Furtwängler vorgeschlagene Deutung auf Theseus vor Aithra ist der von Arndt – H. in der Brautnacht vor Lynkeus – vorzuziehen, da der statuarische Typ des «Theseus» auch als Einzelfigur auf Gemmen erscheint (vgl. Berger 1982, 89 Abb. 30), was für Lynkeus unwahrscheinlich ist. Außerdem hält der stehende Jüngling das Schwert in der Hand und nicht die sich entschleiende Sitzende wie bei 2.

B. Hypermnestra bei der Ankunft in Argos

DEUTUNG HYPOTHETISCH

4. (= Danaos 2*) Hydria, att. rf. Berlin (West) Staatl. Mus. 30928. Aus Athen. – ARV² 1109, 38: Nausikaamaler. – Um 460/50 v. Chr. – H.(?), mit einem Peplos über dem Chiton und durch Diadem und Schleier über dem Hinterhaupt als Braut (vgl. → Aphrodite 1516*, → Herakles 1691*, → Hera 474*) dargestellt und dadurch von den anderen Danaiden abgehoben, hält ein Bündel Obeloi (Beazley, ARV² 1109, 38) im Arm, was vielleicht mit ihrer Rolle als Priesterin erklärt werden kann, denn H. wird in der Liste der Priesterinnen der Hera Argeia aufgeführt (Georg. Synkellos chronographia p. 296, 16 Niebuhr).

C. Hypermnestra und Lynkeus im Brautgemach

5.* Halsamphora, fr., camp. rf. Paestum, Mus. Naz. (Magazin). 1976 in S. Venera bei Paestum gefunden, unpubliziert. – Caivanomaler. – Um 340 v. Chr.

– Erhalten ist der obere Teil eines Gebäudes, dessen Ziegeldach von weißbemalten ionischen Säulen getragen wird. Im Vordergrund sind Reste zweier weiblicher Figuren mit den Namensbeischriften H. (ὑπερμνήστρα) und Iphidame (Ἰφιδάμει, = Ἰφιδάμη oder Ἰφιδάμεια). Von H. sind Kopf und Schulterpartie, von Iphidame nur der Oberkopf erhalten. Beide Figuren begeben sich, ihre Köpfe ins Profil nach r. gewendet, in das Innere des Hauses. Im Katalog der Danaiden bei Apollod. bibl. 2 (16–20) 1, 5 ist Iphidame nicht aufgeführt, als einzigen verwandten Namen nennt er Iphimedousa. Auf der zweiten dazugehörigen Scherbe ist das l. Bein eines auf dem Bettrand sitzenden (?) oder sich erhebenden Mannes zu erkennen und der kleinere r. Fuß einer weglauenden Frau (?). Zum zweiten Fragment vgl. die Scherben mit demselben Thema → Danaides 5*, die in der Komposition ähnlich scheinen. Während auf letzteren die Aigyptosöhne schon schlafend dargestellt sind, begeben sich die Hochzeitspaare auf den Scherben von Paestum wohl gerade zu Bett. Gemeinsam ist beiden Vasenbildern die Darstellung des Brautgemaches mit den weißbemalten Säulen, zwischen denen die Betten stehen.

6.* Glasbecher, sog. «Lynkeusbecher», röm. Köln, Röm.-Germ. Mus. Glas 295. Aus Köln. – Aus'm Weerth, E., BonnJbb 74, 1882, 65–68 Taf. 6; Fremersdorf, F., Die Denkmäler des röm. Köln 8, 1967, 144–145 Taf. 181–184; Doppelfeld, O., Römisches und fränkisches Glas in Köln (1966) 65–66 Taf. 155; Kossatz, Dramen 49 Abb. 3; Kat. Glass of the Caesars (1987) 198–199 Nr. 108 Abb. 199. – Spätes 2. Jh. n. Chr. – 3. Jh. n. Chr. (Fremersdorf). – H. (ὑπερμνήστρα) mit wehenden Gewändern und einem Dolch in der l. Hand verfolgt Lynkeus (ΛΥΝΚΕΥΣ), der nach r. laufend zu entfliehen versucht. Hinter H. ist das Schlafgemach durch einen Eingang mit Vorhang angedeutet, aus dem die Eilenden kommen. Lynkeus hat im Lauf den Kopf zurückgewendet, so daß er nicht sieht, daß → Pothos (ΠΟΘΟΣ, das Liebesverlangen) ihm zu Hilfe kommt und H. anderen Sinnes werden läßt. Bei Ov. her. 14, 45–46 zückt H. dreimal den Dolch und bringt es dreimal nicht fertig, den Mordbefehl ihres Vaters auszuführen. Der von Aphrodite gesandte Pothos deutet den guten Ausgang der Szene an. Bei Aischyl. Prom. 865 bewirkt ἱμερος (→ Himeros, Himeroi) die Sinnesänderung bei H.

D. Hypermnestra und Lynkeus auf einem Unterweltsbild

DEUTUNG MÖGLICH, ABER NICHT GESICHERT

7. (= Aphrodite 1529 [Seite B], = Erinys II, = Danaides 8*, = Hades 130, = Herakleida I 1) Volutenkrater, apul. rf. Karlsruhe, Bad. Landesmus. B4. Aus Ruvo. – RVAp I 43 I, 81 Taf. 160, 1: Umkreis des Lykurgomalers; Trendall, RFSIS 81 Abb. 151; CVA 2 Taf. 61–63; Cämmerer, B., JbBadWürtt 12, 1975, 47–50. – Um 350/40 v. Chr. – Unterweltsbild mit Hades und Persephone im Palast. R. vom Palast steht ein junges Paar, in dem Cämmerer Lynkeus und H. er-

Da es keine gesicherten Wiedergaben der Titanomachie gibt, müssen weitere, auf Deutungen beruhende Versuche, H. auf Denkmälern zu erkennen, hypothetisch bleiben. ANNELIESE KOSSATZ-DEISSMANN

HYPERMESTRA

Auch Hypermnestra (ὑπερμήστρα, ὑπερμήστρα). Danaide (→ Danaides), Tochter des → Danaos, Gemahlin des Aigyptiden Lynkeus, Mutter des Abas.

LITERARISCHE QUELLEN: Zur Danaidensage → Danaos, → Danaides. – Einzige der 50 Danaiden, die ihren Gemahl Lynkeus (oder Lyrkeus) in der Hochzeitsnacht gegen den ausdrücklichen Tötungsbefehl ihres Vaters Danaos am Leben ließ (Schol. Eur. Hec. 886). Sie schonte ihn entweder, weil sie sich in ihn verliebt hatte (Aischyl. Prom. 865–868; vgl. Hor. c. 3, 11, 33–52; Schol. Pind. P. 9, 195b) oder, weil Lynkeus ihre Jungfräulichkeit gewahrt hatte (Apolod. bibl. 2 [21] 1, 5, 10) oder, nach röm. Version, aus pietas (Ov. her. 14, 64).

Im verlorenen 3. Stück der Danaidentrilogie des Aischylos wird H. wahrscheinlich gefangengenommen und von Danaos für ihren Ungehorsam vor ein Gericht gestellt; durch den Götterbeistand der Aphrodite aber freigesprochen (Aischyl. TrGF III F 44). Von einem Prozeß gegen H. weiß auch Paus. 2, 20, 7 zu berichten. Der Platz, auf dem die Volksversammlung über H. Gericht hielt, hieß noch zu Paus.' Zeit Kriterion. Dem Lynkeus hatte H. noch in der Hochzeitsnacht zur Flucht in das etwa sieben Meilen entfernte Lyrkeia (oder Lynkeia) verholfen. Da Lyrkeia so weit von Argos entfernt lag, mußte Lynkeus seine geglückte Flucht der H. durch Leuchtfener oder Fackelzeichen signalisieren. Nach Paus. 2, 25, 4–5 werden die jährlichen Fackelfeste in Lyrkeia und Argos zur Erinnerung an diese Nacht gefeiert. Nach dem Freispruch weihte H. eine Statue der Aphrodite Nikephoros (Paus. 2, 19, 6), aus Dankbarkeit für die Fürsprache der Göttin vor Gericht, und der Artemis-Peitho ein Heiligtum (Paus. 2, 21, 1), was wohl im Zusammenhang mit dem Bericht des Apollod. gesehen werden muß (s. oben). Über die Folgezeit der Bluthochzeit gehen die Berichte der Mythographen auseinander. Nach Paus. 2, 16, 2 hatten H. und Lynkeus einen Sohn Abas, der später König von Argos wurde. Nach Schol. Eur. Hec. 886 soll Lynkeus den Danaos und alle Danaiden getötet haben, um in Argos selbst zu regieren. Der bekanntesten Sagenversion zufolge starben alle Schwestern der H. unverheiratet und wurden von den Totenrichtern dazu verurteilt, Wasser in ein durchlöcheriges oder bodenloses Faß zu gießen, als Strafe für den Gattenmord (→ Danaides). Durch ihren Sohn Abas wurden H. und Lynkeus zu Stammeltern berühmter Heroen (→ Herakles, → Perseus). Von einem gemeinsamen Grab für H. und Lynkeus berichten: Paus. 2, 21, 2; Hyg. fab. 168. Außer H. hatte nur noch eine Schwester der H. ein besonderes Schicksal, die Poseidongeliebte → Amymone.

BIBLIOGRAPHIE: Bernhard, J., ML 1 2 (1886–90) 2843–2844 s. v. «Hypermnestra»; Jessen, O., RE IX 1 (1914) 289–292 s. v. «Hypermnestra»; Scichilone, G., EAA IV (1961) 178–179 s. v. «Ipermnestra»; Kossatz, Dramen 45–62.

KATALOG

A. Hypermnestra als Stammutter der Könige von Argos

1. Statuengruppe, Bronze. Delphi, nördlich der Heiligen Straße, gegenüber von den «Epigonen» aufgestellt. Nicht erhalten. – Paus. 10, 10, 5; Bourguet, E., FDelphes III 1 (1910–29) 41–73 Abb. 20–21 Taf. 3, 1–2; Pomtow, H., RE Suppl. IV (1924) 1230–1233; Pouilloux, J./Roux, G., Enigmes à Delphes (1936) 46–55, zu H. bes. 48–50 Abb. 14–15; Schanz, H. L., Greek Sculptural Groups, Archaic and Classical (1980) 57–60; Jacob-Felsch, M., Die Entwicklung griechischer Statuenbasen (1969) 66. 70 Anm. 205 Kat. II 101. – Von Paus. als Weihgeschenk der Argiver anlässlich der Befreiung Messeniens im Jahre 369 v. Chr. beschrieben. Der Künstlername Antiphanes von Argos ist auf der wiedergefundenen Basis erhalten. Die Heroengruppe bestand aus 20 Bronzestatuen, deren halbkreisförmige Kalksteinbasis mit den Inschriften der Namen noch heute in situ erhalten ist. Die von Paus. genannten Könige von Argos standen in der westlichen Hälfte der halbrunden Basis. Sie waren in genealogischer Abfolge aufgereiht, angefangen von Danaos über Lynkeus bis zu Herakles und Perseus. Nach Paus. stand H., deren Basisblock nicht erhalten ist, zwischen Danaos und Lynkeus. Daß H. als Frau unter den Heroen und Königen von Argos dargestellt ist, hängt wohl mit ihrer Rolle als «Stammutter» in der argivischen Königsgeschichte zusammen.

2. * Marmorstatue. Früher Kunsthandel Sotheby (1929/1930), dann Kunsthandel Genf. – Arndt, P., Corolla L. Curtius (1937) 109–113 Taf. 32–34, 1; Meyer, H., Kunst und Geschichte (1984) 97; Lefèvre, E., Das Bildprogramm des Apollo-Tempels auf dem Palatin, Xenia 24 (1989) 12–16. 25 Abb. 4. – Um 40–30 v. Chr. – Die etwas unterlebensgroße Sitzstatue ist mit einem antiken, aber nicht zugehörigen Aphrodite-Kopf (vgl. BrBr 749) ergänzt. H. auf einem Felsen sitzend dargestellt, auf dem ihr Gewand als Unterlage dient. In der r., auf dem Schoß liegenden Hand hält sie ein kurzes, halb unter dem Gewand verstecktes Schwert, dessen Gurt auf der l. Seite herabhängt. Der Unterarm mit der l. Hand, auf die H. nachdenklich ihren Kopf stützt, ist (wohl richtig) ergänzt. Nach Arndt 111 ist H. im Augenblick der Entscheidung wiedergegeben. Der Felsensitz widerspricht seiner Meinung nach nicht den Schriftquellen, nach denen die Hochzeit an den Ufern des Sees von Lerna stattgefunden haben soll, in den die Danaiden nach der Bluttat die Köpfe der Aigyptosöhne versenkt haben. Arndt 112 verbindet die Sitzfigur der H. mit dem Danaiden-Zyklus des Apollotempels vom Palatin (vgl. → Danaides

6 und 40), der von einer großartigen Portikus umgeben war, in deren Interkolumnien die 50 Danaiden und ihre 50 Ehemänner, die Aigyptosöhne (Reiterstandbilder) aufgestellt waren. Während die Aigyptosöhne nach jüngster Forschungsmeinung (Lefèvre) als Angreifer dargestellt waren, setzten sich die Danaiden, von Danaos mit erhobenem Schwert angeführt, gegen die ägyptische Bedrohung zur Wehr. Wie Danaos, hat Augustus sich in vergleichbarer Lage gegen die ägyptische Gefahr (Antonius) bewährt. Nur unter diesem Aspekt, der den Ausdruck des Denkens dieser Zeit widerspiegelt, ist das Bildprogramm der Portikus mit den Danaiden und Aigyptiden verständlich.

DEUTUNG ABZULEHNEN

3. (= Aithra I 24) Gelbe Glaspaste. Rom, Slg. Sangiorgi (ehem. Perry-Warren). – Furtwängler, AG II 200 Nr. 7 Taf. 42, 7 (Theseus vor Aithra); Arndt, a. O. 2, 112–113 (H. und Lynkeus); Curtius L., Oefh 39, 1952, 21 (lehnt beide Deutungen ab); Bermond Montanari, G., EAA I (1958) 179–180 s. v. «Aithra»; Scichilone, G., EAA IV (1961) 178–179 s. v. «Ipermnestra»; Zwierlein-Diehl, E., Studien zum antiken Epos (1976) 24–26 Taf. 1 Abb. 3 (→ Protesilaos beim Abschied von Laodameia); Schefold/Jung, SB V 157 Abb. 140 (Protesilaos und Laodameia); vgl. auch Berger, E., Quadr. 11, 1982, 59–105 und Slg. Ludwig III Nr. 228 (im Druck). – Republikanisch. – Die von Furtwängler vorgeschlagene Deutung auf Theseus vor Lynkeus – vorzuziehen, da der statuarische Typ des «Theseus» auch als Einzelfigur auf Gemmen erscheint (vgl. Berger 1982, 89 Abb. 30), was für Lynkeus unwahrscheinlich ist. Außerdem hält der stehende Jüngling das Schwert in der Hand und nicht die sich entschleiernde Sitzende wie bei 2.

B. Hypermnestra bei der Ankunft in Argos

DEUTUNG HYPOTHETISCH

4. (= Danaos 2*) Hydria, att. rf. Berlin (West) Staatl. Mus. 30928. Aus Athen. – *ARV*² 1109, 38: Nausikaamaler. – Um 460/50 v. Chr. – H. (?), mit einem Peplos über dem Chiton und durch Diadem und Schleier über dem Hinterhaupt als Braut (vgl. → Aphrodite 1516*, → Herakles 1691*, → Hera 474*) dargestellt und dadurch von den anderen Danaiden abgehoben, hält ein Bündel Obeloi (Beazley, *ARV*² 1109, 38) im Arm, was vielleicht mit ihrer Rolle als Priesterin erklärt werden kann, denn H. wird in der Liste der Priesterinnen der Hera Argeia aufgeführt (Georg. Synkellos chronographia p. 296, 16 Niebuhr).

C. Hypermnestra und Lynkeus im Brautgemach

5. * Halsamphora, fr., camp. rf. Paestum, Mus. Naz. (Magazin). 1976 in S. Venera bei Paestum gefunden, unpubliziert. – Caivanomaler. – Um 340 v. Chr.

– Erhalten ist der obere Teil eines Gebäudes, dessen Ziegeldach von weißbemalten ionischen Säulen getragen wird. Im Vordergrund sind Reste zweier weiblicher Figuren mit den Namensbeischriften H. (ὑπερμήστρα) und Iphidame (Ἰφιδάμει, = Ἰφιδάμη oder Ἰφιδάμει(α)). Von H. sind Kopf und Schulterpartie, von Iphidame nur der Oberkopf erhalten. Beide Figuren begeben sich, ihre Köpfe ins Profil nach r. gewendet, in das Innere des Hauses. Im Katalog der Danaiden bei Apollod. bibl. 2 (16–20) 1, 5 ist Iphidame nicht aufgeführt, als einzigen verwandten Namen nennt er Iphimedousa. Auf der zweiten dazugehörigen Scherbe ist das l. Bein eines auf dem Bettrand sitzenden (?) oder sich erhebenden Mannes zu erkennen und der kleinere r. Fuß einer weglauenden Frau (?). Zum zweiten Fragment vgl. die Scherben mit demselben Thema → Danaides 5*, die in der Komposition ähnlich scheinen. Während auf letzteren die Aigyptosöhne schon schlafend dargestellt sind, begeben sich die Hochzeitspaare auf den Scherben von Paestum wohl gerade zu Bett. Gemeinsam ist beiden Vasenbildern die Darstellung des Brautgemaches mit den weißbemalten Säulen, zwischen denen die Betten stehen.

6. * Glasbecher, sog. «Lynkeusbecher», röm. Köln, Röm.-Germ. Mus. Glas 295. Aus Köln. – Aus'm Weerth, E., Bonnjbb 74, 1882, 65–68 Taf. 6; Fremersdorf, F., Die Denkmäler des röm. Köln 8, 1967, 144–145 Taf. 181–184; Doppelfeld, O., Römisches und fränkisches Glas in Köln (1966) 65–66 Taf. 155; Kossatz, Dramen 49 Abb. 3; Kat. Glass of the Caesars (1987) 198–199 Nr. 108 Abb. 199. – Spätes 2. Jh. n. Chr. – 3. Jh. n. Chr. (Fremersdorf). – H. (ὑπερμήστρα) mit wehenden Gewändern und einem Dolch in der l. Hand verfolgt Lynkeus (ΛΥΝΚΕΥΣ), der nach r. laufend zu entfliehen versucht. Hinter H. ist das Schlafgemach durch einen Eingang mit Vorhang angedeutet, aus dem die Eilenden kommen. Lynkeus hat im Laufen den Kopf zurückgewendet, so daß er nicht sieht, daß → Pothos (ΠΟΘΟΣ, das Liebesverlangen) ihm zu Hilfe kommt und H. anderen Sinnes werden läßt. Bei Ov. her. 14, 45–46 zückt H. dreimal den Dolch und bringt es dreimal nicht fertig, den Mordbefehl ihres Vaters auszuführen. Der von Aphrodite gesandte Pothos deutet den guten Ausgang der Szene an. Bei Aischyl. Prom. 865 bewirkt ἡμερος (→ Himeros, Himeroi) die Sinnesänderung bei H.

D. Hypermnestra und Lynkeus auf einem Unterweltsbild

DEUTUNG MÖGLICH, ABER NICHT GESICHERT

7. (= Aphrodite 1529 [Seite B], = Erinyes 11, = Danaides 8*, = Hades 130, = Herakleidae 11) Volutenkrater, apul. rf. Karlsruhe, Bad. Landesmus. B4. Aus Ruvo. – RVAp I 431, 81 Taf. 160, 1: Umkreis des Lykurgosmalers; Trendall, RFSIS 81 Abb. 151; CVA 2 Taf. 61–63; Cämmerer, B., JbBadWürtt 12, 1975, 47–50. – Um 350/40 v. Chr. – Unterweltsbild mit Hades und Persephone im Palast. R. vom Palast steht ein junges Paar, in dem Cämmerer Lynkeus und H. er-kennen will, weil die Frau in der l. Hand eine Hydria hält. Mit ihrer r. Hand vollführt H. einen Adorationsgestus. Der Jüngling vor H. hat einen großen Ährenkranz auf dem Kopf und scheint mit den Unterweltherrschern im Gespräch zu sein. Keuls (→ Danaides 8*) schreibt Triptolemos mit Fragezeichen (so auch CVA 2, 30). Aber Triptolemos auf Unterweltbildern wird alt und bärtig dargestellt (→ Aiakos 1. 2. 3). Ist Lynkeus mit H. auf diesem Unterweltbild gemeint, wie Cämmerer postuliert, so erscheinen die Danaide H. und Lynkeus hier als Eingeweihte der Mysterien von Eleusis, die den Glanz der Göttin im Jenseits schauen dürfen. Eine Verbindung der Danaiden zur Mysterienlehre der Demeter ergibt die Notiz des Herodot, nach der die Danaiden die Weißen der Demeter von Ägypten nach Argos mitgebracht haben sollen (Hdt. 2, 171). Bei H. ist das Wassergefäß also nur ein attributives Erkennungszeichen. Sie muß weder wie ihre Schwestern, die Danaiden, das versäumte bräutliche Reinigungsbad nachholen, noch die ursprüngliche Strafe der Uneingeweihten – das Wasserschöpfen – im Jenseits vollziehen.

Hypermestra 6

KOMMENTAR

Die Beischriften auf den Scherben von Paestum (5) aus dem 4. Jh. v. Chr. und die eingeritzten Namen H. und Lynkeus auf dem röm. Glasbecher des 3. Jh. n. Chr. (6) zeigen, daß der Danaidenmythos bis in die Spätantike lebendig war und dargestellt wurde, wobei durch die Hinzufügung des Pothos das Pietasmotiv (Ovid) von dem Motiv der Liebe überlagert wurde.

Die einzige gesicherte Darstellung der H. in der griech. Plastik kennen wir nur aus der Beschreibung des Paus. (1), der aber keinen festen Darstellungstypus für H. überliefert. Die Bronzegruppe in Delphi 1 und die Danaidengalerie (s. 2) auf der Südseite des Palatin in Rom verdanken ihre Weihung oder Aufstellung einer ganz bestimmten historischen bzw. politischen Situation. Während 1 eine rein repräsentative Demonstration von Argos in Delphi war, bei der H. nur mitdargestellt wurde, weil die Argiver ihre Geschlechter auf H. und Lynkeus zurückgeführt haben, ist die Sitzstatue 2 (wenn sie wirklich zu dem vielfigurigen Danaidenmonument gehörte) eher als gleichnishafte politische Anspielung des augusteischen Schuld- und Sühnegedankens zu interpretieren.

Auf der frühesten griech. Vase 4 ist H. vielleicht aus dem Kontext und aufgrund ihrer Attribute zu erschließen.

Bei dem apul. Unterweltbild 7 muß man sich fragen, ob auf diesen Darstellungen (vgl. auch die Gruppe hinter Orpheus auf → Hades 132) überhaupt ein mythischer Kontext angestrebt worden ist, oder ob nicht eher eine philosophische Jenseitslehre illustriert werden sollte, mit der dem Verstorbenen, in dessen Grab diese Vasen standen, durch die dargestellten mythischen Exempla Trost gespendet wurde. Während die Schwestern der H., die Danaiden, als Büsserinnen die ursprüngliche Strafe der Uneingeweihten – das Wasserschöpfen – nachvollziehen mußten (→ Danaides 7. 11. 13. 15. 17. 19–22. 24–31), scheint H. als Beispiel für die Überwindung des Hades gegolten zu haben.

GRATIA BERGER-DOER

HYPEROCHE → Hyperboreioi (LIMC Suppl.)

HYPERPHAS

(Υπέρφας, l'Arrogant). Géant (→ Gigantes).

1. (= Gigantes 2 avec renvois et bibl.) Frise nord du Trésor des Siphniens de Delphes. Delphes, Mus. – Peu avant 525 av. J.-C. – Nom de l'un des trois

Géants, vêtus de la panoplie, qui affrontent les Létoides. L'inscription avait été lue autrefois Hypertas. Il existe un héros béotien homonyme. Cf. Brinkmann, V., BCH 109, 1985, 92. FRANCIS VIAN

SOMNUS

(Somnus, Sopor) Divinité et personnification du sommeil. Le terme le plus usité, Somnus, contient de plus une allusion au rêve.

SOURCES LITTÉRAIRES: Pour la généalogie de S., la littérature d'époque romaine suit la tradition grecque: il est fils de la Nuit (→ Nyx) – seul Sen. (Herc. f. 1068) lui donne Astrée pour mère – et de l'Érèbe; il est frère de la mort, → Thanatos (Sen. Herc. f. 1069; Verg. Aen. 6, 278). Il est aussi suivant la tradition homérique l'époux de → Pasithea (→ Charis/Charites): Catullus 63, 43; il est également père des Songes et notamment de Morphée (Ov. met. 11, 633–635. 646–648). Fronton (de Feriis Alsiansibus 3, 9) ne lui donne aucune généalogie; il en fait un dieu créé par Jupiter (→ Zeus-Iuppiter).

S. est décrit comme un dieu jeune (Stat. silv. 5, 4, 1), ailé (Catullus 63, 42; Tib. 2, 1, 89–90; Sil. 10, 344. 351; Sen. Herc. f. 1068; Fronto de Fer. Als. 3, 12); Stat. (Theb. 10, 137) précise que ses ailes sont placées sur les tempes. C'est par ses ailes qu'il dispense le sommeil (Prop. 1, 3, 45; Sil. 10, 344–345. 354–356; Stat. silv. 5, 4, 16–17; Theb. 10, 148–151; cf. Ov. met. 8, 823–824). Il utilise aussi sa baguette (Stat. silv. 5, 4, 18) trempée dans l'eau du Léthé, ou les gouttes qui s'en écoulent (Verg. Aen. 5, 854–856; Sil. 10, 351–356), ou sa corne remplie de sucs soporifiques (Sil. 10, 351–352; Stat. Theb. 2, 144–145; 5, 199; 6, 27; Serv. Aen. 1, 692; 6, 893; Fronto de Fer. Als. 3, 10–11). Il endort aussi en recouvrant d'un voile (Tib. 3, 4, 55) ou même par sa simple présence (Stat. silv. 5, 4, 19).

Suivant la tradition d'Hésiode qui situe son domaine dans les Enfers (theog. 758–761), Verg. (Aen. 6, 278) le décrit dans le palais de Dis et Lucien (Lukianos v. h. 2, 32) dans l'île des Songes. On lui attribue aussi un séjour terrestre: suivant la version homérique (Hom. Od. 15, 230–231), Nonnos (Dion. 31, 110–113) qui en fait un dieu errant, cite parmi divers lieux où il vit Lemnos; d'autres auteurs mentionnent des régions fabuleuses: à l'Occident chez les Éthiopiens (Stat. Theb. 10, 84–88) ou dans le pays des Cimmériens (Ov. met. 11, 592–593).

Dans une contrée plongée dans l'obscurité et silencieuse (Ov. met. 11, 595–602; Stat. Theb. 10, 85–86. 92–98), peuplée d'animaux noirs et de plantes flétries (Stat. Theb. 10, 97–99), il occupe une caverne (Ov. met. 11, 592–593; Stat. Theb. 10, 86–87) dans un décor sombre (Ov. met. 11, 610–611; Tib. 2, 1, 90). Il vit lui-même endormi (Ov. met. 11, 612. 618–619. 648–649; Stat. Theb. 10, 106–110), tenant sa corne (Stat. Theb. 10, 111), entouré de pavots et de plantes soporifiques (Ov. met. 11, 605–606; Lukianos v. h. 2, 33) qui garnissent sa couche (Stat. Theb. 10, 107–108).

S. est généralement mentionné comme une divinité bénéfique et bienveillante pour les mortels. Il est le plus souvent qualifié de doux (lenis ou placidus: Ov. fast. 4, 653; met. 11, 623; Sen. Herc. f. 1077; mollis: Sil. 10, 344; mitis: Stat. Theb. 10, 126) et paresseux (Tib. 3, 4, 81). Il est désigné comme le consolateur des âmes (Tib. 3, 4, 19; Ov. met. 11, 624; Sen. Herc. f. 1066)

HYPIOS

(Υπιος) Fluß im östlichen Bithynien, heute Melen Çai. Auf den kaiserzeitlichen Münzen von Prusias, das am Oberlauf des H. liegt, ist der Flußgott dargestellt.

LITERARISCHE QUELLEN: bei Ruge.

BIBLIOGRAPHIE: v. Diest, W., Petermanns Mitteilungen Erg.-H. 94, 1889, 88; Imhoof-Blumer, Flußg 267; Robert, L., A travers l'Asie mineure (1980), 11–128; Ruge, W., REIX 1 (1914) 322 s. v. «Hypios».

KATALOG

Münzen von Prusias

a) Gelagerter Flußgott

1.* AE, Trajan (98–117 n. Chr.). – RecGén I 4, 604, 12 Taf. 104, 1. – Gelagerter H. mit Zweig vor einem Baum.

2. AE, M. Aurelius Caesar (139–161 n. Chr.). – RecGén I 4, 606, 25 Taf. 104, 10. – Gelagerter H. mit Blütenzweig und Füllhorn.

3.* AE, M. Aurelius Augustus (161–180 n. Chr.). – RecGén I 4, 607, 30 Taf. 104, 15. – Wie 2, Inschrift ΥΠΙΟΣ. – Gleicher Typus: L. Verus (161–169), RecGén I 4, 609, 44.

4.* AE, M. Aurelius Augustus (161–180 n. Chr.). – Imhoof-Blumer, Flußg 267, 234 (irrtümlich M. Aurelius Caesar) Taf. 8, 9; RecGén I 4, 607, 31 Taf. 104, 16; Robert 86 Abb. 6. – Gelagerter H. mit Blütenzweig und Schilfrohr. Inschrift ΥΠΙΟΣ.

b) Tyche und gelagerter Flußgott

5.* AE, Antoninus Pius (138–161 n. Chr.). – Imhoof-Blumer, Flußg 267, 232 Taf. 8, 7; RecGén I 4, 605, 17 Taf. 104, 3; SNG v. Aulock 889. – Sitzende Tyche, zu ihren Füßen gelagerter H.

KOMMENTAR

Dies sind Varianten des in der Kaiserzeit üblichen Schemas des gelagerten Flußgottes (→ Fluvii). Robert 104 weist ausführlich darauf hin, daß solche Varianten spezifische Eigenschaften des Ortes andeuten, in diesem Falle Holzverschiffung und reiche Bewaldung.

HERBERT A. CAHN

HYPNOS → LIMC Suppl.

avec un pouvoir de guérison sur les maux de l'esprit (Sen. Herc. f. 1080-1081. 1092-1094); il est dispensateur de la paix (Sen. Herc. f. 1072-1073) par l'oubli qu'il accorde (Nonn. Dion. 7, 141): cf. l'eau du Léthé qui imprègne sa baguette. Il amène le repos du corps (Ov. met. 11, 624-625; Sen. Herc. f. 1077; Fronto de Fer. Als. 3, 11). Il est tout-puissant sur les dieux et sur les hommes (Val. Fl. 4, 16) et invincible (Nonn. Dion. 31, 143. 158).

Mais, dieu multiforme, il peut en quelques occasions être décrit dans un contexte négatif. Ainsi pour Verg. Aen. 6, 273-281, il vit dans le palais de Dis entouré d'allégories néfastes. Dans quelques épisodes il participe à la perte de personnages condamnés par les dieux: ainsi Palinure (→ Palinouros) qu'il trompe en prenant un aspect familial (Verg. Aen. 5, 838-861), utilisé comme dieu des rêves (→ Oneiros) les capacités de métamorphose traditionnellement attribuées aux Songes (Ov. met. 11, 626. 633-643); et comme dieu du sommeil il endort les hommes de Lemnos (Stat. Theb. 5, 195-200), utilisant non plus ses attributs traditionnels mais les brumes de la mort et l'eau du → Styx, et sa corne qualifiée d'implacable.

Somnus et les rêves. S. est en étroite relation avec les rêves comme l'expriment son nom et leurs liens de parenté. Ils sont, dans toutes les descriptions de son domaine, réunis près de lui (Verg. Aen. 6, 238; Ov. met. 11, 614-615; Lukianos v. h. 2, 32); ils lui sont aussi subordonnés, c'est lui qui choisit le plus apte à transmettre ce qu'un autre dieu veut faire connaître à un mortel (Ov. met. 11, 587-588; 626-628. 647-648); pour Verg. (Aen. 6, 893-896) c'est par les portes du Sommeil que sont envoyées visions et songes. Il est aussi parfois désigné lui-même comme la divinité du rêve (Sen. Herc. f. 1070-1071; Nonn. Dion. 47, 345-346; Fronto de Fer. Als. 3, 13) qu'il suscite par le contact de son aile (Nonn. Dion. 5, 535; 7, 141); il peut ainsi transmettre des oracles (Sen. Herc. f. 1070-1071; Lukianos, Bis Acc. 1). Mais il est aussi dans ce rôle un dieu trompeur (Sen. Herc. f. 1070-1071; Tib. 3, 4, 56).

Somnus et les autres divinités. S., s'il n'a pas de mythe en propre, agit cependant dans plusieurs légendes à la demande d'un dieu. Sur l'ordre de Junon (→ Juno) il endort Jupiter dans un épisode calqué sur Hom. (Il. 14, 231-353), pour favoriser les Indiens dans leur combat contre Bacchus (→ Dionysos/Bacchus) (Nonn. Dion. 31, 110-32, 101), - ainsi que les Thébains pour favoriser les Épigones (Stat. Theb. 10, 126-131) et, pour causer leur perte, les hommes de Lemnos (Stat. Theb. 5, 195-200); à la demande de Neptune (→ Poseidon/Neptunus) il plonge dans le sommeil Palinure (Verg. Aen. 5, 838-861).

Il aide les dieux dans leurs amours; il prolonge le sommeil des hommes pour Jupiter et Alcmène (→ Alcmene) (Lukianos d. deor. 14), maintient → Endymion endormi pour Séléné (→ Selene/Luna) (Nonn. Dion. 48, 637-638) et endort les Nymphes (→ Nymphae), Nikaia (Nonn. Dion. 16, 282-286) et Aura (Nonn. Dion. 48, 621-759). Ces épisodes lui valent d'être désigné comme le serviteur ou le compagnon d'Amour (→ Eros/Amor, Cupido) (Nonn. Dion.

32, 97; 48, 637-638); il est aussi celui qui prépare les mariages (Nonn. Dion. 48, 636). Ses relations avec Amor sont aussi soulignées par la présence d'un groupe statuaire réunissant les deux divinités, dans son domaine (Stat. Theb. 10, 103) où il est aussi figuré en compagnie de Voluptas (Stat. Theb. 10, 101).

Dans d'autres contextes, S. apparaît encore en compagnie de Bacchus: il fuit devant le dieu quand celui-ci découvre Ariane (→ Ariadne) (Nonn. Dion. 47, 296-336), mais dans d'autres circonstances S. accompagne le dieu (Sil. 7, 205; Stat. Theb. 10, 102). S. est aussi en étroite relation avec d'autres divinités; → Quies (Stat. silv. 1, 6, 91; Theb. 10, 89) et la Nuit: il conduit son char (Stat. Theb. 2, 59) et se retire à l'aube avec elle, sa corne vidée (Stat. Theb. 6, 27); c'est elle par contre qui fabrique le suc pour endormir le monde (Ov. met. 11, 605-608): couronnée de pavots, elle peut amener les songes (Ov. fast. 4, 661-662) - tout comme, occasionnellement, Labor (Stat. Theb. 10, 102).

Le culte. Pour Apulée (Socr. 16, 155) S. n'est pas un dieu mais un démon supérieur et, malgré l'existence de dédicaces à S. (cf. infra, S. dans un contexte funéraire), on ne lui connaît pas de culte à Rome; le sacrifice que lui offre Numa (Ov. fast. 4, 653) semble bien être une création littéraire. De fait il n'est pas mentionné dans les indigitamenta où une autre divinité, Quies, recouvre quelques aspects de sa personnalité. Mais les cultes rendus en Grèce à Hypnos se perpétuent à l'époque romaine, à Sparte avec → Thanatos (Paus. 3, 18, 1), à Sicyone où il est en relation avec → Asklepios (Paus. 2, 10, 2) et à Trézène avec les Muses (→ Mousa, Mousai) (Paus. 2, 31, 3).

En dehors des mythes, S. intervient dans plusieurs domaines de l'activité humaine.

Somnus dans le domaine funéraire. L'idée du sommeil est fréquemment associée à la mort, et ce lien est souligné par la parenté qui unit les deux divinités dès les généalogies les plus anciennes. Cette association est très fréquemment exprimée dans la littérature sous forme de métaphore (Catullus 5, 5-6; Hor. c. 1, 24, 5-6; 3, 11, 38-39; Verg. Aen. 6, 522; 10, 745; 12, 309-310): la mort est représentée par le sommeil et, au contraire, Apul. (met. 6, 21) compare le sommeil de → Psyche à la mort.

La même thématique est exploitée dans le domaine philosophique, que ce soit par Lucr. (3, 909-921), par Cic. (Tusc. 1, 91-92) ou par Sen. (Herc. f. 1075-1076) pour qui le sommeil est un entraînement nécessaire à la mort. A partir de l'époque d'Auguste cette image littéraire apparaît dans les inscriptions funéraires (CEpigr. 1811). D'autres inscriptions comportent une dédicace à la divinité S. comme gardien du tombeau ou comme psychopompe: il porte les épithètes d'Aeternus (CIL VI 10468. 19966. 10848. 15983), Aeternalis (CIL VI 10707a. 12123. 13241. 10693. 18850. 28875), Perpetuali (sic: CIL VI 19966), S. sepulchro aeternali (CIL VI 17430). Cette comparaison, déjà utilisée à l'époque grecque et qui se développe à l'époque romaine jusqu'à devenir un lieu commun, se perpétuera à l'époque chrétienne.

Somnus dans le domaine médical. Le lien entre S. et Esculape, attesté dans les croyances grecques, en particulier par le biais des sanctuaires à incubation, est aussi connu dans le monde romain bien que les témoignages soient assez rares et uniquement épigraphiques. S. est nommé parmi les divinités de la santé aux côtés d'Hygie (→ Hygieia) et de → Salus dans les temples d'Esculape (Orelli 1572 sq.; Henzen 5736-5738, 46. 65) à Rome, en Gaule et en Espagne (CIL II 2407), et à Éphèse à l'époque néronienne (Egger, R., Wiener prähistorische Zeitschrift 19, 1932, 320; Ephesos IV n° 23).

BIBLIOGRAPHIE: Boucher, S., «A propos de deux figures d'Hypnos», Bull. des musées et des monuments lyonnais 5, 1972, 7-14; Boucher, Recherches; Boyancé P., «Le Sommeil et l'immortalité», MEFRA 45, 1928, 97-105; Cumont, Symb. passim; Guerrini, L., EAA IV (1961) 62-63 s. v. «Hypnos»; Hild, J. A., DA III 1 (1899) 1396-1399 s. v. «Somnus»; Jolles, A., RE IX 1 (1914) 323-329 s. v. «Hypnos»; Ogle, M. B., «The Sleep of the Death», MAAR 11, 1933, 81-117; Otto, W. F., ML IV (1909-15) 1154-1155 s. v. «Somnus»; Sauer, B., ML I 2 (1886-90) 2846-2852 s. v. «Hypnos»; Söldner, M., Untersuchungen zu liegenden Erosen in der hellenistischen und römischen Kunst (1986); Turcan, R., «Dionysos et le sommeil infernal», MEFRA 71, 1959, 288-300 (= Turcan 1); idem, Les sarcophages romains à représentations dionysiaques (1966) (= Turcan 2); Wrede, Consecratio, passim.

PLAN DU CATALOGUE

I. Somnus seul	I-65
A. Somnus enfant	I-34
1. Somnus sous la forme d'un Amour	I-10
2. Amour avec les attributs de Somnus	II-34
B. Somnus jeune	35-60
C. Somnus âgé	61-64
D. Image de type indéterminé	65
II. Somnus dans des épisodes mythiques	66-145
A. Somnus et Endymion à l'arrivée de Séléné	66-107
1. Somnus jeune	66-83
a) Somnus derrière Endymion	66-70
b) Somnus marche vers Endymion	71-83
2. Somnus âgé	84-107
a) Somnus assis soutient Endymion	84-91
b) Somnus debout derrière Endymion	92-102
c) Somnus en buste	103-106
d) Somnus au réveil d'Endymion	107
B. Somnus, Bacchus et Ariane	108-127
1. L'arrivée de Bacchus et du thiasé	108-125
a) Somnus jeune	108-115
b) Somnus âgé	116-125
2. Autres scènes	126-127
C. Somnus, Mars et Rhéa Silvia	128-133
D. Somnus, Mars et Vénus	134-137
E. Somnus aux noces de Jason et de Créüse	138-143

F. Somnus et Hercule	144
G. Somnus et Thésée	145
III. Somnus en compagnie d'autres dieux	145 ^{bis}
IV. Somnus dans un contexte médical	146-150 ^{bis}
V. Somnus et les mortels	151-155
VI. Images d'interprétation incertaine ou erronée	156-163

CATALOGUE

I. Somnus seul

A. Somnus enfant

1. Somnus sous la forme d'un Amour

Reliefs

I. * Autel funéraire de Q. Caecilius Ferox, en marbre. Rome, Villa Albani 47. De Rome. - Cumont, Symb. 411-412 fig. 83; Helbig⁴ IV n° 3322 (Kolbe, H. G.); Hartmann, J. B., Röm. Jb. für Kunstgeschichte 12, 1969, 11-12. 19 fig. 2. - Fin du I^{er} s. ap. J.-C. - Sur la face latérale g. S., sous la forme d'un Amour nu, debout de face (ailes déployées, draperie sur le bras g.), les mains croisées sur l'épaule g., s'appuie sur une torche enflammée renversée (inscr. SOMNO . ORES-TILLA . FILII[A]). Sur la face opposée, Fatum (→ Fata, Fatum) sous la forme de → Nemesis.

Hypnos/Somnus I

2.* Sarcophage de marbre. Izmir, Mus. Arch. 20. D'Hypaipa (près d'Ödemiz). – Asgari, N., AA 1977, 341. 368 Izmir E fig. 23; Schauenburg, K., dans Eikones, AntK 12. Beih. (1980) 158–159 pl. 54, 2; Wrede, Consecratio 128 pl. 4, 1; Koch/Sichter mann, RömSark 521 fig. 512; Söldner 339–340. 748 n° 332. – Début du II^e s. ap. J.-C. – S. (ailes dans le dos) dort sur des rochers, les pieds croisés, la main dr. sur l'épaule g., le bras g. le long du corps, tenant des têtes de pavots (inscr. ΥΠΝΟΣ ΑΙΩΝΙΟΣ).

Ronde-bosse

3. Statuette de marbre. Florence, Uff. 169. – Clarac IV pl. 761 n° 1869; Mansuelli, ScultUff 139–140 n° 106 fig. 107; Stuveras, R., Le putto dans l'art romain (1969) 35 n. 1, 2; Wrede, Consecratio 128 n. 33; Söldner 96–97. 630 n° 61 fig. 65–67. – 2^e quart du I^{er} s. ap. J.-C. – S. (ailes dans le dos et ailettes aux tempes), couché du côté g. sur une peau de lion, dort tenant dans la main g. des têtes de pavots. Sur le socle un lézard.

4. Statuette de marbre. Vatican (Magazzini) 10389. – Söldner 96–98. 102. 634 n° 70 fig. 68. – Ép. antonine. – S. (ailettes sur la tête et ailes dans le dos) dort la tête appuyée sur un petit lion endormi (?); dans la main g. il tient des têtes de pavots.

5.* Statuette de marbre. Volubilis, Mus. Vol. 11199. – Thouvenot, R., PSAM 3, 1937, 47–49 fig. 1; Söldner 96–98. 637 n° 76 fig. 69. – Ép. des Sévères. – Analogue à 4.

6. Couvercle de sarcophage de marbre. Aquilée, Mus. Naz. 447. D'Aquilée. – Scrinari, V. S. M., Cat. delle sculture romane, Aquileia (1972) 175 n° 549; Wrede, Consecratio 303–304 n° 287; Söldner 259. 330–331. 680 n° 152. – 2^e moitié du II^e s. ou III^e s. ap. J.-C. – Sur un rocher recouvert d'une peau de lion, S. enfant (ailettes sur la tête) dort la main g. sous la tête; le bras dr. le long du corps, il tient des têtes de pavots.

7.* Statuette de marbre. Madrid, Mus. Arch. 1775. D'Elche. – García y Bellido, A., Esculturas romanas de España y Portugal (1949) 113–114 n° 113 pl. 88. – I^{er}–II^e s. ap. J.-C. – S. (ailettes sur le sommet de la tête), debout en appui sur la jambe dr., endormi, pose la tête sur ses mains levées à hauteur des épaules.

8.* Ex-voto de marbre. Argos, Mus. E 24. D'Argos, à l'est du théâtre. – Roux, G., BCH 78, 1954, 167 fig. 17; Marcadé, J./Raftopoulou, E., BCH 87, 1963, 85–88 n° 76 fig. 38; Söldner 270–271. 689 n° 168. – S. (ailes dans le dos) nu, le torse relevé, en appui sur le bras g., la main dr. sur l'épaule g., est allongé sur des rochers. Dédicace à Asklepios.

9.* Statuette de bronze. Loc. inc. De Grand (Vosges). – Reinach, S., Antiquités nationales. Descr. raisonnée du Mus. de St Germain-en-Laye. Bronzes de la Gaule romaine (1894) 106; Reinach, RépStat II, 489, 4; Boucher, Recherches 155. – I^{er}–II^e s. ap. J.-C. – S. aux formes enfantines, nu (ailettes aux tempes, chignon sur le haut du crâne), en marche; le bras dr. levé, il tient dans la main une corne qu'il renverse.

Hypnos/Somnus 9

10. Statuette de bronze. Mandeure (Doubs), coll. part. De Mandeure. – Lerat, L., Gallia 20, 1962, 523 fig. 12; Jeannin, Y., REA 14, 1963, 118–121 fig. 25; Boucher, Recherches 155. – I^{er}–II^e s. ap. J.-C. – Proche de 9, mais de fabrication très fruste. Jeannin signale une autre statuette de S. disparue, trouvée au XVIII^e s. au même endroit.

Pour d'autres images de S. sous cet aspect: 146–150. 152

2. Amour avec les attributs de Somnus

D'autres images illustrent le sommeil; le personnage est alors un Amour assimilé à Somnus par la présence de certains attributs, têtes de pavots ou corne (souvent associés à d'autres éléments qui en précisent la signification), et non plus par des ailes caractéristiques ou des inscriptions; elles reprennent divers types statuaires utilisés par ailleurs; pour la classification de ces types, principalement dans la ronde bosse, et leur origine hellénistique, cf. Söldner, passim, dont la typologie est reprise ici.

AMOUR TENANT LES PAVOTS

Reliefs

11. Autel ossuaire de P. Postumus Hilarius. Aquilée, Mus. Naz. 935. D'Aquilée, nécropole de l'est. – Brusin, G., Gli scavi di Aquileia (1934) 199 fig. 117; Scrinari, o. c. 6, 130 n° 372, ill. – 2^e moitié du I^{er} s. ap. J.-C. – Sur la face g. un Amour nu, debout, les ailes déployées, s'appuie sur un pilastre; les bras baissés, il tient une grosse tête de pavot dans la main dr. et une couronne dans la g. Sur l'autre face, Amour tenant une couronne et une torche baissée.

12.* Sarcophage de marbre. Vatican, Cortile della Pigna. – Amelung, SkulptVatMus 1863 n° 159 pl. 107; Hartmann, o. c. 1, 17 fig. 16. – Milieu du II^e s. ap. J.-C. – Au centre le portrait du défunt dans une coquille portée par deux Amours; de chaque côté un Amour debout dort tenant des têtes de pavots dans une main. Cf. etiam → Eros 978.

13. (= Eros 982*) Autel funéraire de marbre. Thessalonique, Mus. Arch. R 1. De Thessalonique. – Schauenburg, o. c. 2, 158 pl. 52, 3; Wrede, Consecratio 129. 202 n° 21 pl. 4, 4; Söldner 648 n° 95. – II^e–III^e s. ap. J.-C. – Au registre sup. un Amour debout; au registre inf. un Amour couché sur le côté g., les pieds croi-sés, le buste relevé et appuyé sur le bras g., le bras dr. devant la poitrine, tenant des têtes de pavots.

14. (= Eros/Amor, Cupido 114) Sarcophage de marbre. Rome, Pal. Primoli. – Schauenburg, o. c. 2, 157 pl. 53, 4. – Début du II^e s. av. J.-C. – Aux angles du sarcophage, deux Amours dorment assis; celui de dr. tient des têtes de pavots dans sa main dr. baissée; au centre deux autres volent portant l'imago clipeata du défunt.

Ronde bosse

TYPE DE L'EROS DE NEW YORK (→ Eros 780)

15.* Statuette de marbre. Berlin-DDR, Staatl. Mus. SK 143. De Rome (?). – Conze, A., Beschreibung der ant. Skulpturen, Berlin (1891) 64 n° 143; Wrede, Consecratio 128 n. 33; Söldner 598 n° 5 fig. 33. – Période antonine. – Sur une peau de lion, un Amour (baudrier, arc) dort couché sur le côté g., le bras g. sous la tête, les jambes fléchies, la dr. relevée; le bras dr. sur la poitrine, il tient une tête de pavot. (inscr. funéraire sur la cuisse g.).

16. Statuette de marbre. Florence, Uff. 392. – Mansuelli, ScultUff 140 n° 108 pl. 110; Wrede, Consecratio 128 n. 33; Söldner 598–599 n° 6 fig. 25. – Ép. antonine. – Un Amour dort sur un rocher couvert d'une draperie, les jambes étendues et écartées, la tête sur le bras g., le bras dr. baissé, tenant des têtes de pavots; près de lui un papillon.

17.* Statuette de marbre. Vatican 10401. – Wrede, Consecratio 128 n° 128 n. 33; Söldner 612 n° 30 fig. 34. – Proche du précédent, mais avec un oiseau près de lui, et à sa tête apparaît l'embouchure d'une amphore pour l'écoulement de l'eau.

18. a) Couvercle d'une urne de marbre. Sassari, Mus. Naz. G. A. Sanna 7873. De Porto Torres. – Equini Schneider, E., Cat. delle sculture romane del Mus. Naz. G. A. Sanna di Sassari e del Comune di Porto Torres (1979) 24–25 n° 9 pl. 10; Söldner 613–614 n° 32 fig. 23. – Fin de l'ép. d'Hadrien. – Couché sur une draperie, un Amour (baudrier) dort, légèrement tourné sur le côté g., les jambes étendues et écartées, la tête sur le bras g., tenant des têtes de pavots. – b) Anc. coll. Somzée. – Furtwängler, A., Sammlung Somzée. Antike Kunstdenkmäler (1897) 39 n° 52, fig.; Söldner 614 n° 33 fig. 22. – Ép. flavienne. – Comme a), mais les pavots sont seulement posés sur la retombée de la draperie avec un lézard. Autres exemplaires se rattachant au même type: Söldner 596–617 n° 19. 21. 24. 37.

TYPE DE L'EROS DE MALIBU

19. Statuette de marbre. Florence, Uff. 626. – Mansuelli, ScultUff 140–141 n° 109 fig. 108; Söldner 623–624 n° 50 fig. 63–64. – Ép. antonine. – Amour (baudrier) dormant sur le dos, couché sur une peau de lion, la jambe g. pliée sous la dr. étendue, la main dr. derrière la tête; le bras g. le long du corps, il tient des têtes de pavots. Autres exemplaires: Söldner 623–627 n° 49. 53.

TYPE D'HYPNOS

20.* Statuette de marbre. Dresde, Staatl. Kunstslg. 245. – Clarac IV n° 1865; Söldner 628–629 n° 59 fig.

70. – I^{er} quart du IV^e s. ap. J.-C. – Un Amour légèrement tourné sur le côté g., la tête inclinée sur l'épaule, dort sur une draperie, la jambe dr. étendue sur la g. fléchie. La main dr. est placée sur le haut du bras g. qui repose plié sur le sol, tenant des têtes de pavots. Sous le buste, une peau de lion dont la tête et les pattes antérieures sont figurées.

21. Statuette de marbre. Istanbul, Mus. Arch. 2282. De Kymé. – Mendel, Sculpt II 107 n° 367; Reinach, RépStat V 186, 4; Söldner 613 n° 63. – Semblable à 20.

22.* Statuette de marbre. Vatican, Mus. Chiaramonti 1721. – Amelung, SkulptVat I 365 n° 85 pl. 38; Wrede, Consecratio 128 n. 33; Söldner 633–634 n° 69 fig. 76. – Ép. antonine. – Amour couché, un petit lion sous la nuque.

23.* Statuette de marbre. Trèves, Rhein. Landesmus. 09,793. De Trèves, thermes de Barbara. – Espérandieu, Recueil VI n° 5071; Manderscheid, H., Die Skulpturenausstattung der kaiserzeitl. Thermenanlagen (1981) 68 Kat 5 pl. 13; Söldner 636–637 n° 74. – Ép. d'Hadrien. – Proche de 20.

24. Statuette de terre cuite. Tunis, Bardo I 5. D'Hadrumetum (Sousse). – Du Coudray la Blanchère, R./Gauckler, P., Cat. du Mus. Alaoui (1897) 132 n° 5 pl. 29; Söldner 637 n° 75. – Analogue à 22.

Autres objets de ce type: Söldner 627–638 n° 56–58, 62–63. 67–68. 71.

TYPE DE NEWBY HALL

25.* Statuette de marbre. Newby Hall, Ripon, North Yorkshire. De Rome? – Clarac IV n° 1861 E; Söldner 645–646 n° 90 fig. 86–87. – Ép. flavienne. – Un Amour (chlamyde agrafée sur l'épaule dr., baudrier) dort couché sur son vêtement, le torse reposant sur son aile g., l'aile dr. légèrement surélevée; la tête soulevée par la main g., le bras dr. sur la poitrine, il tient des têtes de pavots; sur le sol, son arc et un lézard.

26.* Statuette de marbre. Londres, BM 1861.11–27.74. De Cyrène, temple d'Aphrodite. – Smith, BMSculpture III 239 n° 1426; Huskinson, J., CSIR Great Britain II 1 (1975) 52 n° 93 pl. 37; Wrede, Consecratio 128 n. 33; Söldner 645 fig. 92. – Ép. antonine. – Analogue à 25.

27. a) Statuette de marbre. Agios Nikolaos (Crète), Mus. 6857. De Hiérapytna (Hiérapetra). – Davaras, C., ArchDelt 31, 1976, Chron. II 2, 379 pl. 300 b; Söldner 642 n° 84 fig. 90–91. – Fin de l'ép. antonine – début des Sévères. – Analogue à 25. – b) Statuette disparue. Anc. Lowther Castle. – Michaelis, AncM 498 n° 66; Carinci, F., dans Guerrini, L., Pal. Mattei di Giove. Le antichità (1982) 133; Söldner 700–701 n° 199. – Selon Michaelis, le personnage portait des têtes de pavots et une chlamyde, ce qui permet de le rapprocher de ce type; près de lui se trouvait un lézard; la statuette était dédiée à Hercule (inscr. HERCVLI SANCTO/ EVTHYCHLANVS).

Autres documents de même type, Söldner 642–649 n° 86–87. 91. 93–94.

TYPE DU GROUPE I

28. Statuette fr. de marbre. Alexandrie, Mus.

Gréco-Rom. 3895. D'Égypte. - Breccia, E., *Alexandria ad Aegyptum*² (1922) 220 n° 62; Adriani, Rep. A II (1961) 34 n° 130 pl. 69, 222; Riad, H./Shehata, Y. H./El Gheriani, Y., Alexandria (s.d.) 178 n° 3895; Söldner 659 n° 114. - Fin de l'ép. d'Hadrien - début de la période antonine. - Amour endormi sur le côté g., la tête reposant sur la main g.; le bras dr. devant la poitrine, il tient des têtes de pavots.

Autres exemplaires: Söldner 659-672 n° 119-122.

TYPE DU GROUPE II

29. a)* Statuette de marbre. Elvas, Mus. D'Elvas, tombe dans l'église S. João de Deus. - De Lacerda, A., Historia da arte em Portugal I (1942) 98 fig. 92; García y Bellido, o. c. 7, 115 n. 1; Söldner 673 n° 139 fig. 139. - Ép. antonine. - Amour endormi sur le dos, couché sur une peau de lion, les jambes étendues, la g. pliée sous la dr., la main g. près de la tête; le bras dr. plié sur la poitrine, il tient des têtes de pavots. Sur le sol, devant lui une torche, derrière sa tête un carquois. - b) Statuette de marbre. Rome, Pal. Mattei. - Carinci, o. c. 27 b, 125-127 n° 10 pl. 37; Söldner 678 n° 149. - Ép. des Sévères. - Comme a, mais sans le carquois et avec un lézard.

TYPE DU GROUPE III

30.* Statuette de marbre. Trèves, Rhein. Landesmus. 22.123. De Trèves, Pal. Kesselstatt. - Espérandieu, Recueil X n° 7601; Schindler, R., Führer durch das Landesmuseum Trier (1977) 57; Söldner 648 n° 160. - Ép. antonine. - Amour couché sur des rochers couverts d'une peau de lion; il dort légèrement tourné sur le côté g., les jambes écartées, le bras g. plié, la tête reposant sur la main; le bras dr. baissé sur la poitrine, il tient des têtes de pavots; près de lui une massue et un arc.

TYPE DU GROUPE IV

31. a)* Statuette de marbre. Sidé, Mus. 462. De Sidé. - Inan, J., Roman Sculpture in Side (1975) 162 n° 87 pl. 75, 2. - II^e s. ap. J.-C. - Amour couché sur une peau de lion posée sur des rochers, dormant sur le dos, brisé aux jambes le bras g. le long du corps; le bras dr. est plié et la main posée sur l'épaule g. tient des têtes de pavots. - b) Statuette de marbre. Tarragone, Mus. Arq. Prov. 414. - Reinach, RépStat V 186, 3; García y Bellido, o. c. 7, 115 n. 2; Söldner 688 n° 167. - II^e s. ap. J.-C. - Semblable à a.

AMOUR TENANT LA CORNE

32.* Statuette fr. de marbre. Autun, Mus. Rolin M L 242. - Autun - Augustodunum, capitale des Éduens, cat. exp. Autun, Mus. Rolin (1985) 330-331 n° 657; Söldner 689-690 n° 169 fig. 154-155. - 2^e quart du III^e s. ap. J.-C. - Amour couché sur le dos, les jambes étendues, le bras g. plié, la main près de la tête, le bras dr. sur le corps: la main dr., à hauteur de la hanche, tient une corne qui laisse échapper son contenu.

33.* Couverture de sarcophage de pierre grise. Perdu. De Saventhem (environs de Bruxelles). - Conze, A., BonnJbb 52, 1872, 100-101 n. 1 pl. 8, 4; Schauenburg, o. c. 2, 158 n. 80; Wrede, Consecratio 205 n° 34; Söldner 693-694 n° 176. - Milieu du III^e s. ap. J.-C. - Amour couché sur le dos, les ailes déployées, les bras écartés du corps, tenant dans la main g. une corne d'où s'écoule le suc et dans la dr. un objet rond (couronne ou pain: Söldner).

Hypnos/Somnus 33

34. Statuette de marbre. Florence, Uff. 279. - Clarac IV n° 1870; Söldner 705-706 n° 229 fig. 163. - Copie d'une œuvre antique. - Amour endormi sur une peau de lion, le bras dr. derrière la tête, tenant dans la main dr. des pavots, la main g. posée sur une corne. Autre copie de la même œuvre: statuette anc. à Prague (Söldner 707 n° 231).

B. Somnus jeune

Peintures murales

35.* Ostie, Mus. 196. D'Ostie, tombe de la via Laurentina. - De Chirico, R., AA 1937, 380-381 fig. 10; Calza, NotSc 14, 1938, 51; Cumont, Symb 410-411 fig. 82; Helbig⁴ IV n° 3185. - Vers 160-170 ap. J.-C. - S. debout, tourné vers la dr. (tunique ceinturée, ailes dans le dos), tient dans la main dr. une torche renversée sur laquelle il s'appuie; il soutient son menton de la main g. et ferme les yeux.

36. Rome, Grottarossa, via Flaminia, tombe de Padilla. - Bendinelli, G., NotSc 5, 1927, 304-305 fig. 6; Levi, Antioch 208. 229. - Fin du II^e s. ap. J.-C. - Au centre de la voûte S. nu, debout de face, les ailes éployées, une draperie sur les épaules, le bras dr. levé et le g. baissé.

37.* (= 151) Peinture perdue. D'une tombe de Rome. - Bellori, G. P./Bartoli, P. S., Le pitture antiche delle grotte di Roma e del Sepolcro dei Nasoni (1706) App. 50-52 pl. 3; Eisler, M., Orphisch-dionysische Mysteringedanken in der christl. Antike (1925) 177-178 fig. 82; Boyancé 102-104; Bastet, F. L., BullAntBesch 45, 1970, 156-157 fig. 15. - II^e s. ap. J.-C. - Au centre de la voûte, S. debout de face (ailes déployées, manteau sur l'épaule et le bras dr.), les bras baissés, tient des têtes de pavots dans la main dr. et une torche renversée dans la g.

Hypnos/Somnus 37

37 bis. Mosaïque de sol. Risan (Yougoslavie, golfe de Kotor). D'une villa, in situ. - Vouksan, D., «Les mosaïques romaines de Risan», Albania 4, 1932, 85-86 fig. 7-9; Mano-Zissi, D., dans La mosaïque gréco-romaine I (1965) 290 fig. 9; Mijovic, P., «Mosaïques paléochrétiennes», Materijali 18, 1980, 89-108 fig. 3. - Fin du II^e-début du III^e s. ap. J.-C. - Dans un médaillon circulaire, S. (ailes dans le dos), les jambes drapées, est étendu sur un lit, le corps de face, en appui sur le coude dr., la main g. sur l'épaule dr.

Reliefs

38. Relief votif de marbre. Aquilée, Mus. Naz. D'Aquilée. - Scrinari, o. c. 6, 189 n° 583. - Milieu du I^{er} s. ap. J.-C. - Buste masculin de profil à dr. (cheveux courts, ailes au-dessus des oreilles).

39. Relief de marbre fr. Paris, Louvre. - Sauer 2850, fig.; Boyancé 101; Picard, Manuel III 771 n. 1. - Tête d'homme de profil à g. (cheveux courts, ailes sur le haut de la tête).

39 bis. Autel de calcaire. Saint Germain-en-Laye, Mus. Ant. Nat. 1225. De Paris, Pont au Change. - Espérandieu, Recueil IV n° 3143; Hatt, J. J., Mythes et dieux de la Gaule I (1989) 264 fig. 235. - I^{er} s. ap. J.-C. - S. (ailes dans le dos et sur la tête), nu sauf un manteau agrafé sur l'épaule dr., qui couvre le corps et le bras g., debout de profil à g., le pied posé sur un autel; son coude dr. plié repose dans la main g. appuyée sur la cuisse dr.; il tient une pomme (Hatt) dans la main dr. Sur les autres faces, Apollon, Mercure, → Rosmerta.

Ronde-bosse

40. a) Statue de marbre fr. Rome, Mus. Naz. Rom. 124680. De Tivoli, Villa Hadriana. - Helbig⁴ III n° 2274; Zanker, P., Klassizistische Statuen (1974) 115-116 n° 18 pl. 85, 1-4; Papadopoulos, J., dans MusNazRom I, 201-202 n° 125. - Ép. d'Hadrien. - Tête de S. aux cheveux courts tenus par un bandeau, ailes au front. - b) Rome, coll. priv. - Proche du précédent mais les ailes sont plus grandes et plus ouvertes.

41.* Statue de marbre. Madrid, Prado 84 E. Prov. inconnue. - Blanco, A., Museo del Prado, catálogo de la escultura (1957) n° 84 E pl. 38; Zanker, o. c. 40 a, 116 n.

70; Berger, E., AntK 21, 1978, 61 fig. 6. Ép. d'Hadrien. - S. adolescent est endormi debout, appuyé sur un support placé sous l'aisselle dr.; le bras g. baissé, il tient des têtes de pavots (modernes). Très restauré.

42.* Statue de marbre. Madrid, Prado 89 E. Prov. inconnue. - Blanco, o. c. 41, n° 89 E pl. 43-45. - 2^e quart du II^e s. ap. J.-C. - S. juvénile (ailes au front), nu, marche, le torse et l'épaule dr. en avant.

43.* Statue de bronze, fr. Londres, BM 267. De Civitella d'Arno. - Walters, BMBronzes n° 267; Picard, Manuel III 768 n. 1; 772-773 fig. 348; Hamdorf, Kultpersonifikationen 43 n. 243; Boucher 13. - Ép. romaine, peut-être étrusque (Boucher). - Tête masculine juvénile, ailes aux tempes.

Statuettes de bronze

44. a) Besançon, Mus. Beaux-Arts 849.1.2. De Besançon. - Lerat, L., Gallia 8, 1950, 101-103 fig. 4; Lebel, P., Cat. des coll. arch. de Besançon. Les bronzes figurés (1961) 28 n° 44 pl. 26, 2; Bronzes antiques découverts à Besançon, collections du Musée I (1981) n° 38, ill.; Kaufmann-Heinimann, A., «Die Bronzestatuetten aus Kaiseraugst-Schmidmatt», Jahresberichte aus Augst und Kaiseraugst 7, 1987, 308 fig. 11. - I^{er} s. ap. J.-C. - S. adolescent (ailettes au front) marche la jambe g. en avant; le bras dr. levé, il tient trois têtes de pavots. La statuette porte un torque d'argent. - b) Fr. Besançon, Mus. D 863.4.30. De Chaudanne (Doubs). - Lebel, o. c., 45 n° 120 pl. 51, 4. - I^{er} s. ap. J.-C. - Probablement fr. d'une statuette de S. proche de a: avant-bras dr. tenant l'extrémité d'une corne.

45. Base de statue. Aix-en-Provence, Mus. De Riez (Basses Alpes). - CIL XII 354; Boucher, Recherches 155; Hatt, o. c. 39 bis, 273. - Dédicace à Esculape d'une statue de S. avec un torque d'or.

46. Lyon, Mus. Beaux-Arts A 1945. Des env. de Lyon. - Boucher 7-14; Boucher, S., Lyon. Bronzes romains figurés (1973) 107-108 n° 171. - I^{er}-II^e s. ap. J.-C. - S. adolescent (ailettes aux tempes) marche, la jambe g. en avant et le buste fortement penché; les bras manquent.

47.* Lyon, Mus. Gallo-rom. Br. 57. De Neuveville-sur-Ain. - Bazin, H., GazArch 1888, 28 pl. 6, 3; Boucher 9 fig. 2; Boucher, Recherches 155; Boucher, S./Tassinari, S., Mus. de la Civ. Gallo-Romaine à Lyon (1976) 67 n° 57. - I^{er} s. ap. J.-C. - Semblable à 46.

48. Anc. Vienne (Isère), Mus. De Vieuv (Ossy-en-Valromey, Passin, Ain). - Bazin, o. c. 47, 25-27 pl. 6, 2; Boucher, S., Vienne. Bronzes antiques (1971) 15-16 n° 5; Boucher, Recherches 155. - Semblable à 46.

49.* Augst, Mus. 84.26900. De Kaiseraugst. - Kaufmann-Heinimann, o. c. 44, 303.308 fig. 10. - I^{er}-II^e s. ap. J.-C. - S. en marche (chignon, ailes aux tempes), la tête inclinée; le bras g. plié, il tient dans la main g. des têtes de pavot, et de la main dr. tendue porte une corne renversée.

50. Lausanne, Mus. cantonal d'Art et d'Histoire C. T. 887. D'Yverdon. - Leibundgut, A., Die römischen Bronzen der Schweiz 3: Westschweiz und Wallis (1980) n° 26 pl. 32; Kaufmann-Heinimann, o. c. 44, 317 n. 48. - I^{er}-II^e s. ap. J.-C. - Proche de 49 mais la jambe dr. est très en arrière; il manque les deux mains.

51.* Nancy, Mus. hist. lorrain. De Laneuveville (Meurthe-et-Moselle). – Reinach, RépStat V 230, 6; France-Lanord, A./Georges, Le Musée historique lorrain (1948) pl. 2; Boucher, Recherches 155. – S. en marche; le bras dr. levé, il renverse sa corne tenue à l'horizontale; le bras g. baissé tenait probablement une branche de pavot.

52. Péronne, Mus. Danicourt. D'Étaples (Pas-de-Calais). – Danicourt, M., RA 1882, 7 pl. 2; Reinach, RépStat II 488, 5; Boucher, Recherches 155. – Semblable à 51.

53. USA, coll. priv. De France? – Small Sculptures in Bronze from the Classical World. Cat. exp. Chapel Hill (1976) n° 34. – Semblable à 51. Peut-être le même objet que la statuette mentionnée par Reinach, RépStat VI 105 n° 1.

54. Turin, Mus. Ant. D'Industria. – Bassi, D., Att-SocTorino 3, 1881, 57. 59 pl. 14; Reinach, RépStat II 489, 2; Boucher, Recherches 155. – Semblable à 51.

55. Florence, Uff. – Gerhard, E., AZ 1862, 221 pl. 158, 1; Reinach, RépStat II 488, 4; Boucher, Recherches 155. – S. en marche (ailes doubles au front, mèches en anglaises dans le cou, chignon); du bras dr. levé il renverse sa corne; le bras g. baissé, il tient une tige de pavot (brisée).

56. Vienne, Kunsthst. Mus. VI 129. Prov. inconnue. – Gerhard, o. c. 55, pl. 158, 2; v. Sacken, E. F., Die antiken Bronzen des K.-K. Münz- und Antiken-Cabinet in Wien (1871) 80-81 pl. 34; Reinach, RépStat II 489, 1; Guß + Form. Bronzen aus der Antikenslg. (1986) 113 n° 157 fig. 222. – S. adolescent (ailes aux tempes, cheveux retenus par un bandeau), en marche; du bras dr. levé il renverse sa corne tenue à l'horizontale; sur le bras g. baissé s'appuyait probablement une branche de pavot.

57. Vienne, Kunsthst. Mus. VI 371. Prov. inconnue. – v. Sacken, o. c. 56, 80 pl. 33, 13; Reinach, RépStat II 488, 2. – Semblable à 56.

Intailles

58. Sardoine. Berlin, Staatl. Mus. FG 6751. – Furtwängler, Beschreibung n° 6751 pl. 48; Furtwängler, AG 210 n° 64 pl. 43. – S. nu (ailes aux tempes) se dirige vers la g.; du bras dr. levé il tient une corne renversée et dans la main g. des tiges de pavot. Autre exemplaire semblable: Furtwängler, Beschreibung 248 n° 6752 pl. 48.

59.* Cornaline. Munich, Münzslg. – AGDI 3, n° 2209 pl. 192. – I^{er} s. av. J.-C. – Masque de S. de profil à g. (mèches de cheveux en anglaises, ailes de papillon).

60.* Pâte de verre brun rouge. Vienne, Kunsthst. Mus. XI B 396. – AGOe II n° 616 pl. 9. – 2^e moitié du II^e s. av. J.-C. – Tête juvénile de S. de profil à g. (natte sur le front, mèches le long des joues et boucles de cheveux dans le cou, ailes aux tempes).

C. Somnus âgé

61. a) Relief de marbre. Rome, Villa Albani. – Helbig³ II 1903 n° 1903; Cumont, Symb 410-411 n. 5. – S. barbu (tunique longue ceinturée), debout de face, les pieds croisés, les ailes déployées dans le dos et sur la tête, dort la tête inclinée, les deux mains appuyées sur un bâton. On peut rapprocher de ce type rare un autre document: b) Fr. d'urne en marbre. Rome, Antiquario comunale, Pal. Caffarelli 6210. De Rome. – Sinn, F., Stadtrömische Marmorurnen (1987) 55-56. 91 n° 3 pl. a-b. – 2^e moitié du I^{er} s. av. J.-C. – Génie (S.?) (tunique longue ceinturée, ailes dans le dos) coiffé d'un bonnet phrygien, dormant appuyé sur une torche renversée; à g. l'inscription funéraire et → Charon (I) dans sa barque, sur l'autre côté une des → Danaïdes.

62. (= Eros/Amor, Cupido 681) Relief de stuc. Vatican, niche de la tombe H de la nécropole sous Saint Pierre. – Guarducci, M., Cristo e S. Pietro in un documento precostantiniano (1954) pl. 7b; Mielsch, Stuckreliefs 175 K 123, 10. – Vers 170 ap. J.-C. – S. (ailes de chauve-souris) debout de face, les ailes déployées, tient une torche et un rhyton. Sur la voûte deux Amours aux ailes de chauve-souris, un masculin et un féminin, portent une cornucopia; au-dessous, une branche garnie de têtes de pavots.

Intailles

63. a) Pâte de verre. New York, MMA 17.194.35. – Richter MetMusGems 87-88 n° 836 pl. 48. – I^{er} s. av. J.-C. – Buste hermaïque de S. de profil à dr., barbu, portant une couronne de laurier dont les rubans tombent dans le cou, avec des ailes de papillon aux tempes. Il existe un grand nombre d'exemplaires analogues d'ép. impériale: Berlin, Staatl. Mus. FG 4741-4744 (Furtwängler, Beschreibung n° 4741-4744 pl. 34); Copenhagen, Mus. Thorv. (Fossing, ThorvGems 86 n° 453 pl. 6); cornaline: Berlin, Staatl. Mus. FG 6528 (Furtwängler, Beschreibung n° 6528 pl. 46; Furtwängler, AG 49 pl. 30, 25); 7744 (Furtwängler, Beschreibung n° 7744). – b) Calcédoine. Leningrad, Ermitage AA 4.24. – Furtwängler, AG 131 pl. 26, 41. – S. porte un diadème. Même motif sur une sardoine à Londres, BM (Walter, BMGems n° 1955); une topaze, coll. Ionides. (Boardman, J., Engraved Gems. The Ionides Coll. (1968) n° 87; AGD Munich I 2, 65 sub n° 936; de fabrication moderne pour Boardman).

64. a)* Cornaline. Munich, Münzslg. A 1742. – AGDI 2, n° 936 pl. 107. – I^{er} s. av. J.-C. – Buste hermaïque de S. barbu, de profil à g. (ailes de papillon, mèches de cheveux et rubans du diadème le long du cou). Autre exemplaire très proche, pâte de verre: Munich, Münzslg. A 1070. – AGDI 2, n° 1058 pl. 118. – b) Jaspe rouge. Genève, Mus. MF 2877. – Vers 60-40 av. J.-C. – Comme a, mais le diadème est remplacé par une couronne de laurier.

D. Image de type indéterminé

65. Document disparu. De Nîmes. – CIL XII 3058; Otto 1154-1155. – Dédicace d'une image de S. ou d'un objet à S. dans un sanctuaire d'Isis parmi d'autres divinités: → Sarapis I, Vesta (→ Hestia/Vesta) et Diane (→ Artemis/Diana).

II. Somnus dans des épisodes mythiques

A. Somnus et Endymion à l'arrivée de Séléné

1. Somnus jeune

a) Somnus derrière Endymion

Sarcophages

66.* (= Endymion 65) Munich, Glypt. GL 328. – Ohly, D., Glyptothek München. Griechische und Römische Skulpturen (1977) 103. 105 n° 8. – 170-180 ap. J.-C. – Derrière des rochers, S. en buste (tunique, ailes de papillon dans le dos, ailettes au front) renverse de la main dr. sa corne au-dessus d'Endymion et tient une branche dans la g. Un Amour découvre Endymion.

67.* Sarcophage fr. Paris, Louvre MA 607. De Rome (?). – SarkRel III 1, 82-83 n° 66 pl. 17; Baratte/Metzger, SarkLouvre 70 n° 24. – Fin du II^e-début du III^e s. ap. J.-C. – Au second plan, S. debout (tunique, manteau, ailes de papillon), penché vers Endymion, le bras g. baissé.

68.* (= Endymion 66, = Eros/Amor-Cupido 22) Paris, Louvre MA 362. – Baratte/Metzger, SarkLouvre 67-69 n° 23. – Vers 210 ap. J.-C. – Derrière Endymion endormi, S. (tunique serrée à la taille, ailes de papillon, ailettes dans les cheveux) apparaît à mi-corps; dans la main g. il tient une branche de pavot, de la dr. il renverse sa corne.

69. (= Endymion 58*) Cimitile, Basilica S. Felice. – Sichtermann, H., Späte Endymion-Sarkophag (1966) 94 fig. 52. – Début du III^e s. ap. J.-C. – Derrière Endymion s'avance S. (tunique longue ceinturée, manteau, ailettes au front).

70.* (= Endymion 75) Rome, Pal. Giustiniani. – SarkRel III 1, 94-96 n° 78 pl. 21. – Milieu du III^e s. ap. J.-C. – S. (ailes de papillon, tunique longue à manches) se tient derrière Endymion sur lequel il renverse le contenu de sa corne.

b) Somnus marche vers Endymion

Sarcophages

71.* (= Endymion 56) Pise, Camposanto. – Arias, P. E. et al., Camposanto Monumentale di Pisa, Le antichità I (1977) 57-58 A 7 est pl. 6, 10. – Vers 190 ap. J.-C. – Derrière Endymion endormi, S. (ailettes aux tempes et aux chevilles) nu, debout, le bras dr. tendu, le bras g. baissé, renverse sa corne au-dessus de lui.

72.* (= Endymion 80, = Helios/Sol 165) Rome, St Paul hors-les-Murs. – SarkRel III 1, 101-103 n° 81 pl. 23. – 230-240 ap. J.-C. – S. (ailes de papillon aux tempes, manteau gonflé en arc derrière sa tête) s'avance vers la g., derrière Endymion sur lequel il renverse sa corne; dans sa main g. il tient une branche de pavot.

73.* (= Endymion 70*, = Helios/Sol 348) Paris, Louvre MA 1335. De St Médard d'Eyrans. – Baratte/Metzger, SarkLouvre 71-75 n° 25. – Vers 235 ap. J.-C. – S. (manteau agrafé autour des épaules, ailettes au front, mèches de cheveux en anglaises) se dirige vers la dr. face à Endymion endormi; il renverse sa corne sur ce dernier et tient dans la main g. des tiges de pavot.

74. Sarcophage fr. de marbre. Rome, Mus. Naz. Rom. 113059. De Rome. – Annibaldi, G., NotSc 1934, 212 fig. 6; MusNazRom I 8, 381-392 VIII 16. – 220-240 ap. J.-C. – S. nu, la chlamyde rejetée dans le dos, une branche de pavot sur le bras g., se penche vers Endymion endormi.

75.* (= Endymion 71) Perdu. – SarkRel III 1, 89-90 n° 73 pl. 18. – I^{er} tiers du III^e s. ap. J.-C. – S. (tunique longue, coiffure en anglaises) marche de profil à dr. derrière Endymion.

76.* (= Endymion 72 avec bibl.) Rome, Pal. Farnese. – Turcan, R., RA 1962/1, 209 fig. 7. – 200-240 ap. J.-C. – S. nu (manteau et branche sur l'épaule g.) marche de profil à dr. vers Endymion endormi.

77. (= Endymion 73*, = Eros/Amor, Cupido 19, = Helios/Sol 344 – avec bibl.) Rome, Pal. Doria Pamphilj. De Rome, mausolée d'Auguste. – Koch/Sichtermann, RömSark 154 fig. 161. – 230-240 ap. J.-C. – S. (ailes dans le dos, coiffure en anglaises) nu, le bras dr. tendu vers Endymion endormi.

78. (= Endymion 77, = Helios/Sol 345) Woburn Abbey. – Matz, F., Ein römisches Meisterwerk (1958) 164 n. 60 pl. 35b. – 230-240 ap. J.-C. – S. (ailes dans le dos, manteau sur l'épaule) tient une branche dans la main dr. et renverse la corne au-dessus d'Endymion endormi.

79. (= Endymion 78* avec bibl.) Cliveden. – SarkRel III 1, 98-100 n° 80 pl. 23; Ohler, H., Foto + Skulptur, Röm. Antiken in engl. Privatbes. (1980) 62-63

Hypnos/Somnus 75

n° 41. - 240 ap. J.-C. - S. nu (chlamyde), de profil à dr., se penche vers Endymion, le bras dr. tendu au-dessus de sa tête; il tient dans la main g. une branche de pavot.

80.* (= Endymion 79) Assise, sacristie de S. Rufino. - SarkRel III 1, 101-103 n° 80, fig. - Vers 240 ap. J.-C. - S. (ailes dans le dos) nu, de profil à dr. face à Endymion.

81. Rome, Pal. Corsetti. - Matz/Duhn II 193 n° 2721; SarkRel III 1, 110 n° 90 pl. 25. - 230-240 ap. J.-C. - S. (ailes de papillon, tunique à manches), de profil à dr., renverse sa corne sur la tête d'Endymion endormi.

82. (= Endymion 67*) Vatican. - SarkRel III 1, 84-85 n° 71 pl. 17A - 2^e tiers du III^e s. ap. J.-C. - S. (manteau), de profil à dr., marche rapidement vers Endymion endormi, tenant une branche dans la main g.

83.* Rome, Mus. Naz. Rom. 2001492. De Cesano di Roma (S. Andrea). - Vighi, R., NotSc 1935, 245-246 pl. 12; Koch, G., GettyMusJ 8, 1980, 132; MusNazRom I 8, 558-562 MP, 1. - Milieu du III^e s. ap. J.-C. - S. (chiton à double ceinture, chlamyde, ailes de papillon dans le dos et ailettes sur la tête), précédant Séléné, s'avance vers Endymion; il tenait dans la main g. une branche de pavot.

2. Somnus âgé

a) Somnus assis soutient Endymion

Sarcophages

84. (= Endymion 46*, = Eros/Amor, Cupido 14/368 - avec bibl.) Sarcophage de Gérontia. Rome, Mus. Cap. 325. - Sichtermann/Koch, MythSark 27 n° 16 pl. 35, 1; 36. 37. - Vers 130 ap. J.-C. - S. barbu, les jambes drapées dans un manteau, est assis sur des rochers, le corps en arrière, en appui sur le bras dr.; du bras g. il soulève le manteau qui recouvre Endymion endormi sur ses genoux.

85. (= Endymion 47 avec bibl.) Rome, Pal. Rospigliosi. - SarkRel III 1, 59-61 n° 39 pl. 12. - 150-170 ap. J.-C. - S. (tunique, longues ailes dans le dos) soutient Endymion endormi sur ses genoux.

86.* Ostie, Mus. D'Ostie, atelier de sculpteur. - Calza, R./Nash, E., Ostia (1959) 77 fig. 109; Turcan, R., ANRW II 16/2, 1707 pl. 2, 3; Koch/Sichtermann, RömSark 85 fig. 70. - 150-170 ap. J.-C. - S. assis (ailes dans le dos), les jambes drapées dans un manteau, soulève le voile qui couvre Endymion.

87.* (= Endymion 48 avec bibl.) Sarcophage fr. Rome, S. Cosimato (Trastevere). - SarkRel III 1, 63-64 n° 41 pl. 12. - 150-170 ap. J.-C. - Semblable à 86 mais le voile est soulevé aussi par un Amour.

88. Sarcophage fr. perdu. Anc. Rome. - SarkRel III 1, 65 n° 43 pl. 12. - Semblable à 87.

89. (= Endymion 50* avec bibl.) Rome, Pal. Rospigliosi. - Sichtermann/Koch, MythSark 28 n° 17 pl. 33. 34. - 150-170 ap. J.-C. - S. barbu, nu (ailes), les jambes drapées dans un manteau, à demi allongé, soulève la draperie d'Endymion.

90. Sarcophage fr. Naples, Mus. Naz. - SarkRel III 1, 65-66 n° 46 pl. 12. - 150-170 ap. J.-C. -

Comme 89, mais un Amour aide S. à découvrir Endymion.

91.* (= Endymion 51 avec bibl.) Vatican, Gall. Candelabri 2829. - McCann, A. M., Roman Sarcophagi in the Metr. Mus. of Art (1978) 37 pl. 32. 33. - Comme 89, mais S. est dépourvu d'ailes.

b) Somnus debout derrière Endymion

Peintures disparues

92.* (= Endymion 42 avec bibl.) De Pompéi I 2, 17e. - Schefold, K., AM 71, 1956, 215-216 pl. 120; Peters, W. J. T., Landscape in Romano-Campanian Mural Painting (1963) 86-87 pl. 20, 72. - 3^e style. - Au centre d'un paysage sacro-idyllique, Endymion est endormi, étendu sur les genoux de S. (barbu, ailes dans le dos, tunique longue), qui, assis sur des rochers, regarde l'arrivée de Séléné.

Hypnos/Somnus 92

93. (= Endymion 26 avec bibl.) De Pompéi VIII 4, 34, 5. - 3^e style. - Endymion endormi; derrière lui S. (ailé) tient une coupe dans la main dr. et une branche dans la g. et regarde Séléné qui arrive.

Reliefs

94. (= Endymion 52* avec bibl.) Sarcophage d'Aurelius Lucanus. Copenhague, Glypt. D'Ostie. - Koch, o. c. 83, 132. 137 fig. 8. - 150-170 ap. J.-C. - Au second plan, S. barbu (tunique, chignon, ailes de papillon), figuré à mi-corps, tenant de la main g. une branche de pavot, renverse de la dr. sa corne sur Endymion, qui lève la tête vers lui.

Hypnos/Somnus 102

95. (= Endymion 54* avec bibl.) Sarcophage. Rome, Villa Doria Pamphilj. - Calza, R., et al., Antichità di Villa Doria Pamphilj (1977) n° 179 pl. 112. - Semblable à 94, mais inversé: S. tient la corne dans la main dr., la branche dans la g. et le visage d'Endymion est de face.

96. (= Endymion 55, = Eros/Amor, Cupido 159* avec bibl.) Sarcophage. New York, MMA 24.97.13. De Rome, Via Ardeatina. - Koch/Sichtermann, RömSark 117 n. 3; 145. 261 fig. 156. - 150-170 ap. J.-C. - Proche de 95, mais Endymion regarde vers S., comme sur 94.

97.* Urne circulaire de marbre fr. Ostie, Mus. 1499. D'Ostie. - Sinn, o. c. 61b, 259 n° 692. - Vers 180 ap. J.-C. - Buste de S., une branche dans la main g., au-dessus d'Endymion endormi.

98.* (= Endymion 60 avec bibl.) Sarcophage. Rome, Villa Doria Pamphilj. - Calza, o. c. 95, n° 180 pl. 112. - Début du III^e s. ap. J.-C. - S. barbu (longue tunique de théâtre, ailes), debout, les bras baissés, soulève le manteau d'Endymion.

99. (= Endymion 61*) Sarcophage. Malibu, Getty Mus. 76.AA.8. - Koch, o. c. 83, 129-139 fig. 1-7. 11; Koch, G./Wight, K., J. P. Getty Mus. Roman Funerary Sculpture. Cat. of the Coll. (1988) 32-35 n° 12. - 1^{er} tiers du III^e s. ap. J.-C. - S. debout (tunique longue, ailes sur la tête, ailes de papillon dans le dos), les yeux fermés, le bras g. baissé, tient une branche de pavot; du bras dr. baissé il renverse sa corne sur Endymion dévoilé par un Amour.

100.* Urne de marbre. Ostie, Mus. 11. - Sinn, o. c. 61b, 264 n° 707. - 1^{re} moitié du III^e s. ap. J.-C. - Derrière Endymion endormi, S. avec un rameau dans la main g.

101.* Sarcophage perdu. De Rome, tombe d'Eurysacès. - SarkRel III 1, 74-76 n° 59 pl. 15. - Il ne

Hypnos/Somnus 101

reste que le buste barbu de S. (tunique, ailes de papillon dans le dos) qui soulève le manteau d'Endymion, et le dos de Séléné.

102.* Sarcophage perdu. De Rome. - SarkRel III 1, 106 n° 84 pl. 24. - S. barbu (tunique longue, sans ailes), debout derrière Endymion dont il soulève le manteau.

c) Somnus en buste

Sarcophages

103. (= Endymion 63*, = Eros/Amor, Cupido 28 avec bibl.) Rome, Mus. Cap. 723. - Koch/Sichtermann, RömSark 84 n. 3; 145. 261 fig. 157. - 150-170 ap. J.-C. - Buste barbu de S. (tunique, ailes de papillon dans le dos, ailettes sur la tête), le bras dr. appuyé sur les rochers qui masquent le bas du corps, le bras g. plié, la tête posée sur la main. Un Amour découvre Endymion.

104. (= Endymion 64* avec bibl.) Mantoue, Pal. Ducale. - Schefold, K., Die Bedeutung der griech. Kunst für das Verständnis des Evangeliums (1983) 34-35 fig. 10. - 150-170 ap. J.-C. - Le buste barbu de S. (tunique, ailes de papillon) apparaît derrière des rochers; légèrement penché en avant, il verse le suc de sa corne sur Endymion dévoilé par un Amour.

105. (= Endymion 57 avec bibl.) Tarquinia, Pal. Bruschi. - Koch, o. c. 83, 135. 137 fig. 13. - 200-230 ap. J.-C. - Au second plan, derrière Endymion endormi, S. barbu (tunique, ailes), figuré en buste.

106. (= 130, = Ares/Mars 400, = Endymion 83* - avec bibl.) Vatican, Mus. Greg. Prof. 9558. - Wrede, Consecratio 272 n° 202 pl. 27, 3; 28, 3-4. - 210-250 ap. J.-C. - Au second plan, le buste barbu de S. (tunique, ailes de papillon) apparaît derrière des rochers; le bras g. levé, il pose le menton dans la main.

d) Somnus au réveil d'Endymion

107.* (= Endymion 82) Sarcophage romain ou attique fr. Berlin-DDR, Staatl. Mus. SK 846. - Simon, E., AA 1982, 579-580 fig. 5. - 210-220 ap. J.-C. - Au second plan S. barbu en buste (tunique, ailes au front) tient une corne contre lui de la main g. Au premier plan Endymion, assis sur le sol, se réveille et tend le bras vers Séléné.

B. Somnus, Bacchus et Ariane

1. L'arrivée de Bacchus et du thiasé

a) Somnus jeune

Peintures murales

108. (= Ariadne 124, = Dionysos/Bacchus 180 avec bibl.) Naples, Mus. Naz. 9286. De Pompéi I 4, 5, Casa del Citarrista. – Pochmarski, E., AM 90, 1975, 156 fig. 58. – Vers 15 ap. J.-C. – S. assis sur le sol (ailes déployées, tunique, cheveux courts tenus par un bandeau) tient une coupe dans la main g.; il tourne la tête à g. vers Bacchus suivi du thiasé. Ariane endormie, vue de dos, le buste sur les genoux de S., est dévoilée par un Amour.

109. (= Ariadne 97, = Ares/Mars sub 389) Pompéi VI 15, 1, Case dei Vettii. – Richardson, E., «The Story of Ariadne in Italy», dans Studies... P. H. von Blanckenhagen (1980) 193 pl. 53, 1. – Vers 75 ap. J.-C. – Derrière Ariane couchée de dos, le buste soutenu par des coussins, et dévoilée par → Pan, S. debout (ailes, tunique) tient dans la main g. une coupe et tend le bras dr. vers Bacchus accompagné du thiasé; à l'arrière-plan le bateau de Thésée (→ Theseus).

110. (= Ariadne 126 avec bibl.) Pompéi VI 16, 15, Casa dell'Ara Massima. – Schefold, WP 158. – 4^e style. – Derrière Ariane étendue sur le sol, vue de face, S. (ailes déployées, couronne de feuillage) tient dans la main dr. un rameau et dans la g. une coupe; il tourne la tête à g. vers Bacchus.

111. (= Ariadne 129) Pompéi IX 7, 20, Casa della Fortuna. – Schefold, VergP pl. 178, 2. – 4^e style. – Presque semblable à 110, mais S. est debout et le thiasé est plus important.

112.* (= Ariadne 127, = Dionysos/Bacchus 182 avec bibl.) Naples, Mus. Naz. 9278. De Pompéi VII 4, 31, Casa dei capitelli colorati. – Simon, E., Jdl 76, 1961, 142 fig. 24. – Vers 70 ap. J.-C. – Ariane est endormie, le buste reposant sur les genoux de S. (tunique, ailes). Tenant une coupe dans la main g., il penche la tête vers elle; à l'approche de Bacchus, un Amour soulève le manteau d'Ariane.

113.* Pompéi VIII 4, 4, Casa di Holconius Rufus. – Pittura e pavimenti di Pompei III (1986) 341 n° 8. – 4^e style. – Ariane dort allongée de dos sur des rochers; un Satyre (→ Silenos, Silenoi) la dévoile. Au second plan, S. debout (longue tunique à rabat, ailes déployées), un long bâton sur l'épaule g., tournant la tête vers Bacchus; à l'arrière-plan, le thiasé.

114.* (= Ariadne 130) Naples, Mus. Naz. 9271. D'Herculanum. – Reinach, RépPeint 113, 2. – Ép. de Vespasien. – S. (ailes, tunique – parfois aussi considéré comme un Amour) guide Bacchus suivi du thiasé vers Ariane à dr., endormie, que dévoile Pan.

Relief

115. (= Ariadne 136, = Dionysos/Bacchus 186 avec bibl.) Sarcophage de marbre. Leningrad, Ermitage A 182. – Saverkina, I. I., Römische Sarkophage in der Ermitage (1979) 44 n° 17 pl. 43, 1. – Début de l'ép. des Sévères. – Derrière Ariane se tient S. nu, drapé dans un manteau, le bras dr. levé, la main sur le front; du bras g. baissé il tient une longue corne appuyée sur l'épaule.

b) Somnus âgé

Sarcophages à reliefs

SOMNUS DEBOUT

116.* Perdu, anc. Rome, Pal. Mattei. – SarkRel IV 2, 392–393 n° 220 pl. 235; Matz, F., AA 1958, 137 n° 6 fig. 6; Turcan 2, 515. – 160–185 ap. J.-C. – Derrière Ariane qui s'éveille à l'arrivée de Bacchus, S. (barbu, ailes) soulève le manteau qui la recouvre; il est en partie masqué par une autre figure.

117. (= Ariadne 135, = Dionysos/Bacchus 185 avec bibl.) Vatican, Belvedere 951. – SarkRel IV 3, 380 Beil. 93, 1–3 pl. 122, 1. – Vers 170 ap. J.-C. – S. barbu (tunique, ailes), debout derrière Ariane endormie; les bras baissés, il tient une branche de pavot dans la main g. et une corne dans la dr. A g. arrivée de Bacchus et du thiasé.

118.* (= Ariadne 98, = Herakles 3277 – avec bibl.) Sarcophage alexandrin. Alexandrie, Mus. Gréco-Rom. 17927. – Koch/Sichtermann, RömSark 269. 577–578 fig. 596. – 160–190 ap. J.-C. – S. barbu (ailes, tunique longue à rabat, manteau), debout de face, se penche à g. vers Ariane endormie; les bras baissés, il tient un rameau dans la main g. La scène est encadrée par l'arrivée de Bacchus à g. et le bateau de Thésée à dr.

119. (= Dionysos/Bacchus [in per. occ.] 125) Cadenet (Vaucluse), église. – SarkRel IV 1, 169 n° 60 pl. 74, 1–2; 75, 1; Turcan, R., RA 1961/1, 159–163; Turcan 2, 515 pl. 42a–c. – Début de l'ép. sévérienne. – S. de face (tunique longue ceinturée, manteau, ailes au front) se penche à g. vers Ariane endormie. Un Amour dort entre Ariane et S.

Hypnos/Somnus 116

120. Fr. de sarcophage. Vatican, Magazzini (anc. Cortile della Pigna) 18919. – Helbig³ 180 n° 140; SarkRel IV 1, 142–145 n° 41 pl. 40–42; Turcan, R., Latomus 24, 1965, 115–116 pl. 18, 3–4; Turcan 2, 257–258. 515 n. 10; 519–521 pl. 39. – 230–240 ap. J.-C. – S. (tunique longue, manteau), debout de face, le pied dr. posé sur un rocher, se penche vers la g.; dans la main g. il tient une branche de pavot qui reposait sur son épaule; à ses pieds un monstre marin.

SOMNUS ASSIS

121. (= Ariadne 141, = Dionysos/Bacchus 187, = Eros/Amor, Cupido 18 – avec bibl.) Baltimore, Walters Art Gall. 23.37. De Rome, Via Salaria, Hypogée des Calpurnii. – SarkRel IV 3, 386 n° 216 pl. 255, 1; Turcan 2, 514; Turcan, R., Religion romaine I (1989) 39 n° 95 pl. 35. – 200–210 ap. J.-C. – S. (barbu, cheveux dans le cou, nu, les jambes drapées dans un manteau) porte sur la poitrine des dentelures semblables à celles des divinités marines. Avec Pan, il écarte le voile d'Ariane qui dort, le buste sur ses genoux.

122. Perdu, anc. Rome. – SarkRel IV 3, 376 n° 208 pl. 225, 2. – Début du III^e s. ap. J.-C. – S. drapé dans un manteau, le buste nu, se penche à g. vers Ariane endormie qui repose sur ses genoux, en soulevant le manteau qui la couvre.

123. (= Ariadne 132) Blenheim Palace (Oxfordshire), parc. – SarkRel IV 1, 149 n° 45 Beil. 18, 1–3; 19, 1–3 pl. 46, 1; 47, 1–2. – 1^{er} quart du III^e s. ap. J.-C. – S. assis, drapé dans un manteau, tient une branche du bras g. baissé et, aidé de Pan, soulève de la main dr. le manteau d'Ariane dont le buste repose sur ses genoux.

124.* Rome, Casino Rospigliosi. – Matz/Duhn n° 2258; SarkRel IV 1, 167 n° 59 pl. 69–70; Turcan 2, 514–517 pl. 40b. – 200–210 ap. J.-C. – S. barbu (tunique longue, manteau) assis vers la dr., la tête tournée vers le cortège de Bacchus. Derrière Ariane, un Amour endormi.

125. (= Ariadne 142 avec bibl.) Rome, Pal. Borghese. Des environs de Torrenova, via Labicana. – Turcan 1, 290 pl. 1. – Vers 240 ap. J.-C. – S. assis, barbu, en tunique longue, une branche dans la main g. De la main dr. il soulève le manteau d'Ariane dont le buste est appuyé sur sa jambe. Un Amour est endormi contre Ariane.

2. Autres scènes

126. (= Dionysos/Bacchus 183) Peinture murale. Stabies, Villa di Arianna (Fondo Martino). – Elia, O., BollArte 36, 1951, 40–44 fig. 1; Miniario Forte, P., Stabiae, pitture e stucchi delle ville romane (1989) 28–31 fig. 12. – Ép. de Vespasien. – Ariane endormie, le buste sur les genoux de S. (ailes, tunique) qui, la tête levée, regarde Bacchus assis vers la dr. sur un rocher.

127.* (= Dionysos/Bacchus 193 avec bibl.) Autel funéraire de Tiberius Claudius Philetus, relief de mar-

bre. Vatican, Sala delle Muse 515a (inv. 313). – Cu-mont, Symb 412–413 fig. 84; Helbig⁴ 163–64 n° 81. – 65–68 ap. J.-C. – Face principale: mariage de Bacchus et d'Ariane. Côtés: S. nu (ailes au front) marche vers le centre, tenant du bras dr. levé sa corne renversée, et contre son bras g. baissé une branche de pavot.

C. Somnus, Mars et Rhéa Silvia

128.* (= Ares/Mars 392) Peinture murale perdue. De Rome, Domus Aurea, voûte du corridor 19. – Dacos, N., DdA 2, 1968, 220–221 fig. 12. – 64–68 ap. J.-C., Fabullus et son atelier. – Derrière → Rhéa Silvia endormie, S. assis (ailes sur la tête), les bras baissés, une branche dans la main g., soulève le manteau de la jeune femme. A dr. Mars arrive tandis qu'un berger s'éloigne.

Hypnos/Somnus 128

Reliefs: sarcophages

129.* (= Ares/Mars 401a) Rome, Pal. Mattei. – Wrede, Consecratio 271 n° 201; Guerrini, L., Palazzo Mattei di Giove. Le Antichità (1982) 212–213 n° 60 pl. 63. – 210–220 ap. J.-C. – Mars se dirige à dr. vers Rhéa Silvia endormie; au second plan entre eux, derrière un parapet, S. âgé, barbu (tunique à manches longues, ailes de papillon, ailettes sur le front) se penche pour verser le contenu de sa corne sur Rhéa Silvia; il tient une longue branche dans la main g.

130. (= 106, = Endymion 83) Vatican, Mus. Greg. Prof. 9558. - 210-250 ap. J.-C. - Dans la partie g. Mars, de profil à dr., se dirige vers Rhéa Silvia; au second plan S. (barbu, tunique et manteau), le bras dr. baissé, renverse sur elle sa corne, tendant le bras g. vers l'autre scène. Un Amour dort appuyé contre la jeune femme.

131.* (= Ares/Mars 401, = Helios/Sol 163) Rome, Pal. Mattei. - Wrede, Consecratio 272 n° 202 pl. 27, 3; 28, 3-4; Guerrini, o. c. 129, 214-215 n° 61 pl. 63; Wrede, H./Harprath, R., Der Codex Coburgensis (1986) 67-68 n° 69 (CC 9) fig. 37. - Vers 250 ap. J.-C. - S. barbu (tunique, manteau) marche vers la dr.; le bras dr. baissé, il tient sa corne renversée vers la poitrine de Rhéa Silvia endormie, et tourne la tête vers Mars. Un Amour dort appuyé sur le genou de la jeune femme.

132. Sarcophage fr. Rome, Pal. Corsetti. - SarkRel III 2, 233 n° 189. - Semblable à 131 mais seuls sont en partie conservés S. et Mars.

133.* Sarcophage fr. Rome, catacombe de Prêtextat. - Wrede, Consecratio 272 n° 203. - III^e s. ap. J.-C. - S. se retourne vers Mars.

D. Somnus, Mars et Vénus

Peintures murales

134.* (= Ares/Mars 378a) Naples, Mus. Naz. I 12282. De Pompéi I 4, 5, Casa del Citarista. - Scheffold, SB III 278 fig. 394. - 10-15 ap. J.-C. - Au pied du lit où sont assis Mars et Vénus, S. figuré comme un jeune homme (tunique, manteau, pèta) est assis sur le sol, endormi, la tête appuyée sur sa main g.; de la dr. posée sur ses genoux, il tient une fine tige.

135. (= Ares/Mars 389) Pompéi I 7, 9, Casa di Teles. - Maiuri, A., MonPitt III, Pompei II (1938) 29-30 fig. 22. - Vers 40 ap. J.-C. - Au premier plan Mars debout derrière Vénus assise; près d'elle un Amour. A l'arrière-plan, derrière une tenture, S. juvénile (tunique, ailes au front), debout près de deux femmes.

136. (= Ares/Mars 389a) Pompéi V 4, 11, Casa di Lucretius Fronto. - v. Blanckenhagen, P. H./Green, B., RM 82, 1975, 87 pl. 2. - Vers 50 ap. J.-C. - Le premier plan est semblable à celui de 135, mais S. (tunique, ailes au front), entre deux femmes, pènetre dans la pièce; il incline la tête à g. vers le couple et, l'air pensif, porte à sa bouche l'index de la main dr.

Relief

137. (= Apollon/Apollo 428, = Ares/Mars 386, = Helios/Sol 186, = Homonoia/Concordia 87 - avec bibl.) Sarcophage. Grottaferrata, Abbazia. - Koch/Sichtermann, RömSark 142 fig. 150. - Vers 160 ap. J.-C. - En présence de plusieurs divinités, Mars et Vénus assis sur un lit; S. adolescent, nu (chignon, manteau sur l'épaule g., ailes de chauve-souris dans le dos), de profil à dr., tient de la main g. une tige de pavot et se dirige vers Mercure (→ Hermes/Mercurius).

E. Somnus aux noces de Jason et de Créüse (→ Kreousa II)

Sarcophages à reliefs

138.* Paris, Louvre MA 238. De Rome. - SarkRel II 1, 208-210 n° 195 pl. 62. Koch/Sichtermann, RömSark 159-161; Croisille, J. M., Poésie et art figuré de Néron aux Flaviens (1982) 53-54 pl. 19, 1; Baratte/Metzger, SarkLouvre 92-94 n° 34. - 130-150 ap. J.-C. - Créüse, assise de profil à g., reçoit les cadeaux empoisonnés des enfants de Médée (→ Medeia) en présence de la nourrice et de Jason (→ Iason); entre eux S., jeune homme nu, couronné, les jambes drapées dans un manteau qui lui couvre le bras g.; la tête tournée vers Créüse, les bras baissés et les mains croisées, il tient dans la g. deux têtes de pavots. Comme sur tous les documents de cette série, les autres scènes figurées illustrent la suite de cet épisode: mort de Créüse et fuite de Médée.

139.* (= Iason 19) Berlin-DDR, Staatl. Mus. SK 843 b. De Rome, via Tiburtina. - SarkRel II 1, 213-214 n° 200 pl. 64; III 3, 562; Schmidt, M., Der Basler Medeasarkophag (1968) 20-21 pl. 27, 1; Croisille, o. c. 138, 53-54 pl. 21, 2. - 130-150 ap. J.-C. - S. nu, drapé dans un manteau et couronné, des têtes de pavots dans la main g., la tête inclinée de profil à dr., devant Créüse assise; à g. Jason; entre eux la nourrice, derrière les enfants de Médée.

140. Fr. de sarcophage. Suisse, marché des ant. - Schmidt, o. c. 139, 25-26 pl. 12. - Vers 160 ap. J.-C. - S. nu, drapé dans un manteau, tourné vers la dr.; les bras baissés, le g. plié à la hauteur de la hanche, il tient une branche de pavot. Les enfants de Médée le précèdent; derrière lui, une femme.

141. Fr. de sarcophage. Vatican, Scala a croce greca. - SarkRel II 1, 211-212 n° 197 pl. 162; Croisille, o. c. 138, 53-54 pl. 22. - Vers 160 ap. J.-C. - Derrière les enfants de Médée, S. jeune (nu, drapé dans un manteau, couronné), la tête inclinée à dr., les bras baissés et les poignets croisés, porte des pavots et une torche renversée; il se tient en face de Créüse; derrière elle une jeune femme penchée vers les enfants et la nourrice. Derrière S. un hermès masculin, barbu.

142. a) (= Iason 66 avec bibl.) Mantoue, Pal. Ducale. - SarkRel II 1, 210-211 n° 196 pl. 62; Schmidt, o. c. 139, 47 n. 33 pl. 32, 3; Künzl, E., BonnJbb 69, 1969, 381 fig. 34; Croisille, o. c. 138, pl. 20, 3. - 130-150 ap. J.-C. - Créüse, assise de profil à dr., reçoit les cadeaux des enfants de Médée en présence de sa nourrice et de Jason. Entre eux S. nu, drapé dans un manteau (couronne), la tête tournée vers Créüse; les bras baissés, les mains croisées, il tient dans la g. deux têtes de pavots et dans la dr. une torche enflammée renversée. Le même schéma est repris sur plusieurs autres sarcophages: b) (= Iason 67) Rome, Mus. Naz. Rom. 75248. De Rome, Via di Porta Maggiore. - SarkRel II 1, 212-213 n° 199 pl. 63; III 3, 561-562; Helbig⁴ III 45-46 n° 2145a; Schmidt, o. c. 139, pl. 32, 2; Künzl, o. c. 383 fig. 35; Sichtermann/Koch, MythSark 42 n° 38 pl. 91, 1; 93. 94. 2; Koch/Sichtermann, RömSark 159-160 fig. 180; MusNazRom I 8, 279, VI 8. - Vers 150-160 ap. J.-C. - c) Couvercle de sarcophage. Vatican, Casino di Pio IV. - SarkRel II 1, 206-208 n° 194 pl. 62; Kaschnitz, SculptMusVat n° 437 pl. 81; Croisille, o. c. 138, 53-54 pl. 21, 1. - Milieu du II^e s. ap. J.-C. - Sur ce document, les épisodes traditionnels sont précédés du mariage de Médée et de Jason en Colchide. - d) Rome, Mus. Naz. Rom. 222. De Rome, cryptoportique du Palatin. - SarkRel II 1, 215-216 n° 201 pl. 65; Helbig⁴ III, 45-46 n° 2145b; MusNazRom I 2, 139-141 n° 38. - 170/180-200 ap. J.-C. - e) Rome, coll. priv. De Esquilin. - Ghislanzoni, E., NotSc 8, 1911, 395-396 fig. 1; SarkRel III 3, 561 n° 199¹; Koch/Sichtermann, RömSark 159 n. 1. - f) Perdu, anc. Rome, Vigna Casali. - SarkRel II 1, 216 n° 202.

143. Naples, Mus. Naz. 3256. - Schmidt, o. c. 139, 45 n. 4; Künzl, o. c. 142a, 308 fig. 36. - Debout de profil à dr. devant Créüse assise, S. nu, drapé dans un manteau, tient des pavots dans la main dr.; devant lui les enfants de Médée, derrière lui Jason.

F. Somnus et Hercule

144. Peinture imaginaire. - Philostr. im. 2, 22. - S. maintient Hercule endormi pendant que les Pygmées l'attaquent.

G. Somnus et Thésée

145. (= Hippolytos I 75 avec bibl.) Peinture perdue ou imaginaire. De Gaza, bains (?). - Prok. ecphr. 11-12; Levi, Antioch 51 n. 4; Turcan, 298 (attribue le texte à Choricus de Gaza); Manganaro, G., EAA VI (1965) 482-483 s. v. «Procopio di Gaza». - Fin du V^e s. ap. J.-C. - En présence de Phèdre (→ Phaidra) et de ses suivantes, Thésée dort; à la tête du lit, S. adolescent (nu, les ailes déployées, un bandeau blanc autour du front), les coudes appuyés sur le lit, soutient sa tête dans ses mains; près de Thésée, des serveurs endormis. Le décor architectural porte diverses scènes de la vie de Thésée et d'Hippolyte.

III. Somnus en compagnie d'autres dieux

145bis. Œuvres imaginaires. Groupes statuaire. - Stat. Theb. 10, 101-103. - Dans le palais de S., statues de S. en compagnie d'Amor et de Voluptas.

IV. Somnus dans un contexte médical

Pour des représentations de S. isolé dans ce contexte, voir 8-9 (?). 39bis. 46. 65.

SOMNUS SOUS LA FORME D'UN AMOUR

Groupes statuaire

146.* (= Asklepios 144, = Hygieia 80 - avec bibl.) Moscou, Mus. Pouchkine II/a 34. - Bol, P. C., «Hypnos», AntW 11, 1980/2, 60-61, ill. - Ép. romaine. - Assis sur un rocher, le pied g. posé sur une pierre plus haute, les mains et la tête appuyées sur le genou, S. (ailes dans le dos) dort aux pieds d'Hygie (serpent sur le bras dr.) et d'Asklépios.

147.* (= Hygieia 71 avec bibl.) Cos, Mus. De Cos, Maison de la mosaïque d'Europe. - Morricone, L., BollArte 1950, 237 fig. 73; Bol, o. c. 146, 60 n. 5. - II^e s. ap. J.-C. - A dr. d'Hygie S. (ailes dans le dos) assis sur un rocher, le pied g. surélevé, les mains posées sur le genou.

148. Cambridge, Fitz. Mus. Du sud de l'Asie Mineure. - Vermeule, C., BurlMag 1974, 406-407 fig. 64; Bol, o. c. 146, 60, fig. - Vers 200 ap. J.-C. - S. (ailes dans le dos) dort assis sur un rocher, la jambe g. très relevée, la tête et les mains sur le genou, à dr. d'Hygie.

149. (= Hygieia 127 avec bibl.) Malibu, Getty Mus. 71.AA.338. - Vermeule, o. c. 148, 407 fig. 67. - Vers 200 ap. J.-C. - A g. d'Hygie, S. dort assis sur un rocher, le pied g. surélevé, les mains sur le genou et la tête inclinée.

150. Konya, Mus. Arch. - Bol, o. c. 146, 60. - Très proche de 149 mais S. est à dr. d'Hygie.

150bis. Antalya, Mus. Arch. 7.29.81. Des thermes de Pergé. - Özgür, M. E., Skulpturen des Museums von Antalya I n° 22; Antalya Museum (1988) 203 n° 92. - II^e s. ap. J.-C. - S. nu, les ailes déployées, les pieds croisés, est assis sur un rocher qui porte la dédicace (le haut du corps est brisé); il s'appuie contre la jambe g. d'Hygie.

V. Somnus et les mortels

151. (= 37) Peinture murale perdue. D'une tombe de Rome. - S. sous l'apparence d'un jeune homme nu, debout, tient des pavots et une torche levée. Devant la porte d'un tombeau, il réveille le mort héroïsé accueilli par un héros casqué et armé d'un bâton de commandement, pour l'introduire dans le βίος ἀνδρῶτος des Bienheureux (Boyancé).

Reliefs

152.* Couverture de sarcophage de marbre. Paris, Louvre MA 302. - Charbonneaux, SculptLouvre n° 302; Turcan 2, 89-90; Baratte/Metzger, SarkLouvre 229-230 n° 140. - 240-260 ap. J.-C. - S., sous la forme d'un Amour nu, vole vers la dr. Il tient dans la main g. une branche de pavot ou de pin (Baratte) et, le bras dr. baissé, il renverse sa corne sur une femme endormie.

153.* Relief funéraire, tombeau de Claudia Fabbula. Paris, Louvre MA 182. - Altmann, W., Die röm. Grabaltäre der Kaiserzeit (1905) 115 n° 110 fig. 92; Cumont, Symb 397 n. 2; Turcan 2, 370; Bober, Ph. P., JWarbInst 40, 1970, 233 pl. 10a; Wrede, Consecratio 122-123 pl. 25, 3. - Fin du III^e s. ap. J.-C. - S. adolescent, nu, vu de face, se dirige vers la g.; le bras g. baissé, il tient une branche de pavot, et tend le bras dr. au-dessus d'une femme allongée; au second plan un enfant et un Amour; un homme affligé est assis en face de la femme. De part et d'autre de la scène, une torche.

154. Relief funéraire disparu. De Rome, Porta

Pancrazia. — CIL VI 16490; Cumont, Symb 407. — S., «génie ailé tendant la coupe de l'oubli à un jeune homme couché et dormant» (Fabretti, A.).

155. Pâte de verre brune. Berlin, Staatl. Mus. 6219. — Furtwängler, Beschreibung 227 n° 6219 pl. 42. — Ép. augustéenne. — S. âgé, barbu (tunique longue, ailes déployées dans le dos), debout derrière une femme endormie.

VI. Images d'interprétation incertaine ou erronée

156. (= Eros/Amor-Cupido 26* avec bibl.) Peinture murale. Naples, Mus. Naz. 9202. De Pompéi VI 10, 11, Casa del Naviglio. — Cook, Zeus I 41 n. 40; Simon, o. c. 112, 142-143 fig. 25. — 4^e style. — S. (?) adolescent, nu (couronne et nimbe bleu, ailes), une branche dans la main g.; soutenu par deux Amours, il s'avance en volant vers Pasithéa endormie sur le sol, appuyée sur les genoux d'un personnage féminin ailé tenant une phiale; son manteau est soulevé par un Amour. Dans l'angle sup. g., Héra (?) assiste à la scène. (Autre interprétation: → Zephyros et Chloris).

157. (= Héra 210*, = Iris I 75*, = Iuno 286) Peinture murale. Naples, Mus. Naz. 9559. De Pompéi VI 8, 3 (3), Casa del Poeta Tragico. — Spinazzola, Pompei 631 n. 199; Schefold, SB III 221. 223 fig. 307. — Vers 75 ap. J.-C. — Héra debout (tunique longue, voile, diadème), tenant un tissu devant elle; près d'elle Zeus assis. Derrière la déesse, une figure ailée: S. (Spinazzola) ou Iris (Schefold: avec Zeus et Héra sur l'Ida). Pour d'autres interprétations cf. Simon, o. c. 112, 146 fig. 21 (→ Kronos et → Rhea) et Schmidt, o. c. 139, 40 (retour de l'Âge d'or).

158. Lampe de terre cuite. Augst, Römermus. 65.444. D'Augst. — Curtis, L. Mdl 3, 1951, 12-17 pl. 5; Schefold, SB III 200 fig. 273. — Vers 60 ap. J.-C. — S. ou Hyménée (→ Hymenaios) sous les traits d'un jeune homme nu (bottes, ailes), assis sur un lit; sur ses genoux une ceinture, derrière lui une femme assise. K. Schefold: Eros et Psyché.

159. (= Aion 5, = Chronos 4, = Danaïdes 26 — avec bibl.) Sarcophage de marbre. Rome, Villa Giulia. De Rome, basilique du Vatican. — Gasparri, C., Rend-Linc 27, 1972, 104 pl. 1. 3-4. — Probablement 1^{re} moitié du I^{er} s. ap. J.-C. — S. (?) âgé (barbu, tunique longue, ailes dans le dos), debout de face, tient une balance dans la main g. et dans la dr. un objet indistinct, qui paraît être des têtes de pavots d'après des dessins anciens. Le personnage a aussi été identifié à Aion, Thanatos et Chronos.

160. (= Helios/Sol 169*) Relief sur un panneau de diptyque en ivoire. Londres, BM 57.10-13.1. De Rome (?). — Hinks, R., Myths and Allegory in Ancient Art (1939) 90-91 pl. 21; Cumont, Symb 176 n. 4 (bibl.); Weitzmann, Spirituality 70-71 n° 60; Spätantike und Frühes Christentum. Cat. exp. Francfort (1983) 671-673 n° 248. — 2^e quart du V^e s. ap. J.-C. — Sur trois registres, consecratio d'un empereur (Antonin, Constance Chlore ou Julien): procession de l'imago, ascension de son esprit sous la forme du dieu-soleil et réception par les dieux de l'empereur porté par deux Génies nus, ailés (S. et Thanatos, le plus souvent interprétés comme des Vents: → Venti).

161. (= Dioskouroi/Castores 26 avec bibl.) Groupe statuaire de marbre dit «Groupe de San Ildefonso». Madrid, Prado. — Kraus, PKG 245 n° 259 (Sichtermann, H.); Zanker, o. c. 40a, 28-30 n° 26 pl. 30. 31, 1-3; Berger, o. c. 41, 61 fig. 4; Simon, E., Augustus (1986) 110-112 fig. 145-146. — I^{er} s. ap. J.-C. — S. (?) nu, couronné de laurier; debout de face, la tête inclinée; le bras dr. baissé, il tient une patère, le bras g. posé sur les épaules de Thanatos qui tient une torche abaissée sur un autel et une autre sur l'épaule. Plusieurs autres interprétations: Castor et Pollux, → Orestes et → Pylades.

162. Statuette de bronze. De Timna (Arabie), peut-être de fabrication égyptienne. — Segall, B., AJA 59, 1955, 212-214 pl. 58; Coarelli, F., EAA VI (1965) 1014 fig. 1117 s. v. «Romana, arte». — Ép. hellénistique ou I^{er} s. ap. J.-C. — S. (?) sous la forme d'un homme âgé, barbu, debout, vêtu d'une tunique longue et portant de grandes ailes. Pour Segall, il pourrait s'agir de → Men/→ Sabazios.

163. Statuette de bronze. Straubing, Mus. De Straubing. — Keim, J./Klumbach, H., Der Römische Schatzfund von Straubing (1951) 32-33 n° 24 pl. 38. 40, 2-3; Galliazzo, V., Bronzi romani del Mus. civ. di Treviso (1979) 175. — Milieu du III^e s. ap. J.-C. — Enfant (cuirasse, cnémides, casque) debout sur le pied dr., la jambe g. en arrière, le bras dr. plié écarté du corps; le bras g. levé brandit une branche de pavot avec une seule capsule. Identifié comme Mars enfant, Amour armé, Eros-Arès-Hypnos (Galliazzo).

COMMENTAIRE

Une des principales caractéristiques de S. est la diversité des formes qu'il peut emprunter dans les mythes, ou de ses fonctions qui changent selon les différentes divinités dont l'artiste souhaite le rapprocher pour mettre en lumière tel ou tel aspect de sa personnalité.

I. Iconographie

A. Attributs, accessoires et attitudes

S. possède en propre la corne qui contient les suc soporifiques ou les rêves (9-10. 32-34. 44-58. 66-83. 127. 129-132. 152) ainsi que les têtes de pavot en graines dont la présence suffit à faire interpréter comme S. des figures éloignées des types courants (11-34. 138-143. 163); mais en raison du symbolisme particulièrement riche de cette plante, il la partage avec plusieurs divinités et particulièrement la Nuit, qui est parfois figurée à la place de S. sur quelques représentations du mythe d'Endymion (Endymion 69. 81; Eros/Amor, Cupido 34). Il tient aussi une coupe, accessoire lié à l'eau du Léthé et à l'oubli qu'elle procure, qui apparaît sur certaines images du sommeil d'Ariane (108-112) et sur une stèle (154). Le torque porté par quelques statuettes gallo-ro-maines de S. (44-46) exprime son identité avec une divinité locale, comme pour d'autres dieux romains, p. ex. Mercure (statuette de bronze: Londres, BM 825. — Walters BM Bronzes n° 825).

Divinité ailée, S. porte plusieurs types d'ailes, parfois même simultanément; certaines le rapprochent d'autres divinités et précisent ses fonctions, notamment dans le domaine funéraire. Il peut avoir des ailes aux tempes comme Mercure (3-7. 38-58) et parfois des ailettes aux talons (71) ou des ailes de papillon, soit dans le dos, soit aux tempes comme Psyché; et sur quelques images, des ailes de chauve-souris (62. 137), animal lié au monde des morts mais aussi au rêve et au sommeil (Plin. nat. 30, 140. 144; Wellmann, M., RE IV (1909) 2740-2742 s. v. «Fledermaus»).

S. dispense le sommeil grâce à ses attributs ou à ses ailes (cf. Sources littéraires), mais il peut aussi agir par sa simple présence, marquant son action par son attitude (l'index porté à la bouche, qui invite au silence: 135-136; pour ce geste, cf. un Amour près d'une morte sur un couvercle de sarcophage: Wrede, H., AA 1977, 412 fig. 94) ou par son propre endormissement (11-34. 61. 99. 134).

B. Les types physiques

1. Somnus enfant. Il convient de distinguer les images de S. sous la forme d'un Amour, avec ou sans attribut mais désigné par une inscription (1-2) ou muni d'ailes temporales (3-5. 7), des Amours endormis pourvus de ses attributs (pavots, 11-31; corne, 32-34), ce qui autorise à voir en eux une personnification du Sommeil.

Il faut évoquer les innombrables «Amours» endormis parfois identifiés à S. (Furtwängler, A., Bdl 1877, 121-128; Carinci, o. c. 27b) mais qui ne tiennent aucun attribut. Il n'est pas possible de les identifier à S. bien qu'ils représentent le résultat de son action: ainsi un ex-voto dédié à Asklépios (8) illustre davantage le moyen de communication du dieu que S. lui-même. Dans un contexte funéraire ils représentent le sommeil du mort, qu'ils soient seuls ou en sa compagnie. Ils sont comparables à ceux qui se trouvent près d'un personnage endormi dans une scène mythique (73. 79. 124-125. 129. 133), renforçant la présence de S. ou soulignant l'action en son absence (p. ex. → Endymion 98; → Ariadne 130). Mis à part ceux qui ne portent aucun des attributs d'Amour et dorment sur un lion (20-24) — dérivant peut-être de la statue du Sommeil à Épidaure qui endormait un lion, Paus. 2, 10, 2) — les figures qui gardent les attributs de l'Amour (arc, 12. 15. 25. 27b. 30; baudrier, 15. 18-19. 25; et carquois, 12. 29; et parfois une torche, 11. 29a-b), mais qui ont en main les pavots ou la corne (32-34) et dont la signification funéraire est soulignée par un papillon (16), un lézard (18b. 20. 25. 27b. 29b) ou une couronne (11. 33), sont plus proches d'une personnification du sommeil que de l'image du dieu. Un Amour portant des pavots et une massue (30) fait le lien avec la série des Amours endormis munis des armes d'Hercule, liés aux pouvoirs de ce héros dans le monde funéraire; il est à rapprocher d'une autre statuette (27b) portant une dédicace à Hercule.

2. Somnus jeune. L'image grecque d'Hypnos adolescent, en marche, suivant un original de Scopas, a inspiré un grand nombre d'images de S. dans la statuaire de marbre (42) ou de bronze (44-57) — qui proviennent surtout de l'est et du nord de la Gaule — ainsi qu'une gemme (58). Un certain nombre de ces statuettes de fabrication gallo-romaine se confondent avec l'image de S. enfant, mais elles conservent l'attitude et les attributs du modèle et portent la coiffure des Amours (9-10); la même image se retrouve sur un couvercle de sarcophage (152). Ce type apparaît aussi dans les scènes du mythe (66-83. 108-115) et sur quelques intailles (37-38), sous la forme d'un hermès, et seules les ailes de papillon permettent de différencier S. de Mercure. Quelques peintures (36-37. 151) le montrent sous un aspect et dans une attitude qui le rapprochent encore plus de Mercure: on le reconnaît seulement à ses pavots.

Dans la peinture du début de l'époque romaine, S. est figuré sous l'aspect d'un très jeune homme ailé tenant une coupe et une baguette (108-112). Ce type apparaît dans des images issues d'un original hellénistique; c'est plus généralement celui de divinités secondaires à l'identification incertaine (157).

3. Somnus âgé. S., contrairement aux indications des textes, est aussi figuré comme un homme d'âge mûr sur quelques gemmes du I^{er} s. portant des hermès (41-43); puis il devient un vieillard. Ce type est une contamination due à l'image de Thanatos et à l'interprétation symbolique de la mort comme un sommeil (Turcan, R., MEFRA 71, 1956, 292). Ceci expliquerait que ce type soit presque exclusivement réservé à des documents relevant du domaine funéraire, à l'exception d'une peinture (92). S. porte soit simplement un manteau, soit une tunique, soit un chiton ceinturé inspiré d'un costume de théâtre qui rappelle les images anciennes de Dionysos chthonien; on le trouve dans les scènes avec Ariane (119-120. 124) et parfois avec Endymion (98).

En général l'aspect de S. est assez éloigné de ce que nous transmettent les textes, soit par la vivacité de son mouvement, soit par son âge; parmi les images qui s'en rapprochent, montrant le dieu endormi agissant par sa simple présence, seules les plus anciennes montrent le dieu jeune (35. 134); sur les autres documents il est âgé (61a-b. 96).

4. Somnus rapproché d'autres divinités. L'action de S. dans différents domaines où il interfère avec d'autres divinités a amené la modification de son aspect. Sur des sarcophages illustrant la légende de Médée (138-143) il est figuré sous l'aspect d'un jeune homme couronné, proche des Vertus assistant aux mariages; il pourrait même être identifié à Hyménée avec sa couronne, mais la torche qu'il porte parfois est inclinée et, la tête baissée avec tristesse, il tient des pavots. La même ambiguïté entre les deux personnages se retrouve aussi sur une lampe (158, cf. aussi l'image du Komos: Philostr. im. 1, 2). La même imprécision existe aussi pour les personnifications du Rêve chez Philostrate (im. 1, 27: un personnage décrit sous le nom d'Oneiros est semblable à S.) et chez Procope (une figure nommée Hypnos envoie les rêves, 145).

S. est aussi parfois proche de Mercure; dans ce cas cette équivalence traduite par la proximité de leurs attributions (cf. III B) amène des similitudes iconographiques: S. peut apparaître comme une divinité secondaire qui lui est subordonnée (137). De même il peut modifier l'aspect d'une divinité: ainsi la Nuit porte ses attributs et le remplace auprès de Séléné (I A).

C. Somnus dans les scènes du mythe

L'introduction de S. dans certaines scènes du mythe et leur interprétation ont influé sur l'apparence du dieu.

1. Endymion. Les images de S. près d'Endymion à l'arrivée de Séléné se répartissent en deux groupes principaux. Le plus ancien est particulièrement homogène: S. âgé, portant de grandes ailes, sans attribut, nu, les jambes drapées dans un manteau (84. 86-91) ou bien vêtu (85), écarte le manteau d'Endymion qui repose sur ses genoux. Un deuxième groupe montre S. derrière Endymion, en buste et jeune (66), ou âgé, en buste (103-106) ou en pied (95-102). Enfin, figuré jeune, il peut accompagner la déesse, soit qu'il la guide (73-83), soit qu'il l'ait déjà précédée (67-72); son apparence se rapproche des types statuariers dont elle reproduit jusqu'à la coiffure (73. 75, cf. 42. 55).

2. Ariane. Les images les plus anciennes de la découverte d'Ariane par Bacchus se trouvent sur des peintures pompéiennes du I^{er} s. ap. J.-C. (108-114) où la figure androgyne de S. donne l'oubli à Ariane jusqu'à l'arrivée du dieu, favorisant leur union encore plus clairement illustrée sur deux autres documents (126-127). Quand le thème réapparaît un siècle plus tard sur les sarcophages, une seule image montre encore S. jeune (115); ailleurs il est âgé, sans attribut, et remet Ariane à Bacchus, ou s'éloigne. Il revêt différents aspects, portant soit de longues ailes et un chiton à manches longues (116-117. 123), soit un manteau (avec un aspect proche de celui de Pluton, 121), soit un chiton de type féminin à ceinture triangulaire et un péplos (119-120. 124).

3. L'imagerie romaine fait aussi intervenir S. dans des épisodes où son rôle n'est pas mentionné par ailleurs; de même Philostrate, dans une brève description de la capture d'Hercule par les Pygmées (144), prête à S. un rôle actif.

Pour illustrer la rencontre de Mars et de Rhéa Silvia, les artistes ont eu recours aux schémas déjà employés pour Endymion, que ce soit sur des sarcophages (129-133) où il répand le contenu de sa corne, ou dans la peinture (128) où S. soutient la jeune femme sur ses genoux. La présence de S. permet d'attribuer à cette scène la même symbolique qu'aux précédentes, ce qui est particulièrement mis en lumière sur un sarcophage (130 = 106) qui figure aussi le mythe d'Endymion.

Dans d'autres épisodes, le schéma et l'aspect de S. sont plus divers. S. se substitue au filet de la tradition homérique pour permettre aux dieux de surprendre Mars et Vénus. Ce est traduit sur le document le plus ancien par la simple présence du dieu endormi aux pieds des amants (134), et sur d'autres peintures par son invitation au silence (135-136); sur un sarcophage

(137) il s'éloigne et se dirige vers Mercure isolé des autres dieux par la scène centrale.

Sur les sarcophages illustrant la remise des cadeaux de Médée à Créüse (138-143), les sculpteurs ont joué sur l'ambiguïté de la torche utilisée dans le domaine matrimonial et funéraire, tout comme dans la description du Komos où Philostrate (im. 1, 2) fait allusion à la fois au sommeil de l'ivresse et à celui de la nuit de noces, donnant à son personnage les attributs de plusieurs divinités.

Exprimées dans la littérature et dans le nom même du dieu, les relations ou même l'ambivalence de S. et du Rêve se retrouvent dans la peinture décrite par Procope (145): il nomme le Sommeil, mais l'action décrite est le rêve de Thésée. On peut en complément évoquer l'œuvre décrite par Philostrate (im. 1, 27) où Oneiros porte les attributs de S. (pour un autre aspect de S. dans ce domaine, cf. IV).

D. Somnus et les mortels

Les images de Somnus en compagnie des mortels ne forment pas un ensemble cohérent; l'on peut aisément associer à chacune le schéma d'un épisode mythique. Le dieu intervient directement dans le monde des mortels pour assurer son passage ou son devenir dans l'au-delà; ces images sont à rapprocher des sarcophages où le héros est figuré sous les traits du défunt (→ Endymion 67. 83. 138). La peinture d'une tombe (151) reprend le schéma de la délivrance d'Alceste par Hercule, et le tombeau de Claudia Fabulla (153) celui de l'arrivée de S. derrière Endymion (71-83); mais, sur un plan formel, le contenu consolateur du mythe est en partie détruit par l'attitude affligée de l'homme qui se rapproche de celle des participants aux scènes de déploration. Une stèle (154) où S., probablement adolescent, tenait une coupe pourrait être rapprochée de certaines images du sommeil d'Endymion, mais la coupe apparaît sur les peintures consacrées à Ariane (108-114). Hors du domaine funéraire, une lampe (158) illustre peut-être à nouveau les liens de S. avec d'autres divinités et principalement Hyménée; elle est pratiquement le seul document dans cette catégorie, mis à part un autre objet d'interprétation incertaine (155).

II. Somnus dans le domaine funéraire

Dans l'iconographie comme dans la littérature et dans de nombreuses inscriptions, le sommeil représente fréquemment la mort, et les images de S. dans un contexte funéraire peuvent illustrer simplement la vision consolatrice du sommeil du mort ou, par l'interprétation allégorique de divers mythes où un personnage est endormi, exprimer la croyance en une vie dans l'au-delà.

A. Interprétations des mythes

L'image d'Endymion est utilisée dans un contexte funéraire pour la première fois à Rome. La présence de S. près du berger ne fait pas référence à l'amour qu'il lui portait mais l'existence de ce thème a pu aider à l'introduction de S. dans cette série d'images. Une des principales interprétations est le sommeil paisible après la mort, comme récompense; le choix de ce mythe s'explique aussi dans un contexte stoïcien par l'attrait de la lune sur les âmes, seul le passage par le sommeil de la mort rendant leur union possible.

La présence de S. au moment de la découverte d'Ariane par Bacchus n'est pas une innovation de l'art funéraire romain (cf. 108-114. 126), mais la modification de l'aspect de S. traduit celle de la signification. Sur ces sarcophages, à l'exception d'un exemplaire (118) où la présence du bateau de Thésée réintroduit un élément narratif, S. n'est plus le dieu qui permet par son action à Ariane d'attendre Bacchus, mais au contraire une force ancienne qui s'efface devant le nouveau dieu incarnant la renaissance du mort par son union avec la divinité soulignée par l'attribution à Ariane des traits de la défunte (p. ex. 117) et clairement exprimée sur un autel (127); cette interprétation explique, suivant R. Turcan, la ressemblance entre Dionysos l'ancien et S. (119-120. 124). Un document (107) fait le lien entre la signification des deux mythes: au réveil d'Endymion, S. s'éloigne à l'arrivée de Séléné. La modification du schéma rend sensible celle de la signification: Endymion devient l'équivalent d'Ariane.

Dans ces mythes, S. incarne différents aspects de la mort: passage nécessaire pour accéder au monde divin ou sommeil infernal mis en fuite par le dieu «rédeempteur». Les autres mythes qui font intervenir S. rentrent dans ces catégories. Un de ces documents porte à la fois l'image d'Endymion et celle de Rhéa Silvia (130) avec la même valeur symbolique: seul le sommeil ou la mort permet aux mortels de connaître le monde divin en libérant l'âme. Rhéa Silvia accède au monde divin par son union avec le dieu pendant son sommeil: cet épisode inconnu des textes est une innovation de l'imagerie funéraire.

La représentation de Mars et de Vénus (137) devient le symbole de l'âme qui s'éveille à la véritable vie au moment où le couple est libéré de ses chaînes ou de son sommeil, c'est-à-dire de la vie terrestre. De même S., absent des représentations de la remise des cadeaux de Médée à Créüse lorsque l'aspect narratif est privilégié (notamment un calathos d'argent d'ép. augustéenne: Bonn. Rhein. Landesmus. 58.4. - Künzl. o. c. 142a, 342-346 fig. 2. 6. 12-18), apparaît sur les sarcophages.

B. Somnus psychopompe

Les liens de S. avec l'au-delà sont parfois encore plus clairement évoqués. Il fait office de psychopompe (TrGF II adesp. F 405), rôle qui lui est déjà attribué dans les Hymnes Orphiques (Orph. h. 85, 7-8; Boyancé 100); il emprunte cette fonction à Mercure, tout comme celui-ci exerce son pouvoir sur le sommeil (Hom. Od. 7, 137-138; Athen. 1, 16b). Ces attributions, clairement exprimées dans les inscriptions (Cumont, Symb 369 n. 2), apparaissent aussi sur quelques documents figurés (151. 153. 160?). Son rôle est parfois illustré par le mort lui-même dormant sur son tombeau et qui, outre des objets liés à ses croyances, peut tenir des têtes de pavot tout comme le protecteur de son repos (Cumont, Symb 397-400 pl. 41, 1 fig. 79).

III. Somnus dans le domaine médical

S., comme divinité du sommeil et du rêve subordonnée aux dieux guérisseurs, et comme illustration de leurs moyens d'action, est aussi figuré (8. 39bis. 146-150bis) ou mentionné dans des dédicaces liées ou non à une image (46. 65; CIL XII 3058), suivant une tradition déjà connue en Grèce (Paus. 2, 10, 2).

Dans les régions occidentales de l'Empire, S. est le plus souvent un dieu jeune en marche, dérivé du modèle de Scopas. Il est probable que la statue de Riez (46) reproduisait ce même type. La statuette de Grand (9) doit probablement être mise en relation avec une inscription de même provenance qui fait allusion au sommeil ordonné par Apollon Grannus (Wuilleumier, P., Inscr. latines des Trois Gaules, Gallia Suppl. 17 [1963] 169 n° 416). En Gaule, un seul document (39bis) s'en éloigne; S. est comme dans la série précédente adolescent, mais il est en revanche statique; son rôle est précisé par la présence d'Apollon, dieu guérisseur, et par son attitude qui le relie à un sanctuaire.

Dans d'autres régions, S. peut aussi être figuré sous la forme d'un Amour endormi couché sur un ex-voto provenant de Grèce (8) ou, dans des groupes statuariers, assis près d'Esculape et d'Hygie (146), mais le plus souvent avec Hygie seule (147-150bis) avec un schéma proche de celui du groupe d'Aphrodite-Tyché avec Amour (Vermeule, o. c. 148).

Dans ce contexte, les attributions de S. recoupent celles de Télésphore (→ Telesphoros): bien que proches, ils ne sont pas totalement assimilables l'un à l'autre et subsistent simultanément, comme le montre la statue d'Asclépios avec Télésphore trouvée près de celle d'Hygie avec S. (147). CATHERINE LOCHIN

HYPOLEPSIS

(ὑπόληψις) Personnification de la suspicion, du soupçon.

I. (= Agnoia 3, = Aletheia 1, = Diabole 1, = Epiboule 1) Peinture d'Apelle. Perdue. - Lukianos cal. 5; Brunn, H., Geschichte der griechischen Künstler II (1889) 140. - Vers 300 av. J.-C. - Lucien ne décrit pas H. Il indique simplement qu'elle se trouvait debout, en compagnie d'Agnoia, non loin d'un homme aux grandes oreilles, assis. Les deux femmes ne semblent pas avoir été désignées par des inscriptions, Lucien ajoutant avec précaution un δοκεῖ μοι à son identification.

JEAN-ROBERT GISLER

HYPSAS

(Ἵψας, Hypsa) Divinità del fiume omonimo nella Sicilia occidentale, corrispondente all'odierno Belice. Il suo culto è attestato nel V sec. a.C. a Selinunte, e molto probabilmente anche ad Entella, sita più a monte sul Belice sinistro.

FONTI LETTERARIE: Non esistono testimonianze specifiche sulla divinità, ma solo sul fiume: Pol. 9, 27, 5; Plin. nat. 3, 90.

BIBLIOGRAFIA: Cavallaro, G., «Entella elimica e le sue monete», AnnIstiNum 3, 1956, 39-42; Cahn, H. A., «A litra of Entella», NC 1937, 107-111; Lloyd, A. H., «The coin types of Selinus and the legend of Empedocles», NC 1935, 73-93; Lacroix, L., Monnaies et colonisation (1965) 118-122; Rizzo, G. E., Intermezzo (1939) 49-71.

Sulla topografia: Manni, E., Geografia fisica e politica della Sicilia antica (1981) 111-112.

CATALOGO

Monete di Selinunte

1.* (= Herakles 2316 [D.]) AR, didrammi, 450-415 a.C. - Rizzo, MGS 167, 15-17 tav. 31, 15-17; Franke/Hirmer, *GrMünze*² tav. 67, 187; SNG München 889-893; SNG ANS 702-710. - D.: Eracle in lotta col toro. Etnico. R.: H. nudo, con nella d. una patera ■ nella s. un ramo di alloro, che sacrifica su un altare a s., intorno cui è avvolto un serpente. A d. foglia di selinon e aironi, HYΨΑΣ.

Monete di Entella

2. (= Entella 2 [D.]) AR, litre, 460-450 a.C. - Cahn 107-111. - D.: Testa femminile diademat (ninfa → Entella?). R.: Toro androprosopo a d. (dio fluviale H.). Etnico.

3. (= Entella 1 [D.]) AR, litre, 450 a.C. c. - Imhoof-Blumer, F., «Nymphen und Chariten», JLArchNum 11, 1908, 27, 63-64 tav. 2, 22; Cat. coll. R. Jameson (1913) 560-561; Cavallaro 40-41 tav. 1, 4-8. - D.: Figura femminile sacrificante su un altare (ninfa Entella?). R.: Come 2, in esergo pesce. Etnico.

COMMENTO

Sulla base di Diog. Laert. 8, 70 la rappresentazione dell'H., e quella analoga del → Selinous sulle monete di Selinunte, erano state messe in relazione con la bonifica delle paludi selinuntine. Lloyd, Rizzo, e, più tardi, Lacroix hanno dimostrato l'erroneità di tale esgesi, riconoscendo nel tipo monetale 1 il dio fluviale H. rappresentato all'interno del suo temenos, nell'atto di sacrificare presso il proprio altare. Il suo gesto ha valore rituale ed esemplare, in evidente analogia con il sacrificio che, sulle monete di Himera, ha per protagonista la ninfa eponima della città (→ Himera). Il gesto è destinato a promuovere la fertilità e la fecondità del terreno, valori espressi emblematicamente dal serpente avvolto intorno all'altare.

Alcuni attributi dell'H. come il ramo di alloro, l'airone e la foglia, sono utilizzati anche per il dio fluviale → Gelas, rappresentato quale toro androprosopo (Jenkins, K., The Coinage of Gela [1970] tavv. 22-24, 385-389, 395-400). La coesistenza delle due iconografie del toro a volto umano e del dio giovinetto, la cui antica ferinità sopravvive nell'attributo delle corna, a Gela per il Gelas e a Catana per l'→ Amenanos, rende ragione di come l'H. sia stato rappresentato ad Entella sotto forma di toro androprosopo, in unione, sull'altra faccia della moneta, con la divinità femminile in cui si manifestava la sua virtù generante.

MARIA CACCAMO CALTABIANO

HYPSIPYLE I → LIMC Suppl.

HYPSIPYLE II → Amazonas 64

HYPSOPYLE → Amazonas 740

HYRKANIS

(Ἵρκανίς) Personificazione dell'omonima città lidia nella valle dell'Hermos, il cui sito è stato identificato con Papasli, odierna Halitpaşaköi (Foucart, Schuchhardt, Büchner, Robert). Fondata dai Persiani, che vi trasferirono dei coloni dalla regione dell'Hyrkania a sud del Mar Caspio (Strabon 13, 4, 13 p. 629), la città dovette accogliere sotto i Seleucidi una guarnigione macedone, e si definisce in varie iscrizioni come ἡ Μακεδόνων Ἵρκανῶν πόλις.

FONTI LETTERARIE: assenti.

BIBLIOGRAFIA: Büchner, L., REIX 1 (1914) 526-527 s.v. «Hyrkanis»; Drexler, W., ML 1 2 (1886-90) 2860 s.v. «Hyrkanis»; Foucart, P., BCH 11, 1887, 91-92; Head, *HN*² 652; Robert, J. e L., Hellenica VI, Inscriptions grecques de Lydie (1948) 16-26; Schuchhardt, C., AM 13, 1888, 4-6.

CATALOGO

a) Teste e busti

Monete di Hyrkanis

1. AE, età imperiale. - BMC Lydia 122, 2. - D.: busto a d. con corona turrita, leg. YPKANON. R.: → Tyche stante, leg. MAKEAON.

2.* AE, età imperiale. - BMC Lydia 123, 11-13; Grose, McClean III 216, 8670 tav. 303, 12; SNG Copenhagen 208; Kraft, K., Das System der kaiserzeitlichen Münzprägungen in Kleinasien (1972) 118, 61 tav. 9. - D.: busto a d. con corona turrita, leg. YPKANIS. R.: Tyche stante, leg. YPKANON.

b) Figure intere

Rilievo in pietra

3.* (= Amazonas 798 con bibl., = Hierokaisareia 1 con bibl. e rinvii) Base di marmo. Napoli, Mus.

Naz. 6780. Da Pozzuoli. - Bulifon, A., Ragionamento intorno d'un antico marmo scoperto nella città di Pozzuoli (1694); Jahn, O., SbLeipzig 1851, 148 tav. 3, 11; Toynbee, J. M. C., The Hadrianic School (1934) 122-123 tav. 28, 1; Robert 20; De Franciscis, A., Il Mus. Naz. di Napoli (1963) fig. 84; idem, in I Campi Flegrei nell'archeologia e nella storia, Roma, 4-7 maggio 1976, Atti Conv. Lincei 33 (1977) 344; Mingazzini, P., RM 83, 1976, 425-429 tav. 148, 2; Hanfmann, G. M. A., in Hanfmann, G. M. A. e Ramage, N. H., Sculpture from Sardis: The Finds through 1975 (1978) 180-181. - 30 d.C. secondo l'iscrizione; Mingazzini propende invece per un restauro integrale del monumento dopo il terremoto del 69 d.C. e data la base in età domiziana. - La base, e la statua che su di essa poggiava, furono dedicate a Tiberio dagli Augustali ■ ricordano la sua opera in favore delle città dell'Asia Minore devastate da terremoti nel 17 e nel 23 d.C. (Tac. ann. 2, 47; 4, 13; Plin. nat. 2, 200; fonti raccolte in Magie, D., Roman Rule in Asia Minor II [1950] 1358-1359 n. 23). Sul lato posteriore, vicino al bordo destro, H. è rappresentata come una figura femminile di tipo amazzonio, stante, frontale, vestita alla macedone con chitonisco, clamide e causia. Ai suoi piedi Bulifon poteva ancora leggere l'iscrizione HYRCA, oggi completamente scomparsa.

Scultura a tutto tondo

4. Statua nel Foro di Cesare, davanti al tempio di Venus Genetrix, non conservata. - 28 d.C. - Secondo Phlegon miracula, FGrH 257 F 36 (XIII), le città d'Asia Minore dedicarono a Tiberio una statua nel Foro di Cesare, circondata dalle personificazioni - evidenti-mente a tutto tondo (ἀνδριάντας) - delle città beneficate, in segno di gratitudine per le provvidenze nei loro riguardi in seguito ai terremoti. - La statua di Tiberio appare su monete della zecca di Roma: AE, sesterzio. - BMC Emp I CXXXIV. 129, 70-73 tav. 23, 16; Trillmich, W., Familienpropaganda der Kaiser Caligula und Claudius (1978) 91 n. 278 tav. 12, 6. - D.: leg. SC. R.: Tiberio seduto a s. Cf. Platner/Ashby 227 s.v. «Forum Iulium».

COMMENTO

Sulle monete 1-2 H. presenta il consueto aspetto delle personificazioni di città (→ Tyche), senza una propria individualità che attinga a precedenti mitologici. Sulla base di Pozzuoli (3), che probabilmente riprende la figura del monumento ufficiale nel Foro di Cesare (4), H. appare invece con elementi caratteristici del costume macedonico, che mettono in risalto la sua seconda fondazione ad opera di soldati macedoni, messa orgogliosamente in rilievo dalla sua definizione di ἡ Μακεδόνων Ἵρκανῶν πόλις.

(Ricerca condotta con contributo del Ministero della Pubblica Istruzione, Roma)

FULVIO CANCELIANI

HYSMENA → Ismene 13

IACOR → Hebe I/Iuventus I

IAKCHOS

(Ἰακχος) Attisch-eleusinischer, dem → Dionysos ähnlicher Gott oder Dämon, Personifikation des Prozessionsgesanges der Mysten auf dem Weg von Athen nach Eleusis am 19. Boedromion.

LITERARISCHE QUELLEN: Neben Hdt. 8, 65 ist am wichtigsten die Parodos der 405 v. Chr. aufgeführten Frösche: Aristoph. Ranae 316–459 mit Schol. Durch die Interpretation von Graf (40–50) ist die Verbindung mit den eleusinischen Mysterien klarer geworden. I. wird in der Parodos als Fackelschwinger (340. 351), Erfinder des Festliedes (399–400), als Liebhaber des Tanzes und Geleiter der Prozession (410. 416) angerufen. Der aristophanische Witz liegt darin, daß die Mysten vor dem als Herakles verkleideten Gott Dionysos singen, der ohnehin mit I. gleichgesetzt zu werden pflegte (s. unten). Er reagiert entsprechend: «Ich folge immer gern der Prozession» (417–418). – Gleichsetzung I. und Dionysos: Soph. Ant. 1146–1152 und TrGFIV F 959; Eur. Bacchae 725–726 und Ion 1074–1077 sowie öfter in der griechischen und römischen Literatur; vgl. dazu Graf 51–58. – Wichtig ist, daß die Gleichsetzung nicht nur in der Dichtung, sondern auch im eleusinischen Kult begegnet: Schol. Aristoph. Ranae 479 (der eleusinische Daduchos nennt I. Semelesohn, das ist kein anderer als Dionysos). – Strabon 10, 3, 10 p. 468 unterscheidet in der Weise zwischen I. und Dionysos, daß er von zwei Iakchoi spricht, einer werde mit Dionysos identifiziert, der andere sei der Archeget der Mysterien, ein zu Demeter gehörender Dämon.

BIBLIOGRAPHIE: Deubner, L., Attische Feste (1932) 73–74. 125–126. 134; Fauth, W., KlPauly II (1967) 1301–1302 s. v. «Iakchos»; Geominy, W., «Eleusinische Priester», in BonnJbb Beih. 47, Festschr. N. Himmelmann (1989) 253–264; Graf, F., Eleusis und die orphische Dichtung Athens in vorhellenistischer Zeit, RGVV 33 (1974) 40–66; Höfer, O., ML II 1 (1890–94) 1–11 s. v. «Iakchos» (veraltet, besonders in bezug auf angebliche I.-Kulte außerhalb von Attika; vgl. dagegen Kern); Kern, O., RE IX 1 (1914) 613–622 s. v. «Iakchos»; Maaß, M., Die Prohedrie des Dionysostheaters in Athen (1972) 119 (zum Priester Iakchagogos); Metzger, Recherches 52 Anm. 4; Mylonas, G. E., Eleusis and the Eleusinian Mysteries (1961) 252–258; Nilsson, GrRel 1 318. 599; Pringsheim, H. G., Archäologische Beiträge zur Geschichte des eleusinischen Kultes (1905); Simon, E., «Neue Deutung zweier eleusinischer Denkmäler des 4. Jhs. v. Chr.», AntK 9, 1966, 79–80. 89–90.

KATALOG

A. Iakchos in der Plastik

1. In der Prozession nach Eleusis mitgeführtes Idol. Im «sogenannten Iakcheion» (Plut. Aristides 27, 4; vgl. Alkiphron 3, 23, 1), das man in der Nähe von Dipylon und Pompeion annimmt (Lit. bei Graf 49 Anm. 43) stand wahrscheinlich ein Idol des I., das an der Spitze der Mystenprozession nach Eleusis getragen wurde (Mylonas 253–254; Maaß 119). Es könnte aus Holz gewesen sein und war aus chronologischen und praktischen Gründen sicher nicht identisch mit 2. Geominy 256 und passim nimmt in der Nachfolge von E. Gerhard (AbhBerlin 1863, 540) an, I. sei von dem eleusinischen Daduchos verkörpert worden, der dieses Amt nur in seiner Jugend ausgeübt habe. Für diese Hypothese fehlt eine Stütze in der antiken Tradition. Andererseits entspricht das Tragen von Statuen in Prozessionen einem weit verbreiteten antiken Brauch, so daß man besser an dem I.-Idol festhält. Da I. in der älteren eleusinischen Tradition nicht begegnet, hat man ihn für eine relativ junge Gestalt gehalten (Deubner 126). Er dürfte mit der Organisation der athenischen Prozession nach Eleusis in späarchaischer Zeit zusammenhängen (vgl. zu 7).

2. (= Dionysos 532 mit Lit.) Statue des Praxiteles. «In der Nähe des Pompeion» erwähnt Paus. 1, 2, 4 einen Tempel der Demeter, der vielleicht mit dem Iakcheion (1) identisch war. In ihm standen Statuen der Demeter (→ Demeter 415 mit Lit.), der Kore und des I., der eine Fackel hielt. An der Wand war mit attischen Buchstaben geschrieben, es handle sich um Werke des Praxiteles. Jener I. war nach Cic. Verr. 4, 60 aus Marmor und gehörte zu den wichtigsten Kunstwerken Athens; vgl. Clem. Alex. protr. 62; Lippold, G., RE XXII 2 (1954) 1789–90 s. v. «Praxiteles 5». – Zur Bestimmung des Typus ist die Fackel wichtig, die in der Hand des Dionysos, dem I. nach den Schriftquellen geglichen haben dürfte, selten auftritt. Sie ist aber bei dem folgenden «Dionysos» vorhanden:

a)* (= Eubouleus 11 mit Lit., = Demeter/Ceres 146* mit Lit.) Marmorsarkophag. Rom, Pal. Borghese. Aus Torrenova. – Die ganz r. stehende jugendliche Gestalt mit kurzem Gewand und hohen Stiefeln schultert eine Fackel und hat ein Tierfell umgegürtet. Bei diesem Jüngling und nicht bei dem im l. Teil stehenden Fackelträger dürfte es sich um I. handeln, denn nur er, nicht jener, ist dem Dionysos ähnlich. Von diesem kaiserzeitlichen Denkmal läßt sich zurückschließen auf ein spätklassisches Weihrelief:

b) (= Eubouleus 4 mit Lit., = Demeter 412* mit Lit.) Neapel, Mus. Naz. Aus Mondragone. – Der r. stehende «Dionysos» gleicht im Typus der Gestalt auf a; die Fackel, die er l. schultert, ist in Spuren erhalten. Graf 60–61 kommt auf anderem Wege zu demselben Schluß, daß es sich hier um I. handelt. Er fügt an (60 Anm. 8. 9):

3. (= Hades 45 mit Lit.) Weihrelief «für die beiden Göttinnen». Chalkis, Mus. – Mylonas, G. E., ArchEph 1965, 1–6 Abb. 1. – Spätes 4. Jh. v. Chr. – Dionysos-I. im Typus Hope (→ Dionysos 128), mit Thyrsos und Kantharos. Der gleiche Typus erscheint auf:

4.* Weihrelief, Marmor, fr. Würzburg, Wagner-Mus. H 4020. Aus Megara. – Unpubliziert. – Spätes 4. Jh. v. Chr. – Dionysos vom Typus Hope (→ Dionysos 128*) nimmt die r. Seite ein (lange Locken, Band im Haar, Nebris, kurzes Gewand, Stiefel; um die Schultern schmaler Mantel). Der «Stab», auf den er sich mit der hochgreifenden Linken stützt, ist nicht sicher der Thyrsos. Es könnte sich auch um eine große Fackel handeln. Das Attribut in der vorgestreckten Rechten, wohl ein Kantharos, ist nicht erhalten. Obwohl weitere Gottheiten nicht (mehr?) vorhanden sind, ist die Deutung auf Dionysos-I. wegen 3 zu erwägen.

5. Weihung des Arztes Mnesitheos. Pausanias sah am Heiligen Weg zwischen Athen und Eleusis sein Grab (1, 37, 4) und erwähnt Weihestatuen (ἀγάλματα), darunter eine des I., die dieser gestiftet habe. Wo sie genau standen, sagt er nicht. Da er nur I. hervorhebt, scheint dieser besonders bekannt gewesen zu sein. Zweifellos bildeten die Statuen einen eleusinischen Zusammenhang. Ein Künstler ist nicht bei Paus. erwähnt. Mnesitheos lebte um die Mitte des 4. Jh. v. Chr.: RE XV 2 (1932) s. v. «Mnesitheos 3» (K. Deichgräber).

B. Iakchos in der Münzprägung

6.* AE, Adramyction (Mysien), späthadrianisch. – Blum, G., «Numismatique d'Antinoos», JlArchNum 16, 1914, 47 Taf. 3, 10; v. Fritze, H., Die antiken Münzen Mysiens (1913) 35–36 Nr. 105 Taf. 2, 21; Kraus, Th., Heidelberger Jahrbücher 1959, 53 Abb. 3. – Vs.: Kopf mit Porträtzügen des Antinoos nach r., mit halblangem lockigem Haar, das in der Art des 4. Jh. v. Chr. stilisiert ist, ohne Kranz. Beischrift ANTI-NOOE/IAKXOE. Rs.: Demeter Eleusinia nach l. sitzend. Inschrift außer der Bezeichnung der Stadt: ΓΕ-ΕΙΟΣ ΑΝΘΗΗΚΕ (sic).

C. Iakchos in der Vasenmalerei

I. ist auf Vasen nicht inschriftlich gesichert. Infolgedessen ist man sich in der Forschung nicht einig. Der Benutzer von LIMC findet unter → Demeter, → Dionysos, → Eubouleus und → Eumolpos immer wieder Hinweise auf ungeklärte Figuren des eleusinischen Kreises. Die Verwirrung in bezug auf I. ist besonders groß. Für die unten zusammengestellten Bilder gelten die folgenden Prämissen:

a) I. und Dionysos waren bereits im mittleren 5. Jh. v. Chr. und wohl schon früher gleichgesetzt (Graf 51–53), wenn I. auch getrennt Kult empfang (Graf 53–54).

b) Wegen dieser Gleichsetzung dürften I. und Dionysos ikonographisch nicht sehr verschieden sein. Es ist deshalb fraglich, ob sie im selben Bildzusammenhang auftreten können (vgl. Simon, E., Gnomon 42, 1970, 707).

c) I. war nicht, wie etwa Eumolpos, eleusinischer König. Das ist besonders wichtig, weil zwischen Eumolpos und I. die Namen hin- und hergeschoben zu werden pflegen. So wird von Pringsheim über Nilsson bis Geominy ein junger Mann in Thrakerstiefeln, mit Ependytes, häufig mit langen Locken und mit zwei Fackeln, I. genannt, z. B. → Demeter 392*. 398*. 404. 405*. Diese eleusinische Gestalt kann aber auch mit dem Zepter erscheinen: → Demeter 396*, was zu Eumolpos und nicht zu I. paßt.

d) Die unter c beschriebene Gestalt kann in eleusinischen Bildern verdoppelt auftreten, z. B. → Eumolpos 31 (= Dioskouroi 169*); → Demeter 399. 405* (Reliefhydria in Leningrad). Das läßt an die beiden eleusinischen Priestergeschlechter denken, denen die Einweihungen anvertraut waren. Doppelte Priesterschaften stehen in großen griechischen Heiligtümern in guter Tradition (→ Iamos). Eumolpos und Keryx waren die Ahnen der beiden eleusinischen Priestergeschlechter, bei denen I. keinen Platz hat. Er ist Gott oder Dämon, nicht Heros.

Die früheste Darstellung des I. ist wahrscheinlich: 7. (= Demeter 387 mit Lit. und Querverweisen, = Hades 43 mit Lit.) Amphora, fr., att. sf. Reggio Calabria, Mus. Naz. 4001. Aus Lokroi. – ABV 147, 6: Nähe Exekias; Para 61; Add 41. Beste Aufnahme: Metzger, Recherches 8 Nr. 2 Taf. 1. 2. – 540/30 v. Chr. – Der Ausfahrt der Demeter mit einem Viergespann (dabei Triptolemos, Athena, Herakles und Hermes) wendet sich von r. → Ploutodotas (Beischrift) zu. Das war der Beiname des «Semelesohnes Iakchos» (Schol. Arist. Ranae 479), wie er von Eleusis aus propagiert wurde. Er ist bärtig und mit Chiton und Mantel bekleidet, ähnlich wie Dionysos in der Kunst jener Zeit. Eine purpurne Doppelbinde liegt im langen Haar. Der Stab mit der merkwürdigen Spitze in seiner Rechten ist unerklärt. Wegen der Längsrille könnte eine Fackel gemeint sein, die noch nicht angezündet ist und deren «Kopf» man sähe. Als Prozessionsgott paßt I. zusammen mit Hermes zur Ausfahrt der Demeter.

8. (= Ares 91, = Demeter 389* mit Lit., = Dionysos 531, = Eumolpos 21) Glockenkrater, fr., att. rf. Oxford, Ashm. Mus. 1956.355. Aus Al Mina. – Um 380 v. Chr. – Erhalten ist das Zentrum der Komposition. Auf dem Schoß der Demeter (Demeter-Kybele?) sitzt ein mit weißer Haut gemalter Knabe, den sie mit der Rechten umfaßt. Er griff wohl mit seiner Linken um ihren Hals. Über dem kurzen, verzierten Chiton trägt er ein geflecktes Tierfell und an den Füßen Thrakerstiefel. Die Tracht gleicht der auf 2–4 I. genannten Gestalt. Die Darstellung erinnert an ein Marmorrelief mit → Kybele als Kourotophos von der Athener Agora: Hadzisteliou Price, Th., Kourotophos (1978) 64–65 Abb. 50. Schon vor dessen Publikation hatte ich vorgeschlagen, hier eine Gleichsetzung der Demeter mit der Göttermutter zu sehen, bei der das Dionysoskind aufwuchs (Gnomon 42, 1970, 710). Der Krieger I. ist dann weder Ares noch Eumolpos, sondern ein Korybant.

9. In zahlreichen Vasenbildern mit eleusinischen Themen tritt Dionysos mit dem Thyrsos auf, z. B. → Dionysos 526*–530*; → Demeter 390*. 396*. 400*. 405*. 408*. Er dürfte für die antiken Betrachter in gleicher Weise I. und Dionysos gewesen sein.

KOMMENTAR

Von dem in der Prozession nach Eleusis getragenen I.-Idol (1) gibt uns vielleicht das im nächsten Umkreis des Exekias gemalte Vasenbild eine Vorstellung (7). Jener Prozession, deren Gesänge «der mystische Iakchos» (Hdt. 8, 65) verkörperte, muß «eine enthusiastische, den Dionysosfeiern ähnliche Stimmung» (Graf 58) innegekehrt haben. So erklärt sich die vom 5. Jh. v. Chr. an belegte Gleichsetzung des I. mit Dionysos, die «damit auf einer rituellen Grundlage ruht» (Graf ebendort). So verständlich das ist, so schwer fällt es der ikonographischen Forschung, I. nachzuweisen. Dabei werden die oben zu C gegebenen Prämissen häufig nicht oder nur zum Teil beachtet. Die eleusinische Gestalt mit zwei Fackeln, im Ependytes und mit Thrakerstiefeln wurde von Simon (89-90) → Eumolpos genannt, in der Nachfolge von A. Furtwängler. Da Weidauer (→ Eumolpos 22-31) diese Deutung als unsicher bezeichnet, schließt nun Geominy 253, daß sie «endgültig aufgegeben werden kann». Dagegen hatte Graf 59-66, was Weidauer und Geominy zu wenig beachten, die Argumente für Eumolpos sogar noch verstärkt. Die Prämissen C a-d schließen die Deutung der Gestalt als I. aus. Es muß bei den Stammvätern der beiden eleusinischen Priesterschaften bleiben, die Eumolpos und Keryx hießen.

Die Gleichsetzung des I. mit Dionysos gehört in den literarisch-mythologischen Bereich, während sie im Kult getrennt waren (Graf 53-54). Dem entspricht, daß I. in der Votivplastik nachgewiesen werden kann (2b. 3). Er ist kurz gewandert und trägt eine Nebris. Mit der Linken schultert er eine Fackel (2. 2b) oder er trägt den Thyrsos (3), auf den er sich ähnlich stützt wie der Dionysos Hope, dessen Gewandung ebenfalls nahe vergleichbar ist (→ Dionysos 128*). Das Würzburger Relieffragment (4) zeigt I.-Dionysos oder Dionysos. Diese Darstellungen wurzeln in der Kunst des 4. Jh. v. Chr., für die uns literarisch zwei I.-Statuen überliefert sind: das Kultbild des Praxiteles (2) und das Votiv-Agalmata des Arztes Mnesitheos (5). Über deren Aussehen wissen wir nichts, doch dürfte die Münze von Adramytion, auf der Antinoos mit I. inschriftlich gleichgesetzt ist (6), etwas von der Haargestaltung der beiden spätclassischen I.-Bilder bewahren. Jene Epoche war eine Blütezeit der eleusinischen Religion, so daß es nicht zu verwundern braucht, daß die meisten Vasenbilder, auf denen I. auftritt, dem 4. Jh. v. Chr. angehören (8. 9). Auf dem singulären Fragment aus Al Mina (8) ist Demeter als Kourotrophos des I. wohl mit Meter-Kybele gleichgesetzt.

ERIKA SIMON

IALMENOS → Astyoche

IALYSOS

(Ἰάλυσος, Ἰαλύσος; ion. Ἰήλυσος, Ἰηλυσός; Ialysus) Héros éponyme de la ville d'Ialysos à Rhodes, fils de Kerkaphos et de → Kydippe, descendant d'→ Helios et de la Nympe → Rhodios et frère aîné de Kamiroi et de Lindos, éponymes de deux autres villes rhodiennes. Il épousa Dotis qui lui donna une fille, Symé, éponyme de l'île située entre Rhodes et Cnide. Selon une légende rhodienne, il mourut déchiré par son chien enragé.

SOURCES LITTÉRAIRES: Pind. O. 7, 74 et Schol.; Zénon de Rhodes, FGrH 523 F 1, 57, 8; Cic. nat. 3, 54; Tzet. Lykophron 923.

BIBLIOGRAPHIE: Conticello, B., EAA IV (1961) 68 s. v. «Ialiso»; Hiller v. Gaertringen, F., RE Suppl. 4 (1924) 783 s. v. «Ialysos I»; Stoll, H. W., ML II 1 (1890-94) 12 s. v. «Ialysos»; Weicker, G., REIX (1916) 628-629 s. v. «Ialysos I».

I. Tableau, disparu, peint par Protogène de Cynos. Exposé à Rhodes (Dionysion?), puis à Rome (temple de la Paix). - Plin. nat. 35, 102-105; Strabon 14, 2, 5 p. 652; Suda, s. v. Πρωτογένης; Overbeck, SÖ n° 1907. 1915. 1918-1923; Reinach, RecMilliet 364-373; Pfuhl, MuZ 738. 767-768; Rumpf, A., RE XXIII 1 (1957) 981-983 s. v. «Protogenes 9». - 2° moitié du IV^e s. av. J.-C. - I., accompagné de son chien, était probablement représenté en héros chasseur. Mais on ne sait si ce tableau célèbre, auquel le peintre aurait travaillé pendant sept ans, représentait un moment de sa vie quotidienne, ou bien sa mort tragique, scène qui aurait pu s'inspirer de l'iconographie d'Actéon (→ Aktaion). VASSILIKI MACHAIRA

IAMBE → Baubo

IAMOS

(Ἰάμος) Stammvater des olympischen Sehergeschlechts der Iamiden, die neben den Klytiaden, deren Stamm bis auf → Amythaon zurückreichte, an der Spitze des Zeuskultes in Olympia standen. I. war Enkel des → Poseidon und Sohn der Euadne von → Apollon. Euadne gebar ihn heimlich beim Wasserholen und setzte ihn zwischen Veilchen aus; daher die antike Etymologie seines Namens. Zwei Schlangen ernährten ihn dort mit Honig. Als er erwachsen war, stieg er in den Fluß → Alpheios und flehte Poseidon und Apollon an, ihm ein Amt zu verschaffen. Apollon setzte I. als Seher in Olympia ein. Über ein Jahrtausend verwalteten die Iamiden mit den Klytiaden dort in historischer Zeit das Seheramt; Zweige ihres Geschlechtes lebten in Messenien, Sparta, Arkadien und Sizilien.

LITERARISCHE QUELLEN: Das oben Berichtete ist kein aus verschiedenen Quellen zusammengesetzter Mythos, sondern steht im Zusammenhang bei Pind. O. 6, 28-73. Die Ode stammt aus dem Jahr 468 v. Chr. und gilt einem sizilischen Angehörigen der Iamiden, der mit dem Maultiergespann in Olympia siegte und den Sieg bei einem Verwandten in Arkadien feierte. Näheres dazu in den Scholien zu dieser Ode, Drachmann I S. 161-181. - Messenische Iamiden: Paus. 4, 16, 1. - Iamiden in Sparta, im 5. Jh.

v. Chr.: Hdt. 9, 33-36; vgl. Strasburger, G., Lexikon zur frühgriech. Geschichte (1984) 437 s. v. «Teisamenos 2».

BIBLIOGRAPHIE: v. Geisau, H., KIPhuly II (1967) 1309 s. v. «Iamos»; Hepding, H., REIX 1 (1914) 685-689 s. v. «Iamos I» (ausführliche Behandlung neben Parke); Parke, H. W., The Oracles of Zeus (1967) 174-178 und passim; Simon, E., «Zu den Giebeln des Zeustempels in Olympia», AM 83, 1968, 157-162, wieder abgedruckt in: Herrmann, H.-V. (Hrsg.), Die Olympia-Skulpturen (1987) 112-118; Stoll, H. W., ML II 1 (1890-94) 13-14 s. v. «Iamos».

KATALOG

I. entsprang der Liebe des Apollon zu Euadne, der Tochter des Poseidon. Auf att. rf. Vasen, die mit Pind. O. 6 (s. oben) gleichzeitig sind, verfolgt Apollon wie andere Götter Geliebte: → Apollon 1085-1094. Unter den vorgeschlagenen Namen finden sich → Daphne, → Kreousa (I), → Marpessa, doch sollte man auch an Euadne denken.

Bereits unter → Amythaon wurde die Präsenz des olympischen Sehergeschlechts der Klytiaden in der rechten Hälfte des Ostgiebels des Zeustempels von Olympia besprochen. Daraus ergibt sich für das zweite Geschlecht die linke Hälfte:

I.* Figur L im Ostgiebel des Zeustempels von Olympia, «linker Seher». Nach G. Treu im Olympia-Werk hat sich vor allem H. Bulle mit der Rekonstruktion dieses fragmentiert erhaltenen Mannes befaßt: JdI 54, 1939, 173-183 Abb. 27-37. Neue Vorschläge: Simon (in Herrmann) 113 Taf. 31. Der Kopf ist gegenüber der Rekonstruktion von Bulle etwas stärker anzuheben. Der «Himmelblick» ist für Priester und Seher charakteristisch. Trotz der Zerstörung läßt sich ahnen, daß die mit einem Himantion bekleidete Figur L, die am Boden kauerte und sich mit der Linken auf einen Stab stützte, einen reifen Mann von besonderer Schönheit wiedergab. Man beachte die Haartracht. Das reiche Haar mit den Wellen, den seitlichen Rollen und dem Knoten, der in der Stirnmitte beabsichtigt war, weist auf die Vaterschaft des für sein schönes Haar berühmten Apollon hin. Vergleichen läßt sich die Haartracht des «Münchener Homers»: Richter, G. M. A., The Portraits of the Greeks (1984*) 142-143 Abb. 103.

KOMMENTAR

Die beiden Sehergeschlechter des Zeusorakels von Olympia sind im Ostgiebel in ihrer eigentlichen Funktion dargestellt: Sie sitzen rings um Zeus auf dem Boden, wie es in der Ilias für die Seher von Dodona beschrieben ist (Hom. II. 16, 233-235) und blicken in die Zukunft. Der Seher in der rechten Giebelhälfte sieht Unheil voraus, I. dagegen, auf der Seite des Pelops, sieht das Künftige ruhig und würdig kommen. Er ist jünger als der Greis auf der Seite des Oinomaos und durch reichen und schönen Haarwuchs ausgezeichnet, als Sohn des Apollon. ERIKA SIMON

IANISKOS

(Ἰανίσκος) Figlio di → Asklepios, ricordato solo in una fonte antica (Schol. Aristoph. Plutus 701). Un omonimo di origine attica successe ad Adrastus come re di Sikyon (Paus. 2, 6, 6), ma non sembra che possa trattarsi dell'Asclepiade (cf. però Edelstein, E. J./Edelstein, L., Asclepius II [1945] 87 n. 44).

BIBLIOGRAFIA: Panofka, Th., AbhBerlin 1845, 348-349; Svoronos 298-314; Holländer, H., Plastik und Medizin (1912) 150-155.

Raffigurazione dubbia

I. (= Alkon 2*) Rilievo votivo in marmo. Atene, Mus. Naz. 1387. Da Kythnos. - Ziehen, J., AM 17, 1892, 246-249 tav. 11; Stoll, H. W., ML II 1 (1890-94) 14 s. v. «Iankos»; Svoronos 331-333 n° 84 tav. 39; Hausmann, U., Kunst und Heilum (1948) 172-173 n° 86; Meier, M., AM 102, 1987, 218 n. 29. - Asklepios, accompagnato da un eroe locale, compare assieme a quattro giovani (i figli?). Uno di essi potrebbe essere Iankos.

COMMENTO

Nessuna immagine può essere riferita con certezza a I. Nulla autorizza a pensare che egli fosse raffigurato con l'aspetto di un bambino, magari con un volatile in mano (Svoronos 303-305; Holländer), come è stato sostenuto per il fanciullo che accompagna Asklepios in una statua del Foro Romano (Heiderich, G., Asklepios [1966] 89; → Asklepios 384) e per una statuina di Gonnoi (Arvantinou-Metallinou, G., AAA 15, 1982, 246-247 fig. 2).

VINCENZO SALADINO

IANITOR ORCI

Compare solo in età romana nelle raffigurazioni dell'→ Orcus in stretto rapporto con → Kerberos. L'idea di un portinaio anche nell'al di là può essere riferita al compito dello schiavo che custodiva l'ingresso della casa. Lo Ianitor, che presso i Romani non ha un nome proprio, presso i Greci è indicato talvolta come → Aiakos, che, pur essendo uno dei giudici infernali, è dette πύλαρχος (Smyrne: Walters, H. B., AM 23, 1898, 268), mai più esattamente θυρωρός, dal momento che l'ufficio sacerdotale di un κλειδοεχός Ἰαίδου (Roma: EpGr 646, 4) è diverso da quello inferiore di un semplice portinaio. Infatti, al contrario della funzione servile del custode di casa, è più antica e più importante in Grecia quella del guardiano delle porte della città, un personaggio a cui occorre, diversamente, assegnare responsabilità e rango. Così con le stesse mansioni troviamo pure Briareos. Dunque in Roma questa figura appare sempre distinta da qualsiasi divinità, anche da → Hermes, «accompagnatore dei morti». La individuazione iconografica è possibile solo in alcuni sarcofagi romani ed in due pitture tombali, di cui una da Ostia, in quanto ne riporta l'iscrizione, costituisce il documento più importante, mentre l'altra da Roma rappresenta una variante dello stesso tipo di giovinetto seduto su roccia.

FONTI LETTERARIE: il nome di ianitor, in relazione con Orcus, è anche un frequente epiteto del cane degli Inferi (Verg. Aen. 8, 296; Hor. c. 3, 11, 16; Sil. 2, 552; Stat. Theb. 2, 53-54; 6, 476-477) e perciò, a livello letterario, spesso lo si è ritenuto uguale a quello, ma in Lucano 6, 702-703 lo Ianitor sedis laxae è definito qui viscera saevo spargis nostra cani, dimostrando che è impossibile una confusione con Cerbero, «divoratore della carne dei morti».

La stessa tematica si ritrova in Grecia, infatti in Aristoph. Ranae 194 la porta infernale è aperta da un portinaio, dai modi estremamente rozzi, di nome Aiakos, come pure in Lukianos d. mort. 6, 1 essa viene sorvegliata dallo stesso, probabilmente perché, in chiave parodistica, si intende sminuirne la funzione di giudice. Tuttavia presso i Greci questo compito non è mai affidato ad un personaggio anonimo e così può accadere che lo svolga persino Briareos (Hes. theog. 734; Sil. 13, 587-588).

BIBLIOGRAFIA: Kroll, J., Gott und Hölle (1932, 1962) 372-375 e indice p. 554 s.v. «Torwächter der Unterwelt»; Höfer, O., ML III 2 (1902-09) 3330-3331 s.v. «Pyloros»; Marconi, P., La pittura dei Romani (1929) fig. 136; Nogara, B., Le Nozze Aldobrandine (1907) 68 tav. 43; Radermacher, L., «Der Pförtner der Unterwelt», Beitr. z. Volkskunde 1918, 73-77; Robert, C., «Eine alte Zeichnung des Aachener Persephone-Sarkophags», Westdeutsche Zeitschr. 4, 1885, 281 tav. 14; idem, AZ 43, 1885, 74; Rossbach, O., «Dämonen der Unterwelt», RhM 1893, 592-601; Rumpf, MuZ 192 n° 6; Swindler, M. H., Ancient Painting (1929) fig. 587.

CATALOGO

Essendo il tipo iconograficamente poco attestato, si è cercata la maggiore completezza possibile, includendo le tipologie basilari con le rispettive varianti ed eliminando le testimonianze incerte. Si è preferita una distinzione per miti oltre che per schemi figurativi.

A. Ianitor con Orfeo ed Euridice

Giovane vestito ■ seduto su roccia

1.* (= Eurydike I 2* con bibl., = Hades/Pluto 72) Pittura tombale. Vaticano, già Laterano 10789. Da Ostia. - Andreae, B., in Helbig I n° 1156. - 250 d. C. c. - L'iscrizione IANITOR qualifica un giovane seduto su di una pietra e, come uno schiavo portinaio, vestito di un chitone manicato e con nella d. un bastone ricurvo. Di fronte ha Cerbero e la porta infernale con tre gradini.

B. Ianitor con Eracle e Cerbero

Giovane ignudo e seduto su roccia

2. (= Herakles 2643* con bibl., = Alkestis 25) Pittura tombale. Roma, Tomba dei Nasonii sulla via Flaminia. - Andreae, B., Studien zur röm. Grabkunst (RM Erg.-H. 9, 1963) 102. 124 pl. 57. - 150/175 d. C. - Nonostante le cattive condizioni (più preciso è un disegno di P. S. Bartoli del XVII° sec.) vi si riconoscono Eracle, Cerbero, fuori della grotta, su di un ripiano roccioso e a s. una figura ignuda e seduta su roccia, identificata da Andreae come ianitor orci, mentre a d. Ermete retrospiciente.

Giovane ignudo e sopra grotta

3. (= Herakles 1752*/2650 con bibl.) Sarkofago romano. Londra, BM 2300. Da Roma, Via Appia. - Robert, C., SarkRel III 141 n° 120; Koch/Sichtermann, RömSark 261. - 150 d. C. c. - Si può riconoscere lo Ianitor nella piccola figura giovanile ignuda che si nasconde impaurita sopra la grotta infernale, mentre Eracle rapisce Cerbero.

C. Ianitor con Eracle ed Alcesti

Giovane stante sulla porta in atteggiamento di saluto

4.* (= Alkestis 21* con bibl.) Sarkofago romano. Velletri, Mus. Civ. - Bartoccini, R., RivIstArch 7, 1958, 160; Bianchi Bandinelli, R., RFAA 46 fig. 41. - 150 d. C. c. - Lo Ianitor è stante, sembra avere un'età più avanzata rispetto ai tipi precedenti e solleva la mano d. in segno di approvazione, mentre nell'altra impugna un bastone. La veste è un chitone manicato a cui si aggiunge una clamide che scende sulla spalla s.

D. Ianitor con Plutone che rapisce Proserpina

Vecchio a mezzo busto con le braccia alzate

5.* (= Demeter/Ceres 133* con bibl., = Hades/Pluto 16 con bibl.) Sarkofago romano. Aquisgrana, Duomo G 3. - Robert, C., SarkRel III 3, 467 n° 378. - 250 d. C. c. - Trattasi di vecchio con barba, in basso a d., che si eleva a mezzo busto dalla terra (tipo della → Tellus a lato) avvolto da serpi, che ne qualificano la funzione infernale, mentre apre le braccia in segno di accoglienza. Segue nell'angolo Cerbero.

6. Sarkofago romano. Roma, Villa Medici. - Robert, C., SarkRel III 3, 473 n° 383; Koch/Sichtermann, RömSark 178 n° 56. - 200 d. C. c. - La figurazione è analoga, anche se invertita come sequenza di rappresentazione, ma manca Cerbero.

7.* (= Demeter/Ceres 131 con bibl., = Hades/Pluto 18* con bibl.) Sarkofago romano. Vienna, Kunsth. Mus. I 1126. Da Roma. - Robert, C., SarkRel III 3, 473 n° 384. - La figurazione è analoga, ma alla successione Tellus, Ianitor, Cerbero si sostituisce quella Cerbero, Ianitor, Tellus.

8. (= Hades/Pluto 19* con bibl., = Artemis/Diana 318, = Eros/Amor, Cupido 23* con bibl., = Demeter/Ceres 134 con bibl.) Sarkofago romano. Roma, Mus. Cap. 249 K. - Sichtermann/Koch, Myth-Sark 57-58 n° 61 tav. 148, 1. - 230/40 d. C. - Sempre sotto il carro della coppia infernale sono rappresentati a s. Oceano (→ Okeanos) e a d. lo Ianitor orci.

9. (= Hades/Pluto 21) Sarkofago romano. Barcellona, Mus. Arch. - García y Bellido, A., Esculturas Romanas de España y Portugal (1949) n° 250 tav. 176-180. - 220/30 d. C. - Simile al tipo precedente sostituisce alla figura di Oceano quella di Amore, mentre rimane lo Ianitor orci.

COMMENTO

Dunque nella tradizione iconografica romana lo Ianitor Orci risulta essere una figura ben distinta da ogni altra divinità o mostro degli Inferi, che invece in età greca sembrano assumere, con maggiore autorevolezza, la stessa funzione. Grazie a questa osservazione preliminare risultano facilmente comprensibili l'anonimato del personaggio, e quindi la rarità di rappresentazione oltre che la conseguente difficoltà di individuazione, le sue umili vesti e soprattutto il suo aspetto ora di giovane ignudo o vestito servilmente, ora di vecchio con barba, come normalmente poteva accadere nell'ambito della servitù della domus. Perciò vi è stata da parte di Roma la trasposizione nella vita ultraterrena di una funzione principalmente domestica. A ribadire questo aspetto servile, ad Ostia (1; cf. anche 4) vediamo lo Ianitor impugnare un bastone ricurvo: è il lagobolon (ML III 1, 1175), portato generalmente non solo dai Satiri ma anche dai pastori; accanto gli è, quasi sempre, Cerbero (1-3. 5. 7); ed è un giovane, ora tranquillamente seduto su di un Αβάτιον λίθος (Aristoph. Ranae 194) (1. 2), ora spaventato sopra l'antro (3), ora stante ed in atteggiamento di saluto (4), oppure è un vecchio barbuto emergente tra serpi da terra (5-9), mentre accoglie a braccia aperte il suo signore infernale. Non escluderei l'ipotesi che questa ultima tipologia, di gran lunga la più attestata, possa permettere un raffronto iconografico, considerando però la differenza di mansioni, con → Charon (I), e concettuale con il Pietro della tradizione cristiana, che rielaborò la più nobile funzione sacerdotale, come visto spiccatamente greca, di un κλειδοῦχος Αἰδου, cioè «custode delle chiavi», rispetto a quella servile, romana, di uno ianitor-θυραῖος, cioè «portinaio». RAFFAELE MAMBELLA

IANTHE

(Ἰάνθη) «Veilchenblüte», Mänadennamen (→ Mänades) in einer Vasenschrift.

1.* (= Achilleus 39 mit Lit. [A]) Schale, fr., att. rf. Berlin, Staatl. Mus. F 4220. - ARV 2 61, 76; 1700: Olton; Add 165; Fränkel, Namen 45. 86 Nr. R; Eitrem, S., RE IX (1916) 695 s. v. «Ianthé 2»; Bruhn, A., Olton (1943) 41-42 Nr. 31 Abb. 25; CVA 2 Taf. 52, 2. - Um 520 v. Chr. - Seite B zeigt drei Personen. In der Mitte die Mänade I. (IANΘE) in Seitenansicht (Kopf und l. Hand nicht erhalten). Sie hält Krotala und bewegt sich nach l. Gerahmt wird sie von zwei Satyrn, die nach außen tanzen, sich aber zu I. umblicken. Der rechte ist → Sik[inno]s benannt.

ANNELIESE KOSSATZ-DEISSMANN

IANUARIA

(Ianuaria) Déesse gallo-romaine probablement vénérée dans le temple de Beire-le-Châtel (Côte-d'Or).

SOURCE ÉPIGRAPHIQUE: CIL XIII 5619: Deae Ianuariae sacrouir u(otum) s(oluit) l(ibens) m(erito). C'est la seule inscription attestant qu'un culte était rendu à la déesse. La dédicace est gravée sur un socle de statue trouvé dans le sanctuaire de Beire-le-Châtel (4): elle représentait, d'après la reconstitution de Deyts, S., Mém. de la Comm. des Ant. de la Côte-d'Or 16, 1963-69, 31, et o. c. I (1976) n° 9 fig. 9, un enfant tenant une syrinx. Espérandieu, Recueil IV n° 3620. 3631, avait publié les deux fragments séparément.

BIBLIOGRAPHIE: Haug, F., RE IX 1 (1914) 696 s. v. «Ianuaria 1».

CATALOGUE

1.* Tête de statue en calcaire oolithique fin. Dijon, Mus. Arch., anc. coll. Morillot. De Beire-le-Châtel. - Espérandieu, Recueil IV n° 3626; Hatt, J.-J., REA 59, 1957, 81; Deyts, S., RAE 22, 1971, 385 pl. 18; eadem, Dijon, Mus. Arch., Sculptures gallo-romaines mythologiques et religieuses. Inv. des coll. publiques françaises 20 (1976) n° 18 fig. 18. - 1^{re} moitié du II^e s. ap. J.-C. - Tête féminine avec chevelure en lourdes mèches rayonnantes, réunies en rouleau à l'arrière; sur le sommet de la tête, une touffe aplatie.

2.* Tête de statue en calcaire oolithique fin. Dijon, Mus. Arch., anc. coll. Morillot. De Beire-le-Châtel. - Espérandieu, Recueil IV n° 3627; Deyts, o. c. I (1971) 385 pl. 18; eadem, o. c. I (1976) n° 19 fig. 19. - II^e s. ap. J.-C. - Tête féminine; les cheveux, séparés par une raie médiane, forment deux mèches ondulées et aplaties avant de retomber sur le côté dr. en trois grosses coques assez lourdes; le sommet de la tête porte un diadème.

3.* Tête de statue en calcaire oolithique fin. Dijon, Mus. Arch., anc. coll. Morillot. De Beire-le-Châtel. - Deyts, o. c. I (1971) 385 pl. 18; eadem, o. c. I (1976) n° 20 fig. 20. - II^e s. ap. J.-C. - Tête proche de 2.

4. Base de statue en calcaire oolithique fin. Dijon, Mus. Arch., anc. coll. Morillot. De Beire-le-Châtel. - Espérandieu, Recueil IV n° 3634; Deyts, o. c. I (1976) n° 10 fig. 10. - II^e s. ap. J.-C. - Sur le socle, deux pieds avec amorce des jambes et restes d'un vêtement féminin.

COMMENTAIRE

Comme Espérandieu l'avait indiqué, les quatre statues féminines fragmentaires (1-4) découvertes dans le sanctuaire probablement dédié à Ianuaria peuvent être considérées comme représentant la déesse. Cependant, il n'est pas interdit de reconnaître dans ces figures d'autres divinités ou même de simples mortels.

RAINER VOLLKOMMER

IANUARIUS → Menses

IANUS

Altrömischer Gott mit zwei Gesichtern, Numen der verschließbaren Tür und des Anfangs einer Zeitperiode, sei es eines Monats oder eines Jahres; also Gott des räumlichen wie auch des zeitlichen Durchgangs. Sein Name hängt mit ianua (Tür) zusammen sowie mit dem Hügel Ianiculum jenseits des Tiber, der die langgestreckte Form eines Riegels hat. Der früheste kultisch verehrte I. in Rom, mit dem Beinamen Curvatus, war ein Türriegel aus Holz. Nach der Erfindung des Türschlosses aus Metall war I. auch darin wirksam. Das Heiligtum des I. Geminus auf dem Forum Romanum bestand aus Bronze, und das doppelgesichtige bronzene Kultbild trug einen Bronzeschlüssel, der auch Attribut des mit I. in der Funktion zum Teil verwandten → Portunus war. Für die beiden nach entgegengesetzten Richtungen blickenden Gesichter bestand nicht etwa der Gegensatz Gut und Böse. Eine neuzeitliche Vorstellung ist auch der I. kopf als Symbol der Zweideutigkeit. Der altrömische I. hat seine zwei Gesichter vielmehr als Wächtergott, der auch sieht, was hinter seinem Rücken vorgeht. Dämonische Türwächter im Alten Orient und in Ägypten können ebenfalls zweigesichtig sein; sie haben wohl zusammen mit der Konstruktion der Türschlösser auf den italisch-römischen I. eingewirkt. Zwei Köpfe kann auch der griechische Wächterdämon Argos (→ Io) in Literatur und Bildkunst haben. In der modernen Forschung wird die wichtige Rolle des Wächters in archaischen Religionen häufig übersehen, was bei I. zu intellektuellen Deutungen führte. Sie beruhen teils auf der augusteischen Interpretation des I., teils auf spätantiken Spekulationen. Deren Aussage gilt aber nur für die jeweilige Zeit, nicht für den frühen I. Die Tatsache etwa, daß Macrobius I. mit dem Sonnengott gleichsetzt, entspricht spätantiken Denken und sollte nicht dazu führen, I. als ursprünglichen Lichtgott zu erklären. In der Friedenspropaganda des Augustus wurde I. zum «Anzeiger für Frieden und Krieg». Wenn die beiden Tore des I. Geminus auf dem Forum geschlossen waren, herrschte Friede, waren sie geöffnet, so war Krieg. Augustus schloß den I. während seiner Regierung dreimal. Er hat diesen «Ritus» wahr-scheinlich erfunden, obwohl er ihn dem Numa zuschreiben ließ. Die beiden Türen der Ara Pacis Augustae hängen mit der Architektur des I. Geminus zusammen. I. und → Pax konnten deshalb in Verbindung treten, weil beide an der zyklischen Zeitbewegung teilhatten, I. als Gott des Zeitbeginns, Pax als Phänomen des Zeitablaufs (Simon 2). Diese augusteische Konstruktion blieb während der ganzen Antike lebendig, während I. im königszeitlichen und republikanischen Rom mit einer anderen Göttin, → Iuno, verbunden war. Ein Beiname des I. war Iunonius; auch der erwähnte I. Curvatus hatte gemeinsam mit Iuno Kult. Die beiden waren freilich kein «Ehepaar», da die altrömische Religion keine Götterehen kannte, sondern eine numinose mannweibliche Zweieheit. Entsprechendes gilt für I. und Vesta (→ Hestia/Vesta), die am Ende, wie I. am Anfang von Opferhandlungen und Gebeten angerufen wurde, und zwar nicht nur bei staatlichen Zeremonien, sondern auch im Bauernhaus.

Die Etrusker hatten einen dem I. entsprechenden zweiköpfigen Gott, → Culsans, dessen Name mit der etruskischen Bezeichnung für Tür zusammenhängt. Darstellungen von ihm sind aus dem 3. und 2. Jh. v. Chr. nachgewiesen (→ Culsans 1-5). Er hatte in → Culsu ein weibliches Gegenstück wie Ianus in Iana und Carna. Etruskischem Empfinden entsprechend war er nicht bärtig, sondern jugendlich.

LITERARISCHE QUELLEN: Die Tatsache, daß I. bereits im archaischen Salierlied angerufen wurde (Macr. Sat. I, 9, 14), spricht für das hohe Alter seines Kultes in Rom. Ein Altar des I. soll auf dem Ianiculum gelegen haben; Quellen dazu bei Roscher 22-25. Er soll dort als König geherrscht und Saturnus (→ Kronos/Saturnus) gastlich empfangen haben. Quellen zum Kult des I. Geminus auf dem Forum Romanum: Roscher 15-20; vgl. unten 2 und 7. Er wurde dem Numa zugeschrieben: Liv. I, 19, 2. In der frühesten uns erhaltenen Erwähnung, beim Annalisten L. Calpurnius Piso (Konsul 133 v. Chr.), den Varro I. I, 5, 165 zitiert, heißt der Bau porta Ianualis. Der allgemeine Name war I. Geminus, während Augustus in seinen res gestae (13) I. Quirinus schreibt. - Varro hatte sich in seinen antiquitates rerum divinarum (vgl. Cardauns II 251 s. v. «Ianus») ausführlich mit I. befaßt. Die meisten Zitate daraus stammen aus der Spätantike (vgl. vor allem Macr. Sat. I, 9 und Aug. civ.). Wichtige Aufschlüsse über Gestalt und Kult des I. finden sich bei Ov. fasti I, 89-288. In dem Dialog von 100 Distichen kommen nicht nur die Beinamen des I. zu Wort (dazu Capdeville), sondern auch seine verschiedenen Funktionen in Bezug auf die Türen wie auf die Zeitrechnung. I. selbst erklärt die Doppelung seines Antlitzes aus seiner Wächterfunktion (135-144). Die moderne Ansicht, eine solche Funktion entspreche nicht einem großen Gott (Giumlia 24-25 mit der Berufung auf Frazer), läßt sich widerlegen. Selbst Iuppiter hatte den Beinamen Custos, und Hor. c. 4, 5, 2 nennt auch den Augustus so. - Quellen zum «Ritus» des Öffnens und Schließens des I. Geminus: Simon I, 257-258; ebendort 262-263 eine neue Deutung. Es dürfte sich ursprünglich nicht um ein Öffnen gehan-delt haben, sondern um ein Berühren der Türflügel mit der Bitte um Schutz, ähnlich wie man bei Kriegsausbruch die Marslanze in der Regia bewegte (→ Ares/Mars 13). - Ianus und Pax: Simon 2, 72-76. - Quellen zu Ianus und Iuno und deren Interpretation: Dury-Moyaers/Renard 182-188. - Verehrung des I. zusammen mit Iuno und Iuppiter im Bauernhaus: Cato agr. 134. I. wird dort Iane pater angerufen (vgl. 20).

BIBLIOGRAPHIE: Bauer, H., «Kaiserfora und Ianustempel», RM 84, 1977, 301-329; Capdeville, G., «Les épithètes cultuelles de Ianus», MEFRA 85, 1973, 395-436; Cardauns, B., M. Terentius Varro, Antiquitates Rerum Divinarum I und II (1976); Castagnoli, F., EAA III (1960) 872 s. v. «Giano»; Dury-Moyaers, G./Renard, M., «Aperçu critique de travaux relatifs au culte de Junon XII: Junon et Janus», in ANRW II 17, 1 (1981) 182-188; Eisenhut, W., KLPauly II (1967) 1311-1314 s. v. «Ianus»; Giumlia, A., Die neuattischen Doppelhermen (Diss. Wien 1983) 24-32; Fauth, W., «Römische Religion im Spiegel der Fasti des Ovid», in: ANRW II 16, 1 (1978) 122-132; Holland, L. A., Janus and the Bridge (1961); Latte, RR 132-136; Martin, H. G., Römische Tempelkultbilder (1987) 37-45; Otto, W. F., RE Suppl. III (1918) 1175-1191 s. v. «Ianus»; Pettazzoni, R., «Per l'iconografia di Giano», StEtr 24, 1955/56, 79-90; Radke, G., Die Götter Altitaliens (1979) 147-149; Richard, J.-C., «Ion-Janus ou de l'anonymat», in Hommages à H. Le Bonniec, Coll. Latomus 201 (1988) 387-394; Roscher, W. H., ML II 1 (1890/94) 15-55 s. v. «Ianus»; Simon, E., «Ianus Curvatus und Ianus Geminus im frühen Rom», in Beitr. zur altitalischen Geistesgeschichte, Festschr. G. Radke (1986) 257-268 (= Simon 1); eadem, Eivene und Pax, Friedensgöttinnen in der Antike (1988) (= Simon 2); eadem, a. O. 3; Staccioli, R. A., «Il «scello» di Giano riprodotto in un'urna cineraria chiusina» in Colloqui del Sodalizio, ser. II 7-8 (1980-84), 91-97; Turcan, R., «Janus à l'époque impériale», in ANRW II 17, 1 (1981) 374-402; Waszink, J. H., Gnomon 37, 1965, 177-188 (Rez. von Holland, in der er darlegt, daß die Beziehung des I. zum Wasser und zu Brücken nicht in der Weise nachgewiesen werden kann, wie die Autorin glaubt. Ihr Buch muß heute als überholt gelten, wenn auch E. Gjerstad in seinem grundlegenden Werk «Early Rome» ihre Hypothese angenommen hatte); Wissowa, Religion* 103-113.

KATALOG

A. Ianus als Riegel und Torbau

1. I. Curvatus am Oppius. Es handelte sich um einen Holzbalken, der in gegenüberliegende Hauswände eingelassen war; Quellen: Otto 1178-1179. Er war bereits in augusteischer Zeit (vgl. Liv. I, 26, 13) uralt. Die Arvalbrüder opferten dort am 1. Oktober. Deutung als Türriegel: Simon 1, 264-265. Etymologie: Radke 101-102 (I. als Wächter). Zu den dort ausgeführten Riten: Dury-Moyaers/Renard 185-188. Ein anderer Name für den Kultort war Tigillum Sororium, nach dem Altar der Iuno Sororia, die zusammen mit I. Curvatus Kult empfing. Es handelt sich um den frühesten I. in Rom. Er wurde anikonisch verehrt; der Riegel galt als pars pro toto für die Tür.

2. I. Geminus am Forum Romanum. Quellen: Platner/Ashby 278-280; obwohl sein Standort nicht sicher bestimmt ist, wurde der Bau bei Nash, TopRom I 502-503 aufgenommen. Er bestand nach der Beschreibung von Prok. bell. Goth. 5 (1) 25, 20-21 ganz aus Bronze und hatte zwei Türen, eine im Osten und eine im Westen (vgl. Staccioli). Es handelte sich um einen Torbau, der ursprünglich wohl aus Holz mit Bronzebeschlägen bestanden hatte, ähnlich wie die porta Rauduscula (Varro, I. I, 5, 163). Nach neuen Forschungen (Bauer) scheint er in augusteischer Zeit erneuert worden zu sein, wobei er ganz aus Bronze errichtet wurde. Wie Vestaheiligtum, Kurie und andere Bauten am Forum hatte er im frühen Rom zu den Gemeinschaft stiftenden Kultgegenständen gehört. Augustus stattete ihn mit der Friedenssymbolik aus, von der oben die Rede war. Er ließ zudem die Ara Pacis nach dem gleichen zweitorigen Grundriß errichten: Torelli, M., Typology and Structure of Roman Historical Reliefs (1982) 31-35. Beide Bauten waren reich mit Ranken verziert. Am I. Geminus sind sie auf den Sesterzen, Dupondien und Assen sichtbar (a), die Nero mit diesem Thema schlagen ließ: MacDowall, D. W., The Western Coinages of Nero (1979) 77-78, 129, 213. Die Legenden lauten: PACE PR TERRA MARIQ PARTA IANUM CLUSIT, oder PACE PR UBIQ PARTA IANUM CLUSIT. Nero ahmte also die Schließung des I. Geminus als Zeichen des Friedens nach. Von den beiden Toren ist, wie man richtig sah, bald das östliche und bald das westliche dargestellt; vgl. G. Fuchs, Architekturdarstellungen auf Münzen der Republik und der frühen Kaiserzeit (1969) Taf. 11 Nr. 127, 128; Turcan 381-384 Taf. 1, 1-4. Gute Interpretation der Architektur auch bei Bauer 314-315. Die Flügeltüren mit halbrundem oberem Abschluß sind im Westen und Osten von Säulen flankiert. Die augusteische Erneuerung glich weniger einem Bau als einem kostbaren Schrein für das 2,20 m hohe Kultbild (7). Sicher gab es in Rom noch viele iani, doch keinen anderen mit einer solchen Statue (Ov. fast. I, 257-258). Aber nicht sie allein, sondern der Torbau selbst war der Gott I. Ovid schwankt zwischen Bau und Statue hin und her, spricht beide als Ianus an (vgl. fast. I, 277).

B. Östliche «Vorläufer» für die Ikonographie des Ianus bifrons

3. Akkadisches Rollsiegel. London, BM 89115. - Frankfurt, H., Cylinder Seals (1939) Taf. 19a; Barnett, R. D./Wiseman, D. J., Fifty Masterpieces of Ancient Near Eastern Art in the Dept. of Western Asiatic Antiquities in the BM (1969) Nr. 40. - 2300 v. Chr. - Der dargestellte Mythos auf diesem Siegel des Schreibers Adda ist umstritten, doch lassen sich die Gottheiten benennen. Dem Gott Ea, der Wasserströme vergießt, ist ein doppelköpfiger, langbärtiger Gott, Usmu, beigegeben. - Zu orientalischem Einfluß auf die Gestalt des I. vgl. auch Kinal, F., «Der Ursprung des doppelgesichtigen I.», Orientalia 21, 1952, 99; idem, in Proceedings 22. Congress of Orientalists, Istanbul 1951 (1957) 7-9; Simon, E., «Culsu, Culsans e Ianus», in Atti II Congr. Int. etrusco III (Rom 1989) 1277 Taf. 3a.

4. Illustrationen zur 11. Stunde des Amduat in verschiedenen ägyptischen Grabgemälden der 18.-20. Dynastie (Kings Valley Nr. 9, 14, 34). - Hornung, E., Das Amduat, Ägyptol. Abh. 7 (1963) II 177 Nr. 759. Der Zweiköpfige heißt tpw = Doppelkopf.

5. Bärtiger Doppelkopf als Ringhaken-Attasche an einem orientalischen Bronzekessel aus Vetulonia. – Herrmann, H.-V., OlForsch VI (1966) 48 Taf. 5, 4–5. – Frühes 7. Jh. v. Chr. – Importstücke wie dieses dürften die Phantasie der Etrusker angeregt haben, wenn sich auch → Culsans nicht früher als im 3. Jh. v. Chr. nachweisen läßt.

6. (= Hera 485* mit Lit., = Io I I mit Lit.) Amphora, attisch sf. London, BM 1848.6–19.4 (B 164). Aus Bomarzo. – ABV 148, 2: Umkreis des Exekias; Add^a 41; Schauenburg, K., AuA 10, 1961 Taf. 15, 30; Simon, E., AA 1985, 272 Anm. 250. – Ebendort Anm. 249 ein weiteres schwarzfiguriges Beispiel sowie Hinweis auf Hes. frg. 294 Merkelbach/West: doppelköpfiger Argos (→ Io I).

C. Literarisch bezeugte Statuen des Ianus in Rom

7. I. Geminus (Quirinus) auf dem Forum Romanum, in der Nähe der Kurie. Dieser I. bifrons stand in dem unter 2 besprochenen Bronzeschrein, einer augusteischen Erneuerung. Die Bronzestatue selbst war archaisch. Plin. nat. 34, 33 zählt sie neben dem Hercules auf dem Forum Boarium zu den ältesten Bronzestatuen Roms. Ihre Höhe gibt Prok. bell. Goth. 5 (1) 25, 20 mit fünf Ellen (= 2, 20 m) an. Sie war zur Zeit des Prokop, da Plinius sie für archaisch hält, schon rund ein Jahrtausend alt. Das eine Gesicht schaute nach Osten, das andere nach Westen. Dem Ovid erscheint dieser I., wodurch wir die Attribute Stab und Schlüssel und die Bärtigkeit erfahren (fast. 1, 99, 259). Daß ihr Material Ton gewesen sei, wie Martin 37–38 und 44–45 annimmt, geht weder aus Plin. nat. 34, 33–34 noch aus anderen Quellen hervor. – Plinius ist unser erster Zeuge dafür, daß die Statue mit ihren Fingern die Zahl 365 darstellte. Dieses Märchen kann nicht früher als in der Zeit der caesarischen Kalenderreform aufgekommen sein, während die Statue selbst schon im 2. Jh. v. Chr. bezeugt ist (Piso bei Varro, l.l. 5, 165). In der Spätantike erhebt Macr. Sat. 1, 9, 10 das Märchen zur Regel. Statuen des I. seien allgemein so dargestellt, daß die Rechte die Zahl 300, die Linke die Zahl 65 symbolisiere. Zu dieser Überlieferung: Simon 1, 260.

8. Vergoldete Marmorstatue (Herme?) eines doppelköpfigen «Ianus», bei dem man nicht wußte, ob Praxiteles oder Skopas der Meister war: Plin. nat. 36, 28. Es handelte sich also ursprünglich sicher nicht um den römischen Gott, sondern um ein Werk des frühen Hellenismus aus Alexandria, da es sich in der ägyptischen Beute des Oktavian befand. Er weihte es nach derselben Pliniusstelle in suo templo. Da es in Rom zur Zeit des Plinius außer dem Torbau 2 nur einen einzigen Tempel des I. gab, den 260 v. Chr. von C. Duilius errichteten (Platner/Ashby 277–278), dürfte das Beutestück dort am Forum Holitorium geweiht worden sein. Das ist auch die Auffassung von Pape, M., Griechische Kunstwerke aus Kriegsbeute und ihre öffentliche Aufstellung in Rom (1975) 25, 169. Die abweichende Argumentation von Martin 45 mit Anm. 234 beruht auf einer mißverständlichen Ovidstelle (fast. 1, 257–258); vgl. zu 2 (Ende).

9. Statue des I. quadrifrons aus dem 241 v. Chr. eroberten Falerii, später auf dem Forum transitorium des Domitian (Platner/Ashby 280; Turcan 385–387). Wo sie von der mittleren Republik bis auf Domitian aufgestellt war, ist unbekannt. Die Hypothese von Martin 44, sie sei im I. Geminus (2) auf dem Forum gestanden, ist zurückzuweisen; dort stand zu allen Zeiten ein doppelköpfiges I.bild. Auch die Materialangabe bei Martin, Terrakotta, ist ungesichert; da es sich um Kriegsbeute handelte, ist Bronze vorzuziehen. Die Aufstellung war bis auf Domitian nicht spektakulär, wie aus Martialis 10, 28 hervorgeht. Auch das spricht gegen eine Aufstellung im I. Geminus. Eine «domitianische Erfindung» (Radke 148) war die Statue sicher nicht; das widerspräche der eindeutigen Quellenlage. Dazu kommt, daß eine etruskische Gemme aus der Zeit der Eroberung von Falerii einen dreiköpfigen Gott zeigt, dessen viertes Gesicht auf der Rückseite hinzugedacht werden kann (→ Culsans 5). Auch die einzige erhaltene Darstellung eines I. quadrifrons in der römischen Kunst, auf einem As des Hadrian (21), zeigt die Anordnung der Gesichter wie auf dieser Gemme. – Leider sind die Quellen außer Martialis alle spätantik, doch Bauer, passim mißtraut ihnen zu sehr. Wenn jener I. vier Gesichter hatte, so waren an seinem Heiligtum vier Türen angebracht, analog zu dem doppeltürigen I. Geminus mit den beiden Gesichtern auf dem Forum Romanum (7). In der Spätantike interessierte man sich für einen I., der in alle vier Himmelsrichtungen blickt, als Universalgott. Turcan 385–387 zeigt, daß Domitian in dieser Hinsicht bereits auf dem Weg zur Spätantike war.

D. Köpfe des Ianus bifrons auf Münzen und Medaillons

In der mittleren wie der späteren Republik war der I. bifrons der Standardtypus auf der Vorderseite des As, während die Rückseite die Prora eines Kriegsschiffes trägt. Der mythologische Deutungsversuch Ov. fast. 1, 229–254 ist natürlich der Phantasie des Dichters entsprungen: Das Schiff sei das des Saturn, mit dem dieser am Ianiculum, der Burg des I., gelandet war. Die Vorstellung von I. und Saturn als Königen Latiums im Goldenen Zeitalter war zur Zeit des Ovid populär. Holland versuchte, mit Hilfe des Schiffes ihre Theorie von I. als Gott der Flußübergänge zu untermauern; dagegen Crawford, RRC II 718 Anm. 7. – Nach Wisowa, Religion 105 wurde «der Doppelkopf als Bild des I. überhaupt zuerst für die Münzen geschaffen». Obwohl die heraldische Form zweier janusförmig verbundener Profile in der griechischen Münzprägung in die archaische Zeit zurückgeht (vgl. Simon, E., RSNum 49, 1970, 5–19), und obwohl die republikanische Münzprägung das Phänomen auch außerhalb der I.bilder kennt (vgl. Crawford, RRC II 862 s. v. «Dioscuri, Janiform head»), stellt der I. bifrons der Münzen etwas grundsätzlich anderes dar: Nicht zwei eng zusammengehörende Partner(innen) wie auf allen anderen Münzen, sondern einen einzigen Gott mit zwei Gesichtern.

10.* AE (Aes grave), Rom, 225/217 v. Chr. – Crawford, RRC II 759 Nr. 35/1 Taf. G. – Vs.: Bärtiger Doppelkopf; Rs.: Prora. Obwohl keine Inschrift den Kopf benennt, ist er sicher I. zu deuten, wie er noch in der Zeit des Ovid (fast. 1, 229–230) heißt. Vielleicht hängt die Darstellung mit der Beziehung des I. zur Zahl zwölf zusammen – ihm waren nach Varro zwölf Altäre, für jeden Monat des Jahres einer, geweiht (frg. 67 Cardauns). Der römische As bestand nämlich aus zwölf unciae (vgl. Giumlia 29). Das standardisierte Auftreten auf den republikanischen Assen spricht für die Popularität des I. im republikanischen Rom. Weitere Beispiele bei Crawford, RRC II 760 Nr. 36/1, 38/1, 41/5a, 43/1 Taf. H und I.

11.* AE As, Rom, 209/08 v. Chr. – Crawford, RRC II 761 Nr. 50/3 Taf. 10. – Vs.: Bärtiger, bekränzter I. bifrons, mit apex zwischen den beiden Köpfen; Rs.: Prora. Bekrönung und apex sind gegenüber dem Typus 10 neu. Sie werden von verschiedenen Stempelschneidern bis in die spätere Republik beibehalten. Beispiele aus dem 1. Jh. v. Chr.: Crawford, RRC II 777 Nr. 368/1 Taf. 47 (Partei des Sulla) und II 781 Nr. 471/1 Taf. 55 (Partei des Pompeius).

12. AE As, Spanien, 45/44 v. Chr. (Partei des Pompeius). – Crawford, RRC II 781 Nr. 478/1a Taf. 56. – Vs.: Bärtiger I. bifrons über Altar; Rs.: Prora. Das Auftauchen des Altares ist nicht geklärt. Es soll wohl I. nicht einfach als Münzmarke, sondern als Kultgott kennzeichnen. Wie eine Krone trägt er die Inschrift MAGNUS.

13.* AE As, Spanien, 45 v. Chr. und später. – Crawford, RRC II 781 Nr. 479/1 Taf. 56. – Vs.: Unbärtiger Doppelkopf, auf beiden Seiten mit Porträtszügen des Pompeius Magnus. Rs.: Prora. Mit Hilfe von 12 sicher als I. zu deuten, mit dem der verstorbene Pompeius gleichgesetzt wird (vgl. 15).

14.* AE Medaillon, Rom, Commodus, 187 n. Chr. – Gnecci, Medaglioni II 62, 92–93 Taf. 84, 4; Turcan 391 Taf. 3, 10. – Rs.: Bärtige Doppelbüste des I. mit Mantelstück.

15.* AE Medaillon, Rom, Commodus, 187 n. Chr. – Gnecci, Medaglioni II 66, 131 Taf. 87, 1; Turcan 391 Taf. 3, 11. – Vs.: Bärtige Doppelbüste des I. in Feldherrntracht mit Porträtszügen des Commodus (vgl. 13).

E. Ianus bifrons in ganzer Gestalt auf Münzen und Medaillons

Da in der Kaiserzeit der Kopf des Kaisers die Vs. der Münzen einnahm, verschwand der beliebte I. bifrons von den Assen. Aus julisch-claudischer Zeit sind keine figürlichen Darstellungen des I. auf Münzen bekannt, Nero bildete nur den Kultbau auf dem Forum ab (2a). Hadrian dagegen begann mit Prägungen des stehenden I. bifrons, die sich bis Gallienus fortsetzten.

16.* AU Aureus, Rom, Hadrian, 119/122 n. Chr. – BMC Emp III 254, 100 Taf. 49, 2; Turcan 388 Taf. 1, 5 (mit Lit.). – Rs.: Stehender I. bifrons im Hüftmanteltypus, in der Rechten ein langes Zepter haltend; die Linke ist eingestützt. Das Zepter weist I. als Urkönig von Latium aus; es ist nicht das baculum, auf das sich I. bei Ovid (fast. 1, 177) stützt. Dieses Stützen ist bereits Interpretation des Dichters, um das ehrwürdige Alter des Gottes hervorzuheben. Ursprünglich muß der Stab als «Waffe» des Torwächters aufgefaßt gewesen sein.

17.* AE Sesterz, Rom, Antoninus Pius, 140/44 n. Chr. – BMC Emp IV 210, 1317 Taf. 31, 5 (auch Asse mit diesem Motiv, 220, 1369); Turcan 389 Taf. 2, 7. – Rs.: Stehender I. wie auf 16, doch sind an seinen Beinen deutlich die Ränder der Stiefel zu sehen. Antoninus Pius hat auf seinen Münzen die treuesten Wiedergaben von Kultbildern, die wir aus der römischen Numismatik kennen (vgl. → Ares/Mars 233). In Frage kommt hier nicht der I. Geminus vom Forum Romanum, der eine archaische Statue war, sondern der I. im Tempel des C. Duilius am Forum Holitorium, der zur Zeit dieser Münze sein 400jähriges Jubiläum feierte. Darauf macht Turcan 390 zu Recht aufmerksam. Die Stiefel scheinen mir typisch etruskische Requisiten zu sein (vgl. → Culsans 1). Der Einfluß etruskischer Kunst auf das mittelrepublikanische Rom ist bekannt.

18. AE, verschiedene Sesterze des Commodus, dazu ein Aureus und ein Medaillon, Rom, 185/87 n. Chr. – Turcan 390–395 Taf. 2, 8 (Sesterz); 3, 9 (Aureus); 3, 12 (Sesterz); 3, 13 (Medaillon). Die Rs. dieser Prägungen zeigen I. in ähnlicher statuarischer Haltung wie auf 16 und 17, aber unter einem Baldachin. Er ist viersäulig zu denken, wie das Medaillon verrät. Die statuenhafte Wirkung wird ferner durch eine Basis verstärkt. Baldachine werden in antoninischer Zeit für Kultbilder Mode; die Architektur braucht also nicht auf I. als Türgott zu verweisen, zumal keine verschließbare Tür vorhanden ist.

19. AR Denar, Rom, Pertinax, 193 n. Chr. – BMC Emp V 1, 2 Taf. 1, 2; Turcan 394–395 Taf. 4, 14. – Rs.: I. im gleichen Typus wie 16 und 17; dazu Legende IANO CONSERVAT(ori). Die Münze war noch von Commodus, einem besonderen Verehrer des I. (vgl. 18) für den 1. Januar 193 geplant worden, doch er wurde am 31. 12. 192 ermordet.

20. AU Aureus, Rom, Gallienus, Ende 260 n. Chr. – RICV 1, 134, 45; Turcan 397–398 Taf. 4, 17. – Rs.: I. mit Hüftmantel, das Zepter jedoch in der l. Armbeuge. Mit der Rechten gießt er eine Patera aus. Legende: IANO PATRI. Das Beiwort pater, das I. bereits in seiner ersten Erwähnung in der lateinischen Literatur (Cato agr. 134) besitzt, erscheint hier auf der letzten ihn zeigenden Münze. Es kennzeichnet ihn nicht als Stammvater, wie Giumlia (29) schreibt, sondern es ist, um mit Serv. Aen. 3, 89 zu sprechen, religionis nomen. Selbst das Dionysoskind konnte als Liber pater bezeichnet werden (→ Dionysos/Bacchus 171).

F. Ianus quadrifrons auf Münze

21.* AE As, Rom, Hadrian, 125/28 n. Chr. – BMC Emp III 437, 1335 Taf. 82, 10; Turcan 387–388 Taf. 1, 6. – Rs.: I. mit drei sichtbaren Gesichtern, eines frontal, zwei im Profil, alle bärtig; das vierte ist im

Rücken zu denken. Er ist im Hüftmanteltypus wie 16 und 17 gezeigt, mit einem langen Zepter in der Rechten. Es ist nicht als Stock des Torhüters gedacht, sondern als Zepter des Königs von Latium im Goldenen Zeitalter (vgl. 16). Dazu passen die vier Köpfe als Zeichen seiner Universalität. Die Münze ist das einzige Zeugnis für einen I. Typus, dem Domitian auf seinem Forum einen Tempel erbaut hatte (9).

G. Numen mixtum Ianus-Sol-Apollo (?)

22. AR Denar, Rom, Geta, 211 n. Chr. – BMC Emp V 422, 12 Taf. 65, 8; Turcan 395–396 Taf. 4, 15. 16. – Rs.: Janusköpfiger Gott im Hüftmantel, mit Zepter und Blitz. Dieser und die Unbärtigkeit des einen (?) Kopfes weichen von der Ikonographie des I. ab. Apollo konnte mit Blitz dargestellt werden; vgl. Crawford, RRC Nr. 298/1 Taf. 40. In einem numen mixtum potenzieren sich die Kräfte zweier Numina.

H. Auszuscheiden (?)

23. AE Medaillon, Rom, Commodus, 185 n. Chr. – Roscher 51 (Zeichnung); Turcan 391–392. – Die Darstellung gleicht dem Medaillon → Aion 24*, Aion aber hat in der Zeichnung bei Roscher zwei Köpfe, einen bärtigen und einen unbärtigen. Ein numen mixtum wie 22? Turcan schreibt zu Recht, daß dieses im 19. Jh. viel diskutierte Stück einer Untersuchung auf seine Echtheit bedarf. I. hat zwar wesensmäßig mit der Zeit zu tun, aber aus einem falschen (oder verfälschten?) Medaillon können keine Schlüsse gezogen werden.

KOMMENTAR

Die ikonographische Ausbeute für I. erweist sich, von den Münzen (10–22) abgesehen, als ausgesprochen mager. Das braucht nicht zu erstaunen, denn I. gehört zu den altrömischen Göttern, die sich als Numina offenbaren, als gestaltlose Wesen mit Wille und Macht. I. wird wirksam in dem Schutz, den die Tür spendet. Da diese nur, wenn sie verschließbar ist, Schutz gewährt, sind dem I. die Vorrichtungen für den Verschluss – Holzriegel (1) und Metallschlösser – heilig. Zwar konnte der ganze Torbau I. heißen und sein (2), die Statue im Innern aber hielt als wichtigstes Attribut den Schlüssel (7). Dieser erscheint allerdings nicht als Attribut des I. in den ganzfigurigen Darstellungen der Münzen (16–20), die Linke des I. ist vielmehr eingestützt – ein antiker Schlüssel müßte zu sehen sein. Da die I. figur auf diesen Münzen dem gleichen Schema folgt und da sich 17 als Statue im Tempel des Duilius am Forum Holitorium herausgestellt hat, ist die archaische Bronzestatue im I. Geminus (7) leider auf keiner Münze nachgebildet. Vielleicht aber geben uns die frühesten aes grave-Serien (10) in ihrer altentümlichen Schwerfälligkeit eine Vorstellung von dem bärtigen Doppelkopf des Kultbildes im I. Geminus. Es hielt in der Rechten einen Stock, das Attribut des Wächters, während der I. vom Forum Holitorium ein langes Königszepter trägt (16–20). Das erinnert an den Mythos von seinem Urkönigtum über Latium, vom Ianiculum aus. Dieser Hügel lag im frühen Rom auf der etruskischen Seite des Tiber. Der I. Geminus (7) war nach Plinius ein etruskisches Bronzewerk. Auch der I. vom Forum Holitorium war wohl von einem etruskischen Künstler geschaffen, wie besonders an seinen Schuhen zu sehen ist (17). Dennoch war I. kein etruskischer Gott – die Lesung Ani auf der Bronzeleber von Piacenza hat sich als irrtümlich herausgestellt: Maggiani, A., StEtr 49, 1981, 263. Der dem urrömischen I. entsprechende etruskische Gott hieß → Culsans. Er wurde jung, I. dagegen immer bärtig abgebildet. Die hellenistischen Terrakottabüsten aus Vulci in Ianusform (→ Culsans 8) stellen wegen ihrer Bärte daher wohl I. dar. Sie gelten mit Recht als Zeugnisse für die Romanisierung. Vgl. Carandini, A., La romanizzazione dell'Etruria: il territorio di Vulci (Ausstellungskat. Orbetello 1985) 39 Abb. 17.

Der I. quadrifrons aus Falerii (9) war freilich bärtig, wenn der hadrianische As (21) ihn darstellt. Doch waren die Falisker keine Etrusker, sie standen sprachlich und religiös den Latinern nahe, wenn sie auch von etruskischer Kultur überlagert waren. An diesem faliskischen Werk muß vieles offen bleiben. Es scheint sich, bis auf den viergesichtigen Kopf, nicht allzusehr von dem I. auf dem Forum Holitorium unterscheiden zu haben. Wo es bis zur Verwendung durch Domitian stand, nachdem es 241 v. Chr. nach Rom gekommen war, läßt sich nicht sagen. Auch das Material, wohl Bronze, ist nicht überliefert. Wahrscheinlich war es schon in Falerii ein I. gewesen, was sich von dem I. «des Skopas oder Praxiteles» aus Ägypten (8) nicht sagen läßt. Diese vergoldete Marmorstatue darf keinesfalls als Kultbild im I. Geminus angenommen werden, wie Martin vorschlägt. Alte Kultbilder pflegten in Neubauten von Heiligtümern wiederverwendet zu werden. Prokop sah noch im Jahre 536/37 n. Chr. die alte, von Piso und Plinius erwähnte Statue in dem Bronzeschrein (2. 7), der bald darauf Metall Dieben zum Opfer gefallen sein dürfte.

Die Auffassung von Wissowa, der Doppelkopf des I. sei durch das Münzbild des aes grave bedingt, wurde schon in der Einleitung zu 10 widerlegt. I. ist doppelköpfig, weil er als Türgott die Funktion eines Wächters hat. Um diese These zu untermauern, wurden einige Wächtergottheiten und -dämonen des Alten Orients, Ägyptens und Griechenlands zusammengestellt (3–6). Man könnte auch an den zwei- oder dreiköpfigen → Kerberos (→ Herakles 2553–2675) und an den zweiköpfigen Wachhund Orthros der Herde des → Geryoneus (→ Herakles 2464–2532) erinnern. I. dagegen ist ein Wächter von großer Vornehmheit, ein Schutzgott wie Iuppiter Custos. Zugleich erhält er durch seine Beziehung zur Zeit, zum Goldenen Zeitalter und zum Frieden eine besondere Würde. Sie wurde durch Augustus neu definiert, in dessen Zeit nicht nur der Schrein auf dem Forum Romanum, sondern auch der Tempel am Forum Holitorium erneuert wurde. Tiberius weihte ihn 17 n. Chr. wieder ein (Platner/Ashby 277).

Zwei in ihren Sitten und Unsitten vergleichbare Kaiser, Nero und Commodus, fühlten sich von I. besonders angesprochen. Nero feierte die Schließung des I. Geminus auf Münzen (2), Commodus ließ Medaillons prägen, auf denen die Büste des I. seine Züge trägt (15), worin er in I.-Pompeius einen Vorläufer hatte (13). Die meisten Münzen mit I. in ganzer Gestalt wurden unter Commodus geprägt (18). Der Baldachin auf ihnen kennzeichnet die I. statue als Kultbild. Entsprechendes drückt Gallienus mit der Patera in der Rechten des I. aus (20), einem sonst für I. nicht üblichen Attribut, um dessentwillen er das Zepter in die Linke nehmen muß. Es handelt sich hier wohl nur um einen Münztypus, nicht um eine wirklich existierende Statue. Die Patera, ein Symbol der pax deorum (Simon 2, 70), gehört zu dem eng mit der Friedensgöttin verbundenen I. Die Anrede pater, die man an ihn bei der Weinspende aus der Patera richtete, paßt als Umschrift zu diesem I. besonders gut. Schon der alte Cato instruierte seine Leser, daß man bei der Weinspende I. als pater anrufen solle (agr. 134).

ERIKA SIMON

IAPETOS

(Ἰαπετός) Gott aus der Generation der Titanen, der Kinder von → Ouranos und → Ge, unter denen er eine bedeutungsvolle Zweifalt mit seinem Bruder → Kronos bildet. Ist dieser als Vater des «Kroniden» → Zeus Stammvater der olympischen Götter, so ist I. als Vater des «Iapetiden» → Prometheus Stammvater der hellenischen Heroengeschlechter: → Deukalion (I), der Sohn des Prometheus, überlebte die Sintflut und war Vater des Hellen. Brüder des Prometheus sind → Atlas, Menoitios und Epimetheus, von denen der letzte → Pandora zur Frau nahm, die Pyrrha, die Gemahlin des Deukalion, gebar. Als Gott einer den Olympiern vorausliegenden Generation hatte I. nur sporadisch Kult.

LITERARISCHE QUELLEN: Für obigen Stammbaum gibt es zwei Hauptversionen, die des Epos (a) und die des attischen Kultes (b). Sie sind in der modernen Forschung oft nicht genügend geschieden.

a) Hom. Il. 8, 479 nennt unter den Titanen im Tartaros nur I. und Kronos namentlich, also die beiden Stammväter von Olympiern und Menschen. Ebenso sind sie im Prooemium Hes. theog. 19 zusammen genannt. Dieses Epos ist die Hauptquelle für Version a. Eltern und Geschwister des I.: Hes. theog. 133–138; Gemahlin und Söhne: Hes. theog. 507–511. Der Name der Gemahlin ist dort → Klymene (II), während Apollod. bibl. 1, 8 → Asia (I) nennt. Beide sind Okeaniden und Titanentöchter (weshalb die Okeaniden in Aischyl. Prom. den Chor bilden). Hdt. 4, 45 bezeichnet dagegen Asia als Gemahlin des Prometheus, was zu Version b paßt.

b) Aischyl. Prom. 209–210 und öfter hat die mit → Themis gleichgesetzte Ge als Mutter des Prometheus. Das ist die Version des attischen Kultes, in dem Prometheus den Beinamen Titan hatte (vgl. Soph. Oid. K. 55–56 mit Schol.). In dieser Version ist I. ausgeschaltet; der kultisch verehrte Titan ist nicht Enkel, sondern Sohn der Ge. So kommen Klymene oder Asia als Mütter nicht mehr in Frage; die letztere ist vielmehr die Gemahlin des Prometheus, der nicht wie bei Hes. theog. 528. 543. 559. 565 und erg. 54 «Sohn des I.» heißt.

Die wichtigere Version war sicher die epische (a), der z. B. Pind. O. 9, 54–56 folgt. Aber die starke Wirkung des aischyleischen Prometheus, in der I. keine Rolle spielt, ist nicht abzustreiten.

Neben diesen beiden Hauptversionen bestehen andere. So wurden dem I. weitere Kinder zugeschrieben, etwa Buphagos (Paus. 8, 27, 17), ein Frevler wie Atlas und Menoitios. Dagegen ist der kalydonische Jäger Dryas (Hyg. fab. 173) wohl nur durch eine Textkorruption (vgl. Rose zur Stelle) Sohn des I. geworden. – Anchiale, nach der eine Stadt bei Tarsos in Kilikien genannt war, galt nach der einheimischen Tradition als Tochter des I. (Steph. Byz. s. v.). – Kult des I. auf Imbros: IG XII 8, 74.

BIBLIOGRAPHIE: Gundel, W., RE IX 1 (1914) 721–724 s. v. «Iapetos»; Reinhardt, K., Tradition und Geist (1960) 204–211 und passim (Prometheus als Titan); Weizsäcker, P., ML II 1 (1890–94) 55–58 s. v. «Iapetos» (sehr veraltet); West, M. L., Hesiod Theogony, ed. with Prolegomena and Commentary (1966) 157–158. 305–308 und passim, mit Lit.

KATALOG

Der Stammbaum, in den I. als Vater des Prometheus gehört, ist übersichtlich in ML I 1 (1884–86) in der Klapptafel neben 992 (s. v. Deukalion) gezeigt. Viele der dort genannten Gestalten führen nur bei Hesiod und in antiken genealogischen Abhandlungen ihr Leben und sind selten in die Bildkunst aufgenommen. Auch I. gehört dazu. Er ist bisher nicht sicher nachgewiesen, es gibt nur die folgende Hypothese:

I.* (= Gigantes 24* mit Lit.) Südfries des Altares von Pergamon, links. Berlin (DDR), Staatl. Mus. – 1. Hälfte 2. Jh. v. Chr. – Der nackte Kämpfer auf Seiten der Götter, der mit beiden erhobenen Händen eine Axt schwingt, wurde von Simon, Pergamon 33–34 Taf. 26 als I. gedeutet, die Göttin an seiner Seite als seine Gemahlin Klymene. Pollitt, J. J., Art in the Hellenistic Age (1986) 96 hat diese Hypothese in die Benennungen aufgenommen; Vian, F., → Gigantes S. 202 neigt mehr der Deutung auf Adrasteia und Kabiros zu. Sie ist jedoch durch viele andere beliebige Götterpaare zu ersetzen, wenn man nicht die hesiodische Theogonie als Grundlage für die Auswahl der Gottheiten annimmt. Diese scheint mir, in Verbindung mit der stoischen Kosmologie (ebendort 56–59), nach wie vor die beste Basis der Interpretation zu sein. Für die stoische Philosophie bestand kein Gegensatz mehr zwischen Olympiern und Titanen (vgl. auch Pollitt 107), wodurch die Mitwirkung so vieler titanischer Gottheiten, besonders im Südfries, erklärbar wird.

KOMMENTAR

Die Giganten konnten ohne menschliche Mitwirkung bekanntlich nicht besiegt werden, weshalb Herakles ein wichtiger Teilnehmer an der Gigantomachie war. I., der Stammvater des Menschengeschlechtes, wäre es auch. Am Südfries ist nach allgemeiner Auffassung ein Teil der Titanensippe (Rhea, Theia und ihre Kinder, Themis, Phoibe) und wohl deren Vater → Ouranos dargestellt. Dazu paßt der Titan I. Zur Deutung auf Kabiros ließe sich anfügen, daß I. auf Imbros tatsächlich als Kabire verehrt worden ist (s. o. Quellen). Sein nackter, muskulöser Körper und die Doppelaxt weisen ihn als Gestalt der Frühzeit aus.

ERIKA SIMON

IAPYX → Aineias 174*

IARHIBOL

(Iarhibôl, transcription du nom palmyrénien; Ἰαρίβωλος) Dieu solaire – malgré l'étymologie apparente du nom, qui signifierait «la lune de Bôl» ou «le maître des mois» – appartenant au vieux fonds culturel palmyrénien. Avec → Aglibol, il faisait partie de la triade de → Bel, dans laquelle il représentait le Soleil. On lui rendait un culte à la source Efqa – où il était, semble-t-il, figuré par un bétyle – ainsi qu'à la source d'Erek, entre Palmyre et l'Euphrate (une autre exégèse rattache d'ailleurs le nom, non plus à la racine sémitique yrbh, «lune» ou «mois», mais à l'accadien iarhu, «citerne», «étang»). Dieu oraculaire, I. avait à Palmyre un rôle civique éminent. Son culte est attesté très tôt à Doura-Europos où, en 33 av. J.-C., un temple lui fut consacré en même temps qu'à Bel.

BIBLIOGRAPHIE: Drijvers, H. J. W., The Religion of Palmyra (1976) 9-13; Gawlikowski, M., Palmyre VI (1973) 112-120; Łukasiak, E., «Ikonoğrafia Yarhibôla», Studia Palmyrenskie V (1974) 7-44; Milik, J. T., Dédicaces faites par des dieux (1972) 42-46; Seyrig, AntSyr I 27-32; VI 31-33, 72-79; Seyrig, H., Syria 48, 1971, 89-94; Starcky, J./Gawlikowski, M., Palmyre (1985) 93-95; Teixidor, J., The Pagan God (1977) 110-113; idem, The Pantheon of Palmyra (1979) 29-34.

CATALOGUE

Faute d'indication sûre relative à leur nom, le catalogue exclut un certain nombre d'images de dieux radiés, ou radiés et cuirassés; cf. etiam → Helios [in periphoria or.].

A. Iarhibôl seul ou avec un dédicant

Reliefs (pierre)

1.* Relief de gypse. New Haven, Yale Univ. De Doura-Europos, temple des Gaddé. – Rostovtzeff, M.

1., Dura, Prel. Reports VII-VIII (1939) 264-265 pl. 35, 2; Perkins, A., The Art of Dura-Europos (1973) 101-102 pl. 42; Łukasiak 29-30 fig. 19; Drijvers 13, 26 pl. 21; Teixidor (1977) 110 et n. 25; idem (1979) 33, 131 pl. 10. – II^e s. ap. J.-C. – I., de face, s'appuie du bras dr. levé sur une lance, la main g. refermée sur la poignée d'un glaive suspendu à son côté. Il est vêtu, par-dessus une tunique courte, d'une cuirasse et d'un manteau agrafé sur l'épaule, et chaussé de hautes bottes. La tête est radiée, les cheveux ceints d'un diadème, et les pointes d'un croissant sont visibles derrière les épaules. Sur la plinthe, dédicace en palmyrénien à I., «le dieu bon, Idole de la Source».

2. Relief de calcaire fr. Autrefois Alep, coll. G. Poche. – Ronzevalle, S./Mouterde, R., Al Machriq 21, 1923, 39 pl. 2, 5; Cumont, F., Fouilles de Doura-Europos (1926) 104-105 fig. 21; Milik 42; Drijvers 13, 26 pl. 22, 1. – I. (nommé en grec sur la plinthe), vêtu d'une cuirasse et d'un manteau, la tête entourée d'un nimbe radié, s'appuie de la main dr. sur une lance. A sa g., le dédicant fait une offrande sur un autel au pied duquel est couché un taureau.

Tessère (terre cuite, de Palmyre)

3.* RTP n° 247 pl. 14. – Buste de I. cuirassé; nom inscrit en palmyrénien.

B. Iarhibôl et Aglibôl seuls

Tessères (terre cuite, de Palmyre)

4. (= Aglibol 25* avec bibl., = Bel 12b [face A]) RTP n° 119 pl. 7; Łukasiak 17 fig. 8. – B: à g. I. radié (cuirasse, manteau) s'appuie de la main dr. sur un sceptre, la main g. posée sur la poignée d'un glaive suspendu à son côté. A dr. Aglibôl. Noms inscrits.

5.* RTP n° 245 pl. 14. – A g. buste d'Aglibôl; à dr. buste de I. radié. Les mêmes divinités apparaissent peut-être sur la tessère RTP n° 246 où l'on voit deux bustes, celui de dr. probablement radié.

C. Iarhibôl dans la triade de Bel

Tessères (terre cuite, de Palmyre)

6. (= Aglibol 24* avec bibl., = Bel 12a) RTP n° 118 pl. 7; Starcky/Gawlikowski frontispice. – Edicule abritant la triade de Bel: de g. à dr. I. radié (cuirasse, manteau), tenant de la main dr. un sceptre surmonté d'une boule et posant la main g. sur la poignée d'un glaive, Bel et Aglibôl.

7.* RTP n° 28 pl. 2. – Bel au centre, entre I. radié, à sa dr., et Aglibôl à sa g., tous trois vêtus d'une cuirasse et d'un manteau et s'appuyant sur un sceptre.

8. (= Bel 12c*) RTP n° 120 pl. 7. – Bustes de la triade de Bel: à g. I. (nimbe radié), au centre Bel, à dr. Aglibôl.

9. (= Bel 12d*, = Astarte 25 [face B]) RTP n° 121 pl. 7; Seyrig, AntSyr VI 76. – A: base ou autel supportant les bustes de la triade de Bel: à g. I. (nimbe radié), au centre Bel, à dr. Aglibôl.

Monnaies

10. (= Aglibol 29 avec bibl., = Bel 14*) AE, Palmyre, ép. impériale. – Łukasiak 24 fig. 12; Krzyżanowska, A., dans Actes du IX^e Congrès int. de num. I (1982) 445-457 pl. 57. – Av.: bustes de la triade; au centre Bel de face, à g. I. radié de profil vers la dr., à dr. Aglibôl de profil vers la g.

D. Iarhibôl dans la triade de Bel, avec d'autres divinités

Peinture murale

11. (= Aglibol 1, = Allath 11, = Arsû 13, = Bel 1* – avec bibl.) Peinture détruite. De Doura-Europos, temple de Bel. – Perkins, o. c. I, 37, 45-47 fig. 13; Łukasiak 12-14 fig. 4. – II^e-III^e s. ap. J.-C. – Sacrifice offert par deux personnages et leurs acolytes à cinq divinités: de g. à dr. Allath(?), puis I., Bel, Aglibôl et Arsû, figurés chacun debout sur une sphère. Lorsque la peinture fut photographiée, il ne subsistait déjà plus de I. que le bas du manteau et les bottes; il était sans doute vêtu comme Aglibôl (→ Aglibol 1).

Reliefs (pierre)

12. (= Aglibol 7*, = Arsû 15, = Bel 3 – avec bibl.) Relief de calcaire. Palmyre, Mus. 1221. De Palmyre, près du temple de Bel. – Łukasiak 11-12 fig. 3; Drijvers 11, 24 pl. 7; Teixidor (1979) 128-129 pl. 3, 2. – I^e s. ap. J.-C. – Quatre divinités alignées: de g. à dr. I. (nimbe radié, cuirasse, manteau, chaussures montantes) appuyé de la main dr. sur un sceptre surmonté d'une boule, la main g. sur le glaive, Bel, Aglibôl et Arsû.

13. (= Aglibol 11, = Arsû 14, = Bel 4* – avec bibl.) Relief de calcaire. Palmyre, Mus. 1233 A. Du Djebel al-Merah (Palmyrène). – Drijvers 24 pl. 9, 1; Teixidor (1979) 134 pl. 21, 2. – Fin du I^e s. ap. J.-C. – A g. un dédicant offre un sacrifice à quatre dieux alignés, désignés par une inscr. en palmyrénien: de g. à dr. Arsû, I. (nimbe radié, anneaux aux oreilles et collier, tunique à manches longues, cuirasse, manteau) s'appuyant de la main dr. sur une lance, Bel et Aglibôl.

14. (= Aglibol 19, = Bel 2*, = Beltis 3 – avec bibl.) Relief de calcaire incomplet à dr. Damas, Mus. Nat. De Palmyrène. – Łukasiak 11-12 fig. 3; Drijvers 11, 24 pl. 8, 2. – Début du II^e s. ap. J.-C. – A g. Beltis, puis la triade de Bel: I. (nimbe radié, tunique à manches longues, cuirasse, manteau, chaussures montantes), la main dr. appuyée sur un sceptre, la g. tenant un glaive, Bel et Aglibôl. Une inscr., en grande partie détruite, nommait les divinités.

15.* (= Aglibol 14*, = Astarte 23, = Baalshamin 23, = Bel 5 – avec bibl.) Relief de calcaire. Palmyre, Mus. B 2195. D'Al-Maqaté (Palmyrène). – Drijvers 10-11, 24 pl. 10, 1; Teixidor (1979) 9, 58, 130 pl. 7, 2. – Milieu du II^e s. ap. J.-C. – Cinq divinités alignées, désignées par leurs noms inscrits en palmyrénien sur la plinthe: de g. à dr. I. (nimbe radié, cuirasse, manteau) appuyé de la main dr. sur une lance, Baalshamin, Bel, Aglibôl et Astarté.

16.* (= Aglibol 16, = Astarte 24, = Bel 8, = Beltis 4 – avec bibl.) Relief de calcaire, incomplet à dr. Damas, Mus. Nat. 2118 (4480). D'Oum es-Salabikh (entre Palmyre et Hît). – Abdul-Hak, S. et A., Cat. illustré du Dép. des Ant. gréco-rom. au Mus. de Damas (1951) 37-38 n° 24 pl. 16, 1; Łukasiak 16-17 fig. 7; Drijvers 11, 24 pl. 9, 2. – Dédicace de 225 ap. J.-C. – De la triade de Bel ne subsiste plus, à l'extrémité dr., que I. (nimbe radié, tunique à manches longues, cuirasse, manteau, chaussures montantes, glaive au côté g.), appuyé de la main dr. sur une lance. A sa dr. une déesse (Beltis?), puis un dieu cuirassé (Arsû?) et deux dieux en costume palmyrénien (Ashar et Ashlam); à l'extrémité g., le dédicant.

Les reliefs suivants représentaient sûrement la triade, mais elle a disparu:

17. (= Aglibol 22, = Bel 7 – avec bibl.) Relief fr. Bruxelles, Mus. Roy. Acheté à Homs. – Milik 43-44; Łukasiak 14-15 fig. 5; Drijvers 12, 25 pl. 11; Teixidor (1979) 11. – II^e s. ap. J.-C. – La triade, dont ne subsiste qu'Aglibol, à g., accompagné de Némésis au centre (→ Nemesis [in per. or.]) et de → Keraunos à dr., devait figurer sur ce relief ainsi que l'atteste la dédicace à Bel, Aglibôl et I. gravée en grec sur la plinthe.

18. (= Bel 9 avec bibl.) Deux fr. d'un cippe très mutilé. Rome, Mus. Cap. De Rome. – Seyrig, AntSyr VI 75-76 et n. 2. – Sur la plinthe, une dédicace fr. en grec s'adresse «aux dieux ancestraux Bel, I.»; il ne subsiste du relief que la partie inf. du corps de deux dieux vêtus de pantalons, et la tête d'une déesse, nommée Astarté. D'après Seyrig le relief aurait représenté, de g. à dr., I., Bel, Aglibôl et Astarté.

E. Iarhibôl avec d'autres divinités

Peinture murale

19.* (= Aglibol 2, = Arsû 12*, = Doura 1, = Euphrates 1 – avec bibl.) New Haven, Yale Univ. 1931.386. De Doura-Europos, temple de Bel. – Perkins, o. c. I, 42-45 fig. 12; Łukasiak 22-23 fig. 11; Drijvers 26 pl. 19; Teixidor (1979) 93-94, 136 pl. 30. – 239 ap. J.-C. – Sacrifice offert par le tribun Iulius Terentius et sa cohorte aux Fortunes (→ Tyche) de Palmyre et de Doura, et à trois dieux en costume militaire dressés chacun sur une base. Celui du centre (nimbe, cuirasse, manteau), appuyé à dr. sur une lance, un globe dans la main g., pourrait être I., entouré d'Aglibôl à g. et d'Arsû à dr., à moins qu'il ne s'agisse de → Malakbel (Starcky/Gawlikowski 142 n. 13).

Reliefs (calcaire)

20.* Damas, Mus. Nat. 1764 (1050). De Palmyre, fondations du temple de Bel. – Abdul-Hak, o. c. I, 34 n° 15; Seyrig, AntSyr IV 1-2 pl. 1; Downey, S. B., The Heracles Sculpture. Dura, Final Reports III I 1 (1969) 77-78 pl. 3, 3; Seyrig, H., Syria 47, 1970, 107-108 fig. 28; Łukasiak 18-19 fig. 9; Drijvers 12, 25 pl. 14; Teixidor (1979) 113, 136 pl. 31, 2; Land des Baal, cat. exp. (1982) 190 n° 171. – I^e s. av. J.-C. – Quatre divinités alignées: à g. Héraklès et une déesse radiée, à dr. Aglibôl radié avec le croissant au front et un dieu radié qui est sans doute I.; tous deux sont vêtus à la grecque, d'une tunique et d'un manteau, et tiennent une petite palme de la main dr.

21. (= Aglibol 3, = Beltis 2* - avec bibl.) De Palmyre, plafond de la travée du portail du temple de Bel. Dans le sanctuaire. - Łukasiak 20-22 fig. 10; Seyrig, H./Amy, R./Will, E., Le temple de Bel à Palmyre (1975) 85. 239 pl. 39; Album pl. 100; Drijvers 10. 21 pl. 3, 1. - Vers 32 ap. J.-C. - Trois divinités alignées: sans doute Aglibol à g., Beltis à dr., et au centre I. (tête radiée, cuirasse, manteau, chaussures montantes), appuyé de la main dr. sur un sceptre, tenant un glaive de la g.

22. Relief fr. Palmyre, Mus. B 2304. De Palmyre, temple d'Allath. - Drijvers, H. J. W., AntW 7, 1976, 35-36 fig. 9; Palmyra. Geschichte, Kunst und Kultur der syrischen Oasenstadt, cat. exp. (1987) n° 32. - II^e s. ap. J.-C. - Deux dieux cuirassés, celui de g. casqué et vêtu d'une tunique à manches longues et d'un pantalon parthe, un carquois dans le dos, celui de dr. (tête disparue) chaussé de bottes et appuyé sur une lance, sont debout à côté d'un dromadaire. L'un d'eux, d'après l'inscr., serait I.

COMMENTAIRE

A l'exception de la tessère 3 où cependant le dieu est formellement identifié par une inscription, la totalité des documents montre le visage de I. auréolé de rayons qui le caractérisent comme l'une des grandes divinités solaires de Palmyre. Sur le relief de Doura I. porte non seulement le nimbe radié mais le croissant de lune aux épaules, ce qui l'a fait parfois confondre - malgré l'inscription qui le nomme expressément - avec le dieu lunaire Aglibol; peut-être ne faut-il voir dans ce croissant qu'un «vague symbole céleste» (du Mesnil du Buisson, R., Tessères et monnaies de Palmyre [1962] 212), à moins qu'il ne soit la «trace d'une ancienne nature lunaire» (Seyrig, H., Syria 48, 1971, 92 n. 3) que refléterait aussi le nom même du dieu.

Toujours debout, vêtu du costume militaire, I. s'appuie généralement de la main dr. sur une lance - parfois sur un sceptre (4. 6-7. 12. 14. 21) -, la main g. reposant sur la poignée d'un glaive suspendu à son côté g. (sauf sur 19, où elle tient un globe). Seul le relief 20 montre le dieu - toujours radié - vêtu à la grecque d'une tunique et d'un manteau, une palme à la main. C'est là probablement, comme l'a montré Seyrig (Syria 47, 1970, 107-109), un trait d'archaïsme: ce relief, qui fut découvert dans les fondations du temple de Bel, remonte vraisemblablement au I^{er} s. av. J.-C.; or la cuirasse ne devient vraiment le vêtement habituel des dieux de Palmyre qu'après le début de notre ère. Cet attirail guerrier ne signifie d'ailleurs nullement que I. fût un dieu de nature guerrière; il s'explique plutôt, comme pour les autres dieux armés de Palmyre, par les origines arabes de ses adorateurs (→ Ares [in periphéria or.], commentaire).

Ce type du dieu armé et radié, loin de caractériser exclusivement l'iconographie de I., est utilisé indifféremment pour les trois divinités du Soleil adorées à Palmyre: Shamash (→ Helios [in periphéria or.]), → Malakbel et I. Aussi, sur les images anépigraphes, I. n'est-il identifiable que grâce à son association à d'autres divinités et, en tout premier lieu, grâce à son appartenance à la triade de Bel. Cette triade apparaît pour la première fois en 32 ap. J.-C., dans l'inscription commémorative de la dédicace du temple de Bel; ses images, toutes plus récentes, s'échelonnent du I^{er} s. (12) au III^e s. ap. J.-C. (16). Parfois figurée seule (6-10), la triade est le plus souvent accompagnée d'autres divinités (11-18) et, dans un cas (15), Bel et → Baalshamin, chef de l'autre grande triade palmyrénienne, apparaissent conjointement, flanqués de I. et d'Aglibol. Que la triade de Bel apparaisse seule ou accompagnée d'autres divinités, I. occupe invariablement la place d'honneur, à la dr. de Bel, et cette hiérarchie est respectée aussi bien dans l'iconographie que dans l'épigraphie.

Quelques images, peinture (19) ou reliefs (20-22), associent à I. un certain nombre de divinités autres que ses compagnons habituels - encore qu'Aglibol au moins soit présent sur 19 et 21 - sans que rien permette vraiment d'expliquer les circonstances de ces rencontres. L'association de I. et du chameau sur 22, unique à ce jour, montre en tout cas clairement que I., comme tant d'autres divinités palmyrénienes, avait aussi pour fonction de protéger les caravanes.

PASCALE LINANT DE BELLEFONDS

IASEUS

(Ἰασεύς) Phocidien, ami de → Phokos fils d'Éaque. (→ Aïakos) avec lequel il s'allia lors de la conquête de la Phocide (Paus. 10, 30, 4).

BIBLIOGRAPHIE: Conticello, B., EAA IV (1961) 68 s. v. «Iaseus»; Stoll, H. W., ML II 1 (1890-94) 59 s. v. «Iaseus».

I. Peinture murale (disparue) représentant la Nekyia, œuvre de Polygnote de Thasos. Delphes, Lesché des Cnidiens. - Robert, C., Die Nekyia des Polygnot, 16. HallWPr (1892) 14. 66. 82; Weizsäcker, P., Polygnots Gemälde in der Lesche der Knidier in Delphi (1895) 56; Felten, W., Attische Unterweltdarstellungen des 6. und 5. Jh. v. Chr. (1975) 76; Papachatzis, Paus. Boiotika, Phokika (1981) 409-410 n. 2; Kebric, R. B., The Paintings in the Cnidian Lesche at Delphi and their Historical Context (1983) 29. - 2^e quart du V^e s. av. J.-C. - Non loin d'Achille et de Patrocle étaient figurés Phokos en jeune homme et I., sans doute barbu. Ce dernier était en train de retirer de la main g. de Phokos une bague. Pausanias voit dans ce geste l'illustration de la forte amitié qui lia le héros éponyme de la Phocide, venu d'Égine, à I., le Phocidien indigène. I. aurait en effet donné à son ami plusieurs cadeaux, en particulier une bague en or munie d'un sceau. De retour dans son Égine natale, Phokos mourra sous les coups de Pélée (→ Peleus) peut-être avec l'aide de → Telamon.

La scène I, qui se trouvait au centre de la Nekyia, est la seule représentation connue d'I. Elle pose quelques problèmes d'interprétation. En effet l'identité d'I. n'est pas claire, Pausanias étant la seule source littéraire à le mentionner. On a tenté de l'identifier à lasos, fils de → Triopas le fondateur de Cnide: Polygnote aurait alors voulu illustrer l'amitié qui liait Phocidiens et Cnidiens et dont la Lesché était le témoignage (Robert 82; Papachatzis 410 n. 2). En revanche, peu d'arguments militent en faveur de l'identification avec Deioneus (ou Deion), qui donne sa fille en mariage à Phokos (Weniger, L., ML III 2 [1902-09] 2415 s. v. «Phokos»).

Quant à l'aspect physique et à l'attitude d'I. sur la peinture de Polygnote, tous deux dépendent de la lecture du passage où Pausanias le décrit. Pour la plupart des philologues, I. est bien barbu: Ἰασεύς γενεῶν (ἐς εὐρέναιαν codd): ὄδε (ou μὲν, ou δέ) εὐ ἔχει (Schubart/Walz, Hitzig/Blümner, Spiro, Jones, Rocha-Pereira et d'autres), alors que pour C. Robert il tient une branche d'olivier: Ἰασεύς ἐλαίαν μὲν ἀνέχον. Les traductions se fondent sur la lecture usuelle (Frazer, Jones, Meyer, Papachatzis).

JEAN-ROBERT GISLER

IASILE → Echelos

IASION

(Ἰάσιον, Ἰάσιος, Ἰάσος, Iasion, lasius) Heros der Urzeit nach der Deukalionischen Flut, Geliebter der → Demeter, Vater des → Ploutos, von → Zeus mit dem Blitz getötet.

LITERARISCHE QUELLEN (Auswahl): Das Schicksal des I. ist bereits Hom. Od. 5, 125-128 bekannt. Er stirbt den Blitztod, da die Liebe einer Göttin zu einem Sterblichen gegen die Regeln des homerischen Olymp ist. Bei Hes. theog. 969-971 spielt die Liebe des Paares und die Geburt des Ploutos auf Kreta, der Tod des I. wird nicht erwähnt. Jene Geburt war eines der Geheimnisse der Eleusinischen Mysterien. - I. war auch mit einem anderen Mysterienkult, dem von Samothrake, verbunden, wo er als Bruder des → Dardanos mit Eetion (→ Aetion) identifiziert war: Quellen s. → Aetion. Da er sich in dieser Version gegen Demeter verging, soll ihn Zeus mit dem Blitz getötet haben: Apollod. bibl. 3, 138; Strabon 7 frg. 50 Jones. Die gelegentliche Gleichsetzung der Demeter mit → Kybele brachte I. ferner mit jener kleinasiatischen Göttin in Verbindung. Sie gebar ihm den Korybas; mit diesem und Dardanos zog sie nach Phrygien, während I. in dieser dritten Version unter die Götter versetzt wurde: Diod. 5, 49. - I. galt in Samothrake als Sohn des Zeus, während Homer und Hesiod keine Genealogie des I. bringen. Seine Mutter war dort die

Atlastochter → Elektra (III). - Nach der vergilischen Version stammten die Brüder Dardanos und Iasius ursprünglich aus Italien (Aen. 3, 166-171 mit Serv. z. Stelle), weshalb Aeneas dorthin zurückkehren sollte. - I., mit dem sich Demeter auf dem dreimal gepflügten Feld (Homer, Hesiod) vereinte, wird in der Forschung richtig als mit dem Ackerbau nah verbunden angesehen. Er allein soll nach der Deukalionischen Flut Getreide zur Aussaat besessen haben: Hellan., FGH 4 F 135. Da der Ackerbau weit über die Bronzezeit ins Neolithikum zurückreicht, dürfte I. weniger minoisch-mykenisch als pelagisch oder karisch sein. Mit Pelasgern und Karern bezeichneten die Griechen die Vorbevölkerung ihres Landes. Der Name lasos begegnet sowohl in der «pelagischen» Argolis (REIX 1, 784 s. v. «lasos») als auch an der karischen Küste Kleinasiens, dort als Ortsname (→ Iasos). - Der Ritus der «Heiligen Hochzeit», um die Fruchtbarkeit zu fördern, der sich im Demeter-I.-Mythos spiegelt, dürfte zu den ältesten Riten der Ägäis gehören. Die Vorbevölkerung konnte ihr uraltes Glaubensgut in den Mysterien von Eleusis und Samothrake «retten», in denen es bis in die Spätantike tradiert wurde. An beiden Orten war I. zugegen. So ist es wohl kein Zufall, daß eines der geheimnisvollsten Gemälde der Renaissance, Giorgiones Tempesta, nach einer ansprechenden neuen Deutung den Mythos von Demeter und Iasion zum Inhalt hat.

BIBLIOGRAPHIE: Büttner, F., «Die Geburt des Reichturns und der Neid der Götter. Neue Überlegungen zu Giorgiones «Tempesta»», MJBK 3. Folge 37, 1986, 113-130; Burkert, GrRel 177; v. Geisau, H., KlPauly II (1975) 1321-1322 s. v. «Iasion»; Gundel, W., REIX 1 (1901) 752-758 s. v. «Iasion»; Nilsson, GrRel 1 121, 299, 318; Rocca, R., EncVirg II (1985) 886 s. v. «Iasio»; Seeliger, K., ML II 1 (1890-94) 59-63 s. v. «Iasion».

KATALOG

I.* Kelchkrater, fr., att. rf. Leningrad, Ermitage 1889.1. - Metzger, Recherches 7-8 Nr. 1 Taf. 1, 1; Schefold, SB III 64-65 Abb. 79. - Um 390 v. Chr. - Die Figuren waren locker über freies Gelände verteilt, in dem Lorbeerbäumchen wuchsen. In der Mitte ist ein junger Mann in Barbarentracht bis zur Hüfte erhalten. Er streckt entsetzt beide Arme empor und blickt nach l. oben. Über seinem mit einer «Phrygermütze» bedeckten Kopf steht die Inschrift ΙΑΣΣΟΣ, die überzeugend als I. erklärt wurde. Eine kleiner gemalte geflügelte Göttin taucht dahinter mit einem Gespann auf - ein Pferdehals ist sichtbar. Sie hält mit beiden Händen die Zügel, r. auch das Kentron. I. wird aus der Höhe, wohin er blickt, bedroht. Zeus, der mit dem Blitz auf I. zielt, ist dort zu ergänzen. Die nach l. gewandte Flügelfrau ist wohl dessen Wagenlenkerin → Nike. R. sitzt ein bärtiger Gott mit haariger Brust, an dessen l. Schulter sich jemand lehnte (Ellbogen erhalten). Überzeugend wurden Poseidon und Amphitrite vorgeschlagen. Als Schauplatz kommen die Inseln Kreta oder Samothrake in Frage; in beiden Fällen ist der Meeresgott sinnvoll. In der Entstehungszeit des Kraters ist Samothrake vorzuziehen, da der Export

qui est sans doute I.; tous deux sont vêtus à la grecque, d'une tunique et d'un manteau, et tiennent une petite palme de la main dr.

21. (= Aglibol 3, = Beltis 2* - avec bibl.) De Palmyre, plafond de la travée du portail du temple de Bel. Dans le sanctuaire. - Lukasiak 20-22 fig. 10; Seyrig, H./Amy, R./Will, E., Le temple de Bel à Palmyre (1975) 85. 239 pl. 39; Album pl. 100; Drijvers 10. 21 pl. 3, 1. - Vers 32 ap. J.-C. - Trois divinités alignées: sans doute Aglibol à g., Beltis à dr., et au centre I. (tête radiale, cuirasse, manteau, chaussures montantes), appuyé de la main dr. sur un sceptre, tenant un glaive de la g.

22. Relief fr. Palmyre, Mus. B 2304. De Palmyre, temple d'Allath. - Drijvers, H. J. W., AntW 7, 1976, 35-36 fig. 9; Palmyra. Geschichte, Kunst und Kultur der syrischen Oasenstadt, cat. exp. (1987) n° 32. - II^e s. ap. J.-C. - Deux dieux cuirassés, celui de g. casqué et vêtu d'une tunique à manches longues et d'un pantalon parthe, un carquois dans le dos, celui de dr. (tête disparue) chaussé de bottes et appuyé sur une lance, sont debout à côté d'un dromadaire. L'un d'eux, d'après l'inscr., serait I.

COMMENTAIRE

A l'exception de la tessère 3 où cependant le dieu est formellement identifié par une inscription, la totalité des documents montre le visage de I. auréolé de rayons qui le caractérisent comme l'une des grandes divinités solaires de Palmyre. Sur le relief de Doura I. porte non seulement le nimbe radié mais le croissant de lune aux épaules, ce qui l'a fait parfois confondre - malgré l'inscription qui le nomme expressément - avec le dieu lunaire Aglibol; peut-être ne faut-il voir dans ce croissant qu'un «vague symbole céleste» (du Mesnil du Buisson, R., Tessères et monnaies de Palmyre [1962] 212), à moins qu'il ne soit la «trace d'une ancienne nature lunaire» (Seyrig, H., Syria 48, 1971, 92 n. 3) que reflèterait aussi le nom même du dieu.

Toujours debout, vêtu du costume militaire, I. s'appuie généralement de la main dr. sur une lance - parfois sur un sceptre (4. 6-7. 12. 14. 21) -, la main g. reposant sur la poignée d'un glaive suspendu à son côté g. (sauf sur 19, où elle tient un globe). Seul le relief 20 montre le dieu - toujours radié - vêtu à la grecque d'une tunique et d'un manteau, une palme à la main. C'est là probablement, comme l'a montré Seyrig (Syria 47, 1970, 107-109), un trait d'archaïsme: ce relief, qui fut découvert dans les fondations du temple de Bel, remonte vraisemblablement au I^{er} s. av. J.-C.; or la cuirasse ne devient vraiment le vêtement habituel des dieux de Palmyre qu'après le début de notre ère. Cet attirail guerrier ne signifie d'ailleurs nullement que I. fût un dieu de nature guerrière; il s'explique plutôt, comme pour les autres dieux armés de Palmyre, par les origines arabes de ses adorateurs (→ Ares [in peripheria or.], commentaire).

Ce type du dieu armé et radié, loin de caractériser exclusivement l'iconographie de I., est utilisé indifféremment pour les trois divinités du Soleil adorées à Palmyre: Shamash (→ Helios [in peripheria or.]), → Malakbel et I. Aussi, sur les images anépigraphes, I. n'est-il identifiable que grâce à son association à d'autres divinités et, en tout premier lieu, grâce à son appartenance à la triade de Bel. Cette triade apparaît pour la première fois en 32 ap. J.-C., dans l'inscription commémorative de la dédicace du temple de Bel; ses images, toutes plus récentes, s'échelonnent du I^{er} s. (12) au III^e s. ap. J.-C. (16). Parfois figurée seule (6-10), la triade est le plus souvent accompagnée d'autres divinités (11-18) et, dans un cas (15), Bel et → Baalshamin, chef de l'autre grande triade palmyrénienne, apparaissent conjointement, flanqués de I. et d'Aglibol. Que la triade de Bel apparaisse seule ou accompagnée d'autres divinités, I. occupe invariablement la place d'honneur, à la dr. de Bel, et cette hiérarchie est respectée aussi bien dans l'iconographie que dans l'épigraphie.

Quelques images, peinture (19) ou reliefs (20-22), associent à I. un certain nombre de divinités autres que ses compagnons habituels - encore qu'Aglibol au moins soit présent sur 19 et 21 - sans que rien permette vraiment d'expliquer les circonstances de ces rencontres. L'association de I. et du chameau sur 22, unique à ce jour, montre en tout cas clairement que I., comme tant d'autres divinités palmyrénienes, avait aussi pour fonction de protéger les caravanes.

PASCALE LINANT DE BELLEFONDS

IASEUS

(Iaseus) Phocidien, ami de → Phokos fils d'Éaque. (→ Aiakos) avec lequel il s'allia lors de la conquête de la Phocide (Paus. 10, 30, 4).

BIBLIOGRAPHIE: Conticello, B., EAA IV (1961) 68 s. v. «Iaseus»; Stoll, H. W., ML II 1 (1890-94) 59 s. v. «Iaseus».

1. Peinture murale (disparue) représentant la Nekyia, œuvre de Polygnote de Thasos. Delphes, Lesché des Cnidiens. - Robert, C., Die Nekyia des Polygnot, 16. HallWPr (1892) 14. 66. 82; Weizsäcker, P., Polygnots Gemälde in der Lesche der Knidier in Delphi (1895) 56; Felten, W., Attische Unterweltdarstellungen des 6. und 5. Jh. v. Chr. (1975) 76; Papachatzis, Paus. Boiotika, Phokika (1981) 409-410 n. 2; Kebric, R. B., The Paintings in the Cnidian Lesche at Delphi and their Historical Context (1983) 29. - 2^e quart du V^e s. av. J.-C. - Non loin d'Achille et de Patrocle étaient figurés Phokos en jeune homme et I., sans doute barbu. Ce dernier était en train de retirer de la main g. de Phokos une bague. Pausanias voit dans ce geste l'illustration de la forte amitié qui lia le héros éponyme de la Phocide, venu d'Égine, à I., le Phocidien indigène. I. aurait en effet donné à son ami plusieurs cadeaux, en particulier une bague en or munie d'un sceau. De retour dans son Égine natale, Phokos mourra sous les coups de Pélée (→ Peleus) peut-être avec l'aide de → Telamon.

La scène 1, qui se trouvait au centre de la Nekyia, est la seule représentation connue d'I. Elle pose quelques problèmes d'interprétation. En effet l'identité d'I. n'est pas claire, Pausanias étant la seule source littéraire à le mentionner. On a tenté de l'identifier à Iasos, fils de → Triopas le fondateur de Cnide: Polygnote aurait alors voulu illustrer l'amitié qui liait Phocidiens et Cnidiens et dont la Lesché était le témoignage (Robert 82; Papachatzis 410 n. 2). En revanche, peu d'arguments militent en faveur de l'identification avec Deioneus (ou Deion), qui donne sa fille en mariage à Phokos (Weniger, L., ML III 2 [1902-09] 2415 s. v. «Phokos»).

Quant à l'aspect physique et à l'attitude d'I. sur la peinture de Polygnote, tous deux dépendent de la lecture du passage où Pausanias le décrit. Pour la plupart des philologues, I. est bien barbu: Iaseús yevélon (ἐς ἐγγένειαν codd.) ὄδῃ (ou μὲν, ou δέ) εἰς ἔχει (Schubart/Walz, Hitzig/Blümner, Spiro, Jones, Rocha-Pereira et d'autres), alors que pour C. Robert il tient une branche d'olivier: Iaseús élatav μὲν ἀνέχων. Les traductions se fondent sur la lecture usuelle (Frazer, Jones, Meyer, Papachatzis).

JEAN-ROBERT GISLER

IASILE → Echelos

IASION

(Iasion, Iasion, Iasos, Iasion, Iasius) Heros der Urzeit nach der Deukalionischen Flut, Geliebter der → Demeter, Vater des → Ploutos, von → Zeus mit dem Blitz getötet.

LITERARISCHE QUELLEN (Auswahl): Das Schicksal des I. ist bereits Hom. Od. 5, 125-128 bekannt. Er stirbt den Blitztod, da die Liebe einer Göttin zu einem Sterblichen gegen die Regeln des homerischen Olymp ist. Bei Hes. theog. 969-971 spielt die Liebe des Paares und die Geburt des Ploutos auf Kreta, der Tod des I. wird nicht erwähnt. Jene Geburt war eines der Geheimnisse der Eleusinischen Mysterien. - I. war auch mit einem anderen Mysterienkult, dem von Samothrake, verbunden, wo er als Bruder des → Dardanos mit Betion (→ Aetion) identifiziert war: Quellen s. → Aetion. Da er sich in dieser Version gegen Demeter verging, soll ihn Zeus mit dem Blitz getötet haben: Apollod. bibl. 3, 138; Strabon 7 frg. 50 Jones. Die gelegentliche Gleichsetzung der Demeter mit → Kybele brachte I. ferner mit jener kleinasiatischen Göttin in Verbindung. Sie gebar ihm den Korybas; mit diesem und Dardanos zog sie nach Phrygien, während I. in dieser dritten Version unter die Götter versetzt wurde: Diod. 5, 49. - I. galt in Samothrake als Sohn des Zeus, während Homer und Hesiod keine Genealogie des I. bringen. Seine Mutter war dort die

Atlastochter → Elektra (III). - Nach der vergilischen Version stammten die Brüder Dardanos und Iasius ursprünglich aus Italien (Aen. 3, 166-171 mit Serv. z. Stelle), weshalb Aeneas dorthin zurückkehren sollte. - I., mit dem sich Demeter auf dem dreimal gepflügten Feld (Homer, Hesiod) vereinte, wird in der Forschung richtig als mit dem Ackerbau nah verbunden angesehen. Er allein soll nach der Deukalionischen Flut Getreide zur Aussaat besessen haben: Hellan., FGH 4 F 135. Da der Ackerbau weit über die Bronzezeit ins Neolithikum zurückreicht, dürfte I. weniger minoisch-mykenisch als pelagisch oder karisch sein. Mit Pelasgern und Karern bezeichneten die Griechen die Vorbevölkerung ihres Landes. Der Name Iasos begegnet sowohl in der «pelagischen» Argolis (REIX 1, 784 s. v. «Iasos») als auch an der karischen Küste Kleinasien, dort als Ortsname (→ Iasos). - Der Ritus der «Heiligen Hochzeit», um die Fruchtbarkeit zu fördern, der sich im Demeter-I.-Mythos spiegelt, dürfte zu den ältesten Riten der Ägäis gehören. Die Vorbevölkerung konnte ihr uraltes Glaubensgut in den Mysterien von Eleusis und Samothrake «retten», in denen es bis in die Spätantike tradiert wurde. An beiden Orten war I. zugegen. So ist es wohl kein Zufall, daß eines der geheimnisvollsten Gemälde der Renaissance, Giorgiones Tempesta, nach einer ansprechenden neuen Deutung den Mythos von Demeter und Iasion zum Inhalt hat.

BIBLIOGRAPHIE: Büttner, F., «Die Geburt des Reichtums und der Neid der Götter. Neue Überlegungen zu Giorgiones Tempesta», MJBK 3, Folge 37, 1986, 113-130; Burkert, GrRel 177; v. Geisau, H., KlPauly II (1975) 1321-1322 s. v. «Iasion»; Gundel, W., REIX 1 (1901) 752-758 s. v. «Iasion»; Nilsson, GrRel 1 121. 299. 318; Rocca, R., EncVirg II (1985) 886 s. v. «Iasio»; Seeliger, K., ML II 1 (1890-94) 59-63 s. v. «Iasion».

KATALOG

1.* Kelchkrater, fr., att. rf. Leningrad, Ermitage 1889.1. - Metzger, Recherches 7-8 Nr. 1 Taf. 1, 1; Schefold, SB III 64-65 Abb. 79. - Um 390 v. Chr. - Die Figuren waren locker über freies Gelände verteilt, in dem Lorbeerbäumchen wuchsen. In der Mitte ist ein junger Mann in Barbarentracht bis zur Hüfte erhalten. Er streckt entsetzt beide Arme empor und blickt nach l. oben. Über seinem mit einer «Phrygermütze» bedeckten Kopf steht die Inschrift ΙΑΞΕΟΣ, die überzeugend als I. erklärt wurde. Eine kleiner gemalte geflügelte Göttin taucht dahinter mit einem Gespann auf - ein Pferdehals ist sichtbar. Sie hält mit beiden Händen die Zügel, r. auch das Kentron. I. wird aus der Höhe, wohin er blickt, bedroht. Zeus, der mit dem Blitz auf I. zielt, ist dort zu ergänzen. Die nach l. gewandte Flügelfrau ist wohl dessen Wagenlenkerin → Nike. R. sitzt ein bärtiger Gott mit haariger Brust, an dessen l. Schulter sich jemand lehnte (Ellbogen erhalten). Überzeugend wurden Poseidon und Amphitrite vorgeschlagen. Als Schauplatz kommen die Inseln Kreta oder Samothrake in Frage; in beiden Fällen ist der Meeresgott sinnvoll. In der Entstehungszeit des Kraters ist Samothrake vorzuziehen, da der Export Athens damals begann, sich zum Schwarzen Meer hin zu orientieren. – Außerdem paßt die Tracht des I. besser zum Bruder des «Troers» Dardanos als zu einem Kreter. Ferner weist das Bildschema der Bestrafung eher nach Samothrake als nach Kreta: Während nämlich die Schönheit des kretischen I. die Liebe der Demeter hervorrief, begehrte der samothrakische I. die Göttin von sich aus und wurde deshalb von Zeus getötet. Seine Barbarentracht weist auf die frühen Siedler auf der Insel hin, die nach der Überlieferung Karer waren. Sie führt also weniger in örtliche als in zeitliche Ferne.

DEUTUNG AUF IASION HYPOTHETISCH

2. (= Aphrodite 1367*, = Demeter 390* mit Lit., = Herakles 1406 mit Lit.) Bauchamphora Typus B, att. rf. Kos, Mus. – Schwarz, G., Triptolemos (1987) 52 V 125; 145–146 Taf. 16, 28. – Um 390 v. Chr. – Die Form dieser Amphora wurde damals schon fast ein Jahrhundert lang nur noch vereinzelt hergestellt. Sie muß extrem altertümlich gewirkt haben. Vielleicht wurde sie auf Bestellung gearbeitet. Das mag auch für das Bildthema gelten, das sehr umstritten ist. Bisher liegen keine Aufnahmen der übrigen Seiten vor und keine Beschreibungen, so daß sich die Darstellung nicht vollständig erfassen läßt. Sicherheit besteht in der Deutung des Triptolemos auf dem Schlangenzug mit geflügelten Rädern. Ihm sind die beiden Eleusinierinnen zugewandt, unten Kore mit zwei Fackeln, darüber Demeter mit dem Zepter (nicht, wie → Aphrodite 1367, die Liebesgöttin). Demeter blickt auf einen Jüngling mit Keule, zwischen beiden schwebt Eros. Er drückt eine Liebesbeziehung zwischen dem Paar aus. Da diese weder zwischen Herakles (→ Herakles 1406) und Demeter noch zwischen Aphrodite und Herakles bestand, möchte ich meine frühere Deutung auf Iasion aufrecht erhalten. Die Keule kann Attribut eines Jägers sein, nicht nur des Herakles, und der Kreter I. ist auch als Jäger überliefert (Ov. am. 3, 25–26).

KOMMENTAR

Die beiden nahezu gleichzeitigen Vasenbilder 1 und 2 sind die bisher einzigen Bildzeugnisse für I., wobei 2 nicht einmal sicher ist. So beliebt der Knabe Ploutos in der eleusinischen Kunst auch war (→ Eirene), sein Vater tritt äußerst selten auf. Wenn die Deutung von 2 stimmt, so hätten wir I. in der attischen Malerei des frühen 4. Jh. in zwei verschiedenen Gestalten: in Barbarentracht, wobei nur eine aus der «Phrygermütze» hervorschauende Lockensträhne die Schönheit des jungen Mannes andeutet, und in «idealer» Nacktheit. Während die gesicherte Darstellung 1 nach dem oben Ausgeführten nach Samothrake weist, gehört die Bauchamphora 2 zum Kreis von Eleusis. Sie zeigt den kretischen I. als griechischen Heros, während der samothrakische I. in «karischem» Gewand auftritt.

ERIKA SIMON

IASIOS

(Ἰάσιος) Arkader, wohl aus Tegea, mythischer Olympionike zur Zeit des Herakles.

LITERARISCHE QUELLEN: Paus. 5, 8, 4; 8, 48, 1. BIBLIOGRAPHIE: Stoll, H. W., ML II 1 (1890–94) s. v. «Iasos, auch Iasios, 3»; Weicker, G., RE IX 1 (1914) 783 s. v. «Iasos 2».

1. Reliefstele (wohl aus Stein) auf der Agora von Tegea, nicht erhalten. – Paus. 8, 48, 1. – Nicht datiert. – Dargestellt war nach Paus. I., «der ein Pferd hält und in der r. Hand einen Palmzweig trägt; I. soll mit dem Pferd in Olympia gesiegt haben, als der Thebaner Herakles die Olympien veranstaltete» (Übers. E. Meyer). I. ist mit dem von Paus. 5, 8, 4 genannten Arkader I. identisch, wo die von Herakles veranstalteten olympischen Spiele referiert werden.

Der Name kommt in der Mythologie der Peloponnes mehrfach vor, so auch in Arkadien (Iasos oder Iasios, Enkel des → Aleos und Vater der → Atalante). Paus. fand aber offenbar keine Angaben vor, die ihm erlaubt hätten, den I. der Stele näher zu bestimmen. (Durch die Präzisierung, daß mit Herakles der Thebaner gemeint sei, hat jedoch Paus. I. von dem idäischen Daktylen Iasios/Iasos, Bruder des idäischen Herakles und Teilnehmer noch früherer Spiele [Paus. 5, 7, 6; 5, 14, 7], geschieden.) Nach Papachatzis, Paus. Achaika, Arkadika 395 Anm. 4 hätten «die Tegeaten in vorge-rückter historischer Zeit einen alten Olympioniken geehrt und seinen Sieg vordatiert, um den Ruhm ihrer Stadt bis in mythische Zeiten auszudehnen».

Das Relief muß zur Gattung der Heroenreliefs mit Heros und Pferd gehört haben (Langenfaß-Vuduroglu, F., Mensch und Pferd auf griech. Grab- und Votivstelen [1973] 67–101). Zur Ehrung lebender (oder verstorbener) Olympioniken in ihrer Heimatpolis sind hingegen nur Statuen (seltener bloße Inschriften, Gemälde oder sogar ein Heiligtum), nicht aber Reliefs bezeugt (Hyde, W. H., Olympic Victor Monuments [1921] 361–374; Moretti, L., Olympionikai, MemLinc 8, 8, 2 [1957] und Klio 52, 1970, 295–303). Beispiele für den anzunehmenden Bildtypus s. Langenfaß a. O. passim; Moore, M., GettyMusJ 2, 1975, 37–50; Parthenon-Westfries. Für den Palmzweig als Siegespreis sind vorkaiserzeitliche Zeugnisse spärlich: Panathenäische Amphoren des 4. Jh. v. Chr.; Gemälde des Eupompos, 4. Jh. v. Chr., Plin. nat. 35, 75; sie verbieten aber die Annahme (RE XX 1, 401–402 s. v. «Phoinix 1»), daß er in Griechenland überhaupt erst kaiserzeitlich sei.

PIERRE MÜLLER

IASO I → Asklepios 59. 87. 204. 248. 294? p. 892, → Asklepios (in Thracia) 22, → Epione I. 2. 5? 7. 10, → Hygieia 138? 238.

IASO II → Hippodameia I 1

IASION

(Ἰάσων, Ἰήσων, Ἰάσων [7. 39]; Easun, Eiasun, Heasun, Heiasun, Hiasun; Iason) Leader of the Argonauts (→ Argonautai). Son of Aison, deposed king of Iolkos. Ordered by → Pelias to obtain the golden fleece from → Aietes, king of Kolchis. Aided by and subsequently married to Aietes' daughter → Medea. Later wed to the daughter of king → Kreon (II) of Corinth, → Kreusa (II), who is killed by Medea's treachery. I. is also a participant in the Calydonian boar hunt (→ Meleagros) and the funeral games for Pelias (→ Pelion athla).

LITERARY SOURCES: Homer mentions in the Il. I. and → Hypsipyle's (I) son → Euneos of Lemnos (see below), and in Od. 12, 70, he calls the ship Argo «well known to all» but has little to say regarding its leader I., other than the fact that he enjoys Hera's protection (Od. 12, 72). Hesiod (ehoiai frg. 40 [cf. 38–39] Merkelbach/West) states that I. is the son of Aison (a descendant of Aiolos), but was raised by the centaur → Cheiron on Mt. Pelion. The centaur is said to have been the first to name the boy I. (Pind. P. 4, 119). The name of I.'s mother varies: Alkimede, daughter of Phylakos and Klymene, one of Minyas' daughters (Apoll. Rhod. 1, 233); Polymede, the daughter of Autolykos (Schol. Hom. Od. 12, 69; Apollod. bibl. 1, 9, 16); Amphinome (Diod. 4, 50, 2). Of the childhood of I., which was spent with Chiron and his female relatives, nothing is known. Accounts of his arrival in Iolkos at the age of twenty to claim the kingship for his deposed father and his subsequent expedition to obtain the golden fleece are recorded by Pindar in his 4th Pythian ode (462 B. C.), Apoll. Rhod. in his epic Argonautika (3rd cent. B. C.), Diod. (4, 40–55) and Apollod. (bibl. 1, 9, 16–28) as well as in an early lost epic, Naupactia (Davies EGF pp. 145 ff.; Bernabé PEG pp. 123 ff.). Note also Eumelos' Corinthiaca (Davies EGF pp. 96 ff.). Pind. (P. 4, 78 ff.) describes I. as having long hair, carrying two spears, and wearing a Magnesian tunic, panther skin and a sandal on his right foot only (μονοκρήπις 4, 75). According to Apoll. Rhod. (1, 9–11 and 3, 66–73) I. lost his other sandal while carrying an old woman, Hera in disguise, across the swollen river Anauros. Pelias, who had usurped the throne of Iolkos from I.'s father, recognizes in this the fulfillment of an oracle that a single-sandaled man will be his undoing. Therefore, he orders I. to bring back the fleece of the ram that had carried Phrixos to Kolchis on the eastern shore of the Black Sea and which now hangs in a grove of Ares, guarded by a serpent. In order to carry out this charge, I. commissions → Argos (III) to build a ship, to which Athena attaches timber from the speaking oak of Dodona, and assembles a crew of Greek heroes (→ Argonautai). During the voyage I. and his companions have various encounters: with women on the island of Lemnos, then ruled by the queen → Hypsipyle (I), who bears I. two sons (Euneos, mentioned already by Hom. Il. 7, 468–471; 21, 41; 23, 747, and Nebrophonos or Thoas [→ Euneos et Thoas]); with the Doliones whom they mistakenly fight at night; at Mysia where Herakles' lover → Hylas is seized by nymphs causing Herakles to be left behind; at the land of the Bebrykes where Polydeukes (→ Dioskouroi) boxes with king → Amykos; with the blind seer → Phineus from whose Bithynian home the Boreads (→ Boreadae) chase the Harpies; with the Symplegades or «Crashing Rocks» first mentioned (as Planktai, «Wandering Rocks») by Hom. Od. 12, 61–72. Upon arrival in Kolchis, king → Aietes promises I. the fleece if he can yoke two brazen-footed fire-breathing bulls, plow a furrow, and reap the harvest from the sown dragon's teeth. With the aid of magic ointment provided by the king's daughter Medea, whom Aphrodite has caused to fall passionately in love with the hero, I. succeeds in these tasks, but is nonetheless thwarted by the king from obtaining his prize. So, under cover of night, I. and Medea go stealthily to the sacred grove, and after Medea drugs the snake, I. seizes the fleece. They flee Kolchis in the Argo, pursued by Aietes. In order to delay her father, Medea murders her brother → Apsyrtos and drops pieces of his body in the sea, which Aietes stops to collect (recounted in Soph.' lost play Colchian Women, TyGFIV F 343). Zeus, in the form of the talking timber, decrees that they must travel to Ausonia to be purified of the murder by → Kirke, Medea's aunt. From there they have various adventures similar to those recounted in the Odyssey (Sirens, Charybdis and Skylla, cattle of Helios). On the island of the Phaiacians, the marriage of I. and Medea is consummated. In Africa, they are forced to carry the ship across the Libyan desert, and on Crete, they encounter the bronze giant → Talos (I), whom Medea kills with her magic. After the Argo's return to Iolkos, I. participates in the Calydonian boar hunt (Ov. met. 8, 302; Apollod. bibl. 1, 8, 2) (→ Meleagros).

Various accounts are given of how Medea practised her arts of rejuvenation in Iolkos. According to Simonides (Page PMG frg. 548) I. was «made young» by his wife through boiling. She rejuvenates Aison at the request of I. in the cyclic epic Nostoi (Davies EGF frg. 6) and in Ov. met. 7, 164–293. Many sources describe her transformation of a ram into a lamb in order to dupe the daughters of Pelias (→ Peliades) into murdering their father. As a result of this episode I. and Medea leave Thessaly and settle in Corinth.

After ten years of married life in Corinth, I. grows weary of Medea and transfers his affections to Kreusa (or Glauke), daughter of King Kreon. In Eur. Medea, I. claims he is marrying Kreusa in order to improve his economic position. The tragedy relates how Medea, in her jealous rage, destroys both Kreusa and her father by means of a poisoned robe. Medea then kills her and I.'s two sons, Mermeros and Pheros (Paus. 2, 3, 6; Apollod. bibl. 1, 9, 28), and flees to Athens in a snake-drawn chariot.

I.'s end is described in two ways. In the Medea of Euripides (1386) Medea foretells that a plank of wood from the rotting Argo will fall and kill him. Diod. 4, 55, 1 states that in despair over the deaths of his new bride and sons, I. commits suicide.

In the literary sources the image of I. undergoes a transformation. Homer and Hesiod apply the common epithet «shepherd of the people» to him, but are otherwise not descriptive. Pindar's I. is a hero of strength and valor, whose physical appearance is compared to that of Apollo and Ares. In Euripides' Medea I. is portrayed as an impious oath-breaker and a self-promoting hustler (cf. Burnett, A., Classical Philology 68, 1973, 1-24). Apoll. Rhod. presents I. as an anti-hero, one who is frequently described as «amechanos» or helpless. The key ingredients to his success are charm, the power of love, intelligence and treachery (see Lawall, G., «Apollonius' Argonautica: Jason as Anti-Hero», YaleClSt 19, 1966, 121-169; and Beye, C. R., «Jason as Love-hero in Apollonius' Argonautika», GRBS 10, 1969, 31-55).

The Roman writers such as Ovid (met. 7, 1-403), Seneca (Medea), Hyginus (fab. 12-24), and Valerius Flaccus (Argonautica), draw on earlier Greek sources.

BIBLIOGRAPHY: Braswell, B. K., A Comm. on the 4th Pythian Ode of Pindar (1988) 6-23; Brommer, Denkmälerlisten 168-171; idem, Vasenlisten 490-495; Croisille, J. M., Poésie et art figuré de Néron aux Flaviens (1982) 28-77 pls. 1-23; v. Freytag gen. Lörringhoff, B./de Simone, C., «Argonautika», in Praestant Interna, Festschr. U. Hausmann (1982) 271-279; Heydemann, H., Jason in Kolchis, 11. HallWPr (1886); Jessen, O., RE IX 1 (1914) 759-771 s. v. «Iason»; King, C., «Who is that Cloaked Man? Observations on Early Fifth Cent. B. C. Pictures of the Golden Fleece», AJA 87, 1983, 385-387; Koch/Sichtermann, RömSark 153-154; Künzl, E., BonnJbb 169, 1969, 321-392; Meuli, K., Odyssee und Argonautika (1921) (= Gesammelte Schr. II [1975] 593 ff.); Meyer, H., Medeia und die Peliden (1980); Moustaka, A., Kulte und Mythen auf Thessalischen Münzen (1983) 69-70, 74-76; Page, D. L., ed., Euripides Medea (1938) lvii-lxv; Radermacher, L., Mythos und Sage bei den Griechen (1938) 157-237; Richter, G. M. A., BullMMA 30, 1935, 86-88; Richter, G. M. A., AJA 39, 1935, 182-184; Robert, C., SarkRel II; Schmidt, M., Der Basler Medeasarkophag (1968); Seeliger, K., ML II 1 (1890-94) 63-88 s. v. «Iason»; Sichtermann/Koch, Myth-Sark 36-37; Simon, E., «Die Typen der Medeadarstellung in der antiken Kunst», Gymnasium 61, 1954, 203-227; de Simone, Entlehnungen I 52-53; Vojatzi, M., Frühe Argonautenbilder (1982).

CATALOGUE

A. Head of Jason/sandal of Jason

Thessalian coins

1.* AR triobol, Larissa, around 470 B. C. - Moustaka no. 172 pl. 4; Kraay, ArClCoins no. 374; Hermann, F., ZfN 35, 1925, pl. I 6; Babelon, Traité no. 643 pl. 296, 1. - Obv.: head of Jason, unbearded, wearing petasos. Rev.: sandal of Jason.

B. Jason's arrival in Iolkos

GREEK

2.* Calyx-krater fr., Apul. rf. Würzburg, Martin von Wagner-Mus. H 4696 + 4701. From Taranto. - Bulle, H., Eine Skenographie, 94. BerWPr (1934) 11 ff. fig. 1 pl. 1f; Trendall/Webster, Illustrations III 3, 43; Simon, E./Otto, B., AA 1973, 121-131; Simon, FührerWurz 226-227 pl. 50; Konnakis Group [Trendall]; Meyer 129 pl. 28, 1. - About 360-50 B. C. - A half-draped youth wearing a pilos leans on a staff before an old man who is in the act of pouring from a phiale; at l. a woman peers from an open doorway. The Ionic building in the background indicates a stage setting, and certainly another woman in a similar doorway at the far r. for purposes of symmetry. Webster followed by Meyer (129) relates this sherd to Euripides' Stheneboia, but Bulle and Simon have demonstrated that it should be seen as a representation of I.'s arrival in Iolkos while king Pelias is sacrificing to Poseidon.

ROMAN

Wall-painting

3.* Naples, Mus. Naz. 111436. From Pompeii IX 5, 18 (Casa di Giasone [d]). - HBr pl. 75; Scheffold, K., Pompejanische Malerei (1952) pl. 15; Scheffold, WP 263; Ragghianti, L., Pittori di Pompeii (1963) 71-72; Maestro Chiaro. - About A. D. 10. - I. at lower r., wearing a sandal on the r. foot only and a chlamys, stands before an offering table; above at center is Pelias flanked by his two daughters; at lower l. a bull is being led in to sacrifice.

4.* Pompeii VI 16, 7 (Casa degli Amorini Dorati [G]). - HBr pl. 76; Scheffold, WP 154; Curtius, L., Die Wandmalerei Pompejis (1929) fig. 141. - Early 3rd style (Scheffold). - Replica of 3 above; upper portion missing.

C. Jason and the Argo

ETRUSCAN

Gems

5. (= Argonautai 3* with bibl.) Carnelian scarab. London, BM 669 (ex Castellani). - Zazoff, EtrSK 77 no. 120 pl. 26; de Simone, Entlehnungen I 52 (1). - Mid 6th cent. B. C. (Zazoff). - I. (Easun), with chlamys draped over l. arm and petasos over back, standing before stern of the Argo.

6. (= Argonautai 4* with bibl.) Carnelian scarab. Männedorf (Switzerland), Bollmann Coll. (ex Tyszkiewicz; ex Lord Southesk A 11; ex Harari). - Mid 4th cent. B. C. - I., with chlamys over l. arm and holding a spear, before the stern of the Argo.

D. Jason and the Argonauts

a) Healing of Phineus

GREEK

7.* Column-krater fr., Corinthian. Thessaloniki, priv. coll. From Sane, Chalkidike. - Vojatzi 71-87 B 39 pls. 6-10: Near the Cavalcade P. - About 575 B. C. - HIAZON, nude and bearded with a sword hanging at his l. side, holds his hands before the eyes of an enthroned Phineus who greets Castor and Polydeukes. According to Vojatzi, I. is healing Phineus' blindness, an episode not recorded in the extant literature (cf. Apoll. Rhod. 2, 441-2).

b) Punishment of Amykos

GREEK

8. (= Amykos 11 with bibl., = Argonautai 9, = Boreadai 19* with bibl.) Hydria, early Luc. rf. Paris, Cab. Méd. 442. - Trendall, LCS 36, 136 pl. 12, 1-2: Amykos P.; Trendall, Fiv pl. 5; BollArte 43, 1958, 196 fig. 4. - Around 420/400 B. C. - I. is identified as the bearded, nude male with two spears standing before the stern of the Argo. Cf. Howe, T. P., «Sophocles, Mikon and the Argonauts», AJA 61, 1957, 342.

PRAENESTINE

9. (= Amykos 5 with bibl., = Athena/Menerva 179*, = Argonautai 10, = Boreadai 43 with further refs.) Bronze cista (Cista Ficoroni). Rome, Villa Giulia 24787. From Palestrina. - Dohrn, T., Die Ficoronische Ciste in der Villa Giulia (1972) passim. - Around 330 B. C. - According to Simon (Gymnasium 80, 1973, 404-411), I. can be identified as the bearded man with spear seen from the back who is standing to l. of the Argo.

E. Jason and Medea

GREEK

10. (= Aphrodite 1409) Chest of Kypselos, Corinthian votive offering at Olympia. - Paus. 5, 18, 3; v. Massow, W., AM 41, 1916, 65-66; Simon, E., EAAIV (1961) 431 s. v. «Kypselos, arca di»; Scheffold, Sagenbilder 68 fig. 26. - 1st half of 6th cent. B. C. - Medea enthroned between I. and Aphrodite. The inscription reads, «Aphrodite commands: Jason marries Medea.»

11. Bell-krater, fr., Attic rf. Gela, Arch. Mus. From Gela. - RVAp I 37: later work of the Dinos P.; King 386 n. 17. - About 420-410 B. C. - Stern of Argo at l. with three Argonauts, beardless and wearing garlands; Athena in center; Aietes, white-haired and bearded, enthroned at r. with Medea standing behind. I. is probably the youth near the ship's ladder who carries two spears and is wearing a petasos, chlamys and sword.

12. (= Boreadai 24 with bibl.) Volute-krater, Apul. rf. Berlin (DDR), Staatl. Mus. F 3258. From Ceglie. - RVAp II 533: near the Underworld P.; Gerhard, ApVb pls. 8-10. - About 360 B. C. - Side B, neck: I., with chlamys, sword and spear, standing before a seated Medea, flanked by the Boreads and another Argonaut.

13. Hydria, rf. Once Naples, art market. - Heydemann fig. 2; Brommer, Vasenlisten 492, D 3. - 4th cent. B. C. - I. wearing a chlamys and petasos and holding a spear (with a shield resting on the ground behind), facing a seated Medea who opens a large box; another Argonaut is to the r.

F. Jason and Dionysos

ETRUSCAN

14. (= Aminth 1* with bibl., = Ariadne/Ariatha [LIMCIII] 37, = Dionysos/Fufluns 84, = Dioskouroi/Tinas Cliniar 91, = Eros [in Etruria] 1) Bronze hand-mirror. Florence, Mus. Arch. 615. From Bolsena. - Gerhard, EtrSp V 110-111 pl. 88, 2; de Simone, Entlehnungen I 53 (4). - 2nd cent. B. C. - I. (Eiasun), seated on the ground and wearing a chlamys, embraces the l. knee of Fufluns in the presence of Castur and Ariadne (Aratha). Behind I. is a statue of Eros (Aminth) holding a phiale and oinochoe. A unique representation of a legend recorded in Dracontius (10, 180-339) in which I. prays to Amor to cause Medea to fall in love with him, after which Dionysos persuades Aietes to unite the lovers.

G. Jason and the bulls

GREEK

15. Coins. AR drachma, Larissa (Thessaly). - Moustaka no. 190 pl. 4; MuM List 164 Jan. 1957 no. 11; Babelon, Traité no. 659 pl. 296, 16. - About 440 B. C. - Obv. Youth wearing petasos and mantle grappling a bull by the horns. The bull-wrestler on Thessalian coins is usually taken to be Thessalos, the eponymous ancestor of Thessaly, but Moustaka (74-76) argues in favor of I.

16. Bell-krater, Apul. rf. Naples, Nat. Mus. 81415 (H 2413). - RVAp I 101, 262: Context of the Eumenides Group; Heydemann pl. no. 1; Cambitoglou/Trendall, APS 23 pl. 6 figs. 25-26. - About 370 B. C. - I., kneeling at lower l. with chlamys fluttering behind, grapples the horns of a bull in the presence of Medea and Nike, both of whom hold magic herbs.

17.* (= Eros 909a) Volute-krater, Apul. rf. Naples, Nat. Mus. 82261 (H 3252). From Ruvo. - RVAp II 977, 200 pl. 382, 5-6: connected with the White Saccos Group; AZ 1883, pl. 11; Séchan, Etudes 146-147 fig. 46; Radermacher 204 fig. 11; Borda fig. 37. - About 330-320 B. C. - Lower register: I., nude and kneeling with club in r. hand, grasps bull in presence of Medea and Eros who appear above behind balcony; tree with snake (but no fleece) at r.

ROMAN

18.* Marble cinerary urn fr., Roman. Brunswick, Bowdoin College 1927.20. - AJA 64, 1960, 76-78 pls. 17-18; Herbert, K., Ancient Art in Bowdoin College (1964) 41 no. 99; Sinn, F., Stadtröm. Marmorurnen (1987) no. 556 pl. 84a-b. - 2nd cent. A. D. - R. side: Frontal, nude I. grasping two bulls by the horns; lowered head of bull to l. is held by his r. hand; other bull is rearing to r. but is restrained by I.'s l. hand on its r. horn. Medea in her snake-drawn chariot is on the other side of the urn.

19. (= Hypnos/Somnus 139 with bibl.) Marble sarcophagus. Berlin (DDR), Staatl. Mus. SK 843b. From Rome. - SarkRel II pl. 64, 200, and III 3 p. 562; Schmidt passim pls. 26-28. - 2nd cent. A. D. - Medea sarcophagus with Jason and the bulls on l. end.

20. Marble sarcophagus fr. Once Rome. - SarkRel II 203 no. 191 (modern if identical with ill. 191). - 2nd cent. A. D. - I. grasping two bulls by the horns. Probably part of a series of episodes; cf. below 49-52.

21.* (= Aietes 3) Fr. Once Turin. From Rome. - SarkRel II 201-203 no. 190 pl. 61. - 2nd cent. A. D. -

Extant fragment shows I. holding two bulls by the horns. Coburgensis drawing shows fleece and wedding episodes.

H. Jason and the Dragon

ETRUSCAN

22. Carnelian scarab. Paris, Cab. Méd. 268 (ex Duc de Luynes). - Richter, EngrGemsGE no. 847; Zazoff, EtrSk no. 761. - 4th cent. B.C. - A nude I. (?) is shown before a coiled, segmented serpent, which he grasps with one hand, and with the other is plunging a sword into its neck.

23. Bronze hand-mirror. Rome, Villa Giulia. From Sutri (?). - Colonna, G., StEtr 36, 1968, 253-254 pl. 66a; de Simone, Entlehnungen I 52 (1a); v. Freytag 274 pl. 60, 1. - 2nd half of 4th cent. B.C. - I. (Hiasunu), at l. in short belted chiton and chlamys, plunges a short sword into the mouth of a snake coiled at the r.; with his l. hand he grabs the fleece which is just below the snake.

24. Green glass ringstone. Paris, Cab. Méd. de Luynes 183. - Babelon, E., Cabinet des antiques (1888) pl. 48, no. 12; Richter, EngrGemsGE no. 848. - Late Etruscan. - Helmeted I. (?) with chlamys, shield and spear, stands in front of a tree holding the fleece, around which a serpent is coiled; at foot of tree is an altar with a ram's head.

ROMAN

Gems

25. Carnelian intaglio. Braunschweig, Mus. - AGD III 17 no. 24 pl. 4, cf. 12 no. 8 pl. 2; Zazoff, AG 294 n. 162 pl. 84, 9. - Republican. - Man with chlamys and spear reaches towards a ram's fleece hanging in a tree.

26. Glass paste. Munich, Münzslg. 1404 (A 482). - AGDI 2 no. 1404 pl. 139. - Republican. - I. wearing helmet at tree with fleece.

27. Glass paste. Rome, Villa Giulia. - Zazoff, AG 264 n. 21 pl. 69, 3. - Republican. - I. next to tree with fleece; ram's head on altar below.

28.* Carnelian intaglio. Paris, Cab. Méd. - Babelon, E., Cat. de la Coll. Pauvert de la Chapelle (1899) no. 97; Richter, EngrGemsRom no. 318. - Roman Imperial. - I. with helmet, chlamys, shield and spear, stands before a tree bearing a fleece; below an altar with a ram's head.

Glass

29. (= Argonautai 14*) Relief flask, Sidonian. Houston, Mus. of Fine Arts 70.80. - 1st to 2nd cent. A.D. - A, I. leans over to r. to grasp the fleece; leafy branch above, uneven ground below. B, Argo.

I. Jason disgorged by the Dragon

GREEK

Vases

30.* Alabastron, Corinthian. Bonn, Akad. Kunstmus. 860. - Greifenhagen, A., AA 1936, 349-352 no.

6 figs. 6-7; Jacobsthal, P., Early Celtic Art (1944) I 33 no. 5; II pl. 224a; Vojatzi 89. 118 no. 59 pl. 11, 1. - Last quarter of the 7th cent. B.C. - Upper body of a long-haired bearded man emerging from the mouth of a long, coiled, upright serpent.

31. Aryballos, fr. Corinthian. Samos, Mus. K 3431, 3490 +. From Heraion, Samos. - Kopcke, G., AM 83, 1968, 282 no. 93 fig. 31 pl. 111, 2; Vojatzi, 89, 118 no. 60. - Late 7th cent. B.C. - Man emerging from the mouth of a serpent.

32.* (= Athena 202/549 with bibl.) Kylix, Attic rf. Vatican, Mus. Greg. 16545. From Cerveteri. - ARV² 437, 116; Douris; Add² 239; Radermacher 204 fig. 10; Simon/Hirmer, Vasen pl. 163; Meyer 81 no. III Va 1 pl. 18, 1; Boardman, ARFV fig. 288; v. Freytag 274 pl. 60, 4. - About 480-470 B.C. - I. (IAEON), long-haired and bearded disgorged by a large serpent in the presence of Athena; behind in an apple tree hangs the ram's fleece. Simon (119) believes that I., inspired by Athena, has cut off the dragon's tongue so that he cannot be swallowed by it. Meyer (81) suggests that I. was actually killed by the dragon, and later conjured out of its mouth by Athena.

ETRUSCAN

33.* Sardonyx scarab. Boston, MFA 21.1203 (ex Lewes House 46). - Furtwängler, AG pl. 61, 24; Richter, EngrGemsGE no. 846; Zazoff, EtrSk 169 no. 760; Vojatzi 8. 7. 118 no. 62. - Severe style, about 470-450 B.C. - Helmeted I., with sword in raised r. hand, shield over l. arm, is shown from the abdomen up emerging from the mouth of a coiled serpent.

34.* Bronze simposium handle. Bologna, Mus. Civ. 190. From Bologna. - Ducati, P., RendPontAcc 29, 1920, 57 ff. fig. 3; Meyer 83 III R 3; 89 pl. 19, 1; v. Freytag 276-277 pl. 60, 2. - Early 5th cent. B.C. - Nude I. holding fleece with l. leg in mouth of snake.

35.* Bronze hand-mirror. Berlin (West), Staatl. Mus. 2728 (Fr. 148). - Gerhard, EtrSp III pl. 238; Mansuelli, G., StEtr 19, 1946/47, 19. 51. 101; Maestros di Achille e Pentesilea; de Simone, Entlehnungen I 53 (2); Pfister-Roesgen, G., Die etruskischen Spiegel des 5. Jhs. v. Chr. (1975) 50-51. 140-141 no. S 30 pl. 33; Meyer 83 III 54; 88 pl. 19, 2; Vojatzi 87. 118 no. 63; v. Freytag 276-277 pl. 60, 3. - Early 4th cent. B.C. (Mansuelli); mid-5th cent. B.C. (Meyer). Exergue: I. (Heiasun) holding fleece in l. hand and sword in r. turns back to face the snake who holds I.'s l. leg in its mouth.

J. Jason seizing the fleece with Athena

GREEK

36.* (= Argonautai 12, = Athena 550) Column-krater, Attic rf. New York, MMA 1934.11.7. Said to be from Gela. - ARV² 524, 28; Orchard P.; Add² 254; Richter 1; Richter 2, figs. 1-2; Dugas, C., REG 49, 1936, 225 pl. 3, 2; Radermacher 169 fig. 9; Richter/Hall 118-119 no. 88 pl. 90. pl. 170; Hammond, N. G. L./Moon, W. G., AJA 82, 1978, 377-378 fig. 7; Al-lertown Art Museum, Aspects of Ancient Greece (1979) 88-89 no. 41; Meyer 82 no. III Va 2 pl. 18, 2; King pl. 55, 1; v. Freytag 274 pl. 60, 5. - About 470-460 B.C. - On A, I., nude and bearded, reaches up to l. to pull fleece from a rock around which a snake is entwined; Athena, with aegis, helmet and spear, stands at center, looking and gesturing to l.; draped man stands a r. near stern of ship which is carved in the shape of a female head. The man has been variously identified as an Argonaut (Richter), Aietes, or Zeus (King). An apparent parody of this vase is the Attic rf. column-krater in Bologna (ARV² 524, 27; Orchard P.) where a satyr grabs the fleece in the presence of Dionysos. Richter (1. 2) believes that the scenes on these vases were inspired by dramas of Aeschylus - «the New York vase by one on Jason at Colchis, the Bologna one by a satyric «take-off». Hammond/Moon see the rock on these two vase-paintings as «the rock on the east side of the orchestra (on the spectator's left)». Radermacher, followed by Meyer, believes that the New York vase is also a parody.

K. Jason attacking the Dragon/seizing the fleece with Medea

GREEK

South Italian vases

37.* (= Argonautai 20 with bibl., = Boreadai 20 with further refs.) Volute-krater, Apul. rf. Munich, Antikenslg. 3268. From Ruvo. - RVAp I 16, 51: name-vase of the Sisyphos P.; Radermacher 224 fig. 13; Arias/Shefton/Hirmer pls. 236-237; Trendall, FIV 48 no. 47 pl. 19. - About 415 B.C. - A, below: I. wearing chlamys, petasos and boots, attacks with a drawn sword a snake coiled above the fleece on top of a rock (?); Medea behind him with box in raised l. hand. At the far l. another Argonaut and two Boreads.

38.* Bell-krater, Apul. rf. Turin, priv. coll. - RVAp I 133, 294 pl. 43, 3: name-vase of the Jason P. - About 360 B.C. - I. at l. with chlamys and boots, attacks serpent with sword raised in his r. hand while with his l. hand he grabs the fleece hanging in a tree in center; Medea at r. holds box in her l. hand and extends her r. toward the snake. Behind her on the ground is a large basket.

39. (= Argonautai 21* with bibl., = Boreadai 23 with further refs., = Herakles 2796) Volute-krater, Apul. rf. Leningrad, Hermitage 1718 (St. 422) from Ruvo. - RVAp I 424, 55: close associate of the Lycurgus P.; MonInst V pl. 12. - About 350 B.C. - B, center is dominated by a tall tree holding the fleece and a snake. I. (HIAEON) wearing a chlamys, attacks it from the l. with two spears. Herakles at the r. wields a club. Other Argonauts around and Medea at upper r. with a chest and magic herbs in her r. hand.

40. (= Boreadai 21 with bibl.) Hydria fr., Luc. rf. Paris, Louvre S 4042. - LCS 112, 579; Brooklyn-Budapest P.; Bell, M., Gesta 18, 1979, 48 fig. 7. - About 380-360 B.C. - Snake-entwined tree in center (no fleece); I. approaches from r. with drawn sword, cloak draped around raised l. arm, pilos on head; Medea sits on rock at l. holding a phiale, with a Boread behind.

41.* (= Boreadai 22) Squat lekythos. Paestan rf. Bochum, Univ. S 1080. - RVP 109, 143; 110-111 pl. 62b; Asteas; Schauenburg, K., AA 1981, 487 n. 118. - 4th cent. B.C. - Snake-entwined tree in center with fleece at top; I. (IAEON) at r. dressed in chiton, chlamys, sandals and pilos, holding spear in r. hand, looks passively on while Medea at l. holds r. hand out to mouth of snake.

42.* Volute krater, Paestan rf. Naples, Mus. Naz. 82126 (H 3248). From Paestum. - RVP 344-345, 630 pl. 224c: early Apulianizing. - About 320-310 B.C. - A, snake-entwined tree in center with fleece hanging from a branch. Bearded I. at r., in tunic, chlamys and boots, jabs at the snake with a short sword; Medea at l. holds phiale to serpent's mouth. The beard is unusual in this episode, and may have been influenced by Apulian depictions of the apotheosis of Medea in which I. is usually bearded (cf. 70-74).

ROMAN

43.* Wall-painting. Trier. - v. Massow, W., FuF 20, 1944, 147 fig. 3; Schindler, R., Führer Trier (1980) 76-77 figs. 231-232. - About A.D. 100 (v. Massow). - Snake-entwined tree in center; I., with chlamys over l. arm and sword in l. hand, grasps fleece from tree; Medea seated at l. holds a golden cup to the mouth of the snake.

44. Marble sarcophagus fr. Rome, Mus. Naz. 8647 (coll. Ludovisi). - SarkRel II no. 192 pl. 61; MusNaz-Rom I 5 no. 80. - A.D. 130-160. - Helmeted, nude I., seen in back view, with shield over l. arms, grasps fleece with r. hand while Medea at r. feeds an apple to the snake.

45. (= Argonautai 13*) Limestone relief, Syrian or Egyptian (Coptic). Kansas City, Nelson Gall. 41.36. - Weitzmann, Spirituality no. 214; Bell, o.c. 40, 45-52 figs. 1-2. - 4th to 5th cent. A.D. - I. with chlamys and scabbard in back view reaches toward the fleece set atop an oak tree in the center; Medea enthroned at l. holds a branch of juniper and a conical cup to mouth of serpent; Argo at upper r.

46. Stucco wall relief. Rome, Basilica sotterranea di Porta Maggiore. - Strong, E./Jolliffe, N., JHS 44, 1924, 77-78 fig. 5; Bendinelli, G., MonAnt 31, 1927, 733 fig. 23; Mielsch, Stuckreliefs 118 K 16; Aurigemma, S., La basilica sotterranea neopitagorica di Porta Maggiore in Roma (1961) figs. 16. 36. - 1st cent. A.D. - Tree with fleece and snake in center; diminutive I. kneeling on table at r. holds scabbard in l. hand, sword in r., chlamys draped over shoulder; Medea standing at l. feeds snake from a phiale.

47.* Campana reliefs. a) London, BM D 604; b)* Paris, Louvre 4193. - v. Rohden/Winnefeld, 115-116 figs. 217. 220; Bell, o.c. 40, fig. 5. - 1st cent. A.D. - I. with chlamys over l. arm approaches tree from r. and grasps fleece; Medea seated on stool at l. feeds snake.

48.* Terracotta appliques. Gallo-roman. a)* Lyon, Mus. Arch.; b) Vienne, coll. Bizot. From Ste. Colombe, and Vienne. - Déchelette, J., Les vases céra- miques de la Gaule romaine (1904) 281-282 nos. 81-82; Wuilleumier/Audin, Médaillons no. 28 pl. III; Bémont, C., in MythGrRPér fig. 1, 4. - Mid 1st cent. A.D. - Snake-entwined tree in center; I. (IASON) with chlamys and spear at r., seated Medea feeding snake at l.

L. Jason at Kolchis: multiple episodes

ROMAN

Sarcophagi

49.* (= Aietes 4*, = Homonoia/Concordia 88 with bibl.) Rome, Mus. of the Praetextatus Catacomb. From Rome, Praetextatus Catacomb. - Gütschow, M., MemPontAcc 3. Ser. 4, 2, 1938, 16-28 pls. 1-3; Sichtermann/Koch, MythSark 36-37 no. 31 pls. 70, 71, 74, 2; Schmidt 12 ff. 16 pl. 29; Bell, o.c. 40, 48 fig. 6. - About A.D. 150. - I. grappling bull before Aietes; I. capturing the golden fleece with Medea; wedding of I. and Medea.

50. (= Aietes 5) Vienna, Kunsth. Mus. I 172. From Naples. - SarkRel II 199 no. 188 pl. 61. - 2nd half of 2nd cent. A.D. - I. taming two bulls in the presence of an enthroned Medea.

51. (= Aietes 2*) Paris, Louvre MA 410. From Rome. - SarkRel II 200-201 no. 189 pl. 61. - Antonine. - I. taming the bulls before Aietes seated on a rock; wedding of I. and Medea.

52.* (= 68 [box], = Aietes 6*) Basel, Antikenmus. BS 203. - Schmidt 7-15 pls. 2-9; Koch/Sichtermann, RömSark 159 fig. 181; Froning, H., Jdl 95, 1980, 330-331. - Late 2nd cent. A.D. - Lid: I. taming the bulls before Aietes, and I. capturing the fleece before Medea.

53. Fr. Rome, Palatine. - SarkRel II no. 187 pl. 61. - 2nd cent. A.D. - At far r. I. in back view capturing fleece. At l. Phrixos riding the ram.

54.* Sarcophagus lid. Rome, Mus. Naz. Rom. 113195. From Marino. - Koch/Sichtermann, RömSark 137; Blome, P., RM 90, 1983, 201-209 pls. 73-76; MusNazRom I 8, 2 (1985) 346-349 no. VII, 11. - Around A.D. 180/170. - From l. to r.: Meeting of I. and Medea; I. and Medea in palace at Kolchis; dismemberment of Apsyrtos by Medea; flight of Medea and I. toward the Argo; marriage of I. and Medea. Blome interprets this relief as a representation of Medea's murder of her brother in the royal palace at Kolchis.

M. Jason on Crete/death of Talos

GREEK

55. (= Dioskouroi 221 with bibl.) Column-krater, Attic rf. Benevento, Mus. del Sannio (?). From Salerno. - 440-430 B.C. - A young man (I.?) crouches to pull the plug from the foot of the giant Talos.

56.* (= Argonautai 15 with bibl., = Boreadai 25, = Dioskouroi 220 with bibl., = Europe I 220, = Hera 452) Volute-krater, Attic rf. Ruvo, Mus. Jatta 1501. - ARV 1338, 1: Talos P.; Pava 481; Add 2

366-367; Sichtermann, SlgJatta no. 14 fig. 1 pls. 31, 33. - About 400 B.C. - Side B, I. wearing embroidered chiton, chlamys and petasos over back, with two spears in r. hand, faces Hera (?).

N. Jason with fleece before Pelias

57. (= Aietes 13* with bibl., = Hermes 898* with bibl.) Calyx-krater, Apul. rf. Paris, Louvre K 127. - RVAp II 539, 332 pl. 203, 3: Near the Underworld P. Meyer pl. 27 fig. 15. - About 350-340 B.C. - I. with chlamys, petasos and two spears, and being crowned by Nike stands before an enthroned king (Pelias or Aietes), holding the golden fleece in his l. hand, a spear in his r.; Medea stands behind to l.

O. Jason rejuvenated by Medea

GREEK

Attic Vases

58. Lekythos, wg. bf. Syracuse, Mus. Naz. 20936. From Gela. - Haspels, ABL 227, 38; Sappho P.; Orsi, P., MonAnt 17, 1906, 120 ff. fig. 88; Renard, M., Latomus 13, 1954, 385-386 pl. 1; Meyer 66 no. II Va 1 pl. 1. - Around 500 B.C. - The upper body of a youth in a cauldron above a fire, flanked by two draped women.

59.* Lekythos, wg. bf. Leiden, Rijksmus. PC 32 (ex Canino 1345). From Vulci. - Haspels, ABL 241, 5; Haimon P.; CVA 2 pl. 105 (199); Gerhard, AVI 196 pl. 69/70, 5-6; Renard, o.c. 58, pl. 2, 2; Meyer 66-67 no. II Va 2 pl. 16, 2. - Early 5th cent. B.C. - Youth in cauldron above fire, flanked by two draped women seated on diphroi. At each far side a bearded man.

60. Lekythos, wg. bf. Chiusi, Bonci Casuccini Coll. From Chiusi. - Haspels, ABL 241, 6; Haimon P.; Renard, o.c. 58, pl. 2, 3; Meyer 67 no. II Va 3 pl. 17, 1. - Early 5th cent. B.C. - Same as above.

61. Lekythos, wg. bf. Ostwestfalen, D. J. Coll. - Stähler, K., Eine Sammlung griechischer Vasen (1983) 40-42 no. 22 pl. 29b, 31a-c: Class of Athena 581; Stähler, K., Griechische Vasen aus Westfälischen Sammlungen (1984) 195-198 no. 76. - Early 5th cent. B.C. - The head of a youth emerges from the cauldron over a fire flanked by two draped women seated on diphroi.

62.* Hydria, Attic rf. London, BM E 163. From Vulci. - ARV 258, 26; Copenhagen P.; Add 204; CVA 2 pl. 70 (320), 4; Smith, BMVases III 148-149 B 163; Cook, Zeus II pl. 14; Boardman, ARFVI fig. 200; no. 53. - Around 470 B.C. - I. (IASON), a white-haired older man, wearing a chiton and mantle and leaning on a staff, at r. gestures towards a cauldron over a fire in the center. A ram, emerging from the vessel, looks at Medea standing at the l. She holds a skyphos in her l. hand, and gestures toward the ram with her r. Smith (149) states 'this scene would naturally be taken as the renewal of Aeson were it not for the inscriptions.'

ETRUSCAN

Mirrors

63.* London, BM. From Talamone. - Gerhard, EtrSp V 116-120 pl. 93; Beazley, J. D., JHS 69, 1949, 8-9 pl. 8a; Dohrn, T., RM 73/74, 1966/67, 21 fig. 1; de Simone, Entlehnungen I 53 (3); Meyer 106 pl. 16, 1. - About 370-360 B.C. - I. (Heasun) is a half-draped figure slumped on a stool at l., behind whom Medea (Metvia) stands holding a phiale to his lips. Athena (Menrva) standing in the center holds I.'s head with her r. hand, and oinochoe in her l. At the far r., a young girl (Rescial) plays with a bird. Medea appears to be giving a sick (or old?) I. a magic potion, possibly to make him young again.

64.* Paris, Cab. Méd. 1329. - Gerhard, EtrSp IV 101 pl. 352, 1; Cook, Zeus II 1, 210-211 fig. 149; Babelon/Blanchet, BiblNatBronzes 53 ff. no. 1329; Rebuffat-Emmanuel, D., Le miroir étrusque d'après la coll. du Cab. des Médailles (1973) 238-242 no. 1329; 553-554 pl. 47 (→ Tantalos and resurrection of → Pelops); Meyer 67-68 pl. 17, 2. - Later 4th cent. B.C. - At r. a nude young man rises from a tripod-cauldron; at l. a bearded man with a staff sits on a klismos facing r; behind are a half-draped youth and two draped women. Meyer (69) identifies the old man as Pelias with his son Akastos.

P. Funeral games for Pelias

65. Chest of Kypselos (cf. 10). - Paus. 5, 17, 9-11; v. Massow, o.c. 10, 33-44. - Paus. states that the wrestling match between I. and Peleus is an even one.

Q. Jason in Corinth

ROMAN

Sarcophagi

66.* (= Hypnos/Somnus 142a with bibl.) Marble sarcophagus, Roman. Mantua, Pal. Ducale. - Levi, A., Sculture greche e romane del Palazzo Ducale di Mantova (1931) 90-91 pls. 102, 1; 103; Sichtermann/Koch, MythSark 41 no. 37 pls. 90, 91, 94, 1; Schmidt no. 33 pl. 32, 3; Künzl 381 fig. 34. - About A.D. 150. - I., half-draped and leaning on a pillar, watches his sons present gifts to Kreusa; I., in chlamys, watches the death of Kreusa at r.

67. (= Hypnos/Somnus 142b with bibl.) Rome, Mus. Naz. Rom. 75248. From Rome. - SarkRel III 3, 561 fig. 199; Schmidt 21. 45 n. 4 pl. 32, 2; Künzl 383 fig. 35; Sichtermann/Koch, MythSark no. 38 pls. 92-93, 94.2; MusNazRom I 8, 1 (1985) 279-283 no. VI, 8. - A.D. 150-160. - Similar to 66, although in second scene, I. stands in profile.

68. (= 52 [lid]) Basel, Antikenmus. BS 203. - Künzl 385 fig. 36. - Left front: I., wearing mantle over l. shoulder, watches his sons present gifts to Kreusa. This relief is unusual in not depicting I. in the next scene, the death of Kreusa.

Metal Vase

69. Silver kalathos. Bonn, Rhein. Mus. From Xanten. - Künzl figs. 1-6. 12-18; Froning, H., Jdl 95, 1980, 330-331 fig. 6. - Augustan. - I. half-draped and leaning on a pillar, watches as his two young sons bring gifts to seated Kreusa.

R. Jason at the apotheosis of Medea

GREEK

South Italian vases

70.* (= Aphrodite 1412* with bibl.) Hydria, early Luc. rf. Policoro, Mus. Naz. 35296. From Policoro (1963 tomb). - LCS 58, 286 pls. 26, 3; 27, 3; Policoro P.; LCS Suppl. 3, 19; Trendall/Webster, Illustrations III, 3, 34. - About 400 B.C. - I. striding forward at lower r. with short sword in r. upraised hand threatening Medea (inscr.) above in her snake-drawn chariot. According to Webster, this vase 'gives the earliest representation of the conclusion of the play (Medea), and, since Medea is wearing stage costume, there can be little doubt of direct dramatic influence.'

71. Calyx-krater, Luc. rf. Once Fort Worth, Kimbell Art Mus., Hunt coll. - v. Bothmer, D., in Wealth of the Ancient World (1983) 76-79 no. 14 ill.: near the Policoro P. - About 400 B.C. - I., half-draped, standing at lower l. and looking up at Medea in her snake-drawn chariot.

72.* Vase fr., Apul. rf. Berlin (West), Staatl. Mus. 30916. - RVAp I 419, 28 pl. 152, 5: related to the Lycurgus P.; Page lxiv-lxv. - 2nd quarter of 4th cent. B.C. - Fr. preserves the curly-haired, bearded head of I. with his sword raised Harmodios-fashion as he attacks a snake of Medea's chariot.

73.* Amphora, Apul. rf. Naples, Mus. Naz. 81954 (H 3221). From Ruvo. - RVAp II 497, 43 pl. 178, 1: Darius P.; Page lxiii-lxiv; Schmidt, M., Der Dareiosmaler und sein Umkreis (1960) 20-21 pls. 16-17. - About 340 B.C. - Medea in center aboard chariot under attack by beardless man (I.?) at l. on horseback.

74. (= Aietes 1 with bibl., = Hippotes 1 with bibl.) Volute-Krater, Apul. rf. Munich, Antikenslg. 3296 (J.810). From Canosa. - RVAp II 533, 283 pl. 195, 1: Underworld P.; FR II 161-166 pl. 90; Page lx-lxiii; Trendall/Webster, Illustrations III 5, 4. - About 330-320 B.C. - A, body: above, death of Kreusa; below in center, snake-drawn chariot driven by → Oistros; Medea killing a son at l.; I. (IASON) rushes in from r. holding a spear in his r. hand, a scabbard in his l.; chlamys draped over l. arm. Depiction also includes Athena, Herakles, the Dioskuri and the ghost of Aietes.

S. Calydonian boar hunt

Attic Vases

75. (= Atalante 5 [another fr.]) Dinos fr., bf. Bolligen (Switzerland), Blatter coll. - Para 42: Tyrrhenian Group, Kyllenios P.; Blatter, R., AntK 5, 1962, 45-47 pl. 16, 1; Schefold, Sagenbilder pl. 61b. - About 570 B.C. - I. (?) with one sandal attacking boar from l.

76. Kylix, bf., signed by Archikles and Glaukytes. Munich, Antikenslg. 2243. From Vulci. — ABV 163, 2; FR pl. 153, 1; Arias/Hirmer pl. 50; Boardman, ARFV fig. 116, 1. — About 550 B.C. — I. (IAEON), nude and bearded, is second from the far l., attacking the boar with two spears in the company of eight other hunters and six dogs.

T. Uncertain representations of Jason

GREEK

77. Deianeira lekythos, Attic bf. Berlin (DDR), Staatl. Mus. 3764. — ABV 11, 19; Manner of the Gorgon P.; Add 3; Marinatos, S., ArchDelt 10, 1926, 59; Payne, NC 191, no. 2 pl. 53, 7; Jacobsthal, o.c. 30, 133 no. 6; II pl. 224b. — Around 600 B.C. — Shoulder, large serpent with a man's head in its jaws. Vojatzi (89) and others do not believe this vase depicts I. because of the thick neck of the beast.

78. Limestone metopes. Paestum, Mus. Naz. From Foce del Sele. — Zancani/Zanotti, Sele II 289–300 no. 26; 350–354 no. 32; Meyer 53–65 pls. 21–22. — About 550 B.C. — Because sources (Strabon 6, 6, 1 p. 252; Plin. nat. 3, 70) are unanimous in attributing the foundation of the Heraion to I., Meyer (passim) argues that two of the metopes deal with the hero. Metope 32, which shows a person in a cauldron (usually interpreted as the death of Pelias at the hands of his daughters), according to Meyer, represents the rejuvenation of I. by Medea by analogy with the bf. lekythoi (58–61). Meyer interprets metope 26 as I. fighting the dragon.

79. (= Aphrodite 1410*) Terracotta relief, Magna-Graecian. Basel, Antikenmus. BS 318. — Schmidt, M., in Festschr. F. Brommer (1977) 271 pl. 72; Meyer 64–65. — Mid 5th cent. B.C. — A pair flanked by two women. According to Schmidt, the pair are I. and Medea. Against: Meyer 85 n. 192.

80. Terracotta vase with molded reliefs. Brussels, Mus. Roy. A 2200. — CVA 3 pl. 2 (140), 71c; Züchner, W., Jdl 65/66, 1950/51, 191. n. 3. — Hellenistic. — Nude male with sword in his r. hand seizes a serpent with his l.

81. Coin, AR stater, Abdera (Thrace), 411/10–386/85 B.C. — May, J. M. F., The Coinage of Abdera (1966) 192, 273. — Male head wearing petasos, usually identified as Hermes. Identified as I. on the testimony of Strabon (II, 14, 12 p. 531) who attests to a cult of I. at Abdera: Robinson, NC 1934, 247 ff.

ROMAN

82. Relief, limestone. Vienna, Kunsthst. Mus. III 1062. From Margarethen am Moos. Provincial Roman. — Krüger, M. L., CSIR Austria I 3 (Carnuntum) 58 no. 332 pl. 68. — 2nd–3rd cent. A.D. — Thought to represent I. with the plow.

U. Incorrect inscription?

83. (= Athena/Menerva 181* with bibl., = Kadmos I 60a with bibl.) Bronze mirror, Praenestine.

Rome, Villa Giulia 15697. — Matthies, G., Die praenestischen Spiegel (1912) 67–68 fig. 8; 98–100; Schauburg, K., Gymnasium 64, 1957, 212–213 no. 8; Adam, R., Recherches sur les miroirs prénestins (1980) 74; Wachter, R., Altlateinische Inschriften (1987) 118. — End 4th/beginning 3rd cent. B.C. — Hiaco in a chariot drawn by a panther, a stag, a griffin and a lynx, crowned by Victoria; Fortuna and Menerva beside it. Below, a naked man throwing a stone at a snake. The inscription may be mis-spelled for Hiaso* and is generally interpreted as I. The subject shown, not known for him, may have been transferred from → Admetos (I) or → Kadmos (I), by analogy with I.'s yoking brazen-footed and fire-breathing bulls (Matthies); or the name simply is erroneously inscribed. Cf. also Schauburg.

V. Incorrect identification of Jason

84. «Sandalbinder», Greek sculpture. Roman copies in Copenhagen (Glypt. 2798), Paris (Louvre), Munich (Glypt. Gl 287). — Johnson, F., Lysippos (1927) 170–177; Bieber, SculptHell 34; Ridgway, B. S., «The Date of the So-Called Lysippean Jason», AJA 68, 1964, 113–128 pls. 37–38; Vierneisel-Schlörb, KatSkulptMünchen II 457–472 no. 42. — Hellenistic. — Since the Munich copy shows a second sandal on the ground, it is highly unlikely that the statue is I.

COMMENTARY

I. has no distinctive attributes in classical art. He is usually depicted either simply nude, or as a traveler with a cloak and hat. Rarely is he represented monosandalos (μονοσάλλος; Pind. P. 4, 75), that is with a sandal on his r. foot only (3. 4. 75), although the sandal on Thessalian coinage (1) is certainly a reference to the local hero. The single sandal is perhaps characteristic of an adolescent during initiation; cf. Brelich, A., «Les monosandales», NCLio 7–9, 1955–57, 469–484. (For other monosandaloi see also Robertson, M., «Monocrepsis», GRBS 13, 1972, 39–48.) I. is bearded in earlier Greek art, but by the mid-fifth cent. B.C. is generally beardless, except at the apotheosis of Medea on South Italian vases.

Iason in Greek art

The earliest representations of I., which appear on late seventh cent. B.C. Corinthian vases (30. 31) show a bearded man being disgorged, head and arms first, by a large snake. On the evidence of the inscribed objects, the kylix by Douris (32) and an Etruscan bronze mirror (35), these are taken to be I., although no literary evidence exists for such an adventure. According to Simon (Vasen 119) I. has descended to cut off the snake's tongue. Another early representation from Corinth, also unknown in the extant literature, shows I. presumably healing the blind king Phineus (7). A later but no longer extant Corinthian monument, the Kypselos chest, depicted I. twice: wrestling Peleus at the funeral games for Pelias (65), and marrying Medea at the behest of Aphrodite (10). Despite their critical role in the literary saga, Aphrodite (70) and Hera (56) take second place to Athena in the extant artistic tradition (→ Aphrodite 1409–1417; → Athena 549–550). It is naturally Attic artists who emphasize her role as patron goddess of heroes (II. 32. 36).

In Attic art I.'s earliest appearance is in the company of the heroes fighting the Calydonian boar (→ Meleagros). If he is represented on the Tyrrhenian dinos (75), as Blatter and Schefold contend, then the single sandal is a recognized attribute in the early sixth cent. B.C. On a later Attic bf. cup (76) he is simply one of nine bearded hunters. In later bf., I.'s rejuvenation by Medea is popular on wg. lekythoi, where he is shown as a young man emerging from a cauldron (58–61). A variant of this scene occurs on an inscribed rf. hydria (62): here the white-haired I. watches Medea boiling a ram. These representations coincide in date (500–470 B.C.) with the floruit of Simonides who is the only source to claim that I. was made young by boiling. As funerary vases, the wg. lekythoi perhaps carry connotations of rebirth.

In Attic rf., depictions of I. are extremely rare. Besides the Douris cup (32) and London hydria (62) already mentioned, I. is shown in the Kolchian adventure only three other times and in all Athena and the Argo are present. In the only extant image of the seizing of the fleece (36) in Attic art, I. is perhaps deliberately puny, and the ram's pelt hangs on a rock rather than the canonical tree. These features as well as the parody by the same artist suggest that a lost play may have inspired the representation (cf. Hammond/Moon, o.c. 36, 377–378). On later fifth cent. B.C. vases in which I. is depicted as a youth, he is shown in the presence of Medea: arriving in Kolchis (11) and witnessing the death of Talos (56).

In South Italian vase-painting I. is much more prevalent. His popularity is no doubt due to interest in Medea who appears in all but one of these representations. One of the most common scenes is the winning of the fleece (37–42) in which Medea plays an active role holding her box of pharmaka, phiale or magic herbs. The snake-entwined tree holding the fleece generally dominates the center of the composition, flanked by the two main protagonists: I. attacking, Medea abetting. I. is usually youthful (42 is an exception) and wearing traveling attire. In the other popular episode, the apotheosis of Medea (70–74), I. is bearded and is shown threatening Medea's snake-drawn chariot. The one exception (73) shows I. beardless and on horseback. These scenes which first appear at the end of the fifth cent. B.C. were certainly inspired by Euripides' Medea of 431 B.C. Medea is also present at the taming of the fire-breathing bull (16. 17), which like the possible representations on Thessalian coins (15) shows the hero grappling a single animal. Twice I. may be represented before king Pelias on Apulian vases. His first arrival in folkos while the king is sacrificing is known for certain only from Roman wall-paintings (3. 4), but the fragments in Würzburg (2) may represent an earlier version of the scene. A unique event, the presentation of the fleece to Pelias, is probably shown on a calyx-krater in Paris (57). Finally, I. is occasionally depicted standing before a seated Medea who displays her basket of magic (12. 13).

Iason in Etruscan Art

The change in the imagery of I. and the golden fleece in Etruscan art parallels that demonstrated in Greek art. In the fifth cent. B.C., he is shown being disgorged by the serpent, although the Etruscan version with one foot in the monster's mouth and one hand already grasping the fleece (33–35) is distinctive. By the fourth cent. B.C., I. is shown attacking the snake with a sword (22. 23), as on South Italian vases, although Medea and the tree are not present. In other fourth cent. B.C. depictions the hero is more passive, either standing before the Argo (5. 6), or before the tree which holds the fleece guarded by a serpent, with an altar below (24), the latter scene also found in Roman glyptic art (25–28). I. is usually depicted as a nude youth, but is occasionally given military attire (24. 33), as also later in Roman art (26–28). However, on the Ficoroni cista (9), if I. is to be identified as the Argonaut near the stern of the Argo, he is bearded. Since this composition was probably derived from a lost monumental painting, its imagery was no doubt originally Greek.

Three inscribed mirrors present thus far unique episodes in the story of I. On a recently published mid-fourth cent. B.C. mirror in Tübingen (81.175, see v. Freytag/de Simone, passim), Athena stands before a large serpent that is coiled over a ram's fleece. Behind sits the goddess Artemis, but oddly the main protagonist is missing. The obvious explanation is that this mirror represents the moment after I. has been swallowed by the snake but before he is resurrected by Athena. A mirror in London (63) has been interpreted as Medea rejuvenating I., not by boiling as in the Greek literary and artistic tradition (as well as on another Etruscan mirror in Paris, 64), but by offering him a drink from a phiale. Since I. looks sickly but not old, and Athena is present, perhaps he is being prepared for his encounter with the bulls by use of a magic potion rather than an ointment, or is being healed by Medea after a battle (cf. Diod. 4, 48, 5). A third mirror (14) may represent another alternate legend whereby the god Dionysos is instrumental in bringing about the marriage of Medea and I. Thus, the earlier Etruscan representations of I. are related to Greek imagery, while the later ones are either new and presage Roman depictions of the hero, or are anomalous, illustrating alternative and more obscure versions of his myth.

Iason in Roman Art

Although I. appears on Republican gems standing passively before the fleece-bearing tree (25–27), in Roman imperial art the most common images of him are those that lend themselves to cyclic narration: the adventures in Kolchis (i.e. taming the bulls before king Aietes, winning the fleece, and marrying Medea, 49-52), and the Corinthian saga (presentation of gifts to Kreusa, death of Kreusa, Medea's murder of her and I.'s sons, and her apotheosis in a snake-drawn chariot, 66-68). These cycles appear on Roman sarcophagi from the Hadrianic to Antonine periods, and one example (52/68) combines both series, the Kolchian on the lid, the Corinthian on the box. Excerpts from these cycles appear on a cinerary urn (18) as well as on the short ends of other sarcophagi (19). A silver beaker of Augustan date (69) is a prototype for the first episode at Corinth, the presentation of the gifts to Kreusa. (Künzl, passim, has suggested that this depiction of a second wedding refers to the third marriage of Augustus' daughter Julia. Against: Froning, o.c. 69). The winning of the fleece is also depicted in early imperial decorative arts - on Campana reliefs, terracotta appliques and in stucco (46-48). The Roman composition follows that developed in South Italian vase-painting with the tree in the center and Medea at the left drugging the snake. This essentially three-figure scene is certainly the most long-lived in classical art; it appears in later wall-painting (43) as well as in a Coptic relief of the fourth cent. A.D. (45).

Another scene that may derive from earlier Greek painting is the arrival of I. in Iolkos as king Pelias, flanked by his daughters, is about to sacrifice a bull. In these depictions, as in one of the earliest of I. (75), he is monosandalos, a fact that suggests that this trait was one of his most enduring attributes, but one which the artistic tradition generally chose to ignore.

JENIFER NEILS

IASOS

(Ἰάσος) Heros Eponymos und mythischer Gründer der gleichnamigen Stadt in Karien. Möglicherweise identisch mit dem Sohn des Argos und der Ismene, der Tochter des Asopos, dem Vater der → Io (I).

BIBLIOGRAPHIE: Bürchner, L., RE IX 1 (1914) 785-790 s.v. «Iasos 15»; Conticello, B., EAA IV (1961) 70 s.v. «Iasos»; Drexler, W., ML II 1 (1890-94) 88-89 s.v. «Iasos 1b»; Laumonier, A., Les cultes indigènes en Carie (1958) 13. 444. 599; Mansel, A. M., KlPauly II (1967) 1325-1326 s.v. «Iasos 5»; Roscher, W. H., ML II 1 (1890-94) 89 s.v. «Iasos 14»; Schauenburg, K., LAW 1359 s.v. «Iasos 1»; Weicker, G., RE IX 1 (1914) 784 s.v. «Iasos 5».

I.* (= Hermias 2) AE, Iasos, kaiserzeitlich. - Kenner, F., Die Münzsammlung des Stiftes St. Florian in Ober-Österreich (1871) 136-138 Taf. 4, 16; BMC Caria 126, 15 Taf. 21, 7; Leschhorn, W., «Gründer der Stadt» (1984) 376 Nr. 119. - Vs.: Bärtiger Kopf mit Diadem nach r., dahinter Szepter. IAEOE KTIETHS oder IAEOE. Rs.: → Hermias mit Delphin oder stehende Isis mit Sistrum.

Es ist dies die einzige bekannte Darstellung des I., der als mythischer Stadtgründer von Iasos galt und als solcher auch bisweilen in der Münzlegende KTIETHS bezeichnet wird, ein Begriff, der in hellenistischer Zeit «Oikistes» ablöst (s. dazu insbesondere Leschhorn a.O. 333-336). Er ist dabei wie viele andere Gründergestalten als reifer Mann mit Diadem und Szepter charakterisiert. RAINER VOLLKOMMER

ICAUNA

(Icauna, Igauna, Igona, Egona, Ioina, flumen Ycaunense) Personifikation des gleichnamigen Flusses, der heutigen Yonne, eines Nebenflusses der Seine.

LITERARISCHE UND EPIGRAPHISCHE QUELLEN: Eine Weihinschrift eines Altares von Autessiodurum, dem heutigen Auxerre, bezeugt die Verehrung der I. als weiblicher Gottheit (CIL XIII 2921). Auch wird in der Constantii vita S. Germani Autissiod. 1, 2, 12 Acta Sanctorum 31. iul. VII p. 215 F (Ende 5. Jh.) erwähnt, daß der Fluß Icauna an Auxerre vorbeifließt. Eine Anzahl weiterer Quellen nennen diesen Fluß (Stephani Africani vita S. Amatoris 3, 18 Acta Sanctorum I. mai. I p. 57 C; MGH Diplomatum imperii I [1872] 36 p. 154, 27; Testamentum Vigili c. a. 670, Pardessus, J. M., Diplomata ... II [1849] p. 152; Ravennas 4, 26 p. 62, 28-30 Schnetz).

BIBLIOGRAPHIE: Holder II (1904) 16-17 s.v. «Icauna»; Keune, J. B., RE IX 1 (1914) 819 s.v. «Icauna»; idem, RE Suppl. III (1918) 1194-1195 s.v. «Icauna»; Leglay, M., KlPauly II (1967) 1331 s.v. «Icauna»; Peter, R., ML II 1 (1890-94) 91 s.v. «Icaunis dea».

DEUTUNG WAHRSCHEINLICH

I.* (→ Apollon/Apollo, nach 577) Figuralkapitell aus lokalem Kalkstein. Auxerre, Mus. Arch. LVI. Aus Auxerre, beim Fluß an der Schleuse Bâtardeau. - Quantin, M./Ricque, S., Cat. raisonné du Musée d'Auxerre. I^e division: Monuments lapidaires (1884) 24 Nr. 56 Abb.; Espérandieu, Recueil IV Nr. 2905; v. Mercklin, E., Antike Figuralkapitelle (1962) 179-180 Nr. 433 Abb. 841-843. - Eine Seite zeigt die Büste der bekleideten Göttin I. in Frontalansicht. In ihren Händen hält sie Pflanzen der Gattung des Aronstabes (Hegi, G., Illustrierte Flora von Mittel-Europa II [1957] 131-136 Abb. 257-258). Es handelt sich nicht um die Darstellung von Blitzbündeln, wie Espérandieu und Mercklin zu sehen glaubten, vielmehr hat der Bildhauer die für dieses Gewächs, welches insbesondere an Flußufern vorkommt, typische sympodiale Verzweigung der langen, gebogenen, dem Körper der Göttin angeschmiegt Stiele und die pfeilförmigen Blätter mit kräftiger Spreite sehr naturgetreu modelliert. Der Aronstab ist in dieser Charakterisierung in der nachantiken Kunst weitverbreitet und tritt dort zur Andeutung eines feucht-nassen Gefildes auf. Auf den verbleibenden drei Seiten des Kapitells erscheinen jeweils Büsten von Mercur, Apollo und Mars.

KOMMENTAR

Der Fundort des Kapitells an der Yonne bei Auxerre und die Weiblichkeit der dargestellten Person sowie die beiden von ihr gehaltenen, besonders an Flußufern vorkommenden Aronstabgewächse, verbunden mit der Weihinschrift eines Altares, welche die Verehrung dieser Flußgöttin in Auxerre bezeugen, sprechen dafür, daß es sich bei dieser Gestalt um I. handelt. Als solche wird sie auch in der Beschriftung des Kapitells im Museum bezeichnet.

DORIS VOLLKOMMER

ICHSIUN → Ixion 17

ICHTHYOKENTAUROI → Tritones (LIMC Suppl.)

IDAIA → Phineus

IDAIOS

(Ἰδαῖος, Idaeus) Herold der Troer, Wagenlenker des Priamos. Name weiterer Trojaner.

LITERARISCHE QUELLEN: I. tritt verschiedentlich in der Ilias als Abgesandter der Trojaner auf. Hom. Il. 3, 248-259 fordert I. Priamos auf, in die Ebene zu den Griechen zu gehen und einem Eidopfer beizuwohnen. Il. 7, 274-285 trennen die beiden Herolde Talhybios (Bote der Griechen) und I. den Zweikampf Aias-Hektor. I. spricht selbst die Aufforderung zur Beendigung an die Kämpfer. Il. 7, 372-417 schickt Priamos I. zu Agamemnon, damit er um Einstellung der Kämpfe bitte, da die Trojaner in Ruhe ihre Toten begraben wollten.

Als Wagenlenker fungiert I. Il. 24, 324-325: Priamos will Hektors Leiche bei Achilleus auslösen. Er läßt zwei Wagen anspannen, ein Pferdegespann, das er selbst lenkt, und für I. einen vierrädrigen Maultierkarren mit Lösegewerken, auf dem später Hektors Leichnam zurücktransportiert werden soll. Bei der Ankunft im Griechenlager begibt sich Priamos zunächst allein ins Zelt des Achilleus und läßt I. draußen bei den Tieren warten. Il. 24, 576-579 gehen die Achilleusgefährten → Alkimos und → Automedon hinaus, führen den Herold ins Zelt und lassen ihn dort Platz nehmen. Sie lösen die Maultiere und Pferde von den Wagen und laden die Lösegewerke ab. Il. 24, 689-691: Priamos weckt in der Nacht I. auf, um heimlich nach Troja zurückzukehren. Hermes spannt die Tiere ein und geleitet Priamos und I. aus dem Lager. Il. 24, 699-701 sieht Cassandra die Ankunft der beiden in Troja.

→ Aineias erblickt bei seinem Besuch in der Unterwelt auch I., der noch als Schatten einen Wagen lenkt (Verg. Aen. 6, 485). Zu I. s. auch Hesych. und Etym. m. s.v. Ἰδαῖος.

BIBLIOGRAPHIE: Aurigemma, S., in: Spinazzola, Pompeii II 893; Basista, W., Boreas 2, 1979, 5-36, bes. 12. 33; Danaligiole, A., Tà λύτρα τοῦ Ἑκτορος εἰς τὴν τέχνην τοῦ ἔκτου καὶ πέμπτου αἰῶνος π. Χ. (1981) 67; Gabelmann, H., Antike Audienz- und Tribunalszenen (1984) 142-147 (zur Proskynese des Priamos bei Hektors Lösung); Hartmann, J. B., RendPontAcc 53/54, 1980/82, 297-312 (zu Priamos und Achill); Jessen, O., RE IX 1 (1914) 1192 s.v. «Idaios 3»; Knigge, U., AM 85, 1970, 10; Stoll, H. W., ML II 1 (1890-94) 95 s.v. «Idaios 4».

KATALOG

Es gibt nur wenige gesicherte Wiedergaben des I. in der Bildkunst. Der Auftrag des I., zusammen mit Talhybios die beiden kämpfenden Kontrahenten Aias und Hektor zu trennen, wurde nicht dargestellt. Zwar zeigt eine att. rf. Amphora des Kleophradesmalers in Würzburg (CVA 2 Taf. 12-13 mit Lit.; → Aias I 43*) diesen berühmten Zweikampf, doch handelt es sich bei den Schlichtern hier nicht um I. und Talhybios, sondern Aias wird von Phoinix (Beischrift) weggeführt und Hektor von einem Mann, dessen Beischrift nicht erhalten ist. Da dieser aber weißhaarig ist und einen Stock trägt, kann er nicht I. sein. Vermutlich handelt es sich um Priamos (s. weiter die Lit. bei Hölscher, CVA a. O.), wie er auch in einer Darstellung des gleichen (?) Sagenstoffes auf einem att. rf. Stamnos des Triptolemosmalers (Basel, Antikenmus. BS 477) inschriftlich benannt ist (Schmidt, M., in: Opus Nobile, Festschr. U. Jantzen [1969] 141-152 Taf. 25-26; → Aias I 50; Berger, E., AntK 25, 1982, 165). Auch in anderen Darstellungen dieses Themas (→ Aias I 43-50) scheint I. nicht vorzukommen. Bei der entsprechenden Szene auf den Tabulae Iliacae ist er ebenfalls nicht genannt.

Es kommen so für I. nur die Wiedergaben von Hektors Lösung in Betracht, da I. nach Homer Priamos auf seinem Weg ins Griechenlager begleitete. Aber trotz zahlreicher Darstellungen dieses Themas ist I. nicht immer leicht zu verifizieren, weil die Bilder von der homerischen Schilderung abweichen. Denn die Denkmäler zeigen entweder Priamos allein oder begleitet von mehreren Trojanern zu Fuß mit Lösegewerken (vgl. etwa → Achilleus 656*, 659*, 661*). Es ist nicht möglich, unter diesen I. zu erkennen.

Ein Hinweis auf I. könnte dann gegeben sein, wenn der Wagen des Priamos dargestellt ist oder sich ein Begleiter mit dessen Zugtieren beschäftigt. In der griechischen Kunst wurde jedoch der Wagen selten wiedergegeben, sondern erst auf römischen Monumenten. Eine weitere Schwierigkeit besteht darin, daß auf griechischen Denkmälern sowohl die Lösegeldträger wie auch etwa der Pferdeführer auf → Achilleus 652 nicht als Trojaner gekennzeichnet, sondern wie Griechen dargestellt sind. Da aber laut Homer die Lösegewerke von den Gefährten des Achilleus vom Wagen abgeladen wurden und diese auch die Tiere ausspannten, muß auch immer noch die Möglichkeit berücksichtigt werden, daß die Vasenmaler mit den Geschenkträgern und Tierführern nicht immer das Gefolge des Priamos meinten, sondern teils vielleicht auch Griechen. Zwar ist einer der Pferdeführer auf der Münchner Oltoschale (→ Achilleus 656; Basista 20 Nr. V 7 Abb.) durch seine Kleidung als Trojaner ausgewiesen, könnte also I. sein, doch hat ihm Oltos einen griechischen Namen beigegeben. Wegen dieser Schwierigkeit der Benennung werden die griechischen Vasenbilder mit Hektors Lösung hier im Katalog nicht aufgeführt. Danali-Giole 67 merkte an, daß I. auf keinem griechischen Vasenbild der Lytra dargestellt sei. Sie wendet sich damit gegen Knigge 10, die nicht überzeugend I. auf → Achilleus 654 erkennen möchte.

Der nachfolgende Katalog beschränkt sich demnach auf die römischen Darstellungen der Lösung, auf denen der Wagen gezeigt wird. Zwar begegnet der Maultierkarren des Priamos auf der att. rf. fr. Vase in Wien (→ Achilleus 660), doch ist dort kein Wagenlenker erhalten. Allerdings wird auch unter den römischen Lytra-Wiedergaben mit Wagen und Trojanern noch eine Auswahl getroffen. So werden nur die Darstellungen mit Wagenlenker bzw. mit nur einem Trojaner genannt. Wenn kein Lenker dargestellt ist, sondern nur eine Gruppe Trojaner, welche die Lösegewenke abläßt, so ist es, wie bei den griechischen Darstellungen, unmöglich, I. zu benennen. Aurigemma 893 interpretiert die Darstellungen sogar dahingehend, daß das Abladen Aufgabe trojanischer Sklaven sei und einem verdienten Herold wie I. nicht zukomme, er also keinesfalls unter den Trägern zu erkennen sei. Vielleicht bilden dabei die Bilder eine Ausnahme, auf denen nur ein Trojaner, wenn auch als Gefäßträger, zugegen ist.

RÖMISCHE DARSTELLUNGEN

a) Idaios und Priamos vor dem Aufbruch von Troja

1. (= Achilleus 678 mit Lit., = Hekabe 30 mit Lit.) Buchmalerei, sog. Ilias Ambrosiana. Mailand, Bibl. Ambrosiana Cod. 205 inf. – 5. Jh. n. Chr. – Die Miniatur 57 zeigt Priamos, dem Hekabe eine Abschiedsspende darbringt. Hinter Priamos stehen zahlreiche Trojaner, darunter auch ein kleiner Diener, der das Maultiergespann mit dem Geschenkewagen am Zügel festhält. R. sieht man ein Pferdegespann in Vorderansicht, auf dem ein Wagenlenker in trojanischer Tracht steht, welcher die Zügel hält. Es könnte I. sein, der das Gespann für Priamos bereithält.

b) Idaios und Priamos auf der Fahrt ins Griechenlager

2. Buchmalerei, sog. Ilias Ambrosiana, Fortsetzung von 1. – Auf Miniatur 58 spielt das Geschehen bereits außerhalb der Stadt (im Hintergrund die Stadtmauern von Troja). Priamos und I. (Lenker des Geschenkewagens r.; in orientalischer Kleidung) halten in der Ebene ihre Gespanne an, um die Tiere an einem Fluß zu tränken.

c) Idaios hantiert am Wagen, während Priamos bei Achilleus um die Freigabe Hektors bittet

3. (= Achilleus 679 mit Lit.) Fr. New York, MMA 24.97.11. – Frühe Kaiserzeit. – Achilleus nicht erhal-

ten. R. von dem knienden Priamos Maultiergespann, hinter dem ein Mann steht, I.? Auf der Tafel → Achilleus 679a ist ein Trojaner dargestellt, welcher Geschenk abläßt, auf 679b und c sind jeweils zwei Trojaner damit beschäftigt. I. läßt sich auf diesen Tafeln nicht sicher erkennen.

Campanareliefs

4.* (= Achilleus 715 mit Lit.) Terrakottaplatte, fr. London, BM D 608. – Im Hintergrund eine Mauer, davor Reste eines Maultiergespanns nach I. Vom Wagenlenker ist ein Teil des Oberkörpers (auf dem Kopf phrygische Mütze) erhalten. Vorn ein Trojaner mit einem Gefäß auf der Schulter. Es dürfte sich um den Maultierkarren des Priamos handeln, der von I. gelenkt wird. Die Fortsetzung der Lösungsszene war vermutlich auf anderen Platten dargestellt.

Wandmalerei

5.* (= Achilleus 671 mit Lit., = Hektor 102) Pompeji II 2, 2–5 (sog. Domus Lorei Tiburtini; die Zuweisung an diesen Besitzer scheint nicht haltbar, vgl. Castrén, P., Ordo Populusque Pompeianus [1983] 184 Nr. 223). – Vespasianisch. – Iliaszyklus, vgl. auch 10. R. von der Proskynese des Priamos der Maultierkarren in Rückansicht. Davor ein Trojaner in orientalischer Tracht, mit einem Gefäß auf der Schulter, der auf die Achill-Priamos-Gruppe zugeht. Da sonst keine Trojaner dargestellt sind, könnte man hier I. erwägen.

Stuckreliefs

6. (= Achilleus 675* mit Lit., = Hektor 101 mit Lit.) Fries. Pompeji I 6, 2–4 (Casa del Criptoportico, Sacello Iliaco). – Zeit des frühen 4. Stils (zur Datierung s. Strocka, V. M., RM 91, 1984, 125–140). – Iliaszyklus, vgl. auch 11. In der Lytra-Szene Priamos, Achilleus, Hermes, Maultierkarren, auf dem ein Trojaner steht und ein Gefäß herunterholt (I.?). L. Stadttor mit einem weiteren gefäßtragenden Trojaner.

7.* (= Achilleus 676* mit Lit.) Relief. Rom, Via Latina, Pancratiengrab. – Gabelmann 144 Taf. 15, 1. – 160/70 n. Chr. – L. von Priamos der Maultierkarren mit den Lösegewenken. Ein Trojaner beginnt mit dem Abladen der Gegenstände, ein anderer, wohl I., steht mit der Peitsche in der erhobenen Rechten vor den Tieren.

Sarkophag

Unter den Sarkophagreliefs mit Hektors Lösung ist I. vielleicht auf den attischen Sarkophagen vom Typus Adana dargestellt; zu diesen jetzt noch Koch/Sichtermann, RömSark 388–389; Linant de Bellefonds, P., AntK 25, 1982, 124–136 (= Linant, AntK); eadem, Sarcophages attiques de la nécropole de Tyr (1985) (= Linant, Tyr); Gabelmann 146–147.

8. a) (= Achilleus 618*/690 mit Lit., = Automedon 37, = Briseis 38, = Hektor 114) Adana, Mus. 3843. Aus Tarsus. Vorderseite. – Canciani, F., Xenia 2, 1981, 68. 70 Abb. 7; Linant, AntK 124 Nr. 2 Taf. 23, 2; Linant, Tyr 37 Nr. 1 Taf. 4, 3; 5, 2. – 2. Viertel 2. Jh. n. Chr. – Drei Szenen: r. kniet Priamos bittflehend vor

Achill, in der Mitte die Beendigung der Schleifung Hektors mit dem Streitwagen des Achilleus, l. der Maultierkarren des Priamos, von dem Trojaner Gegenstände abladen, die l. ein Grieche begutachtet. L. vom trojanischen Panzerträger in Rückenansicht sieht man über dem Wagen den Oberkörper eines bärtigen Trojaners im Profil nach r., dessen Position nicht ganz klar ist. Er könnte im Wagen sitzen oder knien. Auch die Geste seiner vorgestreckten r. Hand ist nicht eindeutig zu erklären. Linant, Tyr 42 nimmt an, daß er dem Panzerträger beim Abladen behilflich ist. Doch scheint dies wenig überzeugend, da er sich in einer viel tieferen Reliefebene befindet, denn zwischen den beiden Personen steht noch das Maultier. Budde, L., in Festschr. E. v. Mercklin (1964) 13 und Koch (Sichtermann/Koch, MythSark 18) vermuten, daß es sich vielleicht um den Wagenlenker handelt. Dann könnte man an I. denken. Bezüglich der Geste vermutet Budde, daß er in der erhobenen Hand vielleicht die Zügel hielt oder daß es sich um einen Rede- oder Klagegestus handelt. Eine andere Möglichkeit wäre vielleicht, den anderen Trojaner, von dem r. von dem Panzerträger jeweils nur das Gesicht zu sehen ist, als den neben dem Maultier stehenden I. zu deuten. Auf folgenden Sarkophagreliefs begegnet die Lytra nach diesem Typus Adana:

b) (= Achilleus 692 mit Lit.) Fr. Athen, Nat. Mus. 2414. – Linant, AntK 124 Nr. 6; Linant, Tyr 38 Nr. 4.

c) (= Achilleus 620*/694 mit Lit., = Automedon 40, = Briseis 41, = Hektor 115) Beirut, Mus. Nat. 954. Aus Tyros. Vorderseite. – Koch, G., MarbWPr 1984, 36. 38 Abb. 13; Linant, AntK 124 Nr. 1 Taf. 23, 1; Linant, Tyr 18 Nr. 2; 37 Nr. 2; 39–44 Taf. 1, 2; 4, 1; 5, 1.

d) (= Achilleus 621/696 mit Lit., = Automedon 41*) Fr. Bursa. – Linant, AntK 124 Nr. 4; Linant, Tyr 38 Nr. 5.

e) (= Automedon 38, = Briseis 42, = Hektor 116*) Ioannina, Mus. 6176. Aus Ladochori bei Igoumenitsa. Vorderseite. ArchDelt 30, 1975 Chron. 2, Taf. 119; Koch/Sichtermann, RömSark 388 Anm. 69; Koch, a. O. 8c, 42; Linant, AntK 124 Nr. 3; Linant, Tyr 37 Nr. 3. – Um 200 n. Chr.

f) (= Achilleus 98/625/700 mit Lit., = Automedon 42*, = Briseis 43, = Hektor 117) Paris, Louvre MA 2120. Aus Rom. Rückseite. Stark überarbeitet. – Linant, AntK 124 Nr. 11; Linant, Tyr 38 Nr. 8. – Wegen der starken Überarbeitung ist hier kein Trojaner mehr zu erkennen.

g) (= Achilleus 701 mit Lit., = Automedon 43) Rom, Kapitolin. Mus. 218. Aus Monte del Grano. Rückseite. – Linant, AntK 124 Nr. 9; Linant, Tyr 38 Nr. 9.

h) (= Achilleus 703 mit Lit., = Automedon 45) Fr. Sparta, Mus. 322. 323. Rückseite. – Linant, AntK 124 Nr. 12; Linant, Tyr 38 Nr. 13.

i) (= Achilleus 704 mit Lit.) Fr. Sparta, Mus. 402. – Linant, AntK 124 Nr. 5; Linant, Tyr 38 Nr. 6.

j) (= Achilleus 695, = Hektor 118*) Tyros 3951. Aus Tyros. Rückseite. Koch/Sichtermann, RömSark 378. 388–389. 405–407. 410; Linant, AntK 124 Nr. 8; Linant, Tyr 26 Nr. 7; 38 Nr. 11; 39–44 Taf. 4, 2.

d) Idaios verbringt die Nacht im Lager der Griechen

9.* (= Achilleus 687 mit Lit., = Automedon 29, = Briseis 36). Silberbecher. Kopenhagen, Nat. Mus. Aus Hoby. Von Cheirisophos signiert. – Beste Detailabb. des I. bei Poulsen, V., APL 8 (1968) Taf. 45 a–b; 48. – Auf der Vorderseite Priamos bittflehend vor Achilleus. Die Gegenseite zeigt eine Szene vor dem Zelt. Neben drei eingeschlafenen Griechen sitzt der sinnende I. auf einem Block. Der bärtige Trojaner (orientalische Kleidung, aber barhäuptig ohne die übliche phrygische Mütze) sitzt im Profil nach l., so daß Priamos auf der Vorderseite und I. auf der Rückseite einander den Rücken zukehren. Mit der Rechten stützt I. seinen Kopf auf, in der Linken hält er die Peitsche. Sein Haar ist länger als das der Griechen. Vor ihm befindet sich der Wagen, von dem nur der hintere Teil dargestellt ist. Das Vorderteil mit den Tieren ist durch eine Mauer verdeckt. Es handelt sich um die eindrucksvollste Darstellung des I.

10. Wandgemälde. Pompeji II 2, 2–5 (sog. Domus Lorei Tiburtini, s. 5*). – Schefold, WP 52; Aurigemma, S., in: Spinazzola, Pompeii II 1005–1007 Abb. 1049–1051; Schefold, K., Nederlands Kunsthistorisch Jaarboek 5, 1954 (= Festschr. A. W. Byvanck) 217. – Vespasianisch. – Iliaszyklus, vgl. 5. I. und Priamos sitzen im Freien vor einem steilen Felsen und halten Nachtwache. L. sitzt der bärtige I. in orientalischer Tracht mit Ärmelgewand und Kopfbedeckung. Er umfaßt mit beiden Händen sein r. angezogenes Knie, so daß seine Haltung ähnlich sinnend wirkt wie auf 9. R. der wachende Priamos in Rückenansicht. Der Wagen und Hektors Leiche sind nicht dargestellt.

e) Idaios und Priamos verlassen das Lager und kehren nach Troja zurück

11. Stuckfries. Pompeji I 6, 2–4 (Casa del Criptoportico, Sacello Iliaco). – Mielsch, Stuckreliefs 156 K 75; Aurigemma, a. O. 10, 897–901 Abb. 897–900. – Zur Datierung s. 6. – Innerhalb des Iliaszyklus, zu dem auch 6 gehört, begegnet eine Szene, die früher als Auszug des Priamos aus Troja gedeutet wurde (Lit. bei Aurigemma), von Aurigemma aber überzeugend als Aufbruch aus dem Griechenlager erklärt wird, da sich die Szene so besser deuten läßt und zudem der Zyklus geschlossen wird. Denn die Bewegungsrichtung des Zuges geht von l. nach r. Der l. Ausgangspunkt ist eine Art Baldachin, unter dem Gefäße stehen, wahrscheinlich das Zelt des Achilleus mit den Lösegewenken. Von hier brach wohl die Gruppe auf. Das Ziel r. ist zugleich der Beginn des Zyklus, nämlich die Mauern von Troja. Dargestellt ist das skäische Tor mit der Teichoskopie, aus welchem Hektor zum Kampf gegen Achill eilt (→ Hektor 101). Die Gruppe selbst besteht aus Hermes als Anführer und Geleiter, ihm folgen zu Fuß Priamos, dann eine Person (Aurigemma: Sklave), welche die Maultiere am Zügel führt (die Zügel waren ursprünglich gemalt). Doch könnte es sich hier auch um I. handeln. Die Tiere ziehen einen reichverzierten Kastenwagen, auf dem Hektors Leiche zu denken ist. Dahinter ein Trojaner zu Fuß.

Münchener Oltosschale (→ Achilleus 656; Basista 20 Nr. V 7 Abb.) durch seine Kleidung als Trojaner ausgewiesen, könnte also I. sein, doch hat ihm Oltos einen griechischen Namen beigeschrieben. Wegen dieser Schwierigkeit der Benennung werden die griechischen Vasenbilder mit Hektors Lösung hier im Katalog nicht aufgeführt. Danali-Giole 67 merkte an, daß I. auf keinem griechischen Vasenbild der Lytra dargestellt sei. Sie wendet sich damit gegen Knigge 10, die nicht überzeugend I. auf → Achilleus 654 erkennen möchte.

Der nachfolgende Katalog beschränkt sich demnach auf die römischen Darstellungen der Lösung, auf denen der Wagen gezeigt wird. Zwar begegnet der Maultierkarren des Priamos auf der att. rf. fr. Vase in Wien (→ Achilleus 660), doch ist dort kein Wagenlenker erhalten. Allerdings wird auch unter den römischen Lytra-Wiedergaben mit Wagen und Trojanern noch eine Auswahl getroffen. So werden nur die Darstellungen mit Wagenlenker bzw. mit nur einem Trojaner genannt. Wenn kein Lenker dargestellt ist, sondern nur eine Gruppe Trojaner, welche die Lösegewenke ablädt, so ist es, wie bei den griechischen Darstellungen, unmöglich, I. zu benennen. Aurigemma 893 interpretiert die Darstellungen sogar dahingehend, daß das Abladen Aufgabe trojanischer Sklaven sei und einem verdienten Herold wie I. nicht zukomme, er also keinesfalls unter den Trägern zu erkennen sei. Vielleicht bilden dabei die Bilder eine Ausnahme, auf denen nur ein Trojaner, wenn auch als Gefäßträger, zugegen ist.

RÖMISCHE DARSTELLUNGEN

a) Idaios und Priamos vor dem Aufbruch von Troja

1. (= Achilleus 678 mit Lit., = Hekabe 30 mit Lit.) Buchmalerei, sog. Ilias Ambrosiana. Mailand, Bibl. Ambrosiana Cod. 205 inf. – 5. Jh. n. Chr. – Die Miniatur 57 zeigt Priamos, dem Hekabe eine Abschiedsspende darbringt. Hinter Priamos stehen zahlreiche Trojaner, darunter auch ein kleiner Diener, der das Maultiergespann mit dem Geschenkewagen am Zügel festhält. R. sieht man ein Pferdegespann in Vorderansicht, auf dem ein Wagenlenker in trojanischer Tracht steht, welcher die Zügel hält. Es könnte I. sein, der das Gespann für Priamos bereithält.

b) Idaios und Priamos auf der Fahrt ins Griechenlager

2. Buchmalerei, sog. Ilias Ambrosiana, Fortsetzung von 1. – Auf Miniatur 58 spielt das Geschehen bereits außerhalb der Stadt (im Hintergrund die Stadtmauern von Troja). Priamos und I. (Lenker des Geschenkewagens r.; in orientalischer Kleidung) halten in der Ebene ihre Gespanne an, um die Tiere an einem Fluß zu tränken.

c) Idaios hantiert am Wagen, während Priamos bei Achilleus um die Freigabe Hektors bittet

3. (= Achilleus 679 mit Lit.) Fr. New York, MMA 24.97.11. – Frühe Kaiserzeit. – Achilleus nicht erhal-

ten. R. von dem knienden Priamos Maultiergespann, hinter dem ein Mann steht, I.? Auf der Tafel → Achilleus 679a ist ein Trojaner dargestellt, welcher Geschenke ablädt, auf 679b und c sind jeweils zwei Trojaner damit beschäftigt. I. läßt sich auf diesen Tafeln nicht sicher erkennen.

Campanareliefs

4.* (= Achilleus 715 mit Lit.) Terrakottaplatte, fr. London, BM D 608. – Im Hintergrund eine Mauer, davor Reste eines Maultiergespanns nach I. Vom Wagenlenker ist ein Teil des Oberkörpers (auf dem Kopf phrygische Mütze) erhalten. Vorn ein Trojaner mit einem Gefäß auf der Schulter. Es dürfte sich um den Maultierkarren des Priamos handeln, der von I. gelenkt wird. Die Fortsetzung der Lösungsszene war vermutlich auf anderen Platten dargestellt.

Wandmalerei

5.* (= Achilleus 671 mit Lit., = Hektor 102) Pompeji II 2, 2–5 (sog. Domus Lorei Tiburtini; die Zuweisung an diesen Besitzer scheint nicht haltbar, vgl. Castrén, P., Ordo Populusque Pompeianus [1983] 184 Nr. 223). – Vespasianisch. – Iliaszyklus, vgl. auch 10. R. von der Proskynese des Priamos der Maultierkarren in Rückansicht. Davor ein Trojaner in orientalischer Tracht, mit einem Gefäß auf der Schulter, der auf die Achill-Priamos-Gruppe zugeht. Da sonst keine Trojaner dargestellt sind, könnte man hier I. erwägen.

Stuckreliefs

6. (= Achilleus 675* mit Lit., = Hektor 101 mit Lit.) Fries. Pompeji I 6, 2–4 (Casa del Criptoportico, Sacello Iliaco). – Zeit des frühen 4. Stils (zur Datierung s. Strocka, V. M., RM 91, 1984, 125–140). – Iliaszyklus, vgl. auch 11. In der Lytra-Szene Priamos, Achilleus, Hermes, Maultierkarren, auf dem ein Trojaner steht und ein Gefäß herunterholt (I.?). L. Stadttor mit einem weiteren gefäßtragenden Trojaner.

7.* (= Achilleus 676* mit Lit.) Relief. Rom, Via Latina, Pancratiengrab. – Gabelmann 144 Taf. 15, 1. – 160/70 n. Chr. – L. von Priamos der Maultierkarren mit den Lösegewenken. Ein Trojaner beginnt mit dem Abladen der Gegenstände, ein anderer, wohl I., steht mit der Peitsche in der erhobenen Rechten vor den Tieren.

Sarkophage

Unter den Sarkophagreliefs mit Hektors Lösung ist I. vielleicht auf den attischen Sarkophagen vom Typus Adana dargestellt; zu diesen jetzt noch Koch/Sichter mann, RömSark 388–389; Linant de Bellefonds, P., AntK 25, 1982, 124–136 (= Linant, AntK); eadem, Sarcophages attiques de la nécropole de Tyr (1985) (= Linant, Tyr); Gabelmann 146–147.

8. a) (= Achilleus 618*/690 mit Lit., = Automedon 37, = Briseis 38, = Hektor 114) Adana, Mus. 3843. Aus Tarsus. Vorderseite. – Canciani, F., Xenia 2, 1981, 68. 70 Abb. 7; Linant, AntK 124 Nr. 2 Taf. 23, 2; Linant, Tyr 37 Nr. 1 Taf. 4, 3; 5, 2. – 2. Viertel 2. Jh. n. Chr. – Drei Szenen: r. kniet Priamos bittflehend vor

Achill, in der Mitte die Beendigung der Schleifung Hektors mit dem Streitwagen des Achilleus, l. der Maultierkarren des Priamos, von dem Trojaner Gegenstände abladen, die l. ein Griechē begutachtet. L. vom trojanischen Panzerträger in Rückenansicht sieht man über dem Wagen den Oberkörper eines bärtigen Trojaners im Profil nach r., dessen Position nicht ganz klar ist. Er könnte im Wagen sitzen oder knien. Auch die Geste seiner vorgestreckten r. Hand ist nicht eindeutig zu erklären. Linant, Tyr 42 nimmt an, daß er dem Panzerträger beim Abladen behilflich ist. Doch scheint dies wenig überzeugend, da er sich in einer viel tieferen Reliefebene befindet, denn zwischen den beiden Personen steht noch das Maultier. Budde, L., in Festschr. E. v. Mercklin (1964) 13 und Koch (Sichter mann/Koch, MythSark 18) vermuten, daß es sich vielleicht um den Wagenlenker handelt. Dann könnte man an I. denken. Bezüglich der Geste vermutet Budde, daß er in der erhobenen Hand vielleicht die Zügel hielt oder daß es sich um einen Rede- oder Klagegestus handelt. Eine andere Möglichkeit wäre vielleicht, den anderen Trojaner, von dem r. von dem Panzerträger jeweils nur das Gesicht zu sehen ist, als den neben dem Maultier stehenden I. zu deuten. Auf folgenden Sarkophagreliefs begegnet die Lytra nach diesem Typus Adana:

b) (= Achilleus 692 mit Lit.) Fr. Athen, Nat. Mus. 2414. – Linant, AntK 124 Nr. 6; Linant, Tyr 38 Nr. 4.

c) (= Achilleus 620*/694 mit Lit., = Automedon 40, = Briseis 41, = Hektor 115) Beirut, Mus. Nat. 954. Aus Tyros. Vorderseite. – Koch, G., MarbWPr 1984, 36. 38 Abb. 13; Linant, AntK 124 Nr. 1 Taf. 23, 1; Linant, Tyr 18 Nr. 2; 37 Nr. 2; 39–44 Taf. 1, 2; 4, 1; 5, 1.

d) (= Achilleus 621/696 mit Lit., = Automedon 41*) Fr. Bursa. – Linant, AntK 124 Nr. 4; Linant, Tyr 38 Nr. 5.

e) (= Automedon 38, = Briseis 42, = Hektor 116*) Ioannina, Mus. 6176. Aus Ladochori bei Igoumenitsa. Vorderseite. ArchDelt 30, 1975 Chron. 2, Taf. 119; Koch/Sichter mann, RömSark 388 Anm. 69; Koch, a. O. 8c, 42; Linant, AntK 124 Nr. 3; Linant, Tyr 37 Nr. 3. – Um 200 n. Chr.

f) (= Achilleus 98/625/700 mit Lit., = Automedon 42*, = Briseis 43, = Hektor 117) Paris, Louvre MA 2120. Aus Rom. Rückseite. Stark überarbeitet. – Linant, AntK 124 Nr. 11; Linant, Tyr 38 Nr. 8. – Wegen der starken Überarbeitung ist hier kein Trojaner mehr zu erkennen.

g) (= Achilleus 701 mit Lit., = Automedon 43) Rom, Kapitolin. Mus. 218. Aus Monte del Grano. Rückseite. – Linant, AntK 124 Nr. 9; Linant, Tyr 38 Nr. 9.

h) (= Achilleus 703 mit Lit., = Automedon 45) Fr. Sparta, Mus. 322. 323. Rückseite. – Linant, AntK 124 Nr. 12; Linant, Tyr 38 Nr. 13.

i) (= Achilleus 704 mit Lit.) Fr. Sparta, Mus. 402. – Linant, AntK 124 Nr. 5; Linant, Tyr 38 Nr. 6.

j) (= Achilleus 695, = Hektor 118*) Tyros 3951. Aus Tyros. Rückseite. Koch/Sichter mann, RömSark 378. 388–389. 405–407. 410; Linant, AntK 124 Nr. 8; Linant, Tyr 26 Nr. 7; 38 Nr. 11; 39–44 Taf. 4, 2.

d) Idaios verbringt die Nacht im Lager der Griechen

9.* (= Achilleus 687 mit Lit., = Automedon 29, = Briseis 36). Silberbecher. Kopenhagen, Nat. Mus. Aus Hoby. Von Cheirisophos signiert. – Beste Detailabb. des I. bei Poulsen, V., APL 8 (1968) Taf. 45 a–b; 48. – Auf der Vorderseite Priamos bittflehend vor Achilleus. Die Gegenseite zeigt eine Szene vor dem Zelt. Neben drei eingeschlafenen Griechen sitzt der sinnende I. auf einem Block. Der bärtige Trojaner (orientalische Kleidung, aber barhäuptig ohne die übliche phrygische Mütze) sitzt im Profil nach l., so daß Priamos auf der Vorderseite und I. auf der Rückseite einander den Rücken zukehren. Mit der Rechten stützt I. seinen Kopf auf, in der Linken hält er die Peitsche. Sein Haar ist länger als das der Griechen. Vor ihm befindet sich der Wagen, von dem nur der hintere Teil dargestellt ist. Das Vorderteil mit den Tieren ist durch eine Mauer verdeckt. Es handelt sich um die eindrucksvollste Darstellung des I.

10. Wandgemälde. Pompeji II 2, 2–5 (sog. Domus Lorei Tiburtini, s. 5*). – Scheffold, WP 52; Aurigemma, S., in: Spinazzola, Pompeii 1005–1007 Abb. 1049–1051; Scheffold, K., Nederlands Kunsthistorisch Jaarboek 5, 1954 (= Festschr. A. W. Byvanck) 217. – Vespasianisch. – Iliaszyklus, vgl. 5. I. und Priamos sitzen im Freien vor einem steilen Felsen und halten Nachtwache. L. sitzt der bärtige I. in orientalischer Tracht mit Ärmelgewand und Kopfbedeckung. Er umfaßt mit beiden Händen sein r. angezogenes Knie, so daß seine Haltung ähnlich sinnend wirkt wie auf 9. R. der wachende Priamos in Rückenansicht. Der Wagen und Hektors Leiche sind nicht dargestellt.

e) Idaios und Priamos verlassen das Lager und kehren nach Troja zurück

11. Stuckfries. Pompeji I 6, 2–4 (Casa del Criptoportico, Sacello Iliaco). – Mielsch, Stuckreliefs 156 K 75; Aurigemma, a. O. 10, 897–901 Abb. 897–900. – Zur Datierung s. 6. – Innerhalb des Iliaszyklus, zu dem auch 6 gehört, begegnet eine Szene, die früher als Auszug des Priamos aus Troja gedeutet wurde (Lit. bei Aurigemma), von Aurigemma aber überzeugend als Aufbruch aus dem Griechenlager erklärt wird, da sich die Szene so besser deuten läßt und zudem der Zyklus geschlossen wird. Denn die Bewegungsrichtung des Zuges geht von l. nach r. Der l. Ausgangspunkt ist eine Art Baldachin, unter dem Gefäße stehen, wahrscheinlich das Zelt des Achilleus mit den Lösegewenken. Von hier brach wohl die Gruppe auf. Das Ziel r. ist zugleich der Beginn des Zyklus, nämlich die Mauern von Troja. Dargestellt ist das skäische Tor mit der Teichoskopie, aus welchem Hektor zum Kampf gegen Achill eilt (→ Hektor 101). Die Gruppe selbst besteht aus Hermes als Anführer und Geleiter, ihm folgen zu Fuß Priamos, dann eine Person (Aurigemma: Sklave), welche die Maultiere am Zügel führt (die Zügel waren ursprünglich gemalt). Doch könnte es sich hier auch um I. handeln. Die Tiere ziehen einen reichverzierten Kastenwagen, auf dem Hektors Leiche zu denken ist. Dahinter ein Trojaner zu Fuß.

f) Auszuscheiden

GRIECHISCHE DARSTELLUNG

12. Amphora, att. sf. Boston, MFA 1979.618. - Brownley, A. B., RA 1989, 3-21 Abb. 1-5 (Maler von München 1379). - Um 540 v. Chr. - Die Deutung der beiden Seiten durch Brownley als Priamos bittflehend vor Achill bzw. I. mit dem Lösegeschekwagen überzeugt nicht. Zum einen läßt das Größenverhältnis der Hauptpersonen eine solche Benennung nicht zu, zum anderen ist die Präsenz des Geschenkewagens bei den griechischen Lösungs-Darstellungen nicht bezeugt. Wegen dieser Diskrepanzen zu den sonstigen Lytra-Bildern versuchte Brownley - nicht überzeugend - hier eine Parodie von Hektors Lösung zu sehen. Es dürfte sich eher um einen Bauernwagen mit Weinamphoren und damit um eine nicht-mythische Szene handeln.

KOMMENTAR

I. ist auf keiner Darstellung durch Namensbeischrift gesichert. Der Herold und Wagenlenker der Troer, der in der Ilias genannt wird, ist nicht oft dargestellt worden. Zwar übt er eine wichtige Funktion bei der Schlichtung des Zweikampfes zwischen Hektor und Aias aus, doch ist er bei der Wiedergabe dieser Episode in der Bildkunst niemals anwesend.

Ein weiterer Auftrag für I. war die Begleitung des Priamos ins Griechenlager zur Auslösung Hektors. Homer beschreibt, daß I. den Maultierkarren mit den Lösegescheken lenkte. Hektors Lösung war ein beliebtes Thema der antiken Bildkunst. Jedoch ist ein trojanischer Wagenlenker nicht oft auf den Darstellungen zugegen. Auf keinem griechischen Vasenbild mit diesem Thema kann I. mit Sicherheit erkannt werden, da der Wagen des Priamos nicht dargestellt wurde und teils mehrere Troer zu Fuß die Begleitung des Priamos bilden (s. dazu hier die Einleitung zum Katalog). Der Maultierkarren des Priamos begegnet erst auf römischen Monumenten. Die Darstellungen in der spätantiken Buchmalerei 1 und 2 zeigen den Aufbruch aus Troja und eine Rast auf dem Weg ins Griechenlager, beides Szenen aus der Episode der Lytra, welche hier erstmals in der Bildkunst begegnen, aber vielleicht auf frühere, uns nicht erhaltene Vorbilder zurückgehen.

Am häufigsten wählten die bildenden Künstler aus dem Mythos die Szene aus, wie Priamos vor Achilleus bittflehend kniet, während Griechen und Trojaner mit dem Abladen der Geschenke und Ausspannen der Tiere beschäftigt sind (3-8j). Allerdings sind dort oft mehrere Trojaner anwesend. Dabei läßt sich I. nur dann benennen, wenn einer der Trojaner als Wagenlenker dargestellt ist oder wenn überhaupt nur ein Trojaner allein anwesend ist. Hier wäre zu überlegen, ob es sich auch dann um I. handelt, wenn er als Gefäßträger gezeigt wird (3. 5. 6). Gesichert ist I. als Wagenlenker auf 4. 7 und wohl auch auf 8a-j. Es ist anzunehmen, daß auf den attischen Sarkophagen vom Typus Adana (8a-j) der Wagenlenker zugegen ist, wenn auch seine genaue Position unklar ist.

Zwei Bilder (9. 10) zeigen, wie I. anschließend die Nacht im Griechenlager verbringt, eine selten dargestellte Szene wie auch 1 und 2. Besonders qualitativ ist dabei seine Wiedergabe auf dem Hobybecher 9. Die Rückkehr nach Troja ist wohl auf 11 dargestellt.

Die seltenen Darstellungen des I. zeigen ihn bärtig und meist in orientalischer Tracht mit phrygischer Mütze (barhäuptig auf 9). Meist ist er mit dem Wagen beschäftigt. Auf 1. 2. 4. 8a-j (?) hält er die Zügel, auf 7 und 9 eine Peitsche in der Hand.

ANNELIESE KOSSATZ-DEISSMANN

IDAS → Apharetidai, → Lynkeus, → Marpessa

IDASOS → Meleagros

IDE I

(Ἰδῆ, Ἰδῆα, Ida) Nymphe éponyme du mont Idé dans l'île de Crète. I. est considérée comme la fille du roi Mélissée (Melisseus) ou Mélissos, ou bien de Korybas, la mère de → Minos (I), Rhadamanthe (→ Rhadamanthys) et → Sarpedon, et comme la femme de Lykastos, ou bien de Daktylos dont elle aurait eu (à moins que ce ne fût de → Zeus) les Dactyles de l'Ida (Idaioi Daktyloi, → Kouretes). D'après les auteurs anciens (dont Plut. quaest. conv. 657 e), → Rhea aurait confié le petit Zeus aux soins d'I. et de sa sœur → Adrasteia (II). Les poètes (Hyg. fab. 182) mentionnent aussi une I. (ou Idothea) comme fille d'→ Okeanos.

SOURCES LITTÉRAIRES: Apollod. bibl. I (5), 1, 6-7; Stesimbrotos, FGH 107 F 12; Socrate d'Argos, FGH 310 F 1 (Schol. Eur. [?] Rhesus 29); Diod. 4, 60, 3; Plut. quaest. conv. 657e; Kern Orph. F. fig. 105; Hyg. fab. 182.

BIBLIOGRAPHIE: Conticello, B., EAA IV (1961) 85-86 s. v. «Ida (o Ide)»; Neustadt, E., RE IX 1 (1916) 880 s. v. «Ide 2»; Stoll, H. W., ML II 1 (1890-94) 104 s. v. «Ide 1».

CATALOGUE

1. Relief(?) disparu, de l'autel d'Athéna Aléa à Tégée. - Paus. 8, 47, 3. - Le décor représentait Rhéa et le petit Zeus; I. était figurée d'un côté de l'autel avec d'autres Nymphes (Alkinoé, Hagno, Phrixa) et les Muses (→ Mousa, Mousai).

2. (= Argonautai 15, = Boreadai 25, = Dioskouroi 220*, = Europe 220* - avec bibl.) Cratère à volutes attique f.r. Ruvo, Mus. Jatta 1501. - ARV 1338, 1: p. de Talos; Para 481; Add 366; Sichtermann, SlgJatta n° 14 pl. 1; Simon/Hirmer, Vasen pl. 231. - Fin du V^e s. av. J.-C. - A: dans la scène de la mort de → Talos, la femme qui s'enfuit en bas vers la dr., identifiée d'ordinaire comme Europe ou → Krete, pourrait être I.

COMMENTAIRE

La seule représentation assurée d'I. est celle que mentionne Pausanias (1). Faute de traits spécifiques, on ne peut reconnaître cette Nymphe avec certitude, et l'identification proposée pour le vase 2 est tout à fait hypothétique. CHARIKLEIA PAPAGEORGIOU

IDE II

(Ἰδῆ, Ἰδῆα, Ida) Nymphe du mont Idé en Troade, mère de Nisus (Verg. Aen. 9, 176-178). Cf. aussi Plut. fluv. 13, 3.

BIBLIOGRAPHIE: Imhoof-Blumer, F., ZfN 1, 1874, 139-142; idem, KIM I 42-43; idem, «Nymphen und Chariten auf gr. Münzen», JArchNum 1908, 110. 172; Neustadt, E., RE IX 1 (1916) 880 s. v. «Ide 1»; v. Sallet, A., «Das Parisurtheil auf Münzen von Scepsis», ZfN 10, 1883, 155-156; Stoll, H. W., ML II 1 (1890-94) 104 s. v. «Ide 2».

CATALOGUE

Monnaies (identification sûre)

L'identification d'I. sur des monnaies de Troade est assurée grâce à l'inscr. IAH.

1.* AE, Skamandria, IV^e s. av. J.-C. - BMCTroas 79, 4-5; Imhoof-Blumer (1874) 139 n° 1 pl. 4, 15; KIM 42-43 n° 2-3 pl. 2; idem (1908) 110 n° 316-317 pl. 7, 26-27; SNG v. Aulock 7640-7641. - Av. Tête de Nymphe à dr. Lég. IAH sur quelques exemplaires. Rv. Pin ou pomme de pin.

2.* AE, Skamandria, IV^e s. av. J.-C. - BMCTroas 79, 1-3 pl. 14, 12-13; Imhoof-Blumer (1908) 110 n° 318 pl. 7, 28; SNG Copenhagen 464-465; SNG v. Aulock 1573. - Av. Tête de Nymphe couronnée à dr. Lég. IAH. Rv. Pin. Sur quelques exemplaires tête de sanglier. Lég. EKA.

3.* AE, Skepsis, Caracalla (198-217). - v. Sallet 155; Imhoof-Blumer (1908) 172 n° 473 pl. 11, 6; Voegtli, Heldenepen 112 pl. 22h. - Rv. Jugement de Paris (→ Paridis iudicium): → Eros donnant une pomme à → Aphrodite, → Hera et → Athena. I. (IAH) assise sur une branche à dr. Exergue: ΕΚΗΨΙΩΝ ΔΑ/ΡΑΑ.

Reliefs romains (identification hypothétique)

4. (= Athena/Minerva 429* avec bibl.) Face antérieure de sarcophage en marbre. Rome, Mus. Naz. Rom. 8563, anc. coll. Ludovisi. - Helbig⁴ III n° 2336 (Andreae, B.); Sichtermann/Koch, MythSark n° 56 pl. 141. 143a. - 1^{re} moitié du II^e s. ap. J.-C. - I. pourrait être la jeune femme qui assiste au Jugement de Paris.

5. Sarcophage. Vatican, Belvédère. - Amelung, SkulptVatMus II 277-279 n° 97a. - Femme assise près d'un pilastre sur lequel s'appuie → Ganymedes.

COMMENTAIRE

C'est au IV^e s. av. J.-C. qu'I., identifiée par une inscription, commence à être représentée sur les monnaies de Skamandria. Plus tard et pendant la période romaine, elle est encore figurée sur des monnaies anatoliennes - et peut-être sur d'autres documents - comme personnification du mont de Troade. Rien dans son aspect ne la distingue des autres Nymphes.

CHARIKLEIA PAPAGEORGIOU

IDMON → Mopsos II

IDOMENEUS

(Ἰδομενεύς) Roi de Crète, petit-fils de → Minos (I) et fils de Deucalion. Il participe à la guerre de Troie. Son retour passe pour avoir été heureux; les traditions touchant à la fin de sa vie sont contradictoires: selon les uns, il est chassé de son trône par son peuple pour faire cesser une épidémie provoquée par un vœu sacrilège, selon les autres, par Leukos à qui il avait confié son royaume.

SOURCES LITTÉRAIRES: I. est le fils de Deucalion (Hom. Il. 12, 117 et passim; Apollod. bibl. 3 [17] 3, 1; epitome 3, 13) et le petit-fils de Minos (Hom. Il. 13, 450-453); cf. Hes. fig. 204, 56-57 Merkelbach/West. Il est originaire de Lyktos (Hom. Il. 17, 611; Verg. Aen. 3, 401) ou de Cnossos (Diod. 5, 79, 4). Ancien prétendant d'→ Helene (Hes. fig. 204, 56-64; Hyg. fab. 81), il participe à la guerre de Troie. En compagnie de Mérion (→ Meriones, Hom. Il. 2, 651), il dirige l'importante flotte crétoise (Hom. Il. 2, 645-652; Apollod. epitome 3, 13; Philostr. her. 30 Lannoy) et est même l'un des principaux chefs des Grecs (Lukianos d. mort. 6, 1). C'est alors un homme déjà âgé (Hom. Il. 13, 361-362; Q. Smyrn. 4, 286-287, 294-296; Triph. 168). Sa bravoure le rend digne de recevoir les armes d'Achille (→ Achilleus; Ov. met. 13, 358-360). Ses exploits sont énumérés dans l'Iliade: il tue Phaistos (5, 43-47), fait partie des neuf chefs qui relèvent le défi d'→ Hektor (7, 165) et charge → Nestor de ramener → Machaon blessé (11, 510-515). Le combat où il joue le rôle le plus important est la défense des vaisseaux (13, 210-517); exhorté au combat par → Poseidon (215-238), il est opposé à plusieurs guerriers, principalement Déiphobe (→ Deiphobos) - qui le provoque en raison d'une ancienne rivalité à propos d'Hélène, déjà évoquée par Ibycus (Page PMG fig. 297) et Simonidès (Page PMG fig. 561) - et Enée (→ Aineias); il tue Othryonée (363-384), → Asios (384-391), Alcathoos (427-444) et Oinomaos (506-508). Plus tard, il tue Érymas (16, 345-350), participe au combat pour le corps de Patrocle (→ Patroklos) où il combat Hector qui le met en fuite (17, 605-625) et à l'ambassade auprès d'Achille (19, 311). Aux jeux funèbres en l'honneur de Patrocle, il se querelle avec Ajax (→ Aias II) (23, 450-498). Quintus de Smyrne ajoute encore quelques épisodes: il tue l'Amazone Brémousa (1, 247-248; → Amazones). Pendant les jeux funèbres en l'honneur d'Achille il reçoit de → Thetis le char du héros sans avoir à concourir en raison de son âge et de sa bravoure (4, 284-296); Ajax (→ Aias I) le choisit en compagnie d'→ Agamemnon et de Nestor pour attribuer les armes d'Achille (5, 133-135). Il vient au secours des Atrides encerclés (6, 538-540) et désarme Eurypyle (→ Eurypylos I; 6, 590-593); il pleure la mort d'Hyllos (10, 80-83). Il fait partie de ceux qui s'enferment dans le cheval (12, 320; Triph. 168; → Equus Troianus) et, pendant le sac de la ville, tue Mimas (13, 212).

Son retour en Crète est, selon Homère (Od. 3, 191-192), l'un des plus heureux. Les Crétois demandent leur aide à I. et à Mérion lorsque l'île était en danger, et rendaient les honneurs héroïques à leurs tombes voisines (Diod. 5, 79, 4). La popularité d'I. est mise en lumière par une inscription de Makritikhos (Guarducci IC I ch. VIII n° 33) où l'on souhaite au défunt un sort aussi favorable que le sien dans les Enfers. Selon une autre version, I. a été chassé de Crète (Verg. Aen. 3, 121-122) en raison des crimes commis devant Troie (Verg. Aen. 11, 264-265). Selon Serv. Aen. 3, 121 (Myth. Vat. II 210), I. aurait, pour obtenir son salut pendant une tempête, voué à Poséidon le premier être humain qu'il rencontrerait à son arrivée: il sacrifie ainsi au dieu son fils (ou sa fille: Myth. Vat. I 195); cet acte ayant amené la peste, le peuple chasse I. pour la faire cesser.

Suivant une autre tradition, I. ayant confié son royaume à Leukos (Lykophron 1218-1219), Naulpiios, pour venger la mort de son fils Palamède (→ Palamedes), incite la femme d'I., Média, à le tromper avec Leukos; ce dernier, ayant pris le pouvoir, la tue ainsi que sa fille (Apollod. epitome 6, 10) et aussi ses fils (Lykophron 1216-1225; Tzetz. Lykophr. 1218), puis chasse I.; ou bien I., de retour, aveugle Leukos et reconquiert son royaume (Schol. Lykophr. 1218).

I. est aussi mentionné dans l'Odyssée: Ulysse (→ Odysseus) le fait intervenir dans les récits où il se dit crétois (13, 259-261; 14, 233-238. 382-383; 19, 181-202).

On attribue aux Crétois venus sous la direction d'I. (Varron ap. Prob. Verg. ecl. 6, 31, p. 336-337 Hagen, Appendix Serviana) la fondation de Salente en Calabre (Verg. Aen. 3, 400-401; Strabon, 6, 3, 5 p. 281) et d'un temple à Minerve (Serv. Aen. 3, 531); puis I. s'installe à Colophon (Schol. Hom. Od. 13, 259; Lykophron 424-425. 431-432; Serv. Aen. 3, 401).

I. est aussi à l'origine de la réputation de menteurs des Crétois. Lors d'un concours de beauté entre Médée (→ Medeia) et Thétis à qui il accorde la victoire, Médée condamne la race d'I. à mentir (Athénodore d'Erétrie, FHG IV p. 345); Ajax fait allusion à cette réputation en mettant en doute la puissance du contingent crétois (Philostr. her. 30 Lannoy).

BIBLIOGRAPHIE: Conticello, B., EAA IV (1961) 89-90 s.v. «Idomeneo»; Drexler, W., ML II 1 (1890-94) 106-108 s.v. «Idomeneus»; v. Geisau, H., KIPauly II (1967) 1340-1341 s.v. «Idomeneus I»; Jacoby, F., RE IX (1916) 906-909 s.v. «Idomeneus».

CATALOGUE

DOCUMENTS GRECS

1. * Stamnos attique à f.r. Marché des ant. - Isler-Kerényi, C./Causey-Frel, F., Stamnoi, An Exhibition at the Paul Getty Museum (1980) n° 15; v. Bothmer, D., AntK 24, 1981, 66-67 pl. 10, 3; Greifenhagen, A., «Odysseus in Malibu», Pantheon 40, 1982, 211-217 fig. 3; Cody, M., dans Wealth of the Ancient World (1983) 72-73 n° 12. - Vers 480 av. J.-C. - Au premier plan le Cyclope (inscr. KYKΛΟΠΣ, → Kyklops, Kyklopes), de profil à g., pousse la pierre qui fermait la caverne; au second plan I. (inscr. ΙΔΑΜΕΝΕΥΣ), en chiton court, couché sous un bélier de profil à dr. brandit une épée du bras dr.; derrière lui Ulysse (inscr. ΟΔΥΣΕΥΣ) sous un autre bélier.

2. * Fr. de bol «homérique» en terre cuite à reliefs. Thèbes, Mus. De Thèbes, Cabirion. - Sinn, Becher 52-53. 82 MB 13 pl. 6, 1-2. - Ép. hellénistique. - I. (inscr. ΕΙΔΟΜ[ΕΝΕΥΣ]), debout de profil à g. devant un autre personnage placé au-dessous de lui (inscr. [ΑΓΑΜ]ΕΜΝΩΝ, ΑΙΑΣ, [ΜΩ?]). Cette scène illustre l'arrivée de la course de chars pendant les jeux funèbres en l'honneur de Patrocle.

3. (= Agamemnon 3, = Aias I 21, → Diomedes I chap. V N, iii) Groupe statuaire de bronze, offrande des Achéens, perdu. Olympie. - Paus. 5, 25, 9-10; Dörig, J., Onatas of Aegina (1977) 20-21. - Œuvre d'Onatas, 470-460 av. J.-C. - Groupe composé des statues des neuf héros qui avaient relevé le défi d'Hector: I., comme les autres guerriers, portait la lance et le bouclier; le sien était orné d'un coq, allusion à son ancêtre le soleil, et portait la signature du sculpteur.

DOCUMENTS ROMAINS

Peintures de manuscrit

4. * Miniature 13 de l'Ilias Ambrosiana. Milan, Bibl. Ambrosiana, Cod. 1019 (F 205). - Bianchi Bandinelli, R., Hellenistic Byzantine Miniatures of the Iliad (Ilias Ambrosiana) (1955) 59 fig. 49 pl. 17-19. - Fin du V^e-début du VI^e s. ap. J.-C. - I. barbu, debout de face (courte tunique blanche, manteau rouge), assiste au sacrifice d'un bœuf par Agamemnon (Hom. Il. 2, 405).

5. * Miniature 33 de l'Ilias Ambrosiana. Milan, ibid. - Bianchi Bandinelli, o.c. 4, 70-71 fig. 69 pl. 20. - I. assis (tunique, manteau drapé), tenant un sceptre dans la main g., parmi les chefs grecs réunis pour désigner Ulysse et Diomède comme espions chez les Troyens.

6. * Miniature 42 de l'Ilias Ambrosiana. Milan, ibid. - Bianchi Bandinelli, o.c. 4, 75 fig. 78 pl. 31-32. - I. barbu, vêtu en légionnaire (tunique courte, cuirasse, casque), tire du bras dr. le cadavre d'Othryonée par le pied g. et tient dans la main g. le bouclier où est inscrit son nom.

Relief

7. Table iliaque. Rome, Mus. Cap., Sala delle Colombe 83. - Bianchi Bandinelli, o.c. 4, 112 fig. 29; Sadowska, Tables 26 pl. 1. - Dernier quart du I^{er} s. av. J.-C. - I. (tunique courte, cuirasse manteau, casque), un bouclier dans la main g. et l'épée dans la dr., se dirige vers Othryonée à terre (derrière lui Asios mourant: dessin douteux, qui ne semble pas conforme à la description donnée dans le texte, Hom. Il. 13, 370-391).

COMMENTAIRE

L'iconographie d'I. comme celle de la plupart des héros principalement connus par leurs exploits pendant la guerre de Troie est très restreinte, mais à la différence de la majorité de ces personnages mentionnés épisodiquement I. jouit dans les textes d'une grande popularité. Les images sont en relation directe avec les textes (2-3), et le plus souvent I. n'apparaît que dans l'illustration précise du texte ou dans des situations qui en découlent directement, par exemple pour une scène de conseil (5) où I. est figuré alors qu'il est seulement nommé auparavant parmi ceux qui seront appelés à cette réunion (Hom. Il. 10, 112). Le manque de caractéristique d'I. ne permet pas, en l'absence d'inscription, de l'identifier dans un certain nombre de scènes où la tradition littéraire lui fait jouer un rôle; jeux funèbres de Patrocle (→ Achilleus 491-494a), combat près des vaisseaux, duel avec Énée, Cheval de Troie.

Un des principaux traits d'I. est son âge, qui lui vaut d'être nommé à plusieurs reprises avec les sages Nestor et Phoenix (Hom. Il. 2, 405; 19, 311; Q. Smyrn. 5, 134-135).

La plus ancienne représentation d'I. est totalement en dehors de ce contexte: elle fait de lui un compagnon d'Ulysse (1). I. est évoqué à plusieurs reprises par Ulysse, mais uniquement dans le récit de sa vie fictive en Crète et en aucun cas dans ses aventures réelles. La présence d'I. dans la grotte du Cyclope est donc une contamination due à ce texte où les deux personnages sont, à plusieurs reprises, mis en relation. Malgré l'insolite de cette situation, il s'agit donc du même personnage.

CATHERINE LOCHIN

IKARIOS I

(Ἰκάριος, Ἰκαρος, Ἰκαρίων, Icarus, Icarus) Héros du dème attique d'Ikaria, il accorda l'hospitalité à → Dionysos venu apporter aux hommes la vigne et le vin. Le dieu lui fit présent d'une outre de vin, et I. la partagea avec des bergers qui s'enivrèrent. Croyant qu'il les avait empoisonnés, ils le tuèrent à coups de bâton et abandonnèrent son cadavre. Les hurlements de son chien Maira révélèrent à sa fille → Erigone (I) l'emplacement de son corps.

SOURCES LITTÉRAIRES: Hyg. astr. 2, 4; fab. 130; Eratosth. Erigone, frg. 22-27 Powell; Apollod. bibl. 3 (191-192), 14, 7; Aristot. fig. 515 Rose; Ail. nat. 7, 28.

BIBLIOGRAPHIE: Conticello, B., EAA IV (1961) 80-81 fig. 103 s.v. «Icario I»; v. Geisau, H., KIPauly II (1967) 1358 s.v. «Ikarios I»; Heeg, J., RE IX 1 (1914) 973-975 s.v. «Ikarios I»; Schultz, A., ML II 1 (1890-94) 111-112 s.v. «Ikarios I».

CATALOGUE

A. Dionysos offre le vin à Icaros

Relief attique d'époque impériale

1. (= Dionysos/Bacchus 254, = Erigone I 1* - avec bibl.) Plaque de marbre. Athènes, théâtre de Dionysos, réutilisée dans le béma de Phaidros, in situ. - Ép. d'Hadrien. - De part et d'autre d'un autel décoré d'une rosette, à dr. Dionysos avec un pied de vigne, à g. I. (tunique courte, chlamyde, sandales), une grappe de raisin dans la main g.; de la dr. il tenait attaché un bouc ou une chèvre qui se dresse à son côté; au second plan, derrière ses jambes, son chien Maira. Derrière lui, à l'extrémité g. de la scène, Érigoné; à dr., derrière Dionysos, un jeune homme (un Satyre?).

Mosaïques d'époque impériale tardive

2. * (= Dionysos/Bacchus [in per. occ.] 176, = Eros/Amor, Cupido 502 - avec bibl.) Pavement polychrome. Tunis, Bardo A 103. D'Oudna-Uthina (Tunisie), maison des Laberii. - Dunbabin, Mosaics 182-183. 266; Blanchard, M., AntAfr 15, 1980, 169-181 fig. 4. - III^e s. (Picard), fin III^e-début IV^e s. ap. J.-C. (Dunbabin). - Emblema central: au milieu Dionysos debout, à dr. I. assis sur un trône (himation ceinturé, chlamyde), avec une barbe touffue et une chevelure abondante et bouclée, entourée d'un diadème. Il tient un sceptre de la main g. et tend la dr. pour recevoir une grappe de raisin offerte par un esclave, à g. Aux pieds de ce dernier, une chèvre ou un bouc. (Pour M. Blanchard, I. est le personnage de g. et celui de dr. un roi sur son trône).

3. * Pavement polychrome. Manosque (Alpes-de-Haute-Provence), propriété de la Mairie. Découvert en 1918 à Vinon (Var), dans le triclinium d'une villa romaine. - Chaillan, Abbé, BullArchCTH 1919, 259-265, 3 fig.; Lavagne, H., «Les mosaïques de Vinon», dans Actes du Coll. int. de l'AIEMA, Bath 1987, s.p.; Lancha, J., Mosaïque et culture dans l'Occident ro- main (s. p.) n° 53. - IV^e s. ap. J.-C. (Lancha). - Au-dessus d'une inscr. en vers (Martialis I, 40) trois panneaux: au centre les trois Grâces (→ Charis, Charites/Gratiae) et de part et d'autre l'histoire d'I. Sur le panneau de g., Dionysos/Bacchus debout (nu, chlamyde), tenant thyrses et canthare; vers lui se penche I. (endormagé; tunique courte et himation, bottes), un genou fléchi; sur le panneau de dr., deux jeunes gens debout de face (tunique courte, bottes): celui de g., qui porte aussi un pétase et un court manteau, pourrait être I., et celui de dr. un serviteur. A dr. un bouc se dresse sur un rocher pour brouter: les deux hommes s'apprennent à le sacrifier.

IGRAS

(IGRAC [sic!]) Nom d'un Géant (→ Gigantes 91) inscrit sur une gemme d'origine italique (fin du III^e s. av. J.-C.); signification inconnue. FRANCIS VIAN

Ikaros I 3

4. (= Akme I*, = Dionysos [in per. or.] 103, = Dionysos/Bacchus 257* - avec bibl.) Pavement polychrome, tesselles de pâte de verre. Nea Paphos, Maison de Dionysos, in situ. - Fin III^e-début IV^e s. ap. J.-C. - Au milieu du panneau, I. (inscr. IKAPIOS) chauve et barbu, le torse nu, drapé dans son himation; de la main g. il mène un attelage de bœufs chargé d'outres de vin; il tourne la tête et tend la main dr. vers Dionysos et Akmé, assis à g. (noms inscrits). Tout à fait à dr. de la scène, deux bergers ivres; au-dessus, l'inscr. explicative OI PRWTOI OINON PIONTES, «ceux qui les premiers ont bu du vin».

B. Identification incertaine: rencontre de Dionysos et d'Ikaros?

Céramique attique à figures noires

5.* (= Dionysos 803 avec bibl.) Coupe. Paris, Louvre CA 576. De Béotie. - ABV 63, 3: P. de Heidelberg; Add 17. - 560-550 av. J.-C. - Dionysos et I. (?) debout face à face, barbus, couronnés, tenant chacun un rhyton.

6.* (= Dionysos 804* avec bibl.) Amphore. Berlin-DDR, Staatl. Mus. F 1690. D'Étrurie. - ABV 151, 11: P. d'Amasis; Add 42. - 550-540 av. J.-C. - A: à côté de Dionysos, qui tient un rhyton, un personnage couronné: I.? Danseurs barbus et joueur d'aulos. B: cortège.

7. (= Dionysos 805* avec bibl.) Amphore. Vienne, Kunsthist. Mus. IV 4399. - Para III, 68 bis: P. Affecté; Add 63. - 540-530 av. J.-C. - A: devant

Dionysos debout (canthare), I.? (bâton, canthare); un Silène, un homme nu. B: Dionysos et deux hommes.

8.* Amphore. Londres, BM 1836.2-24.46 (B 153). De Vulci. - ABV 243, 45: P. Affecté; Add 62; CVA 3 pl. 25. - 540-530 av. J.-C. - I. (?) debout tend les deux mains pour accueillir Dionysos qui s'approche, tenant un canthare.

9. Amphore. Londres BM 1837.6-9.99 (B 149), anc. coll. Canino. - ABV 245, 60: P. Affecté; Add 63. - 540-530 av. J.-C. - I. (?) accueille Dionysos qui tient un pied de vigne et un canthare. Derrière eux, un homme s'éloigne; à g. un Satyre dansant.

Céramique attique à figures rouges

10.* Péliké fr. Malibu, Getty Mus. 81.AE.62. - Robertson, M., dans Getty Vases 3 (1986) 71-90 (en part. 83) fig. 1a: P. de Pan plutôt que Myson (J. Frel). - Vers 480-470 av. J.-C. - A: Dionysos debout à dr., barbu, couronné, portant un vêtement richement brodé, les bras tendus et abaissés devant lui; à g. restes d'une Ménade, les bras levés vers une grosse grappe, et d'un Satyre; à dr. main dr. d'un personnage (I.?) qui levait le bras en tenant un rameau de vigne, et extrémité d'un sceptre ornée d'un fleuron. B: départ de → Triptolemos sur son char ailé.

11.* Hydrie. Londres, BM E 166. De Capoue. - CVA 6, pl. 84. - 450-440 av. J.-C. - Trois figures étendues sur une kliné: à dr. Dionysos, qui pose la main sur le dos de son voisin, I.?; une femme tenant un canthare semble s'adresser au Silène que l'on voit par-dessus.

C. Identifications erronées d'Ikaros: la «visite de Dionysos chez Ikaros»

12. (= Dionysos 855* avec bibl.) Relief votif, de marbre. Paris, Louvre MA 741. Du Pirée. - Fin du III^e s. av. J.-C. - A dr. un personnage couché sur une kliné (le défunt héroïsé et non I.), près d'une jeune femme, accueille Dionysos juvénile, ivre et soutenu par un petit Satyre.

13. (= Dionysos 856* avec bibl.) Base en relief, en marbre. Vatican, Sala busti 783. De Rome, villa Negroni Massimi. - 3^e quart du I^{er} s. av. J.-C. - Dio-nysos ivre, soutenu et escorté par le thiasse (Satyres, Silène, une Ménade), est accueilli par un homme (poète plutôt qu'I.) étendu sur une kliné aux côtés d'une jeune femme.

14. (= Dionysos 858* avec bibl.) Relief de marbre. Naples, Mus. Naz. 6713. - Début du I^{er} s. ap. J.-C. - Sur fond de décor architectural, Dionysos barbu, ivre, soutenu par de petits Satyres et suivi du thiasse, s'approche d'un lit où sont étendus un homme qui l'accueille et une jeune femme.

15. (= Dionysos 857 avec bibl.) Relief de terre cuite, plaque «Campana». Londres BM D 531. - Ép. augustéenne. - Scène analogue: Dionysos et son cortège accueillis par un homme étendu sur une kliné aux côtés d'une jeune femme.

COMMENTAIRE

Le mythe du héros attique I. semble avoir été plus populaire dans la périphérie du monde grec qu'à Athènes même, et d'autre part mieux attesté à l'époque romaine qu'aux époques antérieures. Un seul des quatre documents qui représentent avec certitude ce mythe provient d'Athènes, le relief 1; il en va de même pour la série de vases B, d'identification douteuse, qui proviennent pour la plupart d'Italie (6. 8-9[?], 11).

Cette série de vases donnerait comme date d'apparition du mythe dans l'iconographie le milieu du VI^e s. av. J.-C. Cependant les documents 1-4, qui ne posent aucun problème d'identification, montrent que la légende rencontre plus de succès à l'époque romaine. On peut constater que ces quelques représentations sont très soignées, et enrichies de références précises au mythe: chien, fille, Satyre, pied ou rameau de vigne, inscriptions.

Enfin, l'identification de la scène dite «visite de Dionysos chez I.», illustrée sur la série de reliefs C, est très contestée (cf. Picard, Ch., AJA 38, 1934, 137-152). De fait, d'importantes différences séparent nos premiers documents (1-4) et cette série de reliefs (12-15). Ces derniers ne peuvent figurer la rencontre du dieu avec I., qui aurait eu lieu en plein air, car ils présentent un décor urbain: on y voit des rideaux, des masques de théâtre, des édifices au second ou à l'arrière-plan, éléments qui interdisent de reconnaître dans le sujet de ces reliefs le mythe d'I.

DAPHNÉ GONDICAS

filles, → Penelope, et deux fils, Alyzée (Alyzaïos) et Leukadios. Selon une autre version I., qui était revenu à Lacédémone, épousa la Naïade Périboia dont il eut une fille, Pénélope, et cinq fils, Thoas, Damasippos, Imeusinos, Alétès et Périléos.

SOURCES LITTÉRAIRES: Apollod. bibl. I (87), 9, 5; Tzet. Lykophron 511; Schol. Eur. Or. 457; Paus. 3, 1, 4; 12, 1; 20, 10; 8, 34, 4; Strabon, 10, 2, 9 p. 452; 24 p. 461; Hom. Od. 2, 52-53; 15, 14-17; Hermesianax fig. 7, 27-34 Powell.

BIBLIOGRAPHIE: Conticello, B., EAA IV (1961) 82 s. v. «Ikaros 2»; v. Geisau, H., KlPauly II (1967) 1358 s. v. «Ikaros 2»; Heeg, J., RE IX 1 (1914) 975-976 s. v. «Ikaros 2»; Schultz, A., ML II 1 (1890-94) 112-114 s. v. «Ikaros 2».

I.* (= Aineias 12, = Alexandros 63*, = Athena 408, = Aphrodite 1426 [autre face], = Euopis 1, = Helene 167 - avec bibl.) Coupe att. f. r. Berlin-Ouest, Staatl. Mus. F 2291. De Vulci. - ARV 459, 4: Makron (sign.), potier Hiéron; Para 377; Add 244. - 490-480 av. J.-C. - Noms inscrits. Pâris-Alexandros s'avance vers la g., se retournant vers Hélène qu'il tient par le poignet. Puis vient un personnage barbu, probablement Enée, avec → Timandra. Suit un groupe de trois figures: Euopis se tourne vers deux vieillards barbus, en longue tunique et himation, peut-être pour leur annoncer la nouvelle de l'enlèvement d'Hélène. Le premier vieillard, I. (IKAPIOS), couronné d'olivier et appuyé sur un bâton noueux, lève la main dr. pour exprimer son indignation. L'autre, son frère Tyndare, qui tient de la main g. une longue canne, fait le même geste.

Comme tous les personnages de cette scène sont couronnés, on a supposé que c'est à l'issue d'un festin qu'intervient l'enlèvement d'Hélène. En effet, d'après les Chants Cypriens (Proklos, Davies EGF p. 31), Pâris fut successivement l'hôte des Tyndarides puis de Ménélas (→ Menelaos). Cependant la scène ne doit pas nécessairement être localisée à Amyclées: la présence de Tyndare et d'I. à la cour de Ménélas n'a rien d'étonnant (Kahil, Hélène 29), et c'est de Lacédémone, d'après la tradition la mieux établie, que Pâris emmène l'épouse infidèle. Il est d'ailleurs peu vraisemblable que l'artiste se soit préoccupé de la localisation exacte de l'épisode.

DAPHNÉ GONDICAS

IKAROS → Daidalos et Ikaros

ILIA → Rhea Silvia

ILIAS

IKARIOS II

(Ἰκάριος, Ikarus) Héros lacédémonien, fils de Périérés (ou d'Oibalos) et de Gorgophoné, frère de Tyndare (→ Tyndareos) et d'Hippokoon. Ce dernier chassa ses deux frères de Lacédémone. Réfugié en Acarnanie, I. épousa Polykasté, fille de Lygaios, qui lui donna une (Ἰλιάς) The personification of Homer's poem. The I., a female figure, is represented in allegorical scenes which have been related to the cult of Homer. In these scenes the central figure is Homer attended by his two poems, the I. and the → Odysssea.

Ikarios I 3

main (s.p.) n° 53. – IV^e s. ap. J.-C. (Lancha). – Au-dessus d'une inscr. en vers (Martialis 1, 40) trois panneaux: au centre les trois Grâces (→ Charis, Charites/Gratiae) et de part et d'autre l'histoire d'I. Sur le panneau de g., Dionysos/Bacchus debout (nu, chlamyde), tenant thyrses et canthare; vers lui se penche I. (endormagé; tunique courte et himation, bottes), un genou fléchi; sur le panneau de dr., deux jeunes gens debout de face (tunique courte, bottes): celui de g., qui porte aussi un pétase et un court manteau, pourrait être I., et celui de dr. un serviteur. A dr. un bouc se dresse sur un rocher pour brouter: les deux hommes s'apprêtent à le sacrifier.

4. (= Akme 1*, = Dionysos [in per. or.] 103, = Dionysos/Bacchus 257* – avec bibl.) Pavement polychrome, tesselles de pâte de verre. Nea Paphos, Maison de Dionysos, in situ. – Fin III^e–début IV^e s. ap. J.-C. – Au milieu du panneau, I. (inscr. IKAPIOS) chauve et barbu, le torse nu, drapé dans son himation; de la main g. il mène un attelage de bœufs chargé d'outres de vin; il tourne la tête et tend la main dr. vers Dionysos et Akmé, assis à g. (noms inscrits). Tout à fait à dr. de la scène, deux bergers ivres; au-dessus, l'inscr. explicative OI ΠΡΩΤΟΙ ΟΙΝΟΝ ΠΙΟΝΤΕΣ, «ceux qui les premiers ont bu du vin».

B. Identification incertaine: rencontre de Dionysos et d'Ikarios?

Céramique attique à figures noires

5.* (= Dionysos 803 avec bibl.) Coupe. Paris, Louvre CA 576. De Béotie. – ABV 63, 3: P. de Heidelberg; Add 17. – 560–550 av. J.-C. – Dionysos et I. (?) debout face à face, barbus, couronnés, tenant chacun un rhyton.

6.* (= Dionysos 804* avec bibl.) Amphore. Berlin-DDR, Staatl. Mus. F 1690. D'Étrurie. – ABV 151, 11: P. d'Amasis; Add 42. – 550–540 av. J.-C. – A: à côté de Dionysos, qui tient un rhyton, un personnage couronné: I.? Danseurs barbus et joueur d'aulos. B: cortège.

7. (= Dionysos 805* avec bibl.) Amphore. Vienne, Kunsthist. Mus. IV 4399. – Para 111, 68 bis: P. Affecté; Add 63. – 540–530 av. J.-C. – A: devant

Dionysos debout (canthare), I.? (bâton, canthare); un Silène, un homme nu. B: Dionysos et deux hommes.

8.* Amphore. Londres, BM 1836.2–24.46 (B 153). De Vulci. – ABV 243, 45: P. Affecté; Add 62; CVA 3 pl. 25. – 540–530 av. J.-C. – I. (?) debout tend les deux mains pour accueillir Dionysos qui s'approche, tenant un canthare.

9. Amphore. Londres BM 1837.6–9.99 (B 149), anc. coll. Canino. – ABV 245, 60: P. Affecté; Add 63. – 540–530 av. J.-C. – I. (?) accueille Dionysos qui tient un pied de vigne et un canthare. Derrière eux, un homme s'éloigne; à g. un Satyre dansant.

Céramique attique à figures rouges

10.* Péliké fr. Malibu, Getty Mus. 81.AE.62. – Robertson, M., dans Getty Vases 3 (1986) 71–90 (en part. 83) fig. 1a: P. de Pan plutôt que Myson (J. Frel). – Vers 480–470 av. J.-C. – A: Dionysos debout à dr., barbu, couronné, portant un vêtement richement brodé, les bras tendus et abaissés devant lui; à g. restes d'une Ménade, les bras levés vers une grosse grappe, et d'un Satyre; à dr. main dr. d'un personnage (I.?) qui levait le bras en tenant un rameau de vigne, et extrémité d'un sceptre ornée d'un fleuron. B: départ de → Triptolemos sur son char ailé.

11.* Hydrie. Londres, BM E 166. De Capoue. – CVA 6, pl. 84. – 450–440 av. J.-C. – Trois figures étendues sur une kliné: à dr. Dionysos, qui pose la main sur le dos de son voisin, I.?; une femme tenant un canthare semble s'adresser au Silène que l'on voit par-derrière.

C. Identifications erronées d'Ikarios: la «visite de Dionysos chez Ikarios»

12. (= Dionysos 855* avec bibl.) Relief votif, de marbre. Paris, Louvre MA 741. Du Pirée. – Fin du III^e s. av. J.-C. – A dr. un personnage couché sur une kliné (le défunt héroïsé et non I.), près d'une jeune femme, accueille Dionysos juvénile, ivre et soutenu par un petit Satyre.

13. (= Dionysos 856* avec bibl.) Base en relief, en marbre. Vatican, Sala busti 783. De Rome, villa Negroni Massimi. – 3^e quart du I^{er} s. av. J.-C. – Dio-nysos ivre, soutenu et escorté par le thiasse (Satyres, Silène, une Ménade), est accueilli par un homme (poète plutôt qu'I.) étendu sur une kliné aux côtés d'une jeune femme.

14. (= Dionysos 858* avec bibl.) Relief de marbre. Naples, Mus. Naz. 6713. – Début du I^{er} s. ap. J.-C. – Sur fond de décor architectural, Dionysos barbu, ivre, soutenu par de petits Satyres et suivi du thiasse, s'approche d'un lit où sont étendus un homme qui l'accueille et une jeune femme.

15. (= Dionysos 857 avec bibl.) Relief de terre cuite, plaque «Campana». Londres BM D 531. – Ép. augustéenne. – Scène analogue: Dionysos et son cortège accueillis par un homme étendu sur une kliné aux côtés d'une jeune femme.

COMMENTAIRE

Le mythe du héros attique I. semble avoir été plus populaire dans la périphérie du monde grec qu'à Athènes même, et d'autre part mieux attesté à l'époque romaine qu'aux époques antérieures. Un seul des quatre documents qui représentent avec certitude ce mythe provient d'Athènes, le relief 1; il en va de même pour la série de vases B, d'identification douteuse, qui proviennent pour la plupart d'Italie (6. 8–9[?]. 11).

Cette série de vases donnerait comme date d'apparition du mythe dans l'iconographie le milieu du VI^e s. av. J.-C. Cependant les documents 1–4, qui ne posent aucun problème d'identification, montrent que la légende rencontre plus de succès à l'époque romaine. On peut constater que ces quelques représentations sont très soignées, et enrichies de références précises au mythe: chien, fille, Satyre, pied ou rameau de vigne, inscriptions.

Enfin, l'identification de la scène dite «visite de Dionysos chez I.», illustrée sur la série de reliefs C, est très contestée (cf. Picard, Ch., AJA 38, 1934, 137–152). De fait, d'importantes différences séparent nos premiers documents (1–4) et cette série de reliefs (12–15). Ces derniers ne peuvent figurer la rencontre du dieu avec I., qui aurait eu lieu en plein air, car ils présentent un décor urbain: on y voit des rideaux, des masques de théâtre, des édifices au second ou à l'arrière-plan, éléments qui interdisent de reconnaître dans le sujet de ces reliefs le mythe d'I.

DAPHNÉ GONDICAS

filles, → Penelope, et deux fils, Alyzée (Alyzaïos) et Leukadios. Selon une autre version I., qui était revenu à Lacédémone, épousa la Naïade Périboia dont il eut une fille, Pénélope, et cinq fils, Thoas, Damasippos, Imeusinos, Alètès et Périléos.

SOURCES LITTÉRAIRES: Apollod. bibl. 1 (87), 9, 5; Tzet. Lykophron 511; Schol. Eur. Or. 457; Paus. 3, 1, 4; 12, 1; 20, 10; 8, 34, 4; Strabon, 10, 2, 9 p. 452; 24 p. 461; Hom. Od. 2, 52–53; 15, 14–17; Hermesianax frg. 7, 27–34 Powell.

BIBLIOGRAPHIE: Conticello, B., EAA IV (1961) 82 s. v. «Ikaros 2»; v. Geisau, H., KIPauly II (1967) 1358 s. v. «Ikarios 2»; Heeg, J., REIX 1 (1914) 975–976 s. v. «Ikarios 2»; Schultz, A., MLII 1 (1890–94) 112–114 s. v. «Ikarios 2».

1.* (= Aineias 12, = Alexandros 63*, = Athena 408, = Aphrodite 1426 [autre face], = Euopis 1, = Helene 167 – avec bibl.) Coupe att. f. r. Berlin-Ouest, Staatl. Mus. F 2291. De Vulci. – ARV 2 459, 4: Makron (sign.), potier Hiéron; Para 377; Add 244. – 490–480 av. J.-C. – Noms inscrits. Pâris-Alexandros s'avance vers la g., se retournant vers Hélène qu'il tient par le poignet. Puis vient un personnage barbu, probablement Enée, avec → Timandra. Suit un groupe de trois figures: Euopis se tourne vers deux vieillards barbus, en longue tunique et himation, peut-être pour leur annoncer la nouvelle de l'enlèvement d'Hélène. Le premier vieillard, I. (IKAPIOS), couronné d'olivier et appuyé sur un bâton noueux, lève la main dr. pour exprimer son indignation. L'autre, son frère Tyndare, qui tient de la main g. une longue canne, fait le même geste.

Comme tous les personnages de cette scène sont couronnés, on a supposé que c'est à l'issue d'un festin qu'intervient l'enlèvement d'Hélène. En effet, d'après les Chants Cypriens (Proklos, Davies EGF p. 31), Pâris fut successivement l'hôte des Tyndarides puis de Ménélas (→ Menelaos). Cependant la scène ne doit pas nécessairement être localisée à Amyclées: la présence de Tyndare et d'I. à la cour de Ménélas n'a rien d'étonnant (Kahil, Hélène 29), et c'est de Lacédémone, d'après la tradition la mieux établie, que Pâris emmène l'épouse infidèle. Il est d'ailleurs peu vraisemblable que l'artiste se soit préoccupé de la localisation exacte de l'épisode.

DAPHNÉ GONDICAS

IKAROS → Daidalos et Ikaros

ILIA → Rhea Silvia

ILIAS

IKARIOS II

(Ἰκάριος, Icarus) Héros lacédémonien, fils de Périérès (ou d'Oïbalos) et de Gorgophoné, frère de Tyndare (→ Tyndareos) et d'Hippokoon. Ce dernier chassa ses deux frères de Lacédémone. Réfugié en Acarnanie, I. épousa Polykasté, fille de Lygaios, qui lui donna une (Ἰλιάς) The personification of Homer's poem. The I., a female figure, is represented in allegorical scenes which have been related to the cult of Homer. In these scenes the central figure is Homer attended by his two poems, the I. and the → Odysséia.

LITERARY SOURCES: An epigram (Anth. Pal. 16, 292; Ps.-Plut. v. Hom. 1, 4 p. 243 Allen) seems to give evidence that there was a monument representing Homer with the I. and Odysseus as his daughters, but the monument may be fictive. It has also been thought that the epigram originally accompanied a book illumination.

BIBLIOGRAPHY: Adriani, A., Divagazioni intorno ad una coppa paesistica del Mus. di Alessandria (1959) 32-33; Bieber, SculptHell 127-128; Guerrini, L., EAA IV (1961) 107 s. v. «Iliade»; Havelock, C. M., Hellenistic Art (1971) 200-201; Hinks, R., Myth and Allegory in Ancient Art (1939) 99-101; Pinkwart, D., Das Relief des Archelaos von Priene und die «Musen des Philiskos» (1965) 28; eadem, API IV (1965) 55-65; Spinazzola, Arti 231; Thompson, H. A., Hesperia 23, 1954, 62-65; Treu, G., «Standbilder der Ilias und Odyssee zu Athen», AM 14, 1889, 160-169.

CATALOGUE

Reliefs

1. (= Apollon 972, = Arete I 1 with bibl., = Chronos 1* with bibl., = Historia 1*) Marble relief of the «Apotheosis of Homer» by Archelaos of Priene. London, BM 2191. From Bovillae near Rome. - 130-120 B.C. - For a description see → Apollon 972. In the lowest tier Homer as a god is crowned by → Chronos and → Oikoumene; the personifications of the I. and Odysseus are kneeling at his feet.

2. (Uncertain) Marble sarcophagus, Asiatic. Paris, Louvre Ma 1500. Once Borghese coll. - Morey, Ch. R., Sardis V 1 (1924) 38 fig. 58; Sharpley, J., ArtBull 5, 1922, 66-67 pl. 28; Hinks 101; Baratte/Metzger, SarcLouvre no. 186. - A.D. 220-225. - Right lateral face: In the centre Homer standing with the I. and Odysseus at either side, each with a foot raised on the prow of a ship.

3. Silver goblet. Naples, Mus. Naz. 25301. From Herculaneum. - Guida Ruesch 411 pl. 93; Adriani 33 fig. 12 pl. 48, 139. - 2nd half of 1st cent. B.C. - Homer with the personifications of the I. and Odysseus.

Statue

4.* Marble statue and part of its inscribed base. Athens, Agora S. 2038, I. 6628. From the Agora, southwest corner of the Stoa of Attalos. - Treu 160-169; Thompson 62-65; Travlos, TopAth figs. 308-310; Agora XIV 115; Raubitschek, A. E., Hesperia 23, 1954, 317-319. - Early 2nd cent. A.D. - Torso of a female figure in armour. On its r. side traces of a sword. The inscribed base refers to the I.: «ΙΑΙΑΣ Η ΜΕΘ ΟΜΗΡΟΝ ΕΓΩ ΚΑΙ ΠΡΟΣΘΕΝ ΟΜΗΡΟΥ/ΠΑΡΣΤΑΤΙΣ ΙΔΡΥΜΑΙ ΤΩΙ ΜΕ ΤΕΚΟΝΤΙ ΝΕΩ[Ι]».

COMMENTARY

The first representation of the I. on 1 dates from Hellenistic times when mythical or early poets are given mythological attendants, and when the cult of Homer produced a great number of such allegorical compositions. On 1, in the main scene, where Homer is crowned by Chronos and Oikoumene represented as Ptolemy IV and Arsinoe III respectively, the personifications of the I. and Odysseus are kneeling on either side of the poet's throne. On Homer's right the I. crouches carrying a sword and at his other side the Odysseus holds up an «aphlaston» from a ship's stern. The I. represented with the Odysseus as female figures in armour also hold swords on 3 and 4. It has been noticed that the I. has the place of honour on the poet's right; she is slightly larger in scale than the Odysseus, especially on 1. This iconographical emphasis on the I. has been interpreted in the light of a passage of Longinus, that she was the child of the poet's youth whereas the Odysseus was a work of his old age. On 2, a Roman work, the personifications of the two poems are Muse-like figures with no attributes to distinguish between them. Hinks noticed that the Archelaos relief (1) is of a dramatic and allegorical type, whereas 2 and 3 show a formal symmetrical composition. The statue 4, the inscribed base of which gives the clue to its association with the I., and a similar one of the Odysseus, were parts of a monumental Hadrianic group, where Homer with sceptre and scroll in his hands, as on 1, was the central figure. This group, according to Thompson, was the principal ornament of the library of Pantainos in the Athenian Agora. The epigram Anth. Pal. 16, 292 (see lit. sources) offers the possibility of the existence of a similar group (Thompson 65).

EFFIE LYGOURI-TOLIA

ILION

(Ἰλιον, Ilium) Personifikation der gleichnamigen Stadt.

LITERARISCHE QUELLEN: Siehe Brückner, A., in Dörpfeld, W., Troja und Ilion (1902) 572-593.

BIBLIOGRAPHIE: Büchner, L., RE IX 1 (1914) 1065 s. v. «Ilion 5»; Drexler W., ML II 1 (1890-94) 118 s. v. «Ilion»; v. Fritze, H., in Dörpfeld, W., Troja und Ilion II (1902) 495: 527-528; Meyer, E., RE Suppl. XIV (1974) 809-817 s. v. «Troia 1»; Vlad Borelli, L., EAA VII (1966) 999-1007 s. v. «Troia».

1.* (= Athena 58e, Variante) AE Ilion, Crispina († 183 n. Chr.), Elagabalus (218-222 n. Chr.) - BMC Troas, etc. 67, 70 Taf. 13, 1 (das Palladion wird irrtümlich als Spindel und die bewaffnete Göttin als Commodus bezeichnet); v. Fritze 495 Nr. 86 Beil. 64, 86; 527-528; SNG Copenhagen 416; Lacroix, Reproductions 110; Bellinger, A. R., Troy. The Coins, Suppl. Monograph 2 (1961) 60-61 Nr. T 200 Taf. 9. - Rs.: Nach r. stehende I. mit Mauerkrone, auf der Linken das Palladion haltend, die Rechte der nach l. stehenden, mit einem Speer bewaffneten Athena oder → Roma reichend. Zwischen beiden Schild.

KOMMENTAR

Die eine Mauerkrone tragende Tyche auf Münzen Ilions (1) wird als Personifikation dieser Stadt durch das Halten der bekannten Kultstatue des Ortes, des Palladions, gekennzeichnet. I. überreicht diese Statue einer bewaffneten weiblichen Person, die entweder Roma oder Athena sein dürfte, deren genaue Identifikation aber wohl offen bleiben muß, da sowohl Roma als auch Athena auf Münzen der Stadt vorkommen und beide inhaltlich und politisch auf diesen Prägungen bedeutsam waren. RAINER VOLLKOMMER

ILIONEUS → Niobidai

ILIOUPERSIS → LIMC Suppl.

ILISOS

(Ἰλισός, Ἰλισσός [Liddell/Scott: falsa lectio in Handschriften] Ἰλισός, Ἰλισσός, Ilisos, Elisos) Personifikation des attischen Flusses, an welchem die Μοῦσαι Ἰλισιάδες oder Ἰλισίδες verehrt wurden (→ Mousa, Mousai). Dem Plinius (nat. 4, 24) ist ein Ort in Attika mit dem Namen Ilisos bekannt, und in der Suda s. v. Ἰλισσός wird Ilisos als Ort und Fluß erwähnt.

LITERARISCHE QUELLEN: Plat. Ax. 364a; Kritias 112a; Strabon 9, 1, 24 p. 400; Sen. Phaedra 13-16; Paus. 1, 19, 5; Ptol. geog. 3, 15, 7; Pollux 8, 122; Avienus orb. terr. 582-585, 1217-219; Themistios or. 2, 34c; Nonn. Dion. 41, 223; 47, 13, 82, 265; Phot. s. v. Ἰλισσός; Tzetz. Lykophron 1424, 1432. Ältere Autoren leiten den Namen des I. etymologisch vom Verb «ἐλίσσω» ab und erklären ihn als «Krummbach»; vgl. Nonn. Dion. 47, 13 (Wachsmuth, C., Die Stadt Athen im Altertum I [1874] 116 Anm. 1; Grasberger, L., Studien zu den griechischen Ortsnamen [1969] 295, 299). P. Kretschmer, Einleitung in die Geschichte der griechischen Sprache (1896) 405, behauptet, daß der Name des Flusses ein kleinasiatischer Ortsname sei, der auf griechischem Boden begegnet. In den älteren Quellen ist I. als der attische Fluß bekannt, an dessen Ufer, nach einer Version des Mythos, → Oreithyia (I) von → Bo-reas geraubt worden ist (Hdt. 7, 189; Plat. Phaidros 229b; Apoll. Rhod. 1, 215; Apollod. bibl. 3, 15, 2; Stat. Theb. 12, 630-633; Paus. 1, 19, 5; Maximos von Ephesos peri katarchon 417-419, Poetae Bucolici et Didactici [1862] 111; Avienus orb. terr. 585; Orph. Arg. 219-220; Nonn. Dion. 39, 190). Die Verehrung der Musen bei Paus. 1, 19, 5 (Μοῦσαι Ἰλισιάδες), Herodianos prosodia katholike 1 p. 213, 6 Lentz (M. Ἰλισίδες) und Steph. Byz. s. v. Ἰλισσός (M. Ἰλισσίδες). Der I. stand in geographischer Beziehung mit der Quelle → Kallirhoe (II) und der Krene Enneakrunos (Thuk. 2, 15, 3-5; Plat. Ax. 364a; Himerios frg. 1, 7; Etym. m. s. v. Ἐννεάκρουνας), von der das Wasser für das Brautbad geholt wurde (Tölle-Kastenbein, R., Jdl 101, 1986, 55-73). Von Nonnos (Dion. 39, 190) wird I. als «γα-μοστόλος» (derjenige, der die Hochzeit vorbereitet) bezeichnet. An den «mystischen Ufern» des Flusses fanden die Reinigungsriten während der Kleinen Mysterien (oder Mysterien in Agrai) statt (Stat. Theb. 8, 762-766; Polyainos 5, 17, 1; Clem. Al. strom. 5, 70, 7; Himerios or. 10, 114; 47, 28-29). Von den Athenern wurde I. als Gott verehrt (Maximos von Tyros 2, 1; Nonn. Dion. 39, 190). Daß I. Kult genoß, beweisen auch zwei Inschriften der 2. Hälfte des 5. Jh. v. Chr., welche sich auf das heilige Geld und die Schatzmeisterurkunden der Götter (IG I³ 369, 383) beziehen.

BIBLIOGRAPHIE: Becatti, G., EAA IV (1961) 107 s. v. «Ilisos»; Hamdorf, Kultpersonifikationen 14, 79 (75), 81 (103); Kolbe, W., RE IX 1 (1914) 1067-1068 s. v. «Ilisos»; Matz, F., Die Naturpersonifikationen in der griechischen Kunst (1913) 117; Meyer, E., KlPaus II (1967) 1365 s. v. «Ilisos»; Steuding, H., ML II 1 (1890-97) 119 s. v. «Ilisos»; Waser, O., RE VI 2 (1909) 2784, 2785, 2800-2801 s. v. «Flußgötter»; Weiß, Fluß 102, 148, 159-162, 168.

KATALOG

DEUTUNG UNSICHER

1.* Statue V aus dem Westgiebel des Parthenon in Athen, Marmor. Athen, Akr. Mus. 887. - Matz 117; Brommer, F., Die Skulpturen der Parthenon-Giebel (1963) 55, 169-170 Taf. 127-128 (mit älterer Lit.); Brouskari, CatAcr 142-143 Abb. 256; Brommer, F., The Sculptures of the Parthenon (1979) 52 Taf. 129. - 438/432 v. Chr. - Ein nackter Jüngling (I. ?) frontal auf seinem r. gebeugten Bein sitzend und leicht nach vorne und l. geneigt (wo eine weibliche Figur [Kallirhoe?] gelagert ist). Sein Himation ist im Rücken zu erkennen. Auch als → Kephisos gedeutet (vgl. Zusammenstellung der verschiedenen Deutungen bei Brommer a. O. [1963] 169-170 mit Faltaf.).

2. (= Acheloos 197* mit Lit., = Apollon 968 mit Lit., = Artemis 1182 mit Lit., = Eileithyia 88 mit Lit., = Fluvii 36, = Kallirrhoe II 2) Weihrelief der Xenokrateia, Marmor. Athen, Nat. Mus. 2756. Aus Neu-Phaleron. - Weiß, Fluß 102, 159-162, 168 F4 Taf. 15, 2; Edwards, C. M., Greek Votive Reliefs to Pan and the Nymphs (1985) 310-338 Nr. 3 Taf. 2 (mit Lit.). - 405/390 v. Chr. - In der Mitte, frontal stehend, ein junger, bartloser, ungehörnter, barfußiger Mann (I. ?). Er faßt mit seiner l. Hand die Falten seines Himations, das seine r. Schulter freiläßt. L. Apollon, Artemis, Leto (oder Hermes), Xenokrateia und Xeniadēs, Kephisos. R. zwei Paare von Nymphen, Kallirrhoe und Acheloos. Zur mit dem Relief gefundenen Inschrift → Artemis 1182.

3. (= Acheloos 210* mit Lit., = Artemis 1028* mit Lit., = Echelos 1 mit Lit., = Fluvii 22) Weihrelief (sog. Echelos-Relief), Marmor. Athen, Nat. Mus. 1783. Aus Neu-Phaleron. - Weiß, Fluß 159, 160-162, 168 F 5 Taf. 15, 1; Edwards, a. O. 2, 339-369 Nr. 4 Taf. 3 (mit Lit.). - 400/390 v. Chr. - Doppelrelief. Auf der Rückseite des Reliefs l. Artemis, neben ihr Kephisos (?), in der Mitte, frontal stehend, ein bärtiger, gehörnter Mann, den Unterleib ins Himation gehüllt (I. ?), r. drei Nymphen.

KOMMENTAR

Es wäre möglich, daß in den Ecken des Parthenon-Westgiebels, der den Streit zwischen Athena und Poseidon um das attische Land darstellt, sich zwei der bedeutendsten Flüsse Attikas befinden, d. h. Kephisos und I. (I), besonders I., nahe bei der Quelle Kallirrhoe, mit der er nicht nur geographisch, sondern auch kultisch in Verbindung stand. Für die mögliche Benennung der zentralen, frontal stehenden Figur des Xenokrateia-Reliefs (2) als I. vgl. die gut fundierte Meinung von Weiß, Flußg., die auf dem ähnlichen Aussehen dieser Figur und der links von ihr stehenden basiert, welche auch eine Flußgottheit (Kephisos?) sein kann. Weiter aber kann sich diese Vermutung auch auf das Dasein, die örtliche Nähe und die völlige Übereinstimmung zweier Flußgottheiten auf dem Echelos-Relief (3) stützen, die auch als Kephisos und I. angesprochen werden können, was eine Erklärung in der Mündung des Ilisos in den Kephisos bei Athen finden kann (s. Travlos, TopAth 164 Abb. 213). Auf dem Relief schlingt I. seinen rechten Arm um die Hüfte des links von ihm stehenden Mannes (Kephisos?). Hier wendet sich wohl I. zu seinen Nymphen im Gespräch (Plat. Phaidros 230b; Themistios or. 13, 166a). Die Ilisowiedergabe auf 3 kann noch durch die auf der Vorderseite des Reliefs dargestellte Entführung der Basile (oder Iasile) durch Echelos begründet werden. Diese Basile wurde im Ilisogebiet kultisch verehrt. Aus literarischen Quellen sind uns Raubscenen im Ilisogebiet bekannt, z. B. der Raub der attischen Mädchen durch die Pelasger (Hdt. 6, 137; s. Schefold, K., AntK 23, 1980, 104) und Oreithyias durch Boreas. Die kleinen Mysterien standen mit Demeter und ihrer von Hades entführten Kore in Verbindung. Außerdem kann die Eigenschaft des Flusses als «γαμοστόλος» die obengenannte Vermutung stützen.

ROSA PROSKYNITOPOULOU

ILOS

(Ἴλος, Ἐἰλος) Heros Eponymos und Gründer von Ilion, Sohn des Tros und der Kallirrhoe, Gemahl der Eurydike, Vater des → Laomedon.

LITERARISCHE QUELLEN: Schon Hom. Il. 20, 230–232 teilt uns seine Genealogie mit. An weiteren Stellen (10, 415; 11, 166. 371–372; 24, 349) wird vor allem sein Grab genannt. Apollod. bibl. 3 (142–143) 12, 3 berichtet, daß er auf Grund eines Orakelspruches aufbricht, um eine neue Stadt zu gründen. Eine schekige Kuh soll ihn geleiten und soll ihm bei ihrem Halt die geeignete Stelle zeigen. Als sie sich niederläßt, baut er dort Ilion auf (vgl. Diod. 4, 75). Apollod. erklärt weiter, das Ilos Zeus jedoch um ein weiteres Zeichen bittet, um zu wissen, ob dies wirklich der vorgesehene Platz sei. Daraufhin findet er am nächsten Tag vor seinem Zelt das Palladion. Nach Apollod. bibl. 3 (145) 12, 3, 7, errichtete er einen Tempel für das Palladion.

BIBLIOGRAPHIE: v. Geisau, H., KIPauly II (1967) 1370 s. v. «Ilos 1»; Kroll, W., REIX I (1914) 1089 s. v. «Ilos 1»; Sichtermann, H., LAW 1375 s. v. «Ilos»; Weizsäcker, P., ML II 1 (1890–94) 119–121 s. v. «Ilos 2».

KATALOG

DEUTUNG AUF ILOS DURCH INSCHRIFT GESICHERT

1.* (= Athena 58f, Var.) AE, Ilion, Julia Domna († 217 n. Chr.) und Caracalla, 198–211 n. Chr. – BMC Troas, etc. 69, 87; v. Fritze, H., Die Münzen von Ilion, in Dörpfeld, W., Troja und Ilion II (1902) 496 Nr. 91 Beil. 64; Lacroix, Reproductions 110 Taf. 7, 12; Bellinger, A. R., Troy. The Coins (1961) 64 Nr. T 220 Taf. 10; 68 Nr. T 241. – Rs.: I. in Ärmelchiton und Mantel nach I. vor dem Palladion auf Säule stehend und über brennenden Altar mit einer Schale in der Rechten offernd. ΙΛΙΩΝ ΕΙΛΑΟΣ oder ΙΛΙΩΝ ΙΑΟΣ.

DEUTUNG AUF ILOS AUSZUSCHIEDEN

2. AE, Faustina II. († 176 n. Chr.), Commodus, 180–192 n. Chr., Crispina († 187 n. Chr.); Julia Domna († 217 n. Chr.). – BMC Troas, etc. 64, 53 Taf. 12, 10; 66–68, 60. 67–68. 76; v. Fritze, a. O. I, 491 Nr. 68–69 Beil. 63; 494–495 Nr. 85 Beil. 64; SNG Copenhagen 397. 413; Bellinger, a. O. I, 54 Nr. T 166 Taf. 8; 59 Nr. T 189 Taf. 9; 60 Nr. T 198 Taf. 9; 65 Nr. T 221 Taf. 10. – Rs.: R. ein Mann in Exomis, eine mit dem Kopf nach oben an einem Baum aufgehängte Kuh mit einem Messer offernd; davor Palladion auf Säule.

KOMMENTAR

Obwohl Ilos in der antiken Literatur als mythischer namensgebender Gründer von Ilion behandelt worden ist, kennen wir bisher nur eine Münzserie von Caracalla und Julia Domna, die Ilos wiedergibt (1). Er wird hierbei immer im gleichen Schema dargestellt, vor dem Palladion offernd. Dies weist auf jenen Teil der Gründungslegende, nach welchem er als weiteren Beweis, daß er wirklich an der richtigen Stelle die Stadt gründe, das Palladion erhielt. Hiermit konnte neben der Gründung Ilions auch als wichtiges Element auf das Palladion hingewiesen werden, ein Relikt, das für die Römer und die Stadt Rom sehr viel bedeutete und symbolkräftig wirkte und so auf die enge Beziehung beider Städte hinweisen konnte. Die von Wroth vorgeschlagene Deutung einer von Ilos vollzogenen Opferung vor dem Palladion auf einigen Münzen (2) kann durch das Fehlen einer bezeichnenden Inschrift nicht nachgewiesen werden und sollte zurückgestellt werden, weil sicherlich nicht unser Held gemeint sein kann: Dieser wäre nicht wie hier mit der für den Diener typischen Exomis, sondern mit einem feierlichen Gewand wie auf 1 bekleidet und hätte zudem ein derartiges blutiges Opfer, wie es bei dieser Szene zu vermuten ist, wohl kaum selbst vollzogen.

RAINER VOLLKOMMER

IMBRASOS

(Ἰμβρασιός) Auch Parthenios (Παρθένιος) genannter Bach und entsprechender Flußgott auf Samos, an dessen Mündung ins Meer an der Südküste der Insel das Heraion von Samos liegt. Der Lauf des in der Regenzeit stark anschwellenden Fließchens hat sich schon in der Antike mehrfach verändert, teils durch natürliche Einwirkungen, teils durch menschliche Maßnahmen im Verlauf der Baugeschichte des Heraion. Mit → Hera stand der I. in mythologischer und kultischer Verbindung: an seinen Ufern wächst die Lygos, eine botanisch agnus castus und deutsch Keuschlamm genannte Weidenart (neugriechisch lygariá), unter der die Göttin nach samischer Tradition geboren sein soll. Im Kult der Hera diente I.-Wasser zur Füllung der diversen Reinigungsbecken im Heiligtum. Die Frage, ob auch das Kultbild im I. gebadet wurde, wird heute von einigen Autoren negativ beantwortet. Die von Buschor aufgestellte und seither vielfach wiederholte These (so z. B. von Ginouvès, R., Balaneutikè (1962) 289 Anm. 6; Muthmann 171–172; v. Geisau, H., KIPauly II (1967) 1373–1374 s. v. «Imbrasos»), das Kultbild der Hera sei jährlich an den Tonaia im I. gebadet worden, läßt sich weder durch den archäologischen Befund im Heraion beweisen, noch durch die literarische Überlieferung stützen (ausführlich gegen Buschor Kipp 159–160 Anm. 6a; Furtwängler, A. E., AM 95, 1980, 150. 157–158 mit Anm. 20; 197 Anm. 247). Trotzdem sollte man die Möglichkeit eines Bades des Kultbildes im I. nicht so kategorisch ausschließen wie Kipp und Furtwängler; vgl. Pötscher 128 und hier unten, lit. Quellen.

LITERARISCHE QUELLEN: Als mythische Persönlichkeit ist die Figur des I. kaum ausgestaltet worden. Eine Erzählung des Apoll. Rhod. (in der Gründung von Naukratis, frg. 7 Powell) nennt als Tochter des I. und der Chesiades die Nympe Okyrrhoe, eine der unglücklichen Geliebten des Apollon. Auch von der Beziehung des Flusses zur samischen Hera haben sich nur geringe Spuren in der literarischen Überlieferung niedergeschlagen. Paus. 7, 4, 4 erwähnt die Lygos an den Ufern des I., unter der die Göttin gemäß einer lokalen Tradition geboren sein soll. Als freie Interpretation erweist Kipp 174 Anm. 50 die an diese Stelle anknüpfende und von anderen oft wiederholte Behauptung Buschors, Hera habe hier auch «die Jahre ihrer Kindheit und Jungfräulichkeit verbracht». Ebenso wenig beweisen läßt sich auch Buschors Annahme, das Kultbild der Hera sei am Tonaia-Fest im I. gebadet worden, um die Göttin wieder jungfräulich werden zu lassen bis zum Tage ihres Hieros Gamos mit Zeus (Buschor 1, 2; dagegen ausführlich Kipp 159. 160–172 bzw. Ende Anm. 50). Aus dem Bericht des Menodotos (FGH 541 F 1 [12], dazu Kipp 158–160; Pötscher 125–134) geht hervor, daß das Kultbild an den Tonaia zum Ufer (εἰς τὴν ἰχθυή) gebracht wurde, um dort gereinigt zu werden. Die Beschreibung des Festritus ist in das Aition für diesen samischen Kultbrauch verwoben, und da das Kultbild in dem aitiologischen Mythos (vgl. Pötscher 126–127) zum Meer gebracht wird, setzen Kipp und in seiner Folge Furtwängler a. O. 197 Anm. 247 voraus, daß das rituelle Bad einzig im Meer erfolgt sein könnte. Ob im Meer oder in dem dort mündenden I.-Arm ist, wie Pötscher 128 aber richtig feststellt, nicht zu entscheiden. Es sei angemerkt, daß mit ἰχθυή sowohl das Meeres- wie auch das Flußufer gemeint sein konnte (Belege bei Liddell/Scott 767 s. v. ἰχθυή).

Der I. als lokaler Gott der Insel Samos, an dem die Göttin geboren wurde, wäre jedoch der geeignete Spender des wesensmäßig zu Hera gehörenden Brautbades, das immer fließendes Süßwasser, kein Meerwasser war: Nilsson, GrRel I² 103. Es sei auch daran erinnert, daß Flußwasser nicht nur beim Brautbad, sondern auch bei der Geburt eine wichtige Rolle spielte: vgl. Bad des neugeborenen Zeuskindes in der Neda Kall. h. 1, 15–41; Nilsson, GrRel I² 95. Die enge Beziehung zwischen Hera, Samos und dem I. bezeugt ein Epigramm der Anth. Pal. 6, 243 (vgl. Simon, Götter 44). In diesem Sinn würde auch verständlich, warum einerseits Hera die «imbrasische» oder auch Parthenie (zur Liste ihrer Epitheta s. Eitrem, S., RE VIII 1 [1912] 382–383) genannt wurde, und andererseits, warum der I. mit zweitem Namen Parthenios hieß: Strabon 10, 2, 17 p. 457; Apoll. Rhod. 1, 187–188 und 2, 866–867 mit Schol. zu 2, 865–872a; Eust. ad Dion. Per. 533 (GGM II 322); Kall. frg. 599 Pf.; vgl. zur Etymologie auch Tischler 114. Epigraphische Quelle: Buschor 2, 2–4: Abschlußstein einer Brückenwand mit Inschrift (spätes 2. Jh. v. Chr.), die in drei Heiligpreisungen den Flußgott I., die Parthenie (also entweder die so genannte Insel Samos oder Hera selbst) und den Parthenios nennt. Im Hinblick auf die Gleichsetzung von I. und Parthenios besteht kein Zwang, wie Buschor 2, 10 zwei getrennte Flußgötter anzunehmen.

BIBLIOGRAPHIE: Barron, J. P., The Silver Coins of Samos (1966) I. 3–5.90 und passim; Büchner, L., Eitrem, S., REIX I (1914) 1104–1105 s. v. «Imbrasos 1. 2»; Buschor, E., AM 55, 1930, 1. 7–32 (= Buschor 1); idem, «Imbrasos», AM 68, 1953, 1–10 (= Buschor 2); Conticello, B., EAA IV (1961) 119 s. v. «Imbrasos»; Gardner, P., «Samos and Samian Coins», NC 1882, 201–290, bes. 216. 283; Imhoof-Blumer, Flußg. 288, 283–284; Kipp, G., «Zum Herakult auf Samos», Innsbrucker Beiträge zur Kulturwissenschaft 18 (1974) 157–209; Muthmann, F., Mutter und Quelle (1975) 171–172; Pötscher, W., Hera. Eine Strukturanalyse im Vergleich mit Athen (1987) 128–129; Robert, L., A travers l'Asie Mineure (1980) 87; Tischler, J., Kleinasiatische Hydronomie (1977) 114 s. v. «Parthenios»; v. Vacano, O., Typenkatalog der antiken Münzen Kleinasiens (Hrsg. Kienast, D.) (1986) 238 s. v. «Imbrasos».

KATALOG

Alle Darstellungen des personifizierten I. finden sich auf kaiserzeitlichen Bronzeprägungen aus Samos. Der bärtige Flußgott lagert nach I., trägt um den Unterkörper ein Himation und ist mit verschiedenen Attributen ausgestattet.

A. Durch Inschrift oder Attribut gesicherte Darstellungen

1.* AE, Trajan (98–117 n. Chr.). – Gardner 283, 23; – Imhoof-Blumer, Flußg. 288, 283 Taf. 9, 22. –

Rs.: I. mit Schilfrohr in der Rechten, die auf dem erhobenen Knie ruht, und Füllhorn in dem auf ein ausfließendes Quellgefäß gestützten l. Arm. IMBPAEΩE (retr.): ΣΑΜΙΩΝ im Abschnitt.

2.* AE, Traianus Decius (248–251 n. Chr.). – BMC Ionia 390, 353 Taf. 37, 15; Imhoof-Blumer, Flußg 288, 284 Taf. 9, 23. – Rs.: I. wie auf 1, nur statt Schilfrohr einen Pfau, heiliges Tier der samischen Hera, im Arm haltend. ΣΑΜΙΩΝ. Zum Pfau beim Kultbild vgl. → Hera 156; unter 160. 161; vgl. auch 163; unter 170; 181.

B. Darstellungen ohne Namensbeischrift, jedoch vom Typus her gesichert

Typus wie auf 1 und 2 mit allgemeinen Attributen: Schilf, Füllhorn, Quellgefäß (die beiden letzteren nicht obligatorisch) und ΣΑΜΙΩΝ.

3.* AE, Hadrian (117–138 n. Chr.): BMC Ionia 373, 238; SNG v. Aulock 2306. – Commodus (180–192 n. Chr.): BMC Ionia 375, 252–253. – Geta Caesar (198–209 n. Chr.): SNG Copenhagen 1744. – Elagabal (218–222 n. Chr.): SNG Copenhagen 1746. – Severus Alexander (222–235 n. Chr.): Gardner 283, 22 Taf. 6, 13; BMC Ionia 380, 281–282; SNG Copenhagen 1749. – Gordian III. (238–244 n. Chr.): BMC Ionia 383, 307–308; SNG Copenhagen 1763. – Tranquillina (242–244 n. Chr.): BMC Ionia 384, 316. – Philippus II. (244–249 n. Chr.): BMC Ionia 387, 334; SNG Copenhagen Nr. 1777. – Traianus Decius (248–251 n. Chr.): BMC Ionia 390, 352; SNG Copenhagen 1784–1785. – Gallienus (253–268 n. Chr.): BMC Ionia 395, 385–386; SNG Copenhagen 1811. – SNG v. Aulock 2333; SNG v. Aulock 8032. – Valerian II. (?) (256–258 n. Chr.): SNG Copenhagen 1819.

C. Ungesicherte Darstellungen

Stierprotomen auf samischen Silbermünzen

4. AR, Samos, mit geringen Variationen des Bildtypus auf verschiedenen Nominalen von 522 bis ca. 185 v. Chr. (Barron 154: Ende der AR-Prägungen). – Barron 174–226 passim und Taf. 5–6. 8–14. 17–30 passim. – Vs. und Rs.: Grundtypus, a) frontal gezeigter Kopf eines Löwenfells; b) Stierprotome, zumeist nach r., selten nach l. Auf den frühen Serien immer im quadratum incusum, auf späteren Serien mit wechselnden Beizeichen, Beamtennamen bzw. mit dem abgekürzten oder ausgeschriebenen Ethnikon (ΣΑ, ΣΑΜΙΩΝ).

KOMMENTAR

Obwohl der I. schon in griechischer Zeit von nicht geringer Bedeutung für das Heraion von Samos war, stammen die erhaltenen Bildzeugnisse, die den personifizierten I. zeigen (1. 2. 3), sämtlich aus römischer Zeit. Die Bildform, der gelagerte Flußgott mit den diversen, seine Wassernatur kennzeichnenden Attributen, folgt der allgemeinen Typologie römischer Flußgottbilder (→ Fluvii 44–46). Offenbar beginnt die Serie der samischen Flußgottprägungen unter Hadrian (1). Da man es auf der hadrianischen Prägung für nötig befand, den Namen I. beizuschreiben, was bei allen späteren Emissionen nicht mehr der Fall ist (2–3), kann man überlegen, ob das Einsetzen der I.-Darstellungen unter Hadrian vielleicht auf ein zu dieser Zeit aufgestelltes Bildwerk des Flußgottes im Heraion zurückgeht.

Daß der I. vor seiner Personifikation in der römischen Kunst nicht bildlich wiedergegeben worden wäre, ist unwahrscheinlich. Ob man allerdings auf einem Tonrelief aus dem Heraion von Samos (→ Hera 201) wirklich eine frühe Darstellungsform des Flußlaufes erkennen darf, bleibt höchst fraglich. Das Relief zeigt Hera mit Zeus zwischen der Lygos und einer eingetauchten Zickzacklinie, die als der Fluß I. gedeutet wird. Zwar gehören Bandform und Zickzack in den Typenschatz früher Darstellungen von Wasser (dazu Weiß, Flußg 18–19; vgl. auch Attribut der Mittelfigur des «Dreileibigen» von der Athener Akropolis, das als Wasser gedeutet wird, so z. B. Boardman, GSAP zu Abb. 193), doch scheint das Muster hier eher im Hinblick auf das samische Holzrelief (→ Hera 202*) als zurückgeschlagener Saum an Heras Gewand zu deuten zu sein (Kipp 180 Anm. 51).

Für die Zeit der autonomen Münzprägung auf Samos wäre zu überlegen, ob mit der häufig als Rs.-Typus der AR-Münzen erscheinenden Rinderprotome (4) (Barron 1. 3–5. 90) nur Gegebenheiten des samischen Herakultes zum Ausdruck gebracht werden sollten (a. O. 4. 90; Weiß, Flußg 198 Anm. 431), oder ob nicht der Bedeutungsgehalt «Flußgott» ebenfalls in den Münzbildern mitschwingt. Eine solche Deutung wagte bereits Gardner 216, jedoch wurde er wegen des typologisch unkorrekten Vergleichs mit der Mannstierprotome des → Gelas von Barron a. O. 4. Anm. 26 widerlegt. Die Assoziation Stier/Flußgott wird heute verständlicher, wenn man bedenkt, daß einerseits die Flußgötter unter der Bildform eines rein theriomorph wiedergegebenen Stieres dargestellt werden konnten (→ Fluvii 1–3) und andererseits die Belege für die allgemein enge Beziehung der Hera zu den Rinderherden und damit zum süßen Wasser wie auch zum Meerwasser (Seefahrt) zahlreich sind. Quellen und Bildzeugnisse z. B. Simon, Götter 44–46; Muthmann 171–175 (jedoch mit Irrtümern!); Kyrieleis, H., AM 95, 1980, 92–94; → Hera 114. Trifft die angesprochene Hypothese zu, böten Tetrobole aus Samos, die als Beizeichen zur Rinderprotome den Pfau tragen (Barron 5 Anm. 36; 223 Taf. 28, 9–11), eine interessante Parallele zu 3 mit Pfau. CARINA WEISS

IMMARADOS

(Ismaros, Ἰμμαράδος, Ἰσμάρος) Sohn des → Eumolpos, der im «Eleusinischen Krieg» ein thrakisches

Heer gegen die Athener führte, allein oder zusammen mit seinem Vater, der auch als alleiniger Heerführer überliefert ist. Ihr Gegner ist → Erechtheus.

LITERARISCHE QUELLEN: Die Nachrichten in bezug auf die Anführung des thrakischen Heeres durch Eumolpos sind LIMC IV 56 gesammelt. Davon weicht Paus. 1, 5, 2 (ebenso 1, 27, 4 und 1, 38, 3) ab, der sich auf altattische Überlieferung beruft und Immarados als Gegner des Erechtheus bezeichnet, der ihn getötet habe. Toepffer 43 glaubt, daß wir «in dieser Version noch die mißverständlichen Spuren alter, unverfälschter Sagenüberlieferung erhalten haben». Bei Apollod. bibl. 3, 202 stirbt Ismaros, der mit einer Tochter des Thrakerkönigs Tegyrios verheiratet ist, schon vor dem «Eleusinischen Krieg». Er ist bei ihm ebenfalls Sohn des Eumolpos, denn Ismaros ist nur eine Variante zu I. In der Sagenforschung wird er mit Ismaros, dem Heros der gleichnamigen Stadt in Thrakien (vgl. Hom. Od. 9, 198), gleichgesetzt, dessen Eltern nach Etym. m. 477, 1 Ares und Thrassa sind.

BIBLIOGRAPHIE: Zum «Eleusinischen Krieg» → Erechtheus, LIMC IV 927–928. Speziell zu I.: Eitrem, S., RE IX 1 (1914) 1107 s. v. «Immarados»; Stoll, H. W., ML II 1 (1890–94) 124 s. v. «Immarados» und 550 s. v. «Ismaros»; Toepffer, I., Attische Genealogie (1889) 43–44.

KATALOG

1. (= Eumolpos 15, = Erechtheus 69) Bronze-Gruppe auf der Athener Akropolis (Paus. 1, 27, 4). Die beiden zum Kampf gegeneinander antretenden Krieger galten allgemein als Erechtheus und Eumolpos, während Paus. den letzteren durch I. ersetzt, wobei wohl genealogische Erwägungen eine Rolle spielten; cf. Musti, D./Beschi, L., Pausania Guida della Grecia, Libro I, L'Attica (1982) 411. Paus. erwähnt den Künstler der uns verlorenen Gruppe nicht, während er 9, 30, 1 von einem Erechtheus des Myron in Athen spricht, der das sehenswerteste Werk des Meisters sei. Es ist nicht ganz gesichert, ob damit der Erechtheus aus dieser Gruppe gemeint ist, aber doch wahrscheinlich (vgl. Kron zu → Erechtheus 69). Bewegte Figuren waren für Myron charakteristisch, und der andere Erechtheus in Athen, den Beschi als Alternative nennt (a. O. 364 zu Paus. 1, 5, 2), war innerhalb der Eponymengruppe (vgl. → Erechtheus 79) sicher ruhig stehend gebildet. Nachwirkungen der Gruppe auf der Akropolis sind bisher nicht überzeugend nachgewiesen (vgl. Kron zu → Erechtheus 69).

HYPOTHETISCH

2. Giebel von der Darstellung eines ionischen Tempels aus dem Komplex der «Ara Pietatis» des Claudius (Einweihung 43 n. Chr.). Rom, Pal. Cons. 1386. – Hommel, P., Studien zu den röm. Figurengiebeln der Kaiserzeit (1954) 34–41 (Iliupersis); Simon, E., in Helbig II* Nr. 1751 (Deutung offen gelassen); Torelli, M., Typology and Structure of Roman Historical Reliefs (1982) 80 (Keltomachie, mit Hinweis auf weitere Vorschläge in Anm. 87); Simon, E., Augustus (1986) 19. 234–235 zu Abb. 7 («Eleusinischer Krieg?»). Der Giebel wurde von G.-Ch. Picard (Nachweis bei Simon) überzeugend dem sacrarium des Augustus, das seine Witwe Livia auf dem Palatin errichtete, zugewiesen. Baustil und Proportionen sind von der Nordhalle des Erechteion auf der Akropolis übernommen. Der Hypothese von Simon zufolge stammt auch die Giebelkomposition von dort. Der Unterliegende in der zentralen Kampfgruppe, in Barbarentracht, könnte dann Eumolpos oder I. sein, der siegende Heros in der Mitte Erechtheus, dessen Darstellung am Erechteion sinnvoll wäre.

DEUTUNG ABZULEHNEN

3. (= Erechtheus 71 mit Lit.). Ostfries des Hephaisteion. – Bester Vorschlag zur Datierung wohl 435/30 v. Chr.; vgl. Kron zu → Erechtheus 71. – Der Vorschlag zur Deutung auf den «Eleusinischen Krieg» ist zu finden bei Dörig, J., La frise Est de l'Héphaisteion (1985) 67–73; überzeugende Widerlegung bei Kron a. O., zu der hinzugefügt sei, daß die typischen Trachtmerkmale der Thraker (Fellmützen, Stiefel) von keiner Figur getragen werden.

KOMMENTAR

Eumolpos oder I. war in einer Bronze-Gruppe auf der Akropolis dargestellt (1), wahrscheinlich von der Hand des Myron, also aus dem mittleren 5. Jh. v. Chr. Es handelte sich um zwei Krieger in Ausfallstellung, also um den noch unentschiedenen Kampf zwischen dem Athener Erechtheus und dem Thraker Eumolpos oder I., dessen thrakische Tracht sicher angegeben war. Falls die zu 2 zitierte Hypothese stimmt, zeigte der Giebel der Nordhalle des Erechteion, der am sacrarium Divi Augusti wiederholt sein könnte, den Sieg des Erechtheus über I. oder Eumolpos. Dagegen ist die Deutung des Ostfrieses des Hephaisteion auf den «Eleusinischen Krieg» abzulehnen. Der seltsame Kampf, bei dem Steinmassen bewegt werden, während sechs olympische Gottheiten zusehen, ist noch nicht überzeugend gedeutet. Um thrakische Eindringlinge in Attika handelt es sich schon aus Trachtgründen nicht. ERIKA SIMON

INACHOS

(Ἰναχος, Wort ungeklärter Etymologie, wahrscheinlich vorgriechisch; Inachus) Hauptfluß von Argos und der Argolis. Sohn des → Okeanos und der → Tethys, Vater der → Io (I); erster König von Argos und Stammvater der argivischen Könige und Helden.

LITERARISCHE QUELLEN: Die mit I. verbundenen Mythen sind besonders durch die Tragiker bekannt geworden. Sophokles benannte ein Satyrspiel nach I. (TrGFIV F 269a–295a). Seinen Vater Okeanos erwähnt Aischyl. Prom. 636 zuerst (auch Dion. Hal. rhet. 1, 25 nach dem sophokleischen Inachos [TrGFIV

Rs.: I. mit Schilfrohr in der Rechten, die auf dem erhobenen Knie ruht, und Füllhorn in dem auf ein ausfließendes Quellgefäß gestützten l. Arm. IMBPAEOE (retr.): ΣΑΜΙΩΝ im Abschnitt.

2.* AE, Traianus Decius (248–251 n. Chr.): BMC Ionia 390, 353 Taf. 37, 15; Imhoof-Blumer, Flußg 288, 284 Taf. 9, 23. – Rs.: I. wie auf 1, nur statt Schilfrohr einen Pfau, heiliges Tier der samischen Hera, im Arm haltend. ΣΑΜΙΩΝ. Zum Pfau beim Kultbild vgl. → Hera 156; unter 160. 161; vgl. auch 163; unter 170; 181.

B. Darstellungen ohne Namensbeischrift, jedoch vom Typus her gesichert

Typus wie auf 1 und 2 mit allgemeinen Attributen: Schilf, Füllhorn, Quellgefäß (die beiden letzteren nicht obligatorisch) und ΣΑΜΙΩΝ.

3.* AE, Hadrian (117–138 n. Chr.): BMC Ionia 373, 238; SNG v. Aulock 2306. – Commodus (180–192 n. Chr.): BMC Ionia 375, 252–253. – Geta Caesar (198–209 n. Chr.): SNG Copenhagen 1744. – Elagabal (218–222 n. Chr.): SNG Copenhagen 1746. – Severus Alexander (222–235 n. Chr.): Gardner 283, 22 Taf. 6, 13; BMC Ionia 380, 281–282; SNG Copenhagen 1749. – Gordian III. (238–244 n. Chr.): BMC Ionia 383, 307–308; SNG Copenhagen 1763. – Tranquillina (242–244 n. Chr.): BMC Ionia 384, 316. – Philippus II. (244–249 n. Chr.): BMC Ionia 387, 334; SNG Copenhagen Nr. 1777. – Traianus Decius (248–251 n. Chr.): BMC Ionia 390, 352; SNG Copenhagen 1784–1785. – Gallienus (253–268 n. Chr.): BMC Ionia 395, 385–386; SNG Copenhagen 1811. – SNG v. Aulock 2333; SNG v. Aulock 8032. – Valerian II. (?) (256–258 n. Chr.): SNG Copenhagen 1819.

C. Ungesicherte Darstellungen

Stierprotomen auf samischen Silbermünzen

4. AR, Samos, mit geringen Variationen des Bildtypus auf verschiedenen Nominalen von 522 bis ca. 185 v. Chr. (Barron 154: Ende der AR-Prägungen). – Barron 174–226 passim und Taf. 5–6. 8–14. 17–30 passim. – Vs. und Rs.: Grundtypus, a) frontal gezeigter Kopf eines Löwenfells; b) Stierprotome, zumeist nach r., selten nach l. Auf den frühen Serien immer im quadratum incusum, auf späteren Serien mit wechselnden Beizeichen, Beamtennamen bzw. mit dem abgekürzten oder ausgeschriebenen Ethnikon (ΣΑ, ΣΑΜΙΩΝ).

KOMMENTAR

Obwohl der I. schon in griechischer Zeit von nicht geringer Bedeutung für das Heraion von Samos war, stammen die erhaltenen Bildzeugnisse, die den personifizierten I. zeigen (1. 2. 3), sämtlich aus römischer Zeit. Die Bildform, der gelagerte Flußgott mit den diversen, seine Wassernatur kennzeichnenden Attributen, folgt der allgemeinen Typologie römischer Flußgottbilder (→ Fluvii 44–46). Offenbar beginnt die Serie der samischen Flußgottprägungen unter Hadrian (1). Da man es auf der hadrianischen Prägung für nötig befand, den Namen I. beizuschreiben, was bei allen späteren Emissionen nicht mehr der Fall ist (2–3), kann man überlegen, ob das Einsetzen der I.-Darstellungen unter Hadrian vielleicht auf ein zu dieser Zeit aufgestelltes Bildwerk des Flußgottes im Heraion zurückgeht.

Daß der I. vor seiner Personifikation in der römischen Kunst nicht bildlich wiedergegeben worden wäre, ist unwahrscheinlich. Ob man allerdings auf einem Tonrelief aus dem Heraion von Samos (→ Hera 201) wirklich eine frühe Darstellungsform des Flußlaufes erkennen darf, bleibt höchst fraglich. Das Relief zeigt Hera mit Zeus zwischen der Lygos und einer eingefaßten Zickzacklinie, die als der Fluß I. gedeutet wird. Zwar gehören Bandform und Zickzack in den Typenschatz früher Darstellungen von Wasser (dazu Weiß, Flußg 18–19; vgl. auch Attribut der Mittelfigur des «Dreileibigen» von der Athener Akropolis, das als Wasser gedeutet wird, so z. B. Boardman, GSAP zu Abb. 193), doch scheint das Muster hier eher im Hinblick auf das samische Holzrelief (→ Hera 202*) als zurückgeschlagener Saum an Heras Gewand zu deuten zu sein (Kipp 180 Anm. 51).

Für die Zeit der autonomen Münzprägung auf Samos wäre zu überlegen, ob mit der häufig als Rs.-Typus der AR-Münzen erscheinenden Rinderprotome (4) (Barron 1. 3–5. 90) nur Gegebenheiten des samischen Herakultes zum Ausdruck gebracht werden sollten (a. O. 4. 90; Weiß, Flußg 198 Anm. 431), oder ob nicht der Bedeutungsgehalt «Flußgott» ebenfalls in den Münzbildern mitschwingt. Eine solche Deutung wagte bereits Gardner 216, jedoch wurde er wegen des typologisch unkorrekten Vergleichs mit der Mannstierprotome des → Gelas von Barron a. O. 4 Anm. 26 widerlegt. Die Assoziation Stier/Flußgott wird heute verständlicher, wenn man bedenkt, daß einerseits die Flußgötter unter der Bildform eines rein theriomorph wiedergegebenen Stieres dargestellt werden konnten (→ Fluvii 1–3) und andererseits die Belege für die allgemein enge Beziehung der Hera zu den Rinderherden und damit zum süßen Wasser wie auch zum Meerwasser (Seefahrt) zahlreich sind. Quellen und Bildzeugnisse z. B. Simon, Götter 44–46; Muthmann 171–175 (jedoch mit Irrtümern!); Kyrieleis, H., AM 95, 1980, 92–94; → Hera 114. Trifft die angesprochene Hypothese zu, böten Tetrobole aus Samos, die als Beizeichen zur Rinderprotome den Pfau tragen (Barron 5 Anm. 36; 223 Taf. 28, 9–11), eine interessante Parallele zu 3 mit Pfau. CARINA WEISS

IMMARADOS

(Ismaros, Ἰμμάραδος, Ἰσμάραος) Sohn des → Eumolpos, der im «Eleusinischen Krieg» ein thrakisches

Heer gegen die Athener führte, allein oder zusammen mit seinem Vater, der auch als alleiniger Heerführer überliefert ist. Ihr Gegner ist → Erechtheus.

LITERARISCHE QUELLEN: Die Nachrichten in bezug auf die Anführung des thrakischen Heeres durch Eumolpos sind LIMC IV 56 gesammelt. Davon weicht Paus. 1, 5, 2 (ebenso 1, 27, 4 und 1, 38, 3) ab, der sich auf altattische Überlieferung beruft und Immarados als Gegner des Erechtheus bezeichnet, der ihn getötet habe. Toepffer 43 glaubt, daß wir «in dieser Version noch die mißverständlichen Spuren alter, unverfälschter Sagenüberlieferung erhalten haben». Bei Apollod. bibl. 3, 202 stirbt Ismaros, der mit einer Tochter des Thrakerkönigs Tegyrios verheiratet ist, schon vor dem «Eleusinischen Krieg». Er ist bei ihm ebenfalls Sohn des Eumolpos, denn Ismaros ist nur eine Variante zu I. In der Sagenforschung wird er mit Ismaros, dem Heros der gleichnamigen Stadt in Thrakien (vgl. Hom. Od. 9, 198), gleichgesetzt, dessen Eltern nach Etym. m. 477, 1 Ares und Thrassa sind.

BIBLIOGRAPHIE: Zum «Eleusinischen Krieg» → Erechtheus, LIMC IV 927–928. Speziell zu I.: Eitrem, S., RE IX 1 (1914) 1107 s. v. «Immarados»; Stoll, H. W., ML II 1 (1890–94) 124 s. v. «Immarados» und 550 s. v. «Ismaros»; Toepffer, I., Attische Genealogie (1889) 43–44.

KATALOG

1. (= Eumolpos 15, = Erechtheus 69) Bronze-Gruppe auf der Athener Akropolis (Paus. 1, 27, 4). Die beiden zum Kampf gegeneinander antretenden Krieger galten allgemein als Erechtheus und Eumolpos, während Paus. den letzteren durch I. ersetzt, wobei wohl genealogische Erwägungen eine Rolle spielten; cf. Musti, D./Beschi, L., Pausania Guida della Grecia, Libro I, L'Attica (1982) 411. Paus. erwähnt den Künstler der uns verlorenen Gruppe nicht, während er 9, 30, 1 von einem Erechtheus des Myron in Athen spricht, der das sehenswerteste Werk des Meisters sei. Es ist nicht ganz gesichert, ob damit der Erechtheus aus dieser Gruppe gemeint ist, aber doch wahrscheinlich (vgl. Kron zu → Erechtheus 69). Bewegte Figuren waren für Myron charakteristisch, und der andere Erechtheus in Athen, den Beschi als Alternative nennt (a. O. 364 zu Paus. 1, 5, 2), war innerhalb der Eponymengruppe (vgl. → Erechtheus 79) sicher ruhig stehend gebildet. Nachwirkungen der Gruppe auf der Akropolis sind bisher nicht überzeugend nachgewiesen (vgl. Kron zu → Erechtheus 69).

HYPOTHETISCH

2. Giebel von der Darstellung eines ionischen Tempels aus dem Komplex der «Ara Pietatis» des Claudius (Einweihung 43 n. Chr.). Rom, Pal. Cons. 1386. – Hommel, P., Studien zu den röm. Figurengiebeln der Kaiserzeit (1954) 34–41 (Iliupersis); Simon, E., in Helbig II* Nr. 1751 (Deutung offen gelassen); Torelli, M., Typology and Structure of Roman Historical Reliefs (1982) 80 (Keltomachie, mit Hinweis auf weitere Vorschläge in Anm. 87); Simon, E., Augustus (1986) 19. 234–235 zu Abb. 7 («Eleusinischer Krieg»?). Der Giebel wurde von G.-Ch. Picard (Nachweis bei Simon) überzeugend dem sacrarium des Augustus, das seine Witwe Livia auf dem Palatin errichtete, zugewiesen. Baustil und Proportionen sind von der Nordhalle des Erechteion auf der Akropolis übernommen. Der Hypothese von Simon zufolge stammt auch die Giebelkomposition von dort. Der Unterliegende in der zentralen Kampfgruppe, in Barbarentracht, könnte dann Eumolpos oder I. sein, der siegende Heros in der Mitte Erechtheus, dessen Darstellung am Erechtheion sinnvoll wäre.

DEUTUNG ABZULEHNEN

3. (= Erechtheus 71 mit Lit.). Ostfries des Hephaisteion. – Bester Vorschlag zur Datierung wohl 435/30 v. Chr.; vgl. Kron zu → Erechtheus 71. – Der Vorschlag zur Deutung auf den «Eleusinischen Krieg» ist zu finden bei Dörig, J., La frise Est de l'Héphaisteion (1985) 67–73; überzeugende Widerlegung bei Kron a. O., zu der hinzugefügt sei, daß die typischen Trachtmerkmale der Thraker (Fellmützen, Stiefel) von keiner Figur getragen werden.

KOMMENTAR

Eumolpos oder I. war in einer Bronze-Gruppe auf der Akropolis dargestellt (1), wahrscheinlich von der Hand des Myron, also aus dem mittleren 5. Jh. v. Chr. Es handelte sich um zwei Krieger in Ausfallstellung, also um den noch unentschiedenen Kampf zwischen dem Athener Erechtheus und dem Thraker Eumolpos oder I., dessen thrakische Tracht sicher angegeben war. Falls die zu 2 zitierte Hypothese stimmt, zeigte der Giebel der Nordhalle des Erechteion, der am sacrarium Divi Augusti wiederholt sein könnte, den Sieg des Erechtheus über I. oder Eumolpos. Dagegen ist die Deutung des Ostfrieses des Hephaisteion auf den «Eleusinischen Krieg» abzulehnen. Der seltsame Kampf, bei dem Steinmassen bewegt werden, während sechs olympische Gottheiten zusehen, ist noch nicht überzeugend gedeutet. Um thrakische Eindringlinge in Attika handelt es sich schon aus Trachtgründen nicht. ERIKA SIMON

INACHOS

(Ἰναχος, Wort ungeklärter Etymologie, wahrscheinlich vorgriechisch; Inachus) Hauptfluß von Argos und der Argolis. Sohn des → Okeanos und der → Tethys, Vater der → Io (I); erster König von Argos und Stammvater der argivischen Könige und Helden.

LITERARISCHE QUELLEN: Die mit I. verbundenen Mythen sind besonders durch die Tragiker bekannt geworden. Sophokles benannte ein Satyrspiel nach I. (TrGFIV F 269a–295a). Seinen Vater Okeanos erwähnt Aischyl. Prom. 636 zuerst (auch Dion. Hal. rhet. 1, 25 nach dem sophokleischen Inachos [TrGFIV

F 270], danach besonders Hyg. fab. 143 [dagegen Hyg. fab. 145]). Tethys war seine Mutter (Apollod. bibl. 2, 1, 1). In späteren Quellen wird auch seine Frau genannt. Diese war die Okeanide → Melia (Apollod. bibl. 2, 1, 1) oder ihre Schwester Argia (Hyg. fab. 143, 145). Die Kinder des I. waren Phoroneus und Aigialeus (Apollod. bibl. 2, 1, 1), → Pelasgos (Schol. Apoll. Rhod. 1, 580), Argos (Asklep. Trag., FGRH 12 F 16), Phegeus (Schol. Eur. Or. 932), Mykene (Paus. 2, 16, 3 nach den Megalai ehoiai), Nymphen (Aischyl., TrGF III F 168, 17) und vor allem → Io (I), besonders bei den Tragikern (Aischyl. Prom. 590. 663. 705; Soph. Inachos, TrGF IV F 270; Hdt. 1, 1; Kall. h. 3, 254; Apollod. bibl. 2, 1, 3, der noch andere Überlieferungen über den Vater Ios erwähnt: Iasos oder Peiren [nach Hes. und Akus.]).

I. war der Stammvater der argivischen Helden, der «Inachidai» (Eur. Iph. A. 1088). Als erster König von Argos (Akus., FGRH 2 F 23c) begründete er die Kultur des Landes (Schol. Eur. Or. 932). Im Streit zwischen Hera und Poseidon um Argos entschied I. für die Göttin und führte ihren Kult ein (Paus. 2, 15, 4-5); dafür trocknete Poseidon sein Flußbett aus (Apollod. bibl. 2, 1, 4; Kall. h. 4, 74; Lukianos cont. 23; Paus. 2, 15, 5).

BIBLIOGRAPHIE: v. Geisau, H., KIPauly II (1967) 1384-1385 s.v. «Inachos I und 2»; Kakridis, I. Th., Ελληνική μυθολογία 3 (1986) 164-165 s.v. «Ιναχος»; Kroll, W., RE IX 2 (1916) 1218-1219 s.v. «Inachos I»; Peter, R., ML II 1 (1890-94) 125-127 s.v. «Inachos».

KATALOG

BILDHAFT VORSTELLUNG IN DER RÖMISCHEN DICHTUNG

I. (= Io I 16) Episema des Schildes des Turnus. – Verg. Aen. 7, 792; Fordyce, C. J., Aeneidos Libri VII-VIII, Commentary (1977) 200. – Io als Kuh mit ihrem Wächter Argos im Beisein von I. Er hält eine Urne, aus der Wasser fließt.

UNSICHERE DARSTELLUNG

2.* (= Hera 486* mit Lit., = Io I 8 mit Lit., = Hermes 838) Hydria, att. rf. Boston, MFA o8.417. aus Capua. – ARV 579, 84; Agrigent-Maler: Add 262; Caskey/Beazley III 49-51 Nr. 150 Taf. 86, 1 und Suppl. Taf. 21, 1; Engelmann, R., Jdl 18, 1903, 42-45 Abb. 2; Hoppin, J. C., HSCP 12, 1901, 335-342 Abb.; Mantis, A., Προβλήματα της εικονογραφίας των ιεραίων (1983) 35-37 Taf. 6a; Moret, Ilioupersis 137-138, 168-169 Taf. 78; Schefold, SB II 135 Abb. 175; Simon, E., AA 100, 1985, 273 Anm. 251; Weiß, Flußg 109; Yalouris, N., in IconogrCl 6-7 Nr. 6. – Um 460 v. Chr. – Im Zentrum fliehen die Kuh Io und Argos nach l., während Hermes von r. naht. L. Frau in Chiton und Himation, einen Schlüssel und Zepter haltend. Dahinter bärtiger Mann nach r., wohl I., in Himation, mit einem Band im Haar, einen Knotenstock unter die l. Achsel geschoben und die l. Hand vor Erstaunen erhoben. R. Frau in Chiton, Himation und Kopfhäube mit erhobenen Händen, wohl die Mutter Ios.

KOMMENTAR

Obwohl eine große Zahl von Mythen mit I. verbunden ist, spielt seine Darstellung nur in der Ikonographie der Iosage eine kleine Rolle. Eindeutig gesicherte Darstellungen des I. sind allerdings nicht erhalten. I. ist als bildhafte Vorstellung anzusehen, wobei I. mit einer Urne, wie üblich bei den hellenistisch-römischen Flußgottbildern, erscheint (→ Fluvii p. 147-148).

Problematisch bleibt die Interpretation der Figuren auf 2: nur Io, Argos und Hermes sind identifizierbar. Die Handlung findet wohl im argivischen Heraion statt. Die Frau mit dem Zepter und dem Tempelschlüssel könnte eine Priesterin, wahrscheinlich die Nachfolgerin Ios in diesem Amt (Caskey/Beazley, Schefold, Simon), oder Hera selbst sein (Mantis, mit guten Argumenten; Kossatz-Deißmann, A., → Hera 486). Die beiden rahmenden Figuren deutete man früher als Zeus und Hera (Engelmann, Hoppin). Beazley hat die Identifikation mit den Eltern der Io vorgeschlagen, die heute allgemein akzeptiert wird. Die Frau r. zeigt kein ausgesprochen auf Hera weisendes Attribut. (Aus inhaltlichen Gründen lehnt Moret die Anwesenheit von Hera in dieser Szene ab.) Obwohl die Deutung als die Mutter und entsprechend als der Vater Ios die wahrscheinlichste ist, wäre anzumerken, daß den bärtigen Mann l. eine enge ikonographische Beziehung zu einigen Zeusdarstellungen auch im gleichen Mythos kennzeichnet: vgl. → Io I 22, wo Zeus in Himation und mit Knotenstock erscheint (zu Zeusdarstellungen mit Knotenstock [Hirtenstab]: Yalouris, N., «Ein bislang unbeachtetes Attribut des Zeus», in Kanon, Festschr. E. Berger, AntK Beih. 15 [1988] 351-354 Taf. 97-98).

STYLIANOS E. KATAKIS

INCUBUS → LIMC Suppl.

INDIA

(Ἰνδία) Personifikation de l'Inde.

1.* Plat d'argent niellé. Istanbul, Mus. Arch. De Lampsaque. – Sorlin-Dorigny, A., «Patère d'argent émaillée trouvée à Lampsaque», GazArch 3, 1877, 119-122 pl. 19; Graeven, H., «Die Darstellungen der Inder in antiken Kunstwerken», Jdl 15, 1900, 202-205 fig. 6; Talbot Rice, D., The Art of Byzantium (1959) 279 (bibl.) pl. 43; Brandenburg, H., Studien zur Mitra (1966) 115-119; Delvoye, Ch., L'art byzantin (1967) 139 fig. 68; cf. Balty, J. Ch., BullMusArtH 48, 1976, 15 fig. 10. – Début du VI^e s. ap. J.-C. (Talbot Rice 279). – Figure féminine, de face, assise sur un trône dont les pieds sont constitués de défenses d'éléphants, un arc dans la main g., la dr. levée, paume ouverte vers l'avant; sur la chevelure calamistrée, un turban torsadé surmonté de deux aigrettes (?); le sein dr. dénudé, le vêtement richement brodé, elle porte au cou un collier et des bracelets aux bras et aux poignets. Dans le champ, tout autour, un perroquet, une pintade et deux singes.

La couleur sombre de la nielle pour les chairs, le turban à aigrettes et différents «attributs» comme les défenses d'éléphants ou les animaux qui l'accompagnent suffisent à fonder l'iconographie du personnage; l'image n'en demeure pas moins un unicum à ce jour.

JEAN CH. BALT

INDOS

(Ἰνδός) Personifikation des gleichnamigen Flusses in Lykien nahe der karischen Grenze, identisch mit dem heutigen Kirenis Çay.

LITERARISCHE QUELLEN: Nach Ps.-Plut. fluv. 25 wurde der Fluß Mausolos in Indos unbenannt, nachdem ein indischer Jüngling Damasalkida, die Tochter des Königs Oxyalkes, vergewaltigt hatte und aus Angst vor Strafe in diesen Fluß gesprungen war.

BIBLIOGRAPHIE: Höfer, O., ML II 1 (1890-94) 233 s.v. «Indos 3»; Ruge, W., RE IX 2 (1916) 1373 s.v. «Indos 2»; Treidler, H., KIPauly II (1967) 1402 s.v. «Indos 2».

Münzen von Kibyra

1.* AE, Elagabal (218-222 n. Chr.). – BMC Phrygia 142, 63 Taf. 18, 1; InvWadd 5838; Imhoof-Blumer, Flußg 323 Nr. 373 Taf. 12, 11; SNG Copenhagen 294. – Rs.: Nach l. gelagerter, nur bis zu den Hüften mit einem Himation bekleideter bärtiger I., ein Schilfrohr mit der Rechten schulternd und die Linke auf ein umgestürztes Quellgefäß stützend, aus welchem Wasser fließt, in dem zwei Fische schwimmen. Im Feld l. oben ein Korb.

Diese einzige bisher bekannte Darstellung des I. entspricht dem geläufigsten Typus der Flußgottikonographie der römischen Kaiserzeit (→ Fluvii). Die zwei Fische sollen besonders auf den Fischreichtum dieses Flusses hinweisen.

RAINER VOLLKOMMER

INDULGENTIA

(Indulgentia; n'a pas d'équivalent exact en grec: rendu notamment par φιλανθρωπία) Notion morale à l'origine, I. devient à partir du règne d'Hadrien une figure allégorique étroitement liée à la personne de l'empereur. Des Flaviens aux Sévères, elle est la vertu la plus appropriée pour présider à l'octroi de grâces et de bienfaits. Mais elle va tendre à s'identifier à la faveur elle-même, au point de voir son sens s'affadir: dans la langue du IV^e et du V^e s. les «indulgences» ne sont plus que des décisions généreuses de l'empereur, dans les domaines pénal et fiscal notamment. L'évolution constatée ne se limite pas à ce passage de l'abstrait au concret – la vertu et le bienfait. Le vocabulaire a été assez souple pour développer parallèlement des usages plus complémentaires que contradictoires qui jouent sur l'ambiguïté du terme indulgentia. Celui-ci désignera aussi bien la faveur accordée (indulgentia concessa) que l'Indulgence du prince qui en est l'origine (Indulgentia nostra). Le premier usage qui s'accroît dès l'époque sévérienne du passage au pluriel, l'a emporté.

SOURCES LITTÉRAIRES ET ÉPIGRAPHIQUES: En dehors des quatre inscriptions identiques de Cirta qui font connaître une statue de bronze d'I. (Pflaum, H. G., Inscr. lat. de l'Algérie II 1 [1957] 675-678), elles ne concernent pas l'iconographie, mais la notion. Voir à titre d'exemples: pour le sens abstrait (la vertu), AEpigr 1962, 288 (ego malui cum indulgentia mea quam cum temeritati uestra loqui); Plin. epist. 10, 8, 6 (debebo ... indulgentiae tuae ... pietatis meae celeritatem); Iuv. 7, 21 (materiamque sibi ducis indulgentia quaerit); Iulienus, Dig. 1, 4, 3 (beneficium Imperatoris quod a diuina scilicet eius indulgentia proficitur); pour le sens concret (remise ou amnistie, pénale ou fiscale), AEpigr 1937, 232 (ad beneficium eiusdem indulgentiae nostrae) et Cod. Theod. 9, 38 (de indulgentiis criminum) et 11, 28 (de indulgentiis debitorum). Pour le jeu sur l'ambiguïté du terme, cf. l'inscr. constantinienne d'Orcistus MAMA VII 305. Le titre d'indulgentissimus est attesté par des inscriptions pour les empereurs depuis le règne de Domitien (pour Auguste) jusqu'à celui de Valens.

BIBLIOGRAPHIE: Charlesworth, M. P., «The Virtues of a Roman Emperor and the Creation of Belief», ProcBritAcad 23, 1937, 105-133; Corbier, M., «Le discours du Prince d'après une inscription de Banasa», Klèma 2, 1977, 211-232; eadem, Indulgentia Principis, Coll. Latomus (sous presse); Cotton, H., «The Concept of Indulgentia under Trajan», Chiron 14, 1984, 245-266; Cuq, E., DA III (1900) 481-483 s.v. «Indulgentia»; Fears, J. Rufus, «The Cult of Virtues and Roman Imperial Ideology», dans ANRW II 17/2, 1981, 827-948; Gaudemet, J., Indulgentia Principis, Univ. di Trieste, Conferenze romanistiche 6 (1962) 3-37; Kleinfeller, G., RE IX 2 (1916) 1378-1380 s.v. «Indulgentia»; Köhler, W., EAA IV (1961) 162 s.v. «Indulgentia»; Levy, B. E., «INDVLGENTIA AVGVSTI MONETA IN-PETRATA: ■ Flavian Episode», dans Mélanges Pierre Bastien (1987) 39-49 pl. 5; Lichocka, B., Justitia sur les monnaies impériales romaines (1974) 38 n. 49; Ruggiero Diz. epigr. IV 1 (1924) 50-51 s.v. «Indulgentia»; Steuding, H., ML II 1 (1890-94) 233-234 s.v. «Indulgentia»; ThLL VII 1 (1964) 1246-1250 s.v. «Indulgentia»; Veyne, P., «La Table des Ligures Baebiani et l'Institution alimentaire de Trajan», MEFR 1958, 223-228; Waldstein, W., Untersuchungen zum römischen Begnadigungsrecht. Abolition, indulgentia, venia. Commentationes Aenipontanae 18 (1964) en part. 78-108; Wallace-Hadrill, A., «The Emperor and his Virtues», Historia 30, 1981, 298-323.

CATALOGUE

a) Indulgentia en buste

Monnaies coloniales de Patras

1. AE sesterces, époque de Domitien, 85/6 ap. J.-C. (et non de Tibère ou Caligula). – Eckhel, J., Doctrina Numorum Veterum I 2 (1794) 257-258: I.; Grant, M., NC 1948, 119: Moneta; idem, Aspects of the Princi- pate of Tiberius (1950) 136: Livie; Levy 40 pl. 5, 1-3: I. - Av. Buste féminin à dr., drapé, voilé, portant une stéphanie. Lég. INDVLGENTIAE AVG MONETA INPETRATA. Rv. Quadriga triomphale. La figure féminine est la copie du type de → Pietas, créé sous Tibère et «restauré» sous Titus.

b) Indulgentia assise

Monnaies de l'atelier de Rome (sauf exceptions signalées)
J'ai écarté les monnaies «hybrides» ou fausses d'Hadrien pour Sabine, d'Antonin pour Faustine la Jeune, de Lucius Vérus, de Septime Sévère pour Julia Domna, de Sévère Alexandre Auguste, de Gallien pour Salonine.

2a)* AR deniers, Hadrien, 128-134; puis Maximin I, 235-236; AE sesterces, dupondii ou asses, Hadrien, Antonin, 152-156, puis Maximin I. - BMC Emp III, Hadrien n° 518-521 pl. 57, 5; 548-551 pl. 58, 4-5; 1418-1420. 1464 A p. 462; IV, Antonin n° 1920-1924 pl. 46, 18; 1926-1929 pl. 47, 11; 1939-1942 pl. 47, 6; p. 325; 1998 (sans lég.); VI, Maximin I n° 31-33 pl. 34. - Rv. I. coiffée en bandeaux avec un chignon, en robe talaire, le manteau sur les jambes, assise à g. sur un trône ou un siège sans dossier, tenant un long sceptre de son bras g., tend la main dr. ouverte. Lég. INDVLGENTIA AVG. I. ressemble à → Patientia, figurée sur des monnaies d'Hadrien à la même époque.

2b)* AR deniers, Septime Sévère, 196/7; Caracalla, 213-217; et AR antoniniani, Macrien, Quietus (260/1, at. oriental). - BMC Emp V, Septime Sévère n° 163-165 pl. 9, 13; Caracalla n° 68-69 pl. 69, 9; RIC V 2, Macrien n° 8; Quietus n° 5. - Rv. I. analogue, mais la main dr. tend une patère (ce qui la rapproche de → Iustitia). Lég. INDVLGENTIA AVG, INDVLGENTIA AVG et INDVLGENTIAE AVG.

2c)* (= 8) AR deniers, Caracalla, 211/12. - BMC Emp V n° 73-75 pl. 55, 3. - Rv. I. semblable à 2a, mais assise sur une chaise curule et coiffée du polos. Lég. INDVLG(ENTIAE) FECVND(AE). Le type représente-t-il Julia Domna en I.? Des monnaies frappées par Caracalla pour sa mère portent la lég. FECVNDITAS.

2d) AU quinaires, AR quinaires et antoniniani, AE asses, Gallien, 263-265. - RIC V 1, Gallien n° 106. 205. 368. 418-419. 546-547. - Rv. I. semblable à 2a, la main dr. inclinée, vide ou tenant un objet indistinct (rameau?, épis?, patère?). Lég. INDVLGENT AVG et INDVLGENTIA AVG.

c) Indulgentia debout (contamination avec d'autres entités)

Monnaies de l'atelier de Rome (sauf exceptions signalées)

3. AR antoniniani, Gallien. - RIC V 1 n° 206. - Rv. I. debout, jambes croisées, appuyée sur une colonne, tenant sceptre court et corne d'abondance; à ses pieds, une roue. Lég. INDVLGENTIA AVG. Contamination avec Fortuna (→ Tyche/Fortuna), → Securitas et → Providentia.

4.* AR deniers, AE asses, Elagabal pour Sévère Alexandre César, 221/2; puis AU aurei, AR antonini, niani, Gallien (Milan); puis (Ticinum) Florian, 276; Probus, 276. - RIC V 1, Gallien n° 46. 204. 485 (Milan); Florian n° 65-67; V 2, Probus n° 314; BMC Emp V, Elagabal pour Sévère Alexandre César n° 264-265 pl. 90, 17; p. 614. - Rv. → Spes drapée, marchant à g., tenant une fleur dans la main dr. et rassemblant les plis de sa robe de la main g.; ou Spes debout à g. (Florien). Lég. INDVLG AVG, INDVLGENT AVG et INDVLGENTIA AVG.

5. AU aurei, Carus (at. incertain), 282/3. - RIC V 2, 151 n° 130. - Rv. Victoire (→ Victoria) marchant à g., tenant une couronne et une palme. Lég. INDVLGENTIA AVG.

En revanche l'assimilation à I., suggérée par RIC IV 1, 355, de la figure féminine debout à dr., tenant un sceptre, avec deux petits enfants à ses pieds, sans lég., sur des aurei et des asses ou dupondii de Géta en 209/10 (RIC IV 1, 322 n° 60 pl. 14, 8; 323 n° 71; 336 n° 150 pl. 16, 8) ne paraît pas justifiée.

d) Personnages divers accompagnés de la légende Indulgentia

6. AU aurei, AR deniers (= Iuno 170*), AE sesterces, dupondii et asses, Septime Sévère, 203-204; Caracalla, 203-204. - BMC Emp V, Septime Sévère n° 333-338 pl. 35, 11-14; p. 248; n° 830 pl. 50, 1; n° 844 pl. 51, 1; Caracalla n° 279-282 pl. 34, 2-3; p. 332; p. 334; n° 831-832 pl. 50, 2-3; p. 343. - Rv. Caelestis assise sur un lion galopant à dr.; en dessous, source jaillissant du rocher. Lég. INDVLGENTIA AVGG(VSTORVM) IN CARTH(AGINEM).

7. (= Italia 20) AR deniers, Septime Sévère; Caracalla, ? - BMC Emp V, Septime Sévère n° 339 pl. 35, 15; Caracalla p. 209. - Rv. Italia couronnée assise à g. sur le globe, tenant le sceptre et la corne d'abondance. Lég. INDVLGENTIA AVGG(VSTORVM) IN ITALIAM.

8. (= 2c*) Julia Domna? Lég. INDVLG(ENTIAE) FECVND(AE).

9. AE asses, Elagabal pour Sévère Alexandre César, 221/2. - RIC IV 2, 101 n° 381; BMC Emp V p. 614. - Rv. Sévère Alexandre en habit militaire tenant un bâton et un sceptre. Derrière lui, deux enseignes. Lég. INDVLGENTIA AVG.

10.* AU aurei, Postume, Cologne, 263/4; AU aurei, AR deniers et antoniniani, Victorin, at. gaulois, 269/70. - Schulte, B., Die Goldprägung der gallischen Kaiser von Postumus bis Tetricus (1983) Postume 97-98 n° 91-96 pl. 7-8; Victorin 134 n° 18 pl. 18; The Normanby Hoard (1988) n° 1423; RIC V 2, 359 n° 276-277; 388 n° 8. - Rv. Postume assis sur une chaise curule, la main tendue vers un suppliant agenouillé; lég. INDVLG PLIA POSTVMI AVG; puis Victorin debout relève une femme agenouillée qui porte une corne d'abondance; lég. INDVLGENTIA AVG.

e) Représentation disparue

11. Statue de bronze d'Indulgentia domini nostri abritée dans une aedicula tetrastyla, érigée à Cirta (Numidie), probablement en 210 pour Septime Sévère et ses deux fils, par le notable M(arcus) Caecilius Natalis (Pflaum, o. c. II 1, 562) qui avait offert aussi, aupara-vant, une statue de bronze de → Securitas saeculi et qui devait dédier par la suite un arc avec la statue de → Vir-tus domini n(ostri) Antonini Aug(usti) (Caracalla): Pflaum, o. c. II 1, 675-678.

COMMENTAIRE

Le type 1, colonial, assimile I. à Pietas. Le type 2 apparu sous Hadrien est plus net: le sceptre et la position assise suggèrent l'exercice de la souveraineté; la main ouverte tendue (2a) est le geste traditionnel de la clémence de l'empereur ou du général vainqueur; mais le type monétaire de → Clementia tient d'ordinaire dans sa main tendue une patère, comme parfois I. (2b) et généralement Iustitia. I. reste donc une figure assez mal caractérisée qui se prête au III^e s. à d'autres «contaminations»: avec Fortuna (mais aussi Securitas et Providentia), Spes et Victoria. L'évolution iconographique est parallèle à celle de la notion. D'abord, par l'identité de la légende et de la figure, c'est la vertu princière d'Indulgence qui est évoquée. Par la suite, lorsqu'elle est associée à d'autres figures, la légende Indulgentia sert de slogan, et suggère l'octroi de faveurs: avec tantôt la représentation des bénéficiaires (Carthage, l'Italie, Sévère Alexandre César), tantôt celle du prince dispensateur de bienfaits (Julia Domna peut-être, Postume, Victorin). Par la fréquence de la légende monétaire, les occurrences multiples chez les juristes, la variété des emplois épigraphiques, I. fait figure de manifeste sous les règnes de Septime Sévère et de Caracalla. La légende et le type monétaire tombent en désuétude avant la fin du III^e s.

MIREILLE CORBIER

INGENIUM

Personnification du Génie, du Talent naturel.

1.* Trèves, Rhein. Landesmus. 10.703-10.724. Mosaïque dite de Monnus. De Trèves. - Parlasca, K., Die röm. Mosaiken in Deutschland (1959) 41-42 (bibl.) pl. 47, 1; Goethert, K. P./Goethert-Polasczek, K., «Das Gebäude mit dem Monnus-Mosaik», dans Festschr. 100 Jahre Rhein. Landesmus. Trier (1979) fig. 5; *Trier. Kaiserresidenz und Bischofssitz*², cat. exp. (1984) 284-285 n° 149, fig. - Fin III^e - début IV^e s. ap. J.-C. (Goethert 96). - Debout à la dr. d'Homère, un manteau bleu sur les épaules, un filet bleu dans les cheveux, I. (inscr. INGENIVM), sous les traits d'un jeune homme dont la silhouette n'est conservée que de façon très fragmentaire, est associé à Calliope (→ Mousa, Mousai).

C'est le génie du poète, doublant l'image plus traditionnelle de la Muse de l'épopée, qui est évoqué ici, l'accent étant mis plus particulièrement sur ses dons naturels, de la même manière en quelque sorte que → Heuresis et → Epinoia désignent, dans le Dioscoride de Vienne, la découverte et les qualités d'observation scientifique du savant.

JEAN CH. BALTZ

INO

(Ἰνώ, Ino; Λευκοθέα, Λευκοθέη, Leucothea) Fille de → Kadmos (I), roi de Thèbes, et sœur de → Semele. Elle épouse → Athamas, roi d'Orchomène en Béotie ou de Halos en Thessalie, dont elle est la seconde femme: elle en aura deux enfants, Léarchos et → Melikertes.

Jalouse de → Phrixos et Hellé, enfants du premier lit, elle médite de les perdre. A cette fin, elle fait griller le grain des semences, qui ne germe pas et provoque la disette. Athamas envoie un messager consulter l'oracle de Delphes. A son retour I. le persuade d'annoncer que les dieux exigent le sacrifice de Phrixos. Les enfants s'enfuient cependant sur un bélier à toison d'or offert à leur mère → Nephele par → Hermes (→ Argonautes, → Iason, → Medeia).

Après la mort de Sémélé, Hermès confie à Athamas et I. l'enfant → Dionysos, fruit des amours illégitimes de Zeus et Sémélé. Mais → Hera les poursuit de sa haine, frappant Athamas de folie: au cours d'une chasse, il tue Léarchos et se lance à la poursuite d'I. qui se jette dans la mer avec Mélécerte pour lui échapper. Recueillis par les → Nereides, ils deviennent les divinités Leucothée et Palaimon. Déesse marine, I. sera d'un grand secours à Ulysse (→ Odysseus) en lui donnant son voile pour le protéger pendant sa traversée entre l'île de → Kalypso et le pays des Phéaciens (→ Nausikaa, → Alkinoos I).

SOURCES LITTÉRAIRES: Les grands traits de l'histoire d'I. devaient déjà être connus d'Homère (Od. 5, 333-336) qui la présente comme une fille de Cadmos devenue déesse marine bienfaisante, secourable à Ulysse (Od. 5, 336-353). Ovide (Pont. 3, 6, 20) y fera allusion. Pindare s'adresse à I.-Leucothée comme à une déesse marine (P. 11, 2). Apollodore fait référence à la légende d'I. à deux reprises; bibl. 1 (80-84) 9, 1-2, elle est envisagée du point de vue de la lignée d'Athamas et pas un mot n'est dit sur les liens qui existent entre I. et Dionysos. On ne sait rien non plus des raisons de la colère d'Héra. Sa seconde mention (bibl. 3 [26-29] 4, 2-3) revient sur les origines de la légende: les amours clandestines de Sémélé, Dionysos confié à I. et Athamas, la folie qu'Héra leur inflige, poussant Athamas à tuer Léarchos et I. à précipiter Mélécerte dans un chaudron bouillant avant de se jeter dans la mer avec le cadavre de l'enfant. L'épisode du chaudron offre des parallèles avec la légende de Dionysos → Zagreus. Eur. Medea 1982-1989 rapproche I. de Médée, la mettant au rang des infanticides.

Les liens de la légende avec Dionysos amènent naturellement le thème au théâtre. Eschyle est l'auteur d'un Athamas (TrGF III F 1-4a); Sophocle a donné deux Athamas (TrGF IV F 1-10) et un Phrixos (TrGF IV F 721-723a), et Euripide une Inô (TGF² frg. 398-423) où se joue le drame des enfants de Thémistô (Hyg. fab. 1) et deux Phrixos (TGF² frg. 819-838; POxy 2455, Austin, C., Nova Fragmenta Euripidea [1968] 101-103). Pour le contenu de ces drames cf. → Athamas. Le récit le plus détaillé est donné par Nonn. Dion. 9 et 10, 1-125: I. se voit confier son neveu Dionysos (9, 53-70) et reçoit la promesse d'une apothéose marine (cf. Hyg. fab. 224, 5). Provoquée par les paroles moqueuses de Sémélé, la colère d'Héra s'abat sur I., dont la raison s'égare et qui va rôder sur le Parnasse jusqu'à sa guérison par Apollon (9, 243-286) cependant qu'Athamas, l'ayant vainement cherchée, épouse Thémistô. Celle-ci, pleine de jalousie rétrospective, tue ses propres enfants, croyant tuer ceux d'I. (9, 319-321). I. rentre après trois ans d'absence pour trouver Athamas furieux, tuant leur fils Léarchos au cours d'une partie de chasse parce qu'il le prend pour un cerf et jetant le plus jeune enfant dans un chaudron (10, 67-72); elle l'en retire à demi brûlé et, poursuivie par le dément, se jette avec l'enfant dans les flots après avoir reconnu ses crimes de marâtre et sa responsabilité dans la stérilité du sol (10, 73-125).

BIBLIOGRAPHIE: Aelion, R., Euripide héritier d'Eschyle I (1983) 277-281; Cook, Zeus III 73 ss.; Bitrem, S., RE XII 2 (1925) 2294-2306 s.v. «Leukothea»; Escher, J., RE II 2 (1896) 1929-1933 s.v. «Athamas»; Imhoof-Blumer/Gardner, NumCommPaus 60-61 pl. B (= NumCommPaus); Lesky, A., RE XV 1 (1931) 515-520 s.v. «Melikertes»; Paribeni, E., EAA IV (1961) 608-609 s.v. «Leukothea»; Oakley, J. H., AntK 25, 1982, 44-47; Schauenburg, K., «Phrixos», RhM 101, 1958, 41-50; Schirmer, ML II 2 (1894-97) 2011-2017 s.v. «Leukothea»; Seeliger, K., ML I 1 (1884-86) 670-675 s.v. «Athamas»; Stoll, H. W., ML II 2 (1894-97) 2632-2636 s.v. «Melikertes»; Turcan, R., Les sarcophages romains à représentations dionysiaques (1966) 431-435.

Concernant l'identification de Leucothée avec Uni à Pyrgi (→ Uni, → Eileithya) cf. Akten des Kolloquiums zum Thema «Die Göttin von Pyrgi», Archäologische, linguistische und religionsgeschichtliche Aspekte, Tübingen 1979 (1981), en particulier Colonna, G., 29-34; Bloch, R., 123-129; au sujet de Leucothée, déesse de la mer: Krauskopf, I., 137-148.

CATALOGUE

A. Inô, simple déesse

1. Stèle votive en marbre. Volos, Mus. E 543. 404. De Larissa. - Arvanitopoulos, A. S., ArchEph 1910, 379. - Début du III^e s. av. J.-C. - I. assise sur un rocher vers la dr. (chiton, himation). Devant elle la dédicante, qui se nomme Danaé, tend les mains vers la déesse en geste de supplication. Entre les deux personnages un bâtiment rond.

B. Inô nourrice de Dionysos

2. Peinture. Rome. Mus. Naz. Rom. 1118 B 4. De la Farnésine, cubiculum B. - Bianchi-Bandinelli, RCP

fig. 123; Bragantini, I./de Vos, M., MusNazRom II 1 (1982) 136 pl. 68 (bibl.); Helbig³ III 444. - I^{er} s. ap. J.-C. - I., son thyrsos appuyé près d'elle, assise de trois quarts vers la dr., tient l'enfant Dionysos sur les genoux et s'apprête à lui donner le sein. La scène a lieu dans un jardin limité par un porche. Au second plan deux femmes, dont une porteuse de thyrsos. Près d'elles une statue de Dionysos archaïsant sur un piédestal. Au sommet d'une arcature un Satyre allongé lève son canthare (→ Silenos, Silenoi).

3.* (= Agnoia 5, = Dionysos/Bacchus 136*. 174 avec bibl., = Dionysos/Bacchus [in peripheria occ.] 8*) Mosaïque. Djemila, Mus. - Leschi, L., MonPiot 35, 1935-36. 139-146 pl. 8. - Début du III^e s. ap. J.-C. - I. assise vers la dr. allaite Bacchus. Près d'elle une femme accoudée à un pilastre. A dr. un Satyre.

4. (= Dionysos/Bacchus 138*) Sarcophage. Hever Castle (Kent). Acquis à Rome. - Matz, F., SarkRel IV 3, 411-413 n° 230 pl. 254, 1. - Vers le milieu du II^e s. ap. J.-C. - Au centre I., couchée sur le flanc g., allaite Bacchus; près d'elle un arbre sur lequel s'enroule un serpent. A g. deux femmes dansent (?) autour de l'arbre. A dr. un homme drapé dans un himation semble retenir un autre personnage qui s'approche à grands pas du centre.

5. (= Dionysos/Bacchus 137 avec bibl.) Relief de pierre. Rome, Pal. Cardelli. - Turcan 431-432 pl. 22a. - II^e s. ap. J.-C. - Au centre I., couchée sur le flanc, allaite Bacchus. Derrière elle une Ménade (?) et une Nymphe des sources encadrent un dieu, → Sabazios (?) qui tient un serpent. A dr. → Pan.

6. (= Aktaion 79* avec bibl., = Dionysos/Bacchus 139 avec bibl.) Sarcophage. Pise, Camposanto 14. - Turcan 432-433 pl. 22b. - Epoque antonine. - A g. I., mi-allongée sur le flanc g. au pied d'un rocher, allaite Bacchus. Derrière elle se tient la Nymphe de la source dont la cruche renversée sur le rocher laisse couler l'eau. Derrière I. un dieu d'allure dionysienne: Sabazios. A dr. Actéon attaqué par son chien.

IDENTIFICATION INCERTAINE

7. Statue en marbre de Paros. Versailles, Château. - Montebault, M./Schloder, J., L'Album Canini du Louvre et la Collection d'Antiques de Richelieu (1988) 170-171 n° 7 fig. 53 a (bibl.). - Date incertaine: - I (?) matronale, vêtue d'un péplos à colpos et rabat, un manteau sur les épaules, tient un nourrisson dans les bras: I. et Mélécerte? → Eirene et → Ploutos? ou Faustine avec un de ses enfants.

8. (= Dionysos 678) Cratère en calice. Moscou, Mus. Pouchkine II 1 732. De Nola. - *ARV*² 618, 4: P. de la Villa Giulia; Sidorova, N./Tugaceva, O./Zabelina, V., Antique Painted Pottery in the Pushkin State Museum of Fine Arts (1985) n° 45. - 460-450 av. J.-C. - A: Hermès, assis vers la dr. sur un rocher, tient l'enfant Dionysos sur les genoux. Celui-ci tend les bras vers une femme debout à dr. qui serait I. A g. une autre femme. B: au centre un roi chenu tenant un sceptre. De part et d'autre, une femme s'éloigne de lui en ouvrant les bras. Il s'agirait de Cadmos et de ses filles.

C. Inô, Dionysos, Sémélé

9. Relief du trône d'Amyclée. Perdu. - Paus. 3, 19, 3. - 2^e moitié du VI^e s. av. J.-C. - I. se tient près de Sémélé debout à côté de Dionysos.

D. Inô et Athamas reçoivent la garde de l'enfant Dionysos

10.* (= Athamas 1) Hydrie à f. r. Athènes, coll. A. Kyrou. D'Atalanti (Locride). - Oakley pl. 8: Hermonax. - Vers 460 av. J.-C. - Athamas assis dans son palais devant une table chargée de deux canthares et de gâteaux. Il tient une phiale à la main. I., debout près de lui, esquisse un geste d'accueil ou de surprise. Face au couple royal s'avance Hermès vers la g., portant l'enfant Dionysos dans ses bras.

11. (= Athamas 2*) Bol à relief, fr. Ex-coll. Curtius. - Oakley 45. - II^e s. av. J.-C. - Représentait la même scène. Il est donc raisonnable de supposer qu'I. était présente. Voir également Athamas 4*.

12. (= Athamas 3*, = Dionysos/Fufluns 9, = Hermes 371b) Stamnos étrusque. Rome, Villa Giulia 2350. De Faléries. - EVF 102. - IV^e s. av. J.-C. - A dr. Hermès, portant l'enfant Dionysos, s'approche d'Athamas (himation brodé, sceptre) assis sur un rocher (?); à sa dr. est assise I. (diadème, vêtements brodés), un sceptre à la main dr., la tête tournée vers les nouveaux arrivants. Ils sont entourés de Bacchants.

E. Inô marâtre

13.* Amphore de Nola. Naples, Mus. Naz. Stg 270. De Capoue. - *ARV*² 1161, 1: P. de Munich 2335. - 3^e quart du V^e s. av. J.-C. - I., une double hache à la main dr. (chiton, cécyphale), poursuit Phrixos qu'emporte vers la dr. le bélier à toison d'or.

F. Inô fuyant Athamas et le saut dans la mer

14. Peinture à l'encaustique. Perdue. - Kallistratos stat. 14. - Date inconnue. - Œuvre peinte à l'occasion d'un concours et non destinée à l'exposition permanente. Callistrate dépeint Athamas l'air égaré et baigné de sueur, se ruant vers I. pour la tuer. Elle se précipite vers le promontoire de Skeiron, tenant Mélécerte pressé sur son sein. Les vagues s'apprêtent à la recueillir, et → Amphitrite, les Néréides et → Okeanos avec leur cortège de dauphins viennent à leur rencontre.

15. Cratère en cloche apulien à f. r. fr. Genève, coll. part. - RVAp II 504, 85; Aellen, C./Cambitoglou, A./Chamay, J., Le peintre de Darius et son milieu, Cat. exp. Genève (1986) 168-170, figs. - Vers 330. - Dans le registre supérieur, entre Amphitrite et → Poseidon, une Néréide assise sur un → Ketos: I.? Registre inférieur: folie d'Athamas. Seule la tête demeure; le visage exprime l'égarement. La présence des divinités marines rend très plausible la présence d'I. avec Mélécerte dans les bras. Le document est cependant trop fragmentaire...

16.* AE, Corinthe, Antonin (138-161). - NumCommPaus 12-13 n° 2 pl. B XXIV. - Rv.: I. vers la g. sur un rocher, tenant Mélécerte dans ses bras, s'apprête à sauter dans les vagues. Un Triton lui tend les bras.

17. (= Isthmos 6a*) AE, Corinthe, Domitien (81-96). - NumCommPaus 12 n° 2 pl. B XXI; Imhoof-Blumer, MGr 160; Stoll, ML II 2, 2634, fig. - Rv. I. de dos vers la g. s'apprête à se jeter dans la mer avec l'enfant; Isthmos assis sur un rocher lui fait face. Au pied du rocher, un dauphin. (Même type inversé: Septime Sévère, NumCommPaus 12 n° 2 pl. B XXII = Isthmos 6b).

18.* AE, Corinthe, Domitien. - NumCommPaus 12 n° 2 pl. B XX. - Rv. I., son enfant dans les bras, court vers la g. où se profile un rocher.

19. AE, Corinthe, Septime Sévère, Caracalla. - Imhoof-Blumer, MGr 160. - Rv. I. sur un rocher, de trois quarts dos, s'apprête à sauter dans la mer avec l'enfant. Un grand dauphin vient à sa rencontre.

G. Inô, divinité marine

20.* AE, Corinthe, Antonin. - Imhoof-Blumer, F., Choix de monnaies grecques de la coll. Imhoof-Blumer (1883) pl. 2, 50; NumCommPaus 12 n° 2 pl. B XVIII. - Rv. I. fuit vers la dr., jambe g. avancée et fléchie, tête retournée (vêtement dévoilant le sein dr.), tenant son voile gonflé en dais au-dessus de sa tête. Près d'elle à dr. un Hippocampe (même type: Lucius Vérus [161-169] NumCommPaus, mention p. 61 §).

21. AE, Corinthe, Marc Aurèle (161-180). - NumCommPaus 12 n° 2 pl. B XIX. - Rv. I., debout de face, regarde Mélécerte qu'elle tient sur son bras g. De la main dr. elle esquisse le geste de soulever son voile.

Cf. aussi → Hermos 16.

22. (= Borios 1, = Doto 2, = Glaukos I 1* avec bibl.) Mosaïque. Toulouse, Mus. Saint Raymond Cat. 20. De Saint-Rustice (Haute-Garonne), thermes. - Pelekanides, o. c. 24, 47-48; Comotti, A., EAA III 952 fig. 1190. - V^e s. ap. J.-C. - Glaukos, torse de face, tient le petit Mélécerte à deux mains et le tend à I. assise à la cavalière sur son dos pisciforme. Une draperie couvre ses jambes et une autre dessine un dais au-dessus d'elle. A ses pieds, un Kétos. Noms inscrits en grec.

23. (= Agrios I 1 avec bibl., = Aigialos 1 avec bibl., = Glaukos I 2) Mosaïque. Garni (Arménie). - Fin du III^e s. ap. J.-C. - Frise de Néréides assises sur le dos de Tritons. Celle que porte Glaukos est entièrement perdue; seule demeure la dernière lettre de son nom, Ω; il pourrait s'agir d'I.

24.* (= Glaukos I 3 avec bibl.) Plat d'argent repoussé. Athènes, Mus. Bénaki 11.446. Acquis en Egypte. - Pelekanides, S., ArchEph 1942-44, 47-48. - Médaille: I. assise vers la g. sur le dos d'un Triton qui se tourne vers elle, une rame à la main g. I. allaite Mélécerte; elle porte un chiton qui dévoile sa jambe g. Ses cheveux sont noués sur la nuque. Dans le champ s'ébattent des poissons.

25. Intaille. Localisation inconnue. D'Ehl (Bas-Rhin) - Guiraud, H., Intailles et camées de l'époque ro- maine en Gaule, Gallia suppl. 48 (1988) n° 27. – I. velificans assise sur un dauphin tient par la main un petit personnage à côté d'elle.

26. Intaille en cornaline. Colchester and Essex Mus. 291. De Colchester. – Henig, Corpus n° 288. – I^{er} s. ap. J.-C. – I. (?) velificans assise sur un dauphin. Dans le champ, un enfant aptère tend les bras vers elle. Les personnages sont interprétés comme → Aphrodite et Amor (→ Eros/Amor, Cupido).

H. Documents incertains

27. Plat d'argent, repoussé. Turin, Gall. Sabauda. Acquis au Caire. – Monneret de Villard, U., La scultura ad Ahnás (1923) 38 pl. 25; Rosenberg, M., Der Goldschmiede Merkzeichen IV (1928) 740; Cruikshank Dodd, E., Byzantine Silver Stamps (1961) n° 93. – Porte une estampille datée de 541 ap. J.-C. – I. assise vers la g. sur le dos d'un lion marin. De la main dr. elle tient une phiale qu'elle tend à l'animal et une fleur (?) de la main g. Derrière elle, au second plan, une silhouette enfantine aptère bande son arc (cf. etiam → Eros/Amor). Autour du médaillon inscr. chrétienne.

28. Mosaïque monochrome. Corinthie, thermes de l'Isthme. – Packard, P. M., «A monochrome mosaic at Isthmia», Hesperia 49, 1980, 327-436 pl. 97-101. – Milieu du II^e s. ap. J.-C. – En deux registres superposés, un Triton portant une Néréide sur le dos. Le Triton du registre inférieur tient un bouclier ou un tambourin. La Néréide (I. ?), velificans et les jambes drapées, pose la main g. sur l'épaule du Triton. Le couple est accompagné d'un Amour debout sur un dauphin, tenant d'une main les rênes et de l'autre brandissant une badine en guise d'aiguillon.

29. Intaille en cornaline, signée Hyllos. Boston, MFA. – Furtwängler, AG pl. 65, 27; Richter, Engel-GemsRom 152 fig. 713; Vollenweider, Steinschneidekunst 69 pl. 77, 1-2; Zazoff, AG 318 pl. 92, 9. – Epoque julio-claudienne. – Un jeune Triton porte sur le dos une Néréide (I. ?), qui lui enserme le cou de son bras dr. Devant le couple, un Amour ailé souffle dans une conque.

I. Statues et groupes mentionnés par Pausanias

30. Corinthie, entre la source Pirène et le sanctuaire de Léchaion. – Paus. 2, 3, 4. – «... après Hermès (et le béliet) viennent Poséidon, Leucothée et Palaïmon sur un dauphin.»

31. Corinthie, dans le sanctuaire de Poséidon. – Paus. 2, 1, 8-9. – Autour du groupe statuaire de Poséidon, Amphitrite et Palaïmon, effigies de Thalassa, Aphrodite, les Néréides, les Dioscures (→ Dioskouroi), → Galène (I), un cheval marin, I., Bellérophon et Pégase (→ Pegasos).

32. Corinthie. Dans le même ensemble que 31, un naos consacré à Palaïmon. Paus. 2, 2, 1. – Effigies de Leucothée, Palaïmon et Poseidon.

33. Leuctra (Laconie). – Paus. 3, 36, 4. – Statue de marbre. – Cf. aussi Paus. 3, 26, 1, sanctuaire (avec statue d'I. ?) en bronze) et oracle d'I. sur le chemin d'Oitylos à Thalamai (Laconie).

COMMENTAIRE

Seul le relief de Volos I illustre le rayonnement de la déesse que fut I. en Thessalie. La part des épisodes thessaliens est relativement modeste dans l'iconographie de l'héroïne, et se limite à la sphère grecque et à ses prolongements d'Italie méridionale et étrusque.

Le thème entre dans le répertoire tragique avec les autres légendes thessaliennes et thraces (→ Orpheus, → Thamyris, → Medeia), lorsque Athènes se tourne vers la région du Strymon à la recherche de blé.

Deux documents qui illustrent la remise de l'enfant au couple royal, si proches de structure, font penser à un original commun (10-11). L'imagerie attique, sous l'influence de la tragédie, nous donne la seule image d'I., âpre belle-mère cherchant à tuer Phrixos (13). L'arme utilisée, la hache, la rapproche d'autres personnages tragiques: Clytemnestre (→ Klytaimnestra, → Aigisthos), les femmes thraces (→ Orpheus), Lycurgue (→ Lykourgos I). Pour A. Prag, The Oresteia (1985) 90, elle est l'outil domestique par excellence, donc la première arme de fortune empoignée par des personnages furieux, et non une arme féminine.

La peinture vue ou imaginée par Callistrate 14 étant perdue, la folie d'Athamas nous est parvenue sous forme fragmentaire sur le cratère de Genève 15 (où les auteurs pensent qu'I. est peut-être également figurée en déesse marine).

La Corinthie, de par sa vocation maritime, accorde quelque importance à I., déesse marine. Seules les monnaies corinthiennes rendent témoignage du saut dans la mer: elles sont probablement le reflet d'un des groupes statuaires de l'Isthme mentionnés par Pausanias. Iconographiquement, le saut d'I. s'apparente au suicide de Sappho (voir la mosaïque aux chevaux de Carthage: Salomonson, J. W., La mosaïque aux chevaux de l'Antiquarium de Carthage [1965] 110 fig. 31 pl. 52, 2; ou le décor en stuc de la basilique souterraine de la Porte Majeure: voir p. ex. Mielsch, Stuckreliefs 118 K 16 av. bibl.). Les documents romains (2-7) exaltent I. dans son rôle de nourrice de l'enfant Bacchus, mais il est malaisé de la distinguer toujours des Nymphes du mont Nysa, l'atmosphère bachique prévalant sur les éléments narratifs. Le monde romain s'est également attaché à la déesse marine. L'avatar marin d'I. apparaît déjà dans Homère. A époque tardive, son association avec un Triton l'assimile iconographiquement aux Néréides. Son rapprochement avec Glaukos (22-23) fait songer à l'existence d'une sorte de triade familiale. Le motif de la velificans devrait prendre tout son sens avec I. dans la mesure où son voile est l'instrument légendaire de sa puissance (cf. Hom. Od. 5, 346-350; où I. le confie à Ulysse qui le rendra aux flots à l'issue de la traversée); or seule la monnaie 20 lui accorde quelque importance. Cependant le succès de ce motif contribue à confondre davantage I. dans la cohorte des Néréides, dont seule la présence de Mélécerte la distingue. La personnalité iconographique de ce dernier souffre également de l'engouement pour le thème de la naissance de Vénus (→ Aphrodite) et autres triomphes marins qui voient la multiplication des Amorini. Palaïmon, aurige des dauphins (Apul. met. 4, 31) entre dans la joyeuse bande des Amours ailés ou aptères, et rares sont les cas où on peut le reconnaître avec certitude: le plat de Turin où l'enfant aptère tient un arc 27, ou l'intaille de Boston 29 sont des identifications incertaines. Ces contaminations rendent tentante l'identification de certaines Néréides accompagnées d'Amor comme des I. Il en est ainsi pour la mosaïque de l'Isthme 28 où l'identification est rendue plus probable encore par le culte régional rendu à Palaïmon.

ANNE NERCESSIAN

INOPOS

(Ἰνωπός, Inopus). Torrent de Délos.

SOURCES LITTÉRAIRES: L'I. est cité comme le cours d'eau de Délos: Hom. h. Ap. 18; Kall. h. 3, 171; 4, 206, 263; etc. et à Délos même la dédicace IG XI 4, 1289: Ἰνωπὸς καλλιρόου. Sans référence délienne explicite: Val. Fl. 5, 104.

L'I. passait pour être une dérivation du Nil: Kall. h. 4, 206-208, etc. (textes réunis et transcrits par Bruneau, Cultes 17 n. 1). Dans les comptes de gestion du sanctuaire de Délos, «I.» désigne tantôt le torrent, tantôt un bâtiment homonyme (liste des textes: Bruneau, Cultes 218 n. 1).

BIBLIOGRAPHIE: Dans les encyclopédies, aucun article sur I. (ML, EAA) ou très bref (RE). Rassemblement des informations disponibles par Bruneau, Ph., BCH 114, 1990, 554-559.

CATALOGUE

1.* Relief d'un autel monumental de Cnide. – Love, I. C., AJA 77, 1973, 422 pl. 76 fig. 28; pl. 77 fig. 33. – Hellénistique. – Personnage masculin assis aux pieds d'une femme, elle-même assise sur un rocher devant un arbre. Sur la plinthe, sous le personnage masculin, l'inscr. ΙΝΩΠΙΟΣ (lecture de I. C. Love).

IDENTIFICATION ABANDONNÉE

2. Torse de marbre. Paris, Louvre MR 79 (cat. MA 855). – De Délos. – Visconti, Description des antiques du Musée royal (1817) n° 78; Michon, E., BCH 35, 1911, 288-301; Charbonneaux, J., Revue des arts 1, 1951, 9-16; Marcadé, MusDélôs 265-266. – L'identification comme I. remonte à Visconti; elle s'explique par l'origine délienne du marbre et l'illusion que le fragment provenait d'une statue à demi couchée dans une posture pouvant convenir à un dieu fleuve. On a pensé à un portrait d'Alexandre (F. Ravaisson: cf. RA 1876, 328), puis de Mithridate Eupator (Charbonneaux, Marcadé).

COMMENTAIRE

Dans les textes littéraires, le nom d'I. désigne le cours d'eau lui-même et non pas sa personnification; toutefois le bâtiment nommé «I.» dans les documents administratifs de Délos peut être un sanctuaire d'I., car les rédacteurs de ces actes disent couramment «l'Archégète» pour «l'Archégésion», le «Poulydamas» pour «le sanctuaire de Poulydamas» (Bruneau, Ph., BCH Suppl. I 120); c'est le seul indice de l'existence d'un I. personnifié, donc figurable sous forme humaine.

En regard de cette tradition littéraire où l'I. est toujours le torrent de Délos, le seul monument figuré où soit incrit le nom d'I. est l'autel 1: iconographiquement la figure masculine à demi couchée peut convenir à un dieu-fleuve, mais elle se trouve sur un autel de Cnide et dans un ensemble imagier que rien ne caractérise comme délien (les autres blocs représentent trois femmes; Hermès et un bige avec l'inscription NYMΦΑΙ; trois femmes dansant; des femmes et une divinité trônante). Rien, à vrai dire, n'oblige absolument à croire que l'I. de l'autel de Cnide soit le fleuve délien. En effet, bien que l'étymologie du nom d'I. nous échappe (la ressemblance du début du mot avec le nom d'→ Ino peut être fortuite et n'autorise aucune hypothèse), la présence y est frappante du suffixe -opos qu'on retrouve dans d'autres toponymes comme Oropos ou Asopos, spécialement intéressant car c'est aussi un nom de rivière. Or, en grec, les mêmes toponymes reparaissent souvent dans des lieux éloignés, et en particulier le cas ne serait pas unique d'un même nom de fleuve désignant des cours d'eau différents: Achéloos, Achéron, Asopos, Érasinos, Éridanos, Inachos, Képhissos, Mélas, Pénéios... Il se peut donc qu'il y ait eu dans le monde grec plus d'un Inopus et que le relief cnidien représente un cours d'eau local et non celui de Délos.

PHILIPPE BRUNEAU

INTARABUS → Ares/Mars 503-504

IO I

(Ἰώ, Ἰώ, Io) Figure de la mythologie argienne: prêtresse d'→ Hera, elle est aimée de → Zeus qui la transforme en génisse; la déesse, jalouse, la fait surveiller par Argos, dont → Hermes la délivre; harcelée par un taon, Io parcourt la Grèce et la Méditerranée: s'arrêtant en Égypte, elle retrouve sa forme humaine et donne naissance à Épaphos, fils de Zeus.

Son nom, qui désigne aussi la lune à Argos (Herodianos I 347, 30 Lentz; Suda s. v. Ἰώ; Eust. ad Dion. Per. 92), a été rapproché de l'interjection ἰώ, cri de douleur, et de son dérivé ἰωή, «gémissement», de ἰήτος, épithète d'Apollon, ainsi que de ἰών, «violette» et toute sorte de fleurs (Westermann, A., Mythographi Graeci [1843] p. 373 [appendix narrat. 33]). Cf. Liddell/Scott et Chantraine s. v. lō et lō, Frisk s. v. lōh et lōhōs, ainsi que Eitrem 1739-1740; Engelmann 269, 36-66; Höfer 280-281; Athanassakis, A., «The Word lōh in Homer and Hesiod», AJA 89, 1968, 72-82.

SOURCES LITTÉRAIRES (pour d'autres détails, cf. Eitrem 1732-1738; Engelmann 263-270): Io est liée aux légendes argiennes. Pour la plupart des auteurs son père est → Inachos, dieu-fleuve et roi d'Argos (→ Fluvii): Aischyl. Prom. 589-590; Bakchyl. 19, 18; Soph. El. 5; Hdt. 1, 3; Kastor, FGrH 250 F8. D'après Hes. frg. 124 Merkelbach/West, c'est Peirèn – ou Peiras ou Peirasos –, roi de Tirynthe où il avait consacré la statue de culte d'Héra, qui fut emportée par la suite à Argos (Plut. de Daedalis Plataeensis frg. 158 Sandbach; Paus. 2, 17, 5); on cite encore Iasos (Apollod. bibl. 2 [5] 1, 3; Paus. 2, 16, 1), → Kadmos (I) (Etyim. m. 205, 35 s. v. Bóσπορος), → Prometheus (Antikleides, FGrH 140 F 13; Istros, FGrH 334 F 43), Arestor (Charax de Pergame, FGrH 103 F 13). La mère d'Io est → Melia (Johannes Antioch. [Malalas] FHG IV 544 frg. 14) ou Argia (Hyg. fab. 145).

Prêtresse d'Héra à Argos (Aischyl. Suppl. 291-292; Hes. frg. 124-125 Merkelbach/West; Charax, FGrH 103 F 13), Io suscite par sa beauté l'amour de Zeus qui la séduit (Apollod. bibl. 2 [5] 1, 3). Pour certains, cet amour fut provoqué par lynx, fille d'→ Echo ou de → Peitho, qu'Héra pour se venger transforma en oiseau (Schol. Pind. N. 4, 56 a; Schol. Theokr. 2, 17; cf. le nom d'Io [?] inscrit au-dessus d'un oiseau anthropomorphe sur un aryballe corinthien de Breslau, aujourd'hui perdu [→ Herakles 1991 *], qui d'après Brown, E., AJA 79, 1975, 137-139, représenterait lynx = lōs «δρνις»).

C'est pendant leur union que Zeus prend l'aspect d'un taureau et change Io en génisse (Aischyl. Suppl. 299; Martialis 14, 180); mais selon Hes. frg. 124 Merkelbach/West, le dieu la transforme après s'être uni à elle, en la touchant. Cette rencontre se passe dans les pâturages d'Inachos à Lerne (Aischyl. Prom. 640; Ov. met. 1, 588-600); la naissance de leur fils Épaphos n'aura lieu qu'après les errances d'Io, sur les bords du Nil (références: cf. infra). Sous son aspect zoomorphe, Io est décrite comme une génisse d'une beauté exceptionnelle, avec la peau blanche (Hes. frg. 124 Merkelbach/West; Ov. met. 1, 610-612. 652. 743; Val. Fl. 4, 380).

Cette liaison n'échappe pas à la vigilance d'Héra. Pour apaiser les soupçons de son épouse, Zeus lui jure qu'il ne s'est jamais uni à Io (de là vient que l'ἀφοδιστος ὄρκος, bien qu'il s'agisse d'un faux serment, ne provoquerait pas la colère des dieux: Hes. frg. 124 Merkelbach/West). Il accepte de lui faire présent de la belle génisse (Aischyl. Prom. 589-592; Ov. met. 1, 612-621; Val. Fl. 4, 360-367). Héra l'enferme dans son bois sacré, situé entre Argos et Mycènes (Soph. El. 4-5 et TrGF IV F 270; Plin. nat. 16, 239; Etyim. m. 176, 32 s. v. Ἀπέσιος Ζεύς), la confiant à la garde du Géant Argos qui l'attache à un olivier (Akus., FGrH 2 F 26-27; Plin. nat. 16, 239).

Argos est le fils d'Arestor et de Mykéné (Pherekyd., FGrH 3 F 66-67) ou d'Agénor (Apollod. bibl. 2 [4] 1, 2), ou de Niobé, la fille de Phoroneus (Akus., FGrH 2 F 25 a; Hyg. fab. 155). Pour qu'il reste vigilant, Héra le dote d'un troisième œil ouvert sur sa nuque et le dispense de l'envie de dormir (Pherekyd., FGrH 3 F 66); ou bien, d'après le poème Aigimios, attribué tantôt à Hésiode, tantôt à Cercops de Milet, il possède deux paires d'yeux (Hes. frg. 294 Merkelbach/West); d'autres sources rapportent que son corps tout entier est parsemé d'yeux innombrables (Aischyl. Prom. 569: μυριαπός; 678-679: πικνοὺς ὄσσοις δειδορκός; Suppl. 304: πανόπτης; cf. etiam Eur. Phoen. 1115; Pherekyd., FGrH 3 F 66; Bakchyl. 19, 19-20). Ses seules distractions, pendant qu'il garde Io, sont le chant et la flûte, dont il continuera à jouer même après sa mort (Aischyl. Prom. 574-575; Soph. Inachos, TrGF IV F 281-281a).

Chargé par Zeus de délivrer Io, Hermès procède, selon certains auteurs, par la ruse: il endort Argos au son du pipeau (Val. Fl. 4, 381-390), ou bien en lui jouant un air de syrinx et en le touchant de sa baguette (Ov. met. 1, 669-687. 713-721), puis lui tranche la tête avec sa harpé. Selon la version la plus répandue, celle des catalogues hésiodiques, Hermès, ne pouvant tromper le Géant, emploie la violence et l'attaque en lui jetant une pierre (Bakchyl. 19, 25-33; Schol. Hom. Il. 2, 103 Dindorf; Apollod. bibl. 2 [7] 1, 3; Etyim. m. s. v. Ἀργειφόντης). D'autres sources ne donnent pas de précisions (Aischyl. Suppl. 305: κατέκτανεν; Prom. 681: τοῦ ζῆν ἀπεστέρησεν; Schol. Eur. Phoen. 1116: κτείνει), mais les termes employés suggèrent l'utilisation d'une arme, sans doute une épée. Le meurtre a lieu, soit à Lerne (Aischyl. Prom. 652-653. 676-677), soit à Argoura d'Eubée (Steph. Byz. s. v. Ἀργούρα).

Après la mort d'Argos, Héra le transforme en paon, oiseau dont la queue est parsemée d'yeux sans nombre (Schol. Aristoph. Aves 102; Ov. met. 1, 722-723; Moschos 2, 56-59).

Toujours irritée contre Io, Héra lui envoie un taon qui la harcèle et l'oblige à parcourir le monde sans jamais s'arrêter. Ce taon ne serait autre que le fantôme d'Argos (Aischyl. Prom. 567-573. 674-682) ou l'Erinye (→ Erinyes) qui persécute Io (Ov. met. 1, 725-727; Licentius, carmen ad Augustinum, FFR; Val. Fl. 4, 391-395. 407-413; Hyg. fab. 145). La génisse traverse la Grèce du nord, la mer Ionienne (à laquelle elle laisse son nom: Aischyl. Prom. 839-841), l'Illyrie, la région d'Aimos et la Thrace jusqu'au Bosphore, ainsi nommé à cause de son passage: βοὸς πόρος (Aischyl. Prom. 733; Etyim. m. 205, 35 s. v. Bόσπορος). Pour d'autres interprétations du nom, cf. Steph. Byz. 178; Schol. Apoll. Rhod. 2, 168). Elle parcourt ensuite la Scythie, l'Asie, et parvient enfin en Égypte (Aischyl. Suppl. 540-573; Prom. 589. 681-682. 707-735. 790-815. 829-847; Kléarchos frg. 32 Wehrli; Apollod. bibl. 2 [7-8] 1, 3; Athen. 14, 619. Pour d'autres noms de lieux en rapport avec Io, cf. Eitrem 1737).

Au bord du Nil, Io reprend son aspect humain et met au monde son fils, nommé Épaphos parce qu'elle a été tendrement «touchée», «effleurée» par la main de Zeus (Aischyl. Suppl. 313-315; Prom. 848-851; Bakchyl. 19, 39-43; Apollod. bibl. 2 [8] 1, 3; Moschos 2, 50-52; Ov. met. 1, 728. 746; cf. etiam Etyim. m. 206, 25

s. v. Βούβασις). Par la suite, Épaphos fondera beaucoup de villes, dont Memphis. Il sera le père de Libye (→ Libye, Libye), la mère d'→ Agenor (I) et de Belos, qui règneront l'un sur la Phénicie, l'autre sur l'Égypte. Bélus aura deux fils, Aigypptos et → Danaos: ce dernier retournera finalement à Argos, patrie de son aïeule Io, et en deviendra le roi.

L'union d'Io avec Zeus serait donc à l'origine des → Danaïdes comme des Égyptiens, des Libyens et des autres peuples de la côte africaine et du Proche-Orient. Tous ces récits, ainsi que celui d'un mariage ultérieur d'Io avec → Telegonos, roi d'Égypte (Apollod. bibl. 2 [9] 1, 3), montrent que s'était répandue la conscience d'une parenté culturelle entre le monde grec et l'Orient, comme le confirment d'autres mythes relatifs à Io: l'histoire de son passage en Syrie où ses frères érigent en son honneur un sanctuaire sur le mont Silpion et nomment le site Iopolis (Suda s. v. lō), et le fait que Gaza, selon certaines sources, ait été aussi appelée lōnē, ἀπὸ lōs... (Steph. Byz. 194, 1; 333, 11 s. v. lōnion πέλαγος); cf. etiam les récits de Diod. 5, 60, 4 sur un frère d'Io, Kyrnos, et de Parthénios (Parth. 1) sur un autre frère d'Io, → Lyrkos.

Cette parenté, évoquée dans plusieurs poèmes du Cyrénéen Callimaque (Kall. epigr. 57 Pf.; et lōs ἀφίς, cf. Suda s. v. Καλλιμάχος, cf. frg. 472 Pf.), était un thème répandu en Grèce dès la haute époque archaïque. Le destin d'Io était déjà traité dans des poèmes épiques du VII^e s. av. J.-C., Aigimios (Hes. frg. 294. 296 Merkelbach/West, la Danaïde (Davies EGF p. 141) et surtout Phoronis (Davies EGF p. 153-155); cette œuvre racontait l'histoire de la famille d'Inachos, de son fils Phoroneus et de sa fille Io. Un trait résume l'importance de cette dynastie pour les Grecs: Phoroneus était considéré comme παῖς τοῦ συναγαγόντος ἀνθρώπου εἰς κοινόν (Paus. 2, 15, 5, cf. Acousilaos, FGrH 2 F 23) et c'est lui, et non Prométhée, qui aurait inventé le feu (Paus. 2, 19, 5). Il semble que Wilamowitz (Kyrene [1928] 12) ait eu raison de supposer l'existence d'une épopée, vraisemblablement composée à Cyrène au cours du VI^e s., qui présentait les diverses nations comme unies par une ascendance commune. Seule l'épopée ionienne (l'Iliade et l'Odyssée) ne parle pas d'Io: si elle mentionne déjà Hermès Ἀργειφόντης, c'est qu'à l'origine il était vraisemblablement sans rapport avec Io (Carpenter, R., AJA 54, 1950, 180; Heubeck, A., Kleine Schr. 247 ss.); ils furent probablement associés au cours du VII^e s., quand l'épos de la Grèce propre fut fixé par Hésiode et les autres poètes épiques de son temps.

Les œuvres de ces derniers ont inspiré leurs grands successeurs de l'époque classique: des historiens, l'argien Acousilaos (FGrH 2 F 26-27), Phérécyde (FGrH 3 F 67), Asclépiade de Tragilos (FGrH 12 F 16), Hérodote (1, 1; 2, 41; 3, 27), Hellanicos (FGrH 4 F 1-4); des poètes lyriques comme Pindare (Pind. N. 4, 35), et surtout des auteurs de théâtre: Phrynichos, avec les tragédies Aigyptioi et Les Danaïdes; Bacchylide, dans un dithyrambe Io (Bakchyl. 19, 15, cf. Maehler, H., Bacchylides [1968] 104); Eschyle (Aischyl. Suppl. 291-315; Prom. 561-900); Sophocle, auteur du drame satyrique Inachos (West, S., Io and the Dark Stranger», ClQ 34, 1984, 292-302) qui montre Io sous la forme d'une lionne (TrGF IV F 269a, 42); Euripide (Eur. Phoen. 247. 676-681. 828. 1115; Iph. T. 394; Or. 932; Suppl. 628); Aristophane (Aristoph. Eccl. 80, et les schol.), ainsi que le tragique Chairemon (TrGF I 71 F 9) et deux poètes comiques athéniens, auteurs chacun d'une Io, Sannyrion (Suda s. v. Σαννυρίων; CAF I 795 frg. 10-11) et Platon le comique (Suda s. v. Πλάτων; CAF I 615 frg. 55). Il faut enfin mentionner Apollodore, dont on sait qu'il puise dans les catalogues hésiodiques et dans les autres épopées archaïques, ainsi que dans les tragédies classiques.

Les rapports d'Io avec l'Égypte étaient si évidents qu'à l'époque d'Hérodote on l'identifiait à la déesse-vache Isis (Hdt. 2, 41; Diod. 1, 24, 8), et son fils Épaphos à → Apis, dieu-taureau (Hdt. 3, 27; cf. Cook, Zeus III 1, 637 ss.). La conscience de cette parenté remonte, comme on l'a vu, au VII^e s., époque où l'ouverture des frontières de l'Égypte permit aux Grecs d'y pénétrer et même d'y fonder des colonies. C'est alors que les philosophes présocratiques entrent en contact avec les savants orientaux et égyptiens et parlent souvent, avec beaucoup de respect, de leurs religions. On remarque d'ailleurs entre mythes grecs et orientaux des similitudes et des parallèles surprenants (cf. West, M., Hesiod Theogony [1970]; Heubeck, A., «Mythologische Vorstellungen des alten Orients im archaischen Griechenland» [1955], dans Heitsch, E., éd., Hesiod: Wege der Forschung [1966] 545-570); ils manifestent les relations très étroites du monde hellénique avec l'Égypte et l'Orient, qui remontent au moins à l'époque mycénienne (Carpenter, o. c. 183). Ces rapports permettent aujourd'hui de replacer au cours du II^e millénaire certains événements de Méditerranée orientale, jusqu'ici obscurs, qui dénotent les incessantes migrations des peuples et la fusion de leurs cultures. On perçoit l'écho de cette fusion dans divers récits (cf. Bérard, J., Les Hyksos et la légende d'Io [1952]; Duchemin, J., «La justice de Zeus et le destin d'Io. Regard sur les sources proche-orientales d'un mythe eschyléen», REG 92, 1979, 1-54; Lekatsas, P., Τὸ κάλεσμα τῆς Θεονύμφης [1980]), et l'on peut en reconnaître plusieurs étapes qui se succèdent depuis l'époque préhistorique jusqu'à celle des Diadoques, moment où la légende et le culte d'Io sont définitivement constitués. Après elle, d'autres divinités grecques ont aussi été identifiées à Isis: → Demeter, → Selene et aussi Héra (Diod. 1, 24, 8), et l'on a vu qu'Épaphos, fils d'Io et de Zeus, régna en Égypte (Diod. 3, 74, 1).

Localisé à l'origine en Argolide, et enrichi au cours des siècles de traits populaires et d'allusions historiques, le mythe d'Io prit assez tôt une dimension panhellénique. Cette importance s'explique avant tout parce qu'il s'agissait d'un lōpōs λόγος relatif, semble-t-il, à un culte très ancien. On a même parlé, à juste titre, d'un culte préolympien et d'éléments préépiques à propos de l'épiphanie du dieu qui s'unit à son amante sous forme animale (Wehrli, F., «Io, Dichtung und Kultlegende», dans Festschr. K. Schefold [1967] 198): Io était probablement à l'origine une déesse, remplacée ensuite par Héra dont elle devint la prêtresse dans son sanctuaire d'Argos. On a même supposé que le récit réunissant Io, Zeus et Héra, tout comme le culte d'Héra, furent importés à Argos depuis l'Eubée, où Héra avait primitivement son culte (Deubner, Zur Iosage 101 ss.): c'est là que, selon l'Aigimios, se situait le bois sacré où Io était gardée par Argos (Hes. fig. 296 Merkelbach/West; Etyim. m. 389, 1 s. v. Εἰβουα; cf. Steph. Byz. s. v. Ἀργούρα; Strabon 10, 1, 3 p. 445: βοὸς ἀύλη ... ἀντρον ἐν τῇ πρὸς Αἰγαῖον τετραμμένη παραλίᾳ [Εὐβοίας], ὅπου τῇ Ἰὼ φασὶ τεκεῖν Ἐπαφρον...) On peut supposer un couple originel formé d'Io et d'Argos, que remplace le couple Héra → Herakles (la massue et la peau d'animal sont communes à Argos et à Héraclès): le récit relatif à Argos appartiendrait donc à une époque prédorienne qui ne connaissait pas encore Héraclès (Furtwängler, AG III 40). Ce dernier fait partie des descendants d'Io: c'est ainsi que le présente Eschyle dans son Prométhée délivré.

D'ailleurs le culte d'Io à Argos n'était pas sans rapport avec des rites destinés à obtenir la fécondité de la terre argienne, que l'amour de Zeus pour Io aurait ravivée tandis qu'une sécheresse aurait été provoquée par la jalousie d'Héra. En outre Io était à Argos identifiée à → Selene (cf. supra). D'autre part lorsque dans sa course errante elle arrive à Dodone, l'oracle la salue comme κλεινὴ δάμαρ, «épouse illustre» de Zeus (Aischyl. Prom. 829-835). Son aspect de génisse lui-même rappelle l'Héra βοῶπις. Les nombreux rapprochements qu'on peut établir entre Io et Héra, sous cette forme, font penser que les Grecs considéraient Io comme une hypostase, un substitut de la déesse. La persécution d'Io par Héra laisse entrevoir leur relation étroite, que suppose aussi le thème de l'ἀφροδισιὸς ὄρκος déjà abordé par Hésiode (Hes. fig. 124 Merkelbach/West). Ce n'est probablement pas un hasard si, parmi les multiples amours de Zeus, seule sa passion pour Io préoccupe sérieusement Héra et si le serment qu'elle lui demande a une importance tout particulière: elle n'a jamais eu une telle exigence qu'à propos d'Io, sa plus dangereuse rivale parmi toutes les amantes de Zeus.

BIBLIOGRAPHIE: Burkert, W., Homo Necans (1972) 181-189; Dowden, K., Death and the Maiden (1989) 117-145; Eitrem, S., REIX 2 (1916) 1732-1742 s. v. «Io»; Elia, O., Pittura murale e mosaici del Mus. Naz. di Napoli (1932) (= Elia 1); idem, MonPitt III. Pompei, Le pitture della «Casa del Citarista» (1937) (= Elia 2); Engelmann, R., ML II 1 (1890-94) 263-280 s. v. «Io» (= Engelmann 1); idem, «Io-Sage», Jdl 18, 1903, 37-58 (= Engelmann 2); v. Geisau, H., KIPauli 2 (1975) 1426-1427 s. v. «Io»; Herdejürgen, H., «Tarentinische Terrakotten der Sammlung Schwitters», AntK 16, 1973, 102-108 pl. 19-24 (= Herdejürgen 1); eadem, Götter, Menschen und Dämonen, Terrakotten aus Unteritalien (1978) (= Herdejürgen 2); Höfer, O., ML II 1 (1890-94) 280-281 s. v. «Iobakchos»; Kaempf-Dimitriadou, S., Die Liebe der Götter in der attischen Kunst des 5. Jh. v. Chr., AntK 11. Beih. (1979); Laviosa, C., «Antefisse fittili di Taranto», ArchCl 6, 1954, 217-230; Meyer, E., Forschungen zur Alten Geschichte I (1892) 67 ss.; Müller, C. W., RhM 129, 1986, 142-156; Mustilli, D., «Testa marmorea da Juvanum», dans Gli archeologi italiani in onore di A. Maiuri (1965) 339-346; Paribeni, E., EAA IV (1961) 170 s. v. «Io»; Richardson, L., Pompei: The Casa dei Dioscuri and its Painters, MAAR 23 (1955); Rizzo, PER; Rizzo, G. E., MonPitt III. Roma III, Le pitture della «Casa di Livio» (Palatino) (1936); Schauenburg, K., «Göttergeliebte auf unteritalischen Vasen», AuA 10, 1961, 77-101; Scheffold, K., Pompejanische Malerei (1952); trad. fr. La peinture pompéienne (1972); idem, SB II 27-29; idem, SB III 133-137; Simon, E., «Zeus und Io auf einer Kalpis des Eucharidesmalers», AA 100, 1985, 265-280; Vollenweider, Steinschneidekunst; Wesenberg, B., «Zur Io des Nikias in den pompejanischen Wandbildern», dans Kanon, Festschr. E. Berger, AntK 15. Beih. (1988) 344-350 pl. 96; Yalouris, N., «Le mythe d'Io: les transformations d'Io dans l'iconographie et la littérature grecques», dans IconogrCl 3-23.

PLAN DU CATALOGUE

I. Délivrance d'Io zoomorphe, transformée en génisse	I-32
A. Hermès délivre Io en attaquant Argos	I-30
1. Sans la présence de Zeus	I-10
2. En présence de Zeus	II-14
3. Io et Héra	15
4. Io, Argos et Inachos	16
5. Io-génisse, seule	17-21
6. Argos sans Io	22-30
B. Hermès délivre Io par la ruse	31
C. Io piquée par le taon	32
II. Délivrance d'Io sous forme hybride	33
III. Délivrance d'Io anthropomorphe, sous l'aspect d'une femme cornue	34-61
1. Io, Argos et Hermès	34-38
2. Io et Hermès	39-42
3. Io et Éros	43
4. Io et Argos seuls	44-54
5. Io, Argos et d'autres personnages	55-61
IV. Rencontre amoureuse de Zeus et d'Io	62
V. Divinisation d'Io. Io dans un décor végétal	63-64
VI. Io reçue en Égypte par Isis	65-67
VII. Io à Gaza	68
VIII. Io anthropomorphe seule	69-106
1. La figure en pied	69-84
2. Têtes, bustes et masques	85-106
IX. Identification douteuse	107-114
X. Fausse identification	115-116

CATALOGUE

I. Délivrance d'Io zoomorphe, transformée en génisse

A. Hermès délivre Io en attaquant Argos

1. Sans la présence de Zeus

Céramique attique

1. (= Hera 485*, = Hermes 841, = Ianos 6 - avec bibl.) Amphore f.n. Londres, BM 1848.6-19.4 (B 164). De Bomarzo. - ABV 148, 2; Add 41: proche d'Exékias; Yalouris 4 fig. 1. - Vers 540 av. J.-C. - Hermès (barbu, pétase, peau de bête), vers la g., frappe Argos (deux visages barbus, peau de bête) qui tombe en arrière. Héra regarde la scène; la génisse Io tourne le dos à l'action.

2.* (= Hermes 851 in fine) Lécythe f. bl., f. n. New Haven, Yale Univ. 1913.116. - ABV 550, 317: style du P. de Haimon; Add 135; Baur, P. V. C., Cat. of the R. D. Stoddart Coll. of Greek and Italian Vases in the Yale Univ. (1922) 79-80 n° 116 fig. 20 pl. 1; Simon 272 n. 249. - Vers 480 av. J.-C. - Devant Io en génisse, de profil à dr., Hermès (pétase, bottes, chlamyde, kérykeion) attrape par les cheveux Argos (deux visages barbus, cinq yeux rouges sur le corps) qui tombe à genoux. Une femme (Héra?) assiste à la scène.

3. Plat f.r. Local. inconnue, anc. coll. Blaydes (Grande-Bretagne). De Chiussi. - ARV 163, 5: Paséas (P. de Cerbère); Engelmann n° 12; Yalouris 5 fig. 3. - 520-510 av. J.-C. - Au centre Hermès (inscr.; barbu, pétase, peau de panthère) va donner de son épée le coup de grâce à Argos terrassé (barbu, chiton court, pétase) et dépourvu d'yeux multiples. Derrière Hermès, Io (taureau) bondit vers la g.

4.* (= Aktaion 27 [A], = Hermes 845b - avec bibl.) Amphore f.r. Hambourg, Mus. KG 1966.34. - Para 347, 8 ter: P. d'Eucharidès; Add 199; Scheffold, SB III 134 fig. 173. - Vers 480 av. J.-C. - Ag. Hermès barbu (nu sauf chlamyde, pétase) attaque de son épée Argos (barbu, le corps parsemé d'yeux) qui est déjà agenouillé, la main g. appuyée sur un rocher. A dr. Io (taureau). Noms inscrits.

5. Coupe fr. f.r. Würzburg, Wagner-Mus. H 5344a et b. - CVA 2 pl. 37, 2: Onésimos; Simon 270 fig. 57. - Vers 500 av. J.-C. - Sont conservés les cuisses et le pied g. d'Hermès, la jambe dr. parsemée d'yeux et le pied g. d'Argos déjà agenouillé. A dr. on distingue le rocher.

6. GEnoché fr. f.r. New York, marché des ant. - Inédite. - P. de Briséis, vers 480 av. J.-C. - Ag. Hermès (barbu, pétase, chlamyde) attaque de son épée Argos parsemé d'yeux, qui plie le genou. A dr. Io (seul l'arrière-train de la génisse est conservé).

7.* (= Hermes 843 avec bibl.) GEnoché f.r. Naples, Mus. Naz. Stevens 127936. De Cumes. - ARV 874, 2: P. de Florence 4021; Para 427, Gábrici, E., MonLincei 22, 1913, 521-522 pl. 85; ArchCl 5, 1953, pl. 46; Sichtermann, H., Die griech. Vase. Gestalt, Sinn und Kunstwerk (1963) fig. 4; Yalouris 9 n° 7. - Vers 460 av. J.-C. - Hermès (barbu, nu sauf chlamyde, pétase) attaque de son épée Argos colossal, parsemé d'yeux, qui plie déjà le genou. Derrière lui, Io (vache) immobile.

8. (= Hera 486*, = Hermes 838, = Inachos 2* - avec bibl.) Hydrie f.r. Boston, MFA 08.417. De Capoue. - ARV 579, 84: P. d'Agrigente; Para 391; Add 262; Boardman, ARFH I fig. 327; Moret, Ilioupersis 137-138. 168-169 pl. 78; Scheffold, SB III 135 fig. 175; Yalouris 6-7 n° 6; Mantis, A., Προβλήματα ελαιογραφίας Ιερειών και Λεπρών (1983) 357. - Vers 460 av. J.-C. - Au centre Io (taureau) bondit vers la g. Au premier plan Argos barbu (pilos, épée au côté, peau de panthère), le corps tout entier constellé d'yeux, fuit vers la g. en brandissant une massue; il se retourne vers Hermès (pétase, chlamyde) qui dégage son épée. Entre eux une colonne; derrière le dieu, un autel et une femme (la mère d'Io, Mélia?); à g. une femme tenant un sceptre et une clé (prêtresse ou Héra?) et un personnage barbu debout (Inachos?).

Glyptique

9. Jaspe vert. Local. inconnue. - Engelmann 55 n° 27; Brommer, Denkmälerlisten III 179 n° 9. - Ép. romaine. - Hermès (caducée, harpé) tient dans la main g. la tête d'Argos dont le corps décapité gît par terre. Au second plan, Io (génisse) fuit vers la dr. Dans le champ un paon.

Description d'œuvre imaginaire (toreutique)

10. (= Hermes 854) Relief de métal ornant la corbeille d'Europe. - Moschos (II^e s. av. J.-C.) 2, 55-61; Simon 277-278. - Hermès tue Argos, parsemé d'yeux; de son sang surgit un oiseau multicolore. Pour un autre épisode, cf. 67.

2. En présence de Zeus

Céramique attique à f. r.

11.* (= Hermes 845a) Kalpis. Würzburg, Wagner-Mus. ZA 48, prêt de Takuhito Fujita (Tokyo). - Simon 265-280 fig. 48-49; P. d'Eucharidès. - Vers 470 av. J.-C. - Ag. Hermès (barbu, nu, pétase, chlamyde) attaque de son épée Argos barbu, le corps parsemé d'yeux qui ressemblent à ceux d'un mourant; déjà blessé à l'épaule et à l'aisselle, le Géant est tombé à genoux, la main g. appuyée sur un rocher. Derrière lui, Io (taureau) et une colonne. A dr. Zeus assis sur un trône ailé, tenant un sceptre de la main g., caresse de la dr. la tête d'Io.

12. (= Hermes 847 avec bibl.) Péliké fr. Anc. New York, coll. Bareiss 350. - Vers 480-470 av. J.-C. - Hermès (pétase, chlamyde, chaussures ailées) attaque en le saisissant aux cheveux Argos agenouillé, le corps parsemé d'yeux. A dr. Zeus assis, l'aigle à ses pieds. Derrière Hermès et Argos, Io (génisse). Il manque le haut du corps d'Hermès et de Zeus et la plus grande partie d'Io.

13.* (= Hermes 846 avec bibl.) Stamnos. Vienne, Kunsthst. Mus. IV 3729. De Cerveteri. - ARV 288, 1: P. d'Argos; Add 209; Philippaki, B., The Attic Stamnos (1967) 99 pl. 37; Scheffold, SB III 135 fig. 174; Yalouris 9 n° 8 fig. 5. - Vers 460 av. J.-C. - Au centre Io (taureau); devant elle Argos barbu et nu, le corps parsemé d'yeux, est terrassé par Hermès (chiton, chlamyde). A dr. Zeus assis sur un siège s'apprête à caresser le taureau. La scène est encadrée par un olivier et un palmier; derrière ce dernier, un cervidé.

Glyptique

14.* Gemme. Londres, BM 1262. - Walters, BMGems 143 n° 1262 pl. 18; Cook, Zeus III 634 fig. 431. - Ép. romaine. - A dr., Hermès (pétase, caducée), tenant Io (vache) par les cornes, l'amène à Zeus, qui a un aigle à ses pieds.

3. Io et Héra

Cf. etiam 1-2 (?).

Œuvre disparue

15. Relief du trône d'Apollon à Amyclées (Laconie), œuvre de Bathyklès de Magnésie. – Paus. 3, 18, 13; Buschor, E./v. Massow, W., AM 52, 1927, 1 ss.; Yalouris 5. – 2^e moitié du VI^e s. av. J.-C. – Parmi d'autres scènes, Héra et Io sous la forme d'une génisse.

4. Io, Argos et Inachos

Œuvre imaginaire

16. Épisode du bouclier de Turnus. – Verg. Aen. 7, 789; Simon 267 n. 230. – Io (génisse) surveillée par Argos en présence du fleuve Inachos.

5. Io-génisse, seule

Monnaies

17. AR tridrachmes (début du IV^e s.) puis tétradrachmes, drachmes et hémidrachmes, et AE, Byzance, IV^e s. av. J.-C. – Svoronos, J. N., ArchEph 1889, 74-77 pl. 1, 1-2; 1890, 74-77 pl. 1, 1-2; Engelmann 57 n° 48; Babelon, Traité IV (1932) 979-984 n° 1537 (tétradrachme). 1538-1540 pl. 347, 10-16; 348, 1-8; Baldwin-Brett, BostonGrCoins 108 n° 798 pl. 44; Schönert-Geiss, E., Die Münzprägung von Byzanzion I (1970) n° 650-855. 856 (tridrachme). 871-922. 927-945 pl. 27-32. 35; 37-39; Yalouris 3 n° 5 fig. 4. – Rv. (tridrachmes) puis Av. (autres dénominations): génisse ou taureau passant à g., au-dessus d'un dauphin. Av. (tridrachmes): Héraklès enfant étreignant les serpents. Rv. (autres dénominations): carré creux, puis trident entre deux dauphins ou trident seul.

La frappe de ces séries à Byzance, qui fut à l'origine une colonie argienne avant de passer sous l'influence mégarienne, rappelle vraisemblablement le passage d'Io par le «Bosphore». L'interprétation d'E. Schönert, «Der Io-Mythos auf den Silbermünzen von Byzanz», Helicon 6, 1966, 174-182, qui fait de ce «taureau» un symbole de fertilité, n'est pas convaincante.

18. AE pseud autonome, Byzance, II^e s. ap. J.-C. – BMC Thrace etc. 97, 48-49, ill.; Svoronos, J. N., ArchEph 1889, 71-73. 80-82 pl. 1, 7-9; Schönert-Geiss, o.c. 17, n° 2012-2022 pl. 123-124. – Rv. Génisse de profil à dr., tête levée; lég. BYZANTI-ON. Av. Tête féminine (?) cornue à dr., les cheveux longs: Io?

Relief (terre cuite)

19. Lampe corinthienne. Paris, Cab. Méd. 1897 (coll. Fröhner VII 553). – III^e s. ap. J.-C. – Io (génisse) couchée; devant elle une plante stylisée, peut-être du silphion. Le croissant, derrière elle, pourrait être une allusion à la parenté d'Isis avec Io. Cf. aussi les lampes de Corinthe d'ép. romaine: Brommer, O., Corinth IV 2, n° 1241-1243 pl. 29, 108 fig. 51.

Œuvres disparues connues par les textes

20. Statue de bronze. Corinthe, près de la source Pirène. – Athen. 13, 605c. – Génisse de bronze.

21. Statue de bronze érigée sur la rive du Bosphore par la cité de Calcédoine. – Eust. ad Dion. Per. 140, GGM II 241. – Vache de bronze.

6. Argos sans Io

Céramique attique

22. (= Hermes 848 avec bibl.) Skyphos f.n. Paris, Louvre CA 792. De Thèbes. – Haspels, ABL 253 n° 6: proche du P. de Thésée. – Vers 520-500 av. J.-C. – A. g. Hermès (barbu, pétase, chiton court, chlamyde, endromides), frappe de son épée Argos barbu, assis sur un rocher, le corps nu et parsemé d'yeux (rehausse blanc). A dr. Athéna assiste à la scène. B. Le même sujet, mais Argos, dépourvu d'yeux multiples, a pris la fuite, poursuivi par Hermès. Sous chaque anse un chien.

23. (= Hermes 851 avec bibl.) Lécythe f.n. Paris, Cab. Méd. 302 (4790). – ABV 572, 1: P. de Pholos; de Ridder, BiblNatVases 200 n° 302; CVA 2, pl. 84, 8-9; 85, 4-5 (470-471). – Vers 480 av. J.-C. – Hermès (barbu, pétase, chaussures ailées, chiton court, chlamyde), brandissant l'épée de la main dr., attaque Argos (chiton court, lance, bouclier et peau de bête) dont le corps est couvert d'incisions figurant les yeux. Derrière la tête d'Argos, mal conservée, apparaissent deux longues cornes qui feraient partie de son casque (de Ridder). Dans le champ à g., le caducée d'Hermès.

24. Péliké f.r. Chicago, Univ. – ARV 200: imitation du P. de Syriskos; Johnson, AJA 42, 1938, 350 fig. 12 a-b; Hadjisteliou, Th., ArchCl 23, 1971, 262 pl. 73; Yalouris 10 n° 11. – Vers 470 av. J.-C. – A g. Hermès barbu terrassant Argos lui aussi barbu, au corps parsemé d'yeux.

25. (= Athena 530, = Herakles 1676 [A], = Hermes 849 – avec bibl.) Péliké f.r. Louvre G 229. De Vulci. – ARV 289, 3: P. des Sirènes; Add 210; Yalouris 9 n° 9 fig. 6. – Vers 470-460 av. J.-C. – Hermès (pétase sur les épaules, chiton court, chlamyde, chaussures ailées) va frapper de son épée Argos (corps colossal parsemé d'yeux; inscr.), en train de s'effondrer. A dr. Zeus, appuyé sur un bâton, lève le bras dr. pour l'encourager.

26. (= Hermes 840* avec bibl.) Cratère f.r. Oxford, Ashm. Mus. G 293 (527). De Capoue. – CVA 1, pl. 23, 3 (115); Yalouris 10 n° 12. – Vers 480-470 av. J.-C. – Hermès (barbu, pétase, chiton court, chlamyde) attaque avec son épée Argos barbu, au corps parsemé d'yeux, déjà tombé à genoux.

27. Fr. de cratère f.r. Bonn, Akad. Kunstmus. 1216, 26-27. 29-30. Du Pirée. – ARV 1181, 15-16: P. du dinos d'Athènes; CVA 1, pl. 29, 8-9. – 420-400 av. J.-C. – Sur les fr. on reconnaît Hermès imberbe (chlamyde, sandales) attaquant Argos lui aussi imberbe (peau d'animal, corps demi-nu parsemé d'yeux).

Document non-attique

28. (= Hermes 852 avec bibl.) Skyphos béotien (?) f.r. Athènes, Mus. Nat. 4295 (1407). – Engelmann 48-49. 55 n° 26 fig. 5-6; Lullies, R., AM 65, 1940-41, 15. 17 n° 1 pl. 13, 1-2; Yalouris 14 n° 16

fig. 10 a-b. – Vers 430 av. J.-C. – Au centre Hermès juvénile (pilos ailé) attaque de son épée Argos (chiton, peau de bête) qui a deux visages, l'un barbu, l'autre imberbe, et des yeux multiples; tombé sur le genou g., il essaie de se défendre avec sa massue. A g. un Satyre et un joueur de flûte.

Œuvres imaginaires

29. Carquois de Philoctète. – Q. Smyrn. 10, 190. – Le carquois était orné, parmi d'autres scènes, du meurtre d'Argos par Hermès.

30. Bouclier d'Hippomédon. – Eur. Phoen. 1115. – Il portait en épigraphe le Panoptès Argos figuré seul.

B. Hermès délivre Io par la ruse

31.* (= Hermes 837 avec bibl.) Amphore ionienne «Northampton», f.n. Munich, Antikenslg. 585. De Vulci. – Pfuhl, MuZ fig. 148; Buschor, GrV fig. 110; Schefold, SB II 28 fig. 19; Yalouris 4-5 n° 2 fig. 2. – 530 av. J.-C. – Hermès (barbu, chiton long, coiffé de la kyné), marchant sur la pointe des pieds, tient la longe d'Io, imposante génisse tournée à g. qui occupe tout le centre de la scène; entre eux un chien, derrière elle un palmier. A l'extrémité dr. Argos colossal à demi étendu, barbu, doté d'un œil supplémentaire sur la poitrine, tient l'autre bout de la corde.

C. Io piquée par le taon

32.* Pâte de verre du XVIII^e s. d'après un béril de la coll. du Comte de Devonshire. Würzburg, Wagner-Mus. Kr 37. – Simon 275 fig. 58; Zwierlein-Diehl, E., Kat. der Glaspasten von antiken und nachantiken Gemmen, Slg. Krutzsch (1986) n° 37. – Original daté vers 400 av. J.-C. – Io (taureau); sur son flanc un insecte de grande taille, probablement un taon.

II. Délivrance d'Io sous forme hybride

33.* (= Hermes 839 avec bibl.) Cenochoé lucanienne f.r. Boston MFA 1901.562. – LCS 16, 9: P. de Pistici; Engelmann 38-41. 54 n° 15 fig. 1; Schauenburg 90 n° 3; Trendall/Webster, Illustrations 32 II 6, fig.; Yalouris 10-12 n° 13 fig. 7. – Vers 440-430 av. J.-C. – A g. Hermès imberbe (pétase, chlamyde, caducée) attaque avec une épée Argos barbu (pilos, bâton, chiton court, peau de bête); celui-ci, qui n'a rien de monstrueux, court vers la dr. Derrière lui Io, tournée vers la dr., a le corps d'une génisse et la tête d'une femme, voilée, avec des cornes.

III. Délivrance d'Io anthropomorphe, sous l'aspect d'une femme cornue

1. Io, Argos et Hermès

Vases attiques

34. (= Hermes 844 avec bibl.) Cratère attique f.r.

Gênes, Mus. Civ. 1145. De Ruvo. – ARV 1054, 48: Gr. de Polygnotos; Yalouris 14 n° 15 fig. 9. – Vers 440 av. J.-C. – Au centre Argos (pétase, peau de panthère) avec deux visages, l'un barbu, l'autre imberbe, le corps parsemé d'yeux, brandit de la main dr. une massue. A g. Hermès barbu l'attaque: en chiton court, chlamyde et bottes, coiffé de la kyné, le couvre-chef d'Hadès, tenant de la main dr. une épée, il saisit de l'autre le bras d'Argos. A dr. Io (péplos) s'enfuit vers la dr.

35.* Cenochoé attique f.r. Berlin-DDR, Staatl. Mus. 2651. – Höfer 271, ill.; Jacobsthal, OrnGrV 218 pl. 83; Schefold, SB III 136 fig. 177; Simon 279-280 fig. 63; Yalouris 14-16 n° 17 fig. 11. – Vers 415 av. J.-C. – A g. Hermès imberbe, debout vers la g. (himation, pétase, caducée), tourne la tête vers Argos imberbe (nu, himation autour du bras), assis sur un rocher, la massue dans la main g. A dr. Io portant deux petites cornes, couronnée de lierre. Au-dessus d'Argos, protomé de vache.

Peintures murales romaines

36.* Naples, Mus. Naz. 9548. De Pompéi VIII 7, 28, temple d'Isis. – Helbig, Wandgemälde 39 n° 135; Engelmann 54 n° 18; Rizzo, PER 45-46 pl. 80a; HBr 72-73 pl. 57; Lippold, Gemäldekopien 94; Schefold (1952) 60-61; WP 233; Richardson 132; Wesenberg 344-345. 348-349 fig. 5 pl. 96, 2. – 4^e style; P. d'Io (Richardson). – A g. Io (chiton, himation, ténia), munie de cornes, est assise sur une pierre sur laquelle elle s'appuie de la main g., posant l'autre sur sa poitrine. Près d'elle une vache. A dr. est assis Argos nu, la chlamyde couvrant les cuisses, appuyé sur un bâton. Entre eux Hermès debout, nu (chaussures ailées, chlamyde tombant de son bras, caducée), offre à Argos une syrinx (Helbig).

37.* Naples, Mus. Naz. 9557. De Pompéi I 4, 5, «Casa del Citarista». – Engelmann 54 n° 20; Curtius, Wandgemälde 236 fig. 159; Rizzo, PER 46 pl. 81; HBr 73-74; Elia 2, 22-24 fig. 14; Schefold (1952) 65 pl. 43; WP 16; Gabriel, M. M., Masters of Campanian Painting (1952) 54-59 pl. 34; Richardson 135 n. 85; Wesenberg 344. 346 fig. 4. – Vers 70 ap. J.-C., P. du Baroque (Gabriel). – Au centre, sur un rocher élevé, est assise Io (chiton laissant la poitrine nue, himation, voile). A dr. Hermès debout, nu, s'appuyant sur un bâton, offre une syrinx à Argos qui est assis à g. sur un rocher, un bâton près de ses genoux. Entre Hermès et Argos, un chien.

38. Œuvre perdue. D'Herculanum, «Casa d'Io ed Argo». – Engelmann 54 n° 19; Rizzo, PER 46 pl. 80b; Lippold, Gemäldekopien 95; Wesenberg 344. 346 fig. 3. – 2^e-3^e style (?). – Dans un paysage rocheux, sur un niveau élevé, est assise Io (chiton, himation, voile). Devant elle, Argos (chiton, himation, pedum renversé), assis sur un rocher, reçoit une syrinx d'Hermès (sandales ailées, chlamyde sur son caducée).

2. Io et Hermès

Vases à f.r.

39.* (= Hermes 880 avec bibl.) Skyphos attique. Palerme, Fond. Mormino 178 (Banco di Sicilia 20). –

ARV² 1689: P. proche du P. de Pénélope. - 450-430 av. J.-C. - Sur une face Hermès imberbe (chlamyde, pétase, kérykeion) court vers la dr., un bras tendu; sur l'autre Io, figurée comme une femme en péplos munie d'oreilles et de cornes de vache, fuit vers la dr. en tendant les bras.

40. Skyphos lucanien. Métaponte, Mus. 20.150. De Pisticii. - LCS Suppl. 1, 6, 84b pl. 1, 2: proche du P. de Pisticii; Yalouris 16 n° 20. - Fin du V^e s. av. J.-C. - Io (diadème) figurée comme une femme aux oreilles et aux cornes de vache; assise, elle se regarde dans un miroir; derrière elle, une stèle. Sur l'autre face, Hermès juvénile tient le caducée.

Monnaies

41.* AE, Tralles (Lydie), Antonin (138-161). - BMC Lydia CXLVI. 348, 142 pl. 36, 8. - Rv. Ag. dieu nu, de face, un caducée (?) dans la main dr., conduisant de la g. Io debout, voilée, en robe longue. Lég. EIOYΣ ΓΑΜΟΙΙ...

42. AE, Tralles, Antonin. - BMC Lydia CXLVI. 348, 141. - Rv. Dans un char tiré par deux bœufs à bosse que conduit un personnage nu (Hermès ?), une jeune femme voilée qui pourrait être Io, par comparaison avec la monnaie précédente (Hill, G. F., BMC CXLVI).

3. Io et Éros

43.* Rhyton f.r. en forme de tête de taureau. Ruvo, Mus. Jatta 1116. De Ruvo. - ARV² 1551, 12: Gr. de la classe W; Para 505; Hoffmann, H., Attic Red-figured Rhyta (1962) 42 n° 113; Sichtermann, SlgJatta 29 n° 20 pl. 40, 1; 41, 1. - Fin du V^e s. av. J.-C. - Sur le rebord, Éros vole vers Io, jeune femme portant des cornes sur le front, assise vers la g. (chiton, himation) et se regardant dans un miroir.

4. Io et Argos seuls

Céramique italienne (f. r.)

44. Cratère. Local. inconnue, anc. Catane, Mus. Biscari. - Engelmann 52 n° 8; Libertini, G., Il Museo Biscari (1930) 174; Schauenburg 90 n° 6; Yalouris 16 n° 21. - Fin du IV^e s. av. J.-C. (?) - A g. Argos juvénile, nu et imberbe (endromides, peau de bête), tient dans la main dr. un coquillage. A dr. est assise Io, portant de petites cornes; elle fait le guet, la main dr. en visière au-dessus des yeux. A dr., dans le champ, est suspendu un sac à osselets.

Peintures murales de Pompéi

45. Pompéi IX 9 d, triclínium, in situ. - Mau, A., RM 5, 1890, 234-235, fig.; Reinach, RépPeint 16, 2; Curtius, WP 258 fig. 156; Schefold, WP 284; Pittura e Pavimenti di Pompei III 548. - 3^e style. - Io (chiton, himation) est assise sur un rocher, la main dr. sur la poitrine. Devant elle Argos nu, une lance dans la main g., le pied dr. sur le rocher.

46. Pompéi VI 14, 42, «Casa dell'Imperatrice di Russia». - Pittura e Pavimenti di Pompei II 297-298;

Wesenberg 344. 347 n. 16 fig. 1. - 3^e style. - Semblable à 5.

47.* Pompéi VII 9, 7, «Macellum», in situ. - Rizzo, PER 27-28 pl. 42; Rizzo (1936) 29 fig. 20; Curtius, WP 260 fig. 157. 103; Lippold, Gemäldekopien 94 fig. 75; Schefold (1952) 176. 198 pl. 36; Becatti, G., EAA V (1963) 379-380 fig. 615 s. v. «Nikias»; Richardson 122 pl. 27, 1; 30, 4; Wesenberg 344. 347-348 pl. 96, 3. - 4^e style, P. d'Io (Richardson), vers 65 ap. J.-C. - Io munie de cornes (chiton, himation, bracelets), l'épaule g. et une partie de la poitrine nues, est assise sur un rocher, la main dr. sur la poitrine. Devant elle, Argos nu, un vêtement autour du bras g. et sur la cuisse dr., l'épée à la main, un pied posé sur un rocher, regarde Io.

48.* Naples, Mus. Naz. 9556. De Pompéi VI 9, 2, «Casa di Meleagro», tablinum. - Helbig, Wandgemälde 38 n° 132; Elia 1, 74 n° 144; Schefold, WP 111; Richardson 140-142 pl. 4, 2; Paribeni 170 fig. 207; Wesenberg 344 fig. 2. - 4^e style, P. de Méléagre (Richardson). - Io munie de cornes (chiton, himation), assise sur un rocher dans la même attitude que sur 45-47; à dr. Argos nu (vêtement posé sur l'épaule g. et venant sur la cuisse dr.), le pied dr. sur un rocher, tient une lance.

49. Anc. Pompéi VI 9, 6-7, «Casa dei Dioscuri». Détruite. - Helbig n° 133; Schefold, WP 119; Richardson 43 n. 249. - Ep. de Néron (Schefold). - Semblable à 48, mais Argos porte un long bâton de berger.

50. Anc. Pompéi VII 14, 5, «Casa del Banchiere». Détruite. - Helbig n° 134; Schefold, WP 204. - Semblable à 48, mais Io a le haut du corps nu et Argos porte un simple bâton.

51. Anc. Pompéi IX 2, 18, cubiculum. Détruite. - Mau, A., Gesch. d. dekorativen Wandmalerei in Pompeji (1882) 442; Schefold, WP 243. - 3^e style (Mau). - Semblable à 48.

Mosaïques romaines

52. Rome, Nymphaeum du Quirinal, in situ. - Coarelli, F., Roma sepolta (1984) 151, ill.; Müller, C. W., «Io und Argos auf einem frühkaiserzeitlichen Wandmosaik», RhM 129, 1986, 142-156. - De Néron à Vespasien. - Io, en femme munie de cornes (chiton autour des jambes, torse nu), est assise sur un rocher (?) cylindrique; elle s'y appuie de la main g., la dr. posée sur la cuisse. Devant elle Argos nu, debout, le manteau autour du bras g., une lance dans la main g.

53. Torre de Palma (Portugal), villa romaine, in situ. - De Almeida, F., dans La mosaïque gréco-romaine I (1975) 222 pl. 80, 2. - Début IV^e s. ap. J.-C. - A g. Io assise, cornes sur le front; devant elle, Argos nu se tourne vers elle.

Tableau disparu

54. Peinture de Nicias. - Plin. nat. 35, 132; Pfuhl, MuZ II 753 § 823; III fig. 708; Curtius WP 255; Neutsch, B., Der Maler Nikias von Athen (1940); Rumpf, A., JHS 67, 1947, 21; Becatti, o.c. 47, 379-380; Wesenberg 344-350. - IV^e s. av. J.-C. - On reconnaît des copies de cette œuvre dans quelques peintures murales de Pompéi (45-51).

5. Io, Argos et d'autres personnages

Vases attiques à f. r.

55. Cratère fr. Leningrad, Ermitage FKH 122. D'Elkegen, près de Kertch. - ARV² 628, 2 (a): P. de Chicago; Ducati, P., «Frammenti di vaso attico con dipinto rappresentante la morte di Argo», RM 21, 1906, 98 137 pl. 3-4. - Vers 460 av. J.-C. - Hermès (?) barbu tire son épée du fourreau, en présence d'autres divinités: Héra (sceptre, diadème), Zeus (sceptre), Poséidon (trident). Ducati, Beazley: mort d'Argos.

56.* (= Aphrodite 1373, = Hermes 850 - avec bibl.) Cratère en calice. Ruvo, Mus. Jatta 1498. De Ruvo. - ARV² 1409, 9: P. de Méléagre; Para 490; Add² 374; Engelmann 54 n° 22; Yalouris 17 n° 22 fig. 14; Simon 278 fig. 61. - Début du IV^e s. av. J.-C. - Au centre Hermès juvénile (chiton, himation), armé d'une épée et d'une pierre, s'élance vers Argos qui est assis plus haut, (peau de bête, corps parsemé d'yeux), et tient un lagobole. Entre eux est assise Io (diadème, cornes et oreilles de génisse), tenant un plant de silphion. Au registre supérieur, assemblée des dieux entre deux Érotas: Hébé (?), Zeus, Héra, Iris ou Déméter, Aphrodite. En bas, encadrant Hermès, deux Satyres.

Vases italiotes (f. r.)

57. (= Aphrodite 1372*, = Hera 489) Hydrie apulienne. Berlin-DDR, Staatl. Mus. F 3164. D'Anzi (Basilicate). - RVAp I 170, 34: associé au P. de la péliké de Moscou; Neugebauer, Führer Berlin II pl. 75; Cook, Zeus III 638 fig. 436; Moret, Ilioupersis 165-172 pl. 91, 2; Yalouris 18 n° 23 fig. 15; Kunze, M./Kästner, V., Staatl. Mus. zu Berlin (1985) 81 fig. 63. - Vers 360 av. J.-C. - Io, jeune femme munie de cornes (chiton, himation laissant une grande partie de la poitrine nue), est assise sur un autel qui supporte une statue d'Artémis (torche, arc); elle tient d'une main un coffret, de l'autre un rameau (de silphion?). Devant elle, Zeus debout (sceptre) et Aphrodite (chiton, himation) tenant un oiseau. Derrière Io, Argos debout, appuyé sur sa massue, tient un diptyque qui contiendrait l'annonce de son sort (Engelmann, Eitrem). En haut à g., Héra (sceptre); au registre supérieur, Eros avec un cerceau et Pan avec sa syrinx et une branche.

58. Hydrie apulienne. Local. inconnue, anc. USA, Marché des ant. - RVAp Suppl. 1, 76. 78, 63d: P. de Darius. - Vers 340-330 av. J.-C. - A g. Pan, une femme assise et deux jeunes gens; Aphrodite tenant une iyinx; Zeus assis près d'Io (femme munie de cornes); un Éros vole vers elle, tenant une couronne. A dr. Hermès attaque Argos, étendu sur une peau d'animal; près de lui une figure ailée.

59.* Amphore lucanienne f. r. de type panathénaique. Local. inconnue, anc. coll. Coghill. D'Anzi. - LCS 122, 621: P. des Choéphores; Moret, Ilioupersis 165 n° 111 pl. 91, 3; Yalouris 18 n° 24 fig. 16. - Vers 340 av. J.-C. - Au centre Io, en femme munie de cornes, les jambes drapées dans un himation, le torse nu, est assise sur un autel. Au-dessus, Eros verse le contenu d'un alabastré. Devant elle Zeus tenant son sceptre, puis un Satyre avec une syrinx. A g. une statue d'Artémis ou d'Héra sur une colonne ionique, et Argos imberbe (himation, endromides) tourné vers Io. Derrière lui, un arbre.

60.* Énochoé campanienne. Vienne, Kunsthist. Mus. IV 1035. D'Apulie. - LCS 258, 209 pl. 102, 6-7: P. d'Io; v. Sacken, E. F./Kenner, E., Die Sammlungen des K. K. Münz- und Antiken-Cabinet (1866) 229-230 n° 171; Engelmann 54 n° 23; Furtwängler, A., Kleine Schriften (1912) 18. - Vers 330 av. J.-C. - Au registre supérieur, flanquée de deux Érotas, Aphrodite au miroir assise sur un rocher et, lui tournant le dos, Argos (?) nu, assis sur une peau de panthère, tenant une corne à boire. Devant lui Hermès (chlamyde, sandales, pétase ailé, kérykeion), entre deux petits Érotas; puis une figure féminine (chiton, ruban), un éphèbe avec un ruban et un Satyre assis sur une peau de panthère, tenant une syrinx, tourné vers le centre. Au registre inférieur, une femme assise porte une pyxis; derrière elle une autre, debout; devant elle un homme (pétase, chaussures, chlamyde) et un petit Eros tenant un ruban. Plus à dr. Io (chiton, rameau) en femme cornue, assise sur un rocher, tournée vers la g.; derrière elle une femme assise, un jeune homme assis sur un rocher, un Satyre dansant avec un tambourin, une autre femme en chiton assise sur un rocher, et Hermès assis (pétase, chaussures, chlamyde et kérykeion), se retournant vers une femme assise.

Peinture murale romaine

61. Rome, Palatin, Maison de Livie, in situ. - Curtius, WP 263, fig.; Rizzo, PER 28 pl. 17, 43; Rizzo 25-30 fig. 11. 18-19 pl. 1-3; Lippold, Gemäldekopien 94; Schefold (1952) 60-62 pl. 9; SB III 137 fig. 178; Wesenberg 344. 347-348 pl. 96, 1. - 2^e style, vers 30 av. J.-C. - Au centre Io (inscr.), vêtue d'un chiton qui laisse nues l'épaule et une partie de la poitrine, est assise sur un rocher. Derrière elle arrive Hermès (inscr.; chlamyde, pétase, caducée). A dr. Argos nu et juvénile (peau de panthère [?] autour de la main g. et ramenée sur la cuisse dr., épée et lance). Près d'Io, une colonne supporte une statue féminine tenant un sceptre (Héra?); à l'arrière-plan, un grand arbre.

IV. Rencontre amoureuse de Zeus et d'Io

62.* (= Hera 331*, = Hermes 853 - avec bibl.) Péliké attique f. r. Naples, Mus. Naz. Spinelli 2041. De Suessula. - ARV² 1122, 1: P. d'Io; Add² 332; Engelmann 45-48 fig. 3-4; Schefold, SB III 135 fig. 176; Yalouris 12. 14 n° 14 fig. 8. - Vers 440 av. J.-C. - Zeus nu, courant vers la dr. (chlamyde sur les épaules, sceptre dans la main dr.), poursuit Io, qui a l'aspect d'une femme aux cornes et aux oreilles de vache: il lui touche l'épaule, et elle tente de s'échapper. Sur l'autre face, Héra et Hermès.

V. Divinisation d'Io. Io dans un décor végétal

63.* Amphore campanienne f. r. Chicago, Univ. - Beazley, J., JHS 63, 1943, 67 n° 6: P. du Owl Pillar Group. - 3^e quart du V^e s. av. J.-C. - Io figurée comme une femme munie de cornes surgissant du tronc d'un palmier; devant elle un personnage drapé.

64.* Hydrie apulienne f.r. Naples, Mus. Naz. H 2922. Du Basilicate. - Höfer 277-278, ill.; FR III 206. 368; Hafner, MusHelv 8, 1951, 142 fig. 7; Schauenburg 90 n° 4; 91; Yalouris 16 n° 19 fig. 12; Simon 275 n. 259; 279 n. 277 fig. 59. - Vers 350 av. J.-C. - Io en femme munie de cornes, assise sur un ornement végétal d'où s'échappent des feuilles d'acanthé, des volutes et des palmettes; de part et d'autre, une panthère.

VI. Io reçue en Égypte par Isis

Peintures murales

65.* (= Aigyptos 12, = Isis 265 - avec bibl.) Naples, Mus. Naz. 9558. De Pompéi VIII 7, 28, temple d'Isis. - Helbig, Wandgemälde n° 138; Curtius, WP 215-218 fig. 127-128; HBr 71-72 pl. 56; Pfuhl, MuZ 666; Elia, O., Pittura del tempio di Iside (1941) 27-30 pl. B; Matz, F., AA 1944-45, 106; Lippold, Gemäldekopien 153-156 fig. 12 pl. 23; Schefold (1952) 60-61. 65 pl. 43; WP 233; Richardson 131-132 pl. 29. 31, 1. 5; Paribeni 171 fig. 208. - 4^e style, vers 60-65 ap. J.-C. (Schefold), P. d'Io (Richardson). - Près d'une statue de → Sphinx, Io munie de cornes (himation), portée par le Nil (→ Neilos) sur son épaule g., tend la main à Isis (chiton, himation, lotus dans les cheveux, serpent dans la main g., un crocodile à ses pieds). A sa g. Harpocrate enfant (→ Harpocrates), près de lui un vase et un serpent. Au second plan deux jeunes filles tiennent un sistre; celle de g. a un caducée, celle de dr. une lance.

66.* (= Aigyptos 13, = Isis 266 - avec bibl.) Naples, Mus. Naz. 9555. De Pompéi VI 9, 1, «Casa del Duca d'Aumale». - Helbig 139; Engelmann 55 n° 29; HBr 74 pl. 58, 2; Reinach, RépPeint 16, 6; Curtius, WP 218-220 fig. 129; Elia 1, 102; Richardson 145 n. 111; Schefold, WP 110. - Ép. de Vespasien (Schefold). - Semblable à 65.

Œuvre imaginaire (toreutique)

67. Relief de métal ornant la corbeille d'Europe. - Moschos 2, 48-54; Simon 277-278. - Arrivée d'Io en Égypte après ses errances: au bord du Nil Zeus, en l'effleurant, la transforme à nouveau en femme. Autre épisode illustré sur le même objet: cf. 10.

VII. Io à Gaza

68.* AE, Gaza, d'Hadrien, 131/32 ap. J.-C., à Élagabal, 219/220. - Engelmann 57 n° 50; BMC Palestine LXXV. 147-165 n° 23-27. 106-109. 120-124. 126-129. 136 pl. 15, 12-13; 16, 10. 14-16; 17, 2; SNG ANS 6, 915-920. 941-942. 944-945. 950-951. - Rv. Ag. Io debout (chiton long, manteau) serre la main de la → Tyche de → Gaza. Lég. ΕΙΣ ΓΑΖΑ, lettre Η et dates.

Variante sous Elagabal, 219/20. - BMC 166, 140. - Lég. ΙΩ, génisse aux pieds de Tyché: ce pourrait être une seconde représentation zoomorphe de l'héroïne, de même que la génisse régulièrement figurée aux pieds de Tyché sur d'autres monnaies de Gaza, d'Hadrien à Gordien III (p. ex. SNG ANS 925).

VIII. Io anthropomorphe seule

1. La figure en pied

Ronde-bosse (pierre), ép. hellénistique

69. Tête de statue fr., marbre. Genève, Mus. 15203. D'Alexandrie. - Deonna, W., Genava 16, 1938, 72; Schefold, Meisterwerke 95-97. 279 fig. 367; Mustilli 344; Freyer-Schauenburg, B., «Io in Alexandria», RM 90, 1983, 38-39 pl. 25. - Début du I^{er} s. av. J.-C. (Freyer-Schauenburg). - Tête d'Io-Isis, munie de cornes, coiffée d'un diadème.

70.* Tête de statue fr. Naples, Mus. Naz. 113529. - Guida Ruesch II 66 n° 223; Mustilli 344. - I^{er} s. av. J.-C. - Tête de femme cornue.

71.* Tête de statue colossale fr., marbre. Hildesheim, Pel.-Mus. 1776. D'Alexandrie. - Freyer-Schauenburg, o. c. 69, 36-49 pl. 23-24 avec bibl. - Milieu du I^{er} s. av. J.-C. - Tête de femme cornue, portant un diadème.

Ronde-bosse (pierre), ép. romaine

72.* Tête de statue fr. Leningrad, Ermitage A 327. - Kobylina, M., AA 43, 1928, 69-72 fig. 1-2; Waldhauer, Skulpt III 72-74 n° 332 fig. 79; Mustilli 344; Freyer-Schauenburg, o. c. 69, 40 pl. 26, 2. - Fin du I^{er} ou début du II^e s. ap. J.-C. (Freyer-Schauenburg). - Tête d'Io munie de petites cornes.

73. Buste d'une statue fr. en marbre, Alexandrie, Mus. Gréco-Rom. 17838. - Breccia, E., Alexandria ad Aegyptum (1922) 206 n° 12 fig. 107; Comstock/Vermeule, SculptBoston 67 n° 106; Freyer-Schauenburg, o. c. 69, 40-42 pl. 27. - Fin du II^e s. ap. J.-C. - Buste d'Io munie de cornes, voilée et portant un diadème.

74.* Tête de statue fr. York, Castle Howard. - Michaelis, AncM 328 n° 25; Engelmann 55 n° 32; Mustilli 344; Freyer-Schauenburg, o. c. 69, 30-40 pl. 26, 1. - Fin du II^e s. ap. J.-C. - Tête munie de cornes et voilée.

75. Tête de statue fr. de marbre noir. Copenhague, Mus. Thorv. - EA 1477; Mustilli 344. - Ép. romaine. - Tête munie de cornes couronnées de fleurs.

Figurines de terre cuite

76. Statuette sur base. De Halai (Locride). - Goldman, H./Jones, F., Hesperia 11, 1942, 395 n° II a 16 pl. 9 (milieu). - 420-390 av. J.-C. - Io (oreilles de vache, himation, polos) s'enfuit, le bras g. levé et le dr. abaissé; son vêtement s'écarte de son corps.

77.* Statuette fr. Londres, BM 57.12-20.632. D'Halicarnasse. - Walters, BMTerracottas C 493; Higgins, BMTerracottas 123 n° 420-421 pl. 60; Brommer, Denkmälerlisten III 179 n° 2. - Fin du V^e s. av. J.-C. - Analogie à la précédente; traces d'oreilles et de cornes.

78. Statuette sur base. Athènes, Mus. Nat. De Tanagra. - Winter, Typen I 69, 5; Brommer, Denkmälerlisten III 179 n° 1. - 2^e moitié du IV^e s. av. J.-C. - Analogie aux précédentes. Pour d'autres exemplaires semblables cf. Brommer n° 5-8.

79.* Statuette fr. Karlsruhe, Bad. Landesmus. B 620. De Centorbi (Centuripe). - Kekulé, R., Die Terrakotten von Sicilien (1884) 77-78 fig. 126 pl. 49, 1; Höfer 279, fig.; Engelmann 42. 54 n° 16; Yalouris 12. - 2^e moitié du IV^e s. - Buste d'Io (chiton, himation); un ruban passe entre ses cornes.

80. Statuette fr. De Tyndaris (Sicile). - Brøndsted, Voyage en Grèce II 133, 291; Engelmann 56 n° 42 fig. 10. - Tête d'Io munie de cornes et d'oreilles de génisse.

81.* Fr. de statuette. Paris, Louvre MNB 1074. - De Tarse (Cilicie). - Besques III 329 D 2820 pl. 406g. - 1^{re} moitié du II^e s. av. J.-C. - Tête d'Io munie de cornes.

82.* Statuette sur base. Boston, MFA 1901, 7904. De Mégare (?). - Hellénistique (?). - Semblable à 81.

Œuvres disparues ou imaginaires

83. Statue, œuvre du sculpteur Deinoménès, érigée sur l'Acropole d'Athènes. - Paus. I, 25, 1. - 2^e moitié du V^e s. av. J.-C. - Statue d'Io en femme. G. Despinis en a reconnu une copie dans la «Suppliante Barberini», Paris, Louvre MA 3433 (pour d'autres interprétations de cette sculpture, → Danae 40). Simon 279-280 n. 276 fig. 62. Cf. → Kallisto 2.

84. Statue à Ninive. - Philostr. VA I, 19. - Io figurée comme une femme portant de petites cornes qui semblent de venir de pousser.

2. Têtes, bustes et masques

Céramique italote (f. r. et vases plastiques)

85. Amphore apulienne f. r. Bari, Mus. Arch. 872. De Canosa. - RVAp II 497 fig. 44; P. de Darius; Paribeni, E., Immagini di vasi apuli (1964) n° 16 pl. 18; Trendall/Webster, Illustrations 98 III 3, 39; Schauenburg, K., RM 88, 1981, 110 pl. 23. - Vers 330 av. J.-C. - Sur laèvre, tête d'Io munie de cornes.

86.* Canthare plastique apulien f. r. Los Angeles, County Mus. of Art 50.8.25 (A 5933.50-31). - CVA I pl. 43 (883): associé au P. de l'Iliouperis; Clement, P. A., Hesperia 24, 1955, 23; Schauenburg 90. - 2^e quart du IV^e s. av. J.-C. - Tête d'Io avec des cornes. Sur le col du vase, Eros assis tenant une phiale, entre une oie et un faon.

87.* Thyrastron plastique apulien. Paris, Petit Palais DUT 0403 (394). - CVA 44, 8. 10 (684); Schauenburg 90. - Le corps du vase a la forme d'une tête féminine munie de cornes, représentant Io. Schauenburg mentionne à Bari un autre vase plastique figurant Io.

Reliefs, pierre

88. Acrotère de pierre. Leningrad, Ermitage M 41-195. - Gosudarstvennyy Ermitag (1956) fig. sans n°. - Ép. hellénistique (?). - Tête d'Io munie de cornes.

89.* Relief fr. Boston, MFA 1963.2683. De Patras. - Comstock/Vermeule, SculptBoston 67 n° 106; Freyer-Schauenburg, o. c. 69, 47 pl. 28, 1. - Ép. hellénistique récente (Vermeule); ép. d'Hadrien (Freyer-Schauenburg). - Tête d'Io munie de cornes, portant un diadème et un voile.

90. Stèle hermaïque à double face. Madrid, Prado 482. - Barron, E., Mus. Nac., Cat. de la escultura (1908) 82-83 n° 91 pl. 46, 2; Ricard, R., Marbres antiques des musées du Prado (1923) 75 n° 72 pl. 49; EA 1616-1618; Blanco, A., Museo del Prado, Cat. de la escultura (1957) 70 n° 91 E; Mustilli 344-345. - Art gréco-rom. (Barron), ép. d'Hadrien (Mustilli). - Deux têtes féminines opposées, munies de cornes: Io (la plus jeune) et Isis.

Antéfixes de terre cuite

91.* a) Bari, Mus. Arch. De Tarente. - Sciarra, B., Brindisi, Mus. Arch. Provinciale (1976) 40 n° 263 fig. 39. - V^e s. av. J.-C. - Tête d'Io portant des cornes et des oreilles de vache, avec des pendants d'oreilles en forme de pyramide renversée suspendue à un disque. Entre les cornes, un ruban (stéphané); au cou, un collier. b) Bâle, coll. Schwitter. De Tarente. - Herdejürgen 1, 104 n° 92 pl. 21. - 1^{re} moitié du IV^e s. av. J.-C. - Tête d'Io, identique. c) Bâle, Antikenmus. Lu 170. - Herdejürgen 1, 94-95 n° C 14, fig.; eadem, dans Berger, SlgLudwig II 126-127 n° 170 fig. - 1^{re} moitié du IV^e s. av. J.-C. - Autres exemplaires au mus. de Brindisi. Herdejürgen et Schauenburg, K., RM 80, 1973, 196-197, s'opposent à l'identification comme Io. d) Berlin, Staatl. Mus. 7816, 7838. De Tarente. - Engelmann 55 n° 34 fig. 8; Willeumier, P., Tarente (1939) 428 n. 4. - Vers 400 av. J.-C. - D'autres exemplaires identiques à Rome, Villa Giulia; Siennese, Mus.; Munich, Antikenslg.; Stuttgart, Landesmus. etc. e) Anc. coll. A. B. Cook. De Tarente. - Furtwängler, A., JdI 3, 1888, 223 n° 1; Cook, Zeus III 636 fig. 433; Brommer, Denkmälerlisten III 180 n° 16. - Vers 400 av. J.-C. - Selon Furtwängler, il ne s'agit pas d'Io mais d'une tête d'Artémis Tauropole. Brommer, 180 n° 18, mentionne un autre exemplaire (Sotheby, 24. 4. 1967, n° 145). f) Londres, BM 1329*, 1330. De Tarente. - Walters, BMTerracottas 415 D 665; 419 D 692; Higgins, BMTerracottas 361-362 n° 1329-1330 fig. 183; Cook, Zeus III 635. - Début du IV^e s. av. J.-C. g) Budapest, Mus. Beaux-Arts T 91. De Tarente. - Oroszlán, Z., Cat. des terres cuites G 16; idem, ArchErt 48, 1935, 52 n° 6 fig. 51. - Début du IV^e s. av. J.-C. - Autre exemplaire dans le même mus., inv. 50371. h) Copenhague, Glypt. IN 1010 (T 112). - Poulsen, V., Cat. des terres cuites grecques et romaines (1949) 24 n° 35 pl. 18. - Début du IV^e s. av. J.-C. - Autre exemplaire: Poulsen n° 36. i) Tarente, Mus. Naz. De Tarente. - Laviosa 239-240 n° 29 pl. 73, 6. - Début du IV^e s. av. J.-C. - Laviosa mentionne un autre document identique: Paris, Cab. Méd. 757. j) New York, MMA 10.210.52. - Robinson, D. M., AJA 27, 1923, 19. 21 fig. 25; Richter, The Metr. Mus. of Art: Handbook of Greek Collection (1953) 114 pl. 93g. - Début du IV^e s. av. J.-C. k) Bâle, Antikenmus. BS 1928.48. De Tarente. - Herdejürgen 1, 58 n° 47 pl. 16. - 1^{re} moitié du IV^e s. av. J.-C. - Herdejürgen (104 n. 17) signale d'autres objets identiques: Bari; Bénévent; Rome, Pal. Cons., Sala del Camino. I) Amsterdam, Allard Pierson Mus., anc. coll. Scheurleer. - Willeumier, o. c. 91d, 428 n. 4 pl. 39, 4; Lunsingh Scheurleer, C. W., AA 1932, 325 n. 7. - Début du IV^e s. av. J.-C. - Deux autres exemplaires identiques dans la même coll.: n^{os} 1135, 1839. m) Métaponte. De S. Biagio della Vennella, région de Métaponte. - Adamesteanu, D., RA 1967/1, 24 fig. 29. - Fin du IV^e s. av. J.-C. n) Trieste, Mus. Civ. T 37-3822. De Tarente. - Hadaczek, K., Der Ohrschmuck der Griechen und Etrusker (1903) 30 fig. 50; Willeumier, o. c. 91d, 428 n. 4. - Fin du IV^e s. av. J.-C. o) * Oxford, Ashm. Mus. 1886, 678. De Tarente (?). - Evans, A. J., JHS 7, 1886, 33 n^o 1; Willeumier, o. c. 91d, 429 n. 4.

92. * a) Bâle, Antikenmus. Lu 175. De Tarente. - Herdejürgen dans Berger, Slg Ludwig II 132 n^o 175, fig. - 1^{er} quart du IV^e s. av. J.-C. - Tête d'Io du même type que 91a, mais sans boucles d'oreilles. b) * Tarente, Mus. Naz. I.G. 17614 (60). De Tarente. - Laviosa 240 n^o 30 pl. 74, 1; Belli, C., Il Tesoro di Taras (1970) 106. - Milieu du IV^e s. av. J.-C. - Même type.

93. * Antefixe fr. Oxford, Ashm. Mus. 1947, 323. Don de Mrs Anderson Jr. - IV^e s. av. J.-C. - Tête d'Io munie de cornes et d'oreilles de vache avec des pendants; entre les cornes, un ruban (stéphané).

94. Local. inconnue, anc. coll. J. Gréau. - Froehner, W., Coll. J. Gréau, Cat. des terres cuites grecques (vente, 1891) 52 n^o 228. - «Antefixe arrondi: grand masque d'Io, le front ceint d'une bandelette, les oreilles chargées de pendants (triglema), des cornes de génisse aux tempes et une rivière de perles au cou.»

Masques en relief, terre cuite

95. Mascaron ornant la volute des anses d'un cratère apulien f. r. Milan, coll. H. A. 270. - RVAp I 421, 42; Gr. de l'Orphée de Milan. - Vers 345 av. J.-C. - Masque d'Io: tête féminine portant des cornes au front. Pour le même ornement utilisé par le même peintre: Naples, Mus. Naz. 3230 (inv. 82923). - RVAp I 421, 43.

Le même motif est fréquemment repris par divers peintres apuliens: P. de Gioia del Colle, 340-335 av. J.-C.: RVAp II 457, 1 pl. 161, 1-2. 6. 8. 11-12; RVAp Suppl. 1, 61, 3a. - P. de Copenhague 4223 et son groupe, vers 330: RVAp II 465, 48-49. 51; 468, 60a-61; RVAp Suppl. 1, 65, 40b; 66, 49c pl. 7, 1-2; 49e. - P. de Loebbecke, vers 330: RVAp II 470-471, 69-70. 74. - Gr. de Berlin - Branca, vers 330: RVAp II 475, 3. - P. de Darius et son entourage, 340-330: RVAp II 487, 17; 495, 38-39; Aellen, Ch./Cambitoglou, A./Chamay, J., Le peintre de Darius (1986) 97-108, ill. - Underworld P., vers 325: RVAp II 534, 287. 289 pl. 197-198; 539, 328. - Patera P., vers 330: RVAp II 727-731, 7. 14. 19-20. 23. 31. 35. 38. - Seated Women Gr., vers 325: RVAp II 756, 239 pl. 281, 1. 2; 757, 240-242. 246-247. - Gr. de Tarente 9243, vers 325: RVAp II 772, 90. - P. de Ganymède, vers 330-325: RVAp II 796, 1 pl. 294; 2-7. 10a. - P. de Baltimore, vers 330: RVAp II 862-863, 13 pl. 322; RVAp Suppl. 1, 150, 12c. - White Saccos P., vers 325:

RVAp Suppl. 1 182b; 183, 2c-d. - P. de Capodimonte, peu après 320: RVAp II 907-908. - Helmet P., vers 320: RVAp II 911, 17-18 pl. 347, 2-3; 23-24. - Gr. de Tarente 7013 («Lasimos» Gr.): RVAp II 914, 38; 1023, 37. - P. du Louvre K 67, vers 310: RVAp II 930, 115-116 pl. 365, 1-2. - Tenri Gr.: RVAp Suppl. 1 201, 6a. - Foggia Gr., vers 310-300: RVAp Suppl. 1 202, 20a. - Vases tardifs décorés de têtes féminines, vers 300: RVAp II 1034-1035, 134.

96. Askos à vernis noir. Londres, BM G 52. - Walters, BMVases IV 246 G 52; Engelmann 56 n^o 37. - 2^e moitié du IV^e s. av. J.-C. - Tête d'Io ou d'un dieu-fleuve (→ Fluvii).

97. Askos. Londres, BM 330 (D 184). De Canosa. - Walters, BMVases D 184; CVA 7 pl. 13, 2b (468). - Ép. hellénistique. - Sur la panse du vase, en relief, à l'avant tête de Méduse (→ Gorgo, Gorgones), à l'arrière tête d'Io munie de cornes.

98. * Coupe à vernis noir. Leningrad, Ermitage II 1867/68.903. De Panticapée. - CRPetersb 1869, 190 pl. 4, 21; Reinach, RépVas I, 30-31 n^o 7; Engelmann 55 n^o 31. - Buste d'Io en femme munie de cornes; derrière elle, aigle aux ailes déployées.

Gemmes

99. Sardoine. Leningrad, Ermitage 155. - Nevevov, O., Antique Cameos in the Hermitage Coll. (1971) 77 n^o 7. - III^e-II^e s. av. J.-C. - Buste de femme de profil à dr., munie de cornes: Io ou reine ptolémaïque?

100. Cornaline. Florence, Mus. Arch. - Furtwängler, AG 234 pl. 49, 9; Engelmann 53 n^o 33; Vollenweider, Steinschneidekunst 63-64 n. 86 pl. 67. 93, 3; Richter, EngrGemsRom 143 n^o 671. - Sign. Dioscouridès, ép. d'Auguste. - Buste d'Io munie de petites cornes (ruban, collier).

Pour des copies de la même œuvre, cf. Furtwängler, Beschreibung 197 n^{os} 4928-4930; Richter, EngrGemsRom n^o 734, tantôt avec, tantôt sans cornes.

101. Sardoine. Hanovre, Kestner Mus. K 1493. - Furtwängler, AG 234 pl. 51, 17; AGD IV 118 n^o 511 pl. 69. - Ép. romaine. - Buste d'Io (?); le haut de la tête manque. Pour un objet similaire, cf. une cornaline de Munich: AGD I 3, 16 n^o 2122 pl. 190.

102. Gemme. Boston, MFA. - Froehner, W., Coll. M. Tyszkiewicz, vente Rollin et Feuillant (1898) pl. 24, 9; Furtwängler, AG 234 n^o 9; Beazley, J. D., The Lewes House Coll. of Ancient Gems (1920) 94-95 n^o 113 pl. 6; Vollenweider, Steinschneidekunst 64 pl. 68, 4; Richter, EngrGemsRom 71 n^o 336. - Buste d'Io (ténia, collier, cornes?). Selon Furtwängler et Beazley, copie de l'œuvre de Dioscouridès (100); pour Vollenweider, portrait d'Agrippine l'Aînée héroïsée et assimilée à Io.

103. Pâte de verre. Boston, MFA 21.1216. - Vollenweider, Steinschneidekunst 64 n. 92 pl. 68, 2. 5. - Ép. romaine. - Buste d'Io (ruban, collier, cornes?). Selon Vollenweider, portrait d'Agrippine la Jeune.

104. Gemme. Coll. M. Velay. - Richter, EngrGemsRom 71 n^o 337. - Ép. romaine. - Buste d'Io (ruban, collier, cornes?), semblable à 103.

105. Pâte de verre. Genève, Mus. (Foll. 1997). - Vollenweider, CatGenève 212-213 n^o 222 pl. 65, 4-4a. - Vers 20-50 ap. J.-C. - Buste féminin muni de petites cornes (ruban et collier). Pour Vollenweider, portrait d'Agrippine veuve de Germanicus, ou d'une des sœurs de Caligula.

106. Gemme. Aquileia, Mus. Naz. - Vollenweider, Steinschneidekunst 64 n. 92 pl. 68, 1. - Ép. romaine. - Tête d'Io (?): pour Vollenweider, copie de l'œuvre de Dioscouridès et portrait d'Antonia.

IX. Identification douteuse

Peinture murale

107. Klagenfurt, Landesmus. Du Magdalensberg AA/15. - Kenner, H., Wandmalereien aus AA/15. Die Ausgrabungen auf dem Magdalensberg 1969 bis 1972. Magdalensberg Grabungsbericht 13 (1973) 263 fig. 25; idem, AntW 7, 1976, 26 fig. 2; idem, Archäol. Forschungen zu den Grabungen auf dem Magdalensberg 8 (1985) 51 pl. 21-22. - 20-15 av. J.-C. - Figure féminine (péplos, diadème) tenant un thyrsos. Sur le diadème sont fixées des volutes, qui permettent à Kenner de reconnaître Io et non Isis comme d'autres l'avaient proposé.

Mosaïques

108. Princeton, Univ. Art Mus. 65-617. De Daphné. - Campbell, W. A./Stillwell, R., Antioch III, Cat. of Mosaics (1941) 189 n^o 135 Panel E pl. 64; Levi, Antioch 210-211 pl. 41a. - Période 235-312 ap. J.-C. - Deux personnages assis sur un rocher. A g. une femme (chiton, himation) couronnée de plantes aquatiques, qui s'appuie de la main g. sur le rocher et tient de la dr. une syrinx. L'homme (longue tunique orientale, bonnet phrygien, pedum dans la main g.) semble se pencher vers sa compagne. A sa g., derrière le groupe, l'avant-train d'une vache. Selon Campbell/Stillwell, il s'agit de Pâris et d'Énone (→ Oinone).

109. Antakya, Mus. Hatay. De Daphné, «House of the Red Pavement». - Campbell/Stillwell, o. c. 108, 194 n^o 140 Panel F pl. 67; Weitzmann, K., Antioch III, Illustrations of Euripides and Homer in the Mosaics of Antioch (1941) 238-239 D; Levi, Antioch 75-80 pl. 12a. - Ép. d'Hadrien ou d'Antonin (Levi). - Au centre une jeune femme (chiton, himation, collier, diadème en or, éventail), parle à un homme en montrant de la main une autre femme (chiton, himation), appuyée derrière elle à un pilastre: celle-ci semble suivre le dialogue avec inquiétude. A g. l'homme, qui a l'apparence d'un berger (tunique orientale, bonnet phrygien, syrinx, pedum), écoute avec attention la première femme, en s'appuyant à un autre pilastre; derrière lui un arbre (Campbell/Stillwell: Pâris [→ Alexandros], → Hélène et → Aphrodite; Weitzmann: scène inspirée d'Homère ou d'Euripide; Levi: Io, Argos, Héra).

Monnaies

110. AE, Lampsaque (Mysie), IV^e-III^e s. av. J.-C. - SNG Copenhagen 206-207 pl. 5; SNG v. Aulock 1300 pl. 40; 7399-7400 pl. 255. - Av. Tête féminine à dr. (cornes, couronne de laurier): Io ou divinité de source? Rv. Protomè de cheval ailé (→ Pegasos) à dr.

Reliefs (métal)

111. Lampe en bronze. Požarevac, Mus. d'Hist. 490. - Cermanović, Starinar 9-10, 1958-59, 203-204 fig. 1-3. - I^{er}-II^e s. ap. J.-C. - L'anse porte en relief une tête: Io, ou plutôt un masque tragique. Représentation semblable: lampe, Cluj, Mus. - Picard, Ch., RA 1955, 63-67. - Le «chapeau» que porte la tête serait en fait un diadème avec des cornes: masque de théâtre de Dionysos ou d'Io.

112. Imago clipeata de bronze. D'Herculanum. - Antichità di Ercolano. Bronzi I p. III, vignette; Engelmann 56 n^o 39.

113. Masque de bronze. Fejervary. - BdI 1851, 125; Overbeck, J., Griech. Kunstmythologie (1871-1889) 486; Engelmann 56 n^o 40. - Masque avec cornes bovines et oreilles caprines; Engelmann: Io.

114. Tête de bronze. Vienne, Kunsthist. Mus. VI 451. - Brunn, H., AZ 1873, 128; 1874, 112; v. Sacken/Kenner, o. c. 60, n^o 1239; Engelmann 56 n^o 41. - Brunn et Engelmann: dieu-fleuve.

X. Fausse identification

115. (= Harmonia 11, = Kadmos I 46*) AE, Tyr, monnaies coloniales, Philippe I (244-249) et Trébonien Galle (251-253). - Imhoof-Blumer, MGr 447 n^o 44; BMC Phoenicia 283, 434 pl. 34, 2. - Rv. Un héros nu (sceptre transversal) donne la main à une jeune femme voilée derrière laquelle on voit une génisse debout à dr., la tête retournée: il s'agit de → Kadmos (I) et → Harmonia, et non d'Io comme le suggère Imhoof-Blumer.

116. AE, Iotapé (Cilicie), Valérien I (253-260). - BMC Cilicia 86, 1. 3 pl. 14, 8-9; SNG v. Aulock 13, 5583 pl. 187. - Rv. Tyché debout, tête à g. (polos, péplos, himation), tenant un gouvernail et une corne d'abondance. Contrairement à la description de Mionnet, T. E., Suppl. VII 216 n^o 254 (d'après Sestini, D., Mus. Hederv. II Add. pl. 6, 8), la figure n'a pas de «tête de taureau cornu» et n'est pas coiffée d'un «vase».

COMMENTAIRE

Quoique lié à l'Argolide, le mythe d'Io n'a jamais été représenté dans l'art argien. On le trouve illustré hors de cette région, trois fois dans le Péloponnèse (à Amyclées près de Sparte: 15; à Corinthe: 19-20), une fois en Ionie (31), une autre fois en Béotie (28), et fréquemment en Attique dès l'époque archaïque (1-6. 22-23. 31). C'est surtout au cours du V^e s. que ces représentations deviennent très nombreuses dans l'art attique (7-8. 11-13. 24-27. 34-35. 39. 43. 54-56. 62. 83), peut-être sous l'influence des grands tragiques (les Supplantes d'Eschyle ont été représentées entre 465 et 459 av. J.-C.) qui ont maintes fois traité ce sujet: le mythe avait évidemment franchi les limites de sa région d'origine et Io, comme Héraclès, était devenue une figure panhellénique. On peut aussi deviner les raisons politiques qui ont pu dicter cet intérêt athénien pour Io: dans l'Orestie d'Eschyle, jouée en 458, Oreste promet, après l'accueil généreux qu'il a reçu à Athènes, que les Argiens ne marcheront jamais contre Athènes. Et un peu plus tard, dans la 2^e moitié du V^e s., Deinoménès érige sur l'Acropole une statue d'Io en bronze (83). Dans l'histoire des relations entre Athènes et Argos, quelques faits notables peuvent être mis en rapport avec l'intérêt manifesté par les Athéniens pour Io: en 462, l'alliance conclue entre Athènes, Argos et la Thessalie; en 461, l'ambassade attico-argienne à Suse; en 421, la ligue unissant Athènes, Argos, Mantinée et Elis; en 417, le renouvellement pour cinquante ans de l'alliance entre Athènes et Argos, et l'aide d'Athènes aux Argiens dans leur conflit avec Sparte. Pour Lippold, GrPl 203, la dédicace sur l'Acropole de la statue d'Io par Deinoménès et celle de la statue de → Kallisto (Paus. I, 25, 1) pourraient commémorer l'alliance entre Athènes, Argos et Mantinée.

Depuis les premières représentations figurées de l'époque archaïque jusqu'à la fin de l'époque classique tardive, l'illustration du mythe subit diverses modifications. Signalons les plus importantes, qui permettent de distinguer plusieurs phases iconographiques.

Les représentations de l'époque archaïque (I-6. II. 22-23. 31), purement narratives, suivent probablement la version que donnaient de la légende les épopées: Aigimios, la Danaïde, Phoronis et d'autres œuvres épiques dont on ne possède que quelques fragments (cf. Sources litt.). Sur le vase attique I la disposition des figures en deux groupes de deux (Hermès-Argos, Héra-Io) est schématique et conventionnelle et la composition, décentrée vers la g., est déséquilibrée. Un motif répété sur trois vases (4-5. II. 11), celui d'Argos agenouillé s'appuyant sur un rocher pour se défendre contre Hermès, est probablement emprunté à une grande peinture de la même époque. Sur l'amphore Northampton 31 la composition centripète et axiale, que domine l'imposante stature d'Io encadrée par Hermès et Argos, reflète la gaieté idyllique des œuvres de l'archaïsme récent en Ionie, d'où provient ce vase. La figure fine et agile d'Hermès contrastant avec le gigantisme d'Argos, l'absence de souffle héroïque, les détails qui laissent entendre que la libération d'Io se fera par la ruse, tout annonce les tendances de cette époque: l'esprit épique et la naïveté narrative font place à de nouveaux thèmes et à de nouveaux moyens d'expression, qui vont dominer dans l'art dès le début du V^e s. av. J.-C.

Sur le plat attique 3 Hermès, placé au centre, terrasse Argos qui tombe vers la dr., tandis que derrière lui la génisse Io bondit vers la g. La disposition des trois figures sur des plans différents et la direction opposée des deux personnages latéraux accentuent l'intensité de l'action. On sent déjà l'ambiance dramatique de la génération de Phrynichos.

L'ensemble des illustrations de ce mythe reflète donc l'évolution de l'art grec, de la construction paratactique de l'art archaïque à la composition fermée et centrée, hiérarchisée des époques suivantes, de l'inspi-ration purement narrative à l'indication des rapports psychologiques entre les figures.

D'autre part c'est chaque fois un personnage différent du mythe qui domine la composition: tantôt le duel d'Hermès et d'Argos (24-26), tantôt Io elle-même, placée au centre (13. 31. 43). Parfois de nombreuses figures sont dessinées (I. 8. II. 13), ou bien la scène forme une composition à trois personnages, axiale et centrée (2-4. 7. 34), ou encore une seule figure emplit le champ (39), ou seul le meurtre d'Argos est représenté (24. 26). Une seule fois Zeus trônant assiste à la scène comme troisième personnage (25).

Depuis la fin du VI^e s. Hermès ne porte plus la peau de bête du berger, non plus qu'Argos sur la plupart des documents connus, bien qu'il la retrouve parfois (8. 27-28. 33-35. 44. 56), comme une survivance archaïsante.

Sur les documents de l'époque archaïque I-2 Argos est représenté avec deux visages dotés chacun d'une paire d'yeux, comme dans les épopées du VI^e s. Mais depuis le début du V^e s. il a le corps tout entier parsemé d'yeux innombrables (4-5. 7-8. II. 13. 22-27. 34), ce qui illustre les descriptions qu'en donnent les œuvres littéraires de ce siècle, surtout les tragédies. Un autre vase attique à f.r. (34) combine le type d'Argos aux deux visages et celui du corps parsemé d'yeux. Seul le plat archaïque 3 le montre comme un homme normal sans aucun trait monstrueux. Le vase ionien 31 fait probablement allusion au thème de la ruse d'Hermès, qui aurait délivré Io en endormant le Géant avant de le tuer (Ov. met. I, 669-687. 713-721). Hermès ne put accomplir sa mission qu'après avoir tué Argos, et le meurtre est représenté dans la céramique attique (I. 3-4. 7-8. II. 13. 22. 24-27. 34) et sur le vase italote 33 (cf. supra). Sur un seul vase attique (2) Hermès attaque Argos en tenant le kérykeion au lieu d'une épée. Sur un autre vase attique (56) il le tue en brandissant l'épée de la main dr. et de l'autre une pierre (cf. supra).

D'autre part Argos et Hermès sont représentés barbus pendant toute l'époque archaïque et presque jusqu'à la fin du V^e s. On les trouve pour la première fois imberbes sur le vase 27. Dès lors les deux adversaires sont en général figurés comme des jeunes gens sans barbe, sauf sur les vases 55 (Hermès barbu) et 56 (Argos barbu). Par la suite, et jusqu'à l'époque romaine, ils garderont, à très peu d'exceptions près, leur aspect juvénile.

Dès la fin du VI^e s. et pendant la 1^{re} moitié du V^e s., une période μεστή Ἀρεως, profondément marquée par les guerres Médiques, où l'idéal agonal atteint son apogée, même les divinités adoptent des attitudes empruntées aux scènes de combat et de palestra. Aussi Hermès prend-il des poses athlétiques lorsqu'il lutte contre Argos (7. 24-26). La victoire remportée sur Argos devient alors le centre d'intérêt du mythe, tandis que les autres figures (Io, etc.) sont reléguées à une place secondaire ou même omises (24. 26. 39-40. 43. 63-64).

Toutes les œuvres d'art de l'époque archaïque et la plupart de celles de la 1^{re} moitié du V^e s. représentent

Io sous son aspect zoomorphe, comme une génisse selon la tradition des poèmes épiques – sauf quelques vases (2?-3?. 4. II. 13) sur lesquels Io est figurée comme un taureau (voir l'explication proposée par Simon 272). Mais sur l'œnochoé lucanienne de Boston 33 l'aspect zoomorphe d'Io a subi un changement important: son corps de génisse est surmonté d'une tête de femme pourvue de cornes. Certes, le vase provient de Grande-Grèce et il est daté vers 440 av. J.-C., mais il rappelle tout de même un passage des Suppliantes d'Eschyle (v. 299. 568-570), pièce représentée vers 463 av. J.-C., qui caractérise Io comme τέρας... μεῖζον ἢ βροτον, τὴν μὲν βοῶς, τὴν δ' αὖ γυναικὸς («un monstre hybride», mélange de femme et de vache). Ce nouvel aspect d'Io ne peut pas être une invention d'Eschyle, car la description est elliptique, comme si cette métamorphose était connue de tous. Peut-être s'inspire-t-il d'œuvres de la grande peinture et d'une présentation nouvelle d'Io répandue à cette époque, dont le souvenir ne serait préservé que sur l'œnochoé de Boston (Engelmann 37; cf. Weiß, Flußg 104).

Sur les vases attiques à f. r. 34. 39. 62, Io a pris une forme entièrement humaine et seules les cornes et les oreilles animales rappellent son aspect zoomorphe antérieur. C'est ainsi qu'elle apparaît quelques années après les Suppliantes d'Eschyle, dans le Prométhée enchaîné (v. 588) où elle est décrite comme βοῦκερως κορυθῆνος, «vierge aux cornes de bœuf» (cf. v. 674-676; sur l'attribution à Eschyle de cette tragédie jouée vers 450-440 [?], cf., entre autres, West, M., JHS 99, 1979, 130-148, et Saïd, S., Sophiste et tyran [1985] 41-46. 73. 76. 78). La brièveté de la description qu'en donne le poète fait penser qu'il n'invente pas, et que cet aspect d'Io était alors familier au public athénien (pour les autres interprétations, cf. Weiß, Flußg 106). Le peintre du vase tout comme le poète se sont donc inspirés d'une image d'Io bien connue à cette époque, comme on peut le voir d'après les documents ultérieurs. Ceci est confirmé par une phrase d'Hérodote (2, 41): à propos de la statue d'Isis figurée comme une femme munie de cornes, il ajoute κατὰ τὰ Ἑλλήνων τὴν Ἰοῦν γράφουσιν, «exactement de la façon dont les Grecs représentent Io dans leurs peintures».

Ces transformations successives d'Io, de génisse en μεῖζον ἢ βροτον τέρας, «monstre hybride», puis en femme pourvue de cornes, proviennent plutôt de la tendance générale qu'avaient les Grecs à humaniser peu à peu les êtres zoomorphes des temps primitifs, tendance qui s'affirme au plus haut point à l'époque classique. Le cas le plus connu et le plus caractéristique est celui des dieux-fleuves qui connaissent une évolution semblable (cf. Weiß, Flußg; → Acheloos).

La représentation d'Io sur la péliké 62 illustre son aventure amoureuse avec Zeus qui, comme toutes les histoires d'amour entre dieux et mortels, devient à partir de la 1^{re} moitié du V^e s. un des motifs favoris des peintres. L'intérêt de cette représentation tient aussi au fait que le peintre se limite à deux personnages, Zeus et Io, afin de concentrer le mythe sur le thème de la poursuite amoureuse. Le même motif se rencontre déjà sur un vase de peu antérieur, le stamnos 13. L'inspiration guerrière (cf. le groupe d'Hermès et d'Argos) contraste avec l'intérêt nouveau porté aux rapports psychologiques entre les personnages, et dans ce cas au lien amoureux qui unit Zeus à Io. On remarque le geste de caresse de Zeus: sa main dirigée vers le front de la génisse est suivie par leurs deux regards, dont la rencontre accentue l'ambiance amoureuse. Mais ce geste du dieu qui étend la main vers son amante (aussi bien sur ce vase que sur 39) traduit aussi son intervention bienfaisante dans le destin de l'être humain: c'est l'attitude de Zeus Δεῖλων comme celle d'Apollon sur le fronton ouest d'Olympie où la main protectrice est dirigée vers l'épaule du roi des Lapithes.

Le motif d'Io humanisée mais munie de cornes, parfois même d'oreilles de génisse, se retrouve sur de nombreux vases (28. 34-35. 39-40. 43-44. 57-60. 63-64. 85-87. 95). Parmi ces représentations, celle de l'œnochoé de Berlin 35 présente un intérêt spécial. Ici aucun combat, pas d'ambiance dramatique ou amoureuse. Les personnages baignent dans une sérénité olympienne. Le mythe, la destinée des deux protagonistes, Io et Argos, ne sont plus envisagés sous l'angle des événements éphémères mais de l'éternité. Désormais la félicité éternelle domine dans la composition. C'est là l'ultime et définitive métamorphose d'Io après ses pénibles épreuves. A cette métamorphose participe aussi Argos: le Géant, redoutable serviteur d'Héra – ici, de surcroît, il est au centre de la composition – a perdu son aspect monstrueux, et dans sa beauté idéale, avec sa massue, il fait penser à l'Héraclès olympien. Instrument de l'inexorable volonté divine, Argos s'ennoblit à la fin, tout comme Io, pour accéder à un rang supérieur, bien différent de celui que rappelle la protomé de vache placée au-dessus de lui.

A ce groupe de représentations appartient aussi la statue monumentale d'Io érigée sur l'Acropole, œuvre du sculpteur Deinoménès (83) bien qu'on ignore si elle était dotée de cornes.

La même atmosphère et le même esprit caractérisent deux autres peintures de vases: sur l'une Io sort du tronc d'un palmier (63), sur l'autre (64) elle est assise sur un ornement végétal entouré d'acanthos et de panthères. Toutes deux évoquent le monde de l'au-delà, où règne le bonheur éternel qu'expriment ces plantes idéales, symboles d'héroïsation et de divinisation; les panthères, animaux de Dionysos et d'Artémis, dominent la nature dans le monde de l'au-delà où l'héroïne est transportée.

Il en est de même avec le skyphos lucanien 40. Aucun élément narratif dans cette image; Io est là, dans un lieu idéal; elle se regarde dans un miroir, ici objet rituel, qui reflète son image rétablie parmi les figures divines. Enfin, sur le cratère italote 44, la représentation d'Io et d'Argos exprime une fois de plus la sérénité et le calme des deux protagonistes qui se sont élevés jusqu'au monde céleste après leurs épreuves tragiques.

Les scènes figurées sur les vases attiques 55-56, dans lesquelles prévaut la composition à plusieurs personnages, s'inspirent visiblement du théâtre comme peut-être de la peinture monumentale. Les vêtements luxueux, chargés d'ornements, qui sont nettement ceux d'acteurs, ainsi que les deux Satyres, font penser peut-être à un drame satyrique ou à une tragédie attique écrite à la fin du V^e s., comme celle de Chairémon.

D'autre part divers éléments picturaux – les différents plans sur lesquels sont répartis les personnages ou les lignes irrégulières indiquant le terrain qui cachent à demi certaines figures – montrent les progrès faits dans le traitement du paysage par les grands peintres de l'époque classique tardive. Il en est de même pour la composition des vases italiotes 57. 59–60. Sur le vase 57, le paysage montueux est indiqué par une ligne sinieuse derrière laquelle Pan est dissimulé jusqu'aux genoux, et le sol par une rangée irrégulière de cailloux visibles sous les pieds de Zeus, d'Aphrodite et d'Argos ainsi que sous l'hydrie placée derrière lui. Sur 59, la composition est plus ou moins la même mais simplifiée et accentuée. D'autre part ces deux scènes (57. 59) ont ceci d'inattendu et de bizarre, qu'elles se déroulent dans le sanctuaire d'Artémis, sur l'autel de laquelle Io est assise.

La seule peinture du IV^e s. figurant Io que mentionnent les sources littéraires est celle de Nicias (54), datée vers 330 av. J.-C. Ce tableau suivait plutôt la tradition classique des trois personnages principaux (Hermès, Io, Argos), et fut le prototype de nombreuses fresques romaines (44–51).

Comme on l'a déjà signalé, le mythe d'Io avait franchi assez tôt les frontières de la Grèce propre: dans les colonies grecques d'Égypte et du Proche-Orient, mais aussi en Sicile et en Grande-Grèce, la figure d'Io était devenue très populaire. Les divers épisodes du mythe, les aventures d'Io se multiplient dans l'art de ces pays. Le nombre considérable de vases italiotes qui les illustrent montrent la faveur dont Io jouissait dans cette région. Le sujet y était très répandu dans les arts mineurs et dans l'architecture, comme l'atteste le grand nombre d'antéfixes en terre cuite provenant des temples de Tarente (91–94). Enfin l'abondance de fresques, de Pompéi et d'ailleurs, qui représentent Io tient d'une part à des influences directes de la Grèce – celles des sources littéraires, des œuvres d'art et surtout de la peinture de Nicias – et d'autre part à un courant d'influences qui peut provenir d'Égypte, dans la mesure où Io y est assimilée à Isis. D'ailleurs cette confusion entre Io et Isis a elle-même une double origine: elle remonte d'une part à l'époque archaïque, autour de Cyrène, d'autre part à l'Alexandrie lagide. La légende s'est en effet surtout diffusée lorsque les Ptolémées ont décidé de faire revivre et de répandre une tradition macédonienne selon laquelle, leurs aïeux étant des Héraclides, ils provenaient de l'union d'Io avec Zeus. Cette ascendance remplaçait celle qui rattachait Alexandre le Grand à Zeus Ammon; grâce à elle les Lagides, notamment Ptolémée III et Arsinoé II, assuraient plus promptement leur déification en soulignant le parallélisme de leurs destinées avec celles d'Io et d'Épaphos (Freyer-Schauenburg 44–48). C'est pourquoi les portraits de ces reines ptolémaïques portent de petites cornes, allusion à leur ascendance «ioisiaque» (Freyer-Schauenburg, l. c.).

NICOLAS YALOURIS

IO II

(Ἰώ, corinthien Fubi) Néréide (→ Nereides) représentée sur un vase corinthien. Son nom ne figure dans aucune des listes de Néréides connues.

1. (= Achilleus 897* avec bibl., = Hamathoi 1) Hydrie corinthienne. Paris, Louvre E 643. De Caeré. – Kretschmer, P., Die griechischen Vasenschriften (1894) 22 n° 24; 201 n. 13; Kakridis, I. Th., Ελληνική Μυθολογία 5 (1986) 124 fig. 104. – P. de Damos. – 570–550 av. J.-C. – Le cadavre d'Achille est étendu sur une kliné; une dizaine de Néréides se lamente auprès de son corps. Parmi elles, I. (FIOI) apparaît deux fois: elle est debout à dr. de la scène, de profil à g., tordant une mèche de ses longs cheveux de la main dr., la main g. baissée. Elle est également au pied du lit, de profil à dr., les mains tendues.

I., dont le nom a parfois été interprété comme une exclamation de douleur (cf. Pottier, Vases Louvre p. 59) car il évoque le cri (ἰωῖ), est une Néréide qui ne semble pas avoir de légende particulière. Ce nom est fréquemment porté par des femmes dans la céramique corinthienne (→ Io IV). NOËLLE ICARD-GIANOLIO

IO III

(Ἰώ, ionisch Fiō) Mänadenname (→ Mainades) in Vasenschriften.

1.* (= Chora I mit Querverweisen) Amphora, chalkid. Leiden, Rijksmuseum. 1626. Aus Vulci. – Fränkel, Namen 14. 82 Nr. A; Rumpf, ChalkVas 7–8 Nr. 2; 46 Nr. 2 Taf. 2. – Sechs Silene tanzen mit sechs Nymphen (die Namen → Chora 1). I. (FIO) tanzt mit → Simos.

2. (= Dorkis 2) Kolonettenkrater, chalkid. Brüssel, Mus. Roy. A 135. Aus Vulci. – Fränkel, Namen 14. 82 Nr. B; Rumpf, ChalkVas 13 Nr. 13; 46 Nr. 13 Taf. 29; CVA 2 Taf. 1 (52) 1b. – Tanz von sieben Silenen und fünf Nymphen (die Namen → Dorkis 2). Die Lesung FIO ist unsicher, da nur geringe Reste der Inschrift erhalten sind.

ANNELIESE KOSSATZ-DEISSMANN

IO IV

(Ἰώ, kor. Fubi) Frauenname, verschiedenen Figuren auf spätkorinthischen Vasen beigeschrieben, literarisch für die jeweiligen Szenen nicht belegt. Vgl. auch → Io II und III. Zum Namen cf. Kretschmer, P., Die griechischen Vasenschriften ihrer Sprache nach untersucht (1894) 43–44.

1. (= Antimachidas 1*, = Dion 4*) Kolonettenkrater. Berlin (West), Staatl. Mus. 1959.1. – Amyx, CVP 271–272, D 1: Tydeusmaler; 590, 119. – Frau bei der Ausfahrt des Kriegers Antimachidas.

2. (Charon III 3, = Dioi II 2, = Dion 5*) Hydria. Paris, Louvre E 642. – Amyx, CVP 265, A 2: Damonmaler; 577–578, 78. – Frau bei der Ausfahrt des Kriegers Dion.

Auf 1 und 2 steht I. jeweils im Bildhintergrund neben den Pferden.

3. (= Eryba(t)s 1*) Kolonettenkrater. Paris, Louvre E 637. – Amyx, CVP 575, 71. – Braut des Eryba(t)s in einer Hochzeitsausfahrt.

4. (= Doroi 1*) Hydria. fr. Paris, Louvre Cp. 10488. – Amyx, CVP 578, 81. – Frau auf Wagen (Lesung Arenas) eines Hochzeitszuges (?).

Zur Interpretation → Dion, Kommentar, und Amyx, CVP 552–553. PIERRE MÜLLER

IOBATES

(Ἰοβάτης, Iobates) König von Lykien, Vater der Stheneboia und der Philonoe; Gastgeber des → Proitos und des Bellerophon (→ Pegasos), die beide seine Schwiegersöhne werden.

LITERARISCHE QUELLEN: Bei Hom. Il. 6, 170 ist dieser lykische König noch namenlos. Vielleicht stand der Name in Hes. frg. 43a 88 Merkelbach/West (suppl. Wilamowitz). In Soph. Tragödie Iobates (TrGF IV F 297–299), die offenbar in Lykien spielte, und Eur. Stheneboia (TGF² p. 567) heißt der König von Lykien I. – Der Name seiner Gemahlin ist in den Schriftquellen nicht überliefert. Seine erste Tochter Stheneboia verheiratet I. mit Proitos, dem er in Argos wieder zur Macht verholfen hatte (Apollod. bibl. 2 [24] 2). Seine jüngere Tochter Philonoe (auch Kasandra, Asklep. Trag., FGrH 12 F 13; TrGF IV p. 268) gibt er am Lebensende seinem zweiten Gastfreund Bellerophon zur Frau. Bellerophon wird von Proitos, an dessen Hof er weilte, um durch ihn von einem Verwandtenmord entführt zu werden, aus Bifersucht zu I. nach Lykien geschickt (Hom. Il. 6, 155–197; Pind. I. 7, 44–47, O. 13, 60–92; Eur. Stheneboia, TGF² frg. 661–672; Asklep. Trag. l. c.; Diod. 6, 9; Strabon 12, 8, 5–6 p. 573; Apollod. bibl. 2 [30–33] 3, 1–2, Plut. de mul. vir. 248a–d; Hyg. fab. 57; Zenob. cent. 2, 87; Paus. 2, 4, 2; Athen. 5, 185b–c). Stheneboia (oder bei Hom. Il. 6, 160 Anteia), die Gemahlin des Proitos, hatte versucht Bellerophon zu verführen. Zurückgewiesen, verleumdet sie ihn bei Proitos und verlangt seinen Tod (Schol. Aristoph. Ranae 1043; Hor. c. 3, 7, 13–16). Daraufhin schickt Proitos ihn zu seinem Schwiegervater nach Lykien mit einem versiegelten Brief (vgl. Plaut. Bacch. 810–811; Plin. nat. 13, 88), der seine Tötung fordert. König I. behält Bellerophon neun Tage als Gastfreund, bis er den Brief entziffert hat. Weil I. sich scheut, seinen königlichen Gast zu töten, auferlegt er ihm mehrere gefährliche Aufgaben (Tötung der → Chimaira, Krieg gegen die Solymen, Kampf gegen die → Amazonas; für die lit. Quellen s. auch → Pegasos). Nach Hom. Il. 6, 187 und Apollod. bibl. 2 (33) 3, 2 versucht I., nachdem Bellerophon diese Aufgaben gelöst hat, den Helden durch eine Schar auserwählter Lykier in einem Hinterhalt umbringen zu lassen. Bellerophon überwältigt sie alle, und I. erkennt seine göttliche Abkunft (Hom. Il. 6, 191). Er bittet Bellerophon zu bleiben, gibt ihm seine zweite Tochter Philonoe (die bei Homer namenlos ist) zur Frau und überläßt ihm die Hälfte des Königreiches (Hom. Il. 6, 193). Nach Apollod. a. O. überträgt er ihm sterbend das Reich als Erbe. Auch die Lykier überlassen ihm ein Landgut (Hom. Il. 6, 194–195). Bei Apollod. a. O. zeigt I. dem Bellerophon nach der Aussöhnung den Brief von Proitos. Das Motiv des Uriasbriefes wird in Eur. Jugendwerk Stheneboia aufgegriffen, in dem I. wohl nur eine Nebenrolle gespielt hat. Erst die Tragödie des Soph. Iobates, von der außer dem Titel drei Fragmente erhalten sind, gibt einige Auskünfte über I. Den neu aufgetauchten Vasenbildern (1–4. 12. 13) zufolge – sofern sie sich auf Soph. I. zurückführen lassen – spielte das Drama in Lykien, hatte außer I. auch Philonoe eine wichtige Rolle (cf. 2. 3. 12. 13) und am Ende des Stückes starb König I.

Eine abweichende, wohl lykische Lokalsage überliefert Plut. (de mul. vir. 247f–248d): I. habe gar nicht daran gedacht, Bellerophon für seine Taten zu belohnen, auch nicht, als er die lykischen Piraten mit ihrem Anführer Cheimarrhos aus der Ebene von Xanthos vertrieben hatte. In dieser Version wird Poseidon (der göttliche Vater des Bellerophon) von seinem Sohn angerufen. Er überschwemmt die Ebene von Xanthos, während sein Sohn Bellerophon sich dem Palast des I. nähert. Da sich ihm niemand anders entgegenstellt, laufen ihm die xanthischen Frauen mit bis zu den Hüften erhobenen Röcken (was wohl auf einem alten Kultbrauch beruht) entgegen, so daß er sich umdreht und davonläuft. Die Wellen ziehen sich mit ihm zurück. Erst jetzt ist I. von der Unschuld seines Gastes überzeugt. Auf dieses Ereignis hin befiehlt er, die Xanthier sollen für alle Zeiten ihre Herkunft von der Mutter ableiten, statt vom Vater: so wird das bis in historische Zeit weibliche Erbfolgesgesetz in Lykien dem mythischen König I. in den Mund gelegt, um es als möglichst alt erscheinen zu lassen. Diese Erbfolgesnorm zeigt aber auch, daß die griechischen Einwanderer den Xanthiern ihre eigene patrilineare Erbfolge nicht aufzwingen konnten; wahrscheinlich spiegelt der Mythos so die historischen Verhältnisse der Beziehungen zwischen den lykischen Fürstenhöfen und der Argolis wider, denn in die Zeit des 9. und 8. Jh. v. Chr. fallen die Versuche der Griechen, an der kleinasiatischen Westküste kolonisatorisch Fuß zu fassen. Homer hat den historischen Kämpfen einen mythischen Hintergrund gegeben.

BIBLIOGRAPHIE: Bethe, E., RE IX 2 (1916) 1837–1838 s. v. «Iobates»; Brommer, F., MarbWPr 1952/1954; Bryce, T. R., The Lycians in Literary and Epigraphic Sources I (1986) 16–20. 209; Burkert, W., «Oriental Myth and Literature in the Iliad», in The Greek Renaissance of the Eight Cent. B.C. (1983) 51–53 Anm. 3.; Conticello, B., EAA IV (1961) 171 s. v. «Iobates»; Dunbabin, J. J., Studies Robinson II (1953) 1164–84; Engelmann, R., ML II 1 (1890-94) 281-282 s. v. «Iobates»; Heubeck, A., Schrift, ArchHom X (1979) 128-142; Hiller, St., Bellerophon, ein griechischer Mythos in der röm. Kunst (1970); Lohmann, H., Grabmäler auf unteritalischen Vasen (1979) 41-51 (zu den Naiskos); Maltin, L., JdI 40, 1925, 121-160; Moret, J. M., AntK 15, 1972, 95-106; Peppermüller, R., Die Bellerophonsage, ihre Herkunft und Geschichte (ungedr. Diss. Göttingen 1961), zum Potiphar-motiv und Uriasbrief vgl. 105 ff. 132; Schauenburg, K., JdI 71, 1956, 59-96 (= Schauenburg 1); Schauenburg, K., AA 1958, 21-37 (= Schauenburg 2); Schauenburg, K., JdI 104, 1989, 19-60 (= Schauenburg 3); v. Wilamowitz-Moellendorf, U., Die Ilias und Homer (1916); Yalouris, N., Pegasos (1975).

KATALOG

A. Bei König Iobates in Lykien

1.* Kelchkrater, apul. rf. Fort Worth, Kimbell Art Mus., Hunt Coll. - RVAp II 501, 64a; Dareiosmaler; The Summa Galleries Auction 1 (1981) Nr. 26; v. Bothmer, D., in Wealth of the Ancient World (1983) Nr. 15; Schefold/Jung, SB IV 123-124 Abb. 148. - Um 350 v. Chr. - I. mit Vogelzepter und Tiara in orientalischer Tracht (Theaterkostüm?) auf einer prächtigen Kline sitzend, die im Zentrum der Komposition steht. Er hebt erstaunt die Hand zum Kopf und schaut dem von I. auf Pegasos heranziehenden Bellerophon (mit dem Brief in der Hand!) entgegen. Über dem Kopf von I. hängen Wagenräder und ein Schild. Zu seinen Füßen liegen zwei Omphalosschalen, eine Spendenkanne und ein Kantharos, der auf den Heroenkult weist. Anscheinend greift Poseidon, r. oben in der Götterregion sitzend, mit gebieterisch ausgestrecktem Arm in das Schicksal von I., Philonoe und Bellerophon ein. Unterhalb von Poseidon steht ein Luterion, das auf die davoneilende Philonoe bezogen werden kann: es weist auf ihr Brautbad voraus. Da I. so auffällig ins Zentrum gesetzt ist, darf man sich fragen, ob dieses und das folgende Vasenbild vom Iobates des Soph. angeregt sein könnten (vgl. Kommentar).

2.* Volutenkrater, apul. rf. Los Angeles, Kunsthandel (NFA Antiquities, vorher Summa Galleries 2028). - RVAp Suppl. 1, 86, 288a Taf. 17, 3: Unterweltmaler. - Um 340 v. Chr. - I., wie auf 1 mit Tiara, Vogelzepter und Theaterkostüm in einem viersäuligen Grabnaikos sitzend, sich mit seiner r. Hand sorgenvoll an den Kopf greifend. Der Naikos kann den Königspalast von I. und sein Grabmal zugleich andeuten, erinnert aber auch an den Unterweltpalast. (Zur vielschichtigen Bedeutung dieser Naikosform vgl. Lohmann 50.) Die Begegnung von Vater und Tochter, die hier in der Grabaedicula als Zweifigurenbild dargestellt ist, kommt dem Geist griechischer Grabreliefs nahe: I. sitzend, seine Tochter stehend, die I. Hand im Redegestus erhoben. Oben I. vom Naikos erscheint Bellerophon auf dem Pegasos und versetzt die den Amazonen ähnlich gekleidete lykische Palastwache in Schrecken (Chor?). Die lykischen Krieger (mit «phrygischer» Mütze) unterhalb des Palastes vollführen die gleiche Gebärde zum Kopf, wie ihr König.

3.* Kelchkrater, apul. rf. London, Kunsthandel. - Sotheby, 10. Dez. 1984 Nr. 365a. - Dareiosmaler, um 350 v. Chr. - Pendantstück zu 1? Der thronende I. mit Tiara und Vogelzepter wiederum im Theaterkostüm. Vor ihm steht, von Pegasos abgestiegen, Bellerophon mit Dreizack und dem Brief des Proitos. Hinter dem Thron Philonoe, verschleiert wie eine Braut. Neben ihr steht Herakles, mit dem sie im Gespräch verbunden ist. Oben sitzen Apollon und Aphrodite, die Eros mit einer Binde ausgeschickt hat, wohl zu Philonoe. Zu Herakles neben Philonoe vgl. → Herakles/Hercle 327 = Chimaira (in Etruria) 75*.

4.* Loutrophoros, apul. rf. Privatslg. - Schauenburg 3, 19-27 Abb. 1-4: Baltimore-Maler. - Um 320 v. Chr. - I. (bärtig), wie bei 3 auf einem Thron (ohne Lehne) mit Fußbank, mit reichverziertem gegürteten Ärmelgewand und Tiara, in der l. Hand das Zepter, in der r. den Brief des Proitos haltend. Vor ihm Bellerophon mit Pegasos am Zügel. Hinter I. steht ein Lykier mit «phrygischer» Mütze, Pelta und dem krummen Hiebschwert. Am Ende des Frieses die sitzende, sich entschleiende Philonoe mit Diadem. An der Wand hängen Spiegel, Helm und Kanne. Zwischen den Beinen des Pegasos eine Situla.

5.* Kolonettenkrater, apul. rf. Südkalifornien (ehem. Hillsborough), Slg. R. A. Hearst, San Simeon Warehouse 9964, Hearst Estate 5612. - Raubitschek, I. K., The Hearst Hillsborough Vases (1969) 93-97 Nr. 27 Abb. 27a-c; Schauenburg 2, 27-29; Moret 100 Taf. 29, 2: Umkreis des Ariadnemalers. - Um 400-380 v. Chr. - I. (bärtig) stehend, nur mit Himantion bekleidet, stützt sich wie ein attischer Bürger mit der l. Achsel auf einen Knotenstock und streckt dem auf Pegasos ankommenden Bellerophon die Hand entgegen. Hinter ihm ein Leibwächter mit Lanze. Einziges Erkennungszeichen des lykischen Königs ist die Tiara.

6.* Glockenkrater, camp. rf. Winterthur, Münzkabinett 364 (432). - LCS 415, 360 Taf. 167, 5: Manchester-Maler; Moret 103 Taf. 26, 3. - 2. Viertel 4. Jh. v. Chr. - I. (weißhaarig, bärtig) sitzt im Theaterkostüm mit Tiara und Zepter auf einem Diphros mit Fußbank und liest den Brief (Diptychon) des Proitos. Hinter ihm die verschleierte, wegschreitende Philonoe (Diadem), die ihren Kopf zurückwendet und dem Gast in die Augen schaut. Vor I. steht Bellerophon mit dem Pegasos.

7. Lekythos, camp. rf. Neapel, Privatslg. - LCS 302, 537: Laghetto-Maler; Schauenburg 2, 35. - Um 340 v. Chr. - I. erhält den Brief.

8.* Lekythos, camp. rf. Neapel, Mus. Naz. 147868. Aus Aversa. - LCS 334, 781 Taf. 130, 8: Aversa-Maler; Schauenburg 1, 87; Hiller 19 Abb. 6. - Um 340 v. Chr. - I. mit Zepter, sehr jugendlich, merkwürdigerweise ohne Bart, aber an der orientalischen Bekleidung und der Tiara zu erkennen. Er liest im geöffneten Diptychon, das Bellerophon (ohne Pegasos, dafür mit Hund), noch mit einer Hand festhält.

B. Iobates als Zuschauer beim Chimairakampf

DEUTUNG VON 9 UND 10 NICHT GESICHERT

9. Vase, apul. rf. Ehem. Slg. Hamilton, verloren. - Tischbein, W., Collection of Engravings from Ancient Vases I (1791) Taf. 1; Moret 101-105 Abb. 1. - Wohl Ende 5. Jh. v. Chr. - I. ohne Tiara. Zum Deutungsproblem dieser Vase, in der schon Tischbein I. als Zuschauer beim Chimairakampf erkennen wollte, vgl. die Diskussion bei Moret 104 Anm. 60 und → Proitos.

10. (= Chimaira [in Etruria] 67*) Kelchkrater, etrusk. rf. Parma, Mus. di Ant. C. 101. - EVP 37, 2: Sommarvilla-Maler; Yalouris 61 Abb. 43. - Ende 5. Jh. v. Chr. - I. (?) unbärtig, ohne Tiara (dafür mit Kranz oder Krone) und Zepter im felsigen Gelände sitzend, als Zuschauer beim Chimairakampf. Sein Pendant ist eine weibliche Figur mit polosartiger Krone auf dem Kopf, mit langem, gestickten Chiton bekleidet, darüber Kreuzbänder (Philonoe?). Über den Henkeln Piloshelme.

11.* (= Chimaira [in Etruria] 76) Kelchkrater, falisk. rf. Rom, Villa Giulia 1514. Aus Falerii (Civita Castellana). - Schauenburg 1, 82. 67 Abb. 10; Depert, K., Die faliskischen Vasen (1956) 55. - Um 350 v. Chr. - I. als weißhaariger König mit Bart, reichverzierter Tiara und Zepter. Neben ihm Philonoe. Rundherum Amazonen oder Lykier, die den Kampf gegen die Chimaira, mit großen Felsbrocken bewaffnet, zu unterstützen scheinen, ganz entgegen den antiken Schriftquellen.

12.* Volutenkrater, apul. rf. Kunsthandel. - Schauenburg 3, 25 Abb. 7: Baltimore-Maler. - Um 320 v. Chr. - Wie auf 1 hängen oberhalb von I. Wagenräder. Er ist durch Zepter und Tiara als König gekennzeichnet und sitzt auf zwei übereinanderliegenden Kissen. Vor ihm stehende, verschleierte Philonoe mit Diadem, auf die I. einzureden scheint (vgl. 2). Hinter ihr Dienerin mit Schirm. Die Gruppe ist von der lykischen Palastwache umgeben. In der unteren Region, direkt unter I., kämpft Bellerophon mit der Chimaira, wiederum von lykischen Kriegerinnen unterstützt. Eine Nike mit Siegeskranz kündigt den guten Ausgang des Kampfes an. Der Baltimore-Maler verteilt also das Geschehen auf zwei Ebenen, die obere spielt im Palast des Königs; die Hochzeit mit der Königstochter ist durch den Brautthron (?) hinter Philonoe und den Schirm (ein Hochzeitsrequisit) angedeutet (vgl. das Luterion auf 1). Auf dem Halsbild darüber erscheint Aphrodite im Blätterkelch zwischen Erosen.

13.* Volutenkrater, apul. rf. Privatslg. - Schauenburg 3, 23-24 Abb. 5-6: Baltimore-Maler. - Um 320 v. Chr. - Im Zentrum ein weißer Naikos mit drei ionischen Säulen an der Front, in dem I. (Tiara, Zepter) auf einem Thron mit Sphingenstützen sitzt; wie auf 2 ist er mit seiner Tochter als Zweifigurengruppe dargestellt. Philonoe (?) steht bekrönt und verschleiert, ebenfalls mit einem Zepter, vor I., der mit ihr spricht. Nach lykischem Erbrecht kann Philonoe bei I.s Tod seine Nachfolgerin werden. Wäre auf dem Halsbild des Kraters nicht Bellerophon im Chimairakampf dargestellt, würde man den Naikos nicht unbedingt als Königspalast, sondern als Unterweltpalast interpretieren, zumal hinter dem thronenden I. mit dem Schwert die Hadeskappe hängt (→ Aphrodite 1554*; → Hades 149. 154). Grabmal und Unterweltpalast durchdringen einander. Aber I. ist eindeutig an der Tiara zu erkennen. Schauenburg 3, 24 verknüpft die Palastszene mit dem Halsbild des Chimairakampfes, der zwischen Ranken dargestellt ist, und macht auf das Nebeneinander der zwei Episoden auf ein und demselben Bildträger aufmerksam, «die in der Realität getrennt zu denken seien», weil sie verschiedene Seinsebenen andeuten. Unterhalb des Palastes stehen lykische Krieger mit Pferden. R. und l. vom Naikos Grabbesucher.

C. Iobates auf einem römischen Sarkophag

14.* Sarkophag mit Deckel, Marmor. Algier, Mus. Nat. Aus Azzefoun (antik Rusazus). - Aymard, J., MEFRA 52, 1935, 143 ff. Taf. 1-3; Hiller 51-56. 106 Nr. 13 Abb. 20; Darmon, J.-P., Nymfarum Domus (1980) 172-173; Koch/Sichtermann, RömSark 143 Abb. 154; Schefold/Jung, SB IV 126-127 Abb. 153. - Um 260/70 n. Chr. - L. Deckel, l.: Ankunft in Lykien bei I. auf einem Thron und Philonoe, die den Brief des Proitos entgegennehmen; r.: Bellerophon mit Virtus über der getöteten Chimaira. Die Mittelszene des Sarkophagkastens mit der erlegten Chimaira, dem siegreichen Bellerophon und Virtus ist eine Wiederholung der r. Deckelszene. L. vom Hauptbild Bellerophon mit Pegasos an der Quelle; r. Auszug des von Virtus angeführten Bellerophon aus einem Königshof. Es ist schwierig zu sagen, ob der Hof von I. in Lykien oder der Palasteingang des Proitos gemeint ist, vor dem die liebeskranke Stheneboia sitzt, ähnlich wie → Phaidra auf den → Hippolytos-Sarkophagen, ebenfalls mit einer Amme verbunden. Für Aymard ist das Gebäude im Hintergrund ein Poseidontempel und die Szene davor spielt in Korinth. Darmon 172-173 verbindet die Darstellung vor dem Tempel mit der lykischen Lokalsage bei Plut., in der die lykischen Frauen sich Bellerophon anbieten, damit er von seinem Vorhaben, die Stadt durch eine Überschwemmung zu zerstören, abläßt. Er bezeichnet die Kniende - sonst als kupplerische Amme der Stheneboia gedeutet - als sich anbietende Lykierin. Auf dem l. Deckelbild hingegen wird die Zweiergruppe von I. und seiner Tochter meist als Proitos und Stheneboia erklärt. Stheneboia wird jedoch niemals mit Proitos so eng verbunden in einer Zweiergruppe dargestellt. Die Deckelszenen scheinen in Lykien zu spielen. In der Mitte des Sarkophagkastens ist Bellerophon als Triumphator aufgefaßt, gerahmt von den Episoden in Griechenland.

D. Iobates bei der Hochzeit von Philonoe und Bellerophon (15 unsicher)

15. Bronzeciste, praenestinisch. London, BM 84.6-14.33 (640). Aus Palestrina. - Walters, BMBronzes 104-105 Nr. 640; Schauenburg 1, 87 Abb. 29; Yalouris 58; Foerst, G., Die Gravierung der praenestischen Cisten (1978) 133-134 Taf. 26c. d. 27a-d Nr. 30; CPI 1, 119-120 Nr. 32 Taf. 145-147; Darmon, a. O. 14, 173-175 Taf. 68; vgl. Rez. Donderer, M., Gnomon 1983, 69-73. - Spätes 4. Jh. v. Chr. - Im Zentrum des umlaufenden Frieses befindet sich eine Gruppe von drei Figuren, in der nur Bellerophon mit Pegasos am Zügel eindeutig zu benennen ist. Sein Pendant, ein bärtiger, älterer Krieger mit Panzer, Beinschienen, Schild und pilosartigem, ziseliertem Helm, nimmt gerade sein Schwert ab und blickt sich um zu einer Frau mit Spendekanne und Phiale in den Händen (Venus nach Darmon); zwischen beiden fliegt ein Vogel (Taube?). Darmon identifiziert den Krieger mit I., Schauenburg mit Proitos. Zwischen dem Krieger und Bellerophon steht eine Frau mit Diadem. Sie berührt mit ihrer l. Hand hinter dem Speer Bellerophons Arm. Neben ihrem Kopf erscheint eine Biene. R. von Pegasos ein junger Krieger in voller Rüstung, auf den eine geflügelte Frau mit Kanne und Phiale (Victoria?) zuschreitet. Darmon postuliert im Zusammenhang mit dem Mosaik 16 für die Mittelgruppe: Philonoe, umgeben von ihrem Vater I. und dem siegreichen Bellerophon, dem sie als Lohn für seine Taten versprochen ist.

16.* Mosaik. Nabeul (Neapolis, Tunesien), Maison des Nymphes, Grabungsmagazin. – Darmon, a. O. 14, 125–129. 163–175 Nr. 32 Taf. 62, 1; 66. 87–88. 91 und farbiges Frontispiz. – Durch Münzfunde auf die Zeit nach 317 n. Chr. datiert. – Hochzeit von Bellerophon und Philonoe im Beisein des I. Obwohl es bis heute keine eindeutig nachgewiesene Darstellung dieser Szene gibt, kann die Interpretation als gesichert gelten, weil neben Bellerophon Reste des Pegasos erhalten sind. I. ist bärtig und mit Königsbinde im Haar dargestellt. Er trägt einen segmentartigen Clavus auf der Brust. Er steht (Beine zerstört) zwischen dem Brautpaar und führt dem Bellerophon die in einen goldenen Mantel gehüllte Philonoe zu. Das Brautpaar ist im Begriff, sich die Hände zu reichen. Philonoe wird von zwei Frauen geleitet, die über ihren Kopf einen goldenen Kranz mit Stirngemme halten, wie bei der Hochzeit einer Kaiserin am byzantinischen Hof.

E. König Iobates empfängt Geschenke der Solymer

DEUTUNG UNSICHER

17. (= Chryses I 13). Mosaik. Nabeul (Neapolis, Tunesien), Maison des Nymphes, Grabungsmagazin. – García y Bellido, A., Enciclopedia clásica I (1972) 797 Abb. 1. 358 s. v. «Arte Romano 2»; Darmon, a. O. 14, 121–125 Nr. 31 Taf. 62, 1; 85. 86. 90. – 2. Viertel 4. Jh. n. Chr. – I. thronend, mit hellenistischer Königsbinde und Panzer, empfängt Geschenke. Hinter ihm bewaffnete Krieger mit «lykischen» Helmen. Zu seinen Füßen liegt ein Lorbeerkrantz. Vor I. kniet ein würdiger alter Togatus mit einer infula (Wollbinde), in dem García y Bellido den Apollonpriester → Chryses vor Agamemnon sieht. Darmon deutet den Thronenden im Panzer als I., dem die von Bellerophon unterworfenen Solymer Geschenke bringen, weil im gleichen Gebäudekomplex auf der Langseite ein Mosaik mit Bellerophon, der Pegasos an der Quelle trinkt, zu finden ist, und im Nebenraum desselben Traktes das Mosaik 16 mit der Hochzeit von Bellerophon und Philonoe.

KOMMENTAR

Der Schauplatz des Chimairakampfes ist schon bei Hom. in Lykien angesiedelt. Die frühesten Darstellungen gehen ins 7. Jh. v. Chr. zurück (→ Chimaira und → Pegasos). Zuschauer treten erst im 6. Jh. v. Chr. auf, und unter diesen König I. erst seit dem späten 5. Jh. v. Chr. durch die Tiara besonders gekennzeichnet – vermutlich unter dem Einfluß der Tragödie. Während in den Eur.-Dramen die Gestalt der Sthenobolia im Vordergrund stand, spielte der fremdländische König I. in der gleichnamigen Tragödie des Soph. die Hauptrolle. Man darf vermuten, daß das neue Interesse an dieser Sagengestalt in der apul. Vasenmalerei des 4. Jh. v. Chr. mit dem verlorenen Soph.-Drama zusammenhängt. Auf 1 ist Poseidon (der göttliche Vater des Bellerophon) als einziger Gott bei der Ankunft des Bellerophon am Palast des I. in Lykien anwesend (vgl. auch den Dreizack bei Bellerophon auf 3). Vielleicht spielte Poseidon auch in der Tragödie eine prominente Rolle, indem er als deus ex machina die Geschichte der Protagonisten mitbestimmte: des Königs I., seiner Tochter Philonoe und des Bellerophon. Die Grabnaiskoi auf 2 und 13 mit dem auf Kline und Thron sitzenden König lassen darauf schließen, daß der König am Schluß des Bühnenstückes starb (vgl. → Achilleus 794*; → Alkestis 5*). Die Beschränkung und Konzentration der Vasenmaler von 1 und 2 auf zwei Personen (zwei Schauspieler) im Zentrum der Komposition unterstützen die Hypothese, in 1 und 2 die Nachwirkung eines Bühnenwerkes zu erkennen. Auf beinahe allen Vasenbildern trägt I. die aus Ärmelgewand, Chiton und Himation bestehende Theatertracht. Er ist als weißhaariger Greis (1. 2. 6. 11), mit Vogelzepter (1–3) und Tiara (1–8. 11–13) charakterisiert. Beim Chimairakampf sitzt I. als Zuschauer in der freien Landschaft (11). Als Repräsentant seines Reiches thront er in seinem Palast, der durch einen Naiskos, dessen Säulenzahl variiert (2. 13), oder nur durch eine Kline (1) oder einem Thron mit oder ohne Lehne (3. 4. 7. 8) angedeutet wird. Das Klinkenmotiv im Naiskos ist vor allem für Hades (→ Hades 122. 124–126; → Herakleida 13. 15), aber auch bei mythologischen Figuren nachweisbar, die auf der Bühne sterben (→ Achilleus 794*; → Alkestis 5*; → Althaia 4*). Die aufgehängten Waffen und Räder an der Rückwand des Naiskos oder zu Häupten von I. sind im 4. Jh. v. Chr. allgemeine heroisierende Bildchiffren. Sie kommen aber besonders häufig im Palast des Hades vor (→ Danaides 18*; → Hades 132. 134). Seine Tochter Philonoe oder Kasandra, die neben I. auf den apulischen Vasen (1–4. 6. 10–13) erscheint, ist dem König auf 2 und 13 in einer Zweifigurgruppe wie auf einem Grabrelief gegenübergestellt. Bei 2 wendet sie sich in einem Redegestus an den greisen I., der sich, über ihre Botschaft bekümmert, an sein Haupt greift (vgl. die Gebärde von Troilos, → Helene 187*). Vielleicht hat die Tochter, ähnlich wie ihre tro-janische Namensschwester ihrem Vater, dem alten König I., vorausgesagt, daß der gerade ankommende Gast Bellerophon das Ende seiner Herrschaft bedeutet. Der Name Kasandra (s. lit. Quellen) läßt möglicherweise Aufschlüsse über den Inhalt des Dramas und die Funktion von Philonoe/Kasandra im Handlungsablauf der zugrundeliegenden Tragödie zu. Sie hat den aus der Luft kommenden Fremdling offenbar von Anfang an unterstützt. Ihre Gesten auf 1. 2. 6. 11 würden zu dieser Hypothese passen. Die Lykier unterhalb des Palastes von 2 vollführen dieselbe Gebärde wie ihr König (Chor?). Die dekorativen Hiebschwärter der lykischen Palastwachen auf 4 und 12 wirken wie dem Theater entlehene Requisiten, so daß man vermuten kann, daß der Chor aus lykischen Kriegern bestand. Auf 3 und 4 ist der König im Augenblick der Briefübergabe, also einem späteren Moment, wiedergegeben. Auf 6–8 liest I. den Brief, während auf 6 Philonoe und Bellerophon Blicke austauschen. Schwierig zu interpretieren ist 5, weil Bellerophon zwar am Hofe ankommend von I. begrüßt wird, aber ohne Brief auftritt. Es kann also auch der Moment nach der Bezwingung der Chimaira gemeint sein. Daß auf 9 der immer als I. gedutete König keine Tiara trägt, kann mit dem frühen Entstehungsdatum der Vase zusammenhängen. Allerdings ist I. auf der gleichzeitigen Vase 5 schon mit der Tiara dargestellt. Nach 11, 12 und 13 zu urteilen, gab es eine Version des Chimairakampfes, in der Bellerophon von der einheimischen lykischen Bevölkerung unterstützt wurde (vgl. auch → Pegasos).

Die spätapul. Vasenmaler von 12 und 13 verteilen die Handlung der Bellerophonsage auf verschiedene Teile des Bildträgers. I. sitzt im Zentrum der Komposition auf dem Bauch des Gefäßes und bildet mit seiner bräutlich verschleierte Tochter eine Zweifigurgruppe, was auf 13 in der Naiskosszene noch deutlicher zum Ausdruck kommt. Der Kampf mit der Chimaira findet über ihm, in einer Art Entrückungsszene auf dem Halsbild zwischen Ranken statt, an der Stelle, wo auf 12 Aphrodite im Blätterkelch zwischen Erosen als Göttin des Werdens und Vergehens erscheint, eine Szene, die man wohl sepulkral interpretieren darf. Diese Interpretation gilt nach Schauenburg auch für das Halsbild mit Bellerophon zwischen den Ranken, der auf 13 als Gleichnis für Unsterblichkeit erscheint. Welche Rolle spielt dann I. im Naiskos darunter? Nach Schauenburg setzen die Vasenbilder mit Gottheiten und Heroen im Naiskos einen engen Bezug zu den beigesetzten Verstorbenen voraus, in deren Grab die Vasen standen. Sie bringen die Hoffnung auf Privatapotheose zum Ausdruck und lassen sich als Vorläufer der kaiserzeitlichen Sepulkralsymbolik verstehen. Auf dem Kasten des röm. Sarkophages 14 wird die Virtus des Verstorbenen gefeiert, der sich mit der Gestalt des triumphierenden Bellerophon identifiziert. Die beiden Randszenen bilden nur noch einen mythischen Rahmen für den siegreichen Helden, mit dem sich der Auftraggeber identifiziert. Dabei ist es dann unwichtig geworden, ob die r. Palastszene in Griechenland bei Proitos oder in Lykien am Hof des I. spielt. Ein Vergleich zwischen dem röm. Sarkophag 14 und dem Mosaik 16 zeigt die Variationsbreite der kaiserzeitlichen Kunst. Anscheinend fühlte sich der Mosaizist von 16 nicht mehr an bestimmte Bildtypen gebunden, da er den Mythos des Bellerophon mit der kaiserlichen Ikonographie verknüpft. – Die praenestinische Ciste 15 überliefert (wenn Darmons Deutung richtig ist) eine völlig neue Variante, die König I. als Krieger darstellt, was auf dem röm. Mosaik 17 wiederkehrt. Das Mosaik 16 bezieht sich auf das eheliche Glück im Diesseits, das I. als Vater zwischen Philonoe und Bellerophon stiftet. Hier ist nicht ein mythologisches Gleichnis des Glücks gemeint, sondern eher das Glück des Besitzers und Auftraggebers der Nymphaeum Domus in seiner mythologischen Verkleidung.

GRATIA BERGER-DOER

IODAMA

(Ἰοδάμα) Fille d'Itonos et nièce d'Amphiktyon. Prêtresse d'Athéna Itonia à Coronée en Béotie, où elle était l'objet d'un culte. Aimée de → Zeus, I. lui donna une fille, → Thebe.

SOURCES LITTÉRAIRES: Paus. 9, 34, 2 rapporte qu'I. fut, de nuit, surprise dans le sanctuaire d'Athéna Itonia par la déesse qui lui apparut et dont le gorgonéion la pétrifia. Dans le temple, un autel lui était consacré, sur lequel devait être entretenu en permanence un feu. Selon Simonides, FGrH 8 F 1, I. aurait été la sœur d'→ Athena qui l'aurait tuée par jalousie pendant un exercice guerrier. Sa fille Thébé épousa Ogygos, d'où le nom d'Ogygia donné à la ville de Thèbes (Lykos, FGrH 380 F 2).

BIBLIOGRAPHIE: Conticello, B., EAA IV (1961) 172 s. v. «Iodama»; Gunning, J., RE IX 2 (1916) 1839–1841 s. v. «Iodama»; Stoll, H. W., ML II 1 (1890–94) 283 s. v. «Iodama».

CATALOGUE

INTERPRÉTATION INCERTAINE

I. Amphore att. f. r. Londres, BM E 299. De Nola. – ARV² 650, 1: p. de Nikon; CVA 5 pl. 52, 2b; Wade-Gery, H. T., JHS 53, 1933, 100 fig. 4; Hausmann, U., dans Charites, Festschr. E. Langlotz (1957) 148; Boardman, ARV 195 fig. 366. – 480–470 av. J.-C. – B: une jeune femme vêtue d'un péplos à apotypygmata décoré de deux bandes verticales s'enfuit vers la dr. en faisant des gestes de frayeur. Elle se retourne vers Athéna (face A) qui la poursuit en brandissant une lance dans la main dr. et un aphlaston dans la g.: I. effrayée par Athéna Itonia dans le sanctuaire de Coronée, ou personnification de l'Asie (→ Asia I) mise en fuite par les Athéniens lors des guerres médiques?

COMMENTAIRE

Deux hypothèses ont donc été avancées à propos de la scène de l'amphore du peintre de Nikon 1. En faveur de l'identification avec I.: la scène est dans son ensemble conforme à la légende et la femme poursuivie porte le même collier que la déesse. Par contre, il faut noter l'absence de toute indication du lieu de l'action et surtout du gorgonéion sur l'égide d'Athéna, un élément pourtant essentiel dans le déroulement du mythe.

En faveur de l'identification avec l'Asie: l'aphlaston que brandit Athéna est certainement un trophée oriental, la tête coiffée d'un bonnet pointu recourbé étant celle d'une Amazone ou d'un Perse; ensuite, la jeune femme porte un péplos décoré de deux rayures (Hausmann). Nous sommes donc vraisemblablement en présence d'une scène évoquant la victoire de Salamine.

Dans un contexte plus général, peut-être faut-il considérer le gorgonéion figuré sur les monnaies de Coronée (BMC Central Greece 46 n° 6-8 pl. 7) non seulement comme un rappel du culte d'Athéna Itonia dans la cité, mais aussi comme une allusion à la légende d'I. changée en pierre. JEAN-ROBERT GISLER (Ἰοκάστη, Iocasta, in den ältesten Quellen auch Ἐυκαστή) Tochter des Menoikeus, Schwester des → Kreon, Frau des → Laios, und durch ihn Mutter und später Frau des → Oidipous, nach der gängigsten Version Mutter seiner Kinder → Eteokles, → Polyneikes, → Antigone und → Ismene.

IOKASTE

In der seit den Tragikern üblichen Version zeugt Laios trotz des Orakels, das er von Apollon in Delphi empfangen hat, mit I. den Oidipous und läßt das Kind aussetzen. Als Oidipous nach der Tötung des Vaters und der Lösung des Rätsels der Sphinx in Theben die Herrschaft erlangt, heiratet er I. und zeugt mit ihr die vier bekannten Kinder. Nach der Entdeckung des Inzests tötet sich I. nach der einen Version sofort, nach der andern erlebt sie noch den Streit zwischen ihren Söhnen und begeht erst, nachdem die beiden sich gegenseitig getötet haben, auf dem Schlachtfeld Selbstmord.

LITERARISCHE QUELLEN: Im Epos scheint I. noch nicht die Mutter der vier Oidipous-Kinder gewesen zu sein. Hom. Od. 11, 271-280 war Epikaste Mutter und Frau des Oidipous und erhängte sich nach der Entdeckung des Inzests, während Oidipous, verfolgt von den Rachegeistern der Mutter, weiterlebte. Da die Götter den Frevel «ἄφρα» (274) den Menschen offenbaren, kann Epikaste in Homers Vorstellung nicht die Mutter von vier Kindern gewesen sein. Diesen Schluß zieht schon Paus. 9, 5, 10-11, und er fügt hinzu, daß in der Oidipodia Euryganeia, die Tochter des Hyperphas, die Mutter von Oidipous' Kindern gewesen sei. Sie sei auch in dem Fresko des Onasias in Plataiai beim Tod ihrer Söhne dargestellt (→ Eteokles 6) – es muß also dort Namensbeischriften gegeben haben. Ausführlicher erzählt Phérékydes, daß I. zwei Kinder, Phrastor und Laonytos, gehabt habe, die im Krieg mit den Mínyern umgekommen seien. Die vier bekannten Kinder stammen von Euryganeia, der Schwester der I., der zweiten Frau des Oidipous, der nach ihr auch noch Astymedousa heiratete (FGH 3 F 95). Auch bei Peisandros heiratet Oidipous nach dem Tod der I. und seiner Blendung Euryganeia, von der die vier Kinder stammen (FGH 16 F 10). Eine noch kompliziertere Version wird von Epimenides von Kreta, FGH 457 F 13, angedeutet (Diskussion dieser Quellen Daly 773-775; Höfer 726-727). Wie die Mutter hieß, die in dem Stesichoros zugeschriebenen Papyrus in Lille (Parsons, P. J., ZPE 26, 1977, 7-36; Bremer 128-172) den Streit der Söhne zu schlichten sucht, geht aus dem Text nicht hervor.

Erst bei den Tragikern wird I. (zu Epikaste als älterer Form vgl. auch Schol. Eur. Phoen. 12) zur einzigen Frau des Oidipous und Mutter seiner Kinder (Aischyl. Septem 926-936). Über die Rolle der I. in der thebanischen Trilogie des Aischylos ist nichts Näheres bekannt; jedenfalls ist sie in den Septem nicht mehr am Leben. Auch bei Sophokles tötet sie sich nach der Aufdeckung des Inzests (Soph. Oid. 1. 1235-1264). Nur in der Sophoklestragödie wird I. während ihrer Ehe mit Oidipous und ihr Verhalten bei der Aufdeckung seiner Herkunft geschildert, ihre Skepsis gegenüber Orakeln und ihre Versuche, Oidipous von der Entdeckung dessen, was sie schon ahnt oder weiß, fernzuhalten. Aus den wenigen erhaltenen Fragmenten des euripideischen Oidipous ist nur zu entnehmen, daß I. treu zu ihm hielt (Diskussion der Fragmente: Webster, T. B. L., The Tragedies of Euripides [1967] 241-246); in dem Sophokles nachgebildeten Oedipus-Drama des Seneca hat I. wenig Auftritte vor der Szene, in der sie nach einem kurzen Gespräch mit Oedipus, der sich gerade geblendet hat, auf offener Bühne sich mit dem Schwert durchbohrt, mit dem schon Oedipus den Laios getötet hatte (1004-1041).

Häufiger in der erhaltenen antiken Literatur wird I. als alte, leidgebeugte Mutter gezeigt, die die Aufdeckung ihres Verhältnisses zu Oidipous überlebt hat und nun den tödlichen Streit des Eteokles und Polyneikes, die ja zugleich ihre Söhne und ihre Enkel sind, miterleben muß. Sie versucht, meist unterstützt von Antigone, vergeblich zu vermitteln und begeht schließlich bei den Leichen der beiden Selbstmord. Nach dem Papyrusfragment in Lille sind es vor allem die Phoenissen des Euripides, die I. in der Rolle der leidgeprüften Mutter zeigen, die verzweifelt versucht, das Verhängnis aufzuhalten. I. spricht hier den Prolog, in dem sie die Vorgeschichte erzählt und zum Schluß erwähnt, daß sie ein Gespräch zwischen Eteokles und Polyneikes vermittelt hat (1-83). Polyneikes kommt, was Anlaß zu einer langen, bewegten Wiedersehensszene gibt (301-442); im folgenden Streitgespräch der Söhne wendet I. vergeblich alle Überredungskünste auf (452-468. 528-585). Gegen Ende des Stücks eilt sie mit Antigone aufs Schlachtfeld, um wenigstens den Zweikampf der Söhne zu verhindern (1264-1282). Sie kommt zu spät, erlebt den Tod beider und tötet sich mit dem Schwert des Eteokles, das sie aus der Leiche des Polyneikes gerissen hat (1427-1459).

Durch die Tragödien des 5. Jh. sind die wesentlichen Ereignisse im Leben der I. mitsamt ihren Varianten festgelegt. Die späteren Quellen überliefern ihren Lebenslauf in verschiedenen Kombinationen, ohne wesentlich Neues hinzuzufügen. So folgt z. B. Apollod. (bibl. 3 [48-56] 5, 7-9) im wesentlichen der Version des Sophokles, erwähnt allerdings auch den Namen Epikaste und Euryganeia; bei Hyg. fab. 243, 7 tötet sich I. wegen des Todes ihrer Söhne. In den Phoenissen des Seneca versucht sie in einer langen Szene auf dem Schlachtfeld, die Brüder umzustimmen (363-664, wo der Text abbricht). In der ausführlichsten nachklassischen Schilderung ihrer letzten Lebenszeit, in der Thebais des Statius, sucht I. zuerst Polyneikes im Lager vor den Toren Thebens auf, um ihn zum Abzug zu überreden (7, 470-614), gegen Ende der Schlacht versucht sie Eteokles vom Zweikampf mit dem Bruder abzuhalten (11, 315-353); als sie erfährt, daß der Kampf begonnen hat, ersticht sie sich im Palast mit dem Schwert (11, 642-647).

BIBLIOGRAPHIE: Bethe, E., RE IX 2 (1916) 1841-1842 s. v. «Iokaste»; Conticello, B., EAA IV (1961) 171 s. v. «Iocasta»; v. Freytag gen. Lörringhoff, B., Das Giebelrelief von Telamon und seine Stellung innerhalb der Ikonographie der Sieben gegen Theben, RM Erg.-H. 27 (1986) 55-64; Robert, C., Oidipus I (1915) 298-303. 308-320. 434-436; Stoll, H. W., ML II 1 (1890-94) 284-285 s. v. «Iokaste 1».

Zu den literarischen Quellen sind auch die Oidipous-Artikel der genannten Lexika hinzuzuziehen, vor allem Daly, L. W., RE XVII 2 (1937) 2103-2117 und RE Suppl. VII (1940) 769-786; Höfer, O., ML III 1 (1897-1902) 700-746; s. auch Bremer, J. M./van Erp Taalman Kip, A. M./Slings, S. R., Some Recently Found Greek Poems (Mnemosyne Suppl. 99, 1987) F: Stesichoros, The «Lille Papyrus» 164-172.

KATALOG

A. Einzeldarstellungen und Bilder aus unbekanntem Zusammenhang

1. Bronzestatue der sterbenden I. von Silanion (4. Jh. v. Chr.), nicht erhalten. – Plut. quomodo adul. 18c; quaest. conv. 674a (= Overbeck, SQ Nr. 1353-1354). Nach quaest. conv. 674a hatte Silanion die Todesblässe der Sterbenden angedeutet, indem er für das Gesicht der Bronze Silber beimischte. Identifizierungsversuche: a) Ein von Winter, F., Jdl 5, 1890, 166-167 Anm. 77 erwähnt Kopf in Subiaco, Santa Scolastica, ist bis heute nicht publiziert. Geschlossene Augen dürften als Identifikationskriterium nicht ausreichen. b) Ein Fragment eines Marmorkopfes mit geschlossenen Augen und von einer Binde zusammengehaltenem Haar in Budapest, Mus. Beaux-Arts (Hekler, A., Die Antiken in Budapest I: Die Skulpturen [1929] 28 Nr. 18) wurde von Schmidt, E., Jdl 47, 1932, 286-290 Abb. 37-39 als I. gedeutet. Die für eine Frau ungewöhnliche Frisur mit den vom Oberkopf zur Seite und nach vorn gekämmten, relativ kurzen Haaren spricht jedoch eher gegen eine Deutung auf I. Die etwas wirre Haarpartie über der Stirn muß nicht als im Schmerz zerwühltes Haar interpretiert werden, sondern könnte bei einer liegenden, schlafenden Figur allein durch die Kopfhaltung bedingt sein.

2. Stoffdecke mit aufgemaltem Dekor. Leningrad, Ermitage S Br VI.16. Aus einem Kriegergrab (6. Kurgan «der Sieben Brüder») bei Temrjuk im Kuban-Gebiet. – Stephani, L., CRPetersb 1878/79, 126 Taf. 4; Gerziger, D., AntK 18, 1975, 52. – 4. Jh. v. Chr. – Unterhalb einer Efeuranke Reste von Zweigen und die Inschrift IOKAETH. Von der Darstellung nichts erhalten, eventuell zum selben Tuch gehörig Reste zweier in entgegengesetzte Richtungen laufender Frauen.

UNSICHER

3. Terrakottamaske. Lipari, Mus. Eoliano 2301 G. Aus Lipari, Contrada Diana Grab 406. – Webster, T. B. L., in: Bernabò Brea, L./Cavalier, M., Meligunis-Lipara II (1965) 145. 299 Nr. A 9 Taf. 146, 3. 4; Webster, MTSP^a 124. 150 ST 5; Bernabò Brea, L., Menandro e il teatro greco nelle terracotte liparesi (1981) 43 A 18 Abb. 30 Taf. 6, 4. – Mitte 4. Jh. v. Chr. – Frauenkopf mit merkwürdig schlaffen und zugleich wie angewachsen wirkenden Zügen und einem breiten, im Vergleich mit anderen Masken nicht sehr weit geöffneten Mund. Diese ungewöhnlichen Züge führten in Verbindung mit der im selben Grab gefundenen Maske eines blinden (?) Mannes (Bernabò Brea/Cavalier a. O. 299 Nr. A 2 Taf. 146, 1. 2; Webster, MTSP^a 150 ST 5; Bernabò Brea a. O. 35 A 4 Abb. 12 Taf. 6, 3) zur Deutung auf Oidipous und die sterbende I.

B. Iokaste und Oidipous

1. Bei der Lösung des Rätsels der Sphinx

4. Kelchkrater, apul. rf. Tarent, Mus. Naz. 106581. Aus Tarent. – RVAp I 38, 19: Kreis des Malers der Dionysosgeburt; Simon, E., Das Satyrspiel «Sphinx» des Aischylos (1981) 28 Anm. 91 Taf. 14; Moret, J.-M., Oedipe, la Sphinx et les Thébains (1984) 178 Nr. 106 Taf. 66, 1. – 1. Viertel 4. Jh. v. Chr. – L. von Oidipous und der Sphinx verschiedene Personen, u. a. Kreon, Teiresias?, hinter ihm eine Frau, I.?

2. Bei der Aufdeckung der Frevel

5. (= Antigone 1* mit Lit.) Kelchkrater, sizil. rf. Syrakus, Mus. Reg. 66557. Aus Syrakus. – LCS Suppl. 1, 105, 98a: Capodarso-Maler; Trendall/Webster, Illustrations III 2, 8. – 3. Viertel 4. Jh. v. Chr. – Szene aus einer Oidipous-Tragödie (Soph. Oid. 1. 924-1072?): I., in Chiton und Mantel gehüllt, beide Hände in ahnungsvoller Angst zum Gesicht erhebend, blickt auf Oidipous, zu dem ein greiser Bote (aus Korinth?) spricht.

Iokaste II

3. Bei der Blendung des Oidipous

6.* Etr. Alabasterurne. Florenz, Mus. Arch. 5707. Aus Volterra. – Brunn/Körte, Relievi II 1 21–22 Taf. 7, 1; Robert 307–310 Abb. 48; Krauskopf, ThebSag 52–53. 97 Öd 39; Pairault, F.-H., Recherches sur quelques séries d'urnes de Volterra à représentations mythologiques (1972) 64. 66 Taf. 21: atelier des «rosettes» et «palmettes»; Cristofani, M., in Edipo. Il teatro greco e la cultura europea. Atti del Conv. Int. Urbino 15.–19.11.1982, 197 Abb. 12. – 3. Drittel 2. Jh. v. Chr. – In der Bildmitte der am Boden kniende Oidipous, der von drei Dienern festgehalten und geblendet wird, I. Kreon und eine sitzende Frau mit Diadem (eher Eurydike als → Periboia). Von r. stürzt mit offenen Haaren und ausgestreckten Armen I. auf die Mittelgruppe zu, vor ihr ihre beiden kleinen Söhne.

4. Nach der Blendung

7. Fresko, Pompeji III 4, 2 (Casa del Moralista oder di C. Arrius Crescens = T. Arrius Polites). – Spinazzola, Pompeii II 745–751 Abb. 730; Schefold, WP 58; Croisille, J.-M., Poésie et art figuré de Néron aux Flaviens, Coll. Latomus 179 (1982) 164–166. – «Vespasianischer 3. Stil» (Schefold). – Theaterszene: der geblendete Oedipus (nur Oberkörper erhalten) wendet sich mit einer pathetischen Geste einer Frau, I., zu, die sich erschreckt abwendet. Von ihr sind nur die Maske (mit schmerz erfülltem Ausdruck) und die l. Schulter erhalten.

C. Iokaste in Szenen der «Sieben gegen Theben»

1. Vermittlungsversuche

a) Iokaste an einem der Tore Thebens

8. (= Antigone 6* mit Lit.; weitere Szenen: → Antigone 9, → Eteokles 9) Homerischer Becher. London, BM G 104; Robert 451–452 Abb. 58; Sinn, Becher 107 MB 45 Taf. 18, 4. – Spätes 3./1. Drittel 2. Jh. v. Chr. – I. eilt hinter einem Boten (Angelos) her aufs Schlachtfeld, auf dem die Brüder bereits kämpfen. Sie wendet sich dabei im Lauf um zu Antigone, die noch etwas zögernd im Stadttor steht.

9. (= Eteokles 3 mit Lit.; weitere Szenen: → Amphiaros 34, → Eteokles 41) Fresko, Pompeji, Mus.

Aus Regio VII 6, 28. – Schefold, WP 192; Croisille, a. O. 7, 173–174. – 3. Stil, 1. Hälfte 1. Jh. n. Chr. – I., mit aufgelösten Haaren, versucht den aus dem Tor reitenden Eteokles festzuhalten.

b) Iokaste zwischen den bewaffneten Brüdern

10. Etr. hellenistische Urnen mit einer oder zwei Frauen (I. und Antigone), die die Brüder zurückzuhalten versuchen: → Eteokles 13*. 14*.

11.* (= Antigone 5* mit Lit., = Eteokles 36* mit Lit.; weitere Szenen: → Eteokles 42, → Antigone 11, → Amphiaros 46, → Kapaneus 17) Sarkophag, röm. Rom, Villa Doria Pamphilj. – RömSark 186. 264 Abb. 202; Croisille, a. O. 7, 172–174. – Ende 2. Jh. n. Chr. – Am l. Bildrand I. als alte Frau mit aufgelösten Haaren und entblößten Brüsten zwischen den Brüdern kniend. Daß auch Oidipous und Antigone anwesend sind und Eteokles von einem Krieger mit gezücktem Schwert begleitet wird, macht wahrscheinlich, daß hier nicht der Augenblick unmittelbar vor dem – weiter r. dargestellten – Zweikampf, sondern eine vorhergehende Begegnung, vielleicht in Theben, gemeint ist.

12. (= Eteokles 37* mit Lit.) Aschenurne, röm. Ehem. Vigna Pacca. Aus Ostia. – Croisille, a. O. 7, 172–174; Sinn, F., Stadtrömische Marmorurnen (1987) 244 Nr. 629 Taf. 92a. – 3. Viertel 2. Jh. n. Chr. – Die drei Hauptfiguren von 11 um die Inschrifttafel der Urne gruppiert.

13. (= Eris 12 mit Lit., = Eteokles 39a*) Grabstele. Sopron (Ödenburg), Liszt Ferenc Mus., Lapidarium 55.200.2. Aus Walbersdorf. – Krüger, M. L., CSIR Österreich I/5 (1974) 13–14 Nr. 9 Taf. 4. – 1. Jh. n. Chr. – I., im Typus von 11–12, jedoch stehend, ihre ausgestreckten Arme berühren deshalb die Köpfe der beiden Krieger. Zur Deutung → Eteokles 39a.

14. (= Eteokles 38* mit Lit.) Tonformen. Ostia, Mus. Ostiense 3771–3783. – Frühes 3. Jh. n. Chr. – Eine stehende Frau, I. oder Antigone, zwischen den Kriegern.

2. Iokaste bei den sterbenden Brüdern

a) Klagend, Deutung auf Iokaste oder Antigone möglich

15. (= Eteokles 27*. 28*. 31 mit Lit.) Etr. Aschenurnen. – 2. – Anfang 1. Jh. v. Chr. – Hinter der Mittelgruppe des Oidipous und seiner sterbenden

KOMMENTAR

Söhne eine Frau mit klagend erhobenen Armen und aufgelösten Haaren. Auf der Urne im Palazzo Antinori-Aldobrandini (v. Freytag 281 U 37 Taf. 57, 2) und dem Fragment Volterra 465 (a. O. U 38) erscheint daneben eine zweite Frau, die sich mit einer Hand an den Kopf faßt, im selben Schema die einzelne Frau auf der chiusin. Urne → Eteokles 31.

16. (= Eteokles 26 mit Lit.; weitere Szenen: → Adrast 16, → Amphiaros 45, → Kapaneus 21) Etruskischer Terrakotta-Giebel (Platte K). Florenz, Mus. Arch. 9798. Aus Talamone. – Zur Deutung der Frau: v. Freytag 32–33; Cristofani, a. O. 6, 196; Gostoli, A., Annali del Seminario di Studi del Mondo Classico, Istituto Universitario Orientale Napoli, Sezione di Archeologia e Storia Antica 5, 1983, 69–71. – 2. Viertel 2. Jh. v. Chr. – Zu dem linken, noch lebenden Bruder beugt sich eine Frau in Chiton und noch vom eiligen Lauf zurückwehendem Mantel herab. Mit der Rechten stützt sie den Zurücksinkenden, der l. Arm, der nur im Schultergelenk erhalten ist, war erhoben.

b) Der Selbstmord der Iokaste

17.* (= Antigone 7* mit Lit., = Eteokles 10 mit Lit.) Homerischer Becher. Halle, Univ. – Spätes 3./1. Drittel 2. Jh. v. Chr. – Zu Füßen des Polyneikes, der die Hand nach ihr ausstreckt, kniet I., sich das Schwert in die Brust stoßend, hinter den Brüdern Antigone mit klagend erhobenen Armen.

18. (= Eteokles 43* mit Lit.) Tonlampe, röm. Köln, Röm.-Germ. Mus. Wo 1375. – 1. Hälfte 1. Jh. n. Chr. – I. in die Knie brechend, mit ausgestrecktem l. Arm. Mit der Rechten stößt sie sich wie auf 17 das Schwert in die Brust. Über ihr die Inschrift: PHOENISSA.

DEUTUNG NICHT GANZ GESICHERT

19. (= Erinys 92, = Eteokles 2/19 mit Lit.) Nenfrosarkophag, etr. Vatikan, Mus. Greg. Etr. 14561. – 2. Hälfte 4. Jh. v. Chr. – Am l. Bildrand eine nackte, auf einem Felsen sitzende Frau. Sie hat den r. Arm erhoben und hält in der Hand einen Zipfel eines Gewands. Neben ihr eine Dämonin mit Fackel, die auf den von einem Helfer geführten Oidipous zuläuft. R. davon die Brudermordgruppe.

20. (= Eteokles 20* mit Lit.) Nenfrosarkophag, etr. London, BM D 21. – 3. Drittel 4. Jh. v. Chr. – Am r. Bildrand eine auf dem Boden kniende Frau in Chiton und Mantel, die von einem Helfer gestützt wird. Sie hat den r. Arm erhoben, zieht mit der Hand den Mantel hoch und hält vielleicht noch einen Gegenstand (Dolch?) in der Faust. L. von ihr der von einem Helfer geführte Oidipous, dann die Brudermordgruppe.

DEUTUNG UNWAHRSCHEINLICH

21. Tabula Iliaca «Borgia». Neapel, Mus. Naz. 2408. – Sardurska, Tables 60–61 Taf. 11, 10; v. Freytag 59 (mit Argumenten gegen die Deutung der r. Szene auf I.).

In dem ältesten uns überlieferten Bild, das die Mutter der Oidipous-Söhne beim tödlichen Zweikampf ihrer Kinder zeigt, dem Fresko des Onasias in Plataiai (→ Eteokles 6), war nicht I., sondern Euryganeia dargestellt. Irgendein Nachklang dieser Szene, die sich ja unverändert auf I. hätte übertragen lassen, ist in den wenigen uns erhaltenen Denkmälern (11–19) nicht zu fassen. Paus. beschreibt Euryganeia als «καταφύγη», was «verzweifelt, niedergeschlagen», aber auch «mit niedergeschlagenen Augen» heißt und keinesfalls zu den leidenschaftlichen Gefühlsausbrüchen passen würde, die für die späteren I.-Bilder (vor allem die römischen: 11–13, 18) typisch sind. Dagegen sollte nicht bezweifelt werden – unabhängig davon, wie man «ἐπὶ τῇ μάχῃ» übersetzt (dazu v. Freytag 57 Anm. 182) –, daß neben Euryganeia auch ihre kämpfenden oder sterbenden Söhne zu sehen waren; eine Einzelfigur ist im Kontext der Fresken des Athena-Areia-Tempels kaum vorstellbar.

I.-Bilder sind erst aus dem 4. Jh. bekannt (1–5). Keines dieser Bilder zeigt sie im Kontext des Kampfes um Theben. Aus den Notizen des Plut. über die Statue der sterbenden I. (1) geht nicht hervor, an welche Version ihres Todes Silanion gedacht hat. Die Denkmäler aus Westgriechenland zeigen sie im Rahmen des Oidipous-Mythos (4, 5). Auch die Tonmasken 3 weisen auf ein Oidipous-Drama in der Art des sophokleischen hin; daß I. neben Oidipous als Sterbende charakterisiert wird – und nur darauf beruht ja überhaupt die Deutung der weiblichen Maske als I. –, wäre zwar bei realen Theatermasken nicht denkbar, da sie keinen derart momentanen Gesichtsausdruck festhalten durften, setzt aber auch bei einer Tonnachbildung voraus, daß I. in dem Stück, an das man dachte, auch wirklich zu Tode kam.

Daß es im 4. Jh. auch schon griechische Darstellungen der I. bei ihren sterbenden Söhnen gegeben hat, wird indirekt durch zwei etruskische Sarkophage nahegelegt (19, 20). Beide zeigen je drei zwei- oder einfigurige Szenen, die mehr (20) oder weniger (19) sinnvoll aneinandergereiht sind: die sich gegenseitig tötenden Brüder, Oidipous, der von einem Helfer geführt wird, und eine auf dem Boden oder einem Felsen sitzende Frau, die in merkwürdiger Weise mit erhobenem rechtem Arm mit einem Gewandstück hantiert. Aus einem Vergleich mit späteren Denkmälern (17, 18) wird klar, daß in diesem Zusammenhang nur die mit dem Schwert oder Dolch zum Selbstmord ausholende I. gemeint sein kann. Selbst wenn die etruskischen Bildhauer das Motiv nicht mehr richtig verstanden und I. statt eines Dolches nur ein Gewandstück in die Hand gegeben haben sollten, kann in der Vorlage nichts anderes gemeint gewesen sein (anders: Small, P., Studies Related to the Theban Cycle on Late Etruscan Urns [1981] 125 für 19: «personification of the River Dirce or a local Theban nymph»). Die stark variierende Wiedergabe aller Details bei allen drei Gruppen – die Figuren von 19 wirken, als ob jemand nach einer ungenauen Beschreibung der Gruppen von 20 gearbeitet habe – zeigt, welchen Wandlungen ein Motiv in einer über mehrere Zwischenglieder führenden Bildüberlieferung ausgesetzt sein kann. Trotz aller Verschiedenheit müssen beide Sarkophage wohl letzten Endes von derselben Vorlage abhängen, von einer das Geschehen in viele Einzelgruppen auflösenden Darstellung der letzten Szenen der Phoenissen des Euripides oder einer ähnlichen Tragödie.

Eine ähnliche Darstellungsweise findet sich auf den homerischen Bechern: Zwei Becher mit Szenen aus der Euripides-Tragödie sind erhalten: 8 mit der Szene Eur. Phoen. 1264-1282, 17 mit dem Tod von Eteokles und Polyneikes und dem Selbstmord der I. (1427-1459).

In Etrurien, wo die ältesten Selbstmordbilder erhalten sind (19. 20), wird dagegen in hellenistischer Zeit das Motiv nicht mit dem der sterbenden Brüder kombiniert. Zwischen den sich zum Kampf Vorbereitenden oder aufeinander Losstürmenden erscheinen schlichtende Frauen in Standardtypen, die in gleicher Weise I. oder Antigone meinen können (10); den Sterbenden (15) sind zwei Figurentypen zugeordnet: eine mit erhobenen Armen heranstürmende Frau und eine still trauernde, auf die Pausanias' Beschreibung der Euryganeia des Onasias, «κατηφής», zutreffen könnte. Welche dieser Gestalten I. darstellen sollen und ob überhaupt einheitlich ein Schema für I. und das andere für Antigone verwendet worden ist, ist nicht mehr zu entscheiden. Dagegen läßt sich die Frau, die sich im Talamone-Giebel (16) über einen der Gefallenen beugt, vielleicht benennen. B. v. Freytag denkt an I., da sie in der entsprechenden Szene der Phoenissen gegenüber Antigone die wichtigere Rolle spielt. Sie umarmt beide Söhne, zuletzt Polyneikes, der noch einige Worte sprechen kann, nachdem Eteokles schon gestorben ist. I. müßte im Talamone-Giebel also bei Polyneikes dargestellt sein. Nun ist ja aber keineswegs sicher, daß sich das Giebelrelief so eng an die Phoenissen anschließen läßt. Zudem spricht Polyneikes dort Mutter und Schwester an (1442-1453), und im Tode umarmt I. beide Söhne (1458-1459). Es wäre ausgesprochen ungeschickt, aus dieser Szene I. und Polyneikes zu isolieren. In den bildlichen Darstellungen ist I. nie mit einem Sohn enger als mit dem anderen verbunden; auf dem Homerischen Becher 17 kniet sie zwar zu Füßen des Polyneikes, ist aber ganz auf sich, auf den Selbstmord konzentriert. Auf den nicht etruskischen Denkmälern (17. 18) ist mit den Sterbenden immer die Selbstmord begehende I. kombiniert, während Antigone auf dem Becher 17 als Klagegängerin erscheint. Ihre Vorliebe für Polyneikes ist aus der Literatur bekannt; wenn also eine Frau ganz eng einem der beiden Brüder zugeordnet ist, liegt die Deutung auf Antigone und Polyneikes nahe. Außerdem gibt es auch Versionen des Mythos, in denen nur Antigone aufs Schlachtfeld kommt; auf die Verwandtschaft der Szenen des Talamone-Giebels mit der Schilderung des Statius, für die dann eine ältere Vorlage angenommen werden mußte, hat schon A. Gostoli (a. O. 16, 68-76) aufmerksam gemacht.

I. spielt also in den hellenistischen etruskischen Bildern der Sieben gegen Theben (10. 15. 16) nur eine Nebenrolle; das Motiv der Sarkophage aus Tarquinia (19. 20) wird nicht mehr aufgenommen. Dagegen überliefern Volterranner Aschenurnen (6) eine sonst in der Bildkunst nicht belegte Szene, die Blendung des Oidipous durch Diener, die vielleicht auf den Oidipous des Euripides zurückgeht; I., die in Etrurien sonst nur in Szenen der Septem dargestellt wurde, ist hier das einzige Mal mit Oidipous unmittelbar verbunden; die Söhne, die noch Kinder sind, begleiten sie allerdings auch hier.

Eine bedeutendere Rolle spielt I. in den römischen Darstellungen. Zwar wird sie auch hier nur einmal mit Oidipous zusammen gezeigt (7), aber in den Szenen der Septem bildet sie oft den Mittelpunkt der Komposition (11-14. 18). In allen Bildern (auch auf 9) ist sie in höchster Erregung, mit weit ausgreifenden Gesten und offenem, wehendem Haar gezeigt, am eindrucksvollsten auf dem Sarkophag 11 und der Urne 12, wo sie mit entblößter Brust zwischen den Brüdern kniet und sie mit ihren ausgestreckten Armen voneinander abzuhalten versucht. Vor allem Croisille hat für diese Szene auf die Parallele in den Phoenissae des Seneca (440-449) hingewiesen, wo I. sich zwischen ihre Söhne wirft und sie auffordert, sie zu töten, ehe sie einander umbringen. Auch für das Fresko 7 läßt sich bei Seneca eine verwandte Szene finden (Sen. Oed. 1009-1023). Für die Szene am Tor in dem Fresko 9 bietet sich Statius (Theb. 11, 324-353. 387-392) als Parallele an, dessen Thebais freilich erst nach dem Untergang Pompejis vollendet wurde. Auf eine literarische Quelle verweist schließlich ausdrücklich der Verfasser der Lampe 18 mit dem Wort Phoenissa.

Die Beziehung der römischen I.-Bilder auf Werke der römischen Literatur ist zwar möglich, aber in keinem Fall zwingend. Auf jeden Fall aber verbindet beide das extreme Pathos, das sich in den Worten und den Gesten der I. in gleicher Weise äußert. Auch wenn dieses Pathos uns übertrieben erscheinen mag, sind die römischen Bilder von der letzten Begegnung der Mutter mit ihren verfeindeten Söhnen (9. 11. 12) die eindrucksvollsten antiken Bilder der I., die uns erhalten sind. Die Szenen dagegen, die I. wie Oidipous in der abendländischen Kultur berühmt gemacht haben, die Szenen aus dem Oidipous Tyrannos des Sophokles, sind in der antiken Bildkunst kaum dargestellt worden.

INGRID KRAUSKÖPF

IOKASTOS → LIMC Suppl.

IOLAOS

(Ἰόλαος, ion.-att. Ἰόληος, Ἰόλεως, dor. Ἰόλαφος, Ἰόλας, lat. Iolaus) Boeotian hero, son of → Iphikles and Automedousa, nephew and faithful companion of → Herakles in many deeds. He took a particularly active part in the killing of the Hydra, accompanied Herakles against Geryon, Kyknos and the Amazons, went with him to Troy and, according to Latin writers, participated in the Argonaut expedition and the Calydonian Boar Hunt. He was particularly famous as Herakles' charioteer. He married Herakles' wife → Megara after Herakles had repudiated her to marry → Iole (I). He was present in Herakles' last moments on Mt. Oite and later became the protector of his sons (→ Herakleidai) against Eurystheus' wrath. He led most of the sons born to Herakles by the daughters of Thespios to Sardinia where he founded Olbia and other cities and where, according to one source, he died. In other sources he then went to Sicily where he received great honours. He was worshipped in Sardinia, Sicily and particularly his home, Thebes, where a festival, the Iolaia, also known as Herakleia, was held in his honour.

LITERARY SOURCES: The earliest reference to I. is in Hes. theog. 317 where he assists Herakles in the killing of the Hydra. His decisive help in this deed is frequently mentioned by later writers (Apollod. bibl. 2, 5, 2; Diod. 4, 11, 6; Q. Smyrn. 6, 215-219; cf. Schol. Eur. Phoen. 1137) who are also more explicit about his role: burning the roots of the Hydra heads to prevent them from sprouting. In [Hes.] sc. 74 ff. 323-324. 340-342. 467-470, he drives Herakles and Athena against Kyknos and helps Herakles remove the armour from Kyknos' body. Other occasions where he appears at Herakles' side are the expedition against Troy (Pind. N. 3, 36-37), the war against Sparta (Eur. Heraklidae 741), the Amazonomachy (Eur. Heraklidae 215-217) and the killing of Geryon (Diod. 4, 24, 4). Latin writers include him among those who took part in the Argonaut expedition (Hyg. fab. 14), the Funeral Games for Pelias (Hyg. fab. 273) and the Calydonian Hunt (Hyg. fab. 173; Ov. met. 8, 310). He was mentioned as Herakles' charioteer in the lost Ehoiai (frg. 230 Merkelbach/West). Pind. I. 1, 16-17 calls him and Kastor the bravest charioteers and Paus. 5, 8, 3-4 speaks of his victory at Olympia with Herakles' chariot.

Diodorus relates that he was threatened by Herakles in his madness (4, 11, 1), that he married Megara after Herakles repudiated her to marry Iole (4, 31, 1; cf. Apollod. bibl. 2, 6, 1), that he followed Herakles in his exile from Tiryns to Pheneos (4, 33, 2) and was present at Herakles' death on Mt. Oite where he built the pyre (4, 38, 4). The first mention of him as protector of the Herakleidai and punisher of Eurystheus is in Pind. P. 9, 80-82 where he kills Eurystheus (cf. Paus. 1, 44, 10) and after he dies is buried next to Amphitryon in Thebes. The most detailed account of the Herakleidai story is in Euripides' play of that name: I., who is rejuvenated by the gods to help the children of Herakles (793-796; cf. Schol. Pind. P. 9, 137: rejuvenated or brought to life again), captures Eurystheus at the Skironian rocks and hands him over to Alkmene who orders his execution (843 ff. 928 ff. 1022 ff.). In Diod. 4, 57, 6 and Apollod. bibl. 2, 8, 1-2 it is Hyllus who kills Eurystheus. Strabon 8, 6, 19 p. 377 has I. and the Herakleidai fight Eurystheus at Marathon where the latter is killed.

Diod. 4, 29, 1-30, 3; 5, 15 tells of I.'s colonization of Sardinia (cf. Paus. 1, 29, 5; 7, 2, 2; 10, 17, 5; Strabon 5, 2, 7 p. 225) and of the honours that he received there and in Sicily where he stopped on his way back (Herakles had already established a cult for I. at Agyrion during the Geryon expedition: Diod. 4, 24, 4). According to Paus. 9, 23, 1 and to the Schol. Pind. N. 4, 32 he died in Sardinia. The Theban Pindar often refers to his important heroic cult in Thebes where games, the Iolaia (also called Herakleia), took place near his grave (Pind. I. 5, 32-33; P. 9, 79-80; O. 9, 98-99; N. 4, 20; cf. Schol. Pind. I. 1, 11, 79; P. 9, 156; O. 7, 153; 9, 148; N. 4, 32; Paus. 9, 23, 1; Schol. Aristoph. Ach. 867). Arr. an. 1, 7, 7 mentions his temenos outside the city walls. Paus. 1, 19, 3 mentions an altar of I. in Athens and Plut. de frat. amore 492c refers to him as «symbomos» of Herakles in many areas.

Although he is Herakles' close companion he is not normally known as his lover; this is found only in Plutarch (amatorius 761d-e and Pelopidas 18, 5, quoting Aristotle [frg. 97 Rose]) who also says that homosexual lovers worshipped him and exchanged vows at his tomb.

BIBLIOGRAPHY: Ciaceri, E., Culti e miti nella storia dell'antica Sicilia (1911) 95-96. 285-289; Conticello, B., EAA IV (1961) 172 s.v. «Iolaos»; Kroll, W., RE IX 2 (1916) 1843-1846 s.v. «Iolaos I»; Roscher, W. H., ML II 1 (1890-94) 285-289 s.v. «Iolaos I»; Schachter, A., Cults of Boiotia I (= BICS Suppl. 38. 1 [1981]) 30-31; II (= BICS Suppl. 38.2 [1986]) 17-18. 25-27. 64-65.

CATALOGUE

References to LIMC IV and V «Herakles» are prefaced by «H.» for catalogue numbers.

A. Iolaos alone or with Herakles alone

1. Calyx-crater, Attic rf. London, Private Coll. - Eucharides P. - About 510 B.C. - Herakles ties his lionskin watched by I., in full armour with two spears and shield. Both figures named.

UNCERTAIN

2. (= H. 3 with bibl.) Cup, Attic bf. Rome, Villa Giulia 63613. From Vulci. - Riccioni, G., in Mél. J. Heurgon II (1976) 903-913 pls. 1. 3; Helbig⁴ III no. 2522 (A. Greifenhagen). - 530-520 B.C. - On A and B, between eyes, bust of Herakles between busts of warriors; at handles, bust of man identified as Theseus (Riccioni) or I. (Greifenhagen) between busts of warriors.

3. Coin, AE, Agyrion (Sicily), 420-353 B.C. (Head), 344-317 B.C. (Gàbrici). - SNG Copenhagen 128 pl. 3; Gàbrici, Bronzo 120 no. 5 pl. 4, 6; Rizzo, MGS pl. 59, 10. - Obv.: head of youth (I.?).

4. Coin, AE, Agyrion (Sicily), after 241 B.C. (Head), Roman period (Gàbrici). - SNG Copenhagen 130; Gàbrici, Bronzo 120 no. 8. - Obv.: Head of Zeus. Rev.: Man in chiton with crook and horn crowned by a Nike (I.); dog.

5. Bronze statuette. Berlin (West), Staatl. Mus. Ol. 4076. From Olympia. - Olympia IV (1890) 18 no. 42 pl. 7; Neugebauer, KatBrBerlin I no. 161 pl. 21; Leon, C., AM 83, 1968, 180 pl. 63, 1-3; Herfort-Koch, M., Archaische Bronzeplastik Lakoniens (1986) K 142. - About 530 B.C. - Warrior, probably once attached to a bronze vessel; objects held in his outstretched arms missing. Generally associated with the bronze Herakles in Kassel (= H. 73*), even regarded as coming from the same vessel (Höckmann, U., Staatliche Kunstsammlungen Kassel. Antike Bronzen [1972] 18 no. 14; but cf. Kunze, OlBer VII [1957-58] 178 n. 77, who dates the Kassel bronze two decades earlier) and interpreted as Herakles too (Kunze, Léon) or as I. holding Herakles' weapons (Höckmann).

B. Iolaos as charioteer

For I. as charioteer in Herakles' deeds see sections C-E. I. may also drive Herakles' chariot on some Attic vases of the mid-6th and 4th cent. B.C. which probably show the Apotheosis (6-7; H. 1417, 2877, 2878), as well as on some late Archaic scenes where the subject is less clear (8-11; H. 1411-1413, 1415).

a) Iolaos in Herakles' Apotheosis

6.* (= H. 2879/3296*, = Hera 469) Hydria, Attic bf. Paris, Cab. Méd. 253. From Vulci. - ABV 104, 127; Tyrrhenian Group; CVA 1 pls. 32 (316), 13; 33 (317), 1-2. - About 550 B.C. - I. (bearded, wearing corselet) drives a chariot I. Behind him, Herakles holding a wreath. Beyond the horses, Athena; in front of them, Hera and Hebe, all with wreaths. All figures named.

See also H. 2877-2878.

7. (= H. 1418*) Bell-crater, Attic rf. Birmingham, City Mus. 1620.85. - Metzger, Représentations pl. 29, 1. - Early 4th cent. B.C. - Herakles is driven by a wreathed youth, probably I., to the I. Hermes leads the chariot.

Cf. H. 1417/2932 (similar, with chariot flying over sea). The identification of the driver as I. is supported by a similar scene on a Talos P. amphora in a Private Coll. (RM 92, 1985, 48) where the charioteer is named I.

For I. following on foot in some late Archaic Apotheosis scenes or, less certainly, watching on a Classical vase see below Section F.a.(i).

b) Other scenes

(i) Iolaos with Herakles in chariot

8.* Column-crater, Attic bf. Paris, Louvre F 309. - CVA 2 pl. 4 (76), 3. - About 520 B.C. - Herakles and I. (bearded, in himation) in chariot moving r.; with Apollo, Athena and a youth.

9.* (= H. 1414, = Hermes 414) Amphora, Attic bf. Munich, Antikenslg. 1416 (J. 379). From Vulci. - ABV 367, 90; Leagros Group; Add 98; CVA 1 pl. 51. - 510-500 B.C. - Herakles with spear and I. (helmeted, with kentron and club), both named, in chariot moving r.; Hermes facing the horses and Athena beyond them.

See also: H. 1411 (I. inscribed, with Athena). 1413 (with Athena, Apollo, Hermes). Herakles holds the reins on H. 1420 (I. as a warrior; with Athena, Dionysos, Hermes).

Sometimes I. is mounting the chariot:

10.* Hydria, Attic bf. London, BM 1843.11-3.84 (B 320). From Vulci. - ABV 364, 49; Leagros Group; Add 97; CVA 6 pl. 82 (341), 4; 85 (344), 1. - 510-500 B.C. - I. (youth in himation) mounting chariot in which Herakles stands. With Athena, Dionysos, a woman and a deer.

Very similar: H. 1415.

(ii) Iolaos in chariot and Herakles on ground

11.* Amphora, Attic bf. Toronto, ROM 929.22.8 (633). - ABV 323, 23; 694; Euphiletos P.; CVA 1 pl. 5, 1. - 520-510 B.C. - Charioteer (bearded, long chiton), probably I., in chariot and Herakles on foot behind it. With Athena, Apollo and Hermes.

See also: Lekythos Bowdoin Coll. 1966.53 (youth in himation as charioteer); H. 1416 (chariot driven by warrior); lekythos Athens NM 380 (Haspels, ABL 204, 5; warrior mounting chariot). I. (named, with helmet and corselet) mounts the chariot on H. 1412* (with Hermes; Schefold, SBII 105 suggests the bringing of the horses of Diomedes).

(iii) Harnessing a chariot for Herakles

Such scenes (= H. 1423-1427) are sometimes attended by a charioteer (a warrior on 1426), once named I. (= H. 1427).

I. (named) in a chariot on side B of → Amazones 62* probably belongs to the Amazonomachy on A (see below Section C.g.). He may also be recognized in the charioteer looking round on side B of H. 1674* (below Section F.b.) and, less certainly, in the frontal charioteer on side B of → Geryoneus 16* (below Section C.h.), and be associated with the Herakles scenes on the obverse of both vases.

(iv) Iolaos in chariot without Herakles

On the hydria Leiden PC 33 (ABV 364, 57; Leagros Group; CVA 1 pl. 10) I. (named, wearing a helmet and a short chiton, sword hanging) drives a chariot; Athena stands beyond the horses and a boy walks before them. The absence of Herakles is probably an error, and the vase should not be separated from those with a similar scene in Sections (i) and (ii) above.

C. Iolaos in Herakles' labours

(The lists are selective)

a) Herakles and the Nemean Lion

Attic bf. vases

12.* Amphora. Würzburg, Wagner-Mus. L 245. From Vulci. - ABV 133, 1; Group E; Langlotz,

KatWürzb pl. 79. - About 540 B.C. - B: Herakles wrestling with the lion between I. (bearded, naked, one arm raised) at r. and Athena (unarmed) at l. (A = Eurytion II 6*.)

Cf. Munich 1382 (ABV 135, 47; CVA 1 pl. 18, 1); Vatican 348 (ABV 134, 16; Albizzati pl. 44). I. extending an arm to Herakles: Paris, Louvre F 33 (ABV 141, 3; CVA 3 pl. 15 [152], 7); Copenhagen, NM 7068 (= H. 1829); London B 160 (ABV 134, 15; CVA 3 pl. 28 [148], 1b); with hands at waist as if drawing sword: Munich 1397 (ABV 134, 20; CVA 1 pl. 30, 2); Berlin F 1720 (= H. 1792). See also: Würzburg L 263 (ABV 142, 6; Langlotz, KatWürzb pl. 68); Vatican 354 (ABV 142; Albizzati pl. 46); Hannover 1962.78 (CVA 1 pls. 7, 2; 8, 1). I. drawing sword: Toronto 919.5.176 (ABV 134, 11; CVA 1 pl. 2, 1); Oxford 1965.135 (ABV 137, 59; CVA 3 pl. 2; Boardman, ABFH fig. 94; on side B with club).

13.* Neck-amphora. London, BM B 234. From Vulci. - ABV 292, 3; Psiak; CVA 4 pl. 57 (202), 3a. - About 520 B.C. - Herakles and the lion between I. at l. (bearded, corselet over chiton, sword hanging) and Athena at r.

Cf. Boston 1976.41 (Para 123, 12; CVA 1 pl. 44, 1); London B 308 (CVA 6 pls. 78, 1; 81, 1). With helmet: Würzburg L 248 (= H. 1833); Richmond 62.17 (Para 56, 42 bis; MuM Auktion 22, 1961, pl. 39, 127; drawing sword); Kassel T 384 (= H. 1806).

14. (= H. 1865) Neck-amphora. Munich, Antikenslg. 1556 (J. 270). From Vulci. - CVA 8 pls. 392, 1; 393; Manner of Lysippides P. (Kunze-Götte). - 520-510 B.C. - Herakles and the lion between I. on the l. (bearded, corselet, chiton, sword hanging, holding club) and Hermes on the r.

Cf. Würzburg L 185 (= H. 1795); Würzburg L 254 (Langlotz, KatWürzb pls. 82, 84); Würzburg L 247 (ABV 134, 17; Langlotz, KatWürzb pls. 67, 84; with helmet); New York 67.44.1 (ABV 328, 5; CVA 4 pl. 34, 3); Rome, Villa Giulia 14216 (ABV 257, 1; CVA 1 pl. 1 [5], 3); Hannover 1964.9 (CVA 1 pl. 11, 2); Hirschmann Coll. (Bloesch, H., ed., Greek Vases from the Hirschmann Collection [1982] 53 no. 24); Toledo 56.70 (= H. 1853); Rothschild Coll. (ABV 255, 12; Para 113; ÖJh 46, 1961/63, 81 fig. 43); Naples SA 126 (CVA 1 pl. 32, 1); Paris, Cab. Méd. 254 (ABV 324, 38; CVA 2 pl. 58, 8; seated). See also: Zurich, ETH 7 (= H. 1860); Turin 4100 (ABV 274, 128; CVA 2 pls. 3-4).

15. Column-crater. Athens, Agora P 24123. - Hesperia 55, 1986, pl. 9 no. 70; Agora XXIII pl. 45 no. 474. - About 510 B.C. - Herakles and the lion between Athena on the l. and I. (bearded, chiton, cloak over shoulder, with club) on the r.

Cf. Paris, Louvre F 238 (Para 151; CVA 4 pl. 46, 3); Munich 1554 (CVA 9 pl. 18, 3); Würzburg H 5169 (ABV 195, 5; Para 80; CVA 1 pls. 41, 1; 42, 1-2; beardless). See also: Munich 1557 (ABV 290, 3; CVA 8 pl. 395, 1); Boston 1970.69 (CVA 1 pl. 42); Altenburg 222 (ABV 268, 27; CVA 1 pl. 30, 1). With quiver on back: Munich 1412 (ABV 328, 9; Para 145; CVA 1 pls. 41, 4; 44, 1-2); Florence 94315 (= H. 1801).

16.* Amphora. Geneva, Mus. 14989. - CVA 2 pl.

50 (106), 3. - About 520 B.C. - Herakles and the lion between I. standing at l. with club and bow (bearded, in chiton) and Athena at r.

Cf. Paris, Louvre F 37 (= H. 1803); Paris, Louvre F 237 (ABV 283, 7; CVA 4 pl. 46 [212], 1); London B 232 (ABV 270, 57; CVA 4 pl. 57 [202], 2a); Paris, Cab. Méd. 223B (ABV 391, 1; CVA 1 pl. 42, 7); Boulogne 62 (AJA 61, 1957, 107); Bologna 19 (= H. 1800); Cleveland 1971.16 (= H. 1782). With corselet: Los Angeles 50.9.36 (CVA 1 pl. 8); Bologna 151 (= H. 1832); Basel Market (= H. 1793; beardless); Würzburg L 306 (= H. 1900). Naked: Würzburg L 181 (ABV 286, 4; Langlotz, KatWürzb pl. 54).

Attic rf. vases

17.* Cup. Naples, Mus. Naz. 81326 (H 2614). From Etruria. - ARV 2 79, 6; Manner of Epiktetos; AM 92, 1977, pl. 42, 1. - 510-500 B.C. - Herakles wrestling with the lion between Athena, seated, at l. and I. (beardless, wearing pilos and chiton, with club, one arm extended) crouching at r.

Cf. Florence 3984 (ARV 2 271, 2; CVA 2 pl. 58, 1); Boston 00.334 (= H. 1874).

18. Column-crater. Rome, Villa Giulia 984. From Falerii. - ARV 2 239, 21; Myson; Para 349; Add 201; CVA 2 pl. 15 (54), 3. - About 500 B.C. - Herakles and the lion between I. (beardless, chiton, club, l. arm extended) and Athena.

Cf. Würzburg L 532 (ARV 2 587, 54; 1660; Langlotz, KatWürzb pl. 195). I. bearded and naked, with club, on London B 193 (= H. 1883).

Uncertain

19. (= H. 1917*) Calyx-crater, Attic rf. Palermo, Mus. Naz. 13840. - ARV 2 613, 4; P. of Woolly Satyrs; Add 269; Schauenburg, K., Gymnasium 70, 1963, 126 pl. 9, 1-2. - About 450 B.C. - Herakles, naked, sitting on rock (frontal face) with dead lion at his feet; to l., seated king (Eurystheus?) and youth in pilos, chlamys, lionskin (!) and boots, with spears and bow (perhaps I.), standing before him.

b) Herakles and the Lernean Hydra

Attic Vases

20. (= H. 1998*) Neck-amphora, bf. Paris, Louvre E 851. - ABV 97, 24; Tyrrhenian Group; CVA 1 pls. 5 (35), 5; 7 (37), 4; Schauenburg, K., AJA 1971, 172 figs. 15-16. - 560-550 B.C. - Herakles and I. (helmet, corselet) attacking the Hydra with sword and torch respectively. Behind H., from l. to r., two horses with woman holding the reins, Hermes and Athena.

21. (= H. 2003) Neck-amphora, bf. Paris, Louvre F 386. - Haspels, ABL 238, 131; Diosphos P.; Schauenburg, o.c. 20, 173 figs. 17-18. - 500-490 B.C. - A: Herakles attacking Hydra with harpe; B: On the l., I. as warrior (helmet, corselet, greaves, sword hanging) shooting to l.; on the r., Athena hurrying to r., crab before her.

22.* Lekythos, bf. wg. Copenhagen, NM Chr. VIII. 946. - Haspels, ABL 234, 52; Diosphos P.; CVA 3 pl. 112, 2. - 500-490 B.C. - Herakles and I. (warrior as on 21, shield on ground) attack Hydra with harpe and torch respectively; Athena with owl behind Herakles.

23. (= H. 1702*/2502) Volute-crater, rf. Malibu, Getty Mus. 77.AE.11. - ARV² 186, 51-52: Kleophrades P.; Getty Mus. 4, 1977, 69 fig. 12; Getty Vases 2 (1985) 197 fig. 15; 201 fig. 20. - 500-490 B.C. - Only Hydra and I. preserved; I. (helmet, greaves, shield and spear in l. hand) attacks from r. with torch.

Other examples with I. are H. 1996. 1997. 1999-2002. 2004-2006. 2008. 2009. 2012-2015. 2017. 2018.

Non-Attic Vases

24.* Aryballos fr., Corinthian bf. Corinth C-71-321. From Corinth. - Amandry, P./Amyx, D. A., AntK 25, 1982, 102 no. 2 fig. 1, 2 pl. 18, 2; Amyx, CVP 558, 8. - 610-600 B.C. - I. (inscr. FIOAAPOE), beardless, in short chiton, attacking the Hydra with a harpe from the r.

25. (= H. 2011 with bibl.) Aryballos, Corinthian bf. Athens, Kanellopoulos Mus. 392. - Amandry/Amyx, o.c. 24, no. 3 fig. 1, 3; Amyx, CVP 559, 13. - About 600 B.C. - Herakles and I. (as on 24), both named, attack the Hydra with sword and harpe respectively. Club and bow behind Herakles, horse behind I. Arrow on snake body.

26.* Skyphos, Corinthian bf. Paris, Louvre CA 3004. - Lorber, Inscriften no. 37 pl. 9; Amandry/Amyx, o.c. 24, no. 13 fig. 2, 13; Amyx, CVP 561, 19 pl. 73, 2. - 580-570 B.C. - On the l., Herakles attacking Hydra with club; behind him, chariot and Athena with oinochoe. On the r., I. (as on 24), inscr. FIOAAE, with harpe.

Cf. also H. 1990-1995; cup fr. Bonn 697.82 (Amandry/Amyx, o.c. 24, no. 11 fig. 2, 11 pl. 18, 3); dinos fr. Athens, NM, from Vari (ArchEph 1970, 86-113 fig. 1 pl. 33).

27.* (= H. 2015a) Cup fr., Laconian bf. Samos, Mus. K 176. From Samos. - Stibbe, LakVas no. 206a pl. 68, 3; Hunt P.; Pipili, LacIno 6 fig. 5. - About 560 B.C. - Herakles on the l. (only l. arm preserved) grasping snake body; I., beardless, inscr. FIOAAE, on the r.

Other non-Attic vases: H. 2007 (Eretrian bf.; I. with sword like Herakles). 2016 (Caeretan; I. at l., beardless, with harpe). 2010 (Apulian rf.; I. with torch and sword).

Other works

28. (= H. 2019* with bibl.) Bronze fibula. London, BM 3205. From Boeotia. - Brommer, *Herakles*² pl. 11; Pittschen, Sagendarstellungen 147 SB 28. - About 700 B.C. - On the l. half of the fibula, Herakles (only lower part preserved) with sword grasping all Hydra heads; beneath Herakles, a small I. with harpe; crab.

Cf. the fibulae H. 2020 and Heidelberg Univ., with I. on the l. I. appears also on the reliefs H. 2021-2025.

29. (= H. 2031; H. [Dodekathlos] 1697) Chest of Kypselos. - Paus. 5, 17, 11. - Probably 2nd quarter of 6th cent. B.C. - Herakles shooting at Hydra; Athena behind him. The I. in chariot believed by Paus. to belong to the adjacent Games for Pelias was probably part of the Hydra scene.

c) Herakles and the Erymanthian Boar

(i) Herakles wrestling with the Boar

30.* Neck-amphora, Attic bf. Würzburg, Wagner-Mus. L 182. - ABV 327, 4: Long-Nose P.; Langlotz, KatWürzb pl. 54. - About 520 B.C. - Herakles and the boar between I. (bearded, chitoniskos, holding club, sword hanging) on the l. looking away from the scene and Athena on the r. moving r. and looking back at the fight.

Cf. Bologna 64 (CVA 2 pl. 38, 3) and Germany, Private (Hornbostel, W., Aus der Glanzzeit Athens [1986] 61 no. 22; I. in corselet, with club); Paris, Louvre F 213 (ABV 369, 110; CVA 3 pl. 26, 4; I. wrapped in himation); Boulogne 64 (I. in corselet, with spear).

(ii) Herakles delivering the Boar to Eurystheus

31.* Neck-amphora, Attic bf. New York, MMA 06.1021.88. - ABV 282, 1: Group of Toronto 305; CVA 4 pl. 26. - About 520 B.C. - Herakles delivering the boar to Eurystheus between I. on the l. (bearded, in chitoniskos, holding club and bow) and Athena on the r.

Cf. Heidelberg S 180 (ABV 692; CVA 1 pl. 34, 4); H. 2123. I. with club only: Tarquinia 1503 (Para 145, 5bis; CVA 1 pl. 10, 1); London B 161 (= Athena 518); Mississippi Univ. 1977.3.63 (AJA 60, 1956, pl. 8, 36, 40; beardless). In corselet holding club: H. 2125. 2127. In himation holding club: Copenhagen, NM 3858 (ABV 290, 1; CVA 3 pl. 107, 2).

32.* Neck-amphora, Attic bf. Toronto, ROM 927.39. 2 (305). - ABV 282, 2: Group of Toronto 305; CVA 1 pls. 11, 3; 12, 3. - 520-510 B.C. - Herakles delivering the boar; I. at l., bearded, in chiton and himation, holding spears, quiver on back; Athena on the r.

Cf. H. 2117 (in corselet, with spears).

d) Herakles and the Kerynitian Deer

The youth in chlamys and petasos, with spears, standing next to Athena and watching Herakles on H. 2197 (= Artemis 1317, = Apollon 1053), is probably I. The youth with bow and arrows on H. 2189 is more likely to be Apollo than I.

e) Herakles and the Stymphalian Birds

33. (= H. 2244) Neck-amphora, Attic bf. Paris, Louvre F 387. From Vulci. - Haspels, ABL 238; 132: Diosphos P.; Pottier, Vases Louvre pl. 87 (B); Flacelière, R./Devambez, P., Héracles, images et récits (1966) pl. 7; HDHG (Rouen) 222-223 no. 90. - Early 5th cent. B.C. - A: Herakles fighting the birds to the r.: B: I. (helmet, corselet, sword hanging) fighting to the l., sling in l. hand; spears and shield on ground.

Cf. H. 2243 (I. with bow in one hand, sling in the other).

A very uncertain case is the bronze fibula H. 2280 showing two (male?) figures each holding a bird.

f) Herakles and the Cretan Bull

34. (= H. 2329*) Amphora, Attic bf. Munich, Antikenslg. 1407 (J. 614). From Vulci. - ABV 290: Circle of Antimenes P.; Add² 75; CVA 1 pl. 37, 2; Boardman, ABFH fig. 194. - About 510 B.C. - Herakles tying the bull; on the l. I., bearded, naked, cloak over extended l. arm, holding club; another club beside him.

35.* Bell-crater, Apulian rf. Naples, Mus. Naz. 81410 (H 2865). From Bari. - RVAp I 133, 292: P. of Naples 2865; Moret, Ilioupersis pl. 76, 1. - 370-360 B.C. - Herakles attacking the bull with club, crowned by a Nike, between I. at l. (youth in cloak and pilos, holding spear and shield) and Athena at r.

36. (= H. 2346*) Volute-crater, Apulian rf. Ruvo, Mus. Jatta 1097. From Ruvo. - RVAp I 417, 16: Lycurgus P.; RVAp Suppl. I 56; Sichtermann, SlgJatta K 72 pls. 120; 122, 1. - Around 350 B.C. - On the neck, Herakles wrestling with the bull; Athena seated at l.; I. (youth in cloak, holding club and quiver), seated woman and Eros at r.

Other examples with I. watching the fight: Bf., H. 2309. 2323. 2341 (three l.). 2343. Baltimore 48.251 (ABV 491, 54). London B 441 (ABV 563, 575). Nicosia 1968/V.30/348. Parma C 139 (CVA 1 pl. 19 [2020], 1-2). Rf., H. 2350. 2352. Leningrad B 2680 (ARV² 1337, 5; RA 1982, 114-115 fig. 3).

g) Herakles and the Amazons

37. (= Amazones 1*) Alabastron, Corinthian bf. Once Imbros. From Samothrace. - Fredrich, C., AM 1908, 112 fig. 32; Payne, NC 130. 161. 283 no. 366; Bothmer, Amazons 3 no. 4; Lorber, Inscriften no. 24 fig. 19; Amyx, CVP 557, 4. - Late 7th cent. B.C. - Three Amazons, named, fighting against three Greeks named Herakles, I. (inscr. [or miscopied] AIOAAE instead of FIOAAE) and Menoitias (?).

I. may also be present in the fight on → Amazones 16* (Bothmer, Amazons 12-13) and in the more peaceful → Amazones 780 (= H. 2461) and Switzerland, Branca Coll. (RVAp II 476, 5 pl. 169, 1-2). It is also possible that the I. (inscr. IOAEO) in a chariot on the reverse of the cup → Amazones 62* is associated with the Amazonomachy on the obverse.

h) Herakles and Geryon

The only example with I. present is H. 2501 (= Eurytion II 44) where I., named, stands fully armed watching the fight. It is not at all certain if he was also present on the west side of the Athenian Treasury at Delphi (metope 28 with a warrior may not belong to the Geryon series; see H. 2506/Eurytion II 52).

The helmeted charioteer in a frontal chariot on side B of → Geryoneus 16* (= Eurytion II 47, = Athena 512) has been associated with the Herakles scene on A (Lippold, G., JdI 67, 1952, 81-83; Scheffold, SB II 117; Brize, P., Die Geryoneis des Stesichoros und die frühe griechische Kunst [1980] 43) but might well be a separate picture (cf. Robertson, C. M., CIQ 63, 1969, 208-209).

i) Herakles and Kerberos

A male figure present apart from the usual deities on some Attic bf. vases might be I. See H. 2585 (youth with bow). 2594 (youth with spear). 2592 (man with bow and club). 2607 (man in chlamys and petasos). Lekythos D. J. Coll., Ostwestfalen (Korzus, B., ed., Griechische Vasen aus Westfälischen Sammlungen [1984] 194 no. 75; warrior in full armour with spears and shield).

j) Herakles and the Hesperides

38. (= H. 2717*) Hydria, Attic rf. London, BM E 224. - ARV² 1313, 5: Meidias P.; CVA 6 pl. 91 (366); Arias/Shefton/Hirmer pl. 214; Burn, L., The Meidias Painter (1987) 15-25 pls. 1-3. - About 410 B.C. - Herakles seated, Hesperides, I. (inscr. IOAEOE) in chlamys, with spear, moving r. and looking back.

39.* (= H. 2723) Hydria, Attic rf. New York, MMA 24.97.5. - Richter/Hall no. 171 pl. 166; Metzger, Representations pl. 27, 4. - About 350 B.C. - Herakles and an Hesperid on either side of tree. With I. (mantle loosely draped), two more Hesperides, Pan, a satyr and a Nike flying towards Herakles.

Other examples with another male figure (I.?) are the bf. H. 2716 (warrior) and the rf. H. 2718 (youth with spear) and 2726 (youth in himation leaning on staff).

D. Iolaos in Herakles' expedition to Troy

a) Herakles sacrificing to Chryse

One of the young companions of Herakles in the few Attic rf. representations of the scene might be I.: → Chryse I 2* (inscr. IO(A)EON?). 3*. 4*. 5. and cf. H. 2789 with a sacrifice which might also be for Chryse.

b) Herakles rescuing Hesione

40. Column-crater, Corinthian bf. Boston, MFA 63.420. From Cerveteri. - BullMFA 61, 1963, 159 fig. 10; The Trojan War in Greek Art. A Picture Book. Museum of Fine Arts Boston (1965) pl. 2; Scheffold, SB II 139 fig. 181. - 560-550 B.C. - Herakles shooting at the Ketos in the presence of Hesione. Behind Herakles, chariot turned l.; the charioteer (long dress, helmet) is presumably I.

c) The fight at Troy

The East pediment of the temple of Aphaia on Aegina (= H. 2792) is usually interpreted as Herakles' Trojan War. The youth who runs to help in front of the shooting Herakles has been identified with I.

E. Iolaos in scenes of Herakles with other adversaries

a) Herakles and Acheloos

41. (= Acheloos 228) Statuary group in wood and gold once in the Megarian Treasury at Olympia. Lost.

— Paus. 6, 19, 12: by the artist Dontas (a corruption for Medon?). — Late 6th cent. B.C. — Paus. mentions as spectators of the fight Athena, Deianeira, Zeus and Ares. The last two might actually have been Oineus and an armed I. respectively (Isler, H. P., Acheloos [1970] 107; Beck, I., Ares [1984] 77, 138–139; Brommer, Herakles II 74). Cf. the seated old man and warrior on London B 313 (= Acheloos 248*).

b) Herakles and Alkyoneus

A warrior sometimes helping Herakles (→ Alkyoneus II*). 16) is usually regarded as Telamon after Pindar's passage (N. 4, 25). I., however, also took part in the expedition against Troy during which the event took place. See also the rf. volute-crater Malibu 84.AE.974 (GettyMusJ 13, 1985, 170 no. 24) on the neck of which a warrior (Telamon or I.?) drives away Alkyoneus' cattle while Herakles attacks the sleeping giant.

c) Herakles and Antaios

A warrior, perhaps I., is present on → Antaios I 6 and 9.

d) Herakles and Apollo struggling over the tripod

42.* (= Apollon 1037, = Artemis 1310, = H. 3034) Column-crater, Attic bf. New York, MMA 07.286.78. — v. Bothmer, D., in Festschr. F. Brommer (1977) 52–53 no. 16 pls. 17–18. — 530–520 B.C. — Herakles and Apollo flanked by chariots driven by I. (beardless, wearing corselet over charioteer's dress) on the r. and → Lykomedes on the l., both turning to watch the struggle. Behind the chariots, Artemis on the l. and Athena on the r. All names inscribed.

43. (= H. 3027*) Cup, Attic rf. Rome, Villa Giulia 27250. From Todi. — *ARV*² 124, 8: Nikosthenes P.; CVA 2 pls. 24, 25, 2–3; 26, 2; v. Bothmer, o.c. 42, no. 18. — About 520–510 B.C. — Herakles and Apollo struggling over the tripod. On the l., chariot driven by youth wearing helmet, probably I. Beyond horses, Athena running towards Herakles.

The central group of the east pediment of the Siphnian Treasury at Delphi (= H. 3026 = Apollon 1038) is flanked by a pair of shorter figures and chariots. One of the small figures on the r. has been identified as I. (v. Bothmer, o.c. 42, 52). Cf. the anonymous male figures on the r. of Herakles on the lekythoi H. 3040–3042 (on 3041 it is a hoplite).

e) Herakles and the Kentauroi

(i) Herakles and Pholos

Anonymous spectators occasionally flank the scene. On lekythoi there is often, as in other scenes, a youth present, sometimes moving away. When he is given a club, as on Copenhagen, NM Chr. VIII. 948 (Haspels, ABL 247, 8; CVA 3 pl. 111, 18), we are entitled to call him I. A bearded man in chiton, chlamys, petasos, with spear (I.?) stands behind Pholos on New York, MMA 41.162.2 (CVA 4 pl. 49, 1–2).

(ii) Herakles fighting the Kentauroi

Herakles is not normally assisted by a companion in this fight. In the two exceptions below there is probably a confusion with the battle of Lapiths and Centaurs (cf. the fallen hoplite on Würzburg L 198: ABV 224, 1; Langlotz, KatWürzb pl. 51):

44.* (= H. 1426 [other side]) Cup, Attic rf. Los Angeles, County Mus. 50.8.15 (A 5933.50–21). — *ARV*² 125, 11: Nikosthenes P. (signed by the potter Pamphaios); *Add*² 176; CVA 1 pls. 37, 1; 38, 1. — 510–500 B.C. — Herakles with sword and a young companion, perhaps I. (naked, holding Boeotian shield and spear), fight back to back against three centaurs; cloak and quiver hang.

45. Bell-crater, Campanian rf. Tübingen 673 (F 46). — LCS 314, 635: Near the Caivano P.; Watzinger, KatTübingen 65 pl. 44; Schauenburg, K., AntK 5, 1962, pl. 22, 2. — 3rd quarter of 4th cent. B.C. — Herakles in lionskin, with club in r. hand and bow in l., fights two centaurs, one of whom is collapsing. To l., young warrior, perhaps I., in pilos, short chiton, chlamys, greaves, carrying a shield and brandishing a spear.

f) Herakles and Kyknos

46. (= Apollon 922, = Ares 42*, = Halios Geron 1*) Oinochoe, Attic bf. Berlin (DDR), Staatl. Mus. F 1732 (signed by potter Kolchos). From Vulci. — ABV 110, 37: Lydos; Para 44, 48; *Add*² 30; Schefold, SB II 136 fig. 176; Boardman, ABFH fig. 68; Brommer, Herakles II pl. 28. — 3rd quarter of 6th cent. B.C. — Herakles fights Ares over the dead Kyknos with Zeus intervening and Athena helping Herakles. On either side a chariot moving away (the charioteers, both bearded, are named IO[Λ]EOΣ and ΦΟΙΒ[Ι]ΟΣ). Poseidon and Apollo beyond each chariot. Halios Geron and Dionysos flank the scene.

Chariots driven by anonymous charioteers (presumably I. and Phobos after 46) flank the central group on: amphora London B 212 (ABV 297, 1; CVA 4 pl. 51 [196], 1a); crater fr. London B 365 (Brommer, *Vasenlisten*³ 105 A 18); dinos Vienna IV 4603 (3619) (ABV 140, 3; Brommer, *Vasenlisten*³ 106 A 13); volute-crater fr. Athens, Acr. 655 and Stathatou Coll. (ABV 289, 26; BCH 79, 1955, 177 ff. figs. 1–2 pls. 5–6; the charioteer behind Athena is a warrior); cup Tarquinia RC 2066 (*ARV*² 126, 23; CVA 1 pl. 6, 2; Ares' charioteer is named Phobos); volute-crater Rome, Villa Giulia (*ARV*² 206, 131; Il Mus. Naz. Etr. di Villa Giulia [1980] 140 fig. 177). Simon (Simon/Hirmer, Vasen 67) suggested that the two warriors fighting on the dinos Louvre E 874 by the Gorgon P. (ABV 8, 1; Para 6; Arias/Shefton/Hirmer, pl. 37 below) are Herakles and Kyknos, the chariots on either side being driven by I. and Phobos (both with shield on their back and turning to watch the fight).

47. Lekythos, Attic bf. Athens, NM 497. — Haspels, ABL 27; Karouzou, S., AM 56, 1931, 99–100 Beil. 44 no. 2. — 3rd quarter of 6th cent. B.C. — Herakles fighting Kyknos with Zeus intervening; Ares on the r. and Athena on the l.; horseman on either side; on the far l., behind the horse, man with spear. The horsemen probably stand for the chariots on the works above, but the presence of the spearman on the side of Herakles suggests that he might be I.

Riders instead of chariots also flank the central group on Copenhagen, NM 3877 (*ARV*² 63, 87; CVA 3 pl. 138, 1c). Beazley suggested that the warrior with horse by each handle on side B of London E 8 (*ARV*² 63, 88; Bruhn, A., Oltos [1943] figs. 44–45; Schefold, SB II 137 fig. 178) might belong to the Kyknos scene of A.

48. Hydria, Attic bf. London, BM 1843.11–3.49 (B 329). From Vulci. — ABV 334, 1: A. D. P.; *Add*² 91; CVA 6 pl. 89, 3. — c. 510 B.C. — On the shoulder, Herakles fighting Kyknos with Athena (not Zeus) intervening. On either side a warrior (helmet, corselet, Boeotian shield, spear) in a fighting attitude, presumably Ares on the r. and I. (?) on the l.

A warrior, perhaps I., appears behind Herakles on the hydria Munich 1716 (ABV 362, 25) and the lekythos fr. MonAnt 11, 1901, 462 figs. 156–157. A warrior flees behind Herakles (then not I.?) on the neck-amphora Tarquinia RC 979 (ABV 284, 3; CVA 1 pl. 8 [1140], 1).

g) Herakles and Nereus (?)

On side B of the bf. skyphos Philadelphia MS 5481 (Haspels, ABL 253, 1; Luce, S. B., AJA 26, 1922, 174–175 figs. 1–2; Allentown Art Museum, Aspects of Ancient Greece [1979] 52–53 no. 23) with Herakles attacking a figure usually interpreted as Nereus (Brommer, *Vasenlisten*³ 205: Syleus?) on A, a bearded man with bow and arrows in one hand and club in the other, presumably I., walks to the r. between Hermes and Athena.

h) Herakles and Nessos

A warrior who might be identified as I. is present together with an old man (Oineus?) on the lekythos Munich, Antikenslg. 1905 (Schiffler, B., Die Typologie des Kentauren [1976] pl. 2 A 78).

i) Herakles and Omphale

The youth with a rhyton standing next to Herakles and Omphale on a Roman mosaic from Thina in Tunis, Bardo 2788 (Yacoub, M., Le Musée du Bardo [1970] 86 no. 2788; Poinssot, BullArchCTH 1936–37, 120–121; Dunbabin, Mosaics 273 no. 3) is probably a young Bacchus and not I. who never appears in the scene. A youth who could be I. is present on H. 1537* showing, according to Lullies (AM 65, 1940, 13 no. 4. pl. 12, 1), Herakles and Omphale, but this interpretation is very improbable; Schauenburg (RhM 102/103, 1959/60, 66–67) suggests a simple homecoming of Herakles.

j) Herakles and Triton

The only possible case of an I. watching the fight is on the amphora Naples SA 116 (CVA 1 pl. 1 [945], 3–4; Ahlberg-Cornell, G., Herakles and the Sea-Monster in Attic Black-Figure Vase-Painting [1984] 112 cat. no. III 2 B), where a bearded man in chiton and mantle gesticulates on the l.

k) Herakles fighting a snake

Herakles and I. (warrior) both armed with a club attack a snake in the usual Hydra scheme on H. 2822. Cf. the strange amphora Louvre E 707 (AA 1971, 172–175 fig. 20).

l) «Herakles» and «Iolaos» fighting a Chimaera

49. Amphora, Attic bf. London, BM B 162. From Vulci. — ABV 306, 29: Swing P.; *Add*² 81; Schefold, SB II 87 fig. 103; Böhr, E., Der Schaukelmaler (1977) no. 20 pl. 23. — About 530 B.C. — A man with club on the r. (Herakles?) and another with harpe on the l. (I.?) fight a Chimaera. (A = H. 2122.)

F. Iolaos with Herakles in other scenes

a) Herakles with gods

(i) Herakles' Apotheosis

For I. as charioteer in scenes of Herakles' Apotheosis or others which are difficult to interpret see above Section B. In some late-6th-cent. Apotheosis scenes I. may follow on foot:

50. Hydria, Attic bf. Paris, Louvre F 50. From Etruria. — ABV 277, 8: Manner of Antimenes P.; *Add*² 72; CVA 6 pl. 67, 2. — 520–510 B.C. — Herakles with club in chariot to r.; Athena mounting holding the reins. I., bearded, carrying club, follows on foot. With Apollo, Artemis and Hermes.

51.* Column-crater, Attic bf. Providence, Rhode Island School of Design 29.140. — CVA 1 pl. 11, 1. — 520–510 B.C. — Herakles mounting chariot. I., beardless, follows with club and bow. With Athena, Dionysos and Apollo.

See also H. 2895 (club). Apollon 836* (club). Boulogne 417 (club and bow). Cf. H. 2892 (I. with spear standing beyond the chariot). It is not certain whether I. is intended in the 4th-cent. H. 2918 where a man in chlamys and petasos above r. watches H. being driven by Nike over the pyre.

(ii) Herakles in conversation or shaking hands with gods

WITH ATHENA

52.* Neck-amphora, Attic bf. Cerveteri, Mus. — Moretti, M., Cerveteri (1978) 60 fig. 84: Class of Cab. Méd. 218. — 510–500 B.C. — Herakles and Athena facing. To r., I. bearded, in corselet and chiton, sword hanging, holding club.

53. (= H. 3186*) Amphora, Attic rf. Vatican 16573. From Vulci. — *ARV*² 182, 3: Kleophrades P.; Schefold, SB IV 183 fig. 222. — About 500 B.C. — Herakles shakes hands with Athena. Behind Herakles, I. wearing corselet and greaves and holding helmet and spear.

See also H. 3123–3125. 3135 (I. in the middle; Herakles seated). 3144 (all seated). With other figures present: H. 3176. 3404.

WITH ATHENA AND HERMES

54.* (= H. 3119) Neck-amphora, Attic bf. Würzburg, Wagner-Mus. L 188. — ABV 269, 44: An-

– Paus. 6, 19, 12: by the artist Dontas (a corruption for Medon?). – Late 6th cent. B.C. – Paus. mentions as spectators of the fight Athena, Deianeira, Zeus and Ares. The last two might actually have been Oineus and an armed I. respectively (Isler, H. P., Acheloos [1970] 107; Beck, I., Ares [1984] 77. 138–139; Brommer, Herakles II 74). Cf. the seated old man and warrior on London B 313 (= Acheloos 248*).

b) Herakles and Alkyoneus

A warrior sometimes helping Herakles (→ Alkyoneus 11*. 16) is usually regarded as Telamon after Pindar's passage (N. 4, 25). I., however, also took part in the expedition against Troy during which the event took place. See also the rf. volute-crater Malibu 84.AE.974 (GettyMusJ 13, 1985, 170 no. 24) on the neck of which a warrior (Telamon or I.?) drives away Alkyoneus' cattle while Herakles attacks the sleeping giant.

c) Herakles and Antaios

A warrior, perhaps I., is present on → Antaios I 6 and 9.

d) Herakles and Apollo struggling over the tripod

42.* (= Apollon 1037, = Artemis 1310, = H. 3034) Column-crater, Attic bf. New York, MMA 07.286.78. – v. Bothmer, D., in Festschr. F. Brommer (1977) 52–53 no. 16 pls. 17–18. – 530–520 B.C. – Herakles and Apollo flanked by chariots driven by I. (beardless, wearing corselet over charioteer's dress) on the r. and → Lykomedes on the l., both turning to watch the struggle. Behind the chariots, Artemis on the l. and Athena on the r. All names inscribed.

43. (= H. 3027*) Cup, Attic rf. Rome, Villa Giulia 27250. From Todi. – *ARV*² 124, 8; Nikosthenes P.; CVA 2 pls. 24; 25, 2–3; 26, 2; v. Bothmer, o.c. 42, no. 18. – About 520–510 B.C. – Herakles and Apollo struggling over the tripod. On the l., chariot driven by youth wearing helmet, probably I. Beyond horses, Athena running towards Herakles.

The central group of the east pediment of the Siphnian Treasury at Delphi (= H. 3026 = Apollon 1038) is flanked by a pair of shorter figures and chariots. One of the small figures on the r. has been identified as I. (v. Bothmer, o.c. 42, 52). Cf. the anonymous male figures on the r. of Herakles on the lekythoi H. 3040–3042 (on 3041 it is a hoplite).

e) Herakles and the Kentauroi

(i) Herakles and Pholos

Anonymous spectators occasionally flank the scene. On lekythoi there is often, as in other scenes, a youth present, sometimes moving away. When he is given a club, as on Copenhagen, NM Chr. VIII. 948 (Haspels, ABL 247, 8; CVA 3 pl. 111, 18), we are entitled to call him I. A bearded man in chiton, chlamys, petasos, with spear (I.?) stands behind Pholos on New York, MMA 41.162.2 (CVA 4 pl. 49, 1–2).

(ii) Herakles fighting the Kentauroi

Herakles is not normally assisted by a companion in this fight. In the two exceptions below there is probably a confusion with the battle of Lapiths and Centaurs (cf. the fallen hoplite on Würzburg L 198: ABV 224, 1; Langlotz, KatWürzb pl. 51):

44.* (= H. 1426 [other side]) Cup, Attic rf. Los Angeles, County Mus. 50.8.15 (A 5933.50–21). – *ARV*² 125, 11; Nikosthenes P. (signed by the potter Pamphaios); *Add*² 176; CVA 1 pls. 37, 1; 38, 1. – 510–500 B.C. – Herakles with sword and a young companion, perhaps I. (naked, holding Boeotian shield and spear), fight back to back against three centaurs; cloak and quiver hang.

45. Bell-crater, Campanian rf. Tübingen 673 (F 46). – LCS 314, 635: Near the Caivano P.; Watzinger, KatTübingen 65 pl. 44; Schauenburg, K., AntK 5, 1962, pl. 22, 2. – 3rd quarter of 4th cent. B.C. – Herakles in lionskin, with club in r. hand and bow in l., fights two centaurs, one of whom is collapsing. To l., young warrior, perhaps I., in pilos, short chiton, chlamys, greaves, carrying a shield and brandishing a spear.

f) Herakles and Kyknos

46. (= Apollon 922, = Ares 42*, = Halios Geron 1*) Oinochoe, Attic bf. Berlin (DDR), Staatl. Mus. F 1732 (signed by potter Kolchos). From Vulci. – ABV 110, 37; Lydos; Para 44, 48; *Add*² 30; Schefold, SB II 136 fig. 176; Boardman, ABFH fig. 68; Brommer, Herakles II pl. 28. – 3rd quarter of 6th cent. B.C. – Herakles fights Ares over the dead Kyknos with Zeus intervening and Athena helping Herakles. On either side a chariot moving away (the charioteers, both bearded, are named IOA[EOE] and PO[B]OE). Poseidon and Apollo beyond each chariot. Halios Geron and Dionysos flank the scene.

Chariots driven by anonymous charioteers (presumably I. and Phobos after 46) flank the central group on: amphora London B 212 (ABV 297, 1; CVA 4 pl. 51 [196], 1a); crater fr. London B 365 (Brommer, *Vasenlisten*³ 105 A 18); dinos Vienna IV 4603 (3619) (ABV 140, 3; Brommer, *Vasenlisten*³ 106 A 13); volute-crater fr. Athens, Acr. 655 and Stathatou Coll. (ABV 289, 26; BCH 79, 1955, 177 ff. figs. 1–2 pls. 5–6; the charioteer behind Athena is a warrior); cup Tarquinia RC 2066 (*ARV*² 126, 23; CVA 1 pl. 6, 2; Ares' charioteer is named Phobos); volute-crater Rome, Villa Giulia (*ARV*² 206, 131; Il Mus. Naz. Etr. di Villa Giulia [1980] 140 fig. 177). Simon (Simon/Hirmer, Vasen 67) suggested that the two warriors fighting on the dinos Louvre E 874 by the Gorgon P. (ABV 8, 1; Para 6; Arias/Shefton/Hirmer, pl. 37 below) are Herakles and Kyknos, the chariots on either side being driven by I. and Phobos (both with shield on their back and turning to watch the fight).

47. Lekythos, Attic bf. Athens, NM 497. – Haspels, ABL 27; Karouzou, S., AM 56, 1931, 99–100 Beil. 44 no. 2. – 3rd quarter of 6th cent. B.C. – Herakles fighting Kyknos with Zeus intervening; Ares on the r. and Athena on the l.; horseman on either side; on the far l., behind the horse, man with spear. The horsemen probably stand for the chariots on the works above, but the presence of the spearman on the side of Herakles suggests that he might be I.

Riders instead of chariots also flank the central group on Copenhagen, NM 3877 (*ARV*² 63, 87; CVA 3 pl. 138, 1c). Beazley suggested that the warrior with horse by each handle on side B of London E 8 (*ARV*² 63, 88; Bruhn, A., Oltos [1943] figs. 44–45; Schefold, SB II 137 fig. 178) might belong to the Kyknos scene of A.

48. Hydria, Attic bf. London, BM 1843.11–3.49 (B 329). From Vulci. – ABV 334, 1: A. D. P.; *Add*² 91; CVA 6 pl. 89, 3. – c. 510 B.C. – On the shoulder, Herakles fighting Kyknos with Athena (not Zeus) intervening. On either side a warrior (helmet, corselet, Boeotian shield, spear) in a fighting attitude, presumably Ares on the r. and I. (?) on the l.

A warrior, perhaps I., appears behind Herakles on the hydria Munich 1716 (ABV 362, 25) and the lekythos fr. MonAnt 11, 1901, 462 figs. 156–157. A warrior flees behind Herakles (then not I.?) on the neck-amphora Tarquinia RC 979 (ABV 284, 3; CVA 1 pl. 8 [1140], 1).

g) Herakles and Nereus (?)

On side B of the bf. skyphos Philadelphia MS 5481 (Haspels, ABL 253, 1; Luce, S. B., AJA 26, 1922, 174–175 figs. 1–2; Allentown Art Museum, Aspects of Ancient Greece [1979] 52–53 no. 23) with Herakles attacking a figure usually interpreted as Nereus (Brommer, *Vasenlisten*³ 205; Syleus?) on A, a bearded man with bow and arrows in one hand and club in the other, presumably I., walks to the r. between Hermes and Athena.

h) Herakles and Nessos

A warrior who might be identified as I. is present together with an old man (Oineus?) on the lekythos Munich, Antikenslg. 1905 (Schiffler, B., Die Typologie des Kentauren [1976] pl. 2 A 78).

i) Herakles and Omphale

The youth with a rhyton standing next to Herakles and Omphale on a Roman mosaic from Thina in Tunisia, Bardo 2788 (Yacoub, M., Le Musée du Bardo [1970] 86 no. 2788; Poinssot, BullArchCTH 1936–37, 120–121; Dunbabin, Mosaics 273 no. 3) is probably a young Bacchus and not I. who never appears in the scene. A youth who could be I. is present on H. 1537* showing, according to Lullies (AM 65, 1940, 13 no. 4. pl. 12, 1), Herakles and Omphale, but this interpretation is very improbable; Schauenburg (RhM 102/103, 1959/60, 66–67) suggests a simple homecoming of Herakles.

j) Herakles and Triton

The only possible case of an I. watching the fight is on the amphora Naples SA 116 (CVA 1 pl. 1 [945], 3–4; Ahlberg-Cornell, G., Herakles and the Sea-Monster in Attic Black-Figure Vase-Painting [1984] 112 cat. no. III 2 B), where a bearded man in chiton and mantle gesticulates on the l.

k) Herakles fighting a snake

Herakles and I. (warrior) both armed with a club attack a snake in the usual Hydra scheme on H. 2822. Cf. the strange amphora Louvre E 707 (AA 1971, 172–175 fig. 20).

l) «Herakles» and «Iolaos» fighting a Chimaera

49. Amphora, Attic bf. London, BM B 162. From Vulci. – ABV 306, 29; Swing P.; *Add*² 81; Schefold, SB II 87 fig. 103; Böhr, E., Der Schaukelmaler (1977) no. 20 pl. 23. – About 530 B.C. – A man with club on the r. (Herakles?) and another with harpe on the l. (I.?) fight a Chimaera. (A = H. 2122.)

F. Iolaos with Herakles in other scenes

a) Herakles with gods

(i) Herakles' Apotheosis

For I. as charioteer in scenes of Herakles' Apotheosis or others which are difficult to interpret see above Section B. In some late-6th-cent. Apotheosis scenes I. may follow on foot:

50. Hydria, Attic bf. Paris, Louvre F 50. From Etruria. – ABV 277, 8; Manner of Antimenes P.; *Add*² 72; CVA 6 pl. 67, 2. – 520–510 B.C. – Herakles with club in chariot to r.; Athena mounting holding the reins. I., bearded, carrying club, follows on foot. With Apollo, Artemis and Hermes.

51.* Column-crater, Attic bf. Providence, Rhode Island School of Design 29.140. – CVA 1 pl. 11, 1. – 520–510 B.C. – Herakles mounting chariot. I., beardless, follows with club and bow. With Athena, Dionysos and Apollo.

See also H. 2895 (club). Apollon 836* (club). Boulogne 417 (club and bow). Cf. H. 2892 (I. with spear standing beyond the chariot). It is not certain whether I. is intended in the 4th-cent. H. 2918 where a man in chlamys and petasos above r. watches H. being driven by a Nike over the pyre.

(ii) Herakles in conversation or shaking hands with gods

WITH ATHENA

52.* Neck-amphora, Attic bf. Cerveteri, Mus. – Moretti, M., Cerveteri (1978) 60 fig. 84: Class of Cab. Méd. 218. – 510–500 B.C. – Herakles and Athena facing. To r., I. bearded, in corselet and chiton, sword hanging, holding club.

53. (= H. 3186*) Amphora, Attic rf. Vatican 16573. From Vulci. – *ARV*² 182, 3; Kleophrades P.; Schefold, SB IV 183 fig. 222. – About 500 B.C. – Herakles shakes hands with Athena. Behind Herakles, I. wearing corselet and greaves and holding helmet and spear.

See also H. 3123–3125, 3135 (I. in the middle; Herakles seated). 3144 (all seated). With other figures present: H. 3176, 3404.

WITH ATHENA AND HERMES

54.* (= H. 3119) Neck-amphora, Attic bf. Würzburg, Wagner-Mus. L 188. – ABV 269, 44: Antimenes P.; Langlotz, KatWurzb pl. 53. – 520–510 B.C. – Herakles with bow and club facing Athena. Behind the latter, Hermes and I., bearded, in corselet and chitoniskos, holding club.

See also H. 3121. Boston 97.205 (CVA I pl. 41, 2). With one more woman (Hebe?): H. 3120. With Dionysos: Munich 1576 (CVA 8 pls. 386, 4; 390, 1).

WITH ZEUS

A youth in pilos, corselet and boots watching Herakles shake hands with Zeus (?) on H. 3371 might be I. He is probably not intended in the white-haired man pouring a libation on H. 3373.

(iii) Scenes of homage to Herakles

Anonymous youths regularly appear in scenes of Herakles honoured by gods, heroes or mortals in an undefined setting which are particularly popular in the late 5th–early 4th cent. B.C. A single youth present is likely to be I.: H. 1566. 1568. 1571. 3149. 3326–3328. 3409. 3410. 3461. 3462. 3464. 3466. 3472. 3490–3492. Athens, Kanellopoulos (ex Tyne-mouth, Wilfred Hall; Trendall, ESIVP 41, 417; LCS 92, 479); Leningrad 361 (Trendall, ESIVP 40, 379; LCS 88, 428; AuA 10, 1961, pl. 20, 36). Cf. the early-5th-cent. B.C. H. 3162/3318 with I. (bearded, in petasos and chlamys, with spear) shaking hands with Hermes. Two youths attending might be the Dioskouroi: H. 3403. 3406/3325. 3474. 3482. The many youths on H. 3407–3408 remain anonymous.

(iv) Gigantomachia

Zeus, who regularly appears in the same chariot as Herakles, is replaced on → Gigantes 124 and 125 by a hoplite who, however, cannot be I. who has nothing to do with the Gigantomachy.

b) Iolaos with Herakles' wives and children

55. (= H. 1679*) Bell-crater, Attic rf. Munich, Antikenslg. 6026 (WAF 2398). – *ARV*² 1446, 3: Pourtalès P.; Para 492; Metzger, Recherches pl. 32, 2. – About 380 B.C. – In an open space (herm, tree) Herakles leaning on club and Deianeira, seated, with Hyllos. On the l., man seated; on the r., a woman with phiale and oinochoe and a youth (I.). Metzger calls I. the man at l., but he is probably Oineus (thus Brommer, Herakles II, 121).

The charioteer looking round on side B of H. 1674* might be I., connected with the scene of Herakles with Oineus, Deianeira and child on A. A beardless I. (inscr. IOAHOΣ) is a witness of Herakles' madness on H. 1684* (= Alkmene 18*).

c) Herakles as symposiast

56. (= H. 1490*) Hydria, Attic bf. Athens, NM 564. – ABV 329, 4: Madrid P.; Heydemann, H., Griechische Vasenbilder (1870) pl. 3, 1. – 520–510 B.C. – Herakles reclines with kantharos; seated before him, Dionysos and Athena; seated behind him, I., bearded, in himation, holding club.

57. Neck-amphora, Attic bf. London, Market. – Christies 16 July 1985, 95 no. 419: Manner of Antimenes P. – 520–510 B.C. – Herakles reclining; Athena with flower standing before him; bearded man in corselet (I.?) standing l.

Cf. H. 1486* (I., bearded, named IOAEOΣ, behind Athena on the r.). 1493 (seated before Herakles). 1519 (man seated with helmet, phiale and spear: Ares rather than I.). The two men reclining (quiver and bow hanging) on H. 1518. 1520 and London B 497 (ABV 377, 243) might be Herakles and I.

d) Other scenes

(i) Herakles in a sanctuary

A youth with spears or club, perhaps I., attends on H. 1369. Boston 21.272. H. 1373* (= Athena 442/Hedone 3). Paris, Rodin TC 1 (= Hedone 4). H. 1374. 1380*.

Two youths, two satyrs and a bearded man (I. according to Mingazzini and Metzger) are present on Rome, Villa Giulia 3619 (*ARV*² 1420, 7; Mingazzini, MemLinc 6.1, 1925/26 no. 261 pl. 8, 2; Metzger, Représentations 226 no. 62).

(ii) Herakles at Eleusis

Herakles' youthful companion holding a bakchos, one hand raised, on H. 1401* is perhaps I. or one of the Dioskouroi who were initiated early like Herakles.

(iii) Herakles mousikos

I. (bearded, short chiton) carries Herakles' club on H. 1460. He may also be recognized on both sides of H. 1475* although characteristic attributes are lacking.

(iv) Other

H. Hoffmann identified two figures on the Panagurishte gold amphora as Herakles and I. in a scene of divination (RM 65, 1958, 132–135 fig. 5) but the interpretation is very uncertain.

G. Iolaos and the Herakleidae

For I. with the children of Herakles seeking the protection of Athens see → Herakleidae 2*. 3. Also, → Akamas et Demophon 21* where I. watches a dead girl (Makaria?) in the presence of a king (Demophon?).

H. Other scenes with Iolaos

58.* Stemless cup fr., Attic rf. Oxford, Ashm. Mus. G 138.14. From Naukratis. – *ARV*² 1252, 49: Eretria P.; CVA I pl. 39, 5; Lezzi-Hafter, A., Der Eretria-Maler (1988) no. 290 pl. 187a. – About 430 B.C. – Only I. (inscr. IOAEOΣ) is preserved, turned l., his foot resting on something; he is bearded and shown as a warrior (helmet, corselet over chiton, holding spear). 59.* Coin, AE, Agyrion (Sicily), after 241 B.C.

(Head). – Head, *HN*² 125; SNG Copenhagen 131. – Obv.: Head of Herakles. Rev.: I. burning the Hydra heads.

60. East pediment of temple of Athena in Tegea. – Paus. 8, 45, 6. – 2nd quarter of 4th cent. B.C. – Paus. describes the scene as that of the Calydonian Boar Hunt with Atalante, Meleagros, Theseus, Telamon, Peleus, Polydeukes and Iolaos among other heroes.

COMMENTARY

I.'s first appearance in both art and literature is as Herakles' active helper in the killing of the Hydra. In the earliest scenes (bronze fibulae 28. → H. 2020; bronze tripod leg → H. 2025; Corinthian vases 24–26. → H. 1990–1992. 1994–1995) he is always armed with the harpe, a weapon which is, however, unknown in early Attic works. The earliest Attic vases showing the scene, of the second quarter of the 6th cent., have him either with the torch (20), as mentioned by the much later literary sources, or merely attending as Herakles' charioteer (→ H. 1996–1997), in the way he appears on the Acropolis pediment (→ H. 2021) and presumably also on the Kypselos Chest (29). Another early appearance of I. is on the Corinthian 37 where he fights the Amazons alongside Herakles, and he may also be present in an early Attic Amazonomachy (→ Amazones 16*). In another early scene both he and Herakles, each armed with a club, are involved in the killing of an anonymous snake (E.k). In his characteristic role as Herakles' charioteer he drives Herakles on a few Attic vases of c. 560–550 B.C. (6. → H. 2877–2878) which are usually regarded as showing the hero's journey to Olympus. He is also shown as a charioteer in the rescue of Hesione on the Corinthian 40 (and cf. the few Hydra scenes above). Finally, I. attends Herakles in the earliest rendering of him as a single symposiast (→ H. 1486*, c. 550 B.C.). I.'s presence here indicates that the setting of such scenes is probably terrestrial.

Herakles' popularity in the second half of the 6th cent., particularly on Attic vases, is responsible for I.'s frequent appearance in this period. He continues to assist Herakles in the killing of the Hydra, a subject which is not as popular as in the previous period. He is usually shown with the torch (22. 23. → H. 2002. 2004. 2014. 2015. 2017. 2018; relief → H. 2022) but he may also use the old harpe (→ H. 1999–2001. 2013; Caeretan → H. 2016) or the sword (→ H. 2012). On the early 5th cent. 21 he is shooting. I. is also prominent on two vases which show the Birds episode (33. → H. 2243), armed with a sling in one and with a sling and a bow in the other. There is no literary evidence for I.'s participation in this deed. Another occasion in which he might be recognized as Herakles' active companion is the fight against Kyknos: the warrior fighting on Herakles' side on two Archaic vases (47–48) is perhaps I. In the Alkyoneus scenes it is usually Telamon who is recognized as Herakles' companion (E.b), although I. also took part in the expedition. I. might also appear fighting on Herakles' side in a Centauromachy (44), or at Troy (D.c). Finally, in the odd 49 two men who look like Herakles and I. are shown attacking a Chimaera.

In most of the main fights of Herakles, with the Lion (12–18), the Boar (30–32), the Bull (34), Geryon (C.h), Nereus (?) (E.g), Acheloos (41), I. may appear carrying the hero's weapons (usually the club or the club and bow) or merely watching without these. He also attends Herakles in some other scenes, mainly non-narrative, which are popular in the late 6th cent.: Herakles in conversation with gods (52–54), as symposiast (56–57), as musician (F.d [iii]), leaving for a journey, probably that to Olympus (50–51), or, unusually, tying his lionskin (1).

As a charioteer, he continues to drive Herakles in what is usually regarded as the hero's apotheosis (8–11). He drives the chariot while Herakles fights Kyknos (46) or waits in it during the struggle for the tripod (42–43), or on the obverse of an Amazonomachy (→ Amazones 62*), of a fight against Geryon (C.h) or of a family scene (→ H. 1674*).

In the later 5th and 4th cent. the scenes in which I. appears are much fewer. He helps in a rare Hydra scene where he uses the torches (→ H. 2009), fights the Calydonian Boar (60) and may be present in the sacrifice to Chryse (D.a). As a mere spectator, he is present in idyllic scenes like the Hesperides 38–39, and perhaps in a fight with the Deer (C.d), the family group 55 and scenes of homage to Herakles (F.a [iii]). As a charioteer, he may drive Herakles to Olympus (7. → H. 1417/2932).

On South Italian vases, I. is present in a Hydra scene carrying a torch and a sword (→ H. 2010), might be recognized in a Centauromachy (45), or is a mere spectator in scenes such as Herakles' encounter with the Bull (35–36) or the Amazons (→ H. 2461). He is also present in two stories, both treated in plays by Euripides, which appear only in South Italian vase-painting: Herakles' madness (→ H. 1684*) and the Herakleidae seeking the protection of Athens (G).

I.'s popularity in Sicily and particularly his cult in Agyrion has led to his identification on three coin types of this city, one of the 4th cent. B.C. (3), the other two later (4. 59).

It is interesting to note that, apart from the Hydra scene on the Hephaisteion metope (→ H. 2023), I. is absent from all other Dodekathlon scenes, presumably because in such scenes Herakles is the focus of the composition.

I. is very often depicted as a warrior in Archaic art, whether fighting next to Herakles (20–23. 33–37), standing as a spectator in the latter's deeds (13–14. 41), accompanying him on other occasions (52–54. 57) or driving his chariot (6. 9. 40. 42. 43). When he is fully armed, with helmet, and not carrying any of Herakles' attributes, he may easily be confused with Ares (cf. Beck, I., Ares [1984] 138–142; cf. E.a). When not shown as a warrior he is usually dressed in a short chiton or in the charioteer's long dress; in a few cases he is naked. In Classical Attic or South Italian vases he is usually in chlamys and petasos (or pilos), suitable for a participant in expeditions, carrying spears. The odd 19 where he wears Herakles' lionskin is unique (but cf. also → H. 2350).

I. is always shown as a youth on Corinthian vases (in contrast to the bearded Herakles) and the Laconian 27 follows Corinth. In early Attic bf. however, he is usually bearded; in late Archaic art he is either bearded or not, indiscriminately. From the Classical period onwards he is a youth (two rare exceptions are → H. 2350, where he watches the fight against the Bull, and the fragment 58), unless shown with the Herakleidae, since this episode took place late in his life.

MARIA PIPILI

VILE

(Vilae, Vile) The Etruscan form of the name → Iolaos, attested on ten Etruscan mirrors (I. 2. 4. 12. 14. 15. 18. 21. 30. 32) and one vase (31) dating from the 4th to the 2nd cent. B. C. (on the vase and on one mirror [32] inscribed erroneously instead of the names *Viphicle [→ Iphikles] and Hercle [Herakles] respectively). Like most other Etruscan names which are borrowed from the Greek, the name V. comes from Doric, maintaining the initial F of the Doric type Filā(F)os (for Doric influence on Etruscan presumably through Corinthian traders and Dorian colonists of South Italy see de Simone, Entlehnungen II 304 ff. 320 ff.)

Apart from the inscribed works there are several others where, in spite of the lack of characteristic attributes, V. may be recognized with certainty as the youthful companion of Hercle (→ Herakles/Hercle), appearing alone with him or with other figures, particularly deities.

The mythical coloniser of Sardinia, it is probably from there and from the Greek cities of Magna Graecia that V. came to Etruria. He was an important figure in Etruscan religion and seems to have been associated, like Hercle, with water and springs. It is also possible and indicative of V.'s popularity in Etruria that, as Heurgon suggested, the cognomen Violens which appears in the family of the Volumnii of Perugia came from the name V., as did also probably Monte Vile, a hill near the grave of the Volumnii where there might have been a sanctuary of V.

BIBLIOGRAPHY: Bayet, J., Hercle (1926) 170–186 and passim; de Simone, Entlehnungen I 66–67; II passim; Enking, R., RE VIII A 2 (1958) 2134–2135 s. v. «Vilae, Vile»; Fiesel, E., Namen des griechischen Mythos im Etruskischen (1928) 13–14 and passim; Fischer-Graf, U., Spiegelwerkstätten in Vulci (1980) 55–56. 63–64. 93. 106. 123; Heurgon, J., «A propos du cognomen Violens et du tombeau des Volumnii», ArchCl 10, 1958, 151–159; Pauli, W., ML VI (1924–37) 320 s. v. «Vilae, Vile»; Pfiffig, Rel-Etr 340–346 (= Pfiffig 1); Pfiffig, A. J., Herakles in der Bilderwelt der etruskischen Spiegel (1980) 12–13 (= Pfiffig 2); Rebuffat-

Emmanuel, D., Le miroir étrusque d'après la Collection du Cabinet des Médailles (1973) 471–474. 513–521; Stibbe-Twist, A., «Herakles in Etrurien», in Thiasos (1978) 80–106, esp. 83–84.

CATALOGUE

A. Vile with Herakles (Hercle) alone

1. (= Herakles/Hercle 88*) Bronze mirror. Perugia, Mus. Naz. 998. – Gerhard, EtrSp II pl. 128; Del Chiaro, M., AJA 59, 1955, 283–284 pl. 80, 7; de Simone, Entlehnungen I 66 (4); Rebuffat-Emmanuel 474. 514–519; Fischer-Graf 106 V 88. – Around 300 B. C. – Standing opposite one another Herakles (Hercle) on the r. (lionskin, club, r. foot on amphora) and V. (inscr. Pile [Gerhard] or Vile [de Simone]) on the l. (cloak over shoulders, spear and shield). Del Chiaro suggested improbably that Pile stands for Pelias and connected the scene with an episode of the Argonaut expedition.

2.* (= Herakles/Hercle 140) Bronze mirror. Brussels, Mus. Roy. R 1286 (837). From Praeneste (?). – Gerhard, EtrSp IV pl. 336; de Simone, Entlehnungen I 66 (7); Lambrechts, R., Les miroirs étrusques et prénestins des Musées Royaux d'Art et d'Histoire à Bruxelles (1978) 223–227 no. 36. – 4th cent. B. C. – Herakles (Hercle) on the l. (club, bow) and V. ([V]il[a]e) on the r. (himation, spear and shield), both seated and facing each other.

3.* (= Herakles/Hercle 142) Bronze mirror. Once Barberini Coll. – Gerhard, EtrSp IV pl. 337, 1. – Around 300 B. C. – Facing each other Herakles on the r. (lionskin, club) and V. on the l. (chlamys over shoulder, sword hanging, spear and shield). Altar next to Herakles.

For a similar composition see: Mirror Brussels, Mus. Roy. R 1287 (838); → Herakles/Hercle 141;

Vile 3

Gerhard, EtrSp V 83 no. 64d; Lambrechts, o.c. 2, 229–232 no. 37 (Herakles seated at r., V. at l., one hand on Herakles' thigh, the other raised). Mirror once Westropp Coll.; → Herakles/Hercle 142a; Gerhard, EtrSp IV pl. 337, 2 (Herakles standing at r., V. seated at l., one hand on Herakles' shoulder; column between them). Gold necklace relief pendants London BM 2285; → Herakles/Hercle 143; Marshall, BM Jewellery 262–263 pl. 46 (at l. Herakles seated, at r. V. half seated holding a spear). Cf. also the mirror Boston, MFA 92.2740; → Herakles/Hercle 145c; Comstock/Vermeule, Bronzes Boston 262–263 no. 377 (Herakles and Apollo); Fischer-Graf 107 V 91 (Herakles and Hermes); unless the partly damaged seated figure (chlamys, staff) who faces Herakles wore a petasos, he is not distinguishable from the V. of the works above.

B. Vile with Herakles (Hercle) and a deity

a) Vile with Herakles (Hercle) and Hermes (Turms)

